a higher rank and antiquity than even Abraham.—In the close of the preceding section, Jesus tells the cavilling Jews around him, "He that is of God heareth God's words; namely, those which I deliver in his name: "Ye therefore hear [them] not, because ye are not of God;" that is, not under divine influence, as he told them before. "No man can come unto me, unless the Father who hath sent me draw him." (Chap. vi. 44.) This is indeed an humbling truth, that salvation is of God alone; and to proud hearts, the most humbling truths are the most offensive; and hence the Jews again cry out, "Say we not well, that thou art a Samaritan and hast a devil?" (or rather demon.) The most spiteful names they could think of are now called forth. To the former of them he makes no reply; they must know that he was a Jew: to the latter he gives a simple and dignified denial: "I have not a devil." God is my Father, and I honour him by attributing to him the glory that is his due. Ye dishonour me by such ridiculous and unfounded insinuations. Whatever you may think, I solemnly assure you, (ver. 51.) "If a man keep my saying, he shall never see death." To see death, and to taste of death, (ver. 52.) appear to be synonymous expressions, meaning to experience it; the only question is—What death is here intended? Certainly not mere mortality, for Abraham was dead, and the prophets were dead, nor did our Lord ever intimate that either himself or his apostles should be exempted from it. But there is a second death, for which the expression is sometimes used, (see Rev. ii. 11; xx. 6, 14;) and the phrase is evidently equivalent to that which Jesus used to Martha, the sister of Lazarus, (ch. xi. 25, 26:) "He that believeth in me shall never die;" and both phrases, literally taken, mean, "shall not die for ever."

Now (say they) we know that thou hast a devil: Abraham is dead, and the prophets are dead: whom makest thou thyself? Here our Lord introduces some expressions respecting his pre-existence and divinity, which have been the subject of no little controversy, even to the present time. But instead of offering any observations of our own, we shall present our readers with the following extract from a very superior pen:—

"The opponents of Jesus, in their virulent cavils against him, had mentioned Abraham, their national ancestor, a man so signally favoured of God, that his name served as a proverbial example of dignity and honour. They understood our Lord's declarations as involving such assumptions of superi-

Ver. 57. Thou art not yet fifty years old.—He could not be more than 35, (nor, we think, so much,) but "his visage was marred more than any man's," (Isa. li. 14.) which might well give him the appearance of advanced age.

Ver. 58. Before Abraham was, I am.—[That our Lord by this expression asserted his divinity and eternal existence, as the great I AM, argues evident from the use of the present tense, instead of the preter, from its being an answer to the Jews, who inquired whether he had seen Abraham, and from its being thus understood by the multitude, who were exasperated at it to such a degree, that they took up stones to stone him. The ancient Jews not only believed that the Messiah was superior to and Lord of all the Patriarchs, and even of angels, but that his celestial nature existed with God, from whom it emanated, before the creation, and that the creation was effected by his ministry.]—Bazster. A celebrated foreign Professor remarks, that the common "interpretation is required by the tenor of the discussion. The objector turned upon existence; therefore the reply must refer to existence also. The objection was, 'Thou canst not have seen Abraham, for thou art not yet fifty years old; thou wast not then born.' Jesus answered, 'I was before he was.' Thus the reply corresponds to the objection." Rosenmüller.—I am.—This clause, according to Dr. Smith, is attended with some difficulty. We shall give an outline of his remarks.—1. Some suppose it alludes to Exodus ii. 14, but the Hebrew is in the future. 2. The predicate of the proposition may be left to be supplied by the minds of the hearers—I am [the Christ.] Compare 59 ¶ Then took they up stones to cast at him: but Jesus hid himself, and went out of the temple, going through the midst of them, and so passed by.

CHAPTER IX.

1 The man that was born blind restored to sight. 3 He is brought to the Pharisees. 18 They are offended at it, and excommunicate him: 35 but he is received of Jesus, and confesseth him. 39 Who they are whom Christ enlighteneth.

AND as Jesus passed by, he saw a man which was blind from his birth.

2 And his disciples asked him, saying, Master, who did sin, this man, or his parents, that he was born blind?

3 Jesus answered, Neither hath this man sinned, nor his parents: but that the works of God should be made manifest in him.

4 I must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work.

5 As long as I am in the world, I ¹ am the light of the world.

6 When he had thus spoken, he ² spat on the ground, and made clay of the spittle, and he ³ anointed the eyes of the blind man with the clay.

7 And said unto him, Go, wash in the pool of ⁴ Siloam, (which is by interpretation, Sent.) He ⁵ went his way therefore, and washed, and came seeing.

ority, that they demanded, "Art thou greater than our father Abraham? Whom makest thou thyself?" With his characteristic calmness he assured them, that Abraham had indeed regarded him as a superior; that, guided by supernatural revelation, the patriarch had really enjoyed such a mental prospect of the time when the Messiah should appear, and of the blessings of his reign, as filled him with pleasure and exultation! "Your father Abraham earnestly desired that he might see my day; and he did see it and rejoiced." This turned the conversation. The Jews, not understanding, or affecting not to understand, that Jesus spoke of an anticipative vision, exclaimed, "Thou art not yet fifty years old, and hast thou seen Abraham?"—Now, therefore, the question was brought to the single point of co-existence. It was necessary for Jesus either to deny the assumption, or to admit and confirm it. He did not do the former; but he gave an answer which his opponents viewed as being either directly or constructively smooth and blasphemous, i. e. as admitting their imputation." (Smith's Messiah.) The last declaration of our Lord, that he existed before Abraham, so enraged his enemies, that they took up stones to stone him; but he was not to be by stoning, nor was his time yet come: Jesus therefore concealed himself for the moment, and then mixing in the crowd, (and having nothing peculiar in his dress,) he passed through the midst of them without being perceived, and thus again for the present escaped the malice of his enemies.

CHAP. IX. Ver. 1—21. Jesus gives sight to a man born blind.—Whether this event followed on the same day after Jesus left the temple, or on a subsequent one, is neither certain nor important, only we know that it was on the sabbath. The question of the disciples seems to have reference to some previous conversation which they had held with the Scribes and Pharisees, on the subject of the transmigration of souls, which some of their Rabbies had borrowed from the Pythagoreans; or, perhaps, as Dr. Lightfoot suggests, they might have imbibed the stranger notion, that an infant might commit sin even in his mother's womb. Our Lord, however, always avoided such curious questions; and merely replies, that this blindness had happened to the man, neither for his own sins nor for those of his parents, but that an opportunity might be afforded

A M. 40:35.
A D. 29.
a c 11:4

b c 13:9.
8:12.
12:35, 46.

c Ma 8:23.

3 or, spread the clay upon the eyes of the blind man.

e Ne 3:15.

(2 K) 5:11

f ver. 6:7

h ver. 31
c 3:2

i c 7:12, 14

8 ¶ The neighbours therefore, and they which before had seen him that he was blind, said, Is not this he that sat and begged?

9 Some said, This is he: others said, He is like him: but he said, I am he.

10 Therefore said they unto him, How were thine eyes opened?

11 He answered and said, A man that is called Jesus made ⁶ clay, and anointed mine eyes, and said unto me, Go to the pool of Siloam, and wash: and I went and washed, and I received sight.

12 Then said they unto him, Where is he? He said, I know not.

13 ¶ They brought to the Pharisees him that aforetime was blind.

14 And it was the sabbath day when Jesus made the clay, and opened his eyes.

15 Then again the Pharisees also asked him how he had received his sight. He said unto them, He put clay upon mine eyes, and I washed, and do see.

16 Therefore said some of the Pharisees, This man is not of God, because he keepeth not the sabbath day. Others said, How ⁷ can a man that is a sinner do such miracles? And ⁸ there was a division among them.

17 They say unto the blind man again, What to display the power of God through him. "As long as I am in the world," says he, "I am the light of the world;" and, in perfect harmony with that character, he proceeds to give sight to this poor man who had been born blind, and who had never yet seen the sun; and knowing that his time was short, he sets us an example that well illustrates his own precept—to work while it is called to-day! The day of our Saviour's labours was hastening to a close, and so is ours. The night is coming, when we can no more work either for God's glory, or our own salvation. "There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave," whither we all are hastening. (Eccles. ix. 10.)

This blind man was a beggar; on which circumstance Ep. Hall beautifully remarks:—"Those that have eyes, and hands, and feet of their own, may be able to help themselves; those that want these helps must be beholden to the eyes, hands, and feet of others. The impotent are cast upon our mercy. Happy are we, if we can lend limbs and senses to the needy. Altered beggary is odious; that which is of God's making justly challengeth relief."

The cause of this man's affliction is uncharitably supposed to be some personal transgression of either the man himself or of his parents. Though sin was, indeed, primarily the cause of all the misery in the world; yet it is both uncharitable and unjust to refer the misfortunes of the afflicted to their personal transgressions. Afflictions are often sent for our benefit, and to exercise our patience under them, or to display the glory of God in our deliverance from them.

We are not disposed to allegorize away the facts of Scripture history; yet we may often derive useful and important reflections from the analogy between natural and spiritual objects. There is a mental blindness, to which our whole race is subjected through sin; for we are born spiritually blind, and it is Christ alone, who is the light of the world, that is able to enlighten our minds in the knowledge of himself and of divine truth. The means used in the recovery of spiritual sight, are often as strange and unpromising as the clay plaster on this poor man's eyes. The efficacy is, in this case, in the physician, and not in the remedy employed.

But to return to our history. The object in sending this Mark xiv. 6, with Mat. xxiv. 5. 3 The present, "I am," may be taken in the sense of the past, "I was." This is not unusual. Doddridge and Campbell render it, "Before Abraham was born I am;" which is perfectly literal.

Ver. 59. Going through the midst, &c.—This latter part of the verse is wanting in some MSS. and versions, and is omitted by some learned Editors. CHAP. IX. Ver. 1. And as Jesus passed by—The omission of this name in the original, seems to intimate a connexion between this event and the preceding. The New Testament, (any more than the Old) we must recollect, was not divided into verses, or even chapters, by the inspired writers. This chapter may therefore connect with the preceding, thus—Jesus, "going through the midst of them in the multitude," passed by them, and as he passed by (or, in passing by) he saw, &c.

Ver. 2. Who did sin?—If this question, as is generally supposed, referred to the Pythagorean notions, it may be illustrated by the following note from Dean Prideaux:—"As to lesser crimes, (i. e. those which might not require everlasting punishment,) their opinion was, that they were punished in the bodies, which the souls which committed them were cast into. According to this notion it was that the disciples asked Christ, in the case of the man who was born blind, who had sinned, that he should be born blind." Bishop Pearce renders this "Who sinned? This man that he is become blind" or his parents, that he was born blind?" But we doubt much if this can be justified.

Ver. 3. Neither hath this man sinned, nor his parents—That is, so as to be the occasion of his misfortune. This seems necessarily implied.

Ver. 5. I am the light of the world—Our Lord here claims one of the titles given by the Jews to the Divine Being. So in Bamidbar Kalba, "The Israelites said to God, O Lord of the universe, thou commandest us to light lamps to thee, yet thou art the light of the world!" It was also a title of the Messiah, (see Isa. xlv. 6; Is. lx. 1) and in a remarkable passage of Yalkut Ezerah, fol. 6, it is said, on Gen. 1:4, "From this we learn, that the Holy and Blessed God saw the light of the Messiah, and his works, before the world was created, and reserved it for the Messiah and his generation, under the throne of his glory." Satan said to the Holy and Blessed God, For whom dost thou reserve that light which is under the throne of thy glory? God answered, For him who shall subdue thee, and overcome thee with confusion. Satan replied, Lord of the universe, show that person to me. God said, Can't, and see him. When he saw him, he was greatly terrified, and fell upon his face, saying, Truly this is the Messiah, who shall cast me and idolaters into hell!"—Bagster.

Ver. 6. He spat . . . and made clay—Several Eastern travellers, particularly Captain Light, speak of a superstitious notion of the use of saliva in curing bad eyes, and other disorders, but none of them speak of a clay being put for that purpose. This, indeed, seems more calculated to destroy sight than to restore it.

Ver. 7. Go, wash—i. e. "wash thine eyes" in the pool of Siloam—This was supplied by a fountain of the same name, which arose in the south west part of Jerusalem. Siloam is by interpretation sent; and therefore tallies with the circumstance of his being sent thither—He washed and came seeing—There is thus remarkable difference between cures wrought naturally and miraculously, the former, effected by some surgical operation, always require great caution to prevent relapse, the eyes, for instance, must be sayest thou of him, that he hath opened thine eyes? He said, He is a prophet.

18 But the Jews did not believe ^k concerning him, that he had been blind, and received his sight, until they called the parents of him that had received his sight.

19 And they asked them, saying, Is this your son, who ye say was born blind? how then doth he now see?

20 His parents answered them and said, We know that this is our son, and that he was born blind:

21 But by what means he now seeth, we know not; or who hath opened his eyes, we know not: he is of age; ask him: he shall speak for himself.

22 These words spake his parents, because they feared the Jews: for the Jews had agreed already, that if any man did confess that he was Christ, he ^m should be put out of the synagogue.

23 Therefore said his parents, He is of age; ask him.

24 Then again called they the man that was blind, and said unto him, Give God ⁿ the praise: we know that this man is a sinner.

25 He answered and said, Whether he be a sinner or no, I know not: one thing I know, that, whereas I was blind, now I see.

26 Then said they to him again, What did he to thee? how opened he thine eyes?

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
j c 4.19.
k Is 28.11.
l Pr 29.25.
e 7.13.
12.14.
m ver. 31.
c 16.2.
n Jos. 7.19.
Ps 50.14.
15.
—
o 1 Pe 2.23.
p Ps 103.7.
He 3.5.
q c 8.14.
r c 3.10.
s Ps 119.18.
1-29.18.
19.
35.5.
2 Co 4.6.
t Job 27.9.
Ps 66.18.
Pr 28.9.
Is 1.15.
Je 11.11.
Eze 3.18.
Mt 3.4.
Zec 7.13.
u Ps 31.15.
Pr 15.29.
v ver. 2.
w or, excommunicated him
x Is 66.5.
y 1 Jn 5.13.
z c 4.36.

27 He answered them, I have told you already, and ye did not hear: wherefore would ye hear it again? will ye also be his disciples?

28 Then they reviled ^o him, and said, Thou art his disciple; but we are Moses' disciples.

29 We know ^p that God spake unto Moses: as for this fellow, we ^q know not from whence he is.

30 The man answered and said unto them, Why ^r herein is a marvellous thing, that ye know not from whence he is, and yet he hath opened ^s mine eyes.

31 Now we know that God ^t heareth not sinners: but if ^u any man be a worshipper of God, and doeth his will, him he heareth.

32 Since the world began was it not heard that any man opened the eyes of one that was born blind.

33 If this man were not of God, he could do nothing.

34 ¶ They answered and said unto him, Thou ^v wast altogether born in sins, and dost thou teach us? And they ^w cast him ^x out.

35 ¶ Jesus heard that they had cast him out; and when he had found him, he said unto him, Dost thou believe ^y on the Son of God?

36 He answered and said, Who is he, Lord, that I might believe on him?

37 And Jesus said unto him, Thou hast both seen him, and ^z it is he that talketh with thee.

poor man to Siloam was evidently to excite public attention to this miracle, and to spread the report of it in the temple, from which persons were continually coming and returning from Siloam; and this publicity was necessary to introduce the subsequent conversation, on the poor man's case, between himself and the Pharisees, in which the former discovers uncommon shrewdness.

They first inquire how the miracle was wrought, and affecting not to believe his own account, attempt to catechise his parents, who very prudently refer them back to him, as they do not appear to have been present at the time; and, besides, the Pharisees had threatened with exclusion from the synagogue, any person who should own Jesus to be the Christ. Therefore they said, "He is of age, ask him."

But the great offence with which they charge our Lord, is that of working this miracle on the sabbath, as it appears to have been contrary to their traditions, to use eye-salves, &c. on that holy day; and it was for this reason, probably, that our Lord used the clay, as it would have been as easy for him to have wrought the cure by a word speaking only, but that he set his face steadfastly against those traditions by which they established their own paramount authority, and made void the law of God.

Having ascertained the identity of the man, and the reality of the cure, the great point in dispute is, whether a good man and a prophet would work miracles on the sabbath day. Some of the Pharisees said, "This man is not of God, because he keepeth not the sabbath day;" not distinguishing between their own traditions and the divine commands. Others very naturally asked, "How can a man that is a sinner"—that is, a wicked man, or an impostor—"do such miracles?" This was there a division among the people, and as it should seem, (by ver. 16,) among the Pharisees themselves.

On the difference between the Christian doctrine of the Sabbath, and that of the Rabbies, we have offered some remarks on Matt. xii. 1-21, which we shall not here repeat. It is remarkable, certainly, that our Lord so often chose this day for the performance of his miracles, and it may serve to teach us, that active benevolence to the souls and bodies of our fellow-creatures ought to be blended with our devotions. As this is the day in which God blesses us, we cannot choose a better for blessing others. "I will bless thee, and make thee a blessing." (Gen. xii. 2.)

Ver. 22-41. The Pharisees reproach Jesus, and excommunicate the blind man whom he had cured.—The man's parents having declined to answer any questions about their son, he is again called before the Pharisees, who exhort him to "give God the praise;" which Doddridge thus paraphrases: "Give glory to God, by a free confession of the fraud, if there be any collusion in this affair; or if the cure was really wrought in the manner thou affirmest, acknowledge the power, sovereignty, and goodness of the Divine Being, in working by so unworthy an instrument; for we certainly know that this man, Jesus of Nazareth, is a sinner." The man wisely answered,

"Whether he be a sinner, I know not: one thing I know, that whereas I was blind, now I see;" an answer that may be employed to silence the cavils of others besides these Pharisees. In the course of our Christian experience, difficulties may often arise which we may not be able to explain: but if we can say, "Whereas I was once blind to my own state, and the excellence and necessity of Christ the Saviour, now I see; now is my mind enlightened duly to appreciate his salvation, it is well: let us not deny what he hath done, nor doubt his power and grace to complete the work."

But to return to the Pharisees: they cross-question the poor man, in hopes of detecting something inconsistent or contradictory in his answers, but in vain. He tartly replies—for he does not appear to be now before any public authorities who had a right thus to question him—"I told you before, and ye did not (or would not) hear: will ye also be his disciples?" Upon this they revile both him and his deliverer:—"We are Moses' disciples: as for this fellow, we know not from whence he is." The man again shrewdly retorts upon them, that it was very strange that they, the teachers and guides of the people, could not tell whence he was when he had wrought so extraordinary a miracle, whereas a plain man like him was satisfied by the work itself, that he must be of God, for "if he were not of God, he could do nothing." Upon this they lose their temper, reprove his supposed insolence, and excommunicate, or cast him out of their synagogue. "Thou wast altogether born in sins, and dost thou teach us?" by which expression we do not understand them as referring to the Scripture doctrine of original sin, but the Pythagorean fgment of the transmigration of souls, already mentioned.

As to the argument in favour of Christ's mission, we do not find it on his miracles, separately considered; but as taken in connexion with the whole of his character—the purity of his doctrine and of his life. At the same time, though bad men may have done "many wonderful works," there is not in the records of history any thing like the series of miracles recorded of our Lord, either in the power or benevolence which they display: neither the miracles of Moses or Elijah, much less those of their pretended prophets or impostors, can be brought into competition with his miracles.

Our Lord hearing that the poor man was expelled the synagogue, which, of course, deprived him of all aid from Jewish charity, sought him out, as the first confessor who had suffered on his account, and instructs him privately, as it should seem, in the mysteries of his kingdom. "Dost thou believe in the name of the Son of God?" And he answered, "Who is guarded against too sudden a display of light, and, in general, very gradually exposed to it; but this man came seeing—I e. in the full possession of his eyesight, without either shade or guard."

Ver. 17. That he hath opened—Doddridge, "Since he hath opened"—thine eyes.

Ver. 27. And ye did not hear—Campbell, "And did ye not hear?"

Ver. 32. Since the world began, &c.—Campbell, "Never was it heard before, that any man gave sight to one born blind"—[That there are cases in which a person born blind may be restored to sight by surgical means, we know; but it is perfectly evident that no such means were used by our Lord. And it is worthy of remark, that, from the foundation of the world, no person born blind had been restored to sight, even by surgical operation, till about the year 1728, when the celebrated Dr. Cheselden, by couching the eyes of a young man, 14 years of age, restored them to perfect vision. This was the 38 And he said, Lord, I believe. * And he worshipped him.

39 ¶ And Jesus said, For ^b judgment I am come into this world, that they which see not ^c might see; and that they which see might be made ^d blind.

40 And some of the Pharisees which were with him heard these words, and said unto him, Are we ^e blind also?

41 Jesus said unto them, If ^f ye were blind, ye should have no sin: but now ye say, We see; therefore ^g your sin remaineth.

CHAPTER X.

1 Christ is the door, and the good shepherd. 19 Disciples' opinions of him. 21 He proclaims by his words, that he is Christ the Son of God. 30 escapeth the Jews, 40 and went again beyond Jordan, where many believed on him.

VERILY, verily, I say unto you, * He that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber.

2 But he that entereth in by the ^b door is the shepherd of the sheep.

3 To him ^c the porter openeth; and the sheep hear his voice: and he calleth ^d his own sheep by name, and leadeth ^e them out.

4 And when he putteth forth his own sheep, he goeth before them, and the sheep follow him: for they know his ^f voice.

5 And a stranger will they not follow, but will flee ^g from him: for they know not the voice of strangers.

6 This parable spake Jesus unto them: but they understood not what things they were which he spake unto them.

7 Then said Jesus unto them again, Verily, verily, I say unto you, I ^h am the door of the sheep.

8 All that ever came before me are thieves and robbers: but the sheep did not hear them.

he, Lord, that I might believe on him?" Jesus replied, "Thou hast both seen him, and it is he that talketh with thee." The man had been prepared for this discovery. He was convinced by the miracle of which he had been the subject, that Jesus was indeed a prophet, and has no hesitation in admitting this farther discovery of his glory—"Lord, I believe;" and as a proof thereof, he fell down and "worshipped him."

Some persons had now collected round them, and our Lord says in their hearing, "For judgment am I come into this world, that they which see not might see;" and that they which boast that they "do see, may be made blind,"—or have their blindness discovered and exposed. This occasioned some of the standers by, who were Pharisees, to exclaim, What! and "are we blind also?" To whom our Lord calmly replied, "If ye were blind," as this poor man was, or if you had no means of information, "ye should have," comparatively, "no sin;" but since ye think yourselves wise, and boastingly "say, We see; therefore your sin remaineth" without excuse, and without remedy.

CHAP. X. Ver. 1—21. Jesus the door of God's sheepfold—and the Good Shepherd himself.—In part of this allegory, Jesus Christ speaks of himself as the only door—the only way by which men can enter into the true church, or fold of God. The allusion is to the gate by which the shepherd leads his sheep into the blessed pastures. When he says, "All who came before me are thieves and robbers," he does not reflect on the prophets of the Old Testament, who made no pretensions to be themselves the way, or the door, unto eternal life, but pointed only to the Messiah as such. The thieves and robbers here alluded to, were those false teachers who pretended to point out some other way of life and salvation, than through his mediation and atonement: whether by men's effect of well directed surgery: that performed by Christ was wholly a miracle, effected by the power of God. The simple means employed could have had no effect in this case; and were merely employed as symbols.—Bagster.

CHAP. X. Ver. 1. That entereth not by the door.—That is, by the gate of the sheepfold. The sheepfold was an inclosure sometimes in the manner of a building, and made of stone, or fenced with reeds. In it was a large door, at which the shepherd went in and out, when he led in or brought out the sheep. At a tiling, which was done in the sheepfold, they made a little door, so that two lambs could not come out together. To this inclosure there is an allusion in these words.—Ortford. Cast. No. 1293.

Ver. 2. He that entereth in by the door is the shepherd.—That is, thieves and robbers are not allowed to enter in by the door, but those only who belong to the sheepfold.

Ver. 3. He calleth his own sheep by name.—In Judea, and other Eastern countries, the shepherds give names to their sheep, who answer to them, as do our dogs and horses, following them when called.—Macknight.

Ver. 4. The sheep follow him: for they know his voice.—Not only is this the case in the East, but Polakius mentions, that in Italy the shepherds were accustomed to sound a horn, and the sheep would follow them.—Ortford. Cast.

A. M. 4033.

A. D. 29.

a. Mat. 14: 3.

b. c. 5: 22, 27.

12: 47.

c. 1: 19-2: 9.

d. Mat. 13: 13.

e. c. 4: 19.

f. Ro. 2: 19.

Re. 4: 17.

g. c. 15: 22, 24.

h. Is. 5: 21.

i. Lu. 15: 14.

1: 10: 18.

10.

a. Ro. 10: 15.

Re. 5: 1.

b. ver. 7, 9.

c. Re. 3: 20.

d. Eze. 34: 11.

Re. 8: 30.

e. Is. 40: 11.

f. Cu. 2: 5.

5: 2.

g. 2: 17, 3: 5.

Re. 2: 2.

h. Ep. 2: 13.

i. He. 13: 20.

1: 16: 2: 25.

j. Eze. 34: 2.

k. Zec. 11: 17.

l. 2: 10: 2: 19.

m. Mat. 11: 27.

n. c. 15: 13.

o. Is. 44: 5.

p. Is. 49: 6.

36: 5.

q. Eze. 37: 22.

P. Eze. 24: 14.

r. Is. 53: 7.

12: 2: 9.

s. Ps. 2: 6, 8.

t. c. 2: 19.

u. c. 6: 33.

v. c. 7: 20.

9 I am the door: by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out, and find pasture.

10 The thief cometh not, but for to steal, and to kill, and to destroy: I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly.

11 I am the good shepherd: the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep.

12 But he that is a hireling, and not the shepherd, whose own the sheep are not, seeth the wolf coming, and leaveth the sheep, and fleeth: and the wolf catcheth them, and scattereth the sheep.

13 The hireling fleeth, because he is a hireling, and careth not for the sheep.

14 I am the good shepherd, and ^k know my sheep, and am known ^l of mine.

15 As ^m the Father knoweth me, even so know I the Father: and ⁿ I lay down my life for the sheep.

16 And ^o other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and ^p there shall be one fold, and one shepherd.

17 Therefore doth my Father love me, because ^q I lay down my life, that I might take it again.

18 No man taketh it from me, but ^r I lay it down of myself. I have power to lay it down, and I ^s have power to take it again. This ^t commandment have I received of my Father.

19 ¶ There was a division therefore again among the Jews for these sayings.

20 And many of them said, He ^u hath a devil, and is mad; why hear ye him?

21 Others said, These are not the words of own moral obedience, or by a course of ritual ceremonies and observances.

But Christ is also here spoken of as "the Good Shepherd," which is an allegory much more familiar to us than the preceding. Under this figure he is repeatedly represented to us by the prophets, (see Isa. xl. 11. Ezek. xxxiv. 23. Zech. xiii. 7, &c.) as well as in the latter parts of the New Testament. As the Good Shepherd, he is distinguished from "the hireling, who careth not for the sheep," as well as from the robber, who comes to steal them. He is the Good Shepherd, as that character expresses his tenderness towards them: "He shall feed his flock like a shepherd: he shall gather the lambs with his arm, and carry them in his bosom, and gently lead those that are with young." (Is. xl. 11.) A good shepherd will also risk his life in defence of the sheep, as David did when he kept his father's sheep, (1 Sam. xvii. 34—36;) but the Good Shepherd not merely risked, but gave, or, as it is here expressed, laid down his life for his sheep. Jesus is not only the Good Shepherd, but "the Great Shepherd of the sheep." (Heb. xiii. 20.) "The Chief Shepherd," (1 Pet. v. 2.) "whose own the sheep are," having "purchased them with his own most precious blood."

We are farther informed, that this Good Shepherd intimately knows his sheep, and is known of them: He calls them all by name—they know his voice and follow him; but will not follow strangers, for they know not the voice of strangers; all which circumstances relate to the divine communion which subsists between Christ and true believers; being drawn to him by the Father's grace; as he hath said, "No man can come unto me unless the Father which hath sent me draw him." (Ch. vi. 44.)

But Christ has other sheep beside those of the Jewish fold. Blessed be God, his sheep are not confined to one quarter of Ver. 8. All that ever came before me.—Campbell says, the words "before me," are wanting in some of the most ancient, and in a great number of other MSS. and in some ancient versions of early editions. He reads, "All who have entered in another manner." The double comparison of Christ to a sheep door and to a shepherd, introduces a confusion of metaphor, not uncommon in the East.

Ver. 12. But . . . a hireling.—It is not the bare receiving hire which denounces a man a hireling; for the labourer is worthy of his hire, Jesus himself being Judge, Luke x. 7.) but the loving hire more than the work—the working for the sake of hire.—Wesley.

Ver. 14. And know my sheep, &c.—Campbell reads, (we think probably,) "I both know my own, and am known by them, even as the Father knoweth me, and I know the Father;" and I give my life for the sheep."

Ver. 18. No man taketh it.—Campbell, "No man forceth it"—from me. See chap. xiv. 11.

Ver. 20. He hath a devil, and is mad.—They suppose him mad in consequence of being possessed.

Ver. 20. Hath a devil.—The Greek in both these verses is not diabolos, but daimon, or dynon.

him that hath a devil. Can a devil open * the eyes of the blind ?

22 ¶ And it was at Jerusalem the feast of the dedication, and it was winter.

23 And Jesus walked in the temple in Solomon's * porch.

24 Then came the Jews round about him, and said unto him, How long dost thou * make us to doubt ? If thou be the Christ, tell us plainly.

25 Jesus answered them, I told you, and ye believed not: the * works that I do in my Father's name, they bear witness of me.

26 But * ye believe not, because ye are not of my sheep, as I said unto you.

27 My * sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me:

28 And I give unto them eternal life; and they * shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand.

29 My * Father, which gave * them me, is greater than all; and no man is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand.

30 I * and my Father are one.

31 ¶ Then * the Jews took up stones again to stone him.

32 Jesus answered them, Many good works have I showed you from my Father; for which of those works do ye stone me ?

33 The Jews answered him, saying, For a good work we stone thee not; but for blasphemy; and because * that thou, being a man, makest thyself God.

A. M. 4053.
A. D. 29.
v. e. 5.9, &c.
w. Ac. 3.11.
5.2.
x. or, hold us in suspense.
y. e. 5.36.
z. e. 8.47.
1. Jo. 4.6.
a. v. r. 4.
b. v. 17.12.
13.9.
He. 7.25.
c. v. 14.28.
d. v. 17.2.
e. v. 17.11,22.
f. e. 8.59.
g. e. 5.18.
ver. 30.
Ps. 82.6.
Ro. 13.1.
h. Jo. 11.2,3.
49.13.
e. v. 27.
i. Ph. 2.6.
j. e. 11.10,11.
15.24.
k. e. 1.28.
l. Mat. 3.11.
12.
c. 3.30.36.
a. Jo. 10.38.
39.
b. Ma. 14.3.
c. 12.3.

34 Jesus answered them, Is it not written in your law, I said, Ye are gods ?

35 If he called them gods, unto whom the word of God came, and the scripture cannot be broken;

36 Say ye of him, whom the Father hath * sanctified, and sent into the world, Thou blasphemest; because I said, I am * the Son of God ?

37 If I do not the works of my Father, be lieve me not.

38 But if I do, though ye believe not me, believe the works: that ye may know, and believe, that the Father is in me, and I in him.

39 ¶ Therefore they sought again to take him: but he escaped out of their hand,

40 And went away again beyond Jordan into the place * where John at first baptized; and there he abode.

41 And many resorted unto him, and said, John did no miracle: but all things that John spake * of this man were true.

42 And many believed on him there.

CHAPTER XI.

1 Christ raiseth Lazarus, four days buried. 45 Many Jews believe. 47 The high priests and Pharisees gather a council against Christ. 49 Caiaaphas prophesieth. 54 Jesus hid himself. 55 At the passover they inquire after him, and lay wait for him.

NOW a certain man was sick, named Lazarus, of Bethany, the town of * a Mary and her sister Martha.

2 (It was that Mary which * anointed the Lord with ointment, and wiped his feet with her hair, whose brother Lazarus was sick.)

the world; he hath a flock in almost every country of the globe, which it is the object of his gospel ministry gradually to collect into one sheep-fold, under the great Chief Shepherd of our souls. For these he hath laid down his life, and taken it again, as he told the Jews, according to "the command" or commission, which he received from his Father.

At this the Jews were startled, and some profanely said, "He hath a demon and is mad: why hear ye him?" while others shrewdly asked, "Can a demon open the eyes of the blind?" or can madmen perform miracles like this?

Ver. 22—42. Jesus disputes with the Jews in Solomon's porch.—According to Josephus, this porch was the eastern part of a gallery erected on the inside of the outer court of the temple. It was the custom of the ancients to teach and converse walking; and it being now winter, it is probable that Jesus and the Jews resorted thither for protection from the wind and rain. There has been some dispute, however, what could be intended by this Feast of Dedication. Doddridge concludes that it could not refer to the dedication of Solomon's temple, for that was in autumn, (1 Kings vii. 2.) nor that of Nehemiah, which was in spring, (Ezra vi. 15, 16;) but that of Judas Maccabæus, on his having purified the temple and altar from the profanations of Antiochus Epiphanes. This was kept annually for eight days, in the month of December.

This conversation originated with the Jews themselves, who affecting not clearly to understand the character under which our Lord wished to be considered, "If thou be the Christ, (said they,) tell us plainly." Jesus replies, "I have told you, and ye believed not;" referring, probably, to the preceding discourse, in which he had represented himself as the Good Shepherd, a character (as we have seen) specially appropriated by the prophets to Messiah. "But ye believe not, (said he,) because ye are not of my sheep; as I said unto you, (but just now,) My sheep hear my voice," &c. It is to usefully evident, that by Christ's sheep are meant his true disciples—who are humble, simple, and affectionate, as sheep are—and follow Christ as (in that country at least) sheep do their shepherd. Of these he says, "I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any (one) pluck (or wrest) them out of my Father's hand."

This conversation leads directly to the subject of our Lord's divinity, which doctrine was not only a stumbling-block to the Jews, but has been so to many in every succeeding age. The argument seems somewhat obscure, but we shall attempt to illustrate it by a short analysis. The Jews very clearly understood, from the manner in which our Lord spake of his heavenly Father, that he claimed the character of Son of God in a sense in which it would be blasphemy for any mere man to do, (see on chap. v. 17—30;) and if he had not meant to assume such equality, it would have been most easy to have silenced them by such an explanation: on the other hand, had he openly avowed such an equality, it would have required a miracle to have restrained them from stoning him, as they proposed. He therefore pursues a middle course. He remarks that the term God is, in an inferior sense, applied to magistrates and princes. (Ps. lxxxiii. 1, 6.) How, then, could it be blasphemy for Jesus to assume the character of God's Son, especially when the works which he did contained the demonstration of a divine power, and fully justified the claim? "If I do not the works of my Father, believe me not: but if I do, though ye believe me not" on my own assertion, "believe the works" which you behold done, and from them ye may be convinced "that the Father is in me, and I am in the Father." But these men, instead of being softened to attend either to reason or to fact, took up stones to throw at the divine speaker, and drove from their temple the Lord thereof, and who would have been his highest glory.

These (says the eloquent Massillon) were the returns of gratitude which Jesus Christ received of men: these the consolations with which heaven permitted him to be exercised in the painful course of his ministry. At one time they treated him as a Samaritan, as one that had a devil; at another they took up stones to stone him. And thus the Son of God passed the whole time of his life, always exposed to the most obstinate contradictions, meeting with almost none but such as were insensible of his benefits, and rebellious against his preaching; and all this without his letting fall the least sign of impatience, or the least complaint.

Our Lord retreated now beyond Jordan, into the place where John at first baptized; and the seed which he had then sown now appeared, for "many believed on Jesus there," and resorted to him, saying, "John did no miracle: but all things which John spake of this man were true."

CHAP. XI. Ver. 1—19. The sickness and death of Lazarus.

Ver. 36. Whom the Father hath sanctified.—This term, "sanctify," does not always mean to make holy; but often, especially in the Old Testament, to devote to a sacred purpose or office.

CHAP. XI. Ver. 1. A certain man—Doddridge, "There was one Lazarus."—The raising of Lazarus from the dead, being a work of Christ beyond measure great, the most stupendous of all he had hitherto performed, and beyond all others calculated to evince his divine majesty, was therefore purposely recorded by the Evangelist John; while it was omitted by the other Evangelists, probably, as Grotius supposes, because they wrote their histories during the life of Lazarus; and they did not mention him for fear of exciting the malice of the Jews against him; as we find him chap. xii. 10, that they sought to put him to death, that our Lord might not give such a monument of his power and goodness remaining in the land.—Doddridge, "who (afterwards) anointed;" as mentioned in the next chapter, ver. 3.—[This is said by prolepsis, or anticipation, and may be rendered, "she who (some time

Ver. 24. How long dost thou make us to doubt?—i. e. hold us in suspense.
Ver. 28. Neither shall any man pluck.—Campbell, "Neither shall any one wrest." The noun "man" is certainly improperly supplied, (as in many other places,) and Dr. Campbell's version is more literal.

Ver. 29. To pluck.—Campbell, "to wrest," as before.

Ver. 30. I and my Father.—Doddridge, "The Father;" for the pronoun is not in the original, nor is it wanted.—Are one—Not is, one person, but en, one thing, meaning one divine Being—our God.

Ver. 34. In your law—i. e. in the sacred books; thus the Psalmist himself used the term frequently. Ps. cxix.

Ver. 35. The word of God came.—Some refer this to the divine decree which made them magistrates, or judges; but Doddridge refers it rather to the divine message, "I said, Ye are gods." Ps. lxxxix. 6.—And the scripture cannot be broken.—We should prefer reading these words as Doddridge does, in a parenthesis, thus—"If he called them gods to whom the word of God came, (and the scripture cannot be broken,) Say ye" &c.

3 Therefore his sisters sent unto him, saying, Lord, behold, he ^c whom thou lovest is sick.

4 When Jesus heard that, he said, This sickness is not unto death, but ^d for the glory of God, that the Son of God might be glorified thereby.

5 Now Jesus loved Martha, and her sister, and Lazarus.

6 When he had heard therefore that he was sick, he abode two days still in the same place where he was.

7 Then after that saith he to his disciples, Let us go into Judea again.

8 His disciples say unto him, Master, the Jews of late ^e sought to stone thee; and goest thou thither ^f again?

9 Jesus answered, Are there not twelve hours in the day? If ^g any man walk in the day, he stumbleth not, because he seeth the light of this world.

10 But if a man walk in the ^h night, he stumbleth, because there is no light in him.

11 These things said he: and after that he saith unto them, Our friend Lazarus ⁱ sleepeth; but I go, that I may awake him out of sleep.

12 Then said his disciples, Lord, if he sleep, he shall do well.

13 Howbeit Jesus spake of his death: but they thought that he had spoken of taking of rest in sleep.

14 Then said Jesus unto them plainly, Lazarus is dead.

15 And I am glad for your sakes that I was not there, to the intent ye may believe; nevertheless let us go unto him.

16 Then said Thomas, which is called Didymus, unto his fellow disciples, Let us also go, that we may die with him.

17 Then when Jesus came, he found that he had lain in the grave four days already.

18 Now Bethany was nigh unto Jerusalem, ^j about fifteen furlongs off:

19 And many of the Jews came to Martha and Mary, to ^k comfort them concerning their brother.

20 Then Martha, as soon as she heard that

A Mt 40:3

A D 29

c He 12:6

Re 3:14

d e 9:3

ver 40.

e e 10:31.

f Ac 20:24.

g e 12:35.

h Ec 2:14.

i 1e 31:16.

Ac 7:60

1 Co 15:15

15:34

j 1e about two miles.

k 1 Th 7:22.

Job 2:11.

42:11

Ro 12:15

1 Th 4:15

l e 9:31

m e 5:29

n e 6:40,41

o 1s 28:16

Job 2:11

1 Jo 1:2

p 1s 19:26

1s 25:19

Ro 4:17

q e 3:15

4:11

r e 2:7

s e 13:13

t Ma 10:49

u ver 19

v e 4:19

ver 21,37.

w he translated himself.

x Is 63:9

La 19:34

He 2:16

17.

Jesus was coming, went and met him: but Mary sat still in the house.

21 Thensaid Martha unto Jesus, Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died.

22 But I know, that even now, whatsoever thou wilt ask of God, God will give it thee.

23 Jesus saith unto her, Thy brother shall rise again.

24 Martha saith unto him, I know that he shall rise again in the ^m resurrection at the last day.

25 Jesus said unto her, I am the ⁿ resurrection, and the ^o life: he that believeth in me, though ^p he were dead, yet shall he live:

26 And whosoever ^q liveth and believeth in me shall never die. Believest thou this?

27 She saith unto him, Yea, Lord: I believe that thou art the Christ, the Son of God, which should come into the world.

28 And when she had so said, she went her way, and called Mary her sister ^r secretly, saying, The Master ^s is come, and calleth ^t for thee.

29 As soon as she heard that, she arose quickly, and came unto him.

30 Now Jesus was not yet come into the town, but was in that place where Martha met him.

31 The ^u Jews then which were with her in the house, and comforted her, when they saw Mary, that she rose up hastily and went out, followed her, saying, She goeth unto the grave to weep there.

32 Then when Mary was come where Jesus was, and saw him, she fell down at his feet, saying unto him, Lord, if ^v thou hadst been here, my brother had not died.

33 When Jesus therefore saw her weeping, and the Jews also weeping, which came with her, he groaned in the spirit, and ^w was troubled.

34 And said, Where have ye laid him? They said unto him, Lord, come and see.

35 Jesus ^x wept.

36 Then said the Jews, Behold how he loved him!

37 And some of them said, Could not this —“Sickness (says Bishop Hall) is the common preface to death: no mortal nature is exempted from this complaint; even Lazarus, whom Jesus loved, is sick. . . . It was a stirring message that Mary sent to Jesus: ‘Lord, he whom thou lovest is sick;’ as if she would imply that his part was no less deep in Lazarus than hers. Neither doth she say, ‘He that loves thee is sick;’ but ‘He whom thou lovest:’ not pleading the merits of Lazarus’ affection to Christ, but the mercy and favour of Christ to him.

“Jesus well heard the first groan of his dear Lazarus; every short breath that he drew, every sigh that he gave, was upon account; yet this Lord of life lets his Lazarus sicken, and languish, and die. . . .

“What a happy family was this! I find none upon earth so much honoured! ‘Jesus loved Martha, and her sister, and Lazarus.’ . . . But, O Saviour, how doth this agree? Thou lovest this family, yet, hearing of their distress, thou heldest off two days more from them. Canst thou love those thou regardest not? Canst thou regard them from whom thou willingly absentest thyself in their necessity? Behold, thy love, as it is above ours, so it is oft against ours. Even out of very affection art thou not seldom absent. None of thine, but have sometimes cried, How long, Lord?”

A few other particulars may be here observed:

1. Our Lord says, “This sickness is not unto death,” when he well knew that Lazarus was dying; but the meaning evidently is, that it should not terminate in death, but “in the glory of God,” by his resurrection from the grave.

afterwards) anointed.” &c. By rendering thus, we avoid the error of supposing that Mary the sister of Lazarus was the same as Mary Magdalene, and her who is termed a sinner.—Baxter

Ver 4. Not unto death.—Campbell, “Will not prove fatal.”

Ver 7. Let us go into Judea.—From the country east of Jordan, whither he had retired some time before, when the Jews sought to stone him; ch x 29, 40.

Ver 9. Are there not twelve hours in the day?—The Jews divided the space from sunrise to sunset, were the days longer or shorter, into twelve parts; so that the hours of their day were all the year the same in number, though much shorter in winter than in summer.

2. Jesus, we may remark, delayed his visit to Bethany till after Lazarus was dead and buried, and his body (in that climate particularly) must in the natural course of events, have begun to decay, and the smell become so offensive as to satisfy every one of the certainty of its dissolution.

3. The gentle manner in which our Lord informs his disciples of the decease of Lazarus: first he says, “Our friend Lazarus sleepeth, but I go that I may awake him.” Believers sleep in death; but in the resurrection, they awake in the Saviour’s likeness. Shortly afterwards he explains himself: “Lazarus is dead;” but he adds immediately, “I am glad for your sakes, that I was not there, to the intent ye may believe.”

4. We have an affectionate proof of the attachment of the apostles to their Lord and Master. No sooner does he speak of going back to Judea, than Thomas, one of the most affectionate, proposes to his fellow-disciples to go with him; and anticipating the Jews would do him some mischief, he says, with a mixture of love and desperation, “Let us also go, that we may die with him.”

Ver. 20–30. Jesus converses with the sisters of Lazarus.—The news that Jesus was coming, soon spread itself in the neighbourhood, and Martha immediately set out to meet him, and left Mary weeping in the house. Immediately as she sees Jesus, she laments that he had not come sooner, saying, “Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died; but even now!”—What! after he had been dead four days, and the corpse had become offensive to the smell? Yes, even now, “I know that whatsoever thou wilt ask of God, God will give it

Ver 30. No light in him.—Campbell, “In it,” i.e. in the night.

Ver 36. Thomas.—In Hebrew, as Didymus in Greek, signifies a twin.

Ver 38. About fifteen furlongs.—i.e. nearly two miles.

Ver 39. And many of the Jews.—Their usual time of mourning (as well as least) lasted seven days, during which, as it was passover time, there would be many coming and going.

Ver 40. Mary sat still.—Campbell, “Mary remained.” The word still is better omitted, as equivocal, and not in the original.

Ver 26. Shall never die.—See note on John viii. 51.

Ver 33. Groaned in the spirit.—Gm spirit: i.e. inwardly.

man, which opened the eyes of the blind, have caused that even this man should not have died?

38 Jesus therefore again groaning in himself cometh to the grave. It was a cave, and a stone lay upon it.

39 Jesus said, Take ye away the stone. Martha, the sister of him that was dead, saith unto him, Lord, by this time he stinketh: for he hath been dead four days.

40 Jesus saith unto her, Said I not unto thee, that, if thou wouldest believe, thou shouldest see the glory of God?

41 Then they took away the stone from the place where the dead was laid. And Jesus lifted up his eyes, and said, Father, I thank thee that thou hast heard me.

42 And I knew that thou hearest me always: but because of the people which stand by I said it, that they may believe that thou hast sent me.

43 And when he thus had spoken, he cried with a loud voice, Lazarus, come forth.

44 And he that was dead came forth, bound hand and foot with grave-clothes: and his face was bound about with a napkin. Jesus saith unto them, Loose him, and let him go.

45 Then many of the Jews which came to Mary, and had seen the things which Jesus did, believed on him.

46 But some of them went their ways to the Pharisees, and told them what things Jesus had done.

47 ¶ Then gathered the chief priests and the Pharisees a council, and said, What do we? for this man doeth many miracles.

48 If we let him thus alone, all men will believe on him: and the Romans shall come and take away both our place and nation.

49 And one of them, named Caiaphas, being the high priest that same year, said unto them, Ye know nothing at all,

50 Nor consider that it is expedient for us, that one man should die for the people, and that the whole nation perish not.

51 And this spake he not of himself: but being high priest that year, he prophesied that Jesus should die for that nation;

52 And not for that nation only, but that also he should gather together in one the children of God that were scattered abroad.

53 Then from that day forth they took counsel together for to put him to death.

54 Jesus therefore walked no more openly among the Jews; but went thence unto a country near to the wilderness, into a city called Ephraim, and there continued with his disciples.

55 ¶ And the Jews' passover was nigh at hand: and many went out of the country up to Jerusalem before the passover, to purify themselves.

thee." Jesus here, as it were, put words into her mouth; "Thy brother shall rise again:" as if he had said, "Ask thee the life of thy brother:" but she understands him of a distant resurrection at the end of the world: "I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day." Jesus now announces himself as "the resurrection and the life;" and encourages her to believe, that even yet her brother might be restored to her through his almighty power. And he goes farther—"He that believeth on me, though he were [spiritually] dead, yet shall he [spiritually] live: and he that [thus] liveth, and believeth in me, shall never die"—that is, shall not die for ever; shall not suffer the pain of a second, an everlasting death. "Believest thou this?" said he: she replies, "Yea, Lord, I believe that thou art the Christ, the Son of God, which should come into the world:" and having thus said, she instantly runs to tell her sister Mary secretly, what doubtless was the fact—"The Master is come, and calleth for thee;" and Mary as suddenly and privately leaves her company—those who had come to mourn with her—and they very naturally conclude that she was gone to her brother's grave, as the custom was, "to weep there." She went not, however, to "seek the living among the dead;" but she flies to her adored Lord—she casts herself at his feet, overwhelms him with her tears, and repeats the same gentle complaint as her sister—"Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died."

Jesus inquires now for the tomb of Lazarus, and as they lead him thither—"Jesus wept."

We attempt no comment on these interesting words: those inclined to do so, might observe that these Tears were—Tears of affection to Lazarus—of sympathy to his sisters—and of compassion to the Jews.

The remark of the Jews was certainly very natural: "Behold, (said they,) how he loved him!" And some of them who had witnessed his late miracle on the man born blind, said, "Could not this man, which opened the eyes of the blind, have caused that even this man should not have died?" but none of them seem to have anticipated the miracle now about to be performed. The Lord Jesus, "groaning in himself,

Ver. 39. He hath been dead four days.—Ver. 17, it is said, "he had lain four days in the grave." The Jews generally buried their dead on the same day on which they died.

Ver. 41. I thank thee that thou hast heard me.—It does not appear that Christ uttered any prayer audibly; but God "heareth the desire of the humble." Ps. x. 17.

Ver. 42. Said it.—Dodgridge, "I speak (thus)—i. e. I thank thee, that the people may know that I act by commission from thee."

Ver. 44. Bound hand and foot.—"Swathed about with rollers," or bandages, long strips of linen, a few inches in breadth, brought round the sheet of linen in which the corpse was involved, and by which the spices were kept in contact with the flesh.—Bagster. The Jewish sepulchres were generally caves or rooms hewn out of rocks. And as the Jews did not make use of coffins, they placed their dead separately in niches or little cells cut into the sides of these caves or rooms. (Alcuin's Travels.) This form of the Jewish sepulchre suggests an easy solution of a very important difficulty in the history of Lazarus's resurrection. It is said, that when Jesus called upon Lazarus to come forth, he came out bound hand and foot. But deists, talking of this miracle, commonly ask with a sneer, how he could come out of a grave who was bound in that manner? The answer, however, is obvious. The Evangelist does not mean that Lazarus walked out of the sepulchre, but that, laying on his back, he raised himself into a sitting posture, then putting his legs over the edge of his niche or cell, slid down, and stood upright upon the floor;

cometh to the grave"—doubtless still weeping over his beloved Lazarus. He then orders the stone to be removed from the mouth of the cave in which he had been buried, as was the Jewish custom. Martha objects to this, perhaps thinking it dangerous, as she observed the body must be so far putrified as to emit an unpleasant, and perhaps infectious smell; but our Lord rebukes this attempt to disannul his order: "Said I not unto thee, if thou wouldest believe thou shouldest see the glory of God?" Alas! how much of the glory of God do we lose the sight of through our unbelief!

Ver. 41—57. The resurrection of Lazarus, and its effect upon the Jews.—The stone at the cave's mouth being removed by some of the bystanders, Jesus, after a short but inaudible address to his heavenly Father, that the people might know in whose name he acted, and with whose sanction he acted, "He cried with a loud voice, Lazarus, come forth!" He came forth from the tomb where his body had been laid; but being, of course, entangled and encumbered with his grave-clothes, the Lord commanded, "Loose him, and let him go"—that is, set him at liberty.

In this miracle we remark, 1. Its extraordinary nature: it was the restoration of life to the dead. 2. The decisive evidence of this fact: the body had lain in the tomb four days. 3. The manner in which it was wrought, by a word speaking; but not till after a solemn address to the Deity. 4. The witnesses: not only the sisters themselves, but also the Jews who came to condole and to mourn with them; some of whom, it appears, had also witnessed the cure of the man born blind.

We are now to consider the effects of this miracle. 1. On the witnesses of the miracle, many of whom believed on him. 2. On others, who did not believe, who went immediately and informed the Scribes and Pharisees. 3. The debate among his enemies: "What do we?" say they, for this man doeth many miracles, and if we let him alone all men will believe on him. 4. The alarm excited: "If all men believe on him, the Romans shall come and take away both our place and nation:" that is, supposing the nation to own him as Messiah, the Jew-all which he might easily do, notwithstanding his arms were close bound to his body, and his legs were tied strait together by means of the shroud and rollers with which he was swathed. Accordingly, when he was come forth, it is said, that Jesus ordered them to loose him and let him go; a circumstance plainly importing, that the historian knew that Lazarus could not walk till he was unbound.—MacKnight's Harmony.

Ver. 48. And take away both our place and nation.—"The meaning is, that then the Romans would no longer protect them in their religion and laws; but send an army to destroy them, as rebels and enemies."—Lardner, who refers to Josephus' Antiq.

Ver. 49. High priest that same year.—Lardner, "that year;" i. e. at that time. Pontius Pilate was governor of Judea ten years, and Caiaphas was put into the pre-bid by Valerius Gracchus, Pilate's predecessor, and continued in it till after Pilate's removal.—Lardner.

Ver. 54. A city called Ephraim.—Ephraim appears to be the same city which is called Ephraim, 2 Chron. xii. 19, and Ephron, Jos. xv. 9, which was situated eight miles north of Jerusalem, near Bethel, and apparently between that city and Jericho. Accordingly, we find that a desert, or wilderness, extended from Jericho to Bethel. (Jos. xvi. 1.) called the wilderness of Beth-aven. (Jos. xviii. 12.) in which Joshua and the Israelites slew the inhabitants of Ai. Jos. viii. 24.—Bagster.

Ver. 55. Purify themselves.—By some preparatory services, before they are the Passover.

56 Then sought they for Jesus, and spake among themselves, as they stood in the temple. What think ye, that he will not come to the feast?

57 Now both the chief priests and the Pharisees had given a commandment, that, if any man knew where he went, he should show it, that they might take him.

CHAPTER XII.

1 Jesus excuseth Mary anointing his feet. 9 The people flock to see Lazarus. 10 The high priests covet to kill him. 12 Christ rideth into Jerusalem. 13 Tarsus desire to see Jesus. 24 He foretelleth his death. 27 The Jews are generally blinded. 32 yet many chief rulers believe, but do not confess him. 44 Therefore Jesus calleth earnestly for confession of faith.

THEN Jesus six days before the passover came to Bethany, where Lazarus was which had been dead, whom he raised from the dead.

2 There they made him a supper; and Martha served; but Lazarus was one of them that sat at the table with him.

3 Then took Mary a pound of ointment of spikenard, very costly, and anointed the feet of Jesus, and wiped his feet with her hair: and the house was filled with the odour of the ointment.

4 Then saith one of his disciples, Judas Iscariot, Simon's son, which should betray him.

5 Why was not this ointment sold for three hundred pence, and given to the poor?

6 This he said, not that he cared for the poor; but because he was a thief, and had the bag, and bare what was put therein.

A M 40:13
A D 20
c 5 16, 18
ver 8
a c 11 1, 3
b Lu 10 38, 42
c Mt 26 6, 10
d 2 Ki 5 20
27
Ps 50 18
e c 13 29

f De 15 11
Mat 26 11
Mar 11 7
g Co 5 6
c 2 21
ver 35
e 13 68
10 5 7
h Lu 16 31
i c 11 45
ver 18
j Mat 21 8, 9
k Ps 118 25, 26
1 Zec 9 9
m Lu 18 34
n c 7 39
o c 14 26

7 Then said Jesus, Let her alone; against the day of my burying hath she kept this.

8 For the poor always ye have with you; but me ye have not always.

9 Much people of the Jews therefore knew that he was there: and they came not for Jesus' sake only, but that they might see Lazarus also, whom he had raised from the dead.

10 But the chief priests consulted that they might put Lazarus also to death;

11 Because that by reason of him many of the Jews went away, and believed on Jesus.

12 On the next day much people that were come to the feast, when they heard that Jesus was coming to Jerusalem, 13 Took branches of palm trees, and went forth to meet him, and cried, Hosanna: Blessed is the King of Israel that cometh in the name of the Lord.

14 And Jesus, when he had found a young ass, sat thereon; as it is written,

15 Fear not, daughter of Sion: behold, thy King cometh, sitting on an ass's colt.

16 These things understood not his disciples at the first: but when Jesus was glorified, then remembered they that these things were written of him, and that they had done these things unto him.

17 The people therefore that was with him when he called Lazarus out of his grave, and raised him from the dead, bare record.

lousy of the Romans would be excited, and they would put an end to the Jewish polity. Pilate, however, appears to have had no suspicion of this nature, when he heard Jesus declare, that his kingdom was not of this world. (See chap. xvi. 35.) On the other hand, the rejection of Jesus really brought on the destruction both of their temple and city. 5. The advice and prediction of Caiaphas, the High Priest, that it were better to sacrifice one man, however innocent, than to risk the safety of the nation. As a maxim of political expediency this may be admitted, and has been often acted upon; but there are many things approved and acted upon in human governments, which will not bear the scrutiny of the great Supreme, who judges all actions either just or unjust, without any regard to political considerations.

This iniquitous advice, however, was approved by the great majority, and from that day they determined on his death. His time, however, was not yet come; Jesus therefore retreated to an obscure town, at some considerable distance from the metropolis, for a time; and the people debated among themselves whether he would be likely to attend the approaching Passover, in which case the Pharisees had strictly charged them, that if any one saw him, he should give them notice, that he might be apprehended.

But the chief difficulty in this chapter regards the prophecy of Caiaphas. "This he (Caiaphas) spake not of himself; that is, he did not understand his own prediction, which, through the overruling providence of God, was accomplished in a manner far beyond his meaning or comprehension. Yes; blessed be His name! Jesus did die for the nation—even for his murderers—and for all the children of God (whom the Father had given into his hands) that were scattered abroad throughout the world.

CHAP. XII. Ver. 1—11. Jesus anointed by Mary, the sister of Lazarus.—It has been doubted whether this is the same anointing mentioned by Matthew, (ch. xxvi. 6, &c.) and by Mark, (xiv. 3;) but the reasoning of Prob. Townsend (who follows Doddridge and Michaelis) has fully satisfied us that it is; and the few circumstances which seem to disagree will be explained in our notes. (See New Test. Arran.) The entertainment, as Matthew says, was "at the house of Simon the leper," who probably was a wealthy man, whom Jesus had cured; Martha, whose character is elsewhere given by Luke, as "cumbered about much serving," (chap. x. 40,) here also seems to have superintended the preparations; Lazarus was one of the guests, and Mary, as before, was wholly occupied with her beloved Lord, whom she anointed, first by breaking open the box, and pouring part of its precious contents upon his head, as stated by Matthew; but also, as John informs us, with the same ointment of spikenard, she bathed his feet.

On this account we may remark:—1. The publicity of the miracle which had been wrought on Lazarus, in raising him from the dead. For "much people (or many) of the Jews" came, "not for Jesus' sake only, but that they might see Lazarus also, whom he had raised from the dead." The report, therefore, must have been widely spread in a short period. 2. We remark the grateful attentions of Mary to the Lord, and the precious ointment wherewith she anointed him, which some think was the remainder of what she had purchased to anoint her own brother at his funeral: and which could not now be better bestowed than in expressing her gratitude for his resurrection. 3. The surly reproach of Judas, in which he appears, for the moment, to have been joined with other disciples, though not from the same motive; for Judas carried the bag. 4. The defence which the Lord made for Mary, as if he had said, "Talk not now of the poor; they you have always with you, and can at any time relieve; me ye have not always. I am about to leave you, and she hath done this very opportunely, just before my departure." "Against the day of my burial hath she kept this;" and these words will have an additional force, if we adopt the above supposition, that some of the same ointment had been used at the burial of her brother. 5. We remark the effects and consequences of this meeting of the Jews with Lazarus, and of the circumstances which attended it. "Many of the Jews went away" from the entertainment, as we understand it, and believed on Jesus; though some think the expression "went away" (ver. 11,) means they deserted from the Pharisees, with whom they had been connected. 6. And lastly, we observe how liberally our Lord rewards acts of kindness and sympathy in his people. "She hath done what she could" to honour me; and "Verily I say unto you, whosoever this gospel shall be preached throughout the whole world, this also that this woman hath done shall be spoken of for a memorial of her." (Matt. xxvi. 13.)

Ver. 12—19. Jesus enters Jerusalem in triumph—This circumstance is mentioned by all the Evangelists, and upon the narrative of Matthew we have offered some remarks: to those

Ver. 56. What think ye, that he will not come, &c.—Doddridge, Campbell, and other critics, point this as two questions, thus: "What think ye? [Do ye think] that he will not come up to the feast?"

CHAP. XII. Ver. 1. Six days before the Passover.—From the account of Matthew, it should seem not to have been more than two days. To us it seems probable, that though Jesus came to Bethany six days before the Passover, yet the entertainment might not be given till four days afterwards.

Ver. 2. Lazarus . . . sat at the table.—This describes him as a guest, and not as master of the house. For Matthew tells us, it was "in the house of Simon the leper," that is, who had been a leper. If it be asked, "Why was not this entertainment given at the house of Lazarus?" it may be replied, Probably for fear of information from the Jews; for John informs us, (ver. 10,) that the chief priests were already plotting to destroy Lazarus also.

Ver. 3. Spikenard.—(Spikenard is a highly aromatic plant growing in India whence was made a very valuable unguent or perfume, used at the anointing bath and feasts. It is identified by Sir W. Jones with the sambal of the Persians and Arabs, and jatanansi of the Hindus; and he considers it a species of the Valerian, of the triandra monogynum class of plants. The root is from three to twelve inches long, fibrous, sending up above the earth between thirty and forty ears or spikes, from which it has its name; stem lower part perennial, upper part herbaceous, suberect, simple, from six to twelve inches long; leaves, entire, smooth, four fold, the inner radical pair petioled and cordate, the rest sessile and lanceolate; pericarp, a single seed crowned with a pappus.—Boissier

Ver. 4. Judas Iscariot.—See note on Luke vi. 16.

Ver. 6. Had the bag.—e. he was steward and treasurer to the whole family.

Ver. 10. Consulted that they might.—Campbell, "Determined (or resolved) to do." &c. Compare chap. xi. 49.

Ver. 11. Went away.—Namely, from the company of Lazarus. But Campbell renders it, "forsook them;" namely, the Pharisees, and joined them selves to Christ's disciples.

18 For ^athis cause the people also met him, for that they heard that he had done this miracle.

19 The Pharisees therefore said among themselves, Perceive ^aye how ye prevail nothing? behold, the world is gone after him.

20 ¶ And there were certain ^aGreeks among them that ^acame up to worship at the feast:

21 The same came therefore to ^aPhilip, which was of Bethsaida of Galilee, and desired him, saying, Sir, we would see Jesus.

22 Philip cometh and telleth Andrew: and again Andrew and Philip tell Jesus.

23 ¶ And Jesus answered them, saying, The hour is ^acome, that the Son of man should be glorified.

24 Verily, verily, I say unto you, ^aExcept a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone: but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit.

25 He ^athat loveth his life shall lose it; and he that hateth his life in this world shall keep it unto life eternal.

26 If ^aany man serve me, let him follow me; and where ^aI am, there shall also my servant be: if ^aany man serve me, him will my Father honour.

A M. 40:33.
p ver 11.
q c 11, 17, 48.
r Ac 17, 1.
s Ro 1, 16.
t 1 Ki 8, 41.
u c 11, 41.
v c 12, 32.
w c 13, 17.
x Lu 15, 26.
y Lu 10, 39.
z Ma 35.
aa 9, 24.
ab 7, 33.
ac Lu 6, 46.
ad c 11, 15.
ae 1 Jn 5, 3.
af c 11, 42.
ag Th 4, 17.
ah 1 Th 2, 30.
ai c 13, 18.
aj Mat 28, 33, 39.
ak Lu 12, 50.
al c 12, 21.
am c 18, 37.
an Mt 3, 17.
ao c 11, 42.
ap Lu 10, 18.
aq c 16, 11.
ar Ac 25, 18.
as 2 Th 2, 1.
at c 8, 28.
au Ro 5, 18.
av c 15, 32.
aw Ps 89, 35.
ax 37.
ay 110, 4.
az Is 9, 7.
ba 140, 5, 18.
bb c 8, 12.
bc 1 Jn 13, 16. bd c 11, 10.

27 Now ^ais my soul troubled; and what shall I say? Father, save me from this hour: but ^bfor this cause came I unto this hour.

28 Father, glorify thy name. Then came there a voice ^cfrom heaven, saying, I have both glorified ^dit, and will glorify ^eit again.

29 The people therefore, that stood by, and heard ^fit, said that it thundered: others said, An angel spake to him.

30 Jesus answered and said, This voice came not because of me, but ^gfor your sakes.

31 Now is the judgment of this world: now shall ^hthe prince of this world be cast out.

32 And I, if I be lifted ⁱup from the earth, will draw all ^jmen unto me.

33 This he said, signifying ^kwhat death he should die.

34 The people answered him, We have ^lheard out of the law ^mthat Christ abideth for ever: and how sayest thou, The Son of man must be lifted up? who is this Son of man?

35 Then Jesus said unto them, Yet a little while is the light ⁿwith you. ^oWalk while ye have the light, lest darkness come upon you: for he ^pthat walketh in darkness knoweth not whither he goeth.

we shall here add a few others. This event, we have already remarked, was in the fulfilment of an ancient prophecy, (see on Matt. xxi. 1, &c. ;) and it has been already shown by an eminent prelate and acute writer, (Dr. Sherlock,) "that the figure of Jesus riding on an ass, was not only not contemptible in any degree, but strongly descriptive of his [Messiah's] character as the King of Israel. He (Bishop S.) observes, that the Israelites, by their law, were forbidden the use of horses, and that this statute was complied with for a long course of time; during which, neither for the purposes of war nor of state, were those animals ever employed. On occasions of the greatest solemnity, we find the Judges and Kings of Israel riding upon asses. We see Absalom, when aspiring to the crown, and in the day of battle, riding upon a mule, the colt of an ass; and Solomon, on the day of his accession, riding through Jerusalem on the King's mule, amidst the joyful acclamations of the people. In many respects this illustrious Prince was a type of the Messiah. In the appearance of Jesus upon this occasion, the resemblance was so very striking, that the multitude could not avoid observing it. Accordingly they saluted him as the Son of David, the King of Israel, that came in the name of the Lord.

"This transaction is dignified by the particular description given of it, long before its accomplishment, and in terms so clear and expressive, as if the prophet himself had been a spectator. Warned with the prospect, he breaks out into an exclamation, glowing with the majesty of the person described: 'Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion: behold thy King cometh unto thee,' &c. . . . The following particulars in the prophecy are clear and determined:—1. That the prophet is describing a King or Prince, the very character in which the Jews expected their Messiah. 2. The peculiar relation of this person to them: 'Thy king cometh to thee.' 3. The distinguishing features of his character and government: 'He is just, and having salvation.' 4. His external appearance; 'lovely, (or meek), to correct their notions of a temporal Messiah. And lastly, as a mark of distinction from all other kings, easy to be apprehended, 'Riding on an ass, even a colt, the foal of an ass.' In short, a king, not only superior to their kings, who lived nearest the age of the prophet, but to those of the highest antiquity and renown in their nation."

Several things have been alleged to pour contempt on the acclamations of the multitude: "They are easily attracted by novelty, fickle in their attachment, and tumultuary in their manner." In the present instance they were excited, not by parade or show, but by what they had seen and heard of the miracles of Jesus, and particularly "for that they heard of the miracle of calling Lazarus from the grave." (ver. 17, 18.)

Their language in the present instance had nothing in it either vulgar or profane, but clearly expresses their sentiments:—1. That Jesus was the Son of David. 2. That he was a king. 3. That he was a king by divine ordination. 4. That he came on purpose to save them. Lastly, we have their wishes and their prayers that the ends of his coming might be accomplished.

"The impression made by this event on the enemies of Jesus, is a circumstance that dignifies it very considerably. When we behold the city of Jerusalem moved, and in some measure alarmed, with his approach—when we see the Pharisees, his watchful enemies, compelled to stand on their defence, diffident of themselves, and jealous of his growing influence, can we allow ourselves to think meanly of the appearance or of the person, whose figure in it is the most considerable? Can we, consistently with common sense, ascribe effects so great to any trivial cause? . . . Or must we not rather ascribe it to the presence of him, who is described in the following majestic character—consuming his enemies [with the breath of] his mouth, and destroying them with the brightness of his coming."—Dr. D. Hunter's Observ.

Ver. 20—36. Certain Greeks desire to see Jesus, who predicts his own sufferings and death.—These Greeks, we may reasonably conclude, had forsaken the idolatry of their ancestors, and, as some suppose, had submitted to circumcision; but the latter is by no means certain. They desired, however, to see Jesus, we may hope with the best motives, and Philip and Andrew introduced them to him. He immediately announces to them the necessity of his death and resurrection, by both which he was to be glorified, and to glorify his heavenly Father. He illustrates this by the simile of a grain of corn being cast into the ground, without which it bears no fruit, but on being sown it appears to die, (as St. Paul says, 1 Cor. xv. 36.) but in so doing really vegetates, and, in the end, brings forth much fruit. So Christ dying upon the cross, glorified the divine perfections by his obedience and sufferings; and in like manner his disciples, by resigning the present temporary life, would secure to themselves one, un fading and eternal. His faithful servants in the present world should be honoured by his Father with an admission into the heavenly state—and "so be for ever with the Lord."

Jesus now approaches the last great hour of trial, and begins to feel the bitter pangs of suffering for our sins. "Now is my soul troubled, (exclaims he,) and what shall I say? Father, save me from this hour! but for this cause came I unto this hour," and cannot shrink from my covenant engagements. "Father, glorify thy name," therefore, whatever be the expense of suffering I may incur. Upon this, the Eternal Father announced from heaven the acceptance of the Saviour's prayer, in these remarkable words—"I have both glorified ^{it}, [by thy entrance into this hour,] and will glorify ^{it} again," by thy passing through it. It may reasonably be concluded that St. John, who records these words, heard them distinctly, and perhaps the other apostles with him. To the bystanders, however, it was a sound only. Some said it thundered, and possibly it did; and others took it for the voice of an angel. This, Dr. Lightfoot observes, is the third time that Jesus had the sanction of a voice from heaven, the others being at his baptism, and transfiguration; and of the others, as well as of this, it might be said, "This voice came, not because of me," or for my satisfaction, "but for your sakes," that is, for the confirmation of their faith.

The salvation of believers implies the condemnation of the world: when Satan, the prince of fallen spirits, is cast down from the throne which he has usurped, then shall the Saviour draw all men (that is, men of all nations) round him; raise them from the degradation into which they have been sunk by

Ver. 20. Certain Greeks.—These Greeks were foreign Jews and proselytes, who spoke the Greek language: these were called Greeks, or Hellenists.—Dr. Benson in Doddridge.

Ver. 27. What shall I say?—Campbell inserts [shall I say] Father save me, &c.—But for this cause.—Campbell, "But I came on purpose for this hour."

Ver. 32. And I, if I be lifted, &c.—That is "And I, being crucified, will, by that means, bring a great part of the whole world to believe on me, Gentiles as well as Jews."—Hammond.

Ver. 34. Out of the law.—i. e. the Scriptures. See chap. x. 34, where the Psalms are included under this term, law, as they are here also. See Psalm lxxxix. 4, 36, 37, &c.

Ver. 35. Yet a little while is the light with you, &c.—Compare ch. viii. 12 ix. 5, &c.

36 While ye have light, believe in the light, that ye may be "the children of light. These things spake Jesus, and departed, and did hide himself from them.

37 ¶ But though he had done so many miracles before them, yet they believed not on him:

38 That the saying of Esaias the prophet might be fulfilled, which he "spake, Lord, who hath believed our report? and to whom hath the arm of the Lord been revealed?

39 Therefore they could not believe, because that Esaias said "again, 40 He hath blinded their eyes, and hardened their heart; that they should not see with their eyes, nor understand with their heart, and be converted, and I should heal them.

41 These things said Esaias, when "he saw his glory, and spake of him.

42 ¶ Nevertheless among the chief rulers also many believed on him; but "because of the Pharisees they did not confess him, lest they should be put out of the synagogue:

43 For "they loved the praise of men more than the praise of God.

44 ¶ Jesus cried and said, He "that believeth on me, believeth not on me, but on him that sent me.

45 And he that seeth me seeth him that sent me.

46 I "am come a light into the world, that whosoever believeth on me should not abide in darkness.

A. M. 4083.
A. D. 29. n Ep 5.8

o Is 53.1.

p He 6.9,10.

q Is 6.1.

r e 9.22

e e 5.44.

Rm 3.29

t Ma 9.57.

1 Pe 1.21

u e 1.5

3.19

v e 3.17

w De 18.19

Lu 9.26

x 1.16.23

a Mat 26.2.

&c b e 17.1,11

c 1.21.3

Ep 5.2

1 Jo 1.10

Rc 1.15

d Lu 22.3.

5.5

e 6.70.

e Mat 28.15

He 2.3

f e 17.11.

47 And if any man hear my words, and believe not, I judge him not: for I came "not to judge the world, but to save the world.

48 He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my "words, hath one that judgeth him: the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day.

49 For I have not spoken of myself; but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak.

50 And I know that his commandment "is life everlasting: whatsoever I speak therefore, even as the Father said unto me, so I speak.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 Jesus washed the disciples' feet: 14 exhorteth them to humility and charity. 18 He foretelleth, and discovereth to John by a token, that Judas should betray him: 31 commaneth them to love one another, 36 and forewarneth Peter of his denial.

NOW "before the feast of the passover, when Jesus knew that his hour "was come that he should depart out of this world unto the Father, having "loved his own which were in the world, he loved them unto the end.

2 And supper being ended, the "devil having now put into the heart of Judas Iscariot, Simon's son, to betray him;

3 Jesus knowing "that the Father had given all things into his hands, and that "he was come from God, and went to God;

4 He riseth from supper, and laid aside his garments; and took a towel, and girded himself.

5 After that he poureth water into a basin, idolatry and vice, and make them his willing subjects. Christ had many conflicts with the enemy, both before and during his public ministry: but his great triumph was on the cross. Thereon he "spoiled principalities and powers, and made a show of them openly, triumphing over them in (or upon) it." (Col. ii. 15.) The Jews being utterly ignorant, both as to Messiah's death and resurrection, knew not how to reconcile his abiding for ever with the idea of his sufferings; but now those sufferings are accomplished, and succeeded by his ascension to glory, this difficulty is completely solved. "He triumphed when he fell."

Ver. 37—50. The infidelity of the Jews remarked and accounted for.—The last words of the preceding section were certainly addressed to the Jewish multitude, who, though Christ had done so many miracles before them, "believed not on him." To this, however, we must admit various exceptions. Not only a considerable number of the common people believed on him, but also "many individuals" even among the Sanhedrim, though they had not courage to acknowledge it. How shall we account for these things? 1. As to those who refused to believe upon the testimony of their own eyes and ears, we can only account for their obduracy from the language of the prophet Esaias, (or Isaiah, ch. vi. 9.) which has been already considered in our exposition of Matt. xii. 14; and which commentators generally explain of a judicial hardening. So Wesley: "By the just judgment of God, for their obstinacy, and wilful resistance of the truth, they were at length so left to the hardness of their hearts, that neither the miracles nor doctrine of our Lord could make any impression upon them." 2. As to the rulers, though it is admitted that many individuals among them were convinced of the truths of Christ's miracles and doctrine, so much were they in love with the praise of men, so much afraid of public censure, that they dared not own their conviction; for they loved the honours which come from men more than those which come from God: in which there is evidently a reference to their fondness for honorary titles, as Rabbi, or doctor; and to their love of greetings, or the flattering notice taken of them in the markets and other public places. So our Lord had remonstrated with them in the early part of his ministry—"How can ye [truly] believe, which receive honour one of another, and seek not the honour that cometh from God only?" (Chap. v. 44; see also Matt. xxiii. 6—10.) They were likewise afraid of persecution, for the Pharisees, who were evidently the ruling party, had threatened that whoever did confess his belief in Jesus, should be put out of the synagogue, (chap. ix. 22;) which certainly implied the loss of many privileges, and seems to have been equally dreaded with excommunication from the Church of Rome in modern times.

The language of the two following verses is evidently elliptical, in which some words must be supplied, as thus: "Jesus cried and said, He that believeth on me, believeth not on me [only,] but [also] on him that sent me: and he that seeth me, seeth [also] him that sent me." (See Mark ix. 37.) This refers not simply to bodily sight, but to a believing view by faith; and is a necessary result from the doctrine before laid down, "I and the Father are one," (ch. x. 30.) and which we shall find farther confirmed in the next chapter to which we come.

A like ellipsis to what we have just remarked occurs in verse 47 of this chapter. "If any man . . . believe not, I judge him not, [now;] for I came [now] not to judge the world, but to save the world."—Christ shall come again to judge the quick and dead at the last day. (Ver. 48.)

As our Lord Jesus made the commandment of the Father the rule of all his words and conduct, let us imitate him also in all we say or do.

"Such was thy truth, and such thy zeal,

Such defence to thy Father's will;

Such love, and meekness so divine,

I would transcribe, and make them mine."—Watts.

CHAP. XIII. Ver. 1—17. Jesus, at the Paschal supper, washes the feet of his disciples.—Of the institution of the Passover we gave an account in our exposition of Exod. xii. 1—28; and on this celebration of it, some observations will be found in our exposition of Matt. xxvi. 17—30. We shall here subjoin, in order to throw farther light upon the subject, a few particulars relative to the manner of its celebration, collected by Ainsworth from the most learned Rabbies, and abridged by Doddridge for the same purpose. "The master of the family began the feast with a cup of wine, which being solemnly blessed, . . . he divided among the guests, (Luke xxii. 17.) and afterwards washed his hands. Then the supper began with unleavened bread and bitter herbs, which, when the master and the rest of the family had tasted, one of the younger persons present (generally a child) asked the reason of what was peculiar in that feast, (according to Exod. xii. 26.) which introduced the haggadah, that is, the showing forth, or declaration of it, (alluded to 1 Cor. xi. 26.) Then the master rose up and took another cup, and washed his hands again, before the lamb was tasted; and in this interval I suppose (says Doddridge) Christ also washed the feet of his disciples. Then, after eating the Passover, followed another cup, which, after namely, "the word" or doctrine which Christ delivered. So Doddridge, "That [very word] shall judge him."

CHAP. XIII. Ver. 2. Supper being ended—Father, "come." So Dr. Hammond, Doddridge, Guisé, and Jennings; but Campbell reads, "while they were at supper," which is to the same effect.—The devil, the word here is diabolos, meaning Satan; not a demon.

Ver. 4. His garments—(That is, his gown, or upper coat, with the girdle by which it was girded close to his tunic, or inner coat; and instead of this girdle, he tied a towel about him, that he might have it in readiness to dry their feet, and that he might appear as a servant. Indeed the whole action was a servile one; and never performed by a superior to an inferior.)—Eag.

Ver. 36. Jesus departed, and did hide himself from them.—Campbell,

"He withdrew himself privately from them."

Ver. 38. That the saying . . . might be fulfilled.—Doddridge, "So that the saying . . . might be fulfilled." So Campbell, Wesley, &c.

Ver. 40. He hath blinded, &c.—Dr. Gill explains this of a judicial blindness.

Ver. 42. Among the chief rulers also many.—Campbell, "several," certainly far from the majority.

Ver. 43. The praise of men, &c.—Campbell, "the approbation." The word is of extensive meaning. Chap. v. 44, it is properly rendered honour, and sometimes glory. Lu. xiv. 10, it is translated worship, meaning high respect, reverence.

Ver. 48. Hath one that judgeth.—Campbell, "Hath what condemneth him?"

and began to wash the disciples' feet, and to wipe them with the towel wherewith he was girded.

6 Then cometh he to Simon Peter: and Peter said unto him, Lord, dost thou wash my feet?

7 Jesus answered and said unto him, What I do thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter.

8 Peter saith unto him, Thou shalt never wash my feet. Jesus answered him, If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with me.

9 Simon Peter saith unto him, Lord, not my feet only, but also my hands and my head.

10 Jesus saith to him, He that is washed needeth not save to wash his feet, but is clean every whit: and ye are clean, but not all.

11 For he knew who should betray him; therefore said he, Ye are not all clean.

12 So after he had washed their feet, and had taken his garments, and was set down again, he said unto them, Know ye what I have done to you?

13 Ye call me Master and Lord: and ye say well; for so I am.

14 If I then, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet; ye also ought to wash one another's feet.

15 For I have given you an example, that ye should do as I have done to you.

16 Verily, verily, I say unto you, The servant is not greater than his lord; neither he that is sent greater than he that sent him.

A. M. 4093.
A. D. 29.
g. he.
h. Mat 3 14
i. 1 Co 6 11.
F. 5 25.
T. 3 5.
j. e 6 64.
k. Mat. 23 8
l. 10.
F. 2 11.
l. 1 Pe 2 21
m. Ja. 1 23.
n. Pa. 41. 9.
o. or, from lenore.
Jorin.
p. e. 14 29.
16 4.
q. Mat. 10. 40
r. Mat 26 21
Ma 14 18
Lu 22 21
s. e 13 2
21 7, 10.
t. or, master
u. Lu 22 3.

17 If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them.

18 I speak not of you all: I know whom I have chosen: but that the scripture may be fulfilled, He that eateth bread with me hath lifted up his heel against me.

19 Now I tell you before it come, that, when it is come to pass, ye may believe that I am he.

20 Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that receiveth whomsoever I send receiveth me; and he that receiveth me receiveth him that sent me.

21 When Jesus had thus said, he was troubled in spirit, and testified, and said, Verily, verily, I say unto you, that one of you shall betray me.

22 Then the disciples looked one on another, doubting of whom he spake.

23 Now there was leaning on Jesus' bosom one of his disciples, whom Jesus loved.

24 Simon Peter therefore beckoned to him, that he should ask who it should be of whom he spake.

25 He then lying on Jesus' breast saith unto him, Lord, who is it?

26 Jesus answered, He it is, to whom I shall give a sop, when I have dipped it. And when he had dipped the sop, he gave it to Judas Iscariot, the son of Simon.

27 And after the sop Satan entered into him. Then said Jesus unto him, That thou doest, do quickly.

having delivered to each a piece of [unleavened] bread, was the sacramental cup at this supper. Then, after some pious and friendly discourse, the whole family, after having drank at least a fourth cup, sang some Psalms of praise; (see note on Matt. xxvi. 39;) and so the solemnity ended." (Dodgridge.) We return now to our evangelist, John.

Jesus knowing that his time on earth was nearly expired, was desirous, by some significant action, to show his unabated love toward his apostles: he therefore rose from table before the feast was concluded, girded himself with a towel, and, according to the ancient laws of hospitality, began to wash his disciples' feet, and wipe them with the towel with which he was girded. On this narrative we subjoin a few remarks.

1. That the love of Jesus was not diminished, either by the cruelty of his enemies or the baseness of his pretended friends, who had gradually deserted him on every appearance of persecution. There were, indeed, still a faithful few who continued steady to him and to his cause; and to these his attachment continued, under every change of circumstances, unabated. He did not show the fickleness common to earthly masters, who often grow weary and change their servants: there is no instance of his dismissing one of them; but having loved them at the first, he loves them to the last: not to the end of his life only, but for ever.

2. So much, however, cannot be said of his servants or disciples. One had even now deserted and betrayed him. Another, he well knew, would not only desert, but deny him in the hour of danger: and he even foresaw that, of the whole twelve, not one of them would have the courage to speak in his behalf, or even to attend him at his trial.

3. The action he fixes upon, as a mark of his continued attachment, and as a model for their conduct towards each other, was that of washing their feet, a well-known instance of hospitality in eastern countries, of which we have several examples in the life of Abraham. (Gen. xviii. 4; xix. 2; xxiv. 32.) It afterwards became the office of the lowest menial servants, (1 Sam. xxi. 41.) but was not wholly discontinued during the times of Scripture, nor is even now in those countries where shoes are not worn.

4. We must notice the conduct of Peter, who thinks the washing of his feet such an act of degradation to his Master, that he determines never to consent to it—"Thou shalt not wash my feet;" yet, when he finds obedience indispensable to his discipleship, his language is instantly changed: sooner than lose his part in Christ, he cries, "Not my feet only, but also my hands and my head." Jesus, however, gives Peter to understand that, as he had doubtless bathed before the feast, he needed to wash only those parts (his feet) which might have contracted defilement since. Peter at length submits, under the assurance, "what I do thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter." A maxim of primary importance to us all; for there are many things in the present state incomprehensible, with which it is yet our duty to comply without inquiring into the reason.

5. We observe a mystical or figurative intention in the sign here used. If Jesus wash us not by his Spirit and by his blood, we have no part in him. Jay justly observes, "Our Saviour was accustomed to teach by facts and imagery; to pass from the body to the mind; to ascend from particular hints to general truths; and to express more than is immediately perceived, in order that it might be discovered by repeated meditation, or illustrated by subsequent events."

6. The action was not merely figurative, it was exemplary. "I have given you an example, that you should do as I have done to you:" that is, condescend to the meanest offices that may contribute to the comfort and the happiness of your brethren, though it were to "wash each other's feet." "Nothing short of perfect affection, (says Ward,) and a disposition to do the meanest offices for each other, comes up to the standard laid down in the New Testament. Nor should these tempers prevail among members of the same society merely, but be cultivated toward all who are in actual communion with the Father and his Son, Jesus Christ."

Ver. 18—38. Jesus predicts the treachery of Judas, and the cowardice of Peter.—It is evident that Jesus suffered much in his own mind from the contemplation of these painful events—"He was troubled in spirit." Both events have been anticipated by the other evangelists; and some observations on them will be found in our exposition of Matt. xxvi. throughout, and Luke xxii. 14—30. We shall therefore only add a few additional remarks on the opposite characters of Judas and of Peter. The crime of the former, no doubt, sprang from covetousness and ambition, as we have already observed; and his treachery was carried on with that secrecy and address, which show him to have been an accomplished villain. Satan seems to have entered first into his heart in the form of Mammon. Hearing that the chief priests and scribes sought the life of his Master, it is likely that he expected a much larger reward for his treachery than he obtained; but it was not till he was reproved for his conduct in censuring the sister of Lazarus, for her costly attentions to his Master, that his mind appears to have been fully made up to his crime; then both resentment and covetousness urged him to commit the fatal deed: but this was no sooner completed, than his conscience reproached were on his bosom; but in this, as in many other instances, he modestly omits his own name.

Ver. 21. Beckoned.—Dodgridge, "nodded." The word implies a motion of the head.

Ver. 26. Dipped the sop.—Buxtorf and others inform us, that at this feast the Jews have a thick kind of sauce, called charoseth, which is made of dates, raisins, and other ingredients, to about the consistence of a thick paste, to represent the clay with which their fathers wrought in Egypt. In this sauce it is supposed that our Lord dipped the sop which he gave to Judas.

Ver. 10. He that is washed.—Dodgridge and Campbell, "He that hath been bathing." Yet as the feet might be soiled in going from the bath, they might need washing.

Ver. 13. Master.—Greek, didaskalos; i. e. "teacher." So Campbell. Ver. 19. I tell you before, &c.—Christianity derives much support from a fulfilment of the New Testament prophecies, particularly from those of our Lord respecting the destruction of Jerusalem.

Ver. 23. Leaning on Jesus' bosom.—This was John, who was accustomed to sit next to Jesus, and in the leaning attitude then customary, reclined as it 28 Now no man at the table knew for what intent he spake this unto him.

29 For some of them thought, * because Judas had the bag, that Jesus had said unto him, Buy those things that we have need of against the feast: or, that he should give something to the poor.

30 He then having received the sop went immediately out: and it was night.

31 ¶ Therefore, when he was gone out, Jesus said, Now * is the Son of man glorified, and God * is glorified in him.

32 If God be glorified in him, God shall also glorify him in himself, and shall straightway glorify him.

33 Little children, yet a little while I am with you. Ye shall seek me: and * as I said unto the Jews, Whither I go, ye cannot come; so now I say to you.

34 A new * commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another.

35 By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another.

36 ¶ Simon Peter said unto him, Lord, whither goest thou? Jesus answered him, Whither I go, thou canst not follow me now; but * thou shalt follow me afterwards.

37 Peter said unto him, Lord, why cannot I follow thee now? I will * lay down my life for thy sake.

38 Jesus answered him, Wilt thou lay down thy life for my sake? Verily, verily, I say unto thee, The cock shall not crow, till thou hast denied me thrice.

CHAPTER XIV.

1 Christ comforteth his disciples with the hope of heaven, 6 professeth himself the way, the truth, and the life, and one with the Father. 13 assurth their prayers in his name to be effectual: 15 requesteth love and obedience, to promise the Holy Ghost the Comforter, 26 and loveth his price with them.

LET * not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe * also in me.

him both as a villain and a fool—the former, for betraying “innocent blood;” and the latter, for doing it for a sum so inadequate to his crime!

From this confession, however, an ingenious Scottish clergyman (Bonar, of Perth) derives an important argument in favour of Christianity. His confession that Jesus was innocent, implies his conviction that Jesus was not only a good man, but the character he assumed to be, namely, the Messiah; for an impostor could never be an innocent and good man. It implies, also, that he (Judas) was privy to no design of sedition or rebellion against either the Jewish or Roman government: that Jesus was no magician, and had no dealings with impure spirits, as his enemies had pretended. Had he been guilty of either of these charges, we can hardly think the remorse of Judas would have gone so far as to lead him to hang himself, for bringing a criminal to justice!

But let us turn to Peter. He was naturally impetuous in temper, warm in his attachments, and most sincere in his professions; but weak in faith, and irresolute in action; yet not a little vain and self-confident. In the absence of danger, bold as a lion; but soon as it appeared, timid as a deer. Such was Peter in himself. He sinned awfully—wept bitterly—and was freely pardoned. If we view, however, the sequel of his life, we find what grace can do. No apostle was more courageous, more determined, more faithful. He was faithful unto death, and received the crown of martyrdom and glory.

The new commandment here mentioned (ver. 34) will come more fully under our notice in the following chapters, where it is somewhat amplified, and explained to be founded on, and measured by the Saviour's love to his disciples.

CHAP. XIV. Ver. 1—14. Jesus encourages and comforts his disciples.—In these last discourses of our Saviour, he endeavours to comfort his apostles by a variety of considerations, at which we can only glance. “Let not your heart be trou-

A M. 4002.
A D 26.
v c 12, 6.
w c 12, 21.
15: 1, 6.
x c 11 13.
1 Pe 1 11
y c 7 31.
8: 21.
z Le 19 18.
c 15 12, 17.
Ep 5 2.
1 Th 1 3.
Jas 5.
1 Pe 1 12.
1 Jo 3 7, 8.
3 Jo 23.
4 Jo 23.
n c 9 14.
2 Pe 1 14
b Mat 26.
35: 4.
Ma 14 20.
Ac.
1 Jo 2 23.
4: 5.
a Jo 13 12.
ver 27.
2 Jo 2 2.
b 1 Jo 2 23.
Ep 1 12.
13.
1 Pe 1 12
c He 6 20.
9: 24.
Ro 21 2. d He 9 28.
e c 12 28.
13: 21.
1 Th 4 17
f 1 Jo 3 9.
10: 9.
Jo 10 19.
20.
g c 1 17.
15: 4.
h c 1 4.
11: 23.
i Ac 4 12.
j Col 1 15.
k Mat 21 21.
l 1 Jo 5 14.

2 In my Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so, I would have told you. I go * to prepare a place for you.

3 And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will * come again, and receive you unto myself; that * where I am, there ye may be also.

4 And whither I go ye know, and the way ye know.

5 ¶ Thomas saith unto him, Lord, we know not whither thou goest; and how can we know the way?

6 Jesus saith unto him, I am the * way, the * truth, and the * life: no * man cometh unto the Father, but by me.

7 If ye had known me, ye should have known my Father also: and from henceforth ye know him, and have seen him.

8 ¶ Philip saith unto him, Lord, show us the Father, and it sufficeth us.

9 Jesus saith unto him, Have I been so long time with you, and yet hast thou not known me, Philip? he * that hath seen me hath seen the Father, and how sayest thou then, Show us the Father?

10 Believest thou not that I am in the Father, and the Father in me? the words that I speak unto you I speak not of myself: but the Father that dwelleth in me, he doeth the works.

11 Believe me that I am in the Father, and the Father in me: or else believe me for the very works' sake.

12 ¶ Verily, verily, I say unto you, He * that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do; because I go unto my Father.

13 And whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son.

14 If ye shall ask any thing in my name, I will do it.

bled: ye believe in God, believe also in me:” that is, ye believe in the power and goodness of my heavenly Father; rely no less on my promises of grace and mercy: “I and the Father are one.”

He then assures them, that though he is about to leave the world, and that in the most awful way, by a cruel and ignominious death, yet will he not finally forsake them. He is only going home to his Father's house, where there are “many mansions” of bliss and glory, that he may prepare a place for them to reside with him for ever. Thomas, with the same difficulty to understand, and reluctance to believe, that he manifested in another case, affects not to know whether his Lord is going, nor yet the way: and Philip, uniting with him, seems to require a corporeal sight of God, and of these heavenly mansions of which he speaks: “Lord, show us the Father, and it sufficeth us.” Jesus then exhibits himself as the way to the Father—the true and living way, as he had before taught them, (chap. x. 9, &c.) the only way by which men can have access to God and heaven.

He further informs them, (as before,) that such a union subsists between the Father and himself, that whosoever seeth the Son seeth the Father also. There is such an intimate union between these divine persons, that whosoever commeth with the one, commeth with the other also.

Jesus then addresses the twelve, and as Elijah said to Elisha—“Ask what I shall do for thee, before I am taken from thee,” so Jesus says, “If ye ask any thing in my name, I will do it.” Let this then encourage us to pray in the name of Jesus, who is not only our intercessor, but our agent. “Whosoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son.” This extensive promise, however, must be limited within the boundaries of common sense. It is not to be supposed that our Lord would sanction the extravagancies of enthusiasm, much less of crime: the con-be rendered either as by our translators, or as by Doddridge and Campbell, “Believe in God, believe also in me;” or, “Ye believe (or believe ye) in God, and ye believe in me.”

Ver. 12. Because I go unto my Father.—This refers to the day of Pentecost, when Christ, having ascended up on high, poured forth therefrom the gifts he had received of the Father for that purpose. (See Acts i.) Archbishop Fenelon beautifully remarks on the simple language Christ here uses. So a prince, educated in his father's palace, would speak of it as perfectly familiar to him,—as going home,—without being dazzled with the contemplation of its splendours.

Ver. 33. Little children.—A term of endearment; dear as if they were his own little children.

Ver. 34. A new commandment.—The Mosaic law commanded men to “love their neighbour as themselves,” and this implied that reciprocal and social love of believers of which our Lord spoke; but this was now to be explained with new clearness, enforced by new motives and obligations, illustrated by a new example, obeyed in a new manner, and earned to a new extent. They were required to love each other for his sake, and in imitation of him,—“even as I have loved you,”—and be ready on all occasions to lay down their lives for each other. By this the primitive Christians were particularly known among the Gentiles: “See, said they, how they love one another,” and are ready to lay down their lives for each other.” Tertullian in Apol.—Beagster.

CHAP. XIV. Ver. 1. Believe in God.—The original is ambiguous, and may 16 ¶ If ^o ye love me, keep my commandments.

16 And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another ^a Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever;

17 Eren the Spirit of truth; whom ^o the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him: but ye know him; for he dwelleth with you, and ^p shall be in you.

18 I will not leave you ^a comfortless: I ^r will come to you.

19 Yet a little while, and the world seeth me no more; but ye see me: because ^a I live, ye shall live also.

20 At that day ye shall know that I am in my Father, and ye in me, and I in you.

21 He ^t that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me: and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself to him.

22 Judas ^a saith unto him, not Iscariot, Lord, how is it that thou wilt manifest thyself unto us, and not unto the world?

23 Jesus answered and said unto him, If a man love me, he will keep my words: and my Father will love him, and ^r we will come unto him, and make our abode with him.

24 He that loveth me not keepeth not my sayings: and the word which ye hear is not mine, but the Father's which sent me.

A. M. 4093.

A. D. 29.

m c 15.10.14

1 Jn. 5.3.

n c 15.26.

o 1 Co. 2.14.

p Ro 8.9.

1 Jn. 2.27.

q or, orphans.

r ver. 3.28.

s He. 7.25.

t ver. 15.23.

u Lu. 6.16.

v 1 Jn. 2.24

Re. 3.20.

w ver. 16.

x c 16.13.

1 Jn. 2.20.

27.

y Ep. 2.14..

17.

Ph. 4.7.

z ver. 12.

a 1 Co. 15.

27.28.

b c. 16.11.

Ep. 2.2.

c 2 Co. 5.21.

He. 4.15.

1 Jn. 3.5.

d Ps. 40.8.

Ph. 2.3.

e Is. 4.2.

f Ca. 8.12.

25 These things have I spoken unto you, being yet present with you.

26 But ^w the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he ^x shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you.

27 ¶ Peace ^y I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid.

28 Ye have heard how I said unto you, I go away, and come again unto you. If ye loved me, ye would rejoice, because I said, I ^z go unto the Father: for ^a my Father is greater than I.

29 And now I have told you before it come to pass, that, when it is come to pass, ye might believe.

30 Hereafter I will not talk much with you:
for the prince ^b of this world cometh, and hath nothing ^c in me.

31 But that the world may know that I love
the Father; and as ^d the Father gave me commandment, even so I do. Arise, let us go hence.

CHAPTER XV.

1 The consolation and mutual love between Christ and his members, under the parable of the vine. 18 A comfort in the hatred and persecution of the world. 26 The office of the Holy Ghost, and of the apostles

I AM the true ^a vine, and my Father is the ^b husbandman.

cluding phrase, indeed, limits it to things in which "the Father may be glorified through the Son." Many "ask and have not, because they ask amiss." (James iv. 2, 3.)

Ver. 15—31. Our Lord enjoins a strict obedience to his commands, and promises another Comforter.—Love is the true source of Christian obedience, and that obedience is the great test of love: "If ye love me, keep my commandments." In that case I will ask the Father, and he will send you another Comforter, Advocate, and Friend, who will more than supply the loss of my bodily presence; and he shall remain with you, not for a few years, as I have been, but for ever. The primary idea of the original term (Paraklete) appears to be that of an Advocate, or a person called upon to plead one's cause in a court of judicature; and as the same is also the adviser or counsellor of his client, and being thus the means of great support and consolation, he may be also called a Comforter. Thus our Lord Jesus, who is the great Advocate, and wonderful Counsellor of his people, is also their Comforter, in all cases of difficulty and affliction; and hence the Holy Spirit here promised is called another Comforter. There is this difference, however, between these illustrious Advocates: Christ is our Advocate with his Father in the court of heaven; but the office of the Holy Spirit is rather to instruct, advise, and assist us here below, and thus he becomes our Comforter on earth. And this he does in perfect harmony with the work of Christ himself; nor is there more harmony in the operations of the Father and the Son, than there is between those of the Son and the Holy Spirit: for as the Son doth nothing of himself, or independent of the Father, so also the Holy Spirit, in all the consolations which he offers, (as it is afterwards expressed,) takes of "the things of Christ," and exhibits them to his people. In fact, all the comforts which the Holy Spirit administers to believers are derived from the doctrine and work of Christ—his obedience and sufferings; his death and resurrection.

This Holy Spirit is also called the Spirit of Truth, because it is his office to reveal truth, and to apply it to the consolation of the human mind, nor is any consolation derived from him but what is founded in truth and righteousness. The Spirit also teaches and instructs us, by bringing to our recollection, and impressing on our minds—not new truths, but those which Christ himself taught: for as Christ himself taught nothing but what he had heard and learned of the Father, (chap.
viii. 26, 40,) so, it is said, "the Holy Spirit shall speak nothing of himself, but whatsoever he shall hear" from the Father and from Christ, "that shall he speak," and reveal to men, (ch.
xvi. 13.) These things we introduce by way of anticipation, in order to show that there is, in all the operations of the Divine Persons, the most perfect harmony that can be conceived, and even more than creatures can possibly conceive; and yet, in the economy of our redemption, each has a distinct department.

In the eastern countries, on entering a house, (and we believe also in departing,) it is usual to pronounce a Salaam; that is, a wish of Peace; and it is, we presume, in conformity with that custom that our Lord made this his parting blessing:

"Peace I leave with you: my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you." How does the world give? In a cold, complimentary, heartless manner. How does Christ give? All the blessings which he bestows are sprinkled with his blood. "He laid down his life" for us. Let not, therefore, our hearts be troubled; neither let us be afraid.

Our Lord proceeds, (ver. 28:) "Ye have heard how I have said unto you I go away, and come again unto you: If ye loved me as ye ought to do, ye would rejoice, because I said, I go unto the Father; for my Father is greater than I." Far be it from us to attempt to dive into the mysteries of the divine nature, which must necessarily be incomprehensible.
That God is greater than man seems a truism unworthy of the occasion: but where there is a perfect equality of nature, we may easily conceive a gradation in rank between a son and his father—between a messenger and him that sent him. In all the offices of Christ, as Prophet, Priest, and King, he evidently sustains a rank below the Father. But what ground of joy could it afford to Christ's disciples that he was going to his Father? Plainly this: That as he was about to be advanced to higher honours, so he had promised to his disciples that they should be with him to behold and partake his glory.
"Because I live, ye shall live also." When I am raised from the dead, ye also shall be raised to newness of life. When I am raised to the right hand of God, ye shall sit with me in heavenly places. I will not (long) leave you orphans, without hope and comfort: but will provide you a home in my Father's house, that where I am there shall ye be also. "He that loveth me shall be loved of my Father; and I will love him and manifest myself unto him."

Judas (not Iscariot) saith unto him, "Lord, how is it that thou wilt manifest thyself unto us, and not unto the world?"
This is a question that leads us into the very essence of vital religion, into the doctrine of communion with God through Christ. "If any man love me he will keep my words; and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him and make our abode with him." Thus is what the same Evangelist means, in his Epistles, by "Fellowship with the Father, and with his Son, Jesus Christ." (1 John 1.3.)

CHAP. XV. Ver. 1—11. Christ the true Vine, and his disciples the branches.—Dr. Doddridge supposes the following discourse was also delivered in the guest-chamber, where our Lord partook the Passover, and instituted the Holy Supper; others, as Hammond and Guise, suppose it delivered in their way through some vineyards to the garden of Gethsemane;
and we know that our Lord was used to converse walking with his disciples. It is very possible, however, on the former supposition, that the guest-chamber might have a view over some neighbouring vineyards, which the Passover full-moon would enable them to contemplate with advantage; and we know that it was our Lord's custom to notice any natural objects which might present themselves, in order to deliver spiritual truths under the most instructive figures.

Ver. 18. Comfortless.—Margin, "Orphans," the most "comfortless" part of society—having none to help, and none to care for them.

Ver. 30. The prince of this world.—i. e. Satan, (chap. xii. 31;) elsewhere called "the god of this world." 1 Co. iv. 4.—Hath nothing in me.—i. e.

2 Every ^a branch in me that beareth not fruit he taketh away : and every branch that ^a beareth fruit, he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit.

3 Now ^a ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you.

4 Abide ^a in me, and I in you. As ^a the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye, except ye abide in me.

5 I am the vine, ye are the branches : He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit : ^a for without me ye can do nothing.

6 If ^a a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered ; and men gather them, and cast them into the fire, and they are burned.

7 If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye ^a shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you.

8 Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit ; so shall ye be my disciples.

9 As the Father hath loved me, so have I loved you : continue ye in my love.

10 If ^a ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love ; even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love.

11 These things have I spoken unto you, that my joy might remain in you, and that ^a your joy might be full.

12 ¶ This ^a is my commandment, That ye love one another, as I have loved you.

13 Greater ^a love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends.

14 Ye ^a are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you.

A M 4033.
A D 129
e Mat 13 13
d He 12 15
Re 3 19
e c 17 17.
Ep 5 25
1 Pe 1 22
f 1 Ju 2 6
g Ho 11 8.
Ga 2 20.
Ph 1 11.
h or seer-
ed from me
i Mat 3 10.
7 19.
j c 16 23.
k c 14 21, 23
l c 15 21
17 13.
m c 13 31
n Ro 5 7, 8
o ver 10

p Ja 2 23
q 1 Ju 4 10, 12
r Ep 2 10. s ver 7
c 14 13
t ver 12.
u 1 Ju 3 1, 3
v c 17 14
w Mat 10 24
Lu 6 40
c 15 16.
x Eze 3 7
y c 16 3.
Mat 10 22
21 9
z c 9 41
a Ja 4 17.
b or, excuse
c c 7 31
d Ps 35 19
69 4

15 Henceforth I call you not servants ; for the servant knoweth not what his lord doeth : but I have called you ^a friends ; for all things that I have heard of my Father I have made known unto you.

16 Ye ^a have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained ^a you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain : that whatsoever ^a ye shall ask of the Father in my name, he may give it you.

17 These ^a things I command you, that ye love one another.

18 ¶ If ^a the world hate you, ye know that it hated me before it hated you.

19 If ye were of the world, the world would love his own : but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore ^a the world hateth you.

20 Remember ^a the word that I said unto you. The servant is not greater than his lord. If they have persecuted me, they will also persecute you : if ^a they have kept my saying, they will keep yours also.

21 But ^a all these things will they do unto you for my name's sake, because they know not him that sent me.

22 If ^a I had not come and spoken unto them, they had not had sin : but ^a now they have no ^b cloak for their sin.

23 He that hateth me hateth my Father also.

24 If I had not done among them the works ^a which none other man did, they had not had sin : but now have they both seen and hated both me and my Father.

25 But this cometh to pass, that the word might be fulfilled that is written in their law, They ^a hated me without a cause.

The Old Testament frequently represents to us the Jewish church under this image ; but here we are not to understand the church, but Christ himself, as the true Vine ; and the members of his Church, including all true believers, as branches of this vine : and as the branches can only live and bear fruit while existing in and deriving sap from the parent vine, so Christ's disciples, whatever they profess, can only bear fruit in virtue of communion with him, and grace derived from him.

Sweetly instructive as is this allegory, it has produced some bitter controversy ; but in arguing theological truths from parables, as this is, we should be very cautious not to go beyond first principles. It is very certain that both churches and individuals, though branches of this vine, may need pruning ; and some divines, we think too hastily, have inferred the final apostasy of real believers, from the circumstance of branches being separated from this vine, in which we think one material circumstance has been overlooked. Believers are not naturally branches of this vine, but are engrafted into the stock, which is Christ, and form a vital union with him. The grafting of vines, though not usual, is sometimes practised, and probably in the vine countries much more frequently. Now we know that grafting does not always succeed, and the branch grafted can only be considered as stuck on, till it becomes united with the stem. If it do not thus unite in due time, as it can bear no fruit, so it is thrown away as useless, and fit only for the fire : but if it properly unites, then it becomes fruitful ; but still is liable to the pruning knife, that it may bring forth more fruit.

But the great doctrine of the parable is, "Without me," that is, severed from or independent of me, "ye can do nothing ;" that is, bear no fruit : and the great use of the doctrine is to guard Christians against self-confidence, and its natural effect apostasy. It is not necessary here to enter far into the doctrine of final perseverance. Three things are certain ; first, that we cannot be saved without it : "He that endureth to the end, the same shall be saved." 2. That grace to persevere can be derived from Christ only ; "Without me ye can do nothing." 3. That it is extremely dangerous to trust our salvation to former experiences, without competent evidence from the fruit we bear, that we still belong to Christ. "Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bring forth much fruit ; so shall ye be my disciples."

Ver. 12—27. The great law of Christianity.—Farther promises respecting the Holy Spirit.—"These things I command you, (says our Saviour,) that ye love one another ;" on which passage we offer two brief remarks—the authority enjoining, and the nature of the command. 1. "I command you," says the Saviour : angels and prophets spake "in the name of the Lord ;" and nothing like this, in matters of religion, occurs, except when God himself speaks, in all the Old Testament. And not only does Christ command in his own name, but delegates to apostles and evangelists to act and to command in his name, from whom all their authority was derived. Does not this place the authority of Christ above both men and angels ? Is it not assuming the style of Deity ?

2. The command is also worthy of the authority—a precept the most unexceptionable that heaven ever gave. This, in another place, (chap. xiii. 34,) our Lord calls a new commandment ; not that it was absolutely so, for love to God and man, we have seen, was the substance of the ten commands. But, 1. It was a neglected command. Doddridge remarks, (from Raphaelus,) that Xenophon calls the laws of Lycurgus very CHAP. XV. Ver. 2. Every branch in me that beareth not fruit—By this it is evident, that to be in Christ, implies only a profession ; for those who bear no fruit cannot be real Christians : that such are taken away, argues, therefore, nothing against the perseverance of true believers. In allusion to the practice of grafting, it may be observed, that persons may be grafted into the Christian profession, without being vitally united to Christ by faith, though none can be thus united without living faith, since we are not naturally so. We may be grafted by baptism, or by education, but it requires the quickening influences of the Holy Spirit to produce a vital union and fruitful branches. As to grafting vines, that this was formerly, and still is the practice in certain cases, we may easily infer from the directions given for its performance in works of husbandry.—He purgeth it—i. e. by pruning : the only way in which a vine can be purified.

Ver. 3. Now ye are clean—Or purged : the same word as is used in the preceding verse. The expression may refer to chap. xiii. 10—"Now ye are clean, but not all." Judas being then present ; but now he was gone out, they were all clean.

Ver. 4. Abide in me, and I will abide in you.—The expression is evidently elliptical, and must be thus explained.

Ver. 5. Without me.—Doddridge, "Separate from me."

Ver. 6. Cast forth—i. e. thrown away.—And is withered—Campbell, "which is withered ;" a Hebrew idiom, the copulative often supplying the place of the relative.

Ver. 7. Unto you—Doddridge, "for you."

Ver. 8. So shall ye be—i. e. evidently applied to be.

Ver. 9. Continue ye in my love—i. e. according to Campbell, "Study to maintain your place in my affections."

Ver. 11. That my joy might remain in you—Doddridge, "That my joy in you might continue." Campbell, "That I might continue to have joy in you."

Ver. 16. That your fruit should remain—i. e. that ye should continue to bear fruit even in old age. Ps. xcii. 14.

Ver. 18. Hated me before it hated you—Lardner, "Hated me, your chief ;" which Doddridge approves, but Campbell strenuously opposes.

Ver. 20. My saying—Campbell, "My word."

Ver. 21. But now have they both seen and hated, &c.—Compare chapter xiv. 9.

Ver. 25. But this cometh to pass—Doddridge, "This is permitted" these words, indeed, are merely supplementary, not being in the original ; yet are properly supplied.

26 ¶ But when the Comforter ^e is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, he ^f shall testify of me :

27 And ^g ye also shall bear witness, because ^h ye have been with me from the beginning.

CHAPTER XVI.

ⁱ Christ comforteth his disciples against tribulation by the promise of the Holy Ghost, and by his ^j attraction and ascension: 28 comforteth their prayers made in his name to be acceptable to his Father. 33 Perceiveth Christ, and in the world affliction.

THESE things have I spoken unto you, that ye should not be offended.

2 They shall put you out of the synagogues: yea, the time cometh, ^a that whosoever killeth you will think that he doeth God service.

3 And ^b these things will they do unto you, because ^c they have not known the Father, nor me.

4 But these things have I told you, that when the time shall come, ye may remember that I told you of them. And these things I said not unto you at the beginning, because I was with you.

5 ¶ But now I go my way to him that sent

A. M. 4083.
A. D. 29.

e c. 14. 17.
f 1 Jo. 5. 6.

g Lu. 24. 48.
Ac. 2. 32.

h 2 Jo. 1. 15.
i 1 Jo. 1. 2.

Ac. 20. 9.
11.

b c. 15. 21.
c 1 Co. 2. 8.

1 Ti. 1. 13.

d ver. 21.

e or, con-vance.

Ac. 2. 37.
f Ro. 3. 20.

7. 9.
g Ja. 12. 21.

Ro. 1. 17.
h Ac. 17. 31.

Ro. 2. 2.
i Ro. 12. 13.

j c. 12. 31.

j He. 5. 12.

k c. 14. 26.

l Re. 1. 19.

me; and none of you asketh me, Whither goest thou?

6 But because I have said these things unto you, sorrow ^a hath filled your heart.

7 Nevertheless I tell you the truth; It is expedient for you that I go away: for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send him unto you.

8 And when he is come, he will ^b reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment:

9 Of ^c sin, because they believe not on me;

10 Of ^d righteousness, because I go to my Father, and ye see me no more;

11 Of ^e judgment, because ^f the prince of this world is judged.

12 I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now.

13 Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he ^g will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak: and he ^h will show you things to come.

new laws, several ages after they were made; because, though widely known, they had been little acted upon. So the Scribes and Pharisees had, by their traditions, in great measure made void this first and great command. 2. It was a renewed law; our Lord had largely explained, and amply illustrated it, in his Sermon on the Mount, and on other occasions which we have noticed. 3. It was newly illustrated and enforced by his own example, which was made the future model of their obedience: "This is my commandment, that ye love one another as I have loved you;" namely, by laying down their lives for one another, if required, as he had done for them.

Our Lord then places his attachment to his disciples in another point of view: it was not only compassion, but it was friendship. He had treated his disciples, and particularly the apostles, as friends, to whom he had communicated his mind freely and fully, and not with that reserve which men exercise toward their slaves or servants. "All things which I have heard from my Father I have declared to you." He had recently opened to them the mystery of his sufferings and death, and the glory which should follow, both to him and them. He admonishes them, also, that they were indebted to his grace and favour for all the privileges which they enjoyed. They had not chosen him for a Master or a Saviour; but he had chosen them for disciples, and ordained them to bring forth much fruit, and that in continuance, to the divine glory. He prepares them, however, for the hatred of the world, and for the persecution which would necessarily arise out of it; reminding them that he had sustained and conquered both. The world had hated both him and the Father, which implies not only the absence of love, (as the expression is sometimes used,) but an enmity of heart against those truths and duties which the gospel enjoined upon them. They shut their eyes that they might not see the former, and they hardened their hearts that they might not feel the latter.

CHAP. XVI. Ver. 1—15. The office of the Holy Ghost—the Comforter.—Our Lord, in the beginning of this chapter, repeats the warning which he had previously given to his apostles against persecution from the world, with this addition: "Yea, the time cometh, that whosoever killeth you will think that he doeth God service." A remarkable instance of this occurs in the case of Paul, who, before his conversion, "verily thought"—that is, conscientiously—that he "ought to do many things contrary to the name of Jesus of Nazareth," whose disciples he persecuted to prison and to death. (Acts xxvi. 9, 10.) And we doubt not but other Jewish persecutors might be equally conscientious. And, even in more modern times, we are persuaded that many persecutors in the Romish Church thought that they were doing God service when burning his saints under the name of heretics. But it is to be observed that Paul never urges this in apology for his conduct: on the contrary, though one of the most successful and accomplished of the Apostles, he never thought himself worthy of the name, because he had persecuted the church of God. (1 Cor. xv. 9.) Ignorance, arising from depravity, is no excuse for sin.

The predicted sufferings of their Lord, and the persecutions

they were warned to expect, having filled their hearts with sorrow, the apostles seem to have sunk into silent grief, asking no further questions: our Lord, however, recalls their attention to the mission of the Great Comforter whom he had promised to send, but who, according to the economy of redemption, and the tenor of prophecy, could not come till after his death and resurrection. "It is expedient for you that I go away: for if I go not away the Comforter will not come; but if I depart, I will send him unto you." Our Lord then goes on to explain more particularly the office of the Holy Spirit in the conversion of the world. "He will reprove," or, more properly, convince the world (1) of sin—and especially of unbelief, because they rejected the Messiah and Saviour of the world: (2) Of righteousness—that is, of Christ's personal innocence and purity; "because (says he) I go to my Father, and ye see me no more;" intimating that, were he the least defiled with sin, the Father would not accept the sacrifice he offered, nor receive him into glory. (3) Of judgment—i. e. of the divine judgment already inflicted upon Satan, the prince of this world, and soon after to fall upon a guilty nation, who have been led by him into the deepest of all crimes. (See exposition of chap. xii. 31.)

The Holy Spirit is then spoken of as their Guide into "all the truth"—that is, evangelical or divine truth; for this promise hath no reference to other truths, whether natural or scientific. But he endowed them with the spirit of prophecy; and revealed to them the character, the offices, and work of the Saviour, and thus promoted his glory: it being, as the Scriptures assure us, a constant object with the divine persons to promote each other's glory: the Father glorifies the Son, the Son the Father, and the Holy Spirit both.

When our Lord subjoins, "All things that the Father hath are mine," it implies an assumption of the divine perfections utterly unjustifiable in a mere creature: but it has here reference more particularly to the great scheme of human redemption, revealed by the Father to the Son, by both to the Holy Ghost, and by him to the apostles and first preachers, and through their means to all succeeding ages.

But the sanctifying and consoling influences of the Holy Spirit must not be confined to the first preachers only, nor to the apostolic age. The learned Calein remarks on this passage: "He [the Holy Spirit] shall receive of mine, and shall show it unto you;" that "the words imply, that we may receive the Spirit to this end, that we may enjoy the benefits of Christ. And what does the Spirit confer on us? To be washed in the blood of Christ; to have sin removed and abolished in us by his death and passion; to have our old man crucified; and to experience the power of his resurrection, by causing us to walk in newness of life; in short, to be made partakers of all his blessings. The Spirit then bestows nothing on us that was not in Jesus Christ, of whom he receives it to give to us. In the same manner we ought to think of the doctrine; for he does not enlighten us with the view of leading us the least astray from the Son of God; but he displays and opens to us the treasures which are hid in Jesus Christ. In short, the

Ver. 7. It is expedient for you that I go away.—The presence of the Comforter is now more to be desired in a church than the bodily presence of Jesus Christ.

Ver. 8. He will reprove.—Doddridge and Campbell, "Convince." So it often signifies.

Ver. 12. I have yet many things to say to you.—That is, much farther instruction to give; but as you are not yet prepared to receive it, the Holy Spirit shall be given to instruct you after my resurrection.

Ver. 13. When he, the Spirit of truth.—Hervey long since remarked the strong evidence which this passage affords to the personality of the Holy Spirit: for though the Greek word for Spirit (πνεῦμα) is neuter, all the pronouns are masculine—He, himself, &c. which he thinks can only be accounted for by the personality of the Holy Spirit. Letters, No. 21. See also Dr. Smith's Messiah, where the argument is ably justified.

CHAP. XVI. Ver. 1. Not be offended.—Campbell, "ensnared." Literally, "scandalized;" i. e. that persecution should not, by coming unexpectedly, prove a stumbling block to their faith.

Ver. 2. They shall put you out of.—Campbell, "expel you from." This refers to Jewish excommunication.—Whosoever killeth you.—The highest degree of excommunication included a forfeiture both of property and life.—Will think he doeth God service.—Doddridge, "Will think he offereth acceptable service to God." Campbell, "Offereth sacrifice to God." This explains Rom. viii. 26: "For this sake we are killed all the day long; we are accounted as sheep for the slaughter." Paul says, Acts xxi. 9—11, "I verily thought I ought to do many things contrary to the name of Jesus of Nazareth, which thing I did in Jerusalem: and many of the saints did I shut up in prison, and when they were put to death I gave my voice against them." (See note, Rev. xvi. 6.)

14 He shall glorify me: for he shall receive of mine, and shall show it unto you.

15 All things that the Father hath are mine: therefore said I, that he shall take of mine, and show it unto you.

16 ¶ A little while, and ye shall not see me: and again, a little while, and ye shall see me, because I go to the Father.

17 Then said some of his disciples among themselves, What is this that he saith unto us, A little while, and ye shall not see me: and again, a little while, and ye shall see me: and, Because I go to the Father?

18 They said therefore, What is this that he saith, A little while? we cannot tell what he saith.

19 Now Jesus knew^m that they were desirous to ask him, and said unto them, Do ye inquire among yourselves of that I said, A little while, and ye shall not see me: and again, a little while, and ye shall see me?

20 Verily, verily, I say unto you, That ye shall weep and lament, but the world shall rejoice: and ye shall be sorrowful, but your sorrow shall be turned into joy.

21 A woman when she is in travail hath sorrow, because her hour is come: but as soon as she is delivered of the child, she remembereth no more the anguish, for joy that a man is born into the world.

22 And ye now therefore have sorrow: but I will see you again, and your heart shall rejoice, and your joy no man taketh from you.

23 And in that day ye shall ask me nothing. Verily, verily, I say unto you, Whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in my name, he will give it you.

24 Hitherto have ye asked nothing in my

Holy Ghost bestows on us no other riches than those of Jesus, to the end that he may manifest the glory of Christ, and magnify it in all and by all.

Ver. 16—33. Christ farther discourses of his death and resurrection, and of the trials awaiting his Apostles.—In our last section we affirmed that the gift of the Holy Spirit was by no means confined to apostolic times, but is, and was intended to be continued, so long as Christ shall have a church on earth. We now resume this most important topic, in order to show, by a brief quotation, that this was most decidedly and explicitly the doctrine of the Reformers of the Church of England, to prove which we shall quote one of the Homilies which they published, and ordered to be read in that Church:—

“Our Saviour Christ, departing out of the world unto his Father, promised his disciples to send down another Comforter, that should continue with them for ever, and direct them into all truth; which thing to be faithfully and truly performed, the Scriptures do sufficiently bear witness. Neither must we think that this Comforter was either promised, or else given, only to the Apostles, but also to the universal Church of Christ, dispersed through the whole world. For unless the Holy Ghost had been always present, governing and preserving the church from the beginning, it could never have sustained so many and great brunts of affliction and persecution, with so little damage and harm as it hath. And the words of Christ are most plain in this behalf, saying, that ‘the Spirit of Truth should abide with them for ever; that he would be with them always, (he meaneth by grace, virtue, and power,) even to the world’s end.’

“Also in the prayer that he made to his Father, a little before his death, he maketh intercession, not only for himself and his apostles, but indifferently for all them that should believe in him through their words, that is, to wit, for his whole church. And again, St. Paul saith, ‘If any man have not the spirit of Christ, the same is not his.’ Also, in the words following: ‘We have received the spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father.’ Hereby, then, it is evident and plain to all men, that the Holy Ghost was given, not only to the Apostles, but also to the whole body of Christ’s congregation, although not in like form and majesty as he came down at the feast of Pentecost.”

In the following words our Lord expresses himself somewhat enigmatically: “A little while and ye shall not see me.” The meaning of which we take to be, that for a little while he should be taken from their view by death, but soon return;

Ver. 25 In parables.—(Twice.) Margin, “Parables.” So Doddridge. Though this is not the same word usually rendered parables, it is sometimes used as synonymous with it for the eastern parables are often highly figurative and enigmatical.

A. M. 4093.
A. D. 28.
mc 24, 5.

n ver. 16.
c 7, 33.
13, 33.
14, 19.

o 1a 24, 17.
21.

p 1a 26, 17.
q ver 6.

r Lu 24, 41.
c 20, 20.

s 1 Pe 1, 8.

t Mat 7, 7, 8.
Ja 1, 2, 3.

u c 15, 11.

v or, parables.
w ver 23.

x c 14, 21, 23.

y ver 20.
c 17, 5.

z or, parable.
A. M. 4093.
A. D. 28.
mc 24, 5.

b or, his own home.
c 16, 50, 7, 8.
c 3, 21.

d c 14, 27.
Ro 5, 1.
Ep 2, 14.

e c 15, 19.
21.
27, 31, 2.

f c 12, 24.
13, 32.

name: ask, and ye shall receive, that your joy may be full.

25 These things have I spoken unto you in proverbs: but the time cometh, when I shall no more speak unto you in proverbs, but I shall show you plainly of the Father.

26 At that day ye shall ask in my name: and I say not unto you, that I will pray the Father for you:

27 For the Father himself loveth you, because ye have loved me, and have believed that I came out from God.

28 I came forth from the Father, and am come into the world: again, I leave the world, and go to the Father.

29 ¶ His disciples said unto him, Lo, now speakest thou plainly, and speakest no proverb.

30 Now are we sure that thou knowest all things, and needest not that any man should ask thee: by this we believe that thou camest forth from God.

31 Jesus answered them, Do ye now believe?

32 Behold, the hour cometh, yea, is now come, that ye shall be scattered, every man to his own, and shall leave me alone: and yet I am not alone, because the Father is with me.

33 These things I have spoken unto you, that in me ye might have peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation: but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world.

CHAPTER XVII.

1 Christ prayeth to his Father to glorify him, 6 to preserve his apostles, 11 in unity and truth, 20 to glorify them, and all other believers with him in heaven.

THESE words spake Jesus, and lifted up his eyes to heaven, and said, Father, the hour is come; glorify thy Son, that thy Son also may glorify thee:

and then they should see him again, after his resurrection: but this also would be only for a little while, because he must go to the Father, and they should see him ascend. This is called a parable, but more properly a parable, or enigma, which our Lord, finding their minds thus perplexed, elucidates by another. He compares their situation, during the time of his death, to that of a woman in travail, full of anxiety and pain till she is delivered, and then filled with a reverse of joy and transport, which must undoubtedly have been the case, when they beheld their risen Saviour, and saw him ascend to glory. “And in that day ye shall ask me nothing;” that is, after our Lord’s resurrection and ascent to glory, they should need to make no more personal inquiries; and so it was: for in a few days afterwards, the miraculous influences of the Holy Spirit were poured down in such a wonderful manner, as to furnish them with all the wisdom and knowledge requisite to their important office.

Previously to this conversation, our Lord had instructed his disciples to offer their petitions to the almighty Father in his name; but it should seem that they had done, as we too often do, neglected to use their privilege; for “hitherto they had asked” little or “nothing” in that name. He therefore now encourages them thus to ask, by assuring them (if we rightly understand the 26th verse) to this effect; that the Father would be so well pleased to receive their petitions in his Son’s name, as a proof of their attachment to him, that (if of a proper nature) he would immediately grant them, without any particular application from him to second it. “For the Father himself loveth you, because ye have loved me.” Having said these things for their encouragement, he concludes with telling them—“In the world ye shall have tribulation; but be of good cheer, I have overcome the world.”

“Yes: the promised tribulation, Saviour, in the world we find; Find the pledge of pure salvation In a patient, cheerful mind.”

“We on all our foes shall trample, Shakers of thy victory, Followers of thy great example, Conquerors of the world through thee.”—C. Westley.

CHAP. XVII. Ver. 1—12. Christ’s prayer, both for himself and his disciples.—Supposing, as we are much inclined to do, that our Saviour left the supper-room, when he said, (chap. xiv. 31,) “Arise, let us go hence,” we are not to conceive of the conversation in chap. xv. and xvi. taking place in the streets of Jerusalem; but rather that our Lord hastened without the walls with his disciples, while the Jews were all busily

Ver. 30. That any man should ask thee.—That is, “so plain, that no man need ask thee for an explanation.”

Ver. 32. To be one.—Margin, “His own home.” The Greek is equivocal, and may comprehend house, family, occupation, &c. &c.

2 As thou hast given him power over all flesh, that he should give eternal life to as many as thou hast given him.

3 And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent.

4 I have glorified thee on the earth: I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do.

5 And now, O Father, glorify thou me with thine own self with the glory which I had with thee before the world was.

6 I have manifested thy name unto the men which thou gavest me out of the world: thine they were, and thou gavest them me; and they have kept thy word.

7 Now they have known that all things whatsoever thou hast given me are of thee.

8 For I have given unto them the words engaged within; and choosing the most retired way, by the side of the brook Kedron, he might walk to some distance before he found it conveniently fordable, (as there was often much rain about this season,) and during that time might hold this conversation with them; and in some secret and retired spot, (possibly in some house of prayer—see Luke vi. 12, expos.) close it with the following prayer, to which, as it was undoubtedly offered in their hearing, and contained much instructive and consolatory truth, they might listen with a pious pleasure.

It has been properly remarked, that our Lord, having in the preceding discourses discharged the office of a prophet, is now commencing his priestly office, by praying for his disciples, previously to offering his atoning sacrifice.

The opening of the prayer shows the earnestness and solemnity with which it was uttered. The Jewish High Priest had to offer, "first for his own sins, and then for the sins of the people;" (Heb. vii. 27;) but our great High Priest had no sins of his own to atone for; yet he prayed for himself as man and Mediator, as well as for his apostles and disciples. Nor must his petitions be confined to his disciples of that age or country, any more than the Holy Spirit which he promised, as we shall find clearly expressed in verse 20. We shall, however, consider the petitions as they occur.

The first petition is, in substance, that as the Son had glorified the Father while on earth, so, that the Father would glorify the Son with the glory which he had enjoyed with him "before the world was," that is, with heavenly glory; for we can no way reconcile this with the notion of Christ having no existence previous to his incarnation. 2. Our Lord prays that he may be glorified on earth also, by the diffusion of his gospel through the world. "As thou hast given him power over all flesh, that he should give eternal life"—not to all flesh, but—to as many as thou hast given him." Calvinistic expositors generally explain this expression of the decree of election; or refer it to the stipulations of the covenant of redemption, as the excellent Dr. Doddridge—"That he may give eternal life to all that thou hast given him by that covenant, to be redeemed and saved." But others think, if we allow our Lord to be his own interpreter, his words may more directly intend, all those who had been "drawn" by the Father's grace to believe on him, chap. vi. 44. This, in the first place, intends the apostles; and in the next, those other disciples who had been drawn by the same grace also to believe on him. To them he had manifested the Father's name, and to them delivered the Father's message, and they had kept his words. But the petition is afterwards extended to all who should believe in him throughout the world, and to the end of time.

Unitarian writers lay great stress upon the third verse, as appropriating the term "true God" to the Father only; but as most of the august epithets applied to God the Father (including every thing great, and wise, and good) are also applied to the Son, (see, for instance, John xxi. 17. Rev. ii. 23. Mat. xviii. 20; xxviii. 20, &c.), so we conclude that the term only was not intended to exclude the Son of God, but merely the false gods of the Gentiles, who had no just title to the name. This may seem a little strange to us, who "know that an idol is nothing in the world;" but it must have appeared different in that age, when the far greater part of the world were accustomed to apply many of the same epithets to Jupiter, and other "gods major" of the heathen. But, surely, if Jesus Christ be not truly God, to associate the knowledge of him with that of the Father, and to make it equally essential, is highly indecorous; and is, if we may be allowed to use a commercial term, putting the Creator and the creature in the same firm.

But how is this knowledge "life eternal?" Of scientific knowledge it has been said, that "knowledge is power," because it enables men to effect what mere bodily strength never could: much more so is the knowledge of the true God, and which thou gavest me; and they have received them, and have known surely that I came out from thee, and they have believed that thou didst send me.

9 I pray for them: I pray not for the world, but for them which thou hast given me; for they are thine.

10 And all mine are thine, and thine are mine; and I am glorified in them.

11 And now I am no more in the world, but these are in the world, and I come to thee. Holy Father, keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one, as we are.

12 While I was with them in the world, I kept them in thy name: those that thou gavest me I have kept, and none of them is lost, but the son of perdition; that the scripture might be fulfilled.

Jesus Christ his Son. This directs the conduct and purifies the heart: this guides us in every difficulty, and supports us under every trial; and when death draws his black veil over every object of earthly comfort or enjoyment, this opens to us a view into the celestial world, and points to him that sits upon the throne and to the Lamb. This knowledge prepares us for eternal life, and directs us thither.

In connexion with our Lord's prayer for his disciples, occurs this remarkable expression, which has occasioned much theological debate:—"I pray for them: I pray not for the world; but for them which thou hast given me, for they are thine." The question is, who constitute the world for which Christ did not pray? We apprehend it intends the unbelieving Jewish nation, out of which his own disciples had been selected; and, in this view, we may see a reason why he refused to pray for them, for he had charged them with the sin against the Holy Ghost, which, in its own nature is unpardonable; (Mat. xii. 31, 32, &c.) and concerning which sin, as many think, the same evangelist (1 John v. 16) has this remarkable expression—"I do not say that he shall pray for it." These men also (many of them at least) had, in the most awful manner, imprecated upon themselves the vengeance of the Almighty—"His blood be on us and on our children;" (Mat. xxvii. 25;) and our Lord accordingly tells them, that upon them should come the punishment "of all the righteous blood shed upon the earth, from the blood of righteous Abel unto the blood of Zacharias." (Mat. xxiii. 35.)

This, however, does not exclude from our Saviour's prayers, or from the Father's mercy, all who were then unbelieving, but only the finally impenitent: for we know that he prayed for his murderers while on the cross; and we know also that St. Peter preached the doctrine of pardon to them on the day of Pentecost; when many "looked on him whom they had pierced," and mourned for him, (Zech. xii. 10,) and were consequently forgiven, and received into the bosom of his church; but of the mass of Scribes and Pharisees, and Priests, it is much to be feared that, with few exceptions, they died impenitent, and perished. "Our Lord knew (says Dr. Boothroyd) that they were to be rejected for their hardness of heart, impenitency, and unbelief; and hence submitted to the will of the Father, in this, as on all other occasions."

There is, however, another difficulty in this section of Scripture, which, as it is an essential part of our plan to obviate difficulties, we cannot pass unnoticed. Speaking of his Apostles more particularly, our Lord says, "I kept them in thy name," and none of them is lost but the son of perdition, that the Scripture might be fulfilled. 1. We cannot suppose that this has any reference to the divine decrees, or that any one soul could be lost whom God had predestined to salvation; nor, 2. does it appear that Judas ever gave any proof of being drawn by the Father's grace: his character, though artfully concealed, was perfectly consistent, and was most decidedly that of a worldly-minded man. The text is, therefore, thus judiciously paraphrased by Dr. Doddridge,—"None of them is lost, unless it be counted, as a kind of exception, that the son of perdition perishes by his iniquity—that the Scripture might be fulfilled." (See Ps. cix. 8. Acts i. 20.) For this man, therefore, Christ offered up no prayer.

For the faithful eleven, however, and for all other sincere disciples associated with them, our Lord presents this simple and earnest petition: "Holy Father, keep, through thine own name, those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one, as we are;" united in heart, in object, and design: but the full import of this prayer we can never comprehend till we understand the union between the Father and the Son. It is enough that we know, that to be like God, and to be conformed to the image of the Saviour, constitute complete and eternal happiness.

they may be one.—Not one person, but thing. See note on chapter x. 30. Ver. 12. But the son of perdition.—"The son of perdition," is one who deserves to be destroyed: so, "a son of death," is one who deserves to die. 2 Sam. xii. 5.

CHAP. XVII. Ver. 2. To as many as.—Doddridge and Campbell, "To all that."

Ver. 4. I have finished—i. e. I am upon the point of finishing.

Ver. 11. And now I am no more.—Doddridge, "No longer."—That 13 And now come I to thee; and these things I speak in the world, that they might have my joy fulfilled in themselves.

14 I have given them thy word; and the world hath hated them, because they are not of the world, even as I am not of the world.

15 ¶ I pray not that thou shouldst take them out of the world, but ^a that thou shouldst keep them from the evil.

16 They are not of the world, even as I am not of the world.

17 ¶ Sanctify ^a them through thy truth: thy ^a word is truth.

18 As thou hast sent me into the world, even so have I also sent them into the world.

19 And ^a for their sakes I sanctify myself, that they also might be ^a sanctified through the truth.

20 ¶ Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word;

21 That they all may be ^a one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me.

A. M. 4093.
A. D. 28.
1 c 15 1b 19

a Ga 1.4.

v Ac 15.9.
Ep 5.26.
2 Th 2.13

w Ps 119.
134.

x 1 Co 12.
30.

y or, truly sanctified

z Ro 12.5

a 2 Co 3.18

b 1 Th 4.17.

a 2 Sa. 15.21

22 And ^a the glory which thou gavest me I have given them; that they may be one, even as we are one:

23 I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one; and that the world may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them, as thou hast loved me.

24 Father, I will that they also, whom thou hast given me, be ^b with me where I am; that they may behold my glory, which thou hast given me: for thou lovedst me before the foundation of the world.

25 O righteous Father, the world hath not known thee: but I have known thee, and these have known that thou hast sent me.

26 And I have declared unto them thy name, and will declare it: that the love wherewith thou hast loved me may be in them, and I in them.

CHAPTER XVIII

1 Judas betrayeth Jesus. 6 The officers fall to the ground. 10 Peter putteth off Malchus' ear. 12 Jesus is taken, and led unto Annas and Caiaphas. 15 Peter's denial. 19 Jesus examined before Caiaphas. 28 His arraignment before Pilate. 36 His kingdom. 40 The Jews ask Barabbas to be let loose.

WHEN Jesus had spoken these words, He went forth with his disciples over the brook ^a Cedron, where was a garden, in the which he entered, and his disciples.

Ver. 13–26. Our Lord continues to pray for his disciples, that they may be preserved in peace, and truth, and love.—Our Lord here gives his disciples to understand that the reason of his praying for them thus audibly was, the comfort and satisfaction they might derive from hearing the interest which they had in his affections and his prayers; that their joy in him might be complete and perfect. (See note on verse 13.)

The term sanctify, (ver. 17 and 19,) as applied to Christ and to his people, must be somewhat differently explained. Christ being himself without sin, could need not to be sanctified, in the usual meaning of the term: but for their sakes, who were sinners as we are, he sanctified, devoted, or (as some express it) consecrated himself as an atoning sacrifice to God in their behalf, that through their cordial belief in this truth, they might be sanctified, both in their personal experience, and in their ministerial character and be devoted to the circulation of the truth and the conversion of the world.

Our Saviour then extends his prayers beyond his present disciples—beyond the limits of the then present age, and beyond the boundary of the Jewish church:—“Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also that shall believe on me through their word: that they be one—that is, perfectly united in heart and affection, in a like holy and mysterious manner as thou, Father, art with me:” that they also may be one in us: that the world (Gentile as well as Jewish) may believe that thou hast sent me.”

This passage presents some very interesting inquiries, which we have only room to suggest to the meditations of our readers. 1. How does the word of God become the means or instrument of our sanctification? Undoubtedly by the personal and contemplation of the Scriptures, under the influences of the Holy Spirit. The doctrines of Scripture show its nature and indispensable necessity; the precepts urge and enforce it on us; the promises animate and encourage us to pursue it; and its histories present us with the purest and most instructive examples. David was sanctified thereby, as he informs us at large in the 119th Psalm. 2. How do love and unity among Christians promote the conversion of the world? Certainly nothing has a more direct tendency thereto, if we consult either reason or matter of fact. Love and union are things in themselves so estimable, that they are readily acknowledged by all men to be divine; and what did the heathen say when they saw this in the lives and conduct of the primitive Christians? “See how these Christians love!” And it is much to be feared that the schisms and animosities among Christians have made more infidels than the writings of all the sceptical philosophers in the world. Few men can argue deeply, but all men can read our lives.

But to proceed with our exposition.—It may be asked, “What is that glory which the Father gave to Christ,” and which he in like manner gave to his apostles? (Verse 22.) Some refer this to the miraculous powers with which, as man, Jesus was endued, and which he conferred on his apostles; others to that Christian love and unity spoken of in the preceding verse, and which, wherever they prevail, are truly the glory of Christianity; but we are inclined to think it should be understood more literally, of that glory to which Christ himself was about to be advanced; to which he had promised to advance them, and concerning which he thus speaks in the next verse: “Father, I would that they whom thou hast given me be with me where I am [20:21], that they may behold [and participate] my glory.” For whosoever our Lord speaks of his disciples beholding his glory, it is, we believe, always with the understanding that they were to participate in the glory which they beheld; and this glory is here expressly stated to be that which our Lord himself enjoyed with the Father “before the foundation of the world.” This most interesting prayer concludes with requesting that the love which the Father had shown to him, as Mediator, might also be shown to them, and that they might enjoy the indwelling residence both of the Father and of the Son—according to his former promise: “If any man love me he will keep my words: and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him.” (Ch. xiv. 23.)

CHAP. XVIII. Ver. 1–18. Jesus betrayed, and carried before the High Priest.—Our Lord had no sooner concluded his address to his disciples, and the prayer which followed, than he crossed the brook Kidron, and entered his favourite retreat, the garden of Gethsemane; and as Judas might have heard, or at least strongly suspected, that Jesus was going thither, he thither came with the Jewish officers, who were appointed to apprehend him, and with the Roman guard. Jesus, knowing that his hour was now come, instead of withdrawing, as on former occasions, now came forward and demanded, Whom seek ye? and when they answered, Jesus of Nazareth, he immediately replied, “I am he.” Upon this, whether confounded by the courage and majesty with which our Saviour expressed himself, or whether alarmed by suddenly recollecting the conduct of Elijah, who, when Abab sent to arrest him, suddenly struck the men dead with lightning—so it was, that upon hearing these words, “they drew back, and fell to the ground before him.” Jesus then repeating his avowal, that he was the person they sought, added, “If ye seek me, let these go their way.” This, it should seem, was acceded to, when Peter rashly drew his sword, and cut off the ear of Malchus, one of the High Priest’s servants. This was immediately restored by the miraculous power of our Lord. But the incident probably occasioned some confusion, when the Roman soldiers, who had remained hitherto in the back ground, came forward to assist the Jews; and our Saviour suffered himself to be bound by them, and led away, first to Annas, and then to Caiaphas, who had already predicted that he should die for the people, and who was now active to fulfil his own prediction.

We must not, however, pass over our Lord’s reproof of Peter—“Put up thy sword;” which applies, not only to military heroes, who delight in blood; but, more especially to religious zealots, who, like Saul of Tarsus, “breathe out threatening and slaughter” against all who differ from them in religion. It is “the sword of the Spirit” only, which becomes the hand of an apostle, or Christian minister. Our Lord adds these memorable words—“The cup which my Father giveth me, shall I not drink it?” This was the dreadful “cup” from which our Saviour prayed to be, if possible, delivered: but if he had not drunk it, the whole human race must have drunk it to the dregs, and have drunk it in everlasting misery. But what a lesson is this to us, in our comparatively tasteless cup of wo?

Ver. 13. That they might have my joy fulfilled in themselves.—Campbell, “That their joy in me may be complete,” or fulfilled.

Ver. 15. From the evil—viz. the evil that is in the world.

Ver. 17. Sanctify them through thy truth—Some ancient MSS. and versions read, “the truth;” and Mill and other critics reject the pronoun as unnecessary.

Ver. 21. Father, I will.—Campbell “I would.” So Beza, Witsius, &c., and compare Mark vi. 25; x. 35. Doddridge includes both senses—“Unfortunately ask, and in consequence of the mutual transactions between us, am bold to claim.” It is a petition founded on a previous engagement.

CHAP. XVIII. Ver. 1. The brook Cedron—Kidron, or Kidron, is a rivulet running between Jerusalem and Mount Olivet, which empties itself into the Dead sea. It is a narrow stream, with little water, except in the rainy season, when it carried off all the filth of the city and temple into the Dead sea.

2 And Judas also, which betrayed him, knew the place: for Jesus oftentimes resorted thither with his disciples.

3 Judas ^b then, having received a band of men and officers from the chief priests and Pharisees, cometh thither with lanterns and torches and weapons.

4 Jesus therefore, knowing ^c all things that should come upon him, went forth, and said unto them, Whom seek ye?

5 They answered him, Jesus of ^d Nazareth. Jesus saith unto them, I am he. And Judas also, which betrayed him, stood with them.

6 As soon then as he had said unto them, I am he, they ^e went backward, and fell to the ground.

7 Then asked he them again, Whom seek ye? And they said, Jesus of Nazareth.

8 Jesus answered, I have told you that I am he: if therefore ye seek ^f me, let these go their way:

9 That the saying might be fulfilled, which ^g he spake, Of them which thou gavest me have I lost none.

10 ¶ Then ^h Simon Peter having a sword drew it, and smote the high priest's servant, and cut off his right ear. The servant's name was Malchus.

11 Then said Jesus unto Peter, Put up thy sword into the sheath: the ⁱ cup which my Father hath given me, shall I not drink it?

12 ¶ Then the band and the captain and officers of the Jews took Jesus, and bound him, 13 And led him away to Annas ^j first; for he was father-in-law to Caiaphas, which was the high priest that same ^k year.

14 Now Caiaphas was he, which gave counsel ^l to the Jews, that it was expedient that one man should die for the people.

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.

b Mat. 26.
37, &c.

c Mt. 14 43,
&c.

d Lu. 22 47,
&c.

e c. 10 17, 18.
Ac 2 23.

f Mat. 2 23,
c. 19 19.

g Ps. 27 2.
30 14.

h Is 53 6.
Ep. 5 23.

i c. 17 12.

j Mat. 26 51
Mt. 14 47.

k Lu. 22 49,
50.

l Mat. 20 52
26 39, 42.

m Lu. 3 2.

n And Annas sent Caiaphas bound unto Caiaphas the high priest.
ver. 24

o c. 11 49, 50

p Mt. 26.
55, &c.

q Mt. 14 51
Lu. 22 54

r Lu. 4 15.
c. 7 14, 35,
24, 8 2.

s Ac. 25 26.

t Job 16 10.
Je. 20 2.

u Ac. 23 2, 3.

v q. or, with a rod.

w 1 Pe. 2 19.
23.

x See ver. 13.

15 ¶ And ^m Simon Peter followed Jesus, and so did another disciple: that disciple was known unto the high priest, and went in with Jesus into the palace of the high priest.

16 But Peter stood at the door without. Then went out that other disciple, which was known unto the high priest, and spake unto her that kept the door, and brought in Peter.

17 Then said the damsel that kept the door unto Peter, Art not thou also one of this man's disciples? He saith, I am not.

18 And the servants and officers stood there, who had made a fire of coals; for it was cold: and they warmed themselves: and Peter stood with them, and warmed himself.

19 ¶ The high priest then asked Jesus of his disciples, and of his doctrine.

20 Jesus answered him, I spake ⁿ openly to the world; I ever taught in the synagogue, and in the temple, whither the Jews always resort; and ^o in secret have I said nothing.

21 Why askest thou me? ask them which heard me, what I have said unto them: behold, they know what I said.

22 And when he had thus spoken, one of the officers which stood by struck ^p Jesus ^q with the palm of his hand, saying, Answerest thou the high priest so?

23 Jesus answered him, If I have spoken evil, bear witness of the evil: but ^r if well, why smitest thou me?

24 Now ^s Annas had sent him bound unto Caiaphas the high priest.

25 ¶ And Simon Peter stood and warmed himself. They said therefore unto him, Art not thou also one of his disciples? He denied it, and said, I am not.

26 One of the servants of the high priest, being ^t his kinsman whose ear Peter cut off, saith, Did not I see thee in the garden with him?

Whatever portion of affliction Providence may present to us, shall we not drink it from our Father's, and especially from our Saviour's hand, who drank for us that cup of wrath which our sins had merited? We may pray submissively to have the cup removed, but it is base ingratitude to refuse it.

Peter, it should seem, now put away his sword for ever, and followed his Master in disguise, as though he had been a stranger, with another disciple, who being known at the palace, procured admission; but Peter stood without till that other disciple (supposed to be John himself) interceded for his admission with the woman who kept the door, and who, upon his admission, directly challenged him with being a disciple; but Peter promptly denied this, and, no farther notice being taken for the present, he stood and warmed himself with the servants, at a fire which they had kindled for the occasion.

It is mentioned that the officers first took Jesus to Annas, who had been previously High Priest, and perhaps still acted occasionally in that office for his son-in-law, on whom the office had been since conferred: but Annas seems to have taken no cognizance of the affair, but sent him immediately to Caiaphas, from whom he had the first hearing. In our next section we shall follow them into the hall, and see the Lord of life and glory arraigned before a time-serving Jewish priest.

Ver. 19—28. Jesus examined before Caiaphas.—Of this previous examination the only account is here given by the Evangelist John, and this merely states that he was questioned, by the High Priest, of his disciples and his doctrine; in answer to which he appealed to those who had heard him, denying that he had taught any secret doctrines, (as the Greek philosophers were known to do,) or formed any private faction. But speaking, as the Messiah, with more freedom than the under officers of the Court thought becoming the rank of their master, one of them presumed to strike our Saviour, with this reproach—“Answerest thou the High Priest so?” The reply of our Lord may, perhaps, be thus paraphrased:—“If now, or on any other occasion, I have spoken what is contrary to the law, bear witness against me, (as I just now said;) but if not, why striketh thou me uncondemned?” (See Acts xvi. 37.) Here John closes this part of his narrative; probably because the other evangelists had related the process of our Lord's trial before the Sanhedrim, which immediately followed.

But Peter is here again brought before us, and we see the

The name signifies dark or black, and it was so called, as some suppose, from the darkness of the narrow valley through which it runs; but others think, from the blackness of its waters.

Ver. 3. A band of men—Campbell, “The Cohort,” a Roman troop of about 500 men, to guard against a rescue.

Ver. 4. Went forth.—(Our Lord not only knew in general, says Dr. Doddridge, that he should suffer some great evil, and even death itself, but was acquainted also with all the particular circumstances of ignominy and horror that should attend his sufferings; which, accordingly, he largely foretold, (see Mat. xx. 18, 19,) though many of these circumstances were as contingent as can well be imagined. It is impossible to enter aright into the heroic behaviour of our Lord Jesus Christ, without carrying this circumstance along with us. The centries are in raptures at the gallantry of Achilles in going to the Trojan war, when he knew, according to Homer, that he should fall there: but he must have a very low way of thinking, who does not see infinitely more fortitude in our Lord's conduct on this great occasion, when this circumstance, so judiciously, though so modestly suggested by St. John, is duly attended to.)—B

Ver. 5. Judas . . . stood with them.—Judas was probably aware of Peter's rashness, and thought it safest to shelter himself among the officers.

Ver. 6. They went backward.—(Doubtless by the interposition of Divine power; and it was thus shown that Jesus voluntarily resigned himself into their hands.)—Bagster.

Ver. 9. Have I lost none.—This shows that Judas was not one whom the Father had really given to Christ. See note on ch. xvi. 12.

Ver. 11. Put up thy sword.—See Mat. xxvi. 52, 53.—The cup.—See note on Mat. xxvi. 29.

Ver. 12. The captain.—The Greek (Chiliarkos) is properly the commander of 1000 men, and answers to our term colonel. The Romans called them Military Tribunes.

Ver. 13. And led him away to Annas first.—In the margin of our larger Bibles, ver. 24 is here introduced, which seems to be its natural place, with the omission only of “And.” And Annas sent Christ bound unto Caiaphas the high priest.

Ver. 15. The palace.—(Greek, aulea), which means an open court or hall; which the late Mr. Taylor understood of a part of the temple appropriated to his use.

Ver. 16. Her that kept the door.—Among the ancients, (and probably the Jews,) women were often employed as door-keepers.—Orient. Lit. No. 1372.

Ver. 18. A fire of coals.—Not pit coal, we suppose, but wood or charcoal. Campbell reads, “Now the servants and officers stood near a fire which they had made, because it was cold.” &c. The nights at this season were often very cold, though the days were hot.—Harmar.

Ver. 21. I spake openly.—The Genera of Babylon mentions proclamation being made by a public crier for any one who could witness the innocence of a prisoner to come forward, before punishment was executed, and that this was done forty days before the death of Jesus; but we know this to be false.

Ver. 22. Struck Jesus with the palm of his hand.—Some explain this word (trapisma) of a blow with a staff or stick; so Beza; but Doddridge says, “the word is used apparently for any blow.” So Campbell.

Ver. 24. Now Annas.—Annas was deposed from being high priest, A. D. 23, after filling that office for fifteen years. (Josephus, Ant. l. xviii. c. 2.) but being a person of distinguished character, and having had no less than five sons who had successively enjoyed the dignity of the high priesthood, and the present high priest Caiaphas being his son-in-law, he must have possessed much authority in the nation. It was at the palace of Caiaphas where the chief priests, elders, and scribes, were assembled the whole of the night to see the issue of their statecraft.—Bagster.

Ver. 26. Being his kinsman.—i. e. the kinsman of Malchus. See ver. 10.

27 Peter then denied again: and immediately the cock crew.

28 Then led they Jesus from Caiaphas unto the hall of judgment: and it was early; and they themselves went not into the judgment hall, lest they should be defiled; but that they might eat the passover.

29 Pilate then went unto them, and said, What accusation bring ye against this man?

30 They answered and said unto him, If he were not a malefactor, we would not have delivered him up unto thee.

31 Then said Pilate unto them, Take ye him, and judge him according to your law. The Jews therefore said unto him, It is not lawful for us to put any man to death:

32 That the saying of Jesus might be fulfilled, which he spake, signifying what death he should die.

33 Then Pilate entered into the judgment hall again, and called Jesus, and said unto him, Art thou the king of the Jews?

34 Jesus answered him, Sayest thou this thing of thyself, or did others tell thee of me?

35 Pilate answered, Am I a Jew? Thine own nation and the chief priests have delivered thee unto me: what hast thou done?

36 Jesus answered, My kingdom is not of this world: if my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews: but now is my kingdom not from hence.

37 Pilate therefore said unto him, Art thou a

A N 4033

A D 29

C Mat 27 71

Mat 14 72

Luk 22 60

c 13 35

u Mat 27 2,

&c.

Ma 15 1,

&c.

Luk 23 1,

&c.

v or, Pilate's

house

w Ac 10 28

x Ge 49 10

Eze 41 57

y Mat 20 19

Luk 18 34

z c 19 11

Ac 3 13

a 1Ti 6 13

b 1s 45 3,6

1 9 6 7

1Ma 2 11

7 14

Zec 9 9

Luk 12 14

c 6 15

Ro 14 17

Col 1 13

c 1 55 4

1 14 15

1 14

A c 8 47

1 30 4 6

a Mat 27

25, Ac

c 6 15 15,

&c.

b 1s 53 5.

c 1 18 38,

ver. 6.

king then? Jesus answered, Thou sayest that I am a king. To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth. Every one that is of the truth heareth my voice.

38 Pilate saith unto him, What is truth? And when he had said this, he went out again unto the Jews, and saith unto them, I find in him no fault at all.

39 But ye have a custom, that I should release unto you one at the passover: will ye therefore that I release unto you the King of the Jews?

40 Then cried they all again, saying, Not this man, but Barabbas. Now Barabbas was a robber.

CHAPTER XIX.

1 Christ is scourged, crowned with thorns, and beaten. 4 Pilate is desirous to release him, but being overcome with the outrage of the Jews, he delivers him to be crucified. 32 They cast lots for his garments. 36 He commendeth his mother to John. 38 He dieth. 39 His side is pierced. 38 He is buried by Joseph and Nicodemus.

THEN Pilate therefore took Jesus, and scourged him.

2 And the soldiers platted a crown of thorns, and put it on his head, and they put on him a purple robe,

3 And said, Hail, King of the Jews! and they smote him with their hands.

4 Pilate therefore went forth again, and saith unto them, Behold, I bring him forth to you, that ye may know that I find no fault in him.

5 Then came Jesus forth, wearing the crown of thorns, and the purple robe. And Pilate saith unto them, Behold the man!

6 When the chief priests therefore and offidanger of running uncalled into the way of temptation. Had Peter boldly come forward as a witness to justify his Master, he might probably have died for him, as he proposed; (chap. xiii. 37.) and he would have anticipated Stephen in the honour of being the first Christian martyr; but for this he disqualifies himself by his rash attack on Malchus. Had he then stood without, and waited the issue of his Master's trial, he might have avoided the temptation to deny him, which he was not able to resist, and saved himself from many bitter tears.

Ver. 29—40. Jesus examined by Pilate, the Roman governor.—Here the first circumstance which strikes us is the hypocrisy of the priests and other members of the Sanhedrim, who, though (in a body, as it should seem) they led Jesus from Caiaphas to Pilate, dared not enter into the Roman hall of judgment, lest they should be defiled by mixing with the Gentiles. They were not alarmed at the guilt of shedding innocent blood, but they were afraid of entering the house of a Gentile, lest they should be polluted during all the feast. And even here, it is to be remarked, they were not afraid, lest they should be incapacitated from offering sacrifices to God; but lest they should be prevented from eating that part of the sacrifices to which they were entitled, which was considerable. (See Num. xxviii. 19—24.)

Pilate so accommodated himself to their wishes, that he came out to the door of the hall, probably, to hear what they had to say. At this, however, they seem to take offence; for they wish him to take it for granted, that the prisoner was guilty of a capital offence, or they would not have brought him; and therefore, had thought it not necessary (or at least prudent) to bring him any account of their proceedings. On this, Pilate tells them to take him back again, and judge him according to their own law, as he did not wish to interfere. They are now obliged to confess that they wanted not his judgment on the case, but merely that he would order the execution, which they were not allowed to do. Upon this, Pilate went back into the hall, and called Jesus to him, (under custody, doubtless, of their officers,) and began himself to question him.

It is evident that the only charge they had brought against him was, that he made himself "King of the Jews?" and upon this, therefore, he examines him—"Art thou the King of the

Ver. 28. The hall of judgment.—Campbell, "The Pretorium"—Lest they should be defiled; but that, &c.—Doddridge, "Lest they should be polluted, and prevented from eating the Passover;" i.e. the sacrifices which follow the paschal supper, during the feast of unleavened bread.

Ver. 30. If he were not a malefactor, &c.—These words import, 1. If the crime he is charged with were not capital, we should have punished him ourselves, and have come to you. 2. If he were not guilty, we should not have accused him.—Lardner's Cred.

Ver. 31. It is not lawful for us to put any man to death.—That is, a criminal we cannot punish according to his deserts. "It is not one of the lesser faults, for which we are wont to scourge men, or to cast out of the synagogue; but he is guilty of blasphemy, which by our law is punishable with death. And since we cannot be permitted to punish any man capitally, we have brought him to your tribunal, where alone we can have satisfaction."—Lardner's Cred.

Jews?" Jesus, wishing to draw from him the fact, that the Jews had reported this, in reply asked, "Sayest thou this thing of thyself, or did others tell thee of me?"—Pilate rejoins, "Am I a Jew? Thine own nation (the Jews) and the chief priests have delivered thee unto me under that charge: confess what thou hast done to occasion it." Jesus now takes an opportunity to explain the nature of his kingdom, which he does in such a manner as disarms the jealousy of the Roman governor: "My kingdom is not of this world," &c., as if he had said, "I interfere not with your authority, neither am I an enemy to Cesar. I assume no worldly state nor riches: my throne is on high, and surrounded with celestial guards. Were I indeed about to institute a temporal kingdom, these would fight for me, and even Roman legions would in vain oppose celestial hosts. But mine is a kingdom of truth, and righteousness, and peace; and I came from heaven to proclaim this truth on earth, and to prepare the world for its establishment."

Pilate understood enough of this discourse to perceive that Jesus interfered not with his authority, nor with the prerogatives of his royal master. He asks, indeed, "What is truth?" but recollecting he had nothing to do with truth, instead of waiting for an answer, he goes back to the Jewish priests, who were waiting still without, and frankly tells them, "I find no fault in him; but as you have a custom that I should release to you a prisoner at the Passover, will you that I release unto you the King of the Jews, as you call him?" This, however, only made them more clamorous—"Not this man, but Barabbas!"—a man convicted both of sedition and murder. To silence their importunity and violence, having heard that Jesus had chiefly preached and wrought his miracles in Galilee, he hopes to get rid of the business by sending him to Herod, whose curiosity Jesus refusing to gratify, he sends him back again to Pilate, without any judgment on the case. Pilate again calls together the chief priests and rulers, and tells them that neither he nor Herod had found him guilty of any capital offence; he proposes, therefore, to scourge him, and let him go.

CHAP. XIX. Ver. 1—15. Christ's last hearing before Pilate.—(It appears by St. Luke, (chap. xxii. 22,) that Pilate proposed to scourge Jesus, and let him go: it has been thought, therefore, that by this severity, and the cruel mockery which CHAP. XIX. Ver. 2. A crown of thorns.—These words, some would render an acanthine crown, or wreath formed out of the branches of the herb beet's foot, a prickly plant, though not like thorns, but this version is solidly refuted by Campbell. The Gr. word akanthinos, in sacred use and classical, plainly denotes thorn, and never made of beet's foot; and it was so understood by all the ancient and modern translators, and by the Greek and Latin Fathers. "The Nabat or Nabla of the Arabians," says Hasselquist, "is in all probability, the tree which afforded the crown of thorns put on the head of Christ: it grows very common in the East. This plant was very fit for the purpose, for it has many small, sharp spines, which are well adapted to give pain; the crown might be easily made of these soft, round, and plant branches: and what, in my opinion, seems to be the greatest proof is, that the leaves much resemble those of the ivy, as they are of a very deep green."—Baxter.—A purple robe.—See note on Mat xxvii. 28. Perhaps so decayed that the colour was scarce distinguishable.

ners saw him, they cried out, saying, Crucify him, crucify him. Pilate saith unto them, Take ye him, and crucify him: for I find no fault in him.

7 The Jews answered him, We ^a have a law, and by our law he ought to die, because ^a he made himself the Son of God.

8 ¶ When Pilate therefore heard that saying, he was the more afraid;

9 And went again into the judgment hall, and saith unto Jesus, Whence art thou? But ^f Jesus gave him no answer.

10 Then saith Pilate unto him, Speakest thou not unto me? knowest ^g thou not that I have power to crucify thee, and have power to release thee?

11 Jesus answered, Thou ^h couldest have no power at all against me, except it were given thee from ⁱ above: therefore he ^j that delivered me unto thee hath the greater ^k sin.

12 And from thenceforth Pilate sought to release him: but the Jews cried out, saying, If thou let this man go, thou art not Cesar's friend: whosoever ^l maketh himself a king speaketh against Cesar.

13 When ^m Pilate therefore heard that say-followed, that he might hope to impress the Jews with some feelings of humanity, and therefore did he bring forth an object as pitiable as misery, without guilt, could render him—and pointing to him in the robes of mock royalty, covered with blood—he cries, "Behold the man!"—Vain hope! as well might he impress compassion on the marble pavement on which he stood. All they had to say was comprised in two words,—"Crucify him! Crucify him!"

The chief priests aimed, in the first instance, to prejudice the governor against the prisoner, by pretending that he was an enemy to Cesar, for every man that made himself a king, they said, was so. (Verse 12.) But when they saw this had no effect, they said, "We have a law, and by that law he ought to die, because he made (that is, represented) himself to be the Son of God." It is doubtful whether Pilate understood what they meant by this title. Many of the heathen emperors represented themselves as of immortal origin, and it is possible he might think Jesus aimed at such an honour; or, if he understood the term as equivalent to Messiah, he might be aware that all pretenders to that character had hitherto mixed with it more or less of political ambition—he was (therefore) the more afraid, and thus addressed our Saviour, "Whence art thou?" From our Lord's giving no answer to this question, we conclude that it was improper, though we do not perceive the reason.

When, however, Pilate adds, "Knowest thou not that I have power to crucify thee, and have power to release thee?" Jesus replies immediately, to correct his error; "Thou couldest have no power at all against me, except it were given thee from above"—that is, from heaven—"therefore," subjoins our Lord, "he [Caiaphas] that delivered me unto thee hath the greater sin." In this reply our Lord gives the heathen governor a lesson on the doctrine of Providence; that all power is from God alone, who says to governors and kings, as he does to the waves of the sea, "Hitherto shall ye come, but no farther." (Job xxxviii. 11.) Knowing, therefore, what was determined concerning him, and the great object to be accomplished by his sufferings, namely, the salvation of his church and people, he was willing to endure, (as he had undertaken,) whatever might be necessary to accomplish that object, and to satisfy the demands of eternal justice. As to the governor's conduct in this affair, he gives him to understand that, though nothing

Ver. 6. Take ye him—[Pilate neither did nor could say this seriously; for crucifixion was not a Jewish but a Roman mode of punishment. The cross was made of two beams, either crossing at the top, at right angles, like a T, or in the middle of their length like an X: with a piece on the centre of the transverse beam for the accusation, and another piece projecting from the middle, on which the person sat. The cross on which our Lord suffered was of the former kind, being thus represented in all old monuments, coins, and crosses. The body was usually fastened to the upright beam by nailing the feet to it, and on the transverse piece by nailing the hands; and the person was frequently permitted to hang in this situation, till he perished through agony and lack of food. This horrible punishment was usually inflicted only on slaves for the worst of crimes.]—Baister.

Ver. 8. He was the more afraid—Lardner, on this text, quotes Beza, as saying, "He was not without reason afraid, that an open sedition might happen, if he did not comply with the multitude."

Ver. 12. Maketh himself a king—c. represents himself as such.

Ver. 13. The pavement—A curious tessellated pavement, such as are often found among Roman antiquities, formed of small stones, in various forms, on which possibly the seat of judgment might be erected, as the Hebrew name Gabbatha implies elevation.

Ver. 14. The preparation of the passover—Campbell, "Of the Paschal Sabbath." He says it occurs six times in the New Testament, and always means the day before the Sabbath, (Friday.) So Dr. Jennings—And about the sixth hour—We cannot but suspect with Dodds idea, and for the reasons which he gives, that a slight error has here crept into the text, and that we should here read with Mark xv. 25, "the third-hour," which has the sanction

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
d Le. 24. 16.
e c. 5. 18.
f Ps. 34. 13.
f Ps. 37.
Ma. 27.
12. 14.
Ph. 1. 28.
g Ps. 34. 14.
h Lu. 22. 53.
c. 7. 30.
i Ps. 39. 9.
j Ma. 14. 14.
c. 18. 13.
k He. 6. 4. 8.
Jc. 1. 17.
l Lu. 23. 2.
Ac. 17. 7.
m Pr. 29. 25.
Ac. 4. 19.
n Ma. 27. 62.
o Ge. 49. 10.
p Ma. 27.
25. &c.
Lu. 13. 15.
&c.
Lu. 23. 21.
&c.
q Nu. 15. 35.
He. 13. 12.
r Ma. 27. 37.
Lu. 15. 26.
Lu. 23. 25.

ing, he brought Jesus forth, and sat down in the judgment seat in a place that is called the Pavement, but in the Hebrew, Gabbatha.

14 And ^a it was the preparation of the pass-over, and about the sixth hour: and he saith unto the Jews, Behold your King!

15 But they cried out, Away with him, away with him, crucify him. Pilate saith unto them, Shall I crucify your King? The chief priests answered, We ^a have no king but Cesar.

16 Then ^b delivered he him therefore unto them to be crucified. And they took Jesus, and led him away.

17 ¶ And he bearing his cross ^c went forth into a place called the place of a skull, which is called in the Hebrew Golgotha:

18 Where they crucified him, and two other with him, on either side one, and Jesus in the midst.

19 ¶ And ^d Pilate wrote a title, and put it on the cross. And the writing was, JESUS OF NAZARETH THE KING OF THE JEWS.

20 This title then read many of the Jews: for the place where Jesus was crucified was nigh to the city: and it was written in Hebrew, and Greek, and Latin.

could justify him in condemning the innocent, the wicked High Priest, and his Jewish confederates, had certainly the greater sin to answer for.

This reply not only softened Pilate's resentment, but led him to make one more effort to save him from crucifixion; but it was a weak one, and shows that he was worried out by the priests, and had not the courage to follow the dictates of his conscience at the expense of his secular interest. We might have pitied this man's weakness more, had we not known that this was not the only instance in which he violated justice. In fact, though he was thus obsequious to the Jews in this instance, they procured from Rome his recall and banishment, for many acts of cruelty and oppression, but a very few years after this; and such was his mortification, that he soon after committed suicide.

We have now closed the trial of our Saviour, and shall conclude this section with two or three brief remarks upon it.

In examining the trial of any person of celebrity, we naturally look to the character of the judges and the witnesses. In this case, the great majority of the members of the Sanhedrim had shown themselves decidedly prejudiced against the prisoner, and they had held repeated meetings to concert his death; and the judge himself (Caiaphas) had openly avowed the necessity of it, as a measure of political expediency. They had even bribed one of his disciples to betray him, and had effectually intimidated any others from speaking in his behalf; while, at the same time, they had suborned false witnesses respecting words uttered three years before, whose evidence they could not reconcile, (Mark xiv. 57—59,) or, if reconciled, it did not amount to any capital charge against him; so that the Roman governor, with the utmost disposition to oblige them, was fully satisfied of his innocence, and would have gladly dismissed the prisoner, but that they threatened to accuse him as an enemy to Cesar. Jesus was not only acquitted by his judge, and justified by the false disciple who betrayed him; but his subsequent resurrection and the triumphs of his gospel put the question out of doubt. Many of those who crucified him repented of their crime, and afterwards became his faithful disciples; and we look with anxious hope for the promised day when the great body of the Jewish nation shall do the same.

Ver. 16—30. The crucifixion and death of Christ.—No sooner had Pilate given the fatal word of consent, than the of some good MSS; otherwise we must suppose the Evangelists used different ways of reckoning, which is very possible.

Ver. 17. Bearing his cross.—Whether the cross was put together, or in two separate pieces, it appears to us, (on mature reflection,) that they compelled Jesus to drag it to the gate of the city nearest Calvary; at which gate they met Simon of Cyrene, and finding Jesus unable to proceed with it, they compelled this countryman to carry it the rest of the way to Calvary. Compare note on Mat. xxvii. 32.—Golgotha.—[Golgotha, of which the Greek Kranion, and Calvaria, are merely translations, is supposed to have been a hill, or a rising on a greater hill, on the north-west of Jerusalem.]—Baister.

Ver. 18. He wrote a title and put it on the cross.—"Title" was the usual custom of the Romans, when any were condemned to death, to affix to the instrument of their punishment, or to order to be carried before them, a writing, expressing the crime for which they suffered; and this writing was called in Latin, Titulus.—Lardner's Cred. [The apparent discrepancy between the accounts of this title given by the Evangelists, which has been urged as an objection against their inspiration and veracity, has been most satisfactorily accounted for by Dr. Trenchard; who supposes, that, as it was written in Hebrew, Greek, and Latin, it might have slightly varied in each language; and that, as St. Luke and St. John wrote for the Gentiles, they would prefer the Greek inscription; that St. Matthew, addressing the Jews, would give the Hebrew; and that St. Mark, writing to the Romans, would naturally give the Latin.]—Baister.

Ver. 20. Nigh to the city.—The cross stood by the way-side, where persons were continually passing, and where it was usual to erect crosses to make public examples of malefactors, to deter others from committing the like 21 Then said the chief priests of the Jews to Pilate, Write not, The King of the Jews; but that he said, I am King of the Jews.

22 Pilate answered, What I have written I have written.

23 ¶ Then the soldiers, when they had crucified Jesus, took his garments, and made four parts, to every soldier a part; and also his coat: now the coat was without seam, ^a woven ^b from the top throughout.

24 They said therefore among themselves, Let us not rend it, but cast lots for it, whose it shall be: that the scripture might be fulfilled, which ^c saith, They parted my raiment among them, and for my vesture they did cast lots. These things therefore the soldiers did.

25 ¶ Now there stood by the cross of Jesus his mother, and his mother's sister, Mary the wife of ^d Cleophas, and Mary Magdalene.

26 When Jesus therefore saw his mother, and the disciple standing by, ^e whom he loved, he saith unto his mother, ^f Woman, behold thy son!

27 Then saith he to the disciple, Behold thy ^g mother! And from that hour that disciple took her unto his own ^h home.

28 ¶ After this, Jesus knowing that all things were now accomplished, that the scripture ⁱ might be fulfilled, saith, I thirst.

29 Now there was set a vessel full of vinegar: and they filled a sponge with vinegar, and put ^j it upon hyssop, and put ^k it to his mouth.

30 When Jesus therefore had received the

A. M. 3633.
A. D. 33.
g. or, wrought
Ex 28:42.
u Ps 21:18.
v or, clo-
pans.
w Lu 24:18.
x c 13:23.
y c 2:1.
z 1 Ti 5:2.
a c 16:32.
b Ps 68:21.
c c 17:4.
d 1s 5:10, 12.
e 1 Ti 14:17.
f or 42.
f De 21:23.
g 1s 23:7, 8.
h He 9:22.
i 1 Jo 5:6, 8.
j 1 Pe 3:21.
k 1 Jo 11:13.
l Ex 12:36.
m No 9:12.
n Jo 3:20.
1 Ps 22:16.
2 Ze 12:10.
3 He 1:7.
m c 9:22.
12:42.
n c 3:1, 2.
7:30.
o 2 Ch 16:14.

vinegar, he said, It ^l is finished: and he bowed his head, and gave ^m up the ghost.

31 ¶ The Jews therefore, because it was the ⁿ preparation, that the bodies should not remain ^o upon the cross on the sabbath day, (for ^p that sabbath day was a high day,) besought Pilate that their legs might be broken, and ^q that they might be taken away.

32 Then came the soldiers, and brake the legs of the first, and of the other which was crucified with him.

33 But when they came to Jesus, and saw that he was dead already, they brake not his legs:

34 But one of the soldiers with a spear pierced his side, and forthwith came thereout ^r blood and ^s water.

35 And ^t he that saw ^u it bare record, and his record is true: and he knoweth that he saith true, that ye might believe.

36 For these things were done, that the scripture ^v should be fulfilled, A bone of him shall not be broken.

37 And again another scripture ^w saith, They shall look on him whom they have pierced.

38 ¶ And after this Joseph of Arimathea, being a disciple of Jesus, but secretly for ^x fear of the Jews, besought Pilate that he might take away the body of Jesus: and Pilate gave ^y him leave. He came therefore, and took the body of Jesus.

39 And there came also ^z Nicodemus, which at the first came to Jesus by night, and ^a brought a mixture of myrrh and aloes, about a hundred pound ^b weight.

Priests were ready (notwithstanding it was Passover time) to hurry our Saviour to the dreadful death of crucifixion, which he had himself repeatedly predicted, and which was brought about by a remarkable train of providences. This was not a Jewish punishment, and would hardly have been adopted, had they not been under restraint, as to the power of life and death, which made it necessary to obtain his consent; but for the necessity of which, it is not likely that Pilate would have interfered. This, however, obliged the Jews themselves to confess that the seer was indeed departed from Judah, and that Shiloh was now come. (See Gen. xlix. 10.) Another remarkable circumstance is, the title which Pilate put upon the cross, proclaiming him King of the Jews, whom they now crucified. This, indeed, sorely displeased the Jews, who would fain have had it altered: but Pilate, who had sacrificed, as himself owned, an innocent man to please them, would not, from the same motive, alter a line or a letter of what he had himself written; and though the different inscriptions seem in some respects to have varied, they all agreed in this obnoxious sentence, "The King of the Jews," and proclaimed in the three chief tongues of the then known world, that the Jews had crucified their king, for whom they had so long wished and prayed. In this event several remarkable prophecies were fulfilled, as we shall presently observe; in the meantime we must notice the affectionate language which Jesus uses towards his mother and his beloved Apostle John. Though, upon his apprehension, his disciples generally were each scattered to his own home, an exception must be made for Peter and John: the former, indeed, had better have fled with the rest, than have stopped to deny his Master; but the latter, who was the youngest of them, kept hovering about him during the trial, and, when that was over, secured a station as near as he could to the foot of the cross, with our Lord's mother and other pious women, whom neither danger nor disgrace could separate from him. Jesus, in the midst of his acute sufferings, could not contemplate with indifference the forlorn situation of his mother, now a widow, as is generally believed, and a sword having pierced through her own bowels, as had been predicted. (See Luke ii. 35.)

While, therefore, he calls her attention to his own sufferings, he calls also the attention of the young apostle to his mother;

and he so well understood the Saviour's hint, that from that hour he took her to his own home: it is also believed, on the authority of an early tradition, that she lived and died with him. Jesus now recollecting that there was one prophecy respecting him yet unfulfilled said, "I thirst;" and the soldiers themselves fulfilled the prediction of the patriarch David, by giving him vinegar to drink. He now said, "It is finished;" and bowing down his head, "gave up the ghost."

Thus closes the awful history of our Saviour's sufferings, in which grief rapidly follows grief, like as wave follows wave in the agitated ocean. Well, indeed, might the Saviour cry, "O my God, my soul is east down within me. . . . All thy waves and billows are gone over me." (Ps. xli. 7.) Let us hastily recount his successive scenes of misery. He celebrated the Passover on the Thursday evening at Jerusalem—at midnight was arrested in the garden, and carried before the High Priest, and then the Sanhedrim—about six in the morning of Friday taken before Pilate, who, after several vain attempts to pacify the Jews, surrendered him to their fury—nailed to the cross at nine—at noon came on the miraculous darkness, which continued till three, when he expired; and the same evening about sunset was entombed. Addison describes the closing scene in the following few, but, striking lines:—"See where they have nailed the Lord and giver of life! How his wounds blacken, his body writhes, and his heart heaves with pity and with agony! O, Almighty sufferer, look down, look down from thy triumphant infamy! Lo, he inclines his head to his sacred bosom!—Hark, he groans!—See, he expires!—The earth trembles; the temple rends; the rocks burst; the dead arise—which are the quick?—which are the dead?—Sure Nature, all Nature, is departing with her Creator."

Ver. 31–32. Circumstances which followed the death of Christ, including his entombment.—We confine our remarks here to the circumstances related by St. John: for those related by the other Evangelists, see our remarks on Matt. xxvii. and Luke xxiii. It was not only by a special Providence, for the fulfilment of prophecy, that the Jews of Jesus were preserved unbroken, and his side pierced, but there seems also, a mystical design, as our Evangelist afterwards explains it in his first epistle, (ch. v. 6.) "This is he that came by water crimes. Alexander the emperor ordered a eunuch to be crucified by the way side, in which his servants used commonly to go to his country house.—Orient. Cust. No 1365.

Ver. 23. Without seam.—Josephus represents the tunic of Aaron as woven in this manner, not is this unusual. See Orient. Lit. No 1376.

Ver. 29. A vessel full of vinegar, &c.—See notes on Mat. xxvii. 34, 48. [This hyssop is termed a reed by Matthew and Mark; and it appears that a species of hyssop with a ready stalk, about two feet long, grew about Jerusalem. See Buchart 1.—Bagster. But some think the herb itself was mixed with the vinegar upon the sponge, before being raised by a reed. Harris's Nat. Hist.

Ver. 30. It is finished.—These do not appear to have been absolutely the last words of our Saviour, for the three other Evangelists state, "That he cried again with a loud voice, Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit," and then gave up the ghost.

Ver. 31. That the bodies should not remain.—See Deut. xxi. 22, 23.—A high day.—Not only a Sabbath, but the second day of the feast of unleavened bread, on which they offered the sheaf of new corn.

Ver. 32. Brake the legs.—[Lactantius says, that it was a common custom to break the legs of criminals upon the cross, which was done, we are told, at the instigation of the Jews, and appears to have been a kind of coup de grace, the sooner to put them out of pain.]—Bagster.

Ver. 34. Blood and water.—Blood from the heart itself, and water from the pericardium, or bag which contains the heart. [It appears from this, that the spear went through the pericardium, and pierced the heart; and that the water, or aqueous humour, proceeded from the former, and the blood from the latter. It affords the most decisive evidence that Jesus died for our sins; and thus the conduct of the soldiers was overruled to take away all pretences to the contrary, by which his enemies might have attempted to invalidate the reality of his resurrection; and to accomplish two most important prophecies.]—Bagster.

Ver. 36. A bone of him shall not be broken.—See Exod. xii. 26; also Psal.

xxvii. 20.

Ver. 37. They shall look on him.—See Zech. xii. 10.

Ver. 39. A hundred pound weight.—This has been thought incredible; but 40 Then took they the body of Jesus, and wound it in linen clothes with the spices, as the manner of the Jews is to bury.

41 Now in the place where he was crucified there was a garden; and in the garden a new sepulchre, wherein was never man yet laid.

42 There ^alaid they Jesus therefore because ^r of the Jews' preparation day; for the sepulchre was nigh at hand.

CHAPTER XX.

1 Mary cometh to the sepulchre: 3 sends Peter and John, ignorant of the resurrection. 11 Jesus appeareth to Mary Magdalene, 19 and to his disciples. 24 The incredulity and confusion of Thomas. 30 The scripture is sufficient to salvation.

THE ^a first day of the week cometh Mary Magdalene early, when it was yet dark, unto the sepulchre, and seeth the stone taken away from the sepulchre.

2 Then she runneth, and cometh to Simon Peter, and to the other disciple, whom ^b Jesus loved, and saith unto them, They have taken away the Lord out of the sepulchre, and we know not where they have laid him.

3 Peter ^c therefore went forth, and that other disciple, and came to the sepulchre.

4 So they ran both together: and the other disciple did outrun ^d Peter, and came first to the sepulchre.

5 And he stooping down, and looking in, saw the linen clothes ^e lying; yet went he not in.

6 Then cometh Simon Peter following him, and went into the sepulchre, and seeth the linen clothes lie.

7 And the ^f napkin, that was about his head, not lying with the linen clothes, but wrapped together in a place by itself.

8 Then went in also that other disciple,

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29

p Ac 1:6

q Is 53:9

r Co 15:4

r ver 31

a Mt 28:1

b &c

Ma 16:1

&c

Lu 24:1

Ma 16:9

b c 13:23

19:26

21:24

c Lu 24:12

d Lu 13:30

e c 19:40

f c 11:41

g Ps 119:10

Ac 2:25

21

13:33

h Ma 16:5

i Ma 28:9

j Lu 24:16

31

k c 21:4

l Is 43:1

c 10:3

m Ca 3:4

n Ps 22:29

Ro 8:29

He 2:11

o c 16:18

p Ro 5:14

15

q Ca 6:15

Ga 3:26

4:6,7

r Ep 1:17

Ge 17:7,8

Is 43:15

48:14

Is 41:10

Jr 31:33

Ec 30:25

Zec 13:9

He 11:16

he 21:5

s Mat 28:10

which came first to the sepulchre, and he saw, and believed.

9 For as yet they knew not the ^r scripture, that he must rise again from the dead.

10 Then the disciples went away again unto their own home.

11 ¶ But Mary stood without at the sepulchre weeping: and as she wept, she stooped down, and looked ^b into the sepulchre,

12 And seeth two angels in white sitting, the one at the head, and the other at the feet, where the body of Jesus had lain.

13 And they say unto her, Woman, why weepest thou? She saith unto them, Because they have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him.

14 And when she had thus said, she turned herself back, and ^c saw Jesus standing, and knew not that it was Jesus.

15 Jesus saith unto her, Woman, why weepest thou? whom seekest thou? She, supposing him to be the gardener, saith unto him, Sir, if thou have borne him hence, tell me where thou hast laid him, and ^k I will take him away.

16 Jesus saith unto her, Mary. ^l She turned ^m herself, and saith unto him, Rabboni; which is to say, Master.

17 Jesus saith unto her, Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go to my ⁿ brethren, and say unto them, I ^a ascend unto my Father, and ^p your Father; and to my ^q God, and your ^r God.

18 Mary Magdalene ^s came and told the disciples that she had seen the Lord, and that he had spoken these things unto her.

and blood;" on which we shall only at present remark, that we conceive the fact had a figurative allusion to those two great doctrines of the Christian system—atonement by the blood of Christ, and the washing of regeneration and the renewal of our nature by the influences of the Holy Spirit. So Dr. Watts explains it:—

"Our Saviour's pierced side
Pour'd not a double flood.
By water we are purified,
And pardon'd by the blood."

We have already hinted at the many prophetic allusions accomplished in this great event. "To him give all the prophets witness," (Acts x. 43;) and none more copiously than the patriarch David, who by the prophetic spirit clearly anticipated this day of sorrows, when he cried, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" and when he speaks of himself as exposed to public scorn and ridicule—"I am a worm and no man; a reproach of men, and despised of the people. All they that see me laugh me to scorn: they shoot out the lip, they shake the head; saying, 'He trusted on the Lord that he would deliver him: let him deliver him, seeing he delighted in him'. . . . For dogs have compassed me: the assembly of the wicked have enclosed me: they pierced my hands and my feet. They part my garments among them, and cast lots upon my vesture," (Ps. xxii. 1, 6, 7, 16—18.) "They gave me gall for my meat; and in my thirst they gave me vinegar to drink."

But the most important words of Jesus in this part of the narrative, and nearly the last which he uttered, were, "It is finished"—meaning, not only that his prophetic and mediatorial work, but the whole series of types and prophecies respecting him, was accomplished.

"In this hour the long series of prophecies, visions, types, and figures, was accomplished; this was the centre in which they all met; this the point towards which they had tended and verged throughout the course of so many generations. You behold the law and the prophets standing, if we may speak so, at the foot of the cross, and doing homage. You behold Moses and Aaron bearing the ark of the covenant;

the Talmud says, eighty pounds were used at the funeral of Rabbi Gamaliel the elder. At the funeral of Herod, Josephus says, five hundred domestics followed, carrying spices.—Orient. Cust. No. 1508.

Ver. 40. As the manner of the Jews is to bury.—Campbell, "Which is the Jewish manner of embalming."

CHAP. XX. Ver. 1. Cometh Mary Magdalene.—(Mary Magdalene, as well as Peter, was evidently at the sepulchre twice on the morning of the resurrection. The first time of her going was some short time before her companions, the other Mary and Salome, (Mat. xxvii. 1.) and observing that the stone had been removed, she returned to inform Peter and John. In the mean time, the other Mary and Salome came to the sepulchre, and saw the angels, as recorded by Matthew and Mark. While these women returned to the city, Peter and John went to the sepulchre, passing them at some distance, or going another way, followed by Mary Magdalene, who staid after their return. This was her second journey, when she saw two angels, and then Jesus himself, as here related; and immediately after, Jesus appeared to the other women, as they re-

David and Elijah presenting the oracle of testimony. You behold all the priests and sacrifices, all the rites and ordinances, all the types and symbols, assembled together to receive their consummation. Without the death of Christ, the worship and ceremonies of the law would have remained a pompous, but unmeaning institution. In the hour when he was crucified, 'the book with the seven seals' was opened. Every rite assumed its significance, every prediction met its event, every symbol displayed its correspondence." (Blot's Sermons, vol. i, Ser. 5.)

CHAP. XX. Ver. 1—18. Jesus appears to Mary Magdalene at the sepulchre.—Besides Mary Magdalene, Matthew mentions another Mary, (meaning, most probably, Mary the wife of Cleopas, who stood with her at the foot of the cross, chap. xix. 25.) and Mark mentions other women; so that it appears there were at least three; but John's narrative concerns one only, though at the same time her language implies that there was at least another; for she says, verse 2, "We know not," &c. Notwithstanding all that Jesus had intimated about rising from the dead, it does not appear that any one of his disciples, male or female, anticipated such an event; and how they interpreted his language on such occasions, is to us incomprehensible. It should seem as if Providence had cast, as it were, a mist over the eyes of their minds, that they might fall under no suspicion of acting a part to deceive others. Had they but suspected that he were risen, they would not have carried spices to embalm him, nor would they have been under any anxiety about rolling away the stone; much less would they have been alarmed when they found the stone removed, lest the body should have been stolen. Nor does even Mary Magdalene, with all her sanguine attachment to him, seem to have entertained an idea of his resurrection, till Jesus spoke to her; and then, though she did not recollect his person, (perhaps not being dressed as usual,) she in a moment recognised his voice, the well known sound of which vibrated with rapture on her ear, and perhaps she was eager to embrace him; but he desires her not to stop at present, for he was not yet ascended, nor about immediately to leave them. Shortly, how-turned to the city. (Mat. xxviii. 9, 10.) In the meantime, Joanna and her company arrived at the sepulchre, when two angels appeared to them, and addressed them as the one angel had done the other woman. (Lu. xxiv. 1—10.) They immediately returned to the city, and by some means found the apostles before the others arrived, and informed them of what they had seen: upon which, Peter went a second time to the sepulchre, but saw only the linen clothes lying. (Lu. xxiv. 12.)—B.

Ver. 8. Saw, and believed.—Were convinced that he must indeed be risen from the dead.

Ver. 10. Unto their own home.—Doddridge and Campbell, "To their companions."

Ver. 17. Touch me not.—Sherlock, "Hang not about me." Doddridge, "Embrace me not." Campbell says, "The verb (haptesthai) in the use of the LXX., denotes not only to touch, but to cleave to, as in Job xxxi. 7. Ezek. xli. 6, and other places." The sense here plainly is, "Do not detain me at present. . . . Lose not a moment in carrying the joyful tidings of my resurrection to my disciples."

19 ¶ Then ^a the same day at evening, being the first day of the week, when the doors were shut where the disciples were assembled for fear of the Jews, came Jesus and stood in the midst, and saith unto them, Peace ^b be unto you.

20 And when he had so said, he showed unto them ^c his hands and his side. Then ^d were the disciples glad, when they saw the Lord.

21 Then said Jesus to them again, Peace ^e ^f be unto you: as ^g my Father hath sent me, even so ^h I send you.

22 And when he had said this, he breathed on them, and saith unto them, Receive ⁱ ye the Holy Ghost:

23 Whose soever ^j sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them: and whose soever ^k sins ye retain, they are retained.

24 ¶ But ^l Thomas, one of the twelve, called Didymus, was not with them when Jesus came.

25 The other disciples therefore said unto him, We have seen the Lord. But he ^m said unto them, Except I shall see in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and thrust my hand into his side, I will not believe.

26 ¶ And after eight days again his disciples were within, and Thomas with them: then came Jesus, the doors being shut, and stood in the midst, and said, Peace ⁿ be unto you.

27 Then saith he to Thomas, Reach hither thy ^o finger, and behold my hands; and reach hither thy ^p hand, and thrust it into my side: and be ^q not faithless, but believing.

28 And Thomas answered and said unto him, My ^r Lord and my God.

29 Jesus saith unto him, Thomas, because thou hast seen me, thou hast believed: blessed ^s are they that have not seen, and yet have believed.

30 ¶ And ^t many other signs truly did Jesus in the presence of his disciples, which are not written in this book:

31 But ^u these are written, that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and ^v that believing ye might have life through his name.

ever, he should "ascend to his Father and their Father—to his and their God." The text does not say that she did not touch him; her laying hold of him might be the reason of his desiring her not to hold him at the present.

Ver. 19–31. Jesus again appears to his disciples, and afterwards to Thomas, and shows them his hands and his feet.—It is worthy of observation, that while our Lord Jesus shows the utmost anxiety to satisfy his own disciples of the reality of his resurrection, by repeated appearances and conversations, accompanied by circumstances decidedly miraculous, as in the present instance, he does not in any one instance appear to his enemies, the priests and unbelieving Jews. This has been objected to by infidel writers as a suspicious circumstance: it should be considered, however, that he had in his lifetime, and even at his death, wrought a great number of miracles, the which, when they could not deny their reality, they perversely attributed to demons, though at the same time they were of the most benevolent character: and, after all this, not only refused to credit them, but persecuted him to death on account of them. What claim could these men have to more miracles?

In the next place, it should be considered that this is in harmony with the conduct of God, as respects the principles of what is called natural religion. On the doctrine of a future state, for instance, though reason furnishes a variety of arguments sufficient to convince men who are not unwilling to believe it, yet is the evidence not of that overwhelming nature as to preclude the possibility of doubt, or to counterbalance the influence of the corrupt passions of mankind. As it is hard in secular things to convince a man against his will, so it is difficult to convince a libertine that he will be called to account before the bar of God, when his hopes, his wishes, his passions, all say—No! Those who would not be convinced, were justly left to perish in their sins.

But let us consider the incidents here related. The evening of the same day on which our Lord had appeared early in the morning to Mary Magdalene and others, he appeared to the body of his disciples, who were assembled with closed doors, on account of the Jews. A report had been raised that these disciples had stolen the body of their Master, and it was natural to expect that the Jews would prosecute them with the same virulence as they had done him. The doors being fastened, however, seems mentioned for the purpose of showing that our Saviour's entrance among them was miraculous; and the exhibition of his wounds was evidently designed to demonstrate the identity of his person. The Salaam he pronounced, "Peace be unto you!" was in perfect harmony with his farewell discourse, (chap. xiv. 27,) in which he promises them peace and happiness. At first, however, Luke informs us (ch. xxiv. 37) they were much alarmed, under the idea that it was his ghost, till he allowed them to handle his limbs and inspect his wounds. "A spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have;" and, for their farther conviction, he did eat before them, (Luke xxiv. 42, 43,) for it must be recollected that, though our Lord was raised from the dead as Lazarus and others had been, his body, probably, did not undergo its final change, so as to become spiritual and glorified, till the time of his ascension into glory. Then, as St. Paul says of those who shall be found alive at the sounding of the last trumpet, "in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye," that mysterious change might be induced.

On the same occasion our Lord breathed upon them, as indicative of the gift of the Holy Spirit, which, not many days after this, they were to receive, and whereby they were qualified to "discern spirits," or to read the hearts of men, and to announce their pardon, or otherwise, as the case might be. Farther than as every minister of God's word is authorized to denounce his judgments against all sin, and promise pardon to all penitent believers. This clearly refers to miraculous powers, and is confined to apostolic times.

But to return to our history.—Thomas not being present on the above occasion, was so incredulous as to protest against the truth of what was stated to him by the other apostles; but Jesus, knowing his objection did not arise from infidelity of heart, but from a fear that the news was (as we sometimes say) too good to be true, was pleased to appear to them again on that day week, when Thomas himself was present; and so far was he from persevering in his objection, that he no sooner saw the Lord than he both confessed and adored him.—Thomas answered, "My Lord, and my God!"

These words have indeed been variously explained, and to avoid the evidence resulting from them in favour of our Lord's divinity, some have supposed this to be the language merely of surprise and astonishment; a vain, and, indeed, a profane exclamation! But the text says, "Thomas answered and said unto him," that is, unto Christ himself—"My Lord, and my God!" and our Lord himself plainly so understood it, for he replies, "Thomas, because thou hast seen me thou hast believed." So the learned Reformer, Beza: "From the pronoun to him, it appears that the words which follow are not merely the expression of the Apostle's admiration, as the Nestorians used to evade this passage; but the words represent him addressing Jesus himself as the true God and his Lord; . . . and there is not a more express instance in the Gospels, of the invocation of Christ as the true God." (See Dr. Smith's Messiah.)

It is not necessary to suppose that Thomas's incredulity so far prevailed as to induce him to feel the Saviour's wounds, but rather the contrary; for Jesus adds, "Because thou hast seen me thou hast believed: blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed"—that is, as Doddridge judiciously explains it, who "have believed on the credible testimony of others; for they have shown a greater degree of candour and humility, which renders the faith it produces so much the more acceptable."

The chapter closes with stating that Jesus did many more things than are stated in this Gospel, (or indeed in all the Evangelists,) and the end of all is—not to gratify curiosity, or furnish an amusement, as is the case of most other writings; but that we "may believe that Jesus is the Christ, and that believing we may have life through his name;" for "the end" of all true "faith is the salvation of our souls."

Ver. 19. Same day at evening—This verse, compared with ver. 1, may help to settle the question as to the time when the Christian Sabbath commences. "Mary went early the first day"—this verse says, evening of the same day: this was the evening of the Christian Sabbath.

Ver. 23. Whose soever sins ye remit—The ministerial sentence of absolution, except where it relates to ecclesiastical censures, is merely a declaration of what God has done.

Ver. 26. And after eight days—i. e. on the eighth day, or the first of the following week. "So after three days," Mat. xxvii. 63; Mark viii. 31, means evidently on the third day.

Ver. 28. My Lord and my God.—[The disbelief of the apostles is the means of furnishing us with a full and satisfactory demonstration of the resurrection of our Lord. Throughout the divine dispensations, every doctrine and every important truth is gradually revealed; and here we have a conspicuous instance of this progressive system. An angel first declares the glorious event. The empty sepulchre confirms the women's report. Christ's appearance to Mary Magdalene showed that he was alive; that to the disciples at Emmaus proved that it was at least the spirit of Christ; that to the eleven showed the reality of his body; and the conviction given to St. Thomas, proved it the self-same body that had been crucified. Incredulity itself is satisfied; and the convinced apostle exclaims, in the joy of his heart, "My Lord and my God!"—Beza.

CHAPTER XXI.

1 Christ appearing again to his disciples, was known of them by the great draught of fishes. 12 He dined with them. 13 earnestly commending Peter to feed his lambs and sheep: 14 foretelling him of his death: 22 rebuketh his curiosity touching John. 23 The conclusion.

AFTER these things Jesus showed himself again to the disciples at the sea of Tiberias; and on this wise showed he himself.

2 There were together Simon Peter, and Thomas called Didymus, and ^a Nathanael of Cana in Galilee, and the ^b sons of Zebedee, and two other of his disciples.

3 Simon Peter saith unto them, I go a fishing. They say unto him, We also go with thee. They went forth, and entered into a ship immediately; and that night they caught nothing.

4 But when the morning was now come, Jesus stood on the shore: but the disciples knew ^c not that it was Jesus.

5 Then ^d Jesus saith unto them, ^e Children, have ye any meat? They answered him, No.

6 And he said unto them, Cast ^f the net on the right side of the ship, and ye shall find. They cast therefore, and now they were not able to draw it for the multitude of fishes.

7 Therefore that disciple whom Jesus loved saith unto Peter, ^g It is the Lord. Now when Simon Peter heard that it was the Lord, he girt his fisher's coat ^h unto him, (for he was naked,) and did cast himself into the sea.

8 And the other disciples came in a little ship; (for they were not far from land, but as it were two hundred cubits,) dragging the net with fishes.

9 As soon then as they were come to land, they saw a fire of coals there, and fish laid thereon, and bread.

10 Jesus saith unto them, Bring of the fish which ye have now caught.

CHAP. XXI. Ver. 1—14. Jesus appears again to his disciples at the sea of Tiberias.—This sea was no other than the lake of Genesareth, so often mentioned in the Gospels. It is evident from this narrative, that the greater part of the disciples had returned to their former occupation, that of fishing, and perhaps were compelled to do so for their support. Their dreams of temporal honour were now vanished, and it does not appear that they yet understood any thing of their future destination or employment. It was a night scene, (or rather very early in the morning,) like that in which Jesus once before appeared to them, walking on the water—now they saw him standing on the shore. The moon beams silvered over the waves, and they were probably launcheon, as they had once done before, that after toiling all night they had caught nothing. A voice from the shore now directed them to cast the net on the right side of the ship, when, lo! they were not able to draw it ashore, from the multitude of fishes which it enclosed. The similitude of these circumstances to those of the former miracle, to which we have above alluded, probably led the beloved disciple, John, to conclude that it was the same voice that had before given them the like success, and he intimated this to Peter, who, with his usual impetuosity, threw an upper garment over him, and, jumping into the water, waded eagerly through it somewhat more than the distance of a hundred yards, while the other disciples in the boat dragged the full net with them to the shore. Upon the land they found a fire with fish laid to broil thereon, and bread with it. They were now directed to bring some of the fresh caught fish, when Peter ran hastily to fetch them from the boat, and though the net was so heavily laden it did not break; another circumstance that must call to mind the former miracle, and confirm the opinion they had formed. This opinion must arrive to certainty when Jesus, in his usual manner, distributed to them food, and ate with them—the great pledge of friendship among the eastern nations. This was as much as to say—You may CHAP. XXI. Ver. 1. After these things.—Grotius and Le Clerc have a strange notion, that this chapter was written by some elders of the Church of Ephesus, from a verbal relation they had received from the apostle. But Dr. Mill has refuted this notion, which seems sufficiently contradicted by verse 21 of the text itself.—After these things, does not mean immediately, but some days after.

Ver. 5. Children.—Doddridge and Campbell, "My lads."—"Have ye any meat?"—Campbell, "vituals." Doddridge, "any thing to eat" i. e. have ye caught any fish?

Ver. His fisher's coat.—Doddridge, "his coat" Campbell, "upper garment;" we might say more characteristically, "his jacket."—He was naked.—That is, he was only in his vest, or under garment; for gymnos, naked like the Hebrew, aton, is frequently applied to one who has merely laid aside his outer garment. To which may be added what we read in the LXX. Job xxi 8: "Thou hast taken away the covering of the naked," the plaid or

A. M. 4023.
A. D. 29.
a e 1. 13.

b Mat. 4. 21.

c e 20. 14.

d Lu. 24. 41.

e or, Sirs.

f Lu. 5. 4. 7.

g Ac. 10. 11.

h e 20. 19, 25.

i Mt. 26. 33, 35.

j Je. 40. 11.

Ec. 3. 15.

Ec. 31. 2.

10.

Ac. 20. 28.

1 Pe. 5. 2, 4.

k He. 13. 20.

1 Pe. 2. 25.

l 1st. 3. 33.

m e. 16. 30.

n e. 13. 35.

Ac. 12. 3, 4.

o Ac. 21. 11.

11 Simon Peter went up, and drew the net to land full of great fishes, a hundred and fifty and three; and for all there were so many, yet was not the net broken.

12 ¶ Jesus saith unto them, Come and dine. And none of the disciples durst ask him, Who art thou? knowing that it was the Lord.

13 Jesus ^g then cometh, and taketh bread, and giveth them, and fish likewise.

14 This ^h is now the third time that Jesus showed himself to his disciples, after that he was risen from the dead.

15 ¶ So when they had dined, Jesus saith to Simon Peter, Simon, ⁱ son of Jonas, lovest thou me more ^j than these? He saith unto him, Yea, Lord; thou knowest that I love thee. He saith unto him, Feed ^k my lambs.

16 He saith to him again the second time, Simon, ⁱ son of Jonas, lovest thou me? He saith unto him, Yea, Lord; thou knowest that I love thee. He saith unto him, Feed my ^k sheep.

17 He saith unto him the third time, Simon, ⁱ son of Jonas, lovest thou me? Peter was grieved ^l because he said unto him the third time, Lovest thou me? And he said unto him, Lord, thou ^m knowest all things; thou knowest that I love thee. Jesus saith unto him, Feed my sheep.

18 Verily, verily, I say unto thee, ⁿ When thou wast young, thou girdedst thyself, and walkedst whither thou wouldest; but when thou shalt be old, thou shalt stretch forth thy hands, and another shall ^o gird thee, and carry thee whither thou wouldest not.

19 This spake he, signifying by what death now rely upon me for the pardon of all your offences, and the continuance of my favour.

Ver. 15—25. Our Lord puts the attachment of Peter to the test, and reproves his curiosity. The conclusion.—Dinner being over, our Lord thus addresses Peter: "Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me more than these?" Than these what? The expression has been generally understood as referring to the other disciples; "Simon, lovest thou me more than Thomas, and Nathanael, and the sons of Zebedee?" If so, "feed my sheep." But it may bear another interpretation:—"Lovest thou me more than thy means of livelihood? Canst thou again forsake thy boats and nets, and abandoning those means of support, devote thyself to feed my scattered sheep?" And Peter's reply may be thus understood: "Lord, notwithstanding my cowardice and ingratitude, in forsaking and denying thee, thou knowest that I love thee." The repetition of this question seems designed to give him time to reflect on his former conduct. Thrice had he denied his Master, thrice therefore is he put upon considering; as if his Lord had said—"Simon, be not hasty in thy reply—consider what it may cost thee to be my disciple." Peter was now wounded to the quick, and replied, with all his energies, "Lord, thou knowest all things—thou knowest that I should deny thee; and now thou knowest, notwithstanding all my cowardice—thou knowest that I love thee."—"Jesus saith unto him, (again,) Feed my sheep."

Our Lord then adds this alarming prediction: "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, When thou wast young, thou girdedst thyself and walkedst whither thou wouldest; but when thou shalt be old, thou shalt stretch forth thy hands, and another shall gird thee, and carry thee whither thou wouldest not. This spake Jesus Christ testifying by what death Peter should glorify God." Ecclesiastical History informs us that this was fulfilled in Peter's crucifixion, about A.D. 65; and that, by his own request, he was executed with his head downward, con-blanket, in which they wrapped themselves, and besides which they had no other. In this sense Virgil says, Nudus erat, sere nudus, "plough naked, and sow naked," i. e. strip off your upper garments.—Bagster.

Ver. 9. And fish laid thereon.—It was common to dress fish on the seashore.—Harnier.

Ver. 12. Come and dine.—Bishop Pearce prefers, "Come (and) breakfast," because it was early in the morning. Doddridge, "Come, refresh yourselves." Wesley, "Come, eat." The ancients had usually but two meals, dinner and supper; the word here used strictly means the former, whether taken sooner or later. Times change: "Our ancestors," says Campbell, "dined at eleven, and supped at five."

Ver. 14. The third time.—Grotius understands this of the third day of our Lord's appearing; Doddridge, of the third time of his appearing to such a number of disciples.

Ver. 18. Stretch forth thy hands.—It was customary in the ancient combats he should glorify God. And when he had spoken this, he saith unto him, Follow me.

20 Then Peter, turning about, seeth the disciple whom Jesus loved following; which also leaned on his breast at supper, and said, Lord, which is he that betrayeth thee?
21 Peter seeing him saith to Jesus, Lord, and what shall this man do?
22 Jesus saith unto him, If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee? follow thou me.
23 Then went this saying abroad among the

A. M. 4073
A. D. 29
p. 21 v. 1-14.
q. No. 14. 24.
186. 12. 20.
No. 19. 28.
c. 12. 26.
r. Mat. 25. 31.
He. 7. 7.
22. 20.
s. ver. 19.
t. e. 19. 35.
3. Jn. 12.
u. e. 20. 30.
v. Am. 7. 10.

brethren, that that disciple should not die: yet Jesus said not unto him, He shall not die; but, If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee?
24 This is the disciple which testifieth of these things, and wrote these things: and we know that his testimony is true.
25 And there are also many other things which Jesus did, the which, if they should be written every one, I suppose that even the world itself could not contain the books that should be written. Amen.

sidering himself unworthy to suffer in the same manner as his Lord. (Care's Lives of the Apostles, and Milner's Church Hist.)

Peter being ordered to follow Jesus, turned round and saw John also following with him, and had the boldness to ask, "Lord, and what shall this man (do)?" or, as Dr. Campbell translates it, "Lord, what shall become of this man?" which certainly better suits the answer, "If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee? follow thou me." We need not wonder, however, if this saying be now misunderstood, since it was so at the time by those who heard it; for "then went this saying abroad among the brethren, that that disciple should not die;" yet Jesus said not so. By tarrying till Christ should come, is generally understood, till the destruction of Jerusalem. This is sometimes called Christ's coming, which the apostle John is believed to have survived many years.

The last verse—the world itself "could not contain the books that should be written," to record every minute circumstance of the Saviour's life, is generally considered as a strong hyperbole, and expressions of the like kind may be found in Nu. xiii. 33. Ju. vii. 12. 1 Ki. x. 27. Matt. xix. 24. Jn. xii. 19, &c. The words are, however, capable of a more literal interpretation, and are thus explained by Dr. Doddridge:—"The world itself (that is, its inhabitants) would not receive them;" that is, they would neither purchase nor read the voluminous records, much less could we expect them to be believed.

for the vanquished person to stretch out his hands to the conqueror, signifying that he declined the battle, acknowledging that he was conquered, and submitting to the direction of the victor. (Orient. Chest No. 1308.)

Ver. 25. The world could not contain, &c.—(This is a very strong eastern expression to represent the number of miracles which Jesus wrought. But however strong and strange it may appear to us of the Western world, we find sacred and other authors using hyperboles of the like kind and signification. See Nu. xiii. 33. De. i. 28. Dan. iv. 11. Eccl. xlviii. 15. Paganini gives a very similar hyperbole taken from the Jewish writers; in which Jochanan is said to have "composed such a great number of precepts and lessons, that if the heavens were paper, and all the trees of the forests so many pens, and all the children of men so many scribes, they would not suffice to write all his lessons.")—B.

"Could we with ink the ocean fill;
And were the skies of parchment made;
Were every stalk on earth a quill,
And every man a scribe by trade;
To write the love of God above,
Would drain the ocean dry;
Nor could the scroll contain the whole,
If stretch'd from sky to sky."

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE GOSPEL OF ST. JOHN.

(ST. JOHN is generally considered, with respect to language, as the least correct writer in the New Testament. His style indicates a great want of those advantages which result from a learned education; but this defect is amply compensated by the unexampled simplicity with which he expresses the sublimest truths. Though simplicity of manner, says Campbell, is common to all our Lord's historians, there are evidently differences in the simplicity of one compared with that of another. One thing very remarkable in John's style, is an attempt to impress important truths more strongly on the minds of his readers, by employing in the expression of them, both an affirmative proposition and a negative. It is manifestly not without design that he commonly passes over those passages of our Lord's history and teaching, which had been treated at large by the other Evangelists, or, if he touches them at all, he touches them but slightly, whilst he records many miracles which had been overlooked by the rest, and expatiates on the sublime doctrines of the pre-existence, the divinity, and the incarnation of the Word, the great ends of his mission, and the blessings of his purchase.)—Bagster.

A SHORT HARMONY OF THE LAST AND MOST IMPORTANT EVENT, OUR LORD'S RESURRECTION.
MATTHEW XXVIII.	MARK XVI.	LUKE XXIV.	JOHN XX.
Fact No. 1. Ver. 1. In the end of the sabbath, as the first day of the week began to dawn, came Mary Magdalene, and the other Mary, to the sepulchre, and found the stone rolled from the mouth of the sepulchre. II. (Omitted.)	Fact No. 1. Ver. 1. When the sabbath was past, Mary Magdalene, and other women, brought spices to the sepulchre, just as the sun was rising, and found the stone rolled from the mouth of the sepulchre. II. (Omitted.)	Fact No. 1. Ver. 1. Very early the first day of the week Mary Magdalene, and other women came to the sepulchre, and found the stone rolled away from its mouth. Ver. 2. Found the stone rolled away from its mouth. II. (Omitted.)	Fact No. 1. Ver. 1. The first day of the week Mary Magdalene came to the sepulchre while it was yet (somewhat) dark, and she saw the stone rolled away from its mouth. II. Ver. 2-10. She ran immediately to the apostles Peter and John, both of whom run to the sepulchre. John gets there first, and looks in; Peter comes up and goes first in, and then John follows; both see nothing but the tomb and grave clothes, and both return home. III. Ver. 11-13. Mary Magdalene having this while stood weeping without, now looking in, sees two angels, who endeavour to comfort her; but
III. Ver. 5-7. They see an angel, who comforts them, that Jesus was risen, and gone to Galilee, where his disciples should meet with him.	III. Ver. 5. Entering the sepulchre, she sees an angel, who, Ver. 6, 7. Comforts the women, and assures them Jesus would meet his disciples in Galilee.	III. Ver. 4-8. Entering the sepulchre, they see two angels, who comfort the women, assuring them that Jesus would meet his disciples in Galilee.	IV. Ver. 14-18. Turning back, she sees Jesus, whom she takes for the gardener, till he discovers himself. Then Mary goes to tell the other disciples that she had seen the Lord.
IV. They run, with a mixture of fear and joy, to the disciples, but meet Jesus by the way.	IV. Ver. 8, 9. They run away trembling to the disciples, by the way he appears to Mary.	IV. Ver. 9, 10. They return to tell the rest of the disciples, who believe not.	V. (Omitted.)
V. (Omitted.)	Ver. 10, 11. Mary goes and tells the rest of the disciples, but they believe not.	V. Ver. 12. But Peter runs in, sees only the clothes, and returns wondering.	VI. (Omitted.)
VI. (Omitted.)	VI. Ver. 12. He appears to two disciples going into the country. Ver. 13. They report it to the rest of the disciples, who still believe not.	VI. Ver. 13-22. Jesus appears to two disciples going to Emmaus, and stops to sup with them. Ver. 33-35. They return to Jerusalem, and recount the rest.	VII. Ver. 19. The same evening Jesus appears to his apostles, &c., and particularly addresses Peter.
VII. Ver. 16, 17. The disciples go to Galilee, where they see him, as was appointed, and he commissions them to preach.	VII. Ver. 14, 15. He appears to the apostles and disciples at supper, and commissions them to go and preach.	VII. Ver. 36. Jesus appears to the apostles and others, and commissions them to preach the Gospel, beginning at Jerusalem.
The leading facts are here reduced to seven, which are marked with numerical letters, I, II, &c. On No. I. it may be proper to remark, that, on comparing the different Evangelists, it seems that the women did not come all to the sepulchre at one time, but some at day-break, and the other women not till sunrise. None of them seem to have been aware, that Nicodemus had brought spices on the night before, or that the sepulchre had been sealed and guarded. On Fact III. we may remark, that Matthew and Mark mention the appearance of one angel—Luke and John, two. Perhaps one only spoke, and appeared the principal

THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES.

THIS is the last of the historical books of the New Testament, and forms a link of connexion between the Gospels and Apostolical Epistles. The Acts, or Transactions of the Apostles, is the title given to this book in the Codex Bezae, and to all the modern versions or editions.

That St. Luke was the author of this Book, as well as of the Gospel which bears his name, "is evident," as Hortwell Home remarks, "both from the introduction, and from the numerous testimonies of the early Christians. Both are inscribed to Theophilus, and, in the very first verse of the Acts, there is a reference made to Theophilus, which he calls the famous Treatise. From the frequent use of the first person plural, it is clear that he was present at most of the transactions he relates. He appears to have accompanied St. Paul to Philippi; he also attended him to Jerusalem, and afterwards to Rome, where he remained two years during that Apostle's first confinement. Augustine only we find St. Luke particularly mentioned in two of the Epistles written by St. Paul, from Rome, during that confinement. And as the Book of Acts is continued to the end of the second year of St. Paul's imprisonment, it could not have been written before the year 63; and as the death of that Apostle is not mentioned, it is probable that the book was composed before that event, which is supposed to have happened A. D. 65. Michaelis, Dr. Laringer, Dr. Leeson, Koenigsmeyer, By Trenton, and the generality of critics, therefore, assign the date of this book to the year 63 or 64. The history, as it gives the only credible account of the rise and spread of Christianity, furnishes, at the same time, abundant evidence of its truth, and of its happy effects wherever it was received, in raising and improving the character of man.

CHAPTER I.

1 Christ preparing his apostles to the beholding of his ascension, gathereth them together into the mount Olivet, commandeth them to expect in Jerusalem the sending down of the Holy Ghost, from even after forty days to see it in; by virtue whereof they shall be witnesses unto him, even to the utmost parts of the earth. 9 After his ascension they are warned by two angels to depart, and to set their minds upon his second coming. 12 They accordingly return, and, giving themselves to prayer, choose Matthias apostle in the place of Judas.

THE former treatise ^a have I made, O Theophilus, of all that Jesus began both to do and teach,

2 Until ^b the day in which he was taken up, after that he through the Holy Ghost had given commandments ^c unto the apostles whom he had chosen:

3 To whom also he showed himself alive after his passion by many ^d infallible proofs, being seen of them forty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God:

4 And, ^e being assembled together with them, commanded ^f them that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but wait for the promise of the Father, which, saieth he, ye ^g have heard of me.

5 For John ^h truly baptized with water; but

A. M. 4003.

A. D. 59.

a Lu 11:14

b Lu 24:51

c ver 9

d 1 Th 3:16

e Mat 28:19

f Ma 16:15

g 19

h Lu 24:45

i Jo 20:21

j Jo 14:26

k Jo 14:26

l Jo 14:26

m Jo 14:26

n Jo 14:26

o Jo 14:26

p Jo 14:26

q Jo 14:26

r Jo 14:26

s Jo 14:26

t Jo 14:26

u Jo 14:26

v Jo 14:26

w Jo 14:26

x Jo 14:26

y Jo 14:26

z Jo 14:26

aa Jo 14:26

ab Jo 14:26

ac Jo 14:26

ad Jo 14:26

ae Jo 14:26

af Jo 14:26

ag Jo 14:26

ah Jo 14:26

ai Jo 14:26

aj Jo 14:26

ak Jo 14:26

al Jo 14:26

am Jo 14:26

an Jo 14:26

ao Jo 14:26

ap Jo 14:26

aq Jo 14:26

ar Jo 14:26

as Jo 14:26

at Jo 14:26

au Jo 14:26

av Jo 14:26

aw Jo 14:26

ax Jo 14:26

ay Jo 14:26

az Jo 14:26

ba Jo 14:26

bb Jo 14:26

bc Jo 14:26

bd Jo 14:26

be Jo 14:26

bf Jo 14:26

bg Jo 14:26

bh Jo 14:26

bi Jo 14:26

bj Jo 14:26

bk Jo 14:26

bl Jo 14:26

bm Jo 14:26

bn Jo 14:26

bo Jo 14:26

bp Jo 14:26

bq Jo 14:26

br Jo 14:26

ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence.

6 When they therefore were come together, they asked of him, saying, Lord, wilt thou at this time restore ^a again the kingdom to Israel?

7 And he said unto them, It is not for you to know the times or the seasons, which the Father hath put in his own power.

8 But ye shall receive ^b power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye ^c shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth.

9 And when he had spoken these things, while they beheld, he was taken up; and a cloud received him out of their sight.

10 ¶ And while they looked steadfastly toward heaven as he went up, behold, two ^d men stood by them in white apparel;

11 Which also said, Ye men ^e of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into

CHAP. I. Ver. 1—11. Our Lord's ascension.—The excellent M. Claude remarks, that here "the Evangelist (St. Luke) speaks of the things that 'Jesus began both to do and to teach.' Now he says the same of Moses: 'He was mighty in words and in deeds,' (Acts vii. 22.) . . . These two things joined together, doing and teaching, are distinguishing characters of a true prophet, who never separates practice from doctrine." We may remark, however, that there was a great difference between Moses and Jesus, both in their teaching and doing. "Time taught justice, the other mercy; one abased, the other exalted; one terrified, the other comforted. There was also a great difference between the deeds of the one and of the other. Most of the miracles of Moses were miracles of destruction, with which he chastised the Egyptians; but the miracles of Jesus Christ were always miracles of beneficence, raising the dead, giving sight to the blind," &c. (Claude's Essay.)

This practice of teaching and working miracles our Lord continued through the whole course of his ministry, "going about" preaching and "doing good," "until the day that he was taken up" to heaven; which, however, was not until "after that he, through the Holy Ghost, had given commandments unto the apostles whom he had chosen," relative to their conduct after his departure. "To whom also (says Luke) he showed himself alive, after his passion, by many infallible proofs; being seen of them" at different times for "forty days," and at each time speaking to them "of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God." He particularly commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but "wait for the promise of the Father,"—the baptism of the Holy Ghost,—till they should receive it. In one of his last interviews with them (within about ten days of the day of Pentecost) the eleven seem to have agreed to ask him, "Lord, wilt thou at this time restore the kingdom to Israel?" and assume thy throne among them as the Messiah?

As this was a question rather of curiosity than of any practical utility, it receives a gentle reproof instead of a direct answer. "It is not for you to know the times, or the seasons, which the Father hath put (or reserved) in his own power." In this question of the disciples, as Calvin remarks, "There are as many errors as words. They dream of an earthly kingdom—they assign the time, this time—they shut out the Gentiles, restraining the kingdom to Israel. Again, they would fain know what was not revealed; whereas, true wisdom is to stop in learning where Christ, our Master, pauses in teaching. Hence we see the absurdity of aiming to be 'wise above what is written;' or to deal in mysteries, which are either not revealed at all, or but doubtfully and obscurely."

CHAP. I. Ver. 1. The former treatise.—Or, as Logos may be read red. account, history, or narration; which most evidently refers to the Gospel written by St. Luke, which he also inscribed to his friend Theophilus. Ver. 4. Being assembled together.—Margin, "Eating together with them;" and we know that our Lord did eat with his disciples, even after his resurrection. (Luke xxiv. 42.) But the original word seems applicable to any friendly

Our Lord Jesus, though he refused to gratify the curiosity of his apostles, gave them to understand that, in a very short time, they should be properly instructed in their duty; and, by the effusion of the Holy Spirit, be fully qualified to become witnesses for him, not only "in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria," but also among the Gentiles, even unto the uttermost parts of the earth.

We now come to another most interesting scene, that of the Saviour's ascension into heaven. After the conversation above referred to, and the commission given to the apostles, as related by St. Matthew, ch. xxviii. 18—20, which evidently took place at or near Jerusalem, St. Luke informs us he led them out as far as the boundaries of Bethany, which was by the foot of Olivet, or the Mount of Olives, (Luke xxiv. 50.) and there "he blessed them," and probably from that side of the Mount nearest to the village, which was the eastern side, he gradually ascended in a cloud sent down to receive him, while his disciples stood below, lost in wonder and admiration. Dr. R. Richardson, a pious physician, who has lately visited the Holy Land, and particularly this mountain, offers the following excellent remarks on this event:—

"What a dreadful separation—Christ and his disciples! No parting on earth was ever like unto this. Those who enjoyed his visible presence, and heard the heavenly instruction that flowed from his lips, could best describe their bereavement; but they were stunned and speechless; and who shall attempt to take up the theme? It is like the interruption of the divine intercourse in Paradise, the greatest privation that ever was sustained by man. Yet how unlike! The separation in Paradise left wrath and tribulation, and the curse of a broken law; . . . but the separation on the Mount of Olives left peace and blessing, and the promises of consolation—a restoration of the intercourse with God, since Christ had healed up the breach by which they were divided. The eyes of the apostles gaze up into heaven; the eye of the body is speedily obscured in a heavenly pursuit; but for the spirit of the Christian, in this line of vision there is no vanishing point; it shoots along the tract with its ascending Saviour, enters in his presence the mansions of the blessed, and appears, for the first time since the fall, in the presence of a reconciled God. This was an ecstasy not soon to be recovered from; the spirit enjoyed it, but the flesh was unconscious. The apostles stood gazing up into heaven, till two of its messengers in white apparel recalled their spirits to the scene of their terrestrial operations: 'Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him or solemn meeting.—Said he—These words, though not in the original, are evidently implied. See Doddridge.

Ver. 6. Wilt thou at this time restore—From our Lord's promise, that the Holy Spirit should convince the world of sin, &c. (John xvi. 8.) it is possible that the apostles expected that this effect would immediately follow the gift of the Holy Ghost. See Doddridge.

heaven, shall ^a so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven.

12 ¶ Then ^a returned they unto Jerusalem from the mount called Olivet, which is from Jerusalem a sabbath day's journey.

13 And when they were come in, they went up into an upper room, where abode both ^a Peter, and James, and John, and Andrew, Philip, and Thomas, Bartholomew, and Matthew, James the son of Alphaeus, and Simon Zelotes, and Judas the brother of James.

14 These all continued with one accord in prayer and supplication, with the ^a women, and Mary the mother of Jesus, and with his brethren.

15 ¶ And in those days Peter stood up in the midst of the disciples, and said, (the number of the names together were about a hundred and twenty,)

16 Men and brethren, this scripture must needs have been fulfilled, which ^a the Holy Ghost by the mouth of David spake before concerning Judas, which was guide ^a to them that took Jesus.

A. M. 4033
A. D. 29
q. Jo. 14. 13
1 Th. 4. 16
r. Lu. 21. 32
s. Lu. 6. 13.
16
t. Lu. 23. 49, 35
21. 10
u. Ps. 41. 9
Jo. 13. 18
v. Mt. 26. 47
Jo. 13. 3
w. Lu. 6. 16.
x. Mat. 27. 5
- 10
y. 2 Pe. 2. 15
z. Ps. 69. 25.
a. Ps. 109. 8.
b. or, officer,
or, charge
c. Lu. 10. 1, 2
Jo. 15. 22
d. c. 15. 22

17 For he ^a was numbered with us, and had obtained part of this ministry.

18 Now ^a this man purchased a field with the reward ^a of iniquity; and falling headlong, he burst asunder in the midst, and all his bowels gushed out.

19 And it was known unto all the dwellers at Jerusalem; insomuch as that field is called in their proper tongue, Aceldama, that is to say, The field of blood.

20 For it is written in the book of Psalms, Let ^a his habitation be desolate, and let no man dwell therein: and ^a his ^b bishoprick let another take.

21 Wherefore of these men ^a which have companied with us all the time that the Lord Jesus went in and out among us, 22 Beginning from the baptism of John, unto that same day that he was taken up from us, must one be ordained to be a witness with us of his resurrection.

23 And they appointed two, Joseph called Barsabas, who was surnamed Justus, and Matthias.

go into heaven.' He shall not come as the avenging God, that planted the flaming sword to keep the way of the tree of life in Paradise; but as a reconciled and a blessing God, for he was taken up into heaven in the act of bestowing his blessing, and in like manner we are assured he is to return. Such heavenly strains did not fall ineffectual; the apostles worshipped their God and Saviour, and returned to Jerusalem with great joy."—(Dr. Richardson's Travels in the Mediterranean.)

Archbishop Tillotson beautifully "considers the cloud in which Jesus ascended as a designed contrast to the fiery chariot of Elijah; as an emblem of that mildness which distinguished the character and ministry of the one, in opposition to the boldness and rudeness of the other. But we suspect it was chiefly intended to convey an idea of that divine majesty which Jesus chose to exhibit to his disciples, when about to part with them, and to preserve that idea lively upon their minds."

The connexion of this event with the second coming of Jesus, is also a circumstance which exhibits its majesty; a connexion not wholly formed by the present juncture, nor by the authority of the heavenly messengers; but by the purpose of God, and by the repeated affirmations of Jesus: "The Father judgeth no man; but hath committed all judgment to the Son. The Son of man shall come in all his glory, and his holy angels with him." The two events are described to be similar in several circumstances, and they reflect a lustre upon each other. Indeed, nothing could give a more grand idea of the ascension to the admiring spectators, than the following address of the angel: "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye see him go." (Dr. D. Hunter's Observations.)

"Surely as he shall come, so he went," says Bishop Hall: and we know that, when he ascended up on high, he was attended by "thousands of angels, as at Sinai," though only two of them might appear to his disciples. (See Ps. lxxix. 17.) As it was at Sinai, so was it at Olivet, and so shall it be at the last day. Behold, he cometh with clouds—and with ten thousands of his holy ones. (Rev. i. 7. Jude 14.)

Ver. 12—25. Matthias chosen into the Apostleship.—After reading of our Lord's leaving his disciples and ascending up to heaven, we are naturally prepared to hear of their lamentation and regret: but no such thing occurred—"they returned to Jerusalem with great joy." (Luke xlv. 52.) How shall we account for this? During the period of his crucifixion, and until they were satisfied of his resurrection, they seem to have sunk into sullen grief and disappointment—"We trusted

(said they) that it had been he that should have redeemed Israel." How, then, shall we account for this reverse of feeling? Oh, now they found it was him; that he had redeemed them by his death, and, as he had promised, that he had not only risen from the dead, but was gone to take possession of his kingdom; and that not for himself only; but that he was gone "to prepare a place for them, that where he is they might be also."

When arrived at Jerusalem, in an upper room probably of some friend, they all assembled for devotional purposes, together with the holy women, and especially Mary, the mother of Jesus, amounting to 120 persons of both sexes. On one of these occasions Peter stood up and addressed the meeting, relative to the apostasy of Judas, and the necessity of appointing some other person to succeed him in the apostleship. On the character of Judas we have already offered some remarks in our exposition of Mat. xxvii., Luke xxii., and John xiii. We shall endeavour to avoid repetition, but three things now demand our notice—the miserable fate of Judas—the Scriptures which predicted it—and the means by which his place was here supplied:

1. We advert to the death of Judas; but when and where did this take place? It was not till Jesus had been condemned by the Jews, and delivered over to Pilate, when it was very natural to suppose his death certain, (as he had himself predicted,) that Judas repented, and returned the money he had received; but if we may be allowed such a conjecture, he probably did not actually hang himself till the awful hour when "the sun was turned into darkness"—a darkness which made even the heart of a Roman centurion tremble.—This awful phenomenon, which must have thrown the whole city into confusion and alarm, might probably appear, both to him and others, as the approach of the day of judgment, and he might seek to hide himself in death from the presence of his judge. Whether the cord itself, or the projection to which it was fastened, now gave way, we presume not to determine; if his fall were from the walls of the city or the battlements of the temple, as has been supposed, the dreadful effect here mentioned might very naturally occur.

2. The Scriptures here quoted have been already considered in our exposition of Psalms lxxix. and cix. We only here add, that we consider David's imprecations of judgment on his enemies (some of whom, indeed, resembled Judas) as predictive of the judgments which befell Judas, and those priests and Pharisees who acted with him; and not them only, but likewise all those who involved themselves in the same guilt, by their awful imprecations—"His blood be upon us and upon our children!"

Ver. 12. A sabbath day's journey.—(Was seven and a half furlongs from Jerusalem; and the town of Bethany was fifteen. But the first region of journey of mount Olivet, called B-thephage, extended from the city a sabbath day's journey, where the tract called Bethany began, and from this place our Lord ascended. See Lightfoot 1.—Bæstner.

Ver. 13. An upper room.—This was either a room in the temple, or (more likely, as we think) in the house of some friend. Upper rooms were generally large, and adapted for social meetings; and often used, according to Lightfoot, for religious purposes. See note on chap. ii. 16.

Ver. 15. The number of the names.—i. e. of the persons. So Rev. in 4 and xi. 13. Greek.

Ver. 16. Men and brethren.—This phrase, Dr. Campbell remarks, is used thirteen times in this book, and always without the replicative, which he thinks should always be omitted in the translation, together with the word men, which he thinks merely adumbrate. He would translate only "brethren," or "brethren and fathers," as the words may be. See note on chap. iii. 11.

Ver. 18. This man purchased a field.—It is true that he was not the purchaser, but it was purchased with his money, and at his expense. So persons in scripture are often charged with the evils which their conduct had occasioned; as for instance, Zedekiah with the burning of Jerusalem. See xxxviii. 23.

—Falling headlong.—The Greek (propeus) strictly means, to fall forward, or on the face. Rappinius, Esner, Parkhurst.

Ver. 19. And it was known, &c.—Both Doddridge and Torenson consider this as a parenthesis, and the language of the Evangelist. From an ancient inscription, it seems that the fate of Judas became a proverbial form of cursing. See Doddridge.—Irithma.—(Also called the Potter's Field, is situated about half way down the ravine between a mount Zion, and the Hill of Evil Counsel, on the side of the hill, and south of Jerusalem. It is described by Maundrell, (Journey, April 6.) as "a small piece of ground, not above thirty yards long, and half as much broad. One moiety of it is taken up by a square field, twelve yards long, an oblong square cavern, about twenty six paces long, twenty broad, and about twenty feet deep, says Pococke, built for a charnel house. The corpses are let down into it from the top, there being five holes left open for that purpose. Looking down these holes, we could see many bodies under several degrees of decay; from which it may be conjectured, that this grave does not make that quick despatch with the corpses committed to it, which is commonly reported."—Bæstner.

Ver. 20. His bishoprick.—(Episcopate). Our translators, who use Bishopric in the text, put "office," or "charge," in the margin, which Arinapoth gives as the sense of the Hebrew here quoted. A bishop, according to its derivation, he says, is the common name of all over-seers. Hammond shows it was applied to any persons in authority, civil as well as ecclesiastical, and here means "apostolic power."

Ver. 23. Joseph, called Barsabas.—Supposed to be the Joses (for it is the same name) mentioned Mat. xxvii. 56, the brother of at least two apostles. Doddridge.

24 And they prayed, and said, Thou, Lord, which knowest the hearts of all men, show whether of these two thou hast chosen, 25 That he may take part of this ministry and apostleship, from which Judas by transgression fell, that he might go to his own place.

26 And they gave forth their lots, and the lot fell upon Matthias; and he was numbered with the eleven apostles.

CHAPTER II.

^a The apostles, filled with the Holy Ghost, and speaking diverse languages, are admired by some, and derided by others. 14 When Peter disapproved, and showing that the apostles spoke by the power of the Holy Ghost, that Jesus was risen from the dead, ascended into heaven, he pointed down the same Holy Ghost, and it was the Messiah, a man known to them to be approved of God by his miracles, wonders, and signs, and not crucified without his determinate counsel, and foreknowledge: 37 he baptizeth a great number that were converted. 41 Who afterwards in diversity and charity highly converse together: the apostles working many miracles, and God daily increasing his church.

AND when the day of Pentecost ^a was fully come, they ^b were all with one accord in one place.

2 And suddenly there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting.

3 And there appeared unto them cloven

3. We are to notice the means taken to fill up the vacancy which the apostasy and death of Judas made among the apostles. When it is said, "Let another take his bishoprick," the margin reads, consistent with the Psalm from which the words are quoted, "office" instead of bishoprick, (compare with Ps. cix. 8.) for Judas was not a bishop, but an apostle; and the former term can only be applied to him in its general signification, as an "overseer." But by what means was this choice to be determined? It should seem that the eleven, or perhaps the body of believers present, pointed out two persons who had accompanied our Lord and his apostles during the whole of his ministry, and who had doubtless also seen him since his resurrection, as proper persons to fill the vacancy; and then, after solemn prayer to God for his interference, they appealed to the lot, as an ancient and solemn mode of deciding in such cases. By lot, the expiatory goat was chosen, and the other dismissed. (Levit. xvi. 8, 10.) By lot, the land of Canaan was divided, and the Levites had their cities assigned, and their turns of service regulated, &c. The lot was considered by the Jews as an appeal to God, equally solemn with an oath; and was regarded as no less sacred by the Greeks, as appears by various parts of Homer. The primitive church, therefore, forbade games of chance or hazard, as calculated to lessen our reverence for divine Providence; God of himself claiming it as his prerogative to decide the lot: "The lot is cast into the lap, but the whole disposing thereof is of the Lord." (Prov. xvi. 33.) But it is not on this account only that we think idle games of all sorts ought to be discontinued among Christians; it is a waste of time, when we know not that we have an inch of time left; for who can say that he has yet an hour to live! And as to relaxation from business or study, reading and the liberal arts afford far better relaxation, without either debasing the mind or wasting time—for they improve both.

CHAP. II. Ver. 1—13. The gift of tongues on the day of Pentecost.—The next thing to be observed, (says Pres. Edwards,) is the enduing the apostles and others with the extraordinary and miraculous gifts of the Holy Ghost; such as the gift of tongues, the gift of healing of prophecy, &c. The Spirit of God was poured out in great abundance in this respect: so that not only ministers [of the Gospel] but a great number of [private] Christians through the world, were endued with them, both old and young; not only officers and more ho-

Ver. 21. Thou, Lord.—Borgh (a learned layman) gives several reasons for believing that this prayer was addressed personally to the Lord Jesus, but that the case should be doubtful, from the same language being indiscriminately addressed to both the Father and the Son, as with us a most decisive argument for the divinity of the latter. "That Lord here means the Lord Jesus, seems evident from verses 21, 22. It is the usual appellation, moreover, which the book of Acts gives to the Saviour." Seward's Appeal.

Ver. 25. That he might go to his own place.—"I, we are right," says Prof. Townsend, "in understanding the language of the New Testament in the same sense as it was understood by those to whom it was addressed, and no canon of criticism seems more certain. We must adopt the common rendering of this passage. It was a common sentiment among the Jews, that 'he that betrayeth an Israelite hath no part in the world to come.' And Each feet carries a similar expression from Each Part, in No. xiv. 25." Balaam went to his own place, i. e. into hell." After various other quotations, Mr. T. adds,

"After such evidence, we may agree with Doddridge, that the interpretation of Hammond, Le Clerc, and Ecumenius, is very unnatural, when they explain it of a success or going into the place of Judas." New Testament Arrangement.

Ver. 26. The lot fell.—According to Girotto, the method was, to put their lots into two urns, one of which contained the names of Joseph and Matthias, and the other a blank, and the word "apostle." In drawing these out of the urns, the blank came up with the name of Joseph, and that on which was written "apostle," with Matthias—Orient. Cust. No. 445. On the lawfulness of Lots, see Pike's Cases of Conscience, No. 3.

CHAP. II. Ver. 1. Pentecost—Or feast of weeks, was observed the 50th day after the 1st of the feast of unleavened bread, which, being a week of weeks, or 49 days, occasioned its being called feast of weeks, one of the line great Jewish festivals, in which all the males were required to appear before God at the tabernacle or temple. It was a festival of thanks for the harvest, which tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them.

4 And they were all ^d filled with the Holy Ghost, and began ^e to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance.

5 And there were dwelling at Jerusalem Jews, devout men, out of every nation under heaven.

6 Now ^f when this was noised abroad, the multitude came together, and were ^g confounded, because that every man heard them speak in his own language.

7 And they were all amazed and marvelled, saying one to another, Behold, are not all these which speak ^h Galileans?

8 And how hear we every man in our own tongue, wherein we were born?

9 Parthians, and Medes, and Elamites, and the dwellers in Mesopotamia, and in Judea, and Cappadocia, in Pontus, and Asia,

10 Phrygia, and Pamphylia, in Egypt, and in the parts of Libya about Cyrene, and strangers of Rome, Jews and proselytes,

11 Cretes and Arabians, we do hear them

nourable persons, but the meaner sort of persons, servants and handmaids, agreeable to Joel's prophecy, of which the Apostle Peter takes notice, that it is accomplished in this dispensation. . . . This was a great means of the success of the Gospel in that age, and of establishing the Christian church in all parts of the world; and [that] not only in that age, but in all ages to the end of the world: for Christianity being by this means established through so great a part of the known world by miracles, it was after that more easily continued by tradition: and then by means of these extraordinary gifts of the Holy Ghost, the apostles, and others, were enabled to write the New Testament, to be an infallible rule of faith and manners to the church to the end of the world. Furthermore, these miracles stand recorded in those writings, as a standing proof and evidence of the truth of the Christian Religion to all ages." (Hist. of Redemp.)

The manner in which this miracle was effected next demands our notice. When the day of Pentecost was fully come, that is, fifty days after the Passover, and being the first day of the week, the apostles, with doubtless all the disciples which could possibly attend, "were all with one accord in one place," which was probably the upper room before mentioned, (chap. i. 13.) when suddenly there came a sound from heaven, as of a mighty rushing wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting, and there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, resembling a divided flame, and it (i. e. one of these flames) "abode upon each of them." The tongues being emblematic of the gift of languages with which they were now endowed—the wind being our Lord's established emblem of the Holy Spirit, (John iii. 8,) and the fire expressive of the extraordinary zeal and energy with which they were henceforward animated.

An event like this was not to be long kept secret. The "mighty rushing wind" probably first excited attention to the place, when the tongues, i. e. fire (or divided flame) would naturally increase the surprise of the spectators; and when the pious Jews were collected together, who came to the feast from "every nation under heaven"—(for so widely were the Jews scattered)—and heard the apostles speak, each "in his own language," they were "all amazed, and marvelled, saying, Behold! are not all these which speak Galileans?" and how hear we every man in our own tongue wherein we were communicated immediately after the passover.—Fully come—The day began or the evening preceding; but on the morning following it was fully come.—In one place—This place has been much disputed, many supposing that they obtained an apartment of the temple; but we conceive that they neither dared to ask such a favour, nor would they by any means be so lodged, as the y lay at this time under the charge of having stolen the body of their Master. See Mat. xxvi. 47—45.

Ver. 3. Cloven tongues—i. e. (says Doddridge) "bright flames in a pyramical form, which were so arted as to terminate in several points, and thereby to afford a proper emblem of the marvellous effect—a miraculous diversity of languages."

Ver. 4. With other tongues—i. e. with foreign tongues, to which they had not been accustomed.

Ver. 5. Dwelling at Jerusalem—i. e. during the feast.—Of every nation under heaven—This is evidently spoken hyperbolically, and is exactly parallel to Dent. ii. 25. The western hemisphere, it may be recollected, was not then discovered; but there were individuals present from all the countries here named, and probably many more.

Ver. 6. When this was noised abroad—Greek, "When the voice was made." i. e. when it was reported.—Every man heard them speak in his own language—From this expression, some have supposed that the miracle consisted in these different persons hearing in their own language what was spoken only in the Syro-Chaldee, or vulgar Hebrew of that age. But this, besides unbelief, the miracle more than twenty fold, would be the gift of ears, and not of tongues.

Ver. 9. In their own—Where the popular dialect was thought to have been very different from that of Galilee.

Ver. 10. Of Rome, Jews and proselytes.—"It appears from Josephus, &c. that great numbers of Jews dwelt at Rome about this time, and made many proselytes."—Doddridge.

speaking in our tongues the wonderful works of God.

12 And they were all amazed, and were in doubt, saying one to another, What meaneth this?

13 Others mocking, said, These men are full of new wine.

14 But Peter, standing up with the eleven, lifted up his voice, and said unto them, Ye men of Judea, and all ye that dwell at Jerusalem, be this known unto you, and hearken to my words:

15 For these are not drunken, as ye suppose, seeing it is but the third hour of the day.

16 But this is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel;

17 And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh: and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams:

18 And on my servants and on my handmaidens I will pour out in those days of my Spirit; and they shall prophesy:

19 And I will show wonders in heaven above, and signs in the earth beneath: blood, and fire, and vapour of smoke:

20 The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before that great and notable day of the Lord come:

21 And it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved.

22 Ye men of Israel, hear these words: Jesus

A. M. 4033
A. D. 29
1 Cor. 12, 10,
28
1 Pet. 17, 30
k 1 Th. 5, 7
1 Joel 2, 28
32
Joel 4, 13
Eze. 39, 27
u e 21, 4, 9, 1 Cor. 12, 10
o Ma. 13, 21
2 Pet. 3, 7, 10
p Ps. 86, 5
Ro. 10, 13
1 Cor. 12
He 4, 16

q Jo. 14, 19, 31
He 2, 4
r Jo. 15, 21
s 1 Cor. 12, 22, 31, 34
e 3, 16
t e 5, 70
u Ma. 27, 1
v Lu. 21, 1
e 1 Cor. 12, 34
1 Cor. 12, 34
e 1 Cor. 12, 34
1 Th. 1, 10
He 13, 20
1 Pet. 1, 21
w Lu. 10, 18
x Ps. 16, 8, 11
y Lu. 10, 18
z 2 Cor. 12, 3
a 2 Cor. 12, 3 13
b He 6, 17
c 1 Pet. 1, 11, 12

of Nazareth, a man approved of God among you by miracles and wonders and signs, which God did by him in the midst of you, as ye yourselves also know:

23 Him, being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain:

24 Whom God hath raised up, having loosed the pains of death: because it was not possible that he should be holden of it.

25 For David speaketh concerning him, I foresaw the Lord always before my face, for he is on my right hand, that I should not be moved:

26 Therefore did my heart rejoice, and my tongue was glad; moreover also my flesh shall rest in hope:

27 Because thou wilt not leave my soul in hell, neither wilt thou suffer thy Holy One to see corruption.

28 Thou hast made known to me the ways of life; thou shalt make me full of joy with thy countenance.

29 Men and brethren, let me freely speak unto you of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, and his sepulchre is with us unto this day.

30 Therefore being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne;

31 He seeing this before spake of the resur-

born—the wonderful works of God?—It is no wonder, therefore, that they were amazed, and said one to another, "What meaneth this?" But at the same time that the more religious Jews were thus struck with admiration, others, doubtless "of the baser sort," exclaimed, "These men are full of new (or sweet) wine;" that is, they are intoxicated. Thus it is that strangers to vital religion, burlesque it under the name of fanaticism and enthusiasm:—"They speak evil of things which they know not," (Jude 19), nor can they understand till enlightened from the same divine source.

Various opinions have been advanced respecting this miracle of Pentecost. The most rational, and the most general is, that the gift of tongues lasted during the ministry of the apostles, and was gradually withdrawn towards the close of the first century; but on this subject we take leave to transcribe the following passage from Mr. Prebendary Toutensend's New Testament arranged.

"The extraordinary gifts of the Holy Spirit being vouchsafed for one especial purpose only, the benefit of the Christian church, as soon as that church was established, and the canon of Scripture completed, they were gradually withdrawn; while the ordinary operations, without which no child of Adam can be renewed into holiness, are to be continued for ever, 'even unto the end of the world.' This was the consoling and gracious promise our Lord gave to his disciples before he was visibly parted from them, . . . 'Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world.' This most merciful promise was at first given to the apostles, and through their ministry to the Universal Church; Christ himself having appointed outward means of grace, by which he has engaged to maintain a constant communion with his church, through the operations of the Holy Ghost. . . .

"Every amiable feeling and affection, every virtue, and every grace, are the fruits of the Holy Spirit. He alone, by a secret and internal operation, changes and transforms the spirit of our mind, and enlarges and improves every faculty of our soul. . . . 'He,' to use the words of the eloquent Barrow,

Ver. 13. New wine—Hammond and Doddridge "sweet wine." Plutarch says, the ancients had methods of preserving their wine so long sweet, and that they were very intoxicating. Doddridge, Calmet. These men alluded probably to the wine provided for the feast.

Ver. 15. The third hour—That is, about eight in the morning. See note on chap. i.

Ver. 19. Tirell shall wonder.—See Mat. xxv.

Ver. 20. Notable—Doddridge, "illustrious."

Ver. 23. Foreknowledge—Grotius, as well as Beza, observes, that prophecies must here signify decrees, and Esner has shown that it has the same signification in approved Greek writers. Doddridge.

Ver. 25. I foresaw—Ps. xvi. 8, "I set." Doddridge, "I have regarded the Lord as always." &c.

Ver. 27. My soul in hell?—The apostle Peter here, and Paul in Acts xiii. 35—37, explain in so words of David, found in the 16th Psalm, as applicable exclusively to our Saviour Christ. In the present translation there is some ambiguity. The word rendered Hell is in the Hebrew Sheol, and means both the grave and the invisible world. Our translators frequently render it by the former word, as Gen. xii. 35; xiv. 31. 1 Kings ii. 9. Job xvi. 13, 14, and

"sweetly warmeth our cold affections, inflaming our hearts with devotion towards God; he quickeneth us, and encourageth us to approach the throne of grace, breeding in us faith and humble confidence, prompting in us fit matter of request, becoming our advocate and intercessor for the good success of our prayers."

Act. 14—36. The Apostle Peter's sermon on the day of Pentecost.—Without repeating any part of this extraordinary discourse, we shall offer two or three general remarks.

1. The texts on which St. Peter discourses have been already noticed in our exposition on the second chapter of Joel, and of the 16th and 119th Psalms. It may be seen in our notes, that the Jews themselves applied the former to the days of the Messiah, which, as we have repeatedly remarked, they called the latter or last days; and one in particular asserts, "In the days of the Messiah all the house of Israel shall prophesy, as it is said in Joel ii. 28." But it is on the inspired authority of our apostle only that we refer the latter to him, for it does not appear that the Jews so understood it: we are not, however, to go to the avowed enemies of our Lord to learn the interpretations of the prophecies respecting him and his kingdom, though, at the same time, we may justifiably quote them when consistent with the New Testament, as concessions in his favour.

2. This extraordinary effusion of the Holy Spirit, accompanied with the marvellous gift of tongues, is here stated as the fulfilment, not only of Old Testament prophecies, but of our Lord's promise of sending them another Comforter.—"Having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, he hath shed forth this which ye now see and hear," (Ver. 33). And in this promise both the ordinary and extraordinary gifts of the Spirit must be included; since we find that, while the apostles were by the latter enabled to address the people in their various languages, the great truths which they delivered were applied with a saving efficacy to their minds, so that no less than 3000 persons were converted under this sermon.

3. We see how well adapted are the means used by Divine affliction, as here, Job xvi. 6. Psalms ix. 17. But it is generally admitted to include (like Heaven) the invisible world in general. Bishop Pearson says, "I apprehend that the first intention of putting these words into the Creed was only to express the burial of our Saviour, or the descent of his body into the grave." It is most certain, however, that the phrase was afterwards explained, even by the Christian fathers, of Christ's descent into the place of punishment. See 1 Peter ii. 19. "But that it was actually so, or that the apostle intended so much," the Bishop confesses is "not manifest." See also Professor Watson, who contends, "that Christ descended into hell, (the place of torment) is no where expressed, affirmed in Scripture, nor in the most ancient creeds. The creeds which mentioned the descent were generally silent with respect to the burial, nor was it without some mistake that both were afterwards joined together." Dr. J. P. Smith renders the first clause of Ps. xvi. 10, "Thou wilt not leave my life in the grave;" which nearly corresponds with Dr. Kennicott's version, "Thou wilt not abandon my life to the grave."—Hell, and hell, from the Spanish hulan or hulan, to hide, or from hul, a cavern, though now used only for the place of torment, originally denoted the concealed or unseen place of the dead in general.—Engster.

Ver. 20. That of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would rection of Christ, that his soul was not left in hell, neither his flesh did see corruption.

32 This ^d Jesus hath God raised up, whereof ^e we all are witnesses.

33 ^f Therefore being by the right hand of God exalted, and having ^g received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, he hath shed forth ^h this, which ye now see and hear.

34 For David is not ascended into the heavens: but he saith himself, The Lord ⁱ said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, 35 Until I make thy foes thy footstool.

36 Therefore let all the house ^j of Israel know assuredly, that ^k God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both ^l Lord and ^m Christ.

37 ¶ Now when they heard this, they were pricked ⁿ in their heart, and said unto Peter and to the rest of the apostles, Men and brethren, what ^o shall we do?

38 Then Peter said unto them, ^p Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.

39 For the promise ^q is unto you, and to your children, and ^r to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call.

40 And with many other words did he testify and exhort, saying, Save yourselves from this untoward generation.

41 ¶ Then they that gladly received his word were baptized: and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls.

42 And ^s they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers.

43 And fear came upon every soul: and many ^t wonders and signs were done by the apostles.

44 And all that believed were together, and ^u had all things common;

45 And sold their possessions and goods, and ^v parted them to all men, as every man had need.

46 And they, continuing daily with one accord in the temple, and breaking bread ^w from Providence to effect the designed end. The end was to convert the nations, the means employed was preaching; but as it was quite useless to preach to any in an unknown tongue; so, in the then state of learning, it must have been the work of many years, for the preachers to acquire a knowledge of all the languages of those whom they would have to address. At present the case is somewhat different. Such facilities have been afforded for acquiring languages, that miraculous powers seem no longer necessary; unless it be considered as a miracle that God has raised up men with such extraordinary abilities for acquiring new languages, as in the instances of Carey, Morrison, Martin, Lee, and others; who have already been able to translate the Scriptures into the languages of more than half the globe. This circumstance, in connexion with many others, as the invention and recent improvements in printing and navigation, has already performed wonders, and shows in how many unexpected ways, God is able to effect his designs, and fulfil his promises.

4. This leads us to notice a remark of the Apostle Peter in the sermon now before us, relative to the mysterious fulfilment of the divine councils in the sufferings and death of the Lord Jesus. He was "delivered" up to his enemies "by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God," as himself said to the Roman governor, "Thou couldest have no power against me, except it were given thee from above." (John xix. 11.) But being so delivered, they took him, and "by wicked hands" he was "crucified and slain;" so that neither God's foreknowledge, nor decree, in any degree lessened the wickedness of those who acted in this dreadful tragedy. They fulfilled the divine purposes unintentionally; yea, contrary to their intention; and were fighting against God with all their might and malice, while (poor, feeble creatures) they were in every instance fulfilling his decrees. "He doeth according to his will in the army of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth." (Dan. iv. 35.)

Ver. 37-47. The happy effects of Peter's sermon.—Though we would be far from condemning a sermon from its not producing any sensibly good effects upon the hearers, for our Lord himself often "stretched forth his hands in vain;" yet when a sermon is eminently blessed, as God seldom blesses the ministry which he disapproves, it seems justifiable for preachers themselves to look back on such discourses as models for their own future ministry. In looking at Peter's sermon in this point of view, the following particulars strike us as its prominent characteristics.

1. It is full of Christ:—His divine mission—his holy character—his extraordinary powers—his vicarious sufferings—his meritorious death—his triumphant resurrection, and exaltation to the right hand of the Majesty on high, where he receives the adoration of his people, and whence he bestows his blessings on them. 2. It is full of the doctrine of divine influences—that Holy Spirit promised by the Saviour, and now poured out upon his hearers; and that, as every other blessing, by the gift of the Father and the Son. 3. These and every other point of doctrine incidentally stated, are urged with energy, and in reference to its practical tendency and effects. Thus, for instance, the death of Christ is not merely a fact; it is a crime which the preacher charges home upon the consciences of his hearers: "Him ye have crucified and slain, and that with wicked hands." Again, the Spirit is poured out from on high. "This also is a fact; but it is not to be considered as a fact only. Here are divine influences poured around, and every man is invited to partake of them. "If any man thirst, let him come and drink." Nor is this all: the Spirit is compared, not only to a spring rising up unto everlasting life, but to a stream perpetually flowing; and it is required of every one that partakes of these blessings, that he should himself labour, by prayer and exhortation, to communicate them to others; for the promise is to you and to your children, and to all that are afar off—either in respect of situation or date—though it be to the end of the world, or to the end of time.

Nor is this all: there is a harmony in these truths that connects and combines them in the Christian system. "If you stand self-convicted as murderers of the Lord of Glory, repent, fall before him, and implore his mercy. He prayed for his murderers on the cross, and you may claim an interest in that prayer. Present yourselves to be baptized in his name, and you shall receive remission of sins, and the gift of the Holy Ghost. For whosoever calleth on the name of the Lord [Jesus] shall [through grace] be saved."

Such is the strain in which they were addressed, and what was the effect? They were "pricked," or pierced, to the heart, and cried out, "Men, brethren! what shall we do?" The advice and encouragement which Peter gave them, we have already considered; but we have only an outline of his discourse; for "with many other words did he exhort [them,] saying, Save yourselves," or rather, "Be ye saved, from this untoward or perverse generation;" that is, from the awful judgments about to come upon them.

Such were the wonderful effects of Peter's sermon, or rather of the divine influences which attended it, that nearly three thousand persons were thereby converted, and united to the church by Christian baptism. As, however, Peter could speak but in one language at a time, and was evidently addressing the Jews of Jerusalem in the Syriac tongue, it is well conjectured by Dr. Doddridge, that other apostles or disciples might be at the same time employed either in translating Peter's sermon, or in giving similar addresses to the Jews of other countries, raise up Christ) to sit on his throne.—The words here placed between brackets are wanting in the Alexandrian and Ephrem MSS., and in the Cambridge by correction; also in the Vulgate, Syriac, and other ancient versions. Boothroyd reads, therefore, after Griesbach, "That of the fruit of his loins should one sit on his throne."

Ver. 33. By—Hammond and Doddridge, "To the right hand."—See and hear—That is, witness the effects of.

Ver. 34. David is not ascended—i. e. in his body, which is still entombed. Jerome mentions the remains of David's sepulchre, and a place is shown as such, even to this day. —The Lord said, &c.—Ps. cx. 1.

Ver. 35. Thy foes thy footstool.—It was customary for conquerors formerly to put their feet on the necks of the vanquished. Josh. x. 24. In the close of the negotiations, after a late expedition to Algiers, the Dey refused to give up two prisoners, until at length he was obliged, and then he said, "His foot is on my neck, and what can I do." Orient. Lit. No. 1386.

Ver. 37. They were pricked in their heart.—Doddridge, "pierced to the heart." If Christ and his Apostles believed and taught the salvation of all men, how account for the fact, that their preaching so much alarmed the Jews and awakened the enmity of wicked men? The fact is unquestionable. Christ rarely preached a sermon, which did not excite uneasiness in the minds of sinners, and send them away dissatisfied and murmuring against the preacher. The same is true of the Apostles. Under their preaching sinners were "pricked in their hearts."

Ver. 38. Repent, and be baptized.—They could only prove the sincerity of their repentance by a public profession, of which baptism was the appointed sign.

Ver. 39. As many as the Lord our God shall call—That is, all of every age and country, to whom the gospel shall be sent.

Ver. 40. Save yourselves—Dr. "Be ye saved." Drs. J. Edwards and Doddridge.

Ver. 41. Three thousand souls—i. e. persons; so ver. 43.

Ver. 42. Were together.—Doddridge, "In the same;" certainly not in the same room, nor the same house, but in a quarter of the town probably where their friends chiefly resided.

Ver. 43. And sold their possessions.—That this unbounded liberality was not commanded by St. Peter, is evident from his address to Ananias, chap. v. 4. And that it was not intended as a precedent, is equally clear from all the Epistles, in which frequent mention is made of the distinction between rich and poor, &c.—Townsend's New Test. Art.

Ver. 46. They continuing daily—That is, they daily visited the temple. —Breaking bread from house to house—Lightfoot, Peerson, and others, understand this phrase, "breaking bread," as signifying the Eucharist, or Lord's Supper; but the words following, "did eat their meat," &c. strongly incline us to refer the expression to their social meals, as in Luke xxiv. 35. So Doddridge. The learned Joseph Mede translates the Greek phrase (kai' oikon), on the house, meaning, in the upper room; and supposes that, after the death of Christ, the apostles held their religious meetings in the room where Jesus had kept the Passover &c.—that there our Lord repeatedly met with

A. M. 4053
A. D. 29
d ver. 24.
e 1m 24. 48.
f c. 5. 31.
g 1m 29.
h 1m 10, 17.
i 1c. 4.
j c. 10. 15.
k 1c. 18.
l 1c. 10. 1.
m 2c. 22. 44.
n 2c. 13. 1.
o 2c. 35.
p 1c. 22. 35.
q 2c. 9. 1.
r 1c. 17.
s 1c. 17.
t 1c. 17.
u 1c. 17.
v 1c. 17.
w 1c. 17.
x 1c. 17.
y 1c. 17.
z 1c. 17.

house to house, did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart, ¶ Praising God, and having ² favour with all the people. And ³ the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved.

CHAPTER III.

1 Peter preaching to the people that came to see a lame man, restored to his feet, 12. This miracle the people just to have been wrought by his or John's own power, or both Jesus, but by God, and thus Son Jesus, not through faith in his name. 14. We add reprehending them for crucifying Jesus. 17. Which because they did it through ignorance, and that they were fulfilled (as, by the same course), and the scriptures, 19. let us rebuke them by repentance and faith to seek forgiveness of their sins, and salvation in the same Jesus.

NOW Peter and John went up together into the temple at ^a the hour of prayer, being the ninth hour.

2 And a certain man lame from his mother's womb was carried, whom they laid daily at the gate ^b of the temple which is called Beautiful, to ask alms of them that entered into the temple;

3 Who seeing Peter and John about to go into the temple asked an alms.

4 And Peter, fastening his eyes upon him with John, said, Look on us.

5 And he gave heed unto them, expecting to receive something of them.

6 Then Peter said, Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee: In ^c the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk.

7 And he took him by the right hand, and lifted him up: and immediately his feet and ankle bones received strength.

who would naturally form themselves into different parties, according to their different languages.

What follows also evidently refers to successive days—"they continued steadfast in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship; which seems to imply, that they met with some temptations to the contrary, probably from unbelieving Jews. Commentators are not exactly agreed, whether by breaking of bread is here to be understood the observance of the Lord's Supper, or their eating together in a friendly way at their devotional assemblies, to which the words following strongly incline us: "they did eat their meat with gladness," &c. Their meals seem to have been provided at the common charge.

As to the community of goods, we apprehend it originated in the poverty of some, and the benevolence of others. Many poor Jews and proselytes who came from far, and were detained by the extraordinary things they saw, and desirous to see and hear more, probably found their money exhausted, and knew not what to do, as there was no hope of their receiving from the priests, who had the command of the public treasury, any of that friendly assistance or accommodation which had at other times been granted: the more wealthy converts therefore generously came forward, and shared their property with them; and those who had not money sold their goods, and in some cases, as we shall presently see, their possessions or estates, to enable them to supply the necessities of their poorer brethren. Thus did they eat together as they needed, "with gladness and singleness (or simplicity) of heart; praising God, and having favour with all the people; and the Lord added to the church daily such as should be," or rather, "such as were saved," by the grace of God, "from the wrath to come."

CHAP. III. Ver. 1-11. A lame man healed by Peter and John, in the name of Jesus.—Peter and John going up to the temple at the usual hour of evening prayer, which at this season (the latter end of May) must have been about four o'clock in the afternoon, they found there a poor lame man, whose friends daily carried him to lie by the side of the beautiful brazen gate which Herod had presented to the temple, to receive the alms of the charitable and religious. Peter and John performed on him a perfect cure, as the Lord Jesus had done some time before on the paralytic and the impotent man at Bethesda, in like circumstances.

On this miracle we remark:—1. That there is no ground for the infidel insinuation, that the apostles enriched themselves by the sale of the property of their converts; for, immediately after that sale, we see that two of the chief of them had neither gold nor silver. 2. We notice the similarity between this in-them, and that there they assembled on the day of Pentecost, and afterwards. See Townsend's New Test. Arr.

Ver. 47. Such as should be saved—Doddridge, "Those who were saved." Dr. J. Edwards, "The saved."

CHAP. III. Ver. 1. Neither—[Rather, "at the same time," or "at that time," referring to the time when the transactions took place, which are mentioned at the close of the preceding chapter.]—The ninth hour—i. e. (twist not about four in the afternoon). "The Jews divided the time, from the rising to the setting of the sun, into twelve hours, which were consequently, at different times of the year, of unequal length. The third hour was (therefore) the middle space between sunrise and noon." (Doddridge) The ninth was consequently the medium point between noon and sunset, which at this time of the year (the latter end of May, when the sun does not set till four

A. M. 463.

A. D. 29.

x. Lu. 2. 52.

Ro. 14. 15.

y. e. 5. 11.

H. 24.

p. Ps. 55. 17.

D. 6. 10.

h. Ju. 9. 8.

c. e. 110.

d. l. 35. 6.

e. Ju. 10. 23.

e. 5. 12.

f. 2. Co. 3. 5.

g. Mt. 22. 32.

h. e. 5. 30. 31.

i. Ju. 17. 1.

h. 1. 20.

i. 19. 29. 31.

H. 2. 9.

Ro. 1. 5. 18.

j. Ju. 19. 15.

k. Mt. 27. 17.

l. Lu. 23. 16.

m. 23.

n. Ps. 16. 10.

Lu. 1. 35.

m. e. 7. 52.

22. 14.

n. or, ou-

ther.

Jo. 1. 1.

Lu. 5. 11.

o. Mt. 28. 2.

Ep. 1. 30.

p. e. 2. 2.

8 And he leaping ^d up stood, and walked, and entered with them into the temple, walking, and leaping, and praising God.

9 And all the people saw him walking and praising God:

10 And they knew that it was he which sat for alms at the Beautiful gate of the temple: and they were filled with wonder and amazement at that which had happened unto him.

11 And as the lame man which was healed held Peter and John, all the people ran together unto them in the porch ^e that is called Solomon's, greatly wondering.

12 ¶ And when Peter saw it, he answered unto the people, Ye men of Israel, why marvel ye at this? or why look ye so earnestly on us, as though by our own ^f power or holiness we had made this man to walk?

13 The God ^g of Abraham, and of Isaac, and of Jacob, the God of our ^h fathers, hath glorified ⁱ his Son Jesus; whom ye delivered up, and denied ^j him in the presence of Pilate, when he ^k was determined to let him go.

14 But ye denied the Holy ^l One and the ^m Just, and desired a murderer to be granted unto you;

15 And killed the ⁿ Prince of life, whom God hath raised ^o from the dead; whereof ^p we are witnesses.

16 And his name through faith in his name hath made this man strong, whom ye see and hath made this man strong, whom ye see and touch, and some wrought by our Lord Jesus, particularly the paralytic in Mat. ix., and the impotent man in John v., to both whom our Lord addressed the same words—"Arise, take up thy bed and walk!" and was instantly obeyed. 2. Yet we may remark also a striking difference in the manner of address. Jesus wrought all his miracles in his own name; but the apostles in his name—"In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, (saith Peter,) rise up and walk." How shall we account for this, but on the principle of our Lord's divinity? It is the duty of a mere creature, however elevated, to render glory to his Maker; and of a sinner to render honour to his Saviour. Peter and John did both, and were particularly careful to take no honour to themselves: "Why look ye upon us, (saith Peter,) as though by our own power we had made this man to walk?" But when did Jesus express a fear lest his disciples should do him too much honour? 4. We remark the attachment of this poor healed cripple to the instruments of his cure, and his gratitude to the author. He held Peter and John that they might not leave him, and seems to have been active in collecting the people around him, that they might see what God had done for him; and at the same time, that they might not confine their attention to the instruments, he "entered with them into the temple, walking, leaping, and praising God." (Ver. 9.) While we feel due gratitude to those by whom we receive our blessings, at the same time we should not forget the great Author from whom they ultimately come.

Ver. 12-26. Peter's second sermon.—What we have said respecting Peter's first sermon, in the preceding chapter, will in great measure apply to this. He was a most ardent and zealous preacher, and his heart was full of the great subject of his ministry, "Christ, and him crucified." The present discourse, as the reader will observe, arises out of the miracle wrought on the man lame from his birth, and the amazement excited by that event: and from the important circumstance of the miracle being wrought in "the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth," he presses upon them the enormity of their guilt, in having rejected, persecuted, and finally crucified this illustrious person; for, after all, had it not been for the clamour of the multitude, "Crucify him, crucify him," Pilate would certainly have released him, (Ver. 13.) And their guilt in this is highly aggravated by the consideration that the man whom they preferred, and of whom they obtained the release, was a notorious murderer, (Luke xxiii. 19.) who was him whom they virtually crucified, was the Author and Prince of Life—the Captain of our Salvation. (See note, ver. 15.)

The apostle, indeed, admits that they sinned through ignorance, but that they assembled on the day of Pentecost, and afterwards. See Townsend's New Test. Arr.

Ver. 2. The gate called Beautiful—This gate, which was added by Herod to the Court of the Gentiles, was 30 cubits high, and 15 broad, and made of Corinthian brass.

Ver. 13. A murderer—Gr. "a man, a murderer." So Luke ix. 7. "a man, a sinner." xiv. 19. (Gr.) "a man, a prophet."

Ver. 15. The Prince of life—The original term is variously used; for Prince, chap. v. 31; Captain, Heb. x. 10; Author, Heb. x. 12.

Ver. 16. And his name, through faith, &c.—That is, by virtue of his name, and through faith therein, meaning, the faith not only of the apostles, but also of the man on whom the miracle was wrought, who himself doubtless became a believer in the Lord Jesus.

know; yea, the faith which is by him hath given him this perfect soundness in the presence of you all.

17 And now, brethren, I wot that through ignorance ye did it, as did also your rulers.

18 But those things, which God before had showed by the mouth of all his prophets, that Christ should suffer, he hath so fulfilled.

19 Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord;

20 And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you:

21 Whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began.

22 For Moses truly said unto the fathers, A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me; him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you.

23 And it shall come to pass, that every soul, which will not hear that prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people.

24 Yea, and all the prophets from Samuel and those that follow after, as many as have spoken, have likewise foretold of these days.

25 Ye are the children of the prophets, and of the covenant which God made with our fathers, saying unto Abraham, And in thy seed shall all the kindreds of the earth be blessed.

26 Unto you first God, having raised up his Son Jesus, sent him to bless you, in turning away every one of you from his iniquities.

CHAPTER IV.

1 The rulers of the Jews offended with Peter's sermon, 4 (though thousands of the people were converted that heard the word,) imprisoned him and John. 5 After, upon examination, Peter boldly avouching the large man to be healed by the name of Jesus, as that by the same Jesus only we must be eternally saved, 13 they command him and John to preach no more in that name, adding also threatening, 24 whereupon the church fleeth to prayer. 31 And God, by moving the place where they were assembled, testified that he heard their prayer, confirming the church with the gift of the Holy Ghost, and with mutual love and charity.

AND as they spake unto the people, the priests, and the captain of the temple, and the Sadducees, came upon them,

2 Being grieved that they taught the people, and preached through Jesus the resurrection from the dead.

3 And they laid hands on them, and put them in hold unto the next day: for it was now even-tide.

4 Howbeit many of them which heard the word believed; and the number of the men was about five thousand.

5 ¶ And it came to pass on the morrow, that their rulers, and elders, and scribes,

6 And Annas the high priest, and Caiaphas, and John, and Alexander, and as many as were of the kindred of the high priest, were gathered together at Jerusalem.

7 And when they had set them in the midst, they asked, By what power, or by what name, have ye done this?

8 Then Peter, filled with the Holy Ghost, said unto them, Ye rulers of the people, and elders of Israel,

9 If we this day be examined of the good deed done to the impotent man, by what means he is made whole;

rance, for, "had they known, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory;" but it was a most culpable ignorance; for they shut their eyes against evidence, arising both from Scripture and from fact. They were grossly ignorant of the writings of their own prophets, and they were wilfully blind with respect to the miracles wrought before their own eyes. The Saviour, however, had prayed for his murderers, who knew not what they did: there was, therefore, "hope in Israel concerning this matter." "You have the Scriptures of the prophets still before you, which you have fulfilled in his cruel sufferings and death; and you have the evidence of miracles renewed, which, being wrought in his name, give no less evidence to the divinity of his character than if you saw them wrought by himself."

Upon these grounds, therefore, does the apostle urge his hearers to repentance, that their sins might be blotted out, and that "times of refreshment" and seasons of consolation might be experienced by them, through the effusion of the Holy Spirit, as refreshing to the soul as cooling breezes to the body, which are peculiarly desirable in warm climates. Nor are such seasons to be confined to the apostolic age, since ecclesiastical history records many similar periods of divine influence, (as, for instance, the Reformation,) and we look forward to many more prior to his second coming, to regulate all the affairs of his kingdom upon earth, and to judge the world in righteousness.

This coming of Jesus Christ, first to save and then to judge the world, God had predicted by the mouth of all his holy prophets, from Samuel to John the Baptist; and, as he has accomplished the former, so certainly will he do the latter. In the mean time the great object of this glorious dispensation, the Messiah, is to free them from their iniquities, first, by the atonement offered in his death; and, secondly, by the gift of his Holy Spirit, to renew their hearts and minds.

Upon this discourse of Peter we offer only one farther observation, namely, that it affords a fine model of the most direct and pointed application to the consciences of his hearers, blended with the most affectionate solicitude for their salvation. Here many fail. Some thunder the denunciations of God's wrath against sinners, but they merely terrify them; others, on the contrary, are so fearful of offending, that they deal only in gentle admonitions and consolations. The former probe the wound, but apply no balm: the latter apply the balm before the wound is probed. The latter fault may proceed from want of courage, but both discover want of skill.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1—22. Peter and John arrested, and examined by the rulers.—While Peter was preaching to the people, as reported in the preceding chapter, information was sent to the priests and rulers of his proceedings, who accordingly sent a military party to arrest him and his brother apostle, John. They were accordingly committed for trial on the next day. Before we attend to their trial, however, we may remark the party by whom they were arrested and imprisoned—the Sadducees. These men, we have seen in the Gospels, were a sort of half infidels, who indeed professed to believe the five books of Moses, but neither a separate state nor resurrection, (Matt. xxii. 23.) Much has been said formerly of infidel liberality; but the events that followed the French Revolution have, we believe, completely settled this point. Neither Pope nor Turk was ever more intolerant. They have also boasted much of their love of science and of useful knowledge; and so far as would promote their secular interests, they might be passage does not say a word respecting the salvation of all, or of any of mankind. It only asserts the completion of all the predictions contained in the ancient prophecies. But whether the restoration of all men to divine favour is one of those predictions, remains to be proved."

Ver. 22. For Moses truly said, &c.—Doddridge remarks, that both Dr. Hurdock and Mr. Jeffery have excellently shown, that this promise does indeed properly refer to the Messiah. See Bp. Chandler's Defence of Christianity.

Ver. 26. To bless you, in turning away every one of you from his iniquities.—Doddridge, "To bless you, every one of you turning from his iniquities."

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1. Captain of the temple—A Jewish officer, who had the command and the division of duties then in waiting. The temple had always a guard of Levites, who kept watch in it by turns, day and night. Campbell, Compare note on Luke xxii. 52.

Ver. 4. About five thousand.—Doddridge includes those before converted in this number.

Ver. 6. Annas the high priest.—Campbell thinks it probable that at this time Annas and Caiaphas might hold the office by turns annually. Campbell in Luke ii. 2—John—Dr. Lightfoot supposes, with much probability, that this was Jochanan ben Zaccai, (i. e. John the son of Zaccai,) who was very famous at that time in the Jewish nation. He was a scholar of the celebrated Hillel, and was president of the Sanhedrim after Simon the son of Gamaliel, and lived to be 120 years old. It is said that a little before this time when the gates of the temple flew open of their own accord, he foretold its destruction, which he lived to see accomplished.—Alexander.—This was probably, as several learned men suppose, Alexander Lysimachus, alabarch or governor of the Jews at Alexandria, and brother of the famous Philo Judæus. He was

A M. 403.
A. D. 29.
q Lu. 24. 31.
Jo. 16. 3.
1 Co. 2. 8.
r Lu. 24. 44.
c. 26. 22, 23.
s c. 233.
t 1st 16. 29.
Joel 2. 13.
u Is. 43. 25.
v Je. 31. 23.
25.
Zep. 3. 14.
29.
Re. 21. 4.
w c. 111.
He. 9. 28.
x Mat. 17. 11.
y Lu. 1. 70.
z De. 19. 15.
19.
a Ro. 9. 4.
15. 8.
b Ge. 22. 18.
c Mat. 10. 5.
Lu. 24. 47.
d Is. 59. 20.
12. 21.
Te. 21. 1.
14.
e or, ruler.
f Mat. 22. 23.
c. 23. 3.
g c. 28. 21.
d Ju. 18. 13.
e Mat. 21. 23.
f c. 7. 53.

Ver. 17. I wot—i. e. "I know."—That through ignorance—Namely, of the true character of Jesus. See 1 Co. i. 8.

Ver. 19. When—Doddridge and others, "that;" as the same word is rendered in Luke ii. 35. Acts xv. 17, &c. "The times of refreshing shall come."—Perhaps we might be justified in supplying the adverb farther—"that [there] times of refreshing may come," referring back to the outpouring of the Spirit on the day of Pentecost, (which was introduced by a "mighty rushing wind," and forward, to other similar dispensations of divine grace, as in chap. x.

Ver. 20. And he shall send.—Hammond and Doddridge, "and that he may send;" that is, again send.—Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you.—That is, in the types and prophecies. But Hammond, Doddridge, Wesley, and many others, read, "That he may send unto you Jesus Christ, who was before appointed," or "designated,"—namely, to be our Saviour. So read the Alexandrian and many other valuable MSS. and ancient versions; some Christian Fathers, Beza, Vitringa, &c.

Ver. 21. The times of restitution of all things—That the word means to restore, or regulate, is indisputable, and in this sense we have properly applied it to Elias, Mat. iii. 5; xii. 11. But in all languages there are many words, which, in different connexions, require to be differently rendered; and, on mature consideration, in this place we prefer the rendering of Hammond and Campbell,—"The completion," or rather, "the consummation," (i. e. the fulfilment,) of all things which God hath spoken, &c. "The restitution here spoken of," says Dr. Hales, "does not mean the restoration of all men to business and happiness; but simply the completion, accomplishment, fulfilment, (so the word is rendered by the best Greek scholars,) of all that God has predicted by his prophets respecting the kingdom and glory of Messiah. The 10 Be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, that ^a by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, even by him doth this man stand here before you whole.

11 This is the stone ^b which was set at nought of you builders, which is become the head of the corner.

12 Neither is there salvation in any other: for ^c there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved.

13 ¶ Now when they saw the boldness of Peter and John, and perceived that they were ^d unlearned and ignorant men, they marvelled; and they took knowledge of them, that they had been with Jesus.

14 And beholding the man which was healed standing with them, they could say nothing against it.

15 But when they had commanded them to go aside out of the council, they conferred among themselves,

16 Saying, ^e What shall we do to these men? for that indeed a notable miracle hath been done by them is manifest to all them that dwell in Jerusalem; and we cannot deny it.

17 But that it spread no farther among the people, let us ^f straitly threaten them, that "they speak henceforth to no man in this name.

18 And they called them, and commanded them not to speak at all nor teach in the name of Jesus.

19 But Peter and John answered and said unto them, Whether it be right in the sight of God to ^g hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye.

20 For ^h we cannot but speak the things which ⁱ we have seen and heard.

21 So when they had farther threatened them, they let them go, finding nothing how they might punish them, because ^j of the people: for all men glorified God for that which was done.

22 For the man was above forty years old, on whom this miracle of healing was showed.

friends to learning; but they were grieved that these men taught the common people; and particularly, that they preached "Jesus, and the resurrection from the dead." Jesus they hated equally with the Pharisees, and the resurrection from the dead formed no part of their creed. They therefore laid hands on the preachers, and the evening now drawing on, they were committed till the next morning. In the mean time we may remark, the Church continued to increase. Previous to the day of Pentecost we hear of only 120 believers in Jerusalem, though it is probable there were many more in Galilee: 3000 were at that time added, and 2000 more soon after.

Next morning the High Priest, with his relations and friends, (for he seems to have secured all the votes he could,) assembled in the council chamber, and called Peter and John before them, and demanded of them, "By what power, or by what name have ye done this?" Peter, filled with the Holy Ghost, and armed with Christian courage, boldly answered, "Be it known unto you all, that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, even by him doth this man stand before you whole." Thus did Peter not only preach the same doctrine to the High Priest and the Sanhedrim that he had before preached to the common people, but he applied it in the same pointed terms—"Jesus of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead. . . . He is become the head of the corner, (a phrase which they must, or at least ought, to have understood,) neither is there salvation in any other."

And is this Peter, who was but lately so alarmed at the question of a servant-maid, that he demed his Master? Yes; but he had now been filled with the Holy Ghost, and affords

23 ¶ And being let go, they went ^k to their own company, and reported all that the chief priests and elders had said unto them.

24 And when they heard that, they lifted up their voice to God with one accord, and said, Lord, ^l thou art God, which hast made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and all that in them is:

25 Who by the mouth of thy servant David hast said, Why ^m did the heathen rage, and the people imagine vain things?

26 The kings of the earth stood up, and the rulers were gathered together against the Lord, and against his Christ.

27 For of a truth against thy holy child Jesus, whom thou hast anointed, both ⁿ Herod, and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles, and the people of Israel, were gathered together, 28 For ^o to do whatsoever thy hand and thy counsel determined ^p before to be done.

29 And now, Lord, behold their threatenings: and grant unto thy servants, that with all ^q boldness they may speak thy word,

30 By stretching forth thy hand to heal; and that ^r signs and wonders may be done by the name of thy holy child Jesus.

31 ¶ And when they had prayed, ^s the place was shaken where they were assembled together; and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and ^t they spake the word of God with boldness.

32 And the multitude of them that believed were of one ^u heart and of one soul: neither said any of them that ought of the things which he possessed was his own; but ^v they had all things common.

33 And with great power ^w gave the apostles witness ^x of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus; and great grace ^y was upon them all.

34 Neither was there any among them that lacked: for as many as were possessors of lands or houses sold them, and brought the prices of the things that were sold,

35 And ^z laid them down at the apostles' feet; and ^a distribution was made unto every man according as he had need.

a happy example of what a change grace can make in men's characters and tempers. "Now, when they saw the boldness of Peter and John," well might they marvel; and especially when they "perceived that they were illiterate men," who had received no learned education; and persons "in private stations;" plain fishermen, the disciples of no Rabbi. But they recognised them as the disciples of Jesus Christ, who had been with him during the whole course of his ministry; and, as they doubtless stated, had seen him since he was risen from the dead. They beheld also the man which was healed standing before them, and they could say nothing against it. They were therefore puzzled and confounded; and, when they had sent them out of court, they considered among themselves what they should do; and resolved, as their only resource, to threaten and command them to speak no more in this name.

To this Peter and John nobly replied, as a model to all innocent and persecuted men, "Whether it be right in the sight of God, to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye. For we cannot but speak the things which we have both seen and heard." This was an appeal to justice and to common sense that could not be denied, and it may afford a lesson to all the disciples of the same Master, that they ought by no means to conceal or disguise the truth—

"But tell to all the nations round,
What a great Saviour they have found."

Ver. 23–37. The Apostles being set at liberty, return to the brethren, who unite with them to bless God for their deliverance.—"Being let go, they returned to their own company." The liberated bird returns to the fields or to the woods, where he resumes his former melody. So these apostles no sooner one of the noblest and richest men of his time, and in great favour with Claudius Cesar, and adorned the gates of the temple with plates of gold and silver. Josephus. Bagster

Ver. 13. Unlearned and ignorant men—Doddridge, "illiterate men, and in private stations of life." See Lardner, who remarks that they were, however, well acquainted with the Scriptures. Boothroyd, "Unlearned and obscure men."

Ver. 17. Straitly threaten—i. e. severely or strongly threaten.

Ver. 25. Who by the mouth of thy servant David—See Ps. ii. 1.

Ver. 26. Against his Christ—i. e. his Anointed—the Messiah.

Ver. 27. Thy holy child—(Gr. paidis)—This term may probably be here used to intimate that the oppression commenced in our Saviour's infancy, and Herod the Great, as well as Herod the Tetrarch, may be here understood.

Ver. 28. Determined—Doddridge, "predetermined." Compare chap. ii. 23, with Luke xiii. 32.

Ver. 31. The place was shaken—See chap. ii. 2. This appears to have been the prelude to a further outpouring of the Spirit.

Ver. 35. And laid them down at the apostles' feet—i. e. for their distribution. This shortly after occasioned them so much secular employment, that they were overwhelmed with it. See chap. vi. 1, &c.

36 And Joses, who by the apostles was surnamed Barnabas, (which is, being interpreted, The son of consolation,) a Levite, and of the country of Cyprus, 37 Having land, sold it, and brought the money, and laid it at the apostles' feet.

CHAPTER V.

1 After that Ananias and Sapphira his wife for their hypocrisy at Peter's rebuke had fallen down dead, 12 and that the rest of the apostles had wrought many miracles, 11 to the increase of the faith: 17 the apostles are again imprisoned, 19 but delivered by an angel including them to preach openly to all: 21 when, after their exhorting accordingly in the temple, 29 and before the council, 33 they are in danger to be killed, through the advice of Gamaliel, a great counselor among the Jews, they be kept alive, 40 and are but beaten: for which they glorify God, and cease no day from preaching.

BUT a certain man named Ananias, with Sapphira his wife, sold a possession,

2 And kept back part of the price, his wife also being privy to it, and a brought a certain part, and laid it at the apostles' feet.

3 But Peter said, Ananias, why hath Satan b filled thy heart c to lie to d the Holy Ghost, and to keep e back part of the price of the land?

4 While it remained, was it not thine own?

return to the church than they unite together in a hymn of praise, doubtless dictated to them by the Spirit of inspiration, and in which, therefore, they were unanimous—a hymn particularly worthy our attention, and on which we therefore proceed to remark—

1. That the apostles, in all their devotional exercises, recur to the Old Testament as their only model, both of sentiment and expression; and we have no hesitation in saying, that the more our prayers are imbued with Scripture sentiment and language, the more sublime and beautiful will they be in themselves, and, if uttered from the heart, the more acceptable to God. 2. In the time of our Saviour's incarnation, there was a grand confederacy against him, both of Jews and Gentiles; Caiaphas and the Priests, with Herod and Pontius Pilate, all conspired against him. 3. That the very object of their combination, though they knew it not, was the matter of the divine decrees, namely, the sufferings and death of the Lord Jesus; and all they did was but an undesigned fulfilment of the divine predictions.

"Look round, (says Ep. Hurd,) look round on the shifting scenes of glory which have been exhibited on the theatre of this world, and see the success of mighty conquerors, the policy of states, the destiny of empires, depend on the secret purpose of God in his Son Jesus; before whom all the achievements and imaginations of men must bow down; and to whose honour all the mysterious workings of his providence are now, have hitherto been, and will for ever be directed."

But to return to the contemplation of this primitive and parent church at Jerusalem; its distinguishing internal characteristics were unanimity and charity. "This section (says Preb. Townsend) presents us with a picture of what every Christian church ought to be, . . . and probably will be, when the fulness of the Spirit shall be poured out in the last days. . . . Here we meet with no factions or divisions on the part of the people: no jealousy—no party spirit—no desire of distinction disturbed the pure harmony of the primitive church. The apostles, as the spiritual fathers of God's household, without opposition, superintended all things, and directed the disposal of the extensive and benevolent contributions of the faithful. The first law of their divine Master was fulfilled—mutual and holy love was the sacred bond of their union, the ruling principle of their life and actions."

As to the community of goods, mentioned in chap. ii. 44, &c., and again here, it by no means appears to have been intended for a standing practice in the Christian church, for it is no where enjoined; nor is it desirable, for it would supersede the exercise of the most amiable grace of charity: for if the members of the church were all alike, rich or poor, they would have no opportunity to relieve each other; but our Lord told his apostles, "The poor ye have with you always, and, whosoever ye will, ye may do them good." (Mark xiv. 7.)

On the present case, Mr. Stott observes, that "Many of the converts were strangers, [as we before hinted,] who probably were detained at Jerusalem longer than they intended, in order to get a farther insight into the religion which they had embraced; and others were poor: the more affluent, therefore, of the company, were contented to share their abundance in common with their poorer brethren. 'This was a remarkable evidence of their indifference about the world; of their joy and confidence in the Lord; in his providential care, as well as in his mercy and grace; of their love and gratitude to him, and

A. M. cir. 60
A. D. cir. 30

a c. 1.34; 37.

b Lu 22.3.

c or, to deceive

d ver 9.

e Nu. 30.2

De 23.21.

Ec. 5.4.

f Ps. 129.1.

g ver. 10. 11.

h Ps. 64.9.

i Ju. 19.40

j Ps. 50.18

ver. 3.

k ver. 5.

and after it was sold, was it not in thine own power? why hast thou conceived this thing in thy heart? thou hast not lied unto men, but unto God.

5 And Ananias hearing these words a fell down, and gave up the ghost: and great b fear came on all them that heard these things.

6 And the young men arose, wound c him up, and carried d him out, and buried e him.

7 And it was about the space of three hours after, when his wife, not knowing what was done, came in.

8 And Peter answered unto her, Tell me whether ye sold the land for so much? And she said, Yea, for so much.

9 Then Peter said unto her, How is it that ye have agreed together to tempt the Spirit of the Lord? behold, the feet of them which have buried thy husband are at the door, and shall carry thee out.

10 Then a fell she down straightway at his feet, of their cordial affection to one another, though just before they had been strangers. . . . What a lovely exhibition [does this give us] of genuine Christianity, when applied and blessed by the Spirit of God! What excellent, and what happy characters does it form!" (Conn. in Acts ii. 44-47.)

Among the most liberal on this occasion was a Levite, afterwards known as the friend and companion of St. Paul, and who was surnamed Barnabas, which is rendered "a son of consolation;" but which, according to the Hebrew idiom, we should be inclined to explain "a kind-hearted man." This he evinced in being one of the first and most liberal contributors to this charitable fund, and it often, doubtless, appeared in his subsequent conduct. The estate he sold, however, could not be his patrimony as a Levite, but probably some estate in Cyprus, which he now left to devote himself to the ministry of the Gospel.

CHAP. V. Ver. 1-16. The sin and punishment of Ananias and Sapphira, with the consequences thereof.—The opening of this chapter furnishes us, in the instance of Ananias and Sapphira, with a distressing contrast to the pious liberality of Barnabas, in the close of the preceding. From the distinct notice taken of his donation to the church, it is naturally supposed that the estate which he sold was somewhat considerable, and excited much attention. There are many professors who love applause, and when they find it excited by acts of generosity, will endeavour to ape them by an appearance of charity, without the principle; by certain acts of liberality adapted rather to draw the admiration of their brethren, than to relieve the necessities of the poor. This is hypocrisy; but hypocrisy was not the only crime of this unhappy pair; they also "lied to the Holy Ghost;" for, knowing that the apostles were inspired, and acted under his influence, the deception which they attempted to practise upon them, was virtually an attempt to deceive Him, under whose influence, and by whose authority, they acted. Therefore, said Peter, "Why hath Satan filled thy heart, to lie to the Holy Ghost?" That is, "Why hast thou suffered Satan thus to fill thy heart? for he is an enemy to be resisted, and ought to be resisted." The crime is then clearly stated. It was keeping back part of the purchase-money, and tendering the other part as the whole, in order to excite commendation. He was not obliged to sell: those who did, acted voluntarily, and from a principle of charity and kindness: when he had sold, he was not required to bring the money; or if he had brought part of it as a part, the rest would not have been required; it was bringing a part as the whole, and thereby attempting to deceive men who acted under the immediate influence of the Holy Spirit, that constituted the essence of their crime.

Ananias, who took the lead in this crime, was first punished, and in the most exemplary manner, for the deterring of others. He, in whose hands our life and breath is, has certainly the right to withdraw them when he pleases. O that we might think of this whenever Satan comes to tempt us! Sapphira coming in soon after her husband's death, (of which she was plainly ignorant,) had an opportunity to save herself, had she confessed the truth; but by confirming his falsehood, she participated in his crime.

"Nothing but truth before his throne

With honour can appear;

The painted hypocrites are known

Through the disguise they wear."—Watts

Ver. 36. Joses (Heb. Joseph) . . . surnamed Barnabas. The son of consolation.—But "the son of consolation" needs also interpretation; and we think the Heb. idiom will justify us in explaining, "a kind-hearted man" So on the other hand, "a son of Bchul" is a morose and wicked man. 1 Sam. xxv. 17.—"Cyprus"—Cyprus is one of the largest islands of the Mediterranean, distant from the main land of Syria about 100 miles, and about 80 from Cilicia; extending in length from east to west about 200 miles, and in breadth 60; between lat. 34° 30' and 35° 30' N. and lon. 32° and 34° 35' E. It was celebrated for its fertility, being, say Strabo and Ammianus, sufficiently provided with all things within itself; but it was as infamous for the worship of Venus, hence called Kypria, or Cypria, and for the luxury and debauchery of the inhabitants. The Jews were very numerous in this island.]—Bagster.

CHAP. V. Ver. 3. To lie to the Holy Ghost—Marg. "to deceive." Doddridge, "To impose on the Holy Spirit." But this attempt to impose (or deceive) was by telling a falsehood—we therefore put for the common rendering.

Ver. 4. Unto men—i. e. "unto men only." Compare Exod. xvi. 8. 1 Sam. viii. 7.

Ver. 5. Gave up the ghost—Doddridge, "Expired." So ver. 10. Voltaire, so celebrated for wit and vice, has dressed up the story to make it ridiculous, just as Nero did some of the Christians in pitch jackets, to burn them. If any and yielded up the ghost: and the young men came in, and found her dead, and, carrying her forth, buried her by her husband.

11 And a great fear came upon all the church, and upon as many as heard these things.

12 ¶ And by the hands of the apostles were many signs and wonders wrought among the people; (and they were all with one accord in Solomon's porch.

13 And of the rest durst no man join himself to them: but the people magnified them.

14 And believers were the more added to the Lord, multitudes both of men and women.)

15 Inasmuch that they brought forth the sick into the streets, and laid them on beds and couches, that at the least the shadow of Peter passing by might overshadow some of them.

16 There came also a multitude out of the cities round about unto Jerusalem, bringing sick folks, and them which were vexed with unclean spirits: and they were healed every one.

17 ¶ Then the high priest rose up, and all they that were with him, (which is the sect of the Sadducees,) and were filled with indignation,

18 And laid their hands on the apostles, and put them in the common prison.

19 But the angel of the Lord by night opened the prison doors, and brought them forth, and said, 20 Go, stand and speak in the temple to the people all the words of this life.

21 And when they heard that, they entered into the temple early in the morning, and taught. But the high priest came, and they that were with him, and called the council

A M. cor.
1034
A D. cl^r
30

1 c 2 43

m c 4 30

Ro 15 19

He 2 4

a Jo 12 42

o c 2 41

p c 2 47

q or, in 16

r Ma 16 17,

Jo 14 12

a Jo 5 16

1 c 41 2

a or, every

v c 12 5 7

16 23 27

w Ex 24 3.

x Jo 6 63, 68

17 5

y c 4 5 6

z c 41

a Mat 21 36

b c 41 4

c Mat 27 25

e 2 23, 46,

3 15

7 52

d c 41 9

e G c 12

1 Fe 2 21

f Ph 2 9

g Le 9 6

h Mat 1 23.

together, and all the senate of the children of Israel, and sent to the prison to have them brought.

22 But when the officers came, and found them not in the prison, they returned, and told,

23 Saying, The prison truly found we shut with all safety, and the keepers standing without before the doors: but when we had opened, we found no man within.

24 Now when the high priest and the captain of the temple and the chief priests heard these things, they doubted of them whereunto this would grow.

25 Then came one and told them, saying, Behold, the men whom ye put in prison are standing in the temple, and teaching the people.

26 Then went the captain with the officers, and brought them without violence: for they feared the people, lest they should have been stoned.

27 And when they had brought them, they set them before the council: and the high priest asked them,

28 Saying, Did not we straitly command you that ye should not teach in this name? and, behold, ye have filled Jerusalem with your doctrine, and intend to bring this man's blood upon us.

29 ¶ Then Peter and the other apostles answered and said, We ought to obey God rather than men.

30 The God of our fathers raised up Jesus, whom ye slew and hanged on a tree.

31 Him hath God exalted with his right hand to be a Prince and a Saviour, for to give repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins.

The consequences of these awful judgments from God were such as might naturally have been expected. "Great fear fell upon all the church," and not upon them only, but also "upon as many (others) as heard these things;" none of "the rest," therefore, who were not sincere converts, dare unite themselves with the believers. Another effect of this awful judgment was, that the people, fully satisfied of the miraculous powers of the apostles, brought their sick and demoniacs for cure, and, consequently, many signs and wonders were wrought among the people—all contributing to the enlargement and glory of the Christian church, which by this time was increased to 5000, or more persons, as stated in the preceding chapter, (verse 4.)

Ver. 17—42. The Apostles again imprisoned, and called to account before the Sanhedrim.—It is shocking to learn from Josephus himself, that many of the high priests were Sadducees; and from this man being surrounded with persons of that sect, it is very natural to suppose that this High Priest was one of them—God's high priest, believing neither in angel nor spirit, nor in the resurrection from the dead! (Acts xxiii. 8.) "The Sadducees (says the late excellent Milner) appear at this time to have had the chief sway in the Jewish state. These formed a licentious, worldly-minded sect; and in their opinions, they were the most corrupt of all those which at that time were maintained in Judea. The High Priest and his party were of this sect, and were filled with indignation to see the progress of the gospel. Their first step was to imprison the apostles, who by night, through the ministry of an angel, were set free, and ordered to preach in the temple. The next morning a full Sanhedrim was convened, and the apostles were ordered to be brought into court. An angel had opened the prison doors, and the court was astonished to find that the prisoners had escaped; they were, however, informed, that they were preaching in the temple. The favourable regard of the common people obliged the Sanhedrim to use some address in conducting their prisoners in a gentle manner before the court. The High Priest upbraids them with their disobedience to the former injunction of silence; to whom they returned their former answer, that they "ought to obey God rather than men." They bore witness to the resurrection of Christ, and declared that "God had exalted him with his right hand, to be a prince and a Saviour, to give repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins;" and that the Holy Ghost, "whom God bestows on those who obey him, witnessed" the same thing. With such plainness did these first Christians lay open the real nature of the gospel, and exhibit it as something extremely different from a mere system of morals, though it included all good morality in its nature. The testimony of Jesus, the forgiveness of sins through his blood, and the operations of the Holy Ghost, as they were doubtless the peculiarities of Christianity, so they were those things which most offended the Jewish rulers; and have been, indeed, the chief object of the enmity of unconverted men in all ages."

"The spirit of persecution was proceeding to exercise itself in violent counsels. There was, however, one Gamaliel among them, a Pharisee; of a sect not, indeed, inimical to the doctrine of a resurrection, and by no means so heterodox, in general, as the Sadducees, though, on the whole, agreeing with them in the hatred of Christianity. This man was judicious, learned, and respectable, and possessed much worldly prudence. Providence made an important use of him at this time, to prolong twelve most valuable lives, who were designed to spread the gospel through the world; and by their inspired witness (not one of which was yet published) to speak to us at this day. Gamaliel, by some authentic historical precedents, instructed the members of the court, that persons who rose up to propagate new sects, if not sent of God, were soon annihilated. He wished them to exercise forbearance persons wish to see his misrepresentations exposed, they may see this completely done in Dr. Ford's Vindication of the Sacred Books.

Ver. 11. And great fear—There is some difficulty and obscurity in the arrangement of this and the following verses, to ver. 17. Doddridge, following our translators, places a part of verse 12, ("And they were all," &c.) to the end of verse 11, in a parenthesis, connecting verse 12 with verse 15, thus:—"And by the hands of the apostles were many signs and wonders wrought; inasmuch that they brought," &c. Dr. A. Clarke, and Prob. Townsend, arrange the verses thus—11, 13, 14, 12, 15, &c. Bishop Sherlock, thus—Verse 11 to 14, 12 part 1, 15, &c.

Ver. 12 Solomon's porch.—Josephus informs us, that Solomon, when he built the temple, finding the area of Mount Moriah too small to answer his magnificent plan, filled up a part of the adjacent valley, and built an outward portico over it toward the east. This was what was called Solomon's Porch: it was a most noble structure, supported by a wall ten cubits high, and consisting of stones of a vast bulk, being 20 cubits long, and six cubits high. It was probably left standing because of its grandeur and beauty; and Josephus speaks of it as continuing even to the time of Albinus and Agrippa.—B.

Ver. 16. Them which were vexed with unclean spirits.—See note on Luke iv. 33.

Ver. 17. The sect of the Sadducees.—Are there now none, high in the church, and yet infidel in heart?

Ver. 20. The words of this life—i. e. of the eternal life they were commissioned to preach.

Ver. 23. We found no man within—This shows that the apostles were put into a part of the prison by themselves.

Ver. 29. We ought to obey God—(There is a passage, says Doddridge, on chap. iv. 19 which bears some resemblance to this, in the apology of So crates, as recorded by Plato, which an ears to me among the finest of antiquity. "O ye Athenians, I embrace and love you, but I will obey God rather than you; and if you would distress me, and spare my life, on condition that I should cease to teach my fellow-citizens, I would rather die a thousand times than accept the proposal." What are two thousand solitaires of the ancient philosophers, when compared with a sentiment like this?—Laguer.

Ver. 31. With his right hand.—Doddridge, "At his right hand."

32 And we are his witnesses ⁱ of these things; and so ⁱ is also the ^j Holy Ghost, whom God hath given to them that obey him.

33 ¶ When they heard that, they ^k were cut to the heart, and took counsel to slay them.

34 Then stood there up one in the council, a Pharisee, named ^l Gamaliel, a doctor of the law, had in reputation among all the people, and commanded to put the apostles forth a little space;

35 And said unto them, Ye men of Israel, take heed to yourselves what ye intend to do as touching these men.

36 For before these days ^m rose up Thendas, boasting himself to be somebody; to whom a number of men, about four hundred, joined themselves: who was slain; and all, as many as ⁿ obeyed him, were scattered, and brought to nought.

37 After this man rose up Judas of Galilee in the days of the taxing, and drew away much people after him: he ^o also perished; and all, even as many as obeyed him, were dispersed.

38 And now I say unto you, Refrain from these men, and let them alone; ^p for if this counsel or this work be of men, it will come to nought:

39 But if ^q it be of God, ye cannot overthrow it; lest haply ye be found even to fight ^r against God.

40 And to him they agreed: and when they had called the apostles, and ^s beaten them, they commanded ^t that they should not speak in the name of Jesus, and let them go.

41 ¶ And they departed from the presence of the council, rejoicing ^u that they were counted worthy to suffer shame for his name.

42 And daily ^v in the temple, and in every house, they ceased not to teach and preach Jesus Christ.

CHAPTER VI.

¹ The apostles, desirous to have the poor regarded for their bodily sustenance, as also careful themselves to dispense the word of God, the food of the soul, ² appoint the office of deaconship to seven chosen men, ³ of whom Stephen, a man full of faith, and of the Holy Ghost, is one. ⁴ Who is taken of those, whom he confounded in disputing, ⁵ and after wisely accused of blasphemy against the law and the temple.

AND in those days, when the number of the disciples was multiplied, there arose a murmuring of the Grecians ^a against the Hebrews, because their widows were neglected in ^b the daily ministration.

² Then the twelve called the multitude of the disciples unto them, and said, It ^c is not reason that we should leave the word of God, and serve tables.

³ Wherefore, brethren, look ^d ye out among you seven men of ^e honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business.

⁴ But we will ^f give ourselves continually to prayer, and to the ministry of the word.

⁵ ¶ And the saying pleased the whole multitude: and they chose Stephen, a man full ^g of faith and of the Holy Ghost, and ^h Philip, and Prochorus, and Nicanor, and Timon, and Parmenas, and ⁱ Nicolas a proselyte of Antioch:

⁶ Whom they set before the apostles: and when ^j they had prayed, they ^k laid their hands on them.

⁷ ¶ And ^l the word of God increased; and the number of the disciples multiplied in Jerusalem greatly; and a great company of the priests ^m were obedient to the faith.

⁸ ¶ And Stephen, full of faith and power, did great wonders and miracles among the people.

⁹ Then there arose certain of the synagogue, which is called the synagogue of the Libertines, and Cyrenians, and Alexandrians, and

and moderation towards the apostles, whose influence would soon come to nothing, if it were merely human; if divine, to attempt its destruction would be equally foolish and impious. This sage advice was followed, and the apostles were dismissed; but not without stripes, and a severe charge given them, no more to preach in the name of Jesus. They ceased not, however, to teach and preach Jesus Christ; and rejoiced that they were counted worthy to suffer shame for his name.

We must not here forget to remark, that this Gamaliel was the tutor of St. Paul, who was brought up at his feet, and perhaps had not yet finished his Jewish studies; but how little did this man think that he was now training up a youth, who, but in little more than a year, should come forward as the champion of that Jesus, and that Gospel, which they were now considering the best means to suppress. Perhaps even Saul himself was now present, attending on his master: perhaps in his own mind censuring his cautious coolness, and anticipating the day when he might be at liberty to persecute the professors of this new sect. But Jesus was exalted on high, "to give repentance to Israel;" and the hour of Saul's conversion was fast approaching.

Though Gamaliel was evidently an enemy of Jesus, yet the temper and moderation of his advice, in this instance, has been commended more frequently than copied; but we have more to admire in the providence of God, who now raised up to the disciples of Jesus an unexpected advocate, and one who, by his prudence, for a while checked the fury of his brethren. "So does God sometimes use the good sense and temper of those who do not themselves receive the Gospel, for the protection of those who are faithfully devoted to his service." Doddridge.

CHAP. VI. Ver. 1—15. Seven deacons chosen, and why.—Stephen (one of them) falsely accused.—The church was now much enlarged, consisting partly of native, and partly of foreign Jews, who used the Greek language, (and were) on that account called Hellenists, or Grecians. These supposed that, in the daily supply of the poor, the apostles had not ministered equal relief to their widows as to those of the Hebrews. Men who know any thing of the work of God, in the visitation of his Holy Spirit, and have any acquaintance with the fulness of employ, which Christian ministers have in great and populous cities, in instructing, warning, counselling, and directing awakened and serious minds, will not wonder, if, through inadvertence, some temporary neglects might have taken place. The apostles, however, with great mildness and wisdom, soon regulated this affair. They informed the disciples that the ministry of the word of God must be attended to in the first place, and must not be neglected for the sake of providing for the poor. They therefore advised the disciples to look out for seven holy and wise men, to whom this business should be committed. "But we (say they) will give ourselves continually to prayer, and to the ministry of the word." The whole multitude consented with pleasure, and seven deacons were amicably elected, who are above enumerated, and who, from their Greek names, are

Ver. 33. They were cut to the heart—i. e. with vexation; not pierced to the heart with conviction, as those in chap. ix. 37, but as it were scathed (to the heart) with vexation. (See Parkhurst in Diagram.)

Ver. 34. Gamaliel.—The elder of that name, a man in so high honour among the Jews, that Onkelos (author of the Targum) is said to have burnt Tolls-weight of perjuries at his funeral. Nay, it is said, the honour of the law failed in him.—Doddridge.

Ver. 36. Thendas.—[This was probably the same with the Judas, (for Jude is called Thoddes, Mat. in 15.) of whom Josephus says, that "a little after the death of Herod the great, he raised an insurrection in Galilee, and aimed at getting the sovereignty of Judea," and that he was defeated and put to death.]—Beza.

Ver. 37. Judas of Galilee.—Judas the Gaulonite, as he is termed by Josephus, opposed the levying of taxes by Cyrenus; but he was soon cut off, and all his followers dispersed. 1.—Beza.

Ver. 42. In every house.—It was long after this before any places of worship were expressly built for Christians; but in every house there was a worshiping family; frequently several of them united, and thus, by degrees, the house became a church. See 1 Co. xvi. 19.

CHAP. VI. Ver. 1. The Grecians.—Commonly called Hellenists; namely, foreign Jews, who used the Greek language, both in their synagogues, and in their common conversation; whereas those called Hebrews used the then Hebrew, or Syrio-Chaldee. See Doddridge, Campbell, Scott, and most others.

Ver. 3. Among you.—i. e. among the body of believers; so Drs. Hanmoud and Whitby; but Preb. Tappin and others think they were chosen from the seventy disciples, of which, however, we have no decisive proof. We incline to think, they were chosen specially from among the complaining Hellenists, since the names seem all of Greek extraction.

Ver. 5. Nicolas, a proselyte of Antioch.—Might be chosen to gratify certain proselytes among those who had complained.

Ver. 6. Laid their hands on them.—As expressive both of their approbation, consecration, and their blessing; not of conferring on them the Holy Spirit; the electors were to choose only men "full of the Holy Ghost." Ver. 3.

Ver. 7. A great company.—The priests, on their return from captivity, were between four and five thousand; Ezra in 36—59; and the number was probably much increased.

Ver. 8. Full of faith, &c.—Doddridge, "Full of grace," &c.; who adds, "so many valuable copies, read grace instead of faith, that I thought myself obliged to follow them." So Boothroyd.

Ver. 9. The synagogue of the Libertines, &c.—This appears to us to be a synagogue for foreigners of the different countries here named. The Libertines are admitted to be liberal slaves, or their children, at Rome, of which there appear to have been so great a number, that 4000 were sent to Sardinia, others to different parts, and the rest banished to Judaea; but the synagogue does not appear to have been restricted to these, but was frequented by Cyrenians, Alexandrians, &c., some of whom had probably a taste for the Greek philosophy. Lardner thinks that each of these parties had a synagogue, which is not unlikely, if, as the Jews say, they had 450 synagogues in Jerusalem.

of them of Cilicia and of Asia, disputing with Stephen.

10 And they were not able ^a to resist the wisdom and the spirit by which he spake.

11 Then they suborned ^a men, which said, We have heard him speak blasphemous words against Moses, and against God.

12 And they stirred up the people, and the elders, and the scribes, and came upon him, and caught him, and brought him to the council,

13 And set up false witnesses, which said, This man ceaseth not to speak blasphemous words against this holy place, and the law :

14 For ^a we have heard him say, that this Jesus of Nazareth shall ^a destroy this place, and shall change the ^a customs which Moses delivered us.

15 And all that sat in the council, looking steadfastly on him, saw his ^a face as it had been the face of an angel.

CHAPTER VII.

^a Stephen, prompted to answer to the accusation of blasphemy, 2 sheweth that Abraham worshipped God rightly, and how God chose the fathers, 30 1. He is born, and before the tabernacle and temple were built, 37 that Moses himself witnessed of Christ : 41 and that all outward ceremonies were ordained according to the heavenly pattern, in last but for a time : 51 representing their rebellion, and disobedience of Christ, die that due, whom the prophets foretold should come into the world : 51 Who requit they stone him to death, who commended his soul to Jesus, and humbly prayed for them.

THEN said the high priest, Are these things so ?

2 And he said, ^a Men, brethren, and fathers, hearken ; The God of glory appeared unto our father Abraham, when he was in Mesopotamia, before he dwelt in Charran,

3 And said ^a unto him, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and come into the land which I shall show thee.

4 Then ^a came he out of the land of the Chaldeans, and dwelt in Charran : and from thence, when his father was dead, he removed him into this land, wherein ye now dwell.

supposed to have been all (or most of them) Hellenists. " In this easy way (says Müner) the first appearances of contention were blasted in the church ; and seven coadjutors were appointed to the apostles, some of whom, at least, were of signal service, not only in temporal, but also in spiritual things."

It has been doubted whether these were all employed in the Christian ministry. Those who think so, consider them as chosen from among " the seventy," of which, however, there is no direct proof ; others observing them as chosen expressly to " serve tables," and provide for the poor, consider them as merely laymen, though some of them were afterwards called to the exercise of the Christian ministry, particularly Stephen and Philip.

Wishing, as we do, to avoid all unnecessary controversies, we shall merely observe, that, in this age of inspiration, the Holy Spirit was so generally poured out on believers, that we feel it difficult to conceive of any persons eminent for wisdom and piety, not being employed, more or less, in the edification of the church and the propagation of the Gospel ; but we shall not take upon us to say how far this is to be considered as a model to present times.

Stephen, however, one of the deacons, was evidently endowed with the talents and spirit of an apostle, which exposed him, not only to a share in their persecutions, but raised him to the honour of being the first Christian martyr.

We now find the church of God rapidly increasing, particularly at Jerusalem, where a great (or considerable) number of the priests believed, which has been thought incredible. But " why should it be thought incredible that God should raise the dead?" spiritually, any more than literally? (Acts xxvi. 8.) Indeed, the manner in which the apostles were enabled to explain the prophecies, in which we may naturally suppose the priests to be conversant, would naturally lead to such an expectation, especially when all the discourses of the apostles were confirmed by miracles, and miracles generally of the same benevolent character as those of their divine Master.

Stephen also, though not an apostle, we have remarked,

Ver. 11. Blasphemous words.—Campbell, would render it, " reviling words," as they did not amount to blasphemy. True ; but they might represent them as such in aggravation.

CHAP. VII. Ver. 2. When he was in Mesopotamia.—[Both Ur of the Chaldees, and Haran, were, properly speaking, in Mesopotamia, though Haran was much nearer to Canaan than Ur was.]—Bagster.—Charran—Or " Haran," Gen. xi. 31, 32.

Ver. 1. When his father was dead.—[From Ge. xi. 26, it appears that Abraham was born when Terah was 70 years of age ; and he departed from Haran when 75, (Ge. xii. 4.) while Terah lived to the age of 205 years, (Ge. xi. 32.) Instead of 205, however, the Samaritan has 145, which reconciles the discrepancy ; but it is not improbable, that Abram was in reality born when his fa-

A. M. 435

A. D. 31

n. Lu. 21. 13.

o. 5 Ki. 21. 10,

14.

Mat. 25,

38/40.

p. c. 25. 3.

q. Da. 9. 26.

r. et. riles.

s. Ex. 34. 30,

35.

a. c. 22. 1.

b. Ge. 12. 1.

c. Ge. 12. 5.

d. Ge. 13. 15.

e. Ge. 15. 13,

16.

f. Ex. 12. 10,

41.

g. Ex. 3. 12.

h. Ge. 17. 9.

i. Ge. 21. 1. 4.

j. Ge. 25. 26.

k. Ge. 29. 32,

46.

l. Ge. 37. 28,

165. 17.

m. Ge. 39. 2,

21.

n. Ge. 41. 40.

o. Ge. 41. 51.

p. Ge. 42. 1. 2.

q. Ge. 45. 1, 16.

r. Ge. 46. 27.

s. Ge. 10. 22.

5 And he gave him none inheritance in it, no, not so much as to set his foot on : yet he promised ^a that he would give it to him for a possession, and to his seed after him, when as yet he had no child.

6 And God spake on this wise, That ^a his seed should sojourn in a strange land ; and that they should bring them into bondage, and entreat them evil four ^a hundred years.

7 And the nation to whom they shall be in bondage will I judge, said God ; and after that shall they come forth, and serve ^a me in this place.

8 And ^a he gave him the covenant of circumcision : and so ^a Abraham begat Isaac, and circumcised him the eighth day ; and Isaac ^a begat Jacob ; and Jacob ^a begat the twelve patriarchs.

9 ^a And the patriarchs, moved with envy, sold Joseph into Egypt : but ^a God was with him,

10 And delivered him out of all his afflictions, and gave him favour and wisdom in the sight of Pharaoh king of Egypt ; and he ^a made him governor over Egypt and all his house.

11 Now ^a there came a dearth over all the land of Egypt and Chanaan, and great affliction : and our fathers found no sustenance.

12 But ^a when Jacob heard that there was corn in Egypt, he sent out our fathers first.

13 And at the second time Joseph ^a was made known to his brethren ; and Joseph's kindred was made known unto Pharaoh.

14 Then sent Joseph, and called his father Jacob ^a to him, and all ^a his kindred, threescore and fifteen souls.

15 So Jacob went down into Egypt, and died, he, and our fathers, rank in every point of view on a level with them ; for he was " full of faith and power, and did great wonders and miracles among the people." There was, however, in the city, a synagogue, or perhaps several synagogues, of foreign Jews, some of whom (particularly those from Alexandria) might have a fondness for dispute, and therefore eagerly engaged in controversy with St. Stephen ; but, being foiled, were so aggravated, that they sought revenge in charging him with blasphemy in predicting the ruin of the temple and city ; but were probably guilty of the same kind of misrepresentation as those who accused our Lord himself before Caiaphas. (See Mat. xxvii. 61.) When men are determined, right or wrong, to make good a charge, it is not difficult to put their own construction on almost any thing. But they must have been sadly disconcerted, when, " looking steadfastly on his countenance," they saw in it a sweet and divine placidity, like that of a celestial being ; in addition to which, some have supposed it to have been surrounded with a heavenly radiance.

CHAP. VII. Ver. 1—29. Stephen's defence before the sanhedrim.—Stephen being now called upon to make his defence before the highest court of the Jews, proceeds as follows :

First, he begins by endeavouring to convince the Jews of their mistake relative to the promise given to Abraham and his seed, which they interpreted solely in relation to temporal blessings ; but he endeavours to demonstrate to them, by " a recapitulation of the history of the patriarchs, that such could not have been the meaning of the prediction ; for even their father, Abraham, (he argues,) to whom the land [of Canaan] was first promised, had none inheritance in it ; no, not so much as to set his foot on." The other patriarchs, in the same manner, passed a life of pilgrimage and affliction, and never attained to the blessed inheritance. Abraham, the father of the faithful, and the friend of God, had no possession till his death ; then only he began to take possession of his purchase, [i. e. " the grave which he had bought." Gen. xxv. 29.] clearly intimating the spiritual signification of the promised Canaan. Moses had a prospect of that land, but he ther Terah was 130 years old ; and that he is merely mentioned first in Ge. xi. 26 by way of digressio 1.—Bagster.

Ver. 5. So much as to set his foot on.—[To this it is objected, that he purchased a family grave of the sons of Heber, Gen. xxy. 17. True ; but, 1. A grave is a place for a man to lay his bones, and not to set his feet. 2. Even this he bought, notwithstanding the whole country had been made over to him by divine promise. 3. The expression is evidently proverbial, and means that he had no ground wherein he might either build or work.]

Ver. 6. Four hundred years.—[So, then here, uses the round number 400, leaving out the odd tens ; for it is evident from the parallel passages, as well as Josephus, that the real number of years was 430.]—Bagster.

Ver. 14. Threescore and fifteen.—[In the Hebrew text, the number of per-

16 And * were carried over into Sychem, and laid in the sepulchre that Abraham bought for a sum of money of the sons of Emmor the father of Sychem.

17 ¶ But when the time of the promise drew nigh, which God had sworn to Abraham, the people † grew and multiplied in Egypt, 18 Till another king arose, which knew not Joseph.

19 The same dealt subtly with our kindred, and evil entreated our fathers, so * that they cast out their young children, to the end they might not live.

20 In which time Moses † was born, and was † exceeding fair, and nourished up in his father's house three months:

21 And when he was cast out, Pharaoh's daughter took him up, and † nourished him for her own son.

22 And Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, and † was mighty in words and in deeds.

23 And † when he was full forty years old, it came into his heart to visit his brethren the children of Israel.

24 And seeing one of them suffer wrong, he defended him, and avenged him that was oppressed, and smote the Egyptian:

25 * For he supposed his brethren would have understood how that God by his hand would deliver them: but they understood not.

26 And the next day he showed himself unto them as they strove, and would have set them at one again, saying, Sirs, ye are brethren; why do ye wrong one to another?

27 But he that did his neighbour wrong thrust

A. M. 4035.
A. D. 31.
§ Jos. 24. 32.

† Ex. 1. 7, 9.

u Ex. 1. 22

† Ex. 2. 2,
&c.

or, fair-to God.

z Ex. 2. 10.

† Lu. 21. 19.

z Ex. 2. 11,
&c.

a or, Nos.

—

b Ex. 3. 2,
&c.

c Mat. 22. 39
He. 11. 19.

d Jos. 5. 15.
Ec. 5. 1.

e Ex. 14. 19.
Nu. 20. 16.

f Ex. 7. 8, 9, 10, 11, 14.

g Ex. 16. 35.

h De. 18. 15, 19.
c. 32.

him away, saying, Who made thee a ruler and a judge over us?

28 Wilt thou kill me, as thou didst the Egyptian yesterday?

29 Then fled Moses at this saying, and was a stranger in the land of Madian, where he begat two sons.

30 And † when forty years were expired, there appeared to him in the wilderness of mount Sina an angel of the Lord in a flame of fire in a bush.

31 When Moses saw it, he wondered at the sight: and as he drew near to behold it, the voice of the Lord came unto him, 32 Saying, I am the † God of thy fathers, the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. Then Moses trembled, and durst not behold.

33 Then said the Lord to him, Put † off thy shoes from thy feet: for the place where thou standest is holy ground.

34 I have seen, I have seen the affliction of my people which is in Egypt, and I have heard their groaning, and am come down to deliver them. And now come, I will send thee into Egypt.

35 This Moses whom they refused, saying, Who made thee a ruler and a judge? the same did God send to be a ruler and a deliverer by the hand of the † angel which appeared to him in the bush.

36 He brought them out, after † that he had showed wonders and signs in the land of Egypt, and in the Red sea, and in the wilderness forty † years.

37 ¶ This is that Moses, which said † unto the died before he could attain to it; and all those who came out of Egypt with him, without even a glimpse of it, fell through unbelief in the wilderness. The righteous only hath hope in his death. The eminent characters here brought forward by Stephen, may be considered (as Mr. Jones, of Nayland, remarks) as signs so exactly suited to the thing signified, as if the truth itself had been acted beforehand. In Joseph, says Preb. Townsend, we see a man wise, innocent, and great, hated by his brethren, and sold for a slave to heathen Egyptians. In his humiliation he was exalted. Heathens, to whom he had been given over, bowed the knee before him—his own family were preserved from perishing—he became the Saviour of all—administering to them bread, the emblem of life; and to him every knee bowed, both of his own kindred and of strangers. He was tempted, and triumphed; he was persecuted and imprisoned under a malicious and false accusation; he was not actually crucified, but he suffered with two malefactors, and promised life to one of them, and delivered himself by the Divine Spirit that was given to him. He was seen twice by his brethren: the first time they knew him not, but the second he was made known unto them. And thus, we trust, it will be at some future day, when the brethren of Jesus Christ shall become like the brethren of Joseph, sensible of their crime, and say with them, in the bitterness of their souls, "We are verily guilty concerning our brother, in that we saw the anguish of his soul . . . and we would not hear: therefore have all our evils come upon us." (Townsend's New Test. Arr.)

This strain of typical reasoning may seem strange to us, but was perfectly familiar to Jewish Priests and Rabbies, and would have been received as demonstration on any point that did not oppose their worldly prejudices and preconceived opinions. Of this we have sufficient evidence in what follows respecting Moses; for when he avenged his countryman in Egypt, and smote the offender, "He (Moses) supposed his brethren would have understood, how that God by his hand would deliver them." He intended it as an allegorical and prophetic action, such as was common among the Hebrews; "but they," having lost their Hebrew notions and modes of reasoning, "understood not" his design, but said, "Who made thee a ruler and a judge over us?" as the Jews did virtually to the Messiah; and thus the fathers protracted their deliverance, as their descendants have since done, to a long future day. For though the Jews who crucified their Lord, as a nation "brought upon themselves swift destruction;" yet is there hope in Israel "concerning this matter: for the Lord hath not" finally nor totally "cast away his [ancient] people." (Rom. xi. 1, &c.)

Ver. 30—53. The continuation of St. Stephen's defence.—Taking up this discourse where we left it, Stephen now comes to the delivery of the law at mount Sinai—their passage through the wilderness, and their entrance on the promised land; and he endeavours to prove to his persecutors, that they were following the same perverse course by which their fathers had formerly brought the most awful judgments upon themselves. This they did in rejecting him whom God had sent to be "a Prophet like unto Moses"—"a Prince and a Saviour," to deliver them from their sins. And whereas their fathers were perpetually falling back into idolatry, making to themselves gods of their own choice to worship; and this both when they knew Moses was gone up into the divine presence on mount Sinai, and even during all the forty years they were wandering through the wilderness; when, it seems, they secretly carried their idols with them, even as their mother Rachel had formerly done, unknown to Jacob, when she left her father's house. (Gen. xxxi. 19, &c.)

"It is evident (says Preb. Townsend) that, through every part of this discourse, the object Stephen had in view was, to represent to his countrymen the nature of Christ's religion, and to set before them, in the most touching manner, his sufferings, and their own conduct, which was an aggravated completion of the crimes of their ancestors. For which, says the martyr, with indignant eloquence, 'Which of the prophets have not your fathers persecuted? and they have slain them sons is threescore and ten; but Stephen quotes from the Septuagint, which adds the five sons of Ephraim and Manasseh to the account.—Bagster.

Ver. 16. That Abraham bought.—Of the two burying places of the patriarchs, one was at Hebron, the cave and field which Abraham purchased of Ephron the Hittite. (Gen. xxiii. 16, &c.) the other in Sychem, which Jacob (not Abraham) bought of the sons of Emmor. (Gen. xxxiii. 19.) To remove this glaring discrepancy, Markland interprets para. from, as it frequently signifies with a genitive, and renders, "And were carried over to Sychem; and afterwards from among the descendants of Emmor, the father, or son, of Sychem, they were laid in the sepulchre which Abraham bought for a sum of money." This agrees with the account which Josephus gives of the patriarchs; that they were carried out of Egypt, first to Sychem, and then to Hebron, where they were buried.—Bagster.

Ver. 20. Moses.—The illustrious legislator and prophet of the Hebrews, who led the Israelites to the borders of the promised land.—Exceeding fair.—

"Fair to God," where the name of God is considered as an adjective, and might perhaps be rendered "divinely fair." See Exod. ii. 2.

Ver. 22. All the wisdom of the Egyptians.—This may be fairly inferred, from his being educated as the son of Pharaoh's daughter. See Heb. xi. 24.

Ver. 23. Forty years old.—This was a general tradition among the Jews—"Moses was forty years in Pharaoh's court, forty years in the land of Midian, and forty years he served Israel."—Bagster.

Ver. 29. Madian.—Or, "Midian." Ex. ii. 16.

Ver. 30. Mount Sina.—Or "Sinai." See Ex. iii. 2, &c.; called also Horeb, a famous mountain of Arabia the Rocky, thought to be about 10,000 feet in height.

Ver. 34. I have seen.—[Literally, "Seeing I have seen;" a Hebraism for "I have surely seen." This varies considerably from the Septuagint, and also from the Hebrew; but gives the general meaning very clearly and faithfully.]—Bagster.

56 And said, Behold, I see the heavens opened, and the Son of man standing on the right hand of God.

57 Then they cried out with a loud voice, and stopped their ears, and ran upon him with one accord.

58 And cast him out of the city, and stoned him: and the witnesses laid down their clothes at a young man's feet, whose name was Saul.

59 And they stoned Stephen, calling upon God, and saying, Lord Jesus, receive my spirit.

60 And he kneeled down, and cried with a loud voice, Lord, lay not this sin to their charge. And when he had said this, he fell asleep.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 By occasion of the persecution in Jerusalem, the church being planted in Samaria, S by Philip the deacon, who preached, did miracles, and baptized many, among the rest Simon the sorcerer, a great seducer of the people: 14 Peter and John come to confirm and enlarge the church: wh re, by prayer and imposition of hands giving the Holy Ghost, 18 when Simon would have bought the like power of them, 20 Peter sharply reproveth his hypocrisy and covetousness, and exhorting him to repentance, together with John preaching the word of the Lord, return to Jerusalem. 26 But the angel sendeth Philip to teach and baptize the Ethiopian eunuch.

AND Saul was consenting unto his death. And at that time there was a great persecution against the church which was at Jerusalem; and they were all scattered abroad throughout the regions of Judea and Samaria, except the apostles.

2 And devout men carried Stephen to his burial, and made great lamentation over him.

3 As for Saul, he made havoc of the church, entering into every house, and haling men and women committed them to prison.

must naturally consider him as a blasphemer, when they heard his prayer to the Lord Jesus. "I shall always insist (says Bp. Horsley in his answer to Priestley) that the blessed Stephen died a martyr to the Deity of Christ. The accusation against him was 'his speaking blasphemous things against the temple and the law.' You have forgotten to add the charge of blasphemy against Moses and against God." The blasphemy against the temple and the law, probably consisted in a prediction that the temple was to be destroyed, and the ritual law, of course, abolished. The blasphemy against Moses was, probably, his assertion that the authority of Moses was inferior to that of Christ. But what could be the blasphemy against God? What was there in the doctrine of the apostles which could be interpreted as blasphemy against God, except it was this, that they ascribed divinity to one who had suffered publicly as a malefactor? That this was the blessed Stephen's crime, none can doubt who attends to the conclusion of the story:—"He looked up steadfastly into heaven," says the inspired historian, "and saw the glory of God, (that is, he saw the splendour of the Shechinah; for that is what is meant when the glory of God is mentioned, as something to be seen,) and Jesus standing on the right hand of God." He saw the man Jesus in the midst of this divine light. His declaring what he saw, the Jewish rabble understood as an assertion of the divinity of Jesus. They stopped their ears; they overpowered his voice with their own clamours; and they hurried him out of the city, to inflict upon him the death which the law appointed for blasphemers. He died as he had lived, attesting the Deity of our crucified Master. His last breath was uttered in a prayer to Jesus; first for himself, and then for his murderers. They stoned Stephen, calling upon (God) and saying, Lord Jesus, receive my spirit; and he cried with a loud voice, Lord, lay not this sin to their charge."

Only one other circumstance in this chapter calls for our remark, namely, the vision which Stephen had of the Lord Jesus, which we consider of a nature similar with those of the prophets Isaiah and Ezekiel, and certainly intended for his support and encouragement in the hour of death; and it is remarkable that, in this instance, the Lord Jesus is not represented in 4 Therefore they that were scattered abroad went every where preaching the word.

5 Then Philip went down to the city of Samaria, and preached Christ unto them.

6 And the people with one accord gave heed unto those things which Philip spake, hearing and seeing the miracles which he did.

7 For certain unclean spirits, crying with loud voice, came out of many that were possessed with them: and many taken with palsies, and that were lame, were healed.

8 And there was great joy in that city.

9 But there was a certain man, called Simon, which beforetime in the same city used sorcery, and bewitched the people of Samaria, giving out that himself was some great one:

10 To whom they all gave heed, from the least to the greatest, saying, This man is the great power of God.

11 And to him they had regard, because that of long time he had bewitched them with sorceries.

12 But when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women.

13 Then Simon himself believed also: and when he was baptized, he continued with Philip, and wondered, beholding the miracles and signs which were done.

14 Now when the apostles which were at the usual posture of sitting, but as standing, as if in the act of intercession; or, perhaps, as intimating to the dying martyr, that he was ready to receive the precious deposit he was committing to his hands.

CHAP. VIII. Ver. 1—25. The church being dispersed by persecution, carry the gospel with them. The sin and danger of Simon Magus.—It may appear paradoxical, but there seems truth in the intimation of Milner, that this persecution was, in great measure, owing to the Romans having taken off all restraint from the priestly government of the Jews, who seem now to have vented their rage against the Christians without control. Among the agents in this cruel business, the most active and zealous was a young man already mentioned, whose name was Saul; and though, perhaps, he was not actually engaged in stoning Stephen, as not being one of the witnesses; yet he took care of their clothes while so engaged, and was not only content, but well pleased with the execution. So much so, that he now signalized himself as the chief persecutor of the time, and made havoc of the church, as a wild beast does of a flock, when he breaks into a sheep-fold. He entered into every house he could find where the Christians held their assemblies, and "haling" thence "men and women," without regard to age or sex, committed them. The prisons would, however, at this time, contain only a small part of the Christians; but the others being threatened, were scattered abroad throughout the surrounding country. Thus the wrath of man fulfilled the purposes of God; and the very means used to suppress the gospel contributed to its wider propagation.

Among others, Philip, one of Stephen's fellow-deacons, went down into Samaria, and there preached and wrought miracles, which occasioned great joy in that city. A certain man, called Simon Magus, (or the Magician,) had resided there some time, and by practising the arts of sorcery, had so far bewitched the people, that he was considered by them an extraordinary person—"the great power of God!" When, however, they heard Philip, they soon perceived a vast difference; and the spirit of God attending his ministry, they were converted, and then baptized. Even Simon himself was so prised the tract of country formerly occupied by the tribes of Ephraim and Manasse west of Jordan, lying between Judea and Galilee; beginning, says Josephus, at Ginea in the great plain, and ending at the toparchy of Acrabattin.—BAGSTER.

Ver. 7. Unclean spirits, crying, &c.—Compare Matthew x. 1. Mark iii. 11, &c.

Ver. 9. And bewitched.—Rather, "astonished." This is the same word that, in ver. 13, is rendered, "wondered," and implies, that he excited great astonishment, as magicians and conjurers are wont to do. Simon was affected by Philip's miracles, as the people had been by Simon's wonders; and perhaps thought him a practitioner in the same art, but of higher attainments. See ver. 19.—Some great one.—Probably wishing it to be understood, that he was the Messiah, in opposition to Jesus. Some of the fathers say, that to different characters he represented himself under the names of the three persons of the Trinity; but this, we conceive, must have been after his apostasy. See Doddridge.

Ver. 13. Then Simon.—[This Simon was probably, as several learned men suppose, the same who is mentioned by Josephus, as persuading Drusilla to leave her husband, and live with Felix.—BAGSTER.]

Ver. 59. They stoned Stephen.—Dr. Lardner, whose opinion we have before cited, John xviii. 31, considers this and all other similar instances, as riotous and unlawful acts. He says, "The Jewish people, at this time, seem to have made no scruple of stoning a man immediately, without any trial." Mr. Milner accounts for their conduct in the following manner. He says, "Pilate having been disgraced, Judea seems at this time to have been without a procurator; and Vitellius, the governor of Syria, was a man of great moderation toward the Jews, who were now left to themselves, at least in religious concerns, and Stephen was their first Christian victim."

CHAP. VIII. Ver. 1. And Saul.—[This clause evidently belongs to the conclusion of the preceding chapter: there is scarcely a worse division of chapters than this.]—BAGSTER.

Ver. 3. He made havoc of the church.—The word which our translators have rendered, "made havoc," properly signifies to ravage as a wild beast. It is thus used in the Septuagint, Dan. vi. 22, of lions; and in Ps. lxxix. 14, of the wild boar.—TOWNSEND.

Ver. 5. The city of Samaria.—[Rather, "To a city of Samaria," for the city of Samaria had been utterly destroyed by Hyrcanus, and the city built by Herod on its site was called Augusta, in honour of Augustus. Samaria count-

Jerusalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent unto them Peter and John:

15 Who, when they were come down, prayed for them, that they might receive the Holy Ghost:

16 (For as yet he was fallen upon none of them: only they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus.)

17 Then laid they their hands on them, and they received the Holy Ghost.

18 ¶ And when Simon saw that through laying on of the apostles' hands the Holy Ghost was given, he offered them money, 19 Saying, Give me also this power, that on whomsoever I lay hands, he may receive the Holy Ghost.

20 But Peter said unto him, Thy money perish with thee, because thou hast thought that the gift of God may be purchased with money.

21 Thou hast neither part nor lot in this matter: for thy heart is not right in the sight of God.

22 Repent therefore of this thy wickedness, and pray God, if perhaps the thought of thy heart may be forgiven thee.

23 For I perceive that thou art in the gall of bitterness, and in the bond of iniquity.

24 Then answered Simon, and said, Pray ye to the Lord for me, that none of these things which ye have spoken come upon me.

25 And they, when they had testified and

A. M. 4086.
A. D. 32.
q c 19 2.
r c 2 38.
10 48.
19 5, 6.
1 Co 1 13.
e c 6 6.
He 6 2.
i 1 Ti 6 5.
u 2 Ki 5 15.
16.
Mat 10 9.
v c 10 45.
11 17.
w Jos 22 25.
x Ps 78 36.
27.
Eze 14 3.
y Ps 4 27.
2 Ti 2 25.
z Je 4 15.
He 12 15.
a Ps 116 16.
14 7 22.
Is 25 22.
b Ex 8 5.
Nu 21 7.
1 Ki 15 6.
Job 42 8.
Jas 5 16.
c Jos 15 47.
d Zep 3 10.
e Is 56 3 5.
f 2 Ch 6 32.
33.
g Is 65 21.
Ho 6 3.
h Mat 13.
23 31.
i Ro 5 17.
j Ep 10 14.
k Ps 25 9.
l Is 53 7, 8.

preached the word of the Lord, returned to Jerusalem, and preached the gospel in many villages of the Samaritans.

26 ¶ And the angel of the Lord spake unto Philip, saying, Arise, and go toward the south unto the way that goeth down from Jerusalem unto Gaza, which is desert.

27 And he arose and went: and, behold, a man of Ethiopia, a eunuch of great authority under Candace queen of the Ethiopians, who had the charge of all her treasure, and had come to Jerusalem for to worship, 28 Was returning, and sitting in his chariot read Esaias the prophet.

29 Then the Spirit said unto Philip, Go near, and join thyself to this chariot.

30 And Philip ran thither to him, and heard him read the prophet Esaias, and said, Understandest thou what thou readest?

31 And he said, How can I, except some man should guide me? And he desired Philip that he would come up and sit with him.

32 The place of the scripture which he read was this, He was led as a sheep to the slaughter; and like a lamb dumb before his shearer, so opened he not his mouth:

33 In his humiliation his judgment was taken away: and who shall declare his generation? for his life is taken from the earth.

34 And the eunuch answered Philip, and said, I pray thee, of whom speaketh the prophet this? of himself, or of some other man?

35 Then Philip opened his mouth, and began overwhelmed with the evidence of a truly divine power in Philip, that he was convinced of the truth of the gospel, and became one of his followers. What, however, most surprised him, and eventually discovered his hypocrisy, was, that when the apostles Peter and John came to visit Philip and the new converts, upon their praying for, and laying their hands upon them, the same extraordinary gifts were bestowed on others also. Astonished at this, anxious to possess these gifts, and finding that the apostles did not offer to do the same for him, (being probably suspicious of him,) he offered money to be endowed with the like powers that the apostles were; intending, no doubt, to make thereof a profit. Peter, on hearing this, exclaimed with a holy indignation, "Thy money perish with thee! because thou hast thought that the gift of God may be purchased with money! . . . I perceive that thou art in the gall of bitterness, and bond of iniquity;"—or, in other words, that thou art a hypocrite. And yet, notwithstanding this, he exhorts him to penitence and prayer, with a "perhaps the thought of thy heart may be forgiven thee." On this Simon very properly replies, "pray for me, that no awful judgments come upon me;" but that he was ever truly converted, we have no account; indeed, on the contrary, ecclesiastical history describes him as having become decidedly an apostate, and bitter enemy to the gospel.

"From this infamous attempt [of Simon] to bargain for the power of conferring the Holy Spirit, (says Scott,) all mercenary contracts for church benefices, and other methods of turning the concerns of religion into a lucrative trade, are called Simony; of which there have been, and are, a great variety of species; and will be, so long as men continue covetous and ambitious, and verily suppose that gain is godliness." But there is a species of Simony, or, at least, according to an eminent and learned prelate, it borders on it, against which all ministers, and even students, should be guarded.

"It was Simon Magus's error (says Bp. Sanderson) to think that the gift of God might be purchased with money; and it hath a spice of his sin, and so may go for a kind of Simony, to think that spiritual gifts may be purchased with labour. You may rise up early and go to bed late, and study hard, and read much, and devour the marrow of the best authors, and when you have done all, unless God give a blessing unto your endeavours, he as thim and meagre in regard of true and useful learning, as Pharaoh's lean kine were after they had eaten the fat ones. It is God that both ministereth seed to the sower, and multiplieth the seed sown; the principal and the increase are both his."

"It is clear that all Christian virtues and graces, though wrought immediately by us, and with the free consent of our own wills, are yet the fruit of God's Spirit working in us. That is to say, they do not proceed originally from any strength of nature, or any inherent power in man's free-will; nor are they acquired by the culture of philosophy, the advantages of education, or any improvement whatsoever of natural abilities, by the helps of art or industry; but are, in truth, the proper effects of that supernatural grace which is given unto us by the good pleasure of God the Father, merited for us by the precious blood of God the Son, and conveyed into our hearts by the sweet and secret inspirations of God the Holy Ghost. Love, joy, and peace, are the fruits, not at all of the flesh, but merely of the Spirit."

Ver. 26—40. The conversion of an Ethiopian eunuch of great rank.—"It is well known, that persons attached to the Jewish religion were found in all the countries around Judea, and that among these were many persons of considerable distinction. In this way the Old Testament scriptures were extensively known, and we may hope that their influence was not inconsiderable. These persons often came to Jerusalem, (as others go on pilgrimage,) especially at the great festivals. We have before us an interesting narrative of an Ethiopian eunuch, treasurer to the queen of Ethiopia, who had been to Jerusalem to worship the one God: he was returning home in his chariot through a desert place, and was reading, as he

Ver. 16. Baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus.—Sach ii. 38. Commentators are not agreed whether this is an abridged form of expression, instead of naming the three persons of the Trinity; or an abridged form of administering the ordinance to Jews, who had already been initiated into the doctrine of the Trinity in the Old Testament. (See exposition of Gen. i. 23—31.) It is observable, that where the command is given to baptize in the name of the three persons, it seems to have particular reference to the Gentiles—"all nations." Mat xxviii 19.

Ver. 20. Thy money perish with thee.—Doddridge. "Thy money go with thee to destruction." Not an imprecation, wishing it might do so, which he knew to be impossible, but an expression of alarm and danger. See note on Mark ii. 7.

Ver. 22. If perhaps.—This expression is thought to intimate, in Peter, a fear lest Simon should have committed the unpardonable sin—the sin against the Holy Ghost. See 1 John vi. 16.

Ver. 23. The gall of bitterness.—This is bitterness, or misery itself.—The bond of iniquity.—Is slavery in lust, particularly the lust of covetousness, called the lust of the eye. (1 John ii. 16.) The bond of iniquity is explained by Hammond of a league with Satan, probably referring to the magical arts which he had practised.

Ver. 24. None of these things.—Peter probably enlarged upon the awful consequences Simon might expect.

Ver. 26. Which is desert.—A. the way through the desert, or wilderness of Judea. Doddridge. It is probable, that we should not desert, not to Gaza, but to the way; though Gaza was situated at the entrance of the desert, and the ancient city was in ruins, being destroyed by Alexander. Strabo, l. xvi.
Ver. 27. A eunuch.—A term of office. See note on Gen. xxxix. 1. Candace, queen of the Ethiopians.—"Candace" is said to be a name common to the queens of Ethiopia, as Cæsar was of the Roman emperors.—Ethiopia,—from Athiopia, to burn, and ops, the fire. The Ethiopia here mentioned is upper Ethiopia, or Habesha, lying south of Egypt, on the Nile, and including the island Meroë.

Ver. 30. Heard him read.—A late respectable traveller, in allusion to this very passage, remarks, that in Syria "they usually go on reading aloud, with a kind of singing voice; moving their heads and bodies in time, and making a kind of monotonous cadence at regular intervals." Joseph's Christian Researches. The ancient chariots were generally open, like our common chaises, and the eunuch, in his humiliation, his judgment was taken away.—This, which is quoted from the Septuagint version of these verses, seems to mean, "In his degraded state, justice was denied;" but compare Isaiah as above. Prebend Toynsend proposes a change in the punctuation of the original, connecting verses 32 and 33 thus:—"Like a lamb dumb before his shearer, so opened he not his mouth because of affliction; and his just judgment was taken away." The learned reader will judge of this matter for himself. See New Test. Ar.

at the same scripture, ^m and preached unto him Jesus.

36 And as they went on their way, they came unto a certain water: and the eunuch said, See, here is water; what doth ^a hinder me to be baptized?

37 And Philip said, If ^o thou believest with all thy heart, thou mayest. And he answered and said, I ^p believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God.

38 And he commanded the chariot to stand still: and they went down both into the water, both Philip and the eunuch; and he baptized him.

39 And when they were come up out of the water, the Spirit of the Lord caught away Philip, that the eunuch saw him no more: and he went on his way ^r rejoicing.

40 But Philip was found at Azotus: and passing through he preached in all the cities, till he came to Cesarea.

CHAPTER IX.

1 Saul, going towards Damascus, is stricken down to the earth, 10 is called to the apostleship, 18 and is baptized by Ananias. 20 He preacheth Christ boldly. 23 The Jews lay wait to kill him: 29 so do the Grecians, but he escapeth both. 31 The church having rest, Peter healeth Eneas of the palsy, 36 and restores Titus Tobias to life.

AND Saul, yet ^a breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord, went unto the high priest,

2 And desired of him letters to Damascus to the synagogues, that if he found any of ^b this way, whether they were men or women, he might bring them bound unto Jerusalem.

3 And ^c as he journeyed, he came near Damascus: and suddenly there shined round about him a light from heaven:

4 And he fell to the earth, and heard a voice saying unto him, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou ^d me?

passed along, a part of the prophecies of Isaiah; but he read it as a sealed book: he knew not the person of whom the prophet spake. But God, who accepts all in every nation who fear him and work righteousness, did not permit him to remain ignorant of Christ; though it does not appear that his late journey to Jerusalem had made him acquainted with any of the disciples of our Saviour. How many, who have some correct views, and some appearances of good desire, are kept from the knowledge of real Christians by their peculiar situations or prejudices! By an extraordinary commission, Philip, the deacon, was sent to this Ethiopian; and, beginning at the 53d of Isaiah, he explains to him the whole doctrine of Christ: the eunuch listens, believes with all his heart, is baptized, and goes on his way rejoicing. What a vast body of new and most interesting facts had been made known to him in one short hour! He is going into a dark region; he is a man of influence; perhaps he may be able to lead his queen and her court to the knowledge of Jesus, and their example may have vast influence on the future spread of the gospel in Ethiopia. Surely here was enough to fill his mind with gratitude, and make him go on his way rejoicing." (Ward's Reflections.)

CHAP. IX. Ver. 1—22. Saul's miraculous conversion.—"Saul yet breathing!" this represents to us Saul, as it were, panting with zeal and fury, breathing out threatenings and slaughter!—The Christians in consequence of Stephen's death, had fled to all the surrounding countries; and Saul, by some means, obtained intelligence that many had fled even to Da-

Ver. 37. And Philip said, &c.—This verse is omitted in many (including the best) MSS., and Græcisch and other critics consider it only as a marginal gloss brought into the text. Booth and Doddridge think it too important to be omitted; and Whitby suggests the probability of its being first omitted by some who approved of delaying baptism as long as possible.

Ver. 38. Both into the water.—Doddridge says—"Considering how frequent bathing was in those hot countries, it is not to be wondered that baptism was generally administered by immersion, though I see no proof that it was essential to the institution." And the candid Lardner says, "I do not see any proof that the Eunuch was baptized by immersion." How differently men view the same facts and circumstances!

Ver. 40. Azotus—i. e. Ashdod, more than thirty miles from Gaza, from whence he preached in all the cities along the coast of the Mediterranean. CHAP. IX. Ver. 1. Breathing out threatenings and slaughter.—A strong poetical expression. So Homer speaks of breathing rage, and Theocritus of breathing slaughter. See Orient. Lit. No. 1397.

Ver. 2. Letters to Damascus.—The Jews to this day are said to correspond with their brethren through most parts of the world; much more at this time, when the authority of the sanhedrin seems to have extended more or less to all their brethren. Damascus is thought to be the oldest city on the globe. It is first mentioned Gen. xiv. 15, and now called Demask.

Ver. 3. Near Damascus.—It is impossible to calculate the length of this journey without accurately knowing the road he went. Doddridge supposes it to have been 150 miles, and it might be more. A great way to bring his prisoners, as he proposed, ver. 2.

Ver. 4. And heard a voice.—It is only here said that Saul saw a light from

A. M. 4026.

A. D. 32.

1 Lu 24 27.

mc. 18 28.

n e. 10 47.

o Ma 16 16.

ver. 12.

p Jo 11 27.

1 Co 12 3.

1 Jo 4 15.

q 1 Ki 19 12.

Eze. 3 12.

14.

r Ps. 119 14.

111.

A. M. cir.

407.

A. D. cir. 33.

a e. 8 3.

1 Th. 1 13.

b the way.

c 1 Co 15 8.

d Mat. 25.

40, 45.

e e. 5 29.

f e. 16 30.

g Da. 10 7.

h e. 22 12.

i 1 Th. 1 13.

j ver. 21.

k 1 Co 1 2.

2 Ti. 2 22.

l e. 11 2.

Ro. 1 1.

1 Co. 15 10.

Ga. 4 15.

Ep. 3 7, 8.

n Ro. 11 13.

Ga. 2 7, 8.

o e. 25 23.

e. c.

p e. 26 17.

e. c.

5 And he said, Who art thou, Lord? And the Lord said, I am Jesus whom thou persecutest: it is hard for thee to kick ^e against the pricks.

6 And he trembling and astonished said, Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? And the Lord said unto him, Arise, and go into the city, and it shall be told thee what thou must do.

7 And the men which journeyed with him stood speechless, hearing a voice, ^f but seeing no man.

8 And Saul arose from the earth; and when his eyes were opened, he saw no man: but they led him by the hand, and brought him into Damascus.

9 And he was three days without sight, and neither did eat nor drink.

10 ¶ And there was a certain disciple at Damascus, named ^h Ananias: and to him said the Lord in a vision, Ananias. And he said, Behold, I am here, Lord.

11 And the Lord said unto him, Arise, and go into the street which is called Straight, and inquire in the house of Judas for ⁱ one called Saul of Tarsus: for, behold, he prayeth, 12 And hath seen in a vision a man named Ananias coming in, and putting ^j his hand on him, that he might receive his sight.

13 Then Ananias answered, Lord, I have heard by many of this ^k man, how much evil he hath done to thy saints at Jerusalem:

14 And here he ^l hath authority from the chief priests to bind all that call ^m on thy name.

15 But the Lord said unto him, Go thy way: for ⁿ he is a chosen vessel unto me, to bear my name before ^o the Gentiles, and ^p kings, and the ^q children of Israel:

mascus, where a great number of Jews resided, who were under control of the sanhedrin of Jerusalem. Saul, therefore, obtained letters from Caiaphas, the High Priest, to pursue the Christians thither, and bring all that he could find unto Jerusalem in bonds. By great exertions, he probably soon got within sight of this famous city, said to be founded by Abraham himself; and this circumstance might animate his zeal, and make him the more eager to clear the city from the pestilent heresy of the Nazarenes, as he called them. For we must by no means consider him as actuated by a disposition naturally cruel; but (as he told king Agrippa) he verily thought that he ^{ought} to do many things contrary to the name of Jesus of Nazareth." (Acts xxv. 9.) He, therefore, acted from a principle of duty, as other persecutors have doubtless done; and this shows that good motives will not justify bad actions, and that no motives will justify persecution. It was, perhaps, while he was flattering himself that he was engaged in a most meritorious service, that he was arrested by a light from heaven, similar to that of the Shechinah, or sacred glory, which generally accompanied the Divine presence. At the same time a voice sounded from heaven: "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?" Whether this voice spake to him in thunder (as some suppose) or not, no thunder could have so much alarmed him. He was instantly struck to the earth, and trembling, said, "Lord, who art thou?"—"I am Jesus of Nazareth, whom thou persecutest," was the reply; and it was added, "It is hard for thee to kick against the pricks,"—alluding to the goods heaven, and heard a voice: but as he twice asserts that he did see the Lord, (1 Co. xi. 1; xv. 8.) it is most reasonable to conclude that it was at this time. Another appearance of the Lord Jesus to him is mentioned chap. xxiii. 11, but this is accounted to have been after he had written the first Epistle to the Corinthians, and therefore cannot be here referred to.

Ver. 5. It is hard for thee to kick against the pricks.—Or "goads." Compare De. xxxii. 15 1 Sam. ii. 29. As this sentence is wanting in many MSS., and some versions, it is also omitted by Græcisch, who suppose it taken from chap. xxv. 14.

Ver. 7. Hearing a voice.—Booth, "a sound," (as phone is often rendered,) but not distinguishing the words.

Ver. 8. They led him.—i. e. his attendants.

Ver. 11. Called Straight.—This street is still existing, and was visited lately by Mr. Barker, one of the agents of the Church Missionary Society.—The street called Straight, says Menéndez, "is about half a mile in length, running from east to west through the city. It being narrow, and the houses jutting out in several places on both sides, you cannot have a clear prospect of its length and straightness. In this street is shown the house of Judas, with whom Paul lodged; and in the same house is an old tomb said to be Ananias's."—Bagster.—Saul of Tarsus.—The inhabitants of this city are described by Strabo, as remarkable for their attachment to literature and polite learning. Orient. Lit. No. 1402.

Ver. 15. Gentiles.—Hammond and Doddridge, "Nations." It was not yet understood that the gospel was to be preached to the uncircumcised Gentiles; and yet the thing had been so plainly intimated in our Lord's command to preach it to "all nations," and to "every creature," that it seems strange it was not.

16 For I will show him how great things he must suffer ^a for my name's sake.

17 And Ananias went his way, and entered into the house: and putting ^a his hands on him said, Brother Saul, the Lord, even Jesus, that appeared unto thee in the way as thou camest, hath sent me, that thou mightest receive thy sight, and ^a be filled with the Holy Ghost.

18 And immediately there fell from his eyes as it had been scales: and he received sight forthwith, and arose, and was baptized.

19 And when he had received meat, he was strengthened. Then was Saul certain days with the disciples which were at ^a Damascus.

20 And straightway he preached Christ in the synagogues, that he is the Son of God.

21 But all that heard him were amazed, and said; Is not this he ^a that destroyed them which called on this name in Jerusalem, and came hither for that intent, that he might bring them bound unto the chief priests?

22 But Saul increased the more in strength, and confounded the ^a Jews which dwelt at Damascus, proving that this is very Christ.

23 ¶ And after that many days were fulfilled, the Jews took counsel ^a to kill him:

24 But their laying wait was known of Saul. And they watched ^a the gates day and night to kill him.

25 Then the disciples took him by night, and let ^a him down by the wall in a basket.

26 ¶ And when Saul was come to ^a Jerusalem, he assayed to join himself to the disciples: but they were all afraid of him, and believed not that he was a disciple.

A. M. 4037.

A. D. 33.

p. c. 20, 23.

2 Co. 11, 23.

27, 11, 12.

q. c. 8, 17.

r. c. 9, 4.

s. c. 26, 30.

Gal. 1, 17.

t. Gal. 1, 13, 23.

u. c. 8, 3.

v. Ps. 84, 7.

w. c. 18, 28.

A. M. cir.

A. D. cir. 36.

k. c. 21, 12.

25, 3.

f. 2 Co. 11, 23.

26, & c.

Ps. 21, 11.

22, 33.

z. Job. 2, 15.

a. Gal. 1, 18.

b. c. 4, 36.

c. ver. 20, 22.

d. ver. 23.

e. Zec. 9, 1.

c. & c.

f. Ps. 94, 13.

g. Ro. 14, 19.

h. Ps. 86, 11.

i. Job. 10, 16.

j. Job. 11, 16.

k. Zec. 9, 20.

l. c. 22.

A. M. 4041.

A. D. 37.

k. c. 2, 16.

4, 10.

l. 1 Ch. 5, 16.

m. c. 11, 21.

2 Co. 2, 16.

n. or, Doe.

or, Roe.

o. 1 Th. 2, 10.

Tit. 2, 14.

27 But ^b Barnabas took him, and brought him to the apostles, and declared unto them how he had seen the Lord in the way, and that he had spoken to him, and how he had preached boldly ^c at Damascus in the name of Jesus.

28 And he was with them coming in and going out at Jerusalem.

29 And he spake boldly in the name of the Lord Jesus, and disputed against the Grecians: but they ^d went about to slay him.

30 Which when the brethren knew, they brought him down to Cesarea, and sent him forth to Tarsus.

31 Then ^e had the churches rest ^f throughout all Judea and Galilee and Samaria, and were ^g edified; and walking ^h in the fear of the Lord, and in the ⁱ comfort of the Holy Ghost, were ^j multiplied.

32 ¶ And it came to pass, as Peter passed throughout all quarters, he came down also to the saints which dwelt at Lydda.

33 And there he found a certain man named Eneas, which had kept his bed eight years, and was sick of the palsy.

34 And Peter said unto him, Eneas, Jesus Christ maketh ^k thee whole: arise, and make thy bed. And he arose immediately.

35 And all that dwelt in Lydda and ^l Saron saw him, and turned ^m to the Lord.

36 ¶ Now there was at Joppa a certain disciple named Tabitha, which by interpretation is called ⁿ Dorcas: this woman was full ^o of good works and alms-deeds which she did.

37 And it came to pass in those days, that she was sick, and died: whom when they had washed, they laid her in an upper chamber.

used in driving cattle, the kicking against which would only make them pierce the deeper. Thus it is with all human opposition to the divine decrees. When "the heathen raged, and Jews and Romans both combined against the Son of God," what did they? They fulfilled the very decrees which they resisted. And when Saul went with a design to bring the disciples of Jesus bound to Jerusalem, what did he? He was led blind and fasting to Damascus; and there laid praying and bewailing himself, till he was relieved by another miracle of mercy: Ananias being sent to restore sight to his eyeballs, and consolation to his mind.

Another sacred vision was necessary to fulfil the divine purposes. Ananias must be directed to Saul's apartments; and he at first hesitated, from having heard so much of his persecuting spirit, lest it should have been a plan to entrap him: "Lord, (says he), I have heard by many of this man, how much evil he hath done to thy saints;" but his fears were soon allayed by the important intelligence—"Behold he prayeth!" And he farther assured that Saul was "a chosen vessel, to bear the name of Jesus, both to Jews and Gentiles." This work he entered upon without delay, and, instead of persecuting the Christians, he confounded the Jews that dwelt at Damascus, proving that this Jesus, of whom, but a few days since, he hated the very name, was the very Christ—the true Messiah.

To return, however, to the circumstances of Saul's conversion: we are informed that the men who journeyed with him at the time stood speechless—"hearing a voice," or sound, and beholding the supernatural light; but neither understanding the words uttered, (see chap. xxii. 9), nor seeing any man; and consequently not distinguishing the person of our Saviour. Who the men were that accompanied Saul in his journey to Damascus, we are not told; whether his own servants, or the High Priest's, or some volunteer zealots from Jerusalem, we know not; possibly some of each, but it does not appear that any of them were converted. Thus were our Lord's words, in reference to another case, here fulfilled, "one was taken and another left." And thus it is to this day in our worshipping assemblies: na-ny persons may sit under the same means of grace; one may be converted while many others receive no benefit. Now, to whatever we may attribute this, the Scripture, and particularly St. Paul himself, refers the cause to divine grace. "Who nameth thee to differ?—By the grace of God, I am what I am." (1 Cor. iv. 7; xv. 10.)

Ver. 23—43. Paul persecuted—Eneas cured—and Dorcas raised from the dead.—In the preceding section we let St. Paul preaching "boldly" at Damascus; but it appears from his Epistle to the Galatians, that he did not long there remain, nor did he go immediately from thence to Jerusalem: for he there says, that before he visited the apostles, "he went into Arabia, and laboured there for a considerable time; and, after his return to Damascus, the Jews, enraged at his supposed apostasy, and his pertinacity in preaching that Jesus was the Messiah, took counsel to slay him." (Gal. i. 17, 18.) It seems that Aretas, an Arabian king, had got possession of Damascus at this time, and that the governor appointed by him abetted the design against Saul. (2 Cor. xi. 32, 33.) (Mr. Scott: See also Dr. Paley's Horæ Paulinæ, chap. v. N. 2.) Providence being, however, his protector, and his Christian brethren having got notice of their design, let him down in a basket by night, without the walls, on which he seems at this time to have lodged. But whither did he now flee? Not to hide himself among the Gentiles, but directly to Jerusalem, that he might, at all hazards, preach the name of Jesus, where he had so often and so outrageously blasphemed it.

At first the Christians here, like those at Damascus, were greatly amazed, and recollecting how, formerly, he had "breathed out threatenings and slaughter" against them, were afraid to receive him, until the kind-hearted Barnabas took him by the hand and brought him to the apostles, informing them of what they seem yet to have been unmindful, namely, his extraordinary conversion, and unexceptionable conduct for three years subsequently; for so long it was from his conversion to his first journey to Jerusalem. (Gal. i. 18.)

Here Saul resumed his activity, speaking boldly in the name

Ver. 17. Putting his hands on him—It was the custom among the ancients to lay their hands gently on any person on whom they conferred their blessing, or any benefit—as in recovery of sight. See Mat. ix. 13. Mark viii. 23.

Ver. 18. Scared—Perhaps the external coat of the eye, shrouded by the splendour of the light which struck him down—Taylor's Expos.

Ver. 24. Watched the gates—If by these are meant the gates of the city, it seems to intimate that the conspirators were numerous, for the city was very large, and had many gates; but perhaps the gates here mentioned were those which enclosed the house where he lodged. See chap. xii. 13, 14.

Ver. 25. Let him down by the wall.—In 2 Co. xi. 32, it is added, "through a window;" so that the case seems very like that of the Hebrew spies, Josh. ii. 15—(Mandred) states, that after visiting the place of vision, "about half a mile distant from the city eastward," they returned to the city, and "were shown the gate where St. Paul was let down in a basket. This gate is at present walled up, by reason of its vicinity to the east gate, which renders it of little use."—Bagster.

Ver. 27. To the apostles—Namely, Peter and James, Gal. i. 19—no others appear to have been at this time at Jerusalem.

Ver. 28. Coming in and going out—i. e. as we should say, "backwards and forwards;" but the whole was for 15 days only. Gal. i. 18.

Ver. 29. The Grecians—i. e. the Hellenists. See note on chap. vi. 1.

Ver. 30. Cesarea—A celebrated city on the banks of the Mediterranean; but Doddridge thinks it was Cesarea Philippi, on the borders of Syria.

Ver. 32. Lydda—A considerable town, but one day's journey from Jerusalem, in the way to Joppa. Joppa is now called Jaffa.

Ver. 34. Make thy bed—i. e. smooth it, and roll it up out of the way.

Ver. 35. Saron—Or Sharon, a district between Joppa and Cesarea of Palestine—Calmet.

Ver. 36. Dorcas—It was common not only among the Arabs, but also among the Greeks, to give their females the names of agreeable animals. Tabitha appears to have been a word used in the Syriac, which being interpreted is Dorcas; that is, an antelope: an animal remarkable for beautiful 38 And forasmuch as Lydda was nigh to Joppa, and the disciples had heard that Peter was there, they sent unto him two men, desiring him that he would not delay to come to them.

39 Then Peter arose and went with them. When he was come, they brought him into the upper chamber: and all the widows stood by him weeping, and showing the coats and garments which Dorcas made, while she was with them.

40 But Peter put them all forth, and kneeled down, and prayed; and turning him to the body, said, "Tabitha, arise." And she opened her eyes: and when she saw Peter, she sat up.

41 And he gave her his hand, and lifted her up, and when he had called the saints and widows, he presented her alive.

42 And it was known throughout all Joppa; and many believed in the Lord.

43 And it came to pass, that he tarried many days in Joppa with one Simon a tanner.

CHAPTER X.

1 Cornelius, a devout man, being commanded by an angel, sendeth for Peter: 11 who by a vision is taught not to despise the Gentiles. 24 As he preacheth Christ to Cornelius and his company, 44 the Holy Ghost telleth on them, 45 and they are baptized.

THERE was a certain man in Cesarea called Cornelius, a centurion of the band called the Italian band,

2 A devout man, and one that feared God with all his house, which gave much alms to the people, and prayed to God alway.

3 He saw in a vision evidently about the of the Lord Jesus, and disputing with the Grecians, (or those Jews who spoke the Greek language,) till at length they also conspired to slay him; in consequence of which the brethren privately conducted him to Cesarea, and then sent him on to his native city, Tarsus. "Then had the churches rest," says St. Luke; partly through the conversion of Paul, their great persecutor, but more probably through an alarm among the Jews, owing to a threatened attempt, by force of arms, to introduce a statue of Caligula into their most holy place: this turned their attention from persecuting the Christians to the necessity of seeking their own preservation; and thus does the gracious providence of God produce peace to his church out of the dangers and contentions of their enemies. This favourable interval may have lasted, according to Dr. Lardner, from one to three years before A. D. 40.

Our attention is now drawn to the history of Peter, who, in passing through Joppa, found a man named Eneas, who had been bed-ridden eight years, and cured him in the name of Jesus Christ. This was a mean of greatly increasing the number of believers; and the report reaching Joppa, where a female disciple of the name of Tabitha, (or Dorcas,) who was greatly beloved and respected for her benevolence and charity, was recently deceased, and was just laid out in an upper chamber, her friends sent for Peter; and, after secret prayer for a divine power, he raised her from the dead, which produced a farther enlargement of the Christian church.

But we must not leave the short account here given of Dorcas, without recommending her amiable example to our female readers—to such, at least, as have not already copied it; for we have the pleasure to know, that there are many Christian ladies already thus engaged: and though we cannot promise them an exemption from mortality; yet, to such as engage in these "labours of love" for Christ's sake, we are authorized to say, they shall not pass unrewarded.

CHAP. X. Ver. 1—33. The visions of Cornelius and of Peter.—Hitherto (says Mr. Scott) none had been admitted into the Christian church, but Jews, Samaritans, and proselytes, who had been circumcised, and bound themselves to keep the whole Jewish law; but it is the opinion of Dean Prideaux, Lord Barrington, and many other learned men, that besides those who were called Proselytes of Justice, (or Righteousness,) there were others called Proselytes of the Gate, and understood in the fourth commandment under the denomination of "strangers within their gates," meaning devout but uncircumcised Gentiles, who renounced idolatry, and observed the moral law, and the seven precepts of Noah, but eyes. On this account it might have been given to the person here designated by it.—Parthurst.

Ver. 40. Put them all forth.—Compare Mat. ix. 23—25.

CHAP. X. Ver. 1. Italian band.—[The Italian band, or rather cohort, (a regiment sometimes consisting of from 555 to 1105 infantry,) is not unknown to the Roman writers.]—Bagster.

Ver. 4. What is it, Lord?—If this be addressed to the angel, perhaps the pronoun my should here be understood, as in Num. xi. 28, "My lord Moses, forbid them."

Ver. 6. Simon a tanner.—The Rabbin say, that this was considered as a mean trade, and execrated by the Jews.—He shall tell thee, &c.—This last

A. M. cir. 4015.
A. D. cir. 41.

P or, he grieved.

q Ec. 9. 10.

r Mat. 9. 25.

s Ma. 5. 41, 42.
Jn. 11. 43.

t 1 Ki. 17. 23.

u Jn. 12. 11.

v e. 8. 2.
22. 12.

w Ec. 7. 13.

x Ge. 18. 19.
1st. 101. 2.
7.
c. 13. 8.

y Ps. 41. 1.

z Ps. 119. 2.
Pr. 23. 5.

f He. 1. 14

g Is. 45. 19.

h e. 9. 43.

i e. 11. 14.

j e. 11. 5, &c.

k e. 7. 56.
Re. 19. 11

ninth hour of the day an angel of God coming in to him, and saying unto him, Cornelius.

4 And when he looked on him, he was afraid, and said, What is it, Lord? And he said unto him, Thy prayers and thine alms are come up for a memorial before God.

5 And now send men to Joppa, and call for one Simon, whose surname is Peter:

6 He lodgeth with one Simon a tanner, whose house is by the sea side; he shall tell thee what thou oughtest to do.

7 And when the angel which spake unto Cornelius was departed, he called two of his household servants, and a devout soldier of them that waited on him continually;

8 And when he had declared all these things unto them, he sent them to Joppa.

9 ¶ On the morrow, as they went on their journey, and drew nigh unto the city, Peter went up upon the house-top to pray about the sixth hour:

10 And he became very hungry, and would have eaten; but while they made ready, he fell into a trance,

11 And saw heaven opened, and a certain vessel descending unto him, as it had been a great sheet, knit at the four corners, and let down to the earth:

12 Wherein were all manner of four-footed beasts of the earth, and wild beasts, and creeping things, and fowls of the air.

paid no regard to the Mosaic ritual, and therefore they were admitted into the temple, no farther than the court of the Gentiles. This opinion of two kinds of proselytes, Prebend Tousend has lately defended at great length, and with considerable ability. The principal argument which weighs with us is, that Peter objected to go to preach to Cornelius, as unclean, till he received a special command for that purpose, which could not have been the case had he been an observer of the Jewish laws, like the proselytes of righteousness.

Let us now attend to the two visions before us, and first to that of Cornelius. He, as we have seen, was a Gentile proselyte, who "feared God and wrought righteousness," notwithstanding he belonged to the military profession, whose works are too often of a very opposite description. This man was a Centurion, that is, he commanded a hundred men of the band called Italian, probably from its consisting chiefly of Italians. The military profession is not only very ineligible for Christians, as it presents many temptations to licentiousness; but that of a Roman soldier was particularly obnoxious, as he was trained up to violence and plunder—to oppress the weak, and to enslave the world. Engaged in the profession, however, previous to their conversion, it could be no easy matter, especially for the common soldiers, to disentangle themselves from it; and, indeed, the attempt cost many of them their lives. The only case in which we can contemplate the soldiers' character with pleasure is, when we see them enrolled for the protection of our liberties and our lives.

Cornelius was, however, under these most unfavourable circumstances, still a man of piety and benevolence; inasmuch that an angel was sent to announce to him the acceptance of his prayers and alms-deeds; and, at the same time, to direct him to send for an apostle, who should direct him to the true way of salvation and eternal life. But why could not the angel himself do this? For this plain reason, none are so well qualified to recommend a remedy, as those who have felt its efficacy. An angel might say, "He shall save his people from their sins;" but Peter could say, "He hath saved me, a sinner, though I forsook him and denied him."

But Peter needed as much preparation as Cornelius. What! Peter, the apostle of the Jews, associate himself with a sinner of the Gentiles?—a son of Abraham visit and converse with a soldier of that power which had enslaved his country? Far be this from Peter. But behold a large sheet let down from heaven, and filled with beasts and creeping things, unclean as well as clean, intended to represent the Gentile world, who were regarded by the Jews as no better than dogs. In their ter member of the verse is omitted in four ancient, and many other MSS., in both the Syriac versions, &c.; and is rejected by Wetstein, Griesbach, and Michaelis.

Ver. 9. The sixth hour.—i. e. noon.

Ver. 11. A certain vessel.—Doddridge, "Something descending to him like a great sheet." &c.—[Skenos, any thing which may be considered as a receptacle; and is therefore applicable to a sheet, or any thing woven from flax, tied up at the four corners, which our word vessel is not.]—Bagster.

Ver. 12. Four-footed beasts.—Both clean and unclean, say some; but Doddridge remarks, that in this case Peter might have made a selection. He thinks therefore, that they were all unclean.

13 And there came a voice to him, Rise, Peter; kill, and eat.

14 But Peter said, Not so, Lord; for I have never eaten any thing that is common or unclean.

15 And the voice spake unto him again the second time, What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common.

16 This was done thrice: and the vessel was received up again into heaven.

17 ¶ Now while Peter doubted in himself what this vision which he had seen should mean, behold, the men which were sent from Cornelius had made inquiry for Simon's house, and stood before the gate,

18 And called, and asked whether Simon, which was surnamed Peter, were lodged there.

19 While Peter thought on the vision, the Spirit said unto him, Behold, three men seek thee.

20 Arise therefore, and get thee down, and go with them doubting nothing: for I have sent them.

21 Then Peter went down to the men which were sent unto him from Cornelius; and said, Behold, I am he whom ye seek: what is the cause wherefore ye are come?

22 And they said, Cornelius the centurion, a just man, and one that feareth God, and of good report among all the nation of the Jews, was warned from God by a holy angel to send for thee into his house, and to hear words of thee.

23 Then called he them in, and lodged them. And on the morrow Peter went away with them, and certain brethren from Joppa accompanied him.

24 And the morrow after they entered into Cesarea. And Cornelius waited for them, and had called together his kinsmen and near friends.

25 ¶ And as Peter was coming in, Cornelius met him, and fell down at his feet, and worshipped him.

26 But Peter took him up, saying, Stand up; I myself also am a man.

view, as Peter says, it was unlawful for a Jew to keep company with one of another nation; but now God showed the apostle that he ought not to call any man common or unclean, whom he had cleansed.

From the fact here stated, that "he that fears God and works righteousness may be accepted by him," previous to his knowledge of Jesus Christ, some have hastily inferred, that an explicit knowledge of Christ is by no means necessary to salvation. When we speak of things necessary to salvation, we must be careful, in the first place, not to attempt to "limit the Holy One of Israel," or tie up the Author of our Being, even to methods of his own prescribing to his creatures. The laws of God in no case restrain his own mercy. There is nothing, however, in the case of Cornelius, to show that the knowledge of Christ is not, in the ordinary course of things, necessary as the foundation of our faith and practice; for though Christ had not before been preached to him, yet as he was a pious man, and so friendly to the Jews, there can be no doubt but that he was acquainted with the Old Testament Scriptures in the Greek language, and had been in the practice of reading them; he had also (ver. 37) some knowledge of the preaching and baptism of John, and of Jesus himself, who went about doing good: his preconceptions, therefore, were much in favour of the gospel

Ver. 13 Kill, and eat—(Or, sacrifice and eat). The spirit of the heavenly direction seems to be this, says Dr. A. Clarke,—"The middle wall of partition is now pulled down; the Jews and Gentiles are called to become one flock, under one shepherd and bishop of souls. Thou, Peter, shalt open the door of faith to the Gentiles, and he also the minister of the circumcision. Rise up; already a life-soul sacrifice is prepared; go and offer it to God; and let thy soul feed on the fruits of his mercy." &c.—Bagster.

Ver. 24 Cesarea—This city, once an obscure fortress called Strato's Tower, was built and superbly decorated by Herod the Great, and called Cesarea, in honour of Augustus Cesar, to whom he dedicated it in the 28th year of his reign. It was situated on the shore of the Mediterranean, between Joppa and Dora, with a haven, rendered by Herod the most convenient on the coast. Thirty miles from Jaffa, or Joppa, 32 from Ramlay, and 36 from Acre, or Ptolemais; and, according to Josephus, six hundred stadia, or 75 miles, from Jerusalem, though the real distance is probably not more than 62 miles. Nothing now remains of the former splendour of Cesarea: the supposed sites of the ancient edifices are mere mounds of indelible form; the waves wash

A. M. cir.
4045.
A. D. cir.
41.

1 Le. 11.2.
&c.
20.25.
De. 14.3.
&c.
Eze. 414.

m. Mat. 15.11
ver. 24.
ho. 14.14.
&c.
1 Co. 10.23.
1 Ti. 4.4.

n e 9.43.

o a. 11.12.

p e. 15.7.

q ver. 1, &c.

r e. 22.12.
He. 11.2.

s ver. 45.

t c. 14.11, 15.
Re. 19.10.
22.9.

u Jn. 4.9.

v e. 15.8.9.
Ep. 3.6.

w Mat. 23.3.
c. 11.10.

x ver. 2, &c.
Da. 10.12.
He. 6.10.

y De. 5.27.

z De. 10.17.
2 Ch. 19.7.
Job. 34.19.
Ro. 2.11.
Ga. 2.6.

1 Fe. 1.17.

a Ro. 2.13.
3.22, 26.
10.12, 13.
Ep. 2.13.
18.

b Is. 57.19.
Col. 1.20.

c Ps. 21.7.
10.
Mat. 28.18.
Ro. 14.9.

1 Co. 15.27.
Ep. 1.20.
22.

1 Pe. 3.22.
Re. 17.14.

d Lu. 4.18.
He. 4.9.

e Mat. 12.15.

f 1 Jn. 3.8.

g Jn. 3.2.

27 And as he talked with him, he went in, and found many that were come together.

28 And he said unto them, Ye know how that it is an unlawful thing for a man that is a Jew to keep company, or come unto one of another nation; but God hath showed me that I should not call any man common or unclean.

29 Therefore came I unto you without gain-saying, as soon as I was sent for: I ask therefore for what intent ye have sent for me?

30 And Cornelius said, Four days ago I was fasting until this hour; and at the ninth hour I prayed in my house, and, behold, a man stood before me in bright clothing,

31 And said, Cornelius, thy prayer is heard, and thine alms are had in remembrance in the sight of God.

32 Send therefore to Joppa, and call hither Simon, whose surname is Peter; he is lodged in the house of one Simon a tanner by the sea side: who, when he cometh, shall speak unto thee.

33 Immediately therefore I sent to thee; and thou hast well done that thou art come. Now therefore are we all here present before God, to hear all things that are commanded thee of God.

34 ¶ Then Peter opened his mouth, and said, Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons:

35 But in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him.

36 The word which God sent unto the children of Israel, preaching peace by Jesus Christ: (he is Lord of all:)

37 That word, I say, ye know, which was published throughout all Judea, and began from Galilee, after the baptism which John preached; revelation. Where God prepares the heart to receive Christ, we have every reason to expect Christ will be revealed to it—though perhaps this may never be known to us.

38 How God anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Ghost and with power: who went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed of the devil; for God was with him.

Ver. 34—48. Peter's sermon before Cornelius and his friends, with the gift of the Holy Ghost, and the baptism of the first Gentiles.—Cornelius having sent for Peter to preach to him the glad tidings of salvation, rightly judged it would be wrong to confine them to himself and family, and therefore did well to invite his friends and neighbours to unite with him: accordingly, when Peter came, (verse 27,) he found many that were come together, and what is especially worthy of the remark of Christian congregations, they did not come dropping in (as we often see) during the whole time of service, but, says Cornelius, "We are all here present before God, to hear all those things that are commanded thee of God."

"Then Peter opened his mouth"—that is, he spoke with freedom and boldness. "I perceive (said he) that God is no respecter of persons; but in every nation, he that feareth God and worketh righteousness (as did Cornelius) is accepted with him." But still it was well that he had sent for Peter, for he had still more good news to tell them: as that he was not only a prophet sent of God; but also Jesus Christ, the Messiah, the anointed Saviour: nor was this all; he was a person of superior to the runs of the mole, the tower, and the port; the whole of the surrounding country is a sandy desert; and not a creature, except beasts of prey, resides within many miles of this silent desolation.—Bagster.

Ver. 36. Stand up—Did Jesus say so? or what are we to infer upon the doctrine of the simple humanity of Jesus? Was he less pious, or less humble than St. Peter?

Ver. 38. An unlawful thing—So Josephus:—"Those strangers who come to us on any other account but that of religion, Moses permitted not to be mixed with us in any familiarities."

Ver. 33. That are commanded thee of God—It was as easy for God to reveal Christ to Cornelius as to tell him where to find Peter. But having commenced his preached gospel for the conversion of the world, he honours that gospel, and makes it necessary for Peter to go as a missionary to Cornelius. So God has recently brought heathen men to Christian countries, where they have received the gospel, (as Chookrah;) or the ingrate anxious heathen has met the missionary, and rejoiced in the preaching of Christ. The heathen must have the preached gospel.

39 And ^b we are witnesses of all things which he did both in the land of the Jews, and in Jerusalem; whom they slew and hanged on a tree:

40 Him God raised up ^c the third day, and showed him openly;

41 Not ^d to all the people, but unto witnesses chosen before ^e of God, even to us, who did eat and drink with him after he rose from the dead.

42 And he commanded us ^f to preach unto the people, and to testify that ^g it is he which was ordained of God to be the Judge of quick and dead.

43 To him ^h give all the prophets witness, that through his name ⁱ whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins.

44 ¶ While Peter yet spake these words, the Holy Ghost ^j fell on all them which heard the word.

45 And ^k they of the circumcision which believed were astonished, as many as came with Peter, because that on the Gentiles also was poured out the gift of the Holy Ghost.

46 For they heard them ^l speak with tongues, and magnify God. Then answered Peter, 47 Can ^m any man forbid water, that these should not be baptized, which have received the Holy Ghost as well as we?

48 And he commanded them to be baptized in the name of the Lord. Then prayed they him to tarry certain days.

CHAPTER XI.

^j Peter, being accused for going in to the Gentiles, 5 maketh his defence, 18 which is accepted. 19 The gospel being spread into Phenice, and Cyprus, and Antioch, Barnabas is sent to confirm them. 26 The disciples there are first called Christians. 27 They send relief to the brethren in Judea in time of famine

AND the apostles and brethren that were in Judea heard that the Gentiles had also received the word of God.

2 And when Peter was come up to Jerusalem, they ^a that were of the circumcision contended with him,

3 Saying, Thou wentest in to men uncircumcised, and didst eat with them.

preme dignity—He was "Lord of all"—Lord of prophets and apostles, yea, of men and angels. "And we are witnesses," adds Peter, "of all things which he did both in Judea, and especially at Jerusalem. Moreover, when the Jews slew him and hung him on a tree, we are witnesses that God raised him up on the third day, and showed him openly"—not to all the people—"but unto witnesses chosen of God, even to us, who did eat and drink with him after he rose from the dead. And he commanded us to preach unto the people, that it is he which is ordained of God to be the Judge of quick and dead. To him (also) give all the prophets witness, that through his name, whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins."

Thus boldly and clearly did Peter display this gospel of the grace of God, to Gentiles as well as Jews, and his word was confirmed by the miraculous effusion of the Holy Ghost, not only in its ordinary, but in its extraordinary gifts on Gentiles as well as Jews—he therefore commanded them to be baptized; and thus was the Christian church opened to all nations, and the party wall between Jews and Gentiles broken down for ever.

CHAP. XI. Peter, to the council, defends his preaching to the Gentiles.—Nothing is more certain than that the infallibility of the apostles extended only to their official character, as preachers and penmen of the sacred Scriptures. Peter's conduct, which was suspected by his brethren in this case to have been improper, was in another instance declared by Paul to have been decidedly wrong—"He was to be blamed." (Gal. ii. 11.) In the present instance he justified himself, however, in a manner perfectly satisfactory; and his brethren of the apostles and other disciples at Jerusalem, when they heard of the extraordinary manner in which he had been led to preach to the Gentiles, and the remarkable success which had attended his labours, glorified God, saying, "Then hath God also to the Gentiles granted repentance unto life!" A circumstance

A. M. cir.
4045.
A. D. c. r.
41.

b Lu 24. 48.
c 2. 32.

i Mat 28. 1, 2.

j Jn 14. 22.
20 & 21

k Jn 15. 16.

l Mat 28.
19, 20.

m Jn 5. 27, 27
c 17. 31.
2 Co 5. 10.
1 Pe 4. 5.

n Lu 24. 27,
44.
Jn 5. 39.

o Jn 3. 14.
Ro 10. 11.

p c 4. 31.

q ver. 23.

r c 2. 4.

s c 8. 12.

A. M. cir.
4046.
A. D. cir. 42.

a c 10. 23, 23
Ga 2. 12.
c 10. 9, &c.

b Jn 16. 13.

c Pa 19. 7.
11.
Jn 6. 63, 68

d c 2. 4.

e Mat 3. 11.
Jn 1. 25, 33.
c 1. 5.

f 1. 41. 3.
Joel 2. 29.

g c 15. 8, 9.

4 But Peter rehearsed the matter from the beginning, and expounded it by order unto them, saying,

5 I was in the city of Joppa praying: and in a trance I saw a vision, A certain vessel descend, as it had been a great sheet, let down from heaven by four corners; and it came even to me:

6 Upon the which when I had fastened mine eyes, I considered, and saw four-footed beasts of the earth, and wild beasts, and creeping things, and fowls of the air.

7 And I heard a voice saying unto me, Arise, Peter; slay and eat.

8 But I said, Not so, Lord: for nothing common or unclean hath at any time entered into my mouth.

9 But the voice answered me again from heaven, What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common.

10 And this was done three times: and all were drawn up again into heaven.

11 And behold, immediately there were three men already come unto the house where I was, sent from Caesarea unto me.

12 And the Spirit ^b bade me go with them, nothing doubting. Moreover these six brethren accompanied me, and we entered into the man's house:

13 And he showed us how he had seen an angel in his house, which stood and said unto him, Send men to Joppa, and call for Simon, whose surname is Peter;

14 Who shall tell thee ^c words, whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved.

15 And as I began to speak, the Holy Ghost fell on them, as ^d on us at the beginning.

16 Then remembered I the word of the Lord, how that he said, John ^e indeed baptized with water; but ^f ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost.

17 Forasmuch then as God ^g gave them the

in which we also, who are sinners of the Gentiles, are called upon to rejoice, and magnify the grace of God.

The next chapter leads us back to the time of Stephen's death, when the brethren that were scattered abroad preached the gospel as far as Phenice, and Cyprus, and Antioch; but to the Jews only. And some "men of Cyprus and Cyrene, Greeks by birth, spake unto the Grecians;" but whether by these Grecians we are to understand Jews who spake the Greek language, (as in chap. vi. 1.) or native Greeks, is a point much disputed. We find ourselves strongly inclined to the former, which is supported by the present Greek text; for it does not appear that Peter had yet preached to Cornelius, or, if he had, that it could be known so far off as Antioch. They had not received any special commission to preach to Gentiles, nor (strange as it may seem) does it appear that they had given the proper interpretation to our Lord's order of preaching to "all nations;" but seem rather to have understood it of preaching to the Jews and proselytes in "all nations" wherever they might find them scattered.

The converts at Antioch were, however, so numerous, that the church at Jerusalem thought proper to send thither Barnabas to see how the cause of Christ went on; and "when he had seen the grace of God," that is, the effects which it produced on the lives and characters of the converts, "he was glad," and affectionately exhorted them to persevere: "for he was a good man, and full of the Holy Ghost and of faith." He was not only a pious and sincere convert, but generous and "kindhearted" to the brethren, as we have explained his name, (see note on ch. iv. 36.) and "zealously affected" always in "a good cause," as this evidently was.

It may be recollected, also, that Barnabas was the person who introduced Saul to the apostles at Jerusalem, and informed them of his conversion, (ch. ix. 27:) and from that time there seems to have been a particular attachment formed between

It was a type of the Christian church, separated from the world; the living creatures of all kinds of which it was full, were the people of all nations included in the church; it was knit at the four corners, to show that they were gathered together from the four quarters of the globe; it descended from heaven, in the same manner as the New Jerusalem is represented in the Apocalypse, to intimate, that though the church exists in the world, it is not of the world, but of celestial origin; and the drawing back of it into heaven was designed to teach us, that as the church has its origin from heaven, so it shall return victorious thither. In this representation, the condition of the

Ver. 41. Not to all the people.—This has been made an objection by many infidel writers; to which we can only reply, that God is not bound to satisfy those who are unwilling to be convinced.

Ver. 43. All the prophets, &c.—Most of them in a very express manner, and others indirectly; for "the testimony of Jesus is the Spirit of prophecy." Rev. xix. 10.

CHAP. XI. Ver. 5. A great sheet.—[Camerarius would render the word sheet a table napkin, and Daniel Heinsius, by a shepherd's bag, or sack, in which they were accustomed to put food, platters, trenchers, and other things.

like gift as he did unto us, who believed on the Lord Jesus Christ; what ^b was ^t, that I could withstand God?

18 When they heard these things, they held their peace, and glorified God, saying, Then hath God also to the Gentiles ¹ granted repentance unto life.

19 ¶ Now they ¹ which were scattered abroad upon the persecution that arose about Stephen travelled as far as Phenice, and Cyprus, and Antioch, preaching the word to none but ^k unto the Jews only.

20 And some of them were men of Cyprus and Cyrene, which, when they were come to Antioch, spake unto the ¹ Grecians, preaching the Lord Jesus.

21 And the ^m hand of the Lord was with them: and a great number believed, and turned ⁿ unto the Lord.

22 ¶ Then tidings of these things came up to the ears of the church which was in Jerusalem: and they sent forth ^o Barnabas, that he should go as far as Antioch.

23 Who, when he came, and had seen the grace of God, was ^p glad, and exhorted ^q them all, that with purpose ^r of ^s heart they would cleave unto the Lord.

24 For he was a good man, and full ^t of the Holy Ghost and of faith: and ^u much people was added unto the Lord.

25 Then ^v departed Barnabas to Tarsus, for to seek Saul:

26 And when he had found him, he brought him unto Antioch. And it came to pass, that a whole year they assembled themselves ^w with the church, and taught ^x much people. And the disciples were called Christians first in Antioch.

27 ¶ And in these days came ^y prophets from Jerusalem unto Antioch.

them; finding, therefore, an opening for great usefulness in that city, he went to seek Saul, whose active and ardent mind he knew well adapted for such a sphere of labour; and it was possibly from his and his brethren's perpetual and zealous urging of the doctrine of "Christ, and him crucified," that the disciples here first received "the name of Christians." This name, though probably given them first by way of reproach, met their own wishes, and fulfilled the design of God. O that this name had been alone admitted, instead of the innumerable terms since adopted, which mark one an admirer of Paul and another of Apollos—one a follower of Luther and another of Calvin, &c.; for who are all these but servants of one Master, even CHRIST?

At this period, Luke informs us, "came prophets from Jerusalem to Antioch, one of whom, named Agabus, signified, by the spirit" of inspiration, the approach of famine in Judea. In consequence of this, without waiting till the distress should overwhelm them, the new converts in Antioch made a liberal subscription (or collection) for their brethren in Judea, which they sent by the hands of Barnabas and Saul, to the elders of the church at Jerusalem—those doubtless who had the management of the church's secular concerns.

CHAP. XII. Ver. 1—19. Herod's cruelty—Peter's miraculous deliverance.—Of all the royal names recorded in sacred his-believing Gentiles is described. They were about to constitute one church with the believing Jews, and be made partakers of the heavenly inheritance. — Bozster.

Ver. 17. What saw I, that I could withstand God?—"O that the sin of withstanding God [by laying down rules of Christian communion, which exclude any whom He has admitted] may not be laid to the charge of those who [act] with a good intention, but in an over fondness for their own forms." — Wesley.

Ver. 18. Held their peace—Doddridge, "acquiesced."

Ver. 19. Antioch—This was the capital of Syria, and the third city in the Roman empire; Rome and Alexandria only ranking before it.—Doddridge.

Ver. 20. To the Grecians—or Hellenists; that is, Jews who used the Greek language. See note on chap. vi. 1. But the Alexandrian MS., which is favoured by the Syriac and other ancient versions, and some Christian Fathers, reads, "the Greeks;" plainly meaning Greek Greeks, which Doddridge, Lardner, and Griesbach decidedly prefer; Campbell, Scott, and Boothroyd, however, defend the common version.

Ver. 25. Tarsus—the metropolis of Cilicia, situated on the banks of the river Cydnus, which flowed through it, and divided it into two parts.

Ver. 26. With the church—"In the church." So Hammond, Doddridge, &c.; meaning, perhaps, the house in which they used to assemble; but Townsend objects to this on the ground of their being probably too numerous; by the church, then, we may understand, the body of the faithful in that city. — The disciples were called Christians first in Antioch.—Doddridge thinks the original implies that they were so named by divine appointment, but

A M 4017.
A D 43.
o c. 27.
p 3 in 4.
q 13. 43.
r Ps 17. 3.
s 2 Co 1. 17.
t Pr 23. 15.
u ver. 21.
v c. 9. 27, 30.
w c. 11.
x Mat 28. 19.
y c. 9. 17.
z c. 11.
A M 4018.
A D 44.
b Mat 4. 21.
c c. 21. 27.
d Ju 2. 18.
e Ex 12. 11.
f or, instant and earnest prayer was made
2 Co 1. 11.
g Ps 6. 18.
h 1 Th 5. 17.
i Ju 5. 16.
j Ps 37. 32.
k c. 5. 19.
l c. 16. 25.

28 And there stood up one of them named Agabus, and signified by the spirit that there should be great dearth throughout all the world: which came to pass in the days of Claudius Cesar.

29 Then the disciples, every man according to his ability, determined to send ^a relief unto the brethren which dwelt in Judea:

30 Which also they did, and ^b sent it to the elders by the hands of Barnabas and Saul.

CHAPTER XII.

1 King Herod persecuteth the Christians, killeth James, and imprisoneth Peter: whom an angel delivereth upon the prayers of the church. 20 In his pride taking to himself the honour due to God, he is stricken by an angel, and dieth miserably. 24 After this the word of God prospereth.

NOW about that time Herod the king ^a stretched forth his hands to vex certain of the church.

2 And he killed James ^b the brother of John with the sword.

3 And because he saw it pleased ^c the Jews, he proceeded farther to take Peter ^d also. (Then were the days ^e of unleavened bread.)

4 And when he had apprehended him, he put him in prison, and delivered him to four quarters of soldiers to keep him; intending after Easter to bring him forth to the people.

5 Peter therefore was kept in prison: but ^f prayer was made without ceasing of the church unto God for him.

6 And when Herod would have brought him forth, the same night Peter was sleeping between two soldiers, bound with two chains: and the keepers before the door kept the prison.

7 And, behold, the angel ^g of the Lord came upon him, and a light shined in the prison: and he smote Peter on the side, and raised him up, saying, Arise up quickly. And ^h his chains fell off from his hands.

8 And the angel said unto him, Gird thyself, tory, those of Pharaoh and of Herod rank the highest for cruelty and impiety. Herod the Great murdered a number of infants, in hope of destroying the infant Jesus, (Mat. ii. 16:) to say nothing of his cruelty to his own children, which led Augustus to say, it were better to have been his hog than his son. Herod Antipas, his son, sacrificed the holy prophet, John the Baptist, in order to gratify an adulteress, with whom he lived in incest. The Herod here introduced to our notice was Herod Agrippa, grandson of the former, whom he much resembled, both in his character and end. St. Luke calls him "Herod the king." At first he was simply a tetrarch, with a royal title; but his dominions were gradually increased, till they became equal in extent to those of his grandfather, and his power no less absolute and tyrannical. Josephus speaks of his great kindness to the Jews, his countrymen, which induced him to live much at Jerusalem, where he "observed the Jewish institutions, practised the purity they require, and did not let a day pass without worshipping God according to the law." Yet notwithstanding all this religion, he killed James, the brother of John; and "because it pleased the Jews," he imprisoned Peter also, meaning to bring him out to public execution at the close of Easter, or, more properly, the Passover.

Here we stop to make two observations: 1. That the strictest forms of outward religion may be observed, while the Parkhurst denies the word any such meaning; and it seems much more probable that they received the name of Christians, as they had done those of Nazarenes and Galileans, from the populace. So in modern times the names of Lutherans, Calvinists, were not assumed, but given.

Ver. 28. Great dearth—[This was probably the famine which took place in the fourth year of Claudius, which continued for several years, and in which, says Josephus, "many died for want of food." — Bozster. — All the world—So the Greek word confessedly signifies, but the best interpreters are compelled by Lardner and Doddridge, to restrict it to Judea; and the former, for authority, quotes the LXX on Jos. ii. 3; 1st. xiii. 5; and Luke iv. 25; xvi. 28. — In the days of Claudius Cesar—[Claudius Cesar succeeded C. Caligula, A. D. 41; and after a reign of upwards of 13 years, he was poisoned by his wife Agrippina, and succeeded by Nero.] — Bozster.

CHAP. XII. Ver. 1. Herod—stretched forth his hands—Doddridge, "laid hands on some of the church to afflict them."

Ver. 2. With the sword—1. by beheading him.

Ver. 4. Four quarters—i. e. four parties, of four soldiers each. — After Easter—Doddridge, "The Passover" (Gr. Pascha).

Ver. 5. Without ceasing—Doddridge, "Ernest and continual prayer was made," &c. This may be illustrated by an allusion to Moses, whose hands being stretched out in prayer for Israel, were held up by Aaron and Hur. Ex. xiv. 11, 12.

Ver. 6. Bound with two chains—One hand being chained to the soldier on his right hand, the other to another on his left.

Ver. 7. His chains—[The two chains with which his hands were fastened] and bind on thy sandals. And so he did. And he saith unto him, Cast thy garment about thee, and follow me.

9 And he went out, and followed him; and wist not that it was true which was done by the angel; but thought he saw a vision.

10 When they were past the first and the second ward, they came unto the iron gate that leadeth unto the city; which opened to them of his own accord: and they went out, and passed on through one street; and forthwith the angel departed from him.

11 And when Peter was come to himself, he said, Now I know of a surety, that the Lord hath sent his angel, and hath delivered me out of the hand of Herod, and from all the expectation of the people of the Jews.

12 And when he had considered the thing, he came to the house of Mary the mother of John, whose surname was Mark; where many were gathered together praying.

13 And as Peter knocked at the door of the gate, a damsel came to hearken, named Rhoda.

14 And when she knew Peter's voice, she opened not the gate for gladness, but ran in, and told how Peter stood before the gate.

15 And they said unto her, Thou art mad. But she constantly affirmed that it was even so. Then said they, It is his angel.

16 But Peter continued knocking: and when they had opened the door, and saw him, they were astonished.

deepest villany still lurks within the heart. Herod failed not daily to worship God, while he committed one murder after another to gratify the Jews. 2. "It is hard to kick against the pricks," or to fight against the Almighty. Herod had seized Peter, and held him now in prison, under guard of sixteen soldiers, who were to relieve each other in parties of four each, to watch him night and day, and he was kept in perfect safety till the very night before his intended execution. But a machinery was now at work of which Herod had no conception. While soldiers watched him night and day, so did angels; and the whole church of God at Jerusalem were engaged in prayer, "without ceasing," on his behalf. This was not necessary for his deliverance, for the eye of God was on him; but the occasion called forth all the pious affections of the brethren, and all the holy energy of prayer. We hear nothing of Peter's prayers, but he was a prisoner in Christ's cause, and had doubtless committed himself into his hands and gone to sleep. Though he had before been rescued by an angel, it does not appear that he expected the visit of another heavenly messenger, or he would have kept awake for him. Peter was secure, however, as human power could make him, bound with chains, and sleeping between two soldiers. But the moment of deliverance is now come. "Man's extremity is God's opportunity." A heavenly radiance, in the dead of night, penetrates those walls which, perhaps, the sunbeams had never entered. An angel enters and smites Peter to awake him, while probably the same stroke smote the guards, both within and without, with slumbers irresistible. Peter rises in surprise; his chains drop from him like burnt flax; locks and bolts give way instantly to the angelic touch; and even the massy iron gate leading outward into the street opens of its own accord. The angel conveyed him so far as he was commissioned, and then vanished. Hitherto Peter thought it was all a dream; but, finding himself at liberty, he repaired instantly to the house of John, surnamed Mark, where he knew the brethren were accustomed to assemble for devotion. Here he knocked, and the maid Rhoda, who kept the gate, came to listen and inquire who was there. She knew Peter's voice in a moment, and, frantic with joy, ran in to announce it. At first they thought the woman mad, and, when she still per-

to those of the two soldiers between whom he slept. This, it appears, was the Roman method of securing a prisoner; and seems to be that which is intimated in verse 6.—Bagster.

Ver. 9. Wist not—(That is, he knew not; teist being the preter tense of the obsolete verb to wiss, from the Saxon wissen, in German wissen, and Dutch wissen, to think, imagine, know.)—Bagster.

Ver. 11. Peter was come.—(He was in an ecstasy: and it was only when the angel left him, that he was fully convinced that all was real.)—Bagster.

Ver. 12. When he had considered.—Doddridge, rather, when he recollected himself.

Ver. 13. Peter knocked at the door.—(The door was probably shut for fear of the Jews: and, as most of the houses in the East have an area before the door, it might have been this outer gate at which Peter stood knocking.)—B.

Ver. 15. It is his angel.—(They spoke according to the notion, whether true or false, which has generally prevailed, that when a person is near death, or has actually expired, a spirit or angel, in his exact form, and speaking with his voice, sometimes appears to his friends.)—Bagster.

A. M. cir.
4048.
A. D. cir.
44.

i Ps. 126. 1.

j c. 10. 3, 17.

k 2 Ch. 16. 9.

Ps. 34. 7.

Da. 3. 28.

6. 22.

He. 1. 14.

1 Ps. 33. 18.

19.

97. 10.

2 Co. 1. 10.

2 Pe. 2. 9.

m ver. 5.

n or, to ask

who was there.

o Mat. 13. 10.

p c. 13. 16.

q Pa. 66. 15.

r or, bare

a hostile mind, intending

war.

s That sense

over the king's bedchamber.

t Eze. 27. 17.

u Jude 16.

v Col. 1. 6.

w or, charge

c. 11. 2, 30.

17 But he, beckoning unto them with the hand to hold their peace, declared unto them how the Lord had brought him out of the prison. And he said, Go show these things unto James, and to the brethren. And he departed, and went into another place.

18 Now as soon as it was day, there was no small stir among the soldiers, what was become of Peter.

19 And when Herod had sought for him, and found him not, he examined the keepers, and commanded that they should be put to death. And he went down from Judea to Cesarea, and there abode.

20 ¶ And Herod was highly displeased with them of Tyre and Sidon: but they came with one accord to him, and, having made Blastus the king's chamberlain their friend, desired peace; because their country was nourished by the king's country.

21 And upon a set day Herod, arrayed in royal apparel, sat upon his throne, and made an oration unto them.

22 And the people gave a shout, saying, It is the voice of a god, and not of a man.

23 And immediately the angel of the Lord smote him, because he gave not God the glory: and he was eaten of worms, and gave up the ghost.

24 ¶ But the word of God grew and multiplied.

25 ¶ And Barnabas and Saul returned from Jerusalem, when they had fulfilled their misisted in her story, they concluded it must be his angel, or perhaps his ghost. At length they opened the door and saw him, when they were no less astonished than the girl: but he beckoning to them to be quiet, entered, and related all the circumstances. No alarm of his escape was, it seems, excited till the morning, probably at the time of relieving guard: then, not the prison only, but the palace was in alarm. Herod, being able to obtain no information from the keepers or the guard, commanded them to be put to death, and thus revenged himself for the escape of Peter. But we shall see, in our next section, that vengeance followed Herod.

Ver. 20—25. The impiety and awful death of Herod.—The last clause of the preceding verse informs us, that after the mortification (as it doubtless was) of Peter's deliverance from his hands, just at the time when he was about to make a public sacrifice of him for the gratification of the Jews, "Herod went down from Judea to Cesarea, and there abode." On some occasion, not worthy of our inquiry, he found himself much offended with the inhabitants of Tyre and Sidon, who, residing upon the coast, depended on Judea for a supply of corn and other provisions: without, therefore, contending for the justice of their cause, they thought it the wisest way to employ the king's chamberlain to speak on their behalf; beside which they sent ambassadors to procure reconciliation, to which Herod, whose interest it perhaps equally was, seems to have made no objection.

Herod at this time celebrating by command a festival in honour of the emperor, the above persons were invited to attend, while the great and the gay were collected together from all parts of the country. On the second day of the shows, (says Josephus,) "Herod came into the theatre early in the morning, dressed in a robe of silver, of most curious workmanship. The rays of the rising sun, reflected from so splendid a garb, gave him a majestic and awful appearance. In a short time they began in several parts of the theatre flattering acclamations, which proved pernicious to him. They called him a god, and entreated him to be propitious to them, saying, Hitherto we have respected you as a man, but now we acknowledge you to be more than mortal. The king neither reproved these persons, nor rejected the impious flattery. . . . Imme-

Ver. 17. Unto James.—Not James the kinsman of John, for he was beheaded; but James the less, (as he is called,) author of the general Epistle.—Into another place.—Probably to secrete himself more effectually,—which he did.

Ver. 19. Put to death.—Doddridge, "Led away to execution." So Hammond.

Ver. 20. Was highly displeased.—Doddridge, "Was highly incensed" on account of some supposed affront.

Ver. 21. And upon a set day.—(Josephus says, that this was upon a day in which games were exhibited in honour of Claudius; and that, as Herod did not rebuke this impious flattery, he was seized with a severe pain in his bowels, which terminated his existence in five days.)—Bagster.

Ver. 22. The people gave a shout.—Hammond, "shouted. The voice of God," &c.

Ver. 23. The angel of the Lord.—Instead of this angel, Josephus tells us of an owl. He states that, "presently after he had received the flattery of the multitude, looking up, he saw an owl, sitting on a certain rope over his nistry, and took with them John, whose surname was Mark.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 Paul and Barnabas are chosen to go to the Gentiles. 7 Of Sergius Paulus, and Elymas the sorcerer. 14 Paul preacheth at Antioch, that Jesus is Christ. 42 The brethren believe. 45 But the Jews grieve and blaspheme: 46 whereupon they turn to the Gentiles. 48 As many as were ordained to life believed.

NOW there were in the church that was at Antioch certain prophets and teachers; as Barnabas, and Simeon that was called Niger, and Lucius of Cyrene, and Manaen, which had been brought up with Herod the tetrarch, and Saul.

2 As they ministered to the Lord, and fasted, the Holy Ghost said, Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them.

3 And when they had fasted and prayed, and laid their hands on them, they sent them away.

4 So they, being sent forth by the Holy Ghost, departed unto Seleucia; and from thence they sailed to Cyprus.

5 And when they were at Salamis, they preached the word of God in the synagogues

A. M. cir. 4049
A. D. cir. 45.

or, Herod's foster-brother.

b Ga 1:15.

c 1 Ti 2:7.

d 2 Ti 3:8.

of the Jews: and they had also John to their minister.

6 ¶ And when they had gone through the isle unto Paphos, they found a certain sorcerer, a false prophet, a Jew, whose name was Barjesus:

7 Which was with the deputy of the country, Sergius Paulus, a prudent man; who called for Barnabas and Saul, and desired to hear the word of God.

8 But Elymas the sorcerer (for so is his name by interpretation,) withstood them, seeking to turn away the deputy from the faith.

9 Then Saul, (who also is called Paul,) filled with the Holy Ghost, set his eyes on him,

10 And said, O full of all subtlety and all mischief, thou child of the devil, thou enemy of all righteousness, wilt thou not cease to pervert the right ways of the Lord?

11 And now, behold, the hand of the Lord is upon thee, and thou shalt be blind, not seeing the sun for a season. And immediately there diately after this, he was seized with pains in his bowels, extremely violent at the very first. Then turning himself toward his friends, he spoke to them in this manner:—"I, your god, am required to leave this world; Fate instantly confuting those feigned applauses just bestowed upon me, I, who have been called immortal, am hurried away to death. But God's appointment must be submitted to. Nor has our condition in this world been despicable; we have lived in the state which is accounted happy. While he was speaking these words, he was oppressed with the increase of his pains: he was carried, therefore, with all haste to his palace. These pains in his bowels continually tormenting him, he expired in five days time, in the fifty-fourth year of his age, and of his reign the seventh."

We have given this extract in order to show how well the Jewish historian here agrees with the Evangelist: but Josephus knew nothing of the angel, or the final cause of Herod's death. Yet there are some points of harmony which particularly call for our remark. St. Luke says, that when the multitude so profanely flattered him, "he gave not God the glory." Josephus, though he had before represented him as a pious and religious man, frankly confesses he "neither reproved these persons, nor rejected the impious flattery" they offered. Josephus agrees also in the sudden manner in which he was seized; and though he says nothing here of worms, he describes his disorder as much resembling his grandfather's, which produced ulcerations and bred worms. (See Lardner's Cred., whence most of our observations on this subject are derived.)

Men of every rank are mortal. Even kings, "those earthly gods," as Huitts calls them, however they may be flattered, must die; and, when they have dared to persecute the church of God, they have been often cut off with marks of the divine displeasure. Scripture affords many instances of this, and modern history is not without them. But Jesus lives for ever; and, while princes die, and their decrees and works perish, the word of God must grow and prosper.

The close of this chapter informs us that "Barnabas and Saul returned from Jerusalem to Antioch when they had fulfilled their ministry;" alluding, particularly, as we suppose, to the charitable and which they had carried to the church there. To relieve brethren in necessity or distress, is an office not unworthy of an apostle.

CHAP. XIII. Ver. 1—12. The church at Antioch.—Paul and Barnabas set apart to preach to the Gentiles.—"When it is remembered (says Dr. Morrison) that the prophets declared the Messiah should be 'a light to the Gentiles, and for salvation to the ends of the earth,' (Isa. lix. 6;) that the angels at the Saviour's birth declared the Saviour's advent was 'good tidings to all people,' (Luke ii. 10;) and that Jesus, when ascending to heaven, commanded his gospel to be taught to 'all nations,'—it is surprising how slow of apprehending this essential truth the first Christians were." Even Peter, zealous as he was, Dr. M. goes on to observe, "required an express revelation from heaven to induce him to go to a Roman military officer, Cornelius; and, when he did go, the apostles and brethren at Jerusalem censured him for it," till he produced head, and immediately understood that this bird was the messenger (or angel) of all tidings . . . and fell into the deepest sorrow," &c.—Whiston's Josephus

Ver. 25. John whose surname was Mark.—This was evidently a different person from Mark the Evangelist, as is shown by Grotius, to whom Doddridge refers with approbation. The Mark here is understood to have been the son of Mary, at whose house the disciples met to pray for Peter, ch. xii. 12; and he is called "sister's son to Barnabas," Col. iv. 10.

CHAP. XIII. Ver. 1. Simeon, called Niger—Or the black man; possibly a negro.—Lactantius of Cyrene—Another African, according to Doddridge. Cyrene was a city of Libya, situated in a fertile plain about twelve miles from the Mediterranean, and the capital of Cyrenaica, at present called Cairoan in the kingdom of Bulcia.—Bagster.

divine authority in his defence. And it is not certain that any Gentile church was formed anterior to the period now before us, about A. D. 45, when Barnabas and Saul were, by divine direction, sent out from the church of Antioch on a special mission to the heathen.

This we consider as the first missionary tour beyond the pale of the Jewish church, and it was conducted by two apostolic missionaries, of whom Barnabas was evidently much the elder. His nephew, John Mark, went with them, both as their servitor, or attendant, and with a view to his future employment in the missionary work. A circumstance that seems to intimate the proper means of introduction to this work; namely, after receiving such previous instruction as may be judged necessary, to send them out under the direction and advice of experienced preachers, none of whom surely ought to be above following the example of Barnabas and Saul. Their missionary route is here distinctly marked out. They departed first to Seleucia, a sea-port about fifteen miles from Antioch, and sailed thence, as it should seem, immediately to Cyprus, the native place of Barnabas, (ch. iv. 36,) and where probably he was well known, and in consequence invited to preach in the synagogues of Salamis, a sea-port on the east entrance of the island. No particular success is hitherto recorded; but when they had gone through the isle to Paphos, a city devoted to the most gross idolatry, which was at the western extremity, they met with opposition, which, as it respects the ministry of the gospel, is generally the harbinger of success. Sergius Paulus, "the deputy of the country," or proconsul appointed by the senate, who is described as a prudent, or intelligent man, called for Barnabas and Saul, and "desired to hear from them the word of God," which implied a conviction that he considered them commissioned to deliver it. With him, probably in some secular capacity, resided a Jew of the name of Barjesus, a false prophet and a sorcerer, or magician, as the Arabic name Elymas imports; and he, knowing that if the gospel were to prevail, he must lose his craft, resolutely withstood their preaching; and, when he found the deputy disposed to listen thereto, he endeavoured to turn him from it.

Paul, who on this occasion probably was the preacher, being filled with the Holy Ghost, fixed his eyes upon him, "O full of subtlety and all mischief, thou child of the devil!" a name to which he was entitled both from his personal character, as a wicked man, and from his iniquitous profession as a sorcerer and a false prophet. "The hand of the Lord is upon thee!" added Paul, and he was immediately struck with temporary blindness. This had such an effect with the deputy, that, being astonished at the power which attended on the apostle's doctrine, he became a confirmed believer.

We have here followed Luke in adopting the name of Paul instead of Saul, and this becomes his designation throughout the remainder of the New Testament. This apostle being now devoted to the service of the Gentiles, it might be proper that he should now assume a Roman name; and he might adopt this in honour of his illustrious convert, the governor. Others suppose it the name which he assumed when he became a Roman citizen; but this seems hardly consistent with his being born free. Beza thinks that the Greeks and Romans

Ver. 2. The Holy Ghost said.—Either by an inspired person, or by an oracular voice.

Ver. 4. Seleucia.—[This was Seleucia Pieria, a city of Syria, on the coast of the Mediterranean, north of the mouth of the Orontes. The ruins are now called Kepse, according to Dr. Pococke, and are situated about a mile from the sea, on the south west of a rocky mountain.]—Bagster.

Ver. 5. Salamis.—[Salamis was a famous city on the eastern coast of the isle of Cyprus, opposite Seleucia, afterwards called Constantia, and now Famagusta.]—Bagster.

Ver. 6. Paphos.—[Paphos, now Bafu, or Baff, was another celebrated city of Cyprus, on the western part of the island.]—Bagster.

Ver. 8. The sorcerer.—One who used the "curious arts of necromancy, astrology," &c. See ch. xix. 19.

fell on him a mist and a darkness; and he went about seeking some to lead him by the hand.

12 Then the deputy, when he saw what was done, believed, being astonished at the doctrine of the Lord.

13 ¶ Now when Paul and his company loosed from Paphos, they came to Perga in Pamphylia: and John departing ^a from them returned to Jerusalem.

14 But when they departed from Perga, they came to Antioch in Pisidia, and went into the synagogue ^t on the sabbath day, and sat down.

15 And after the reading ^g of the law and the prophets, the rulers of the synagogue sent unto them, saying, Ye men and brethren, if ye have any word ^h of exhortation for the people, say on.

16 Then Paul stood up, and beckoning with his hand, said, Men of Israel, and ye that fear God, give audience.

17 The God of this people of Israel chose ⁱ our fathers, and exalted the people when they dwelt ^j as strangers in the land of Egypt, and with a ^k high arm brought he them out of it.

18 And about the time of forty ^l years ^m suffered he their manners in the wilderness.

19 And when he had destroyed ⁿ seven nations in the land of Chanaan, he ^o divided their land to them by lot.

20 And after that he gave ^p unto them ^q judges about the space of four hundred and fifty years, until Samuel the prophet.

21 And afterward they ^r desired a king: and God gave unto them Saul ^s the son of Cis, a man of the tribe of Benjamin, by the space of forty years.

22 And when ^t he had removed him, he raised up unto them David ^u to be their king; to whom also he gave testimony, and said, I have found David the son of Jesse, a man ^v after mine own heart, which shall fulfil all my will.

23 Of this man's seed hath God according to his promise ^w raised up ^x Israel a Saviour, Jesus:

24 When John ^y had first preached before his coming the baptism of repentance to all the people of Israel.

25 And as John fulfilled his course, he said,

A. M. cir.
4049.
A. D. cir.
45.

e. c. 15. 38.

A. M. 4050.

A. D. 46.

f. c. 13. 4

g. ver. 27.

h. He. 13. 22.

i. De. 7. 5. 7.

j. Ps. 105. 23.

k. Ex. 13. 14.

l. 16.

m. Ex. 16. 35.

n. Gr. etropo-phoresin,

perhaps for etropo-phoresin,

here, or,

fed them,

as a nurse

beareth,

or, feedeth

her child.

De. 1. 31.

according to the

LXX;

and so

Chrysostom.

n. De. 7. 1

o. Jos. 14. & c.

p. Ja. 2. 16.

q. 1 Sa. 8. 5.

r. 1 Sa. 10. 1.

s. 1 Sa. 31. 6.

t. 2 Sa. 5. 3.

u. 1 Sa. 13. 14.

v. Ps. 132. 11.

w. Mat. 1. 1.

x. Mat. 3. 1.

11.

y. Mat. 10. 6.

z. Lu. 24. 29.

44.

a. e. 1. 2.

b. Ro. 4. 13.

c. Ps. 4. 7.

d. ut to oia,

holy, or,

things;

which word the

LXX;

both in the place of Is. 55. 3,

and in many others, use

for that which is in the Hebrew,

merces.

e. Ps. 16. 10.

f. or, after he had in his own age served the will of God.

g. 1 Ki. 2. 10.

h. c. 2. 4.

i. Da. 9. 24.

Lu. 21. 47.

1 Ju. 2. 12.

j. Is. 55. 11.

Ha. 2. 4.

Jo. 3. 28.

8. 1.

k. Is. 29. 14.

Ha. 1. 3.

Whom think ye that I am? I am not he. But, behold, there cometh one after me, whose shoes of his feet I am not worthy to loose.

26 Men and brethren, children of the stock of Abraham, and whosoever among you fear-eth God, to you ^v is the word of this salvation sent.

27 For they that dwell at Jerusalem, and their rulers, because they knew him not, nor yet the voices of the prophets which are read every sabbath day, ^z they have fulfilled them in condemning him.

28 And though they found no cause of death in him, yet desired they Pilate that he should be slain.

29 And when they had fulfilled all that was written of him, they took him down from the tree, and laid him in a sepulchre.

30 But God raised him from the dead:

31 And he was seen ^a many days of them which came up with him from Galilee to Jerusalem, who are his witnesses unto the people.

32 And we declare unto you glad tidings, how that the promise ^b which was made unto the fathers,

33 God hath fulfilled the same unto us their children, in that he hath raised up Jesus again; as it is also written in the second psalm, Thou ^c art my Son, this day have I begotten thee.

34 And as concerning that he raised him up from the dead, now no more to return to corruption, he said on this wise, I will give you the sure ^d mercies of David.

35 Wherefore he saith also in ^e another psalm, Thou shalt not suffer thy Holy One to see corruption.

36 For David, ^f after he had served his own generation by the will of God, ^g fell on sleep, and was laid unto his fathers, and saw corruption:

37 But he, whom God ^h raised again, saw no corruption.

38 Be it known unto you therefore, men and brethren, that through ⁱ this man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins:

39 And by him all that believe are justified from all things, from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses.

40 Beware therefore, lest that come upon you which is spoken of in ^k the prophets;

41 Behold, ye despisers, and wonder, and would find his Hebrew name difficult to pronounce, and naturally call him Paul.

Ver. 13-41. Paul preaches to the Jews.—Following Barnabas and Saul, who is henceforth called Paul, we now trace them from Paphos to Perga in Pamphylia; where, for some cause with which we are not well acquainted, John Mark deserted them and returned back to Jerusalem, while they persevered in their mission. It is generally supposed that his desertion was occasioned by versatility of temper, or perhaps the dislike of an itinerant life, either of which circumstances would render him unfit for missionary work. From Perga, however, the apostles proceeded to Antioch in Pisidia, where they went into the synagogue on the sabbath-day, and sat down, as usual, during the reading of the law. After service, understanding that they were preachers of popular talents, and having had intimation, perhaps, that they wished to address the people, the rulers of the synagogue invited them to speak.

Paul, who, on all occasions, was "the chief speaker," and was doubtless a man of distinguished talents, now stood forward, and, soliciting the attention both of Jews and pious proselytes, gave a brief abstract of their national history from the time of the Exodus to that of David, from whose loins God had "raised up Israel a Saviour (even) Jesus." Paul then adverts to the witness of John the Baptist in his favour, states the abominable conduct of their brethren at Jerusalem towards their Messiah, and the indubitable witness that God himself had given to him, in his resurrection from the dead. He quotes, on this occasion, nearly the same Scriptures of the Old Testament that Peter had done on former occasions, and then gives them this beautiful epitome of the way of salvation by Jesus Christ. "Be it known unto you, men and brethren,

Ver. 15. Reading of the law, &c.—The custom of reading the law, the Jews say, existed a hundred and seventy years before the time of Christ. The division of it into sections is ascribed to Ezra. The five books of Moses, here called the law, contained fifty-three sections, so that by reading one on each sabbath, and two in one day, they read through the whole in the course of a year; finishing at the feast of Tabernacles, which they called "the rejoicing of the law."—Orien., Cust. No. 1313.

Ver. 17. Exalted the people—That is, Jacob's family, under the protection of Joseph.

Ver. 20. Four hundred and fifty years—That is, according to the chronology of Josephus and the LXX; but this differs from the Hebrew chronology [full one hundred years. Doddridge reads, "And after these transactions, [which lasted] about four hundred and fifty years;" which, by an alteration in the pointing, reads, "He divided the land to them by lot, about four hundred and fifty years, and after that he gave them judges." &c. He cites the authority of some copies mentioned by Grotius and Usher.

Ver. 21. By the space of forty years.—Beza, Calvin, Grotius, Doddridge, &c. include Samuel's government as well as Saul's; for notwithstanding Saul's being appointed king, Samuel still retained his office of judge as long as he lived; 1 Sam. vii. 15.

Ver. 27. They have fulfilled them.—See ch. iii. 17, and note.

Ver. 33. Raised up Jesus again—i. e. from the dead, as many understand these words; but as there is no distinct word for "again" in the Greek, and the original does not necessarily imply it, Witsius and others understand the words rather as referring to the birth of Jesus. See ch. ii. 22; vii. 37. Yet it is also applied by the apostle Peter to the resurrection from the dead, ch. ii. 24, 30, 32.

Ver. 34. No more to return to corruption—i. e. to the place of corruption, namely, the grave. So Beza, Doddridge, &c.—Sure mercies of David—That is, covenant mercies to David as a type of Christ.

Ver. 35. Thou shalt not suffer, &c.—See Ps. xvi. Acts ii. 27. "To sea corruption," is to experience it; so to see death, to see life, &c.

Ver. 41. Wonder, and perish.—See Hab. i. 5.—Perish—Doddridge "Turn pale and disappear," or "vanish."

perish: for I work a work in your days, a work which ye shall in no wise believe, though a man declare it unto you.

42 ¶ And when the Jews were gone out of the synagogue, the Gentiles besought that these words might be preached to them the next sabbath.

43 Now when the congregation was broken up, many of the Jews and religious proselytes followed Paul and Barnabas: who, speaking to them, persuaded them to continue in the grace of God.

44 ¶ And the next sabbath day came almost the whole city together to hear the word of God.

45 But when the Jews saw the multitudes, they were filled with envy, and spake against those things which were spoken by Paul, ^u contradicting and blaspheming.

46 Then Paul and Barnabas waxed bold, and said, It was necessary that the word of God should first ^o have been spoken to you: but seeing ye put it from you, and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, we ^p turn to the Gentiles.

47 For so hath the Lord commanded us, saying, ^q I have set thee to be a light of the Gentiles, that thou shouldst be for salvation unto the ends of the earth.

48 And when the Gentiles heard this, they were glad, and glorified the word of the Lord: and as many as were ordained to eternal life believed.

49 And the word of the Lord was published throughout all the region.

50 ¶ But the Jews stirred up the devout and honourable women, and the chief men of the city, and ^r raised persecution against Paul and Barnabas, and expelled them out of their coasts.

51 But they shook ^t off the dust of their feet against them, and came unto Iconium.

that through this man is preached unto you the remission of sins; and by him all that believe are justified from all things from which ye (bringing the matter home to their own cases and bosoms) could not be justified by the law of Moses;—which indeed forms the text of his Epistle to the Romans.

The discourse concludes with warning his hearers against copying the infidelity of their brethren at Jerusalem, and bringing on themselves the same judgments that were hanging over their heads.

Ver. 42—52. Paul and Barnabas preach the same doctrine to the Gentiles on the following Sabbath.—“Now, when the congregation was broken up, many of the Jews and religious (or devout) proselytes followed Paul and Barnabas” for farther instruction, who exhorted them to “continue in” the exercise and profession of “the grace of God,” which had now been preached to them. The Gentiles also hearing what doctrines had been published, and that they were equally interested in them, requested that the same might be preached to them also on the following sabbath. Then “almost the whole city,” both Jews and Gentiles, “came together, to hear the word of God.” But when the unbelieving Jews “saw the multitudes that were attracted by this new doctrine (as they considered it,)” they were filled with envy, contradicting and blaspheming.

Upon this the inspired preachers address themselves exclusively to the Gentiles, quoting their authority for so doing from

Ver. 43. When the congregation was broken up—This explains the preceding verse.—“When the Jews were gone out,” then the Gentiles came about the apostles and sought, &c.

Ver. 44. Came almost the whole city—That is, both Jews and Gentiles, a great multitude.

Ver. 48. As many as were ordained to eternal life believed.—For “ordained to,” Doddridge reads, “determined for,” which is taking a middle path between the Calvinists, as Gill, who refers it to God’s predestination; and the Arminians, who, with Hammond, refer it to men’s own self-determination; for which we see no ground. But we have no objection to understand it in harmony with the language of our Lord and of St. Luke. “Our Lord” gives eternal life to all whom the Father gives him by the operations of his grace.” Compare John xvii. 9. “All those” “believe unto eternal life” whose “hearts the Lord opens,” as he did Lydia’s, Acts xvi. 14. If we refer our conversion wholly to the grace of God, it secures to him the honour, and to us the certainty of our salvation. Nevertheless, God does nothing but what he ever intended to do. “I am the Lord” “I chance not.”

Ver. 51. Iconium—(Cogni, or Conieh, was the capital of Lycaonia, an Asia Minor, a well built city, situated in the richest part of that province.)—Baxter.

CHAP. XIV. Ver. 3. Speaking boldly—Doddridge “freely,” i. e. without privacy or reserve.

A M 4054.
A D 40
i in the serk les tween, or,
in the sabbath between.

u c 14 22.
He 6 11,
12, 12 15.

n c 18 6.

o Mat 10 6.
Lu 24 47
Ro 1 16

p De 32 21
Mar 21 43
Ro 10 19

q Is 49 6.

r c 2 17
Ro 8 30

s 2 Ti 3 11.

t Ma 6 11.
Lu 9 5
c 15 6.

u Mat 5 12
1 Th 1 6.

v Ma 16 26
He 2 4

b c 28 24.

c Mat 10 23

d c 3 2

e Mat 9 28, 29.

f Is 35 6.

g c 24 6

52 And the disciples were filled with ^a joy, and with the Holy Ghost.

CHAPTER. XIV.

i Paul and Barnabas are persecuted from Iconium. 3 At Lystra Paul heals a cripple, whereupon they are reputed as gods. 19 Paul is stoned. 21 They pass through divers churches, confirming the disciples in faith and patience. 25 Returning to Antioch they report what God had done with them.

AND it came to pass in Iconium, that they went both together into the synagogue of the Jews, and so spake, that a great multitude both of the Jews and also of the Greeks believed.

2 But the unbelieving Jews stirred up the Gentiles, and made their minds evil affected against the brethren.

3 Long time therefore abode they speaking boldly in the Lord, which ^a gave testimony unto the word of his grace, and granted signs and wonders to be done by their hands.

4 But the multitude of the city was divided: and ^b part held with the Jews, and part with the apostles.

5 And when there was an assault made both of the Gentiles, and also of the Jews with their rulers, to use them despitefully, and to stone them,

6 They were ware of it, and ^c fled unto Lystra and Derbe, cities of Lycaonia, and unto the region that lieth round about:

7 And there they preached the gospel.

8 ¶ And there sat a certain man at Lystra, impotent in his feet, being a ^d cripple from his mother’s womb, who never had walked:

9 The same heard Paul speak: who steadfastly beholding him, and perceiving that he had faith ^e to be healed,

10 Said with a loud voice, Stand upright on thy feet. And he leaped ^f and walked.

11 And when the people saw what Paul had done, they lifted up their voices, saying in the speech of Lycaonia, The ^g gods are come down to us in the likeness of men.

12 And they called Barnabas, Jupiter; and the prophecy of Isaiah, (chap. xlix. 6.) And the Gentiles no sooner heard this than “they were glad, and glorified the word of the Lord:” and as many as were ordained (or appointed) to eternal life, believed. And (thus) the word of the Lord was published throughout all the “region,” or country, round about.

The unbelieving Jews, however, became more and more incensed, and stirring up certain devout and honourable women who had hitherto listened to the apostles, by false reports and artful insinuations, drew them to their side; and at the same time, gaining the magistrates of the city in their support, raised such a persecution as compelled the apostles to leave the city; and, as their Lord had directed them to do, they shook off the dust of their feet as a testimony against their persecutors.

This, though it may appear to us a trifling ceremony, is always mentioned by our Lord as a matter of serious alarm to them. It shall be more tolerable for Sodom and Gomorrah in the day of judgment, than for those who treat with hostility and contempt the message of salvation to mankind.

CHAP. XIV. Ver. 1—28. The persecutions and success of Paul and Barnabas, and their return to Antioch.—“When ye are persecuted in one city, (said our Lord,) flee unto another.” (Matt. x. 23.) The apostles being driven from Antioch in Pisidia, flee unto Iconium, and thence to Lystra, both in Lycaonia: and thus persecution in one country has uniformly proved the means of spreading the Gospel into others. At

Ver. 5. When there was an assault made—Doddridge explains this of a joint attempt about to be made by the bigoted Jews and unbelieving Gentiles, which coming to the ears of Barnabas and Paul, they fled farther, even to Lystra and Derbe.

Ver. 6. Lystra—[Lystra and Derbe, two cities of Lycaonia, were situated south of Iconium, and north of Mount Taurus; the former lying to the west and the latter to the east.—Lycaonia—Now Conieh, was a province of Asia Minor, bounded by Phrygia on the north, Pisidia on the west, Pamphylia and Cilicia on the south, and Cappadocia on the east, made a Roman province under Augustus.]—Baxter.

Ver. 9. Had faith to be healed.—See Mat. ix. 27—29. The man had probably heard that the apostles had wrought miracles, and might show in his countenance and manner (perhaps in words also) a desire to be healed; or Paul might have an immediate suggestion by the Spirit of inspiration.

Ver. 11. The speech of Lycaonia—Not Greek, but a dialect perhaps approaching the Syriac. Doddridge.—In the likeness of men.—The Greeks supposed that their gods often rendered themselves visible in human form.

Ver. 12. Jupiter—Jupiter was the supreme god of the heathen. and Mercury was considered the god of eloquence. The ancients represent Jupiter as an aged man, large, noble, and majestic; and Mercury, young, light, and active; and it is very probable that Barnabas was a large, noble, well made man, and St. Paul, young, active, and eloquent.]—Baxter.

Paul, Mercurius, because he was the chief speaker.

13 Then the priest of Jupiter, which was before their city, brought oxen and garlands unto the gates, and ^b would have done sacrifice with the people.

14 Which when the apostles, Barnabas and Paul, heard of, they ⁱ rent their clothes, and ran in among the people, crying out,

15 And saying, Sirs, why do ye these things? We also are men of like passions with you, and preach unto you that ye should turn from these vanities ^k unto ^l the living God, which made ^m heaven, and earth, and the sea, and all things that are therein:

16 Who ⁿ in times past suffered all nations to walk in their own ways.

17 ^o Nevertheless he left not himself without witness, in that he did good, and gave us rain ^p from heaven, and fruitful seasons, filling our hearts with food and gladness.

18 And with these sayings scarce restrained they the people, that they had not done sacrifice unto them.

19 ¶ And there came thither certain Jews from Antioch and Iconium, who persuaded the people, and, having ^q stoned Paul, drew him out of the city, supposing he had been dead.

20 Howbeit, as the disciples stood round about him, he rose up, and came into the city: and the next day he departed with Barnabas to Derbe.

21 ¶ And when they had preached the gospel

the former nothing particular is recorded, but, at Lystra, the healing of a cripple occasions a very unexpected incident. The poor heathens, when they saw the man whom they knew to have been born lame, leaping and walking, they directly lifted up their voices and exclaimed, "The gods are come down to us in the likeness of men!" Then Barnabas, who was much the elder and more reverend-looking person, they called Jupiter, "the father of gods and men" and Paul, Mercurius, because he was "the chief speaker." And so much were they in earnest, that the priest of Jupiter brought oxen and garlands unto the gates, and would, with the people, have offered sacrifices to them, had not the apostles exerted all their energy to restrain them.

The address delivered on this occasion is quite in the masterly and energetic style of St. Paul, and may afford as some useful observations. 1. Ministers of the Gospel, even Apostles, are but men; subjects of the same human passions and infirmities with other men; and therefore should not be idolized. 2. Ministers should abase themselves, that they may exalt him that sends them: "We are (say they) as you are, and as your imagined gods were, weak and frail creatures; but we come to teach you to turn from these lying vanities, and worship the true God, the maker of heaven and earth." 3. We see the superiority of Christian ministers to heathen philosophers. The latter believed as little of the Pagan theology as the Christians; but none of them had the fortitude to avow it, or de-claim against idolatry: on the contrary, they all occasionally conformed to it, not excepting Socrates himself. 4. God, in many instances, suffers what he does not approve. Thus (chap. xii. 18) he "suffered" the manners of Israel in the wilderness and in Canaan, and thus did he "suffer all nations to walk in their own ways." Yet, 5. God left not himself without witness to his being and providence—to his power and goodness. Yet, with all these just and temperate observations, scarcely could these poor Pagans be restrained from rendering them divine honours. But, alas! how changeable is man!

The disciples are treated as their Lord; and as it was in the case of Jesus, many of the same voices that pronounced "Ho-to that city, and ^r had taught many, they returned again to Lystra, and to Iconium, and Antioch, 22 Confirming the souls of the disciples, and exhorting them to continue ^s in the faith, and that ^t we must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God.

23 And when they had ordained them elders in every church, and had prayed with fasting, they commended them to the Lord, on whom they believed.

24 And after they had passed throughout Pisidia, they came to Pamphylia.

25 And when they had preached the word in Perga, they went down into Attalia:

26 And thence sailed to Antioch, ^u from whence they had been recommended ^v to the grace of God for the work which they fulfilled.

27 And when they were come, and had gathered the church together, they rehearsed ^w all that God had done with them, and how he had opened ^x the door of faith unto the Gentiles.

28 And there they abode long time with the disciples.

CHAPTER XV.

1 Great dissension ariseth touching circumcision. 6 The apostles consult about it, 22 and send their determination by letters to the churches. 36 Paul and Barnabas, thinking to visit the brethren together, fall at strife, and depart asunder.

AND ^a certain men which came down from Judea taught the brethren, and said, Except ^b ye be circumcised ^c after the manner of Moses, ye cannot be saved.

2 When therefore Paul and Barnabas had no small dissension and disputation with them sanna," also shouted, "Crucify him!" So likewise here. Certain Jews, distinguished for their bigotry to Moses and hatred to the Lord Jesus, followed the apostles even hither, and persuaded the multitude that they were impostors and perhaps necromancers; they therefore joined with them in stoning Paul, in a riotous and tumultuous manner, till they supposed him to have been killed. The providence of God, however, wonderfully preserved him; and while the brethren were collecting round him, probably with a view to his interment, he rose up in the midst of them, and next day was so far recovered as to be able to proceed with Barnabas to Derbe. There they made many disciples, and then "returned to Lystra, and Iconium, and Antioch, confirming the believers and encouraging them to persevere, notwithstanding all opposition." And when they had ordained (or appointed) them elders (or presbyters) to instruct and preside among them, they affectionately commended them by prayer "to the Lord, on whom they had believed"—namely, the Lord Jesus, whom they doubtless considered as well able to preserve those whom they so solemnly committed to his care: notwithstanding they are reminded, they must expect "to pass through much tribulation" in their way to the New Jerusalem.

Proceeding in their return, after passing through several countries which they had before visited, they now pass by sea to Antioch, from whence they first set out on this missionary tour; and there, having collected the church of that city, where they had received their commission, (chap. xiii. 1-3,) they rehearsed all that God had done with (or rather by) them, and how he had opened the door of faith among the Gentiles; that is, an opportunity for the preaching and establishment of the gospel among the heathen nations, as had been long foretold.

CHAP. XV. Ver. 1-21. A dissension in the church respecting circumcision.—Men whose hearts are not deeply engaged in spiritual religion, are the first to spend their zeal on its external services. The persons here spoken of were "certain men which came down from Judea" to Antioch; and they are afterwards mentioned (verse 5) as being of the sect of the therefore, (though not recorded,) that Matthias might have died, and Barnabas have been chosen in his stead?

Ver. 23. And when they had ordained them elders in every church.—Almost every word in this short passage has afforded ground for controversy, of a nature which we purposely avoid. We shall only remark on the word elders, (Greek, presbuteros), that it is agreed, 1st, to refer to age; and 2dly, to official character; and that consequently, it may, in different texts, refer to persons revered either in age or office. See Parkhurst.

Ver. 24. Pisidia.—Pisidia was a province of Asia Minor, situated between Phrygia on the north and west, Lycaonia on the east, and Pamphylia on the south.—Bengster.

Ver. 25. Perga.—Perga was a considerable city of Pamphylia, towards the sea coast, and near the Caystrus, famous for a temple of Diana.—Attalia.—Attalia, now Antalia, or Satalie, was a maritime city of Pamphylia, the chief residence of the prefect.—Bengster.

Ver. 27. With them.—Doddridge, "By them."—"Door of faith"—That is, had given them also the privilege of believing. So "Door of hope," Ho. ii. 16.

A. M. 4050.
A. D. 46.
h Da 2:46.
i Mat. 26:65.
j e. 10:26.
Ja. 5:17.
Re. 19:10.
k 1 Sa. 12:21.
1 Ki. 16:13.
Jc. 11:22.
Jo. 2:8.
1 Co. 8:4.
l 1 Th. 1:9.
m Ge. 1:1.
Ps. 32:6.
146:6.
Re. 14:7.
n Ps. 81:12.
e. 17:30.
o Ro. 1:20.
p Job. 5:10.
Ps. 147:8.
Mat. 5:15.
A. M. 4051.
A. D. 47.
q 2 Co. 11:23.
r had made many disciples.
s e. 13:43.
t Ro. 8:17.
2 Ti. 3:12.
A. M. cir. 4052.
A. D. cir. 49.
u e. 13:1,3.
v e. 15:4.
w e. 15:4.
x 1 Co. 16:9.
2 Co. 2:12.
Re. 3:8.
A. M. cir. 4056.
A. D. cir. 52.
a Ga. 2:12.
b Jo. 7:22.
c Le. 12:3.

Ver. 13. The priest of Jupiter.—Doddridge remarks, (after Elsnor,) that it was customary for the Greeks to build temples to their tutelar deities, in the suburbs of the cities, and to set up their images before the gates, at the gates. According to this practice, the priest of Jupiter, who was esteemed the tutelar deity of the place, and whose image was placed in a temple erected to him before the gates of the city, "brought oxen and garlands," (or chaplets,) with which they crowned both gods and sacrifices on such occasions.

Ver. 14. The apostles, Barnabas and Paul.—It is plain, both here and in verse 4, that Barnabas is called an apostle; yet we hear nothing of his being chosen to the apostleship. Some think that Barnabas and Paul are here so called, as messengers of the churches, chap. xii. 1-3. Yet as Paul was an apostle in the higher sense, we can hardly think Luke would name Barnabas before him, had he been only a messenger of the churches. One thing is remarkable, that Matthias, who was chosen to replace Judas, is heard no more of after his election; yet Barnabas is one of the most conspicuous characters in the book of Acts. It is most certain, that we have only an abstract of the transactions of the apostles, as well as of the Lord Jesus. Is it not possible, they determined that ^d Paul and Barnabas, and certain other of them, should go up to Jerusalem unto the apostles and elders about this question.

3 And being ^e brought on their way by the church, they passed through Phenice and Samaria, declaring the ^f conversion of the Gentiles; and they caused great ^g joy unto all the brethren.

4 And when they were come to Jerusalem, they were received of the church, and ^h of the apostles and elders, and ⁱ they declared all things that God had done with them.

5 ¶ But there ^j rose up certain of the sect of the Pharisees which believed, saying, ^k That it was needful to circumcise them, and to command ^l them to keep the law of Moses.

6 And the apostles and elders came ^m together for to consider of this matter.

7 ¶ And when there had been much disputing, Peter rose up, and said unto them, Men and brethren, ye know ⁿ how that a good while ago God made choice among us, that the Gentiles by my mouth should hear the word of the gospel, and believe.

8 And God, which ^o knoweth the hearts, bare them witness, giving them the Holy Ghost, even as ^p he did unto us;

9 And put no difference between us and them, purifying ^q their hearts by faith.

10 Now therefore why tempt ye God, to put a yoke ^r upon the neck of the disciples, which neither our fathers nor we were able to bear?

11 But we believe that through ^s the grace of

A. M. cir. 406.
A. D. cir. 52.

d Ga 2.

e Ro. 15:21.

f Co 16:6.

g Jo 6.

h c 14:27.

i c 15:7.

j 10.

k c 21:19.

l or, rose up, and they, certain.

m Mat 18:20.

n Mat 16:18.

o c 10:20.

p m. c. 1:21.

q He 9:13.

r 1 Pe 1:22.

s c 5:1.

t Ro 3:21.

u Ep 2:8.

v Th 3:15.

w c 14:27.

x 1m 2:31.

y 12.

z Am 9:11.

aa Na. 2:19.

ab Jo 10.

ac 1 Th 1:9.

ad Ps 20:4,5.

ae 1 Co 1:1.

af &c.

ag Ro 28.

ah Ep 2:11.

ai 20.

aj w 1 Co 6:9.

ak Col 3:5.

al 1 Th 4:3.

am x Le 17:14.

an De 12:16.

ao 32.

ap y c 13:15,27.

the Lord Jesus Christ we shall be saved, even as they.

12 ¶ Then all the multitude kept silence, and gave audience to Barnabas and Paul, declaring what miracles and wonders God had wrought ^a among the Gentiles by them.

13 ¶ And after they had held their peace, James answered, saying, Men and brethren, hearken unto me:

14 Simeon hath declared ^b how God at the first did visit the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for ^c his name.

15 And to this agree the words of the prophets; as it is ^d written,

16 After this I will return, and will build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down; and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up:

17 That the residue of men might seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles, upon whom my name is called, saith the Lord, who doeth all these things.

18 Known ^e unto God are all his works from the beginning of the world.

19 Wherefore my sentence is, that we trouble not them, which from among the Gentiles are turned ^f to God:

20 But that we write unto them, that they abstain from pollutions of ^g idols, and from ^h fornication, and from things strangled, and from ⁱ blood.

21 For Moses of old time hath in every city them that preach him, being ^j read in the synagogues every sabbath day.

Pharisees; and, of course, more zealous for the ritual than for the moral law. These men not only taught the perpetuity of circumcision, but its absolute necessity to salvation: they insisted, therefore, that the Gentile converts should be circumcised to be received into the Christian church; or, in other words, that the Gentiles must become Jews, before they could be Christians. "It is good always to be zealously affected in a good cause;" but it is much to be regretted, when men not only confine their zeal to external religion, but spend it in promoting schism. It is moreover to be feared, that this zeal has its foundation generally in the ambition of personal distinction; at least, this was certainly the case with the heresarchs of the first centuries. While they remained in the church, many of them had neither character nor talents to raise them above others; but the propagation of a new doctrine excited popular attention, and the ability called forth in its defence often excited much greater admiration than the same, or even superior, talents, exerted in the common cause of Christianity. This remark is not meant to discourage freedom of inquiry into the truths of Scripture; but only to check the affectation of novelty and sectarian zeal, by which the peace of the church has been so often unhappily disturbed.

These Christian Pharisees ventured to dispute even with Paul and Barnabas: the church at Antioch therefore deputed those apostles to go and consult the apostles and elders at Jerusalem. On the way thither, through Phenicia and Samaria, these deputies from Antioch related the success with which God had favoured them in preaching among the heathen, which occasioned great joy to all the brethren who heard it; but when they came to Jerusalem, they found there certain Christian Pharisees, maintaining the same opinions with those who had excited these disputes, and who had probably been deputed from them.

The apostles and elders being assembled, Peter, who had returned to Jerusalem after Herod Agrippa's death, "opened the debate by observing, that a considerable time ago God had selected him to preach to the Gentiles, and had blessed his labours with unqualified success, in purifying their hearts by faith, and in dispensing the Holy Ghost among them, no less than on the Jews. After God himself had thus decided, he said it appeared presumptuous in any person to impose a yoke on the Gentiles, from which the divine indulgence had exempted them. He insisted that the yoke itself, especially when laid on the conscience as necessary to salvation, was intolerable; and he concluded, that even they who still, for charitable and prudential reasons, persisted in the ritual observances, were yet obliged to repose for salvation only on the 'grace of the Lord Jesus Christ,' as well as these Gentiles, who never had observed them at all. This full testimony of Peter was supported by Paul and Barnabas, who gave large proof of the divine grace vouchsafed to the Gentiles. James, who seems to have been the standing pastor of Jerusalem, confirmed the same argument, by the prophets of the Old Testament, agreeably to Peter's declaration of the mercy of God in visiting the Gentiles. He gave his opinion that the Gentiles should no longer be molested with notions subversive of the grace of God, and tending to teach them dependence on human works, instead of the atonement of Christ, for salvation. Only he recommended that the council should direct them to abstain from the pollutions of idols, and from fornication, and from things strangled, and from blood." (Milton's Ch. Hist. vol. i. chap. 1.)

On this we shall only here add, that so far from Peter here appearing as "the prince of the apostles," as the Roman Catholics consider him, he speaks with no authority, but as an individual apostle. He does not even appear to have presided as moderator; that office being filled by James, who sums up the argument, and concludes with adding—"Wherefore my opinion (or decision) is," &c.; which words, though in themselves unassuming, yet had they been used by Peter, (as Doddridge observes,) would have been pleaded as decisive of his superiority. As the case stands, they are content to argue from his speaking first on this occasion: a clear proof, as we understand it, that he was not even the president on this occasion, much less did he dictate the decree which was adopted. (See Rhemish Annot. in Acts xv.)

Ver. 22—41. The decree of the Apostles, formed on the suggestion of James, sent to Antioch.—Though James claimed no superiority, it is evident that he presided; and it is much to the honour of his wisdom and prudence, that his suggestions in the council were so unanimously adopted. On the decree itself, we offer the following observations. 1. The introduction severely censures those who, without a divine command, attempt to introduce laws and regulations into the church of God; especially when those laws are of a nature to "subvert the faith," and trouble the consciences of believers, as was the pany, according to the vulgar chronology; but some refer this expression to the divine decrees. See ver. 18, also note of ver. 13.

Ver. 14. Simeon—i. e. Simon Peter.

Ver. 17. The residue of men.—In Amos ix. 12, our translation reads "The remnant of Edom;" but the LXX. and Arabic read Adam (or men) for "Edom;" and this is generally considered as the true reading. See Kennicott and Nesci.

Ver. 18. Whom my name is called.—i. e. who are converted to the true God.

Ver. 18. All his works.—i. e. all his doings or designs; not confining it to the works of Nature.—From the beginning of the world.—Or "from eternity."

Ver. 19. My sentence is.—Doddridge, "I determine."—Are turned.—Doddridge, "are converted."

CHAP. XV. Ver. 3. Brought on their way.—See chap. xv. 38; xxi. 5, &c.—Phenice.—Phenice, or Phœnicia, was a province of Syria, whose boundaries were different at different times. It may be said, generally, to have extended from Tripoli on the north, to the termination of the ridges of Mount Lebanon on the south, where it met the border of Palestine; and comprehending in breadth the narrow tract between Lebanon and the Mediterranean. Phenice, however, makes it extend from the Eleutheris, below Aradus, to Pelusium in Egypt, including all the sea coast of Palestine.—Bagster.

Ver. 7. After much disputing.—Not among the apostles, but between them and the advocates of the necessity of circumcision.—A good while ago.—It was about ten years before that Peter had preached to Cornelius and his com-

22 ¶ Then pleased it the apostles and elders, with the whole church, to send chosen men of their own company to Antioch with Paul and Barnabas; namely, Judas surnamed ^a Barsabas, and Silas, chief men among the brethren:

23 And they wrote letters by them after this manner; The apostles and elders and brethren send greeting unto the brethren which are of the Gentiles in Antioch and Syria and Cilicia:

24 Forasmuch as we have heard, that certain ^a which went out from us have troubled ^b you with words, ^c subverting your souls, saying, Ye must be circumcised, and keep the law: to whom ^d we gave no such commandment:

25 It seemed good unto us, being assembled with one accord, to send chosen men unto you with our beloved Barnabas and Paul,

26 Men that have hazarded ^e their lives for the name of our Lord Jesus Christ.

27 We have sent therefore Judas and Silas, who shall also tell you the same things by ^f mouth.

28 For it seemed good to the Holy Ghost, and to us, to lay upon you no greater burden ^g than these necessary things;

29 That ye abstain ^h from meats offered to idols, and from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication: from which if ye keep ⁱ yourselves, ye shall do well. Fare ye well.

30 So when they were dismissed, they came to Antioch: and when they had gathered the multitude together, they delivered the epistle:

31 Which when they had read, they rejoiced for the ^j consolation.

32 And Judas and Silas, being prophets also

A. M. cir. 4056.
A. D. cir. 52.
c 1.23.

a ver. 1.

b Ga 5.12.

c Ga 5.4.

d Ga 2.4.

e c 13.50.

f word.

g Re 2.24.

h ver 20.

i 2 Co 11.9.

Jn 1.27.

1 Jn 5.21.

Jude 20, 21.

J or, exhortation.

k c 14.22.

l 1 Co 16.11.

2 Jn 10.

A. M. cir. 4057.

A. D. cir. 53.

m c 13.4, &c.

n c 12.12, 23.

Col 4.10.

o c 13.13.

p c 14.25.

20.32.

q c 16.5.

a c 14.6.

b c 13.21.

Ro 16.21.

1 Co 4.17.

c 2 Ti 1.5.

themselves, exhorted the brethren with many words, and confirmed ^k them.

33 And after they had tarried there a space, they were let go: in peace from the brethren unto the apostles.

34 Notwithstanding it pleased Silas to abide there still.

35 Paul also and Barnabas continued in Antioch, teaching and preaching the word of the Lord, with many others also.

36 ¶ And some days after Paul said unto Barnabas, Let us go again and visit our brethren in ^m every city where we have preached the word of the Lord, and see how they do.

37 And Barnabas determined to take with them John, ⁿ whose surname was Mark.

38 But Paul thought not good to take him with them, who departed ^o from them from Pamphylia, and went not with them to the work.

39 And the contention was so sharp between them, that they departed asunder one from the other: and so Barnabas took Mark, and sailed unto Cyprus;

40 And Saul chose Silas, and departed, being recommended ^p by the brethren unto the grace of God.

41 And he went through Syria and Cilicia, confirming ^q the churches.

CHAPTER XVI.

1 Paul having circumcised Timothy, 7 and being called by the Spirit from one country to another, 14 converteth Lydia, 16 casteth out a spirit of divination. 19 For which cause he and Silas are whipped and imprisoned. 26 The prison doors are opened. 31 The jailer is converted, 37 and they are delivered.

THEN came he to ^a Derbe and Lystra: and, behold, a certain disciple was there, named ^b Timotheus, the son of ^c a certain woman, which was a Jewess, and believed; but his father was a Greek:

case here, when these men attempted to lay the yoke of the Mosaic law upon the necks of the Gentiles.—2. What relates to the question of circumcision itself, is only negatively expressed: "It seemed good to the Holy Ghost, and to us, to lay upon you no greater burden than" is specified in the articles following, neither of which mention circumcision; consequently that is neither enjoined nor forbidden.—3. The articles named are stated to be "necessary"—that is, things to be necessarily refrained from. Not, indeed, all equally so; for which reason it may be proper to examine them distinctly.

1. To abstain from "meats offered to idols," knowing them to have been so offered; and more especially from partaking of idolatrous feasts, in which the meats had been so offered. To these, no doubt, Christians were frequently invited, and often probably with the view of ensnaring them: we, in this age, (Paganism being abolished,) are not under the same temptations; but it deserves to be considered, whether the attendance of Christians at convivial feasts, where "Jolly Bacchus" and "Glorious Apollo" are invoked and eulogized in song, does not involve conduct very similar to that here prohibited. Meats hung up in the shambles, or presented for food, without any notification of having been so offered, we are elsewhere directed to eat, asking no questions. (1 Cor. x. 25.)

—2. As to refraining "from blood and from things strangled," so far as this is merely a repetition of the precept given to Noah, we consider it binding on Gentiles, as well as Jews. (See exposition and notes on Gen. ix. 1–7.) But farther than that, we consider it binding only in cases wherein our liberty, as Gentiles, might hurt the minds of conscientious Jews.—3. "Things strangled and blood," are understood to comprehend all creatures killed for food without discharging the blood from them; but perhaps the original precept to Noah did not go so far, (see our exposition above referred to,) and farther than that went we Gentiles are not bound, otherwise than may be necessary to avoid hurting the consciences of our weaker brethren. (Rom. xiv. 15–20, 1 Cor. viii. 8–13; x. 28.)—4. Fornication; this is, in all cases, a crime against the moral law; but the prohibition seems to be here given with particular reference to the licentious and abominable rites practised in Pagan temples, where the worst crimes made part of their religious services.

Ver. 22. Antioch.—Antioch of Syria, now Antakia, was the capital of the Syria-Macedonian empire, the residence of the Macedonian kings of Syria for several hundred years, and afterwards of the Roman governors of the province. It was situated on the Orontes, about 67 miles west of Aleppo, and 12 miles from the Mediterranean, and is said to have been 4 miles in circumference. It was totally ruined by an earthquake in 1822.—Bagster.

Ver. 23. Syria.—Syria properly so called, and in the sense in which it occurs in the New Testament, was a country of Asia, bounded by the Euphrates on the east, by the Mediterranean and Phœnicia on the west, by Cilicia on the north, and by Judea and Arabia Deserta on the south.—Cilicia.—Was a country of Asia Minor, on the south-eastern coast, having Lycœonia and Mount Taurus on the north, Syria on the east and south, and Pamphylia on the west. Its capital city was Tarsus.—Bagster.

With this definitive decree, Paul and Barnabas were dismissed, to return back to the church at Antioch, accompanied by Judas, surnamed Barsabas, and Silas, both "prophets," or inspired men, who confirmed the testimony of the apostles, and exhorted the brethren to resist the doctrine of the Judaizing teachers. Thus was harmony restored to the church, and the common cause of Christianity advanced and prospered.

This has been usually called the first Christian council, and so it was; but it was also unique, as consisting chiefly (if not entirely) of the apostles and other inspired persons; on which account we may the more admire the mild and gentle terms with which the apostolic epistle concludes:—"Not, 'If any man dispute our authority let him be Anathema;' but, 'From which (namely, the things here prohibited) if ye keep yourselves, ye shall do well.'"

A dissension, however, soon arose between Paul and Barnabas. They had agreed to revisit the churches they had already established among the Gentiles; but they differed as to the most suitable person to take with them. Barnabas determined to take with him his relation, John Mark; but Paul, offended with his conduct in deserting them before, refused; and thus they divided, Barnabas went to his native country with his relation above named, but Paul travelled through Syria and Cilicia, accompanied by Silas, who had come with them from Jerusalem. Paul's farther labours and sufferings form the chief subject of the remaining chapters of this book.

CHAP. XVI. Ver. 1–24. Paul circumcises Timothy—converts Lydia—casts out a demon, and is imprisoned.—Paul meeting with Timothy at Lystra, is so well pleased with him, that he is anxious to introduce him into the Christian ministry under his immediate sanction. As his mother was a Christian Jewess, (though married to a Greek,) he thought it necessary for him to be circumcised, as otherwise the Jews would hold no conversation with him. This done, Paul proceeds in his journey as far as Troas, near the ruins of ancient Troy, on

Ver. 27. Judas and Silas.—The former, surnamed Barsabas, is supposed to have been the brother of Joseph Barsabas, one of the candidates for the vacant apostleship, chap. i. 23.—By mouth.—Gr. "by word." Doddridge, "by word of mouth."

Ver. 27. Barnabas determined.—Hammond, "counselled." Doddridge, "advised."

Ver. 23. Pamphylia.—Pamphylia was a province of Asia Minor, bounded on the south by the Mediterranean, west by Lycia, north by Pisidia, and east by Cilicia.—Bagster.

Ver. 29. The contention was so sharp.—The Greek word is a medical term—a paroxysm of anger.

CHAP. XVI. Ver. 1. Timotheus.—In English, Timothy, to whom Paul afterwards addressed two epistles.

2 Which was well ^a reported of by the brethren that were at Lystra and Iconium.

3 Him would Paul have to go forth with him; and took and circumcised ^e him because of the Jews ^f which were in those quarters: for they knew all that his father was a Greek.

4 And as they went through the cities, they delivered them the decrees for to keep, that were ordained ^g of the apostles and elders which were at Jerusalem.

5 And so were the churches ^h established in the faith, and increased in number daily.

6 Now when they had gone throughout Phrygia and the region of ⁱ Galatia, and were forbidden of ^j the Holy Ghost to preach the word in ^k Asia,

7 After they were come to Mysia, they assayed to go into Bithynia: but the Spirit suffered them not.

8 And they passing by Mysia came down to ^l Troas.

9 ¶ And a vision appeared to Paul in the night; There stood a man ^m of Macedonia, and prayed him, saying, Come over into Macedonia, and help us.

10 And after he had seen the vision, immediately we endeavoured to go ⁿ into Macedonia, assuredly gathering that the Lord had called us for to preach the gospel unto them.

11 Therefore loosing from Troas, we came with a straight course to Samothracia, and the next ^o day to Neapolis;

12 And from thence to ^p Philippi, which is ^q the chief city of that part of Macedonia, and a colony: and we were in that city abiding certain days.

13 And on the ^r sabbath we went out of the city by a river side, where ^s prayer was wont to be made; and we sat down, and spake unto the women which resorted ^t thither.

14 ¶ And a certain woman named Lydia, a seller of purple, of the city of Thyatira, which worshipped God, heard ^u us: whose heart ^v the Lord opened, that she attended unto the things which were spoken of Paul.

15 And when she was baptized, and her household, she besought ^w us, saying, If ye have judged me to be faithful to the Lord, come into my house, and abide ^x there. And she constrained us.

16 ¶ And it came to pass, as we went to prayer, a certain damsel possessed ^y with a spirit of ^z divination met us, which brought her masters much gain ^{aa} by soothsaying:

17 The same followed Paul and us, and cried, saying, These men are the servants of the most high ^{ab} God, which show unto us the way of ^{ac} salvation.

18 And this did she many days. But Paul, being grieved, turned and said ^{ad} to the spirit, I command thee in the name of Jesus Christ to come out of her. And ^{ae} he came out the same hour.

19 ¶ And when her masters saw that the hope of their gains ^{af} was gone, they caught Paul and Silas, and drew ^{ag} them into the ^{ah} market-place unto ^{ai} the rulers,

20 And brought them to the magistrates, saying, These men, being Jews, do exceedingly trouble ^{aj} our city, 21 And teach customs, which are not lawful for us to receive, neither to observe, being Romans.

22 And the multitude rose up together against the shore of the Ægean Sea. While there, he saw in a night vision a Macedonian, who invited his assistance. This he considered as a call in providence to go and preach the gospel in that country: accordingly, "We," says the historian Luke, "came with a straight course to Samothracia—to Neapolis—to Philippi;" and at the latter place he continued for certain days, during which the following events occurred. But before we proceed, it may be proper to observe, that this is the first time St. Luke introduces himself as the companion of St. Paul, and that in the most modest and indirect manner.

Paul and Silas, accompanied by Luke and Timothy, on the first sabbath after their arrival, repair to a public Oratory, or place of prayer, where the pious Jews met for devotional purposes, especially the females, of whom the far greater part of the congregation usually consisted. Among those who now attended was one Lydia, a Jewish proselyte, "whose heart the Lord opened," so that she attended unto Paul's discourses, and received Christian baptism, with all her household. One day, however, as they were going to their devotions, they were accosted in the way by a female slave, who was a demonaic, and possessed a spirit of Python, or divination, like that of the Pythic oracle, whereby she brought her masters (or owners) great gain. Seeing the apostle and his companions daily passing that way, she constantly accosted them, and followed them for many days together, crying, "These men are servants of the most High God, which show unto us the way of salvation."

On the subject of demoniacs, and the reality of possessions, we have already given our opinion freely, and are happy to find our sentiments coincide with those of Preb. Townsend in his late work. He says, "If it appeared to me to be warranted by the sacred text, I would willingly interpret this passage with Michaelis, . . . and many others; and believe that the damsel at Philippi was either an impostor, a ventriloquist, insane, diseased with melancholy, or overpowered with her own fancies; but I cannot render the plain language of St. Luke in any but the literal manner. My reason shall always submit to Scripture; and I cannot wrest the words of this Scripture to any other meaning than the usual one, that an evil spirit had influence over the mind and body of this person, enabling her to utter oracular responses."

Dr. Doddridge remarks, "The manner in which Luke relates the story, plainly implies, that he thought it a real possession, and that Paul took it himself in that view. Nor can I apprehend that her behaviour, or his, or that of her masters afterwards, can be accounted for, without allowing it to have been the case."

Mr. Scott, taking the same side, remarks—"Had this damsel's divination been a mere jugglery between her and her masters, the command of the apostle could not have detected it, or prevented them from carrying on the deception. . . . [But] The owners of this damsel, being sensible that no further lure could be made by her, [especially if she was converted to Christianity,] and that her value, if offered for sale, was greatly diminished, were exceedingly exasperated by their loss; and when they had seized on Paul and Silas, and accused them before the magistrates as disturbers of the peace, and teachers of unlawful customs; the multitude, also, being enraged at the

Ver. 3. They knew all that his father was a Greek.—And consequently that he was uncircumcised, which would be an insurmountable barrier to his usefulness among the Jews.

Ver. 4, 5. And they went, &c.—Townsend, on the authority of Eord Barinington and other critics, places these verses at the end of chap. xv; but Doddridge disapproves the transposition.

Ver. 6. Phrygia.—[A country of Asia Minor, had Bithynia and Galatia on the north, Cappadocia on the east, Lycia, Mysia, Pisidia, Pamphylia, and Lycia on the south, and Lydia and Mysia on the west.—Galatia.—Was situated between Phrygia on the south, Bithynia and Paphlagonia on the north, and Pontus on the east.—Asia.—That is, Proconsular Asia, which included Ionia, Æolia, and Lydia.—Begster.

Ver. 7. Mysia.—Lay between Lydia on the south, Troas on the west, the Propontis on the north, and Phrygia and Bithynia on the east; which had the Euxine on the north, Paphlagonia on the east, and Galatia and Phrygia on the south.—Begster.—But the Spirit [of Jesus] suffered them not.—Doddridge says, "So many ancient versions, readings, and citations add the words [of Jesus], that I thought myself not only authorized, but obliged, at least to insert them thus, and perhaps might well have omitted the crochets." Even "The improved (Guthrie's) version" inserts them; and adds, "these words are introduced into the text on the most approved authorities." See riesbach.

Ver. 11. Samothracia.—[Now Samandraci, was an island of the Ægean sea, about 30 miles in circumference, near Thrace, where the Helms falls into the sea.—Neapolis.—Now Napoli, was a sea port of Macedonia, a few miles from Philippi, near Thrace, to which it was formerly reckoned.—Begster.

Ver. 12. The chief city.—Doddridge, "a city at the first part of Macedonia," which was divided into four parts—"and a Roman colony."

Ver. 13. Where prayer was wont to be made.—Doddridge, "Where, according to custom, was an oratory." Lardner notes Josephus for such a custom among the Jews, tolerated by the Roman laws.

Ver. 16. A spirit of divination.—Margis, "of Python," or Apollo. Virgil thus describes a Pythoness:—

"The virgin cries—The god! behold the god!
And straight her visage and her colour change,
Her hair's dishevel'd, and her heaving breast,
And labouring heart, are swollen with sacred rage;
Larger she seems, her voice no mortal sound,
As the inspiring god, near and more near,
Seizes her soul."—Æneid, vi. 46.

Archbishop Potter says, "There were but few that pretended to inspiration but razed after this manner, loquacious and vulgar, and making a strange, terrible noise, sometimes gnashing their teeth, shivering, and trembling, with a thousand antic motions." The Hebrews called such a one "Mistress of the Ob" (or Aub). See 1 Sam. xxviii, with which the reader may compare Job xxxii. 18–20.—By soothsaying.—Doddridge, "prophesying."

Ver. 19. Market-place.—See note on chap. xvii. 17.

them; and the magistrates rent off their clothes, and commanded to beat them.

23 And when they had laid many stripes upon them, they cast them into prison, charging the jailer to keep them safely :

24 Who, having received such a charge, thrust them into the inner prison, and made their feet fast in the stocks.

25 ¶ And at midnight Paul and Silas prayed, and sang praises unto God: and the prisoners heard them.

26 And suddenly there was a great earthquake, so that the foundations of the prison were shaken: and immediately all the doors were opened, and every one's bands were loosed.

27 And the keeper of the prison awaking out of his sleep, and seeing the prison doors open, he drew out his sword, and would have killed himself, supposing that the prisoners had been fled.

A. M. cir.
407.
A. D. cir.
35.
f 2 Co. 6.5.
1 Th. 2.2
g Ja. 5.13.
h Ps. 34.1.
i e. 4.31.
j Is. 42.7.
c. 19.
k. 2.7, 10.

k Pr. 24.11, 12.
l Th. 5.15.
m Ec. 7.15.
17.
n Je. 5.22.
o e. 2.37.
9.6.
p Hab. 2.4.
Jn. 3.16, 36.
6.47.
e. 13.39.
p e. 2.39.
q Ro. 1.14, 16.
r Lu. 5.29.
s Ro. 5.11.

28 But Paul cried with a loud voice, saying, Do thyself no harm: for we are all here.

29 Then he called for a light, and sprang in, and came trembling, and fell down before Paul and Silas, 30 And brought them out, and said, Sirs what must I do to be saved?

31 And they said, Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house.

32 And they spake unto him the word of the Lord, and to all that were in his house.

33 And he took them the same hour of the night, and washed their stripes; and was baptized, he and all his, straightway.

34 And when he had brought them into his house, he set meat before them, and rejoiced, believing in God with all his house.

35 ¶ And when it was day, the magistrates sent the serjeants, saying, Let those men go.

36 And the keeper of the prison told this sayings of their prophesies, joined in the tumultuous accusation. Whereas, had the apostle satisfactorily detected an artful impostor, [as some suppose her,] they who had been convinced of the cheat, would have been enraged at those who duped them of their money, and not at him who had undeceived them."

The supposition of others, that the girl was deranged, appears to us, however, neither improbable nor inconsistent with her being a demoniac; for, as we have repeatedly remarked, (on Matt. iv. 12-25, and notes; viii. 28, note,) insanity and possession appear to us to have been frequently connected, not only in ancient times, but, in some instances, to the present day. Nor is it a valid objection that, had the girl been mad, the people would surely not have regarded her oracles; this can never rationally be pleaded, while the oracles of poor Brothers, and the unhappy Johanna Southcott, shall be recollected. It is too true, as a popular preacher once said, "People can believe any thing but the gospel!"—and this was well said at the moment, when thousands had just been paid, by the higher circles of society, to see a man jump into a quart bottle!!

But to return to the poor slave of Philippi: that she bore witness to the truth, is no objection to the fact of her being possessed, since demons repeatedly witnessed to the divine character of our Saviour as "the Holy One of God." (Mark i. 24. Luke iv. 34.) From what motive the girl, or the demon, thus bore witness to the truth, is not for us to inquire; but it seems to have given Paul much uneasiness; partly, perhaps, lest the people should suppose there might be a league between them. Why he did not work the miracle in the first instance, is another circumstance not within our province to ascertain.

The first effect, however, was to raise a persecution against the apostles: but it is observable, that the charge brought against them is not that of ejecting the demon, for that would have established their power of working miracles; but the introduction of a new religion, which required the sanction of the state. (Compare chap. xvii. 13.) At this the magistrates were so incensed, that, instead of calmly inquiring into the circumstances, they flew into a rage, and ordered them to be scourged, contrary to their own laws; and then committed them to prison, which was rendered the more terrible by the charge given to the jailer, to keep them safely, in consequence of which they were thrust into the dungeon and the stocks. How safely they were kept, we shall see in the following part of the chapter.

Ver. 23-34. Paul and Silas delivered, and the jailer converted.—Paul and Silas appear to have been the only persons here sent to prison; at least, Luke says nothing of either himself or Timothy being committed with them. Let us now, for a moment, glance into the dungeon where Paul and Silas lie, their backs smarting from the rods wherewith they had been scourged, and their legs and feet galled and excoerated with the stocks. Let us listen to their groans. Groans? No; they are occupied in prayer and singing! rejoicing that they were counted worthy to suffer thus for Him who had so lately died for them—and the other "prisoners heard them." Strange, indeed, must it appear to them, to hear these men, brought in scourged, and with a bitter outcry against them as criminals of the deepest guilt, and likely to be sent to speedy execution, and yet singing as if they expected—not an acquittal only, but a triumph! Great, indeed, must be that grace which can make men happy in prison and in torture!

But, in the midst of this scene of tranquil happiness, lo! a sound from heaven—the prison is shaken to its foundation; all the doors are opened and the fetters broken. The jailer, suddenly awaking, sees, by the glimmer of his midnight lamp, his chamber door is open, and the doors leading to the different dungeons of the prison; he knows that his life must answer for the escape of his prisoners, and therefore, in the first paroxysm of distress, he draws his sword with the design to stab himself. Paul, who was set at liberty, and probably hearing something from the jailer which led him to fear his design of suicide, now cries out aloud, "Do thyself no harm, for we are all here." The hand of self-murder was now arrested, when calling for lights to examine the prison, and leaving the care of the other prisoners probably to his attendants, he sprang trembling into the dungeon where Paul and Silas were, and perceiving they had been the subjects of a signal miracle in their liberation from confinement, he fell at their feet, and cried, "Sirs, what must I do to be saved?"

Whether the jailer had heard of a day of future judgment, and thought this extraordinary commotion was a prelude to it; or whether a reflection on his own severe treatment of these extraordinary men now filled him with alarm, we cannot say; but instances have occurred, not few nor distant, in which a sudden conviction of guilt has led persons, under the influence of divine grace, to a true and effectual repentance, as was no doubt the case with this hardened sinner—for such were the characters generally selected for offices of this nature. Without any regard, however, to what he had been, these apostolic preachers proclaim to him a free and full salvation through the Lord Jesus Christ; and not to himself only, but, as his family had by this time gathered round him, to them also. "For they spake unto him the word of life, and to all that were in his house." The "same hour of the night" he washed their stripes, and did what he could to heal them; immediately after which he and "all his were baptized straightway;" and, when they all returned into the house, "he set meat before them, [his prisoners,] and rejoiced, believing in God with all his house."

Before we leave this part of our narrative, we beg leave to offer a caution against a sin unhappily much upon the increase in this country. Suicide, the crime contemplated by the jailer, is a sin both against the gospel and the law. The sixth command as strongly opposes this as any other species of murder: for God, who only can give life, has alone the power to dispose of it. As to the gospel, that teaches us that death is only the path to judgment and a future state, on which it is madness to rush without being summoned or prepared. We hope there are but few Bible-readers in danger from this crime, but the writer has known some; and one case in particular that it may be useful to record. A pious and amiable divine of the last century, at no great distance from London, laboured under great depression of spirits. Being left a short time alone, his razor presented itself to him, and, by the suggestion of the enemy of souls, he seized it, and instantly cut his throat. His family soon came about him, and he uttered these impressive words,—"The Lord has left me but one moment, and see what I have done!" The case (to the best of our recollection) did not prove fatal; but the words are monitory, and should place us on our guard against a temptation from which we have no defence, but confidence in God. Generally speaking, however, we believe this crime arises from the prevalence of infidelity. Fashionable writers have argued against a future state, and readers of a gay and licentious conduct, have flattered themselves that "death is an eternal sleep"—till at length they have made the terrible experiment.

Ver. 35-40. Paul refuses to be released disgracefully.—The remaining verses of this chapter show us into what difficulties men in power often plunge themselves, by making their passions, and not the laws, the rule of their conduct. Whether the jailer or some other person had warned the magistrates of their illegal conduct, they were greatly alarmed when they perceived that they had violated the Roman laws, which

Ver. 22. Commanded to beat them.—Doddridge. "Commanded them to be beaten with rods."

Ver. 35. The magistrates.—i. e. the Prætors.—Sent the serjeants.—Beulæus, or Vicars.—Doddridge.

ing to Paul, The magistrates have sent to let you go: now therefore depart, and go in peace.

37 But Paul said unto them, They have beaten us openly ¹ uncondemned, being Romans, and have cast ² us into prison; and now do they thrust us out privily? nay verily; but let them come ³ themselves and fetch us out.

38 And the sergeants told these words unto the magistrates: and they feared, when they heard that they were Romans.

39 And they came and besought ⁴ them, and brought ⁵ them out, and desired ⁶ them to depart out of the city.

40 And they went out of the prison, and entered into the house of ⁷ Lydia: and when they had seen the brethren, they comforted them, and departed.

CHAPTER XVII.

1 Paul preacheth at Thessalonica, 4 where some believe, and others persecute him. 10 He is sent to Berea, and I preacheth there. 13 Being persecuted at Thessalonica, 15 he cometh to Athens, and dispatcheth, and preacheth the living God, to them unknown, 24 whereby many are converted unto Christ.

NOW when they had passed through Amphipolis and Apollonia, they came to Thessalonica, where was a synagogue of the Jews:

2 And Paul, as his manner was, ^a went in unto them, and three sabbath days reasoned with them out of the scriptures,

3 Opening and alleging, that Christ must ^b needs have suffered, and risen again from the dead; and that this Jesus, ^c whom I preach unto you, is Christ.

the imperial power generally protected by exemplary punishments. Paul, they found, was a Roman, and they had punished him unheard-of and that with scourging, both which exposed themselves to punishment. It is probable that Paul pleaded his privilege in the first instance, but they were too much influenced by his accusers, the owners of the slave, to attend either to facts or rights. They first punished, and now they dare not judge. Wishing to compromise the matter, they therefore sent their sergeants, beadles, or lictors, the men who had scourged them the day before, to order the jailer to release them in a private manner: but such release they, and especially Paul, refused accepting without a public acknowledgment of his having been unjustly treated. This may be thought somewhat inconsistent with our Lord's direction, to submit to injuries without resistance. These men, however, made no resistance: they, being innocent, suffered as evil-doers; and, had they privately withdrawn from prison, it would naturally have been supposed that they had been guilty of some offence; whereas, in ejecting the demon from the girl, as already mentioned, they only saved the public from the deceptions of an evil demon; and as it respects her owners, whatever claim they might have upon the girl's domestic services, they had certainly no right to employ her to deceive the people and render her unhappy, as the consequence must be; unless we are to believe that it is a good thing to be possessed and controlled by an unclean spirit.

As to the plea of Paul and Silas, that they were Romans, there is no doubt but it was true; and, being so, it could not be their duty, silently and tamely to give up privileges, by the surrender of which others might be injured, and the laws of their country violated with impunity. Bring the case home: suppose an American put upon his trial simply for preaching, and another Judge Jeffries should wish to try him without empannelling a jury; would it be consistent with his duty to submit, and resign his own and the liberties of his country, without a struggle or a plea? Undoubtedly not: nor would it have been right in Paul and Silas to have given up silently their Roman privileges.

They did not, however, refuse to be ill-treated, nor demand satisfaction for their imprisonment; much less threaten the magistrates with the vengeance of the higher powers. "When they suffered they threatened not" (1 Peter ii. 23): but immediately on being brought forth, retired to the house of their amiable convert, Lydia, and having seen the brethren, who probably assembled at her house, and engaged with them in devotional exercises, and comforted them by an exhibition of divine truth, and of the Lord's merciful conduct toward them, they departed from their city, as they had been desired.

Ver 37. They have beaten us, &c.—Cicero says, "It is a transgression of the law to bind a Roman citizen: it is wickedness to scourge him." The illegality of the proceeding of the magistrates was further evident in their conduct, and in punishing Paul unheard.

Ver 40. Comforted them—c by affectionate exhortation. See Doddridge, Chap. XVII. Ver 1. Amphipolis—Was the capital of the first division of Macedonia, situated on the Strymon, which nearly surrounded it, from whence it took its name, called 70 miles east of Thessalonica. It is now a place of little consequence, named Emboli—Thessalonica—Now Salonica, was a celebrated city and capital of the second part of Macedonia, situated at the head of the Thermaic gulf, now the gulf of Salonica. It was a noble mart, and the most populous of all Macedonia, and it still retains somewhat of its 40:7.

A M. cir
A D. cir
53.

1 c 22 25

u Da 6 18, 19

v Ex 11 8, Re 3 9

w Mac 8 31

x ver 11

a Lu 4 16, c 9 20, 13 31, 4

b Lu 21 26, 46

c 18 28, Ga 3 1

c or, whom, and he, I preach.

1 c 28 21

2 c Co 8 5, 1 Th 1 5 9

f Ro 16 21

g Lu 13 35, c 16 20

h Lu 21 22, 19 19 42

i Mat 2 23, Ju 11 48

j c 9 45, ver 11

k Pa 19 39, 100

l Ju 1 21, 1 Pe 3 2

m Lu 14 16, 16 29, 21 41, Ju 3 39

4 And some ^d of them believed, and ^e consorted with Paul and Silas; and of the devout Greeks a great multitude, and of the chief women not a few.

5 ¶ But the Jews which believed not, moved with envy, took unto them certain Jewd fellows of the baser sort, and gathered a company, and set all the city on an uproar, and assaulted the house of ^f Jason, and sought to bring them out to the people.

6 And when they found them not, they drew Jason and certain brethren unto the rulers of the city, crying, ^g These that have turned the world upside down are come hither also;

7 Whom Jason hath received: and these all do contrary ^h to the decrees of Cesar, saying that there is another king, one Jesus.

8 And they troubled ⁱ the people and the rulers of the city, when they heard these things.

9 And when they had taken security of Jason, and of the other, they let them go.

10 ^{*} And the brethren immediately sent away Paul and Silas by night unto Berea: who coming thither went into the synagogue of the Jews.

11 These were more ^k noble than those in Thessalonica, in that they received the word with all readiness ^l of mind, and searched the scriptures ^m daily, whether those things were so.

12 Therefore many of them believed; also

CHAP. XVII. VER. 1—15. Paul preaches at Thessalonica and at Berea, but is driven from both places by persecution.

In the first instance we find Paul preaching in a synagogue of the Jews at Thessalonica, where he reasoned with them for three successive sabbaths, and probably on some of the intermediate days, in which we remark two important circumstances. 1. He did not confine his reasonings to the subjects of natural religion, nor did he draw his arguments from the Pagan philosophers. These, as we shall see presently, he would sometimes quote, but they never formed his text—he reasoned from the Scriptures. 2. The substance of all his discourses was "Jesus Christ, and him crucified." He reasoned from the Scriptures, opening and alleging that Christ must needs have suffered [for our sins,] and have risen again from the dead [for our justification.] And this Jesus [added he] whom I preach unto you is Christ, or the Messiah. This affords a pointed condemnation of merely moral preaching, which will seldom reform and never convert a sinner. "One may more justly complain of some sermons in our days (says Dr. John Edwards) than the father of old did of Tully's works, that there is not a word of Christianity in them. Tully's Offices and Seneca's Epistles serves many instead of the Bible."

"It is true (said the late learned Bishop Horsley) that it is the great duty of a preacher of the gospel to press the practice of its precepts upon the consciences of men; but then it is equally true, that it is his duty to enforce this practice in a particular way, namely, by inculcating its doctrines. The motives which the revealed doctrines furnish are the only motives he has to do with, and the only motives by which religious duties can be effectually enforced."

In answer to the objection, that "the peculiar doctrines of Revelation," as the Trinity, the incarnation, and the atonement, and communion with God, are above the capacities of the common people, his lordship replies, "If this were really the case, the condition of mankind would indeed be miserable, and the proffer of mercy in the Gospel little better than a mockery of their woe; for the consequence would be, that the common people would never be carried beyond the first principles of natural religion. Of the efficacy of natural religion as a rule of action, the world has had the long experience of 1600 years: for so much was the interval between the institution of the Mosaic church and the publication of the Gospel. . . . Among the vulgar, natural religion never produced any effect at all; among the learned, much of it is to be found in their writings, little in their lives." On the other hand, "Upon the first preaching of the Gospel, the illiterate, the scorn of pharisaical pride, who knew not the law, and ancient splendour, being five miles in circumference, and containing a population of upwards of 60,000 persons. See the travels of Dr. Clarke, &c.—B. Ver 4. Consorted—c associated.—Devout Greeks—Or Grecians proselyted to the Jewish religion.

Ver 5. Jason.—A resident at Thessalonica, and a kinsman of St Paul. See Ro. xvi. 21.

Ver 6. These that have turned the world upside down.—The word properly implies sedition—an attempt to overturn the government. See ch. xi. 30.

Ver 10. Berea.—Was a city of Macedonia, not far from the Thermaic gulf, west of Thessalonica, and near Pella, the birth place of Alexander the Great.

Ver 11. More noble.—Not in rank, but in disposition—"more ingenious," or liberal minded.

of honourable women which were Greeks, and of men, not a few.

12 ¶ But when the Jews of Thessalonica had knowledge that the word of God was preached of Paul at Berea, they came thither also, and stirred up ^a the people.

11 And then immediately the brethren sent away ^a Paul to go as it were to the sea: but Silas and Timotheus abode there still.

15 And they that conducted Paul brought him unto Athens: and receiving a commandment unto Silas and Timotheus ^b for to come to him with all speed, they departed.

16 ¶ Now while Paul waited for them at Athens, ^c his spirit was stirred in him, when he saw the city ^d wholly given to idolatry.

17 Therefore disputed he in the synagogue with the Jews, and with the devout ^e persons, and in the market daily with them that met with him.

18 Then certain philosophers ^f of the Epicureans, and of the Stoics, encountered him. And some said, What will this ^g babbler say? other some, He seemeth to be a setter forth of strange gods: because he preached unto them Jesus, and the resurrection.

19 And they took him, and brought him unto

A. M. cir.
537
A. D. cir.
53.

u Lu 12 51
p Ma 10 23
p c 1 5 5
A. M. cir.
403
A. D. cir.
51
q Ps 139 126
r or, full of idols.
s c 8 2
t c 10 16
u or, base
follow.

v or, Mars'
hill.
w was the highest court in Athens. x Lu 13 24
y 1 Jo 2 7
z 1 Jo 8 12
y or, the court of the Areopagite.
a 1e 30 38
a or, gods
that ye worship.
b c 4 8
c 14 13
c Ma 11 25
d c 7 44
e Ps 50 8
f 1e 12 10
g Ro 11 26
h Ma 12 10
i Ps 31 15.

^a Areopagus, saying, May we know what this new ^b doctrine, whereof thou speakest, is?

20 For thou bringest certain ^c strange things to our ears: we would know therefore what these things mean.

21 (For all the Athenians and strangers which were there spent their time in nothing else, but either to tell, or to hear some new thing.)

22 ¶ Then Paul stood in the midst of ^d Mars' hill, and said, Ye men of Athens, I perceive that in all things ye are too ^e superstitious.

23 For as I passed by, and beheld your ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ appointed, and the bounds of their habitation;

27 That they should seek the Lord, if haply they might feel after him, and find him, though he be not far from every one of us:

28 For in him we live, and move, and have our being; as certain also of your own poets have said: For we are also his offspring.

29 Forasmuch then as we are the offspring of God, we ought not to think that the God-head is like unto gold, or silver, or stone, graven by art and man's device.

30 And the times of this ignorance God winked at; but now he commandeth all men every where to repent:

31 Because he hath appointed a day, in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath given assurance unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead.

Of the two philosophic sects here mentioned, it may be sufficient for us here to remark their leading principles. The former, the followers of Epicurus, who made the chief good to consist in enjoyment, rid themselves of all fears or trouble in religion, by denying the being and providence of God, and maintaining that all events came by chance or accident. The Stoics, disciples of Zeno, on the other hand, admitted both; but then they tied up the hands of deity by the laws of fate, allowing to neither god nor man a freedom of will or action. These sects, who were perpetually debating with each other, united in attacking Paul; and either not understanding, or at least pretending not to understand him, brought him to the celebrated court of Areopagus; not, so far as appears, under any criminal charge, but that they might have a full exposition of his new and strange principles.

One thing is here necessary to be observed, that though one of the sects denied the being of a God, and the other robbed him of his independence, they both paid so much complaisance to the vulgar, that they were willing to worship any god or every god that they might be required to serve; and therefore, doubtless, looked upon Paul as unaccountably precise and scrupulous in his objecting to idolatry.

We follow Paul, however, into this ancient and august court, not, indeed, as a criminal, but as a stranger, from whom they requested (and perhaps demanded) an account of the strange notions which he attempted to propagate, relative to one Jesus who was crucified, and to the resurrection, (Anastasis;) whom these ignorant philosophers took for a new god and goddess of whom they had never before heard. Standing therefore in the midst of the court, he thus courteously and eloquently addressed them—surrounded, doubtless, by the persons who had desired the statement of his doctrines, and whose national character was that of seeking novelty.

"Men of Athens," said he, "I perceive that, in all things, ye are too superstitious"—or, more literally, "too much addicted to the worship of demons," under which term they understood all the invisible powers, good or evil—"or, as I passed by and beheld your devotions," or, rather, the objects and instruments of your devotion, "I found an altar with this inscription, TO THE UNKNOWN GOD." The meaning of this inscription has cost pains and antiquaries much labour to discover, without attaining absolute certainty on the subject. The opinions to us most probable, and most generally received, are—1. That the inscription referred to the God of the Jews, whose peculiar name they were always reluctant to disclose to the Gentiles, and latterly refused to pronounce themselves. But, 2. the far more general opinion seems to be that adopted by Hammond and Doddridge, and which depends on the following narrative:—Dionægenes Laertius (in his Life of Epicurus) relates, that in his time (about 600 years before Christ) there was a terrible pestilence in Athens, to avert which they sacrificed to all the gods whom they supposed able to assist them, but without success. Epicurus there, ordered them to bring some sheep into the Areopagus, and then all experts to chance and accident, and the Stoics, who attributed all to fate; he does all things by the formation of an infinitely wise and good God, who, he is the only infinite, is also the only perfectly independent Being.

Ver. 27. If haply—Doddridge, "possibly"—they might feel after him.—The allusion is to people groping in the dark, and is intended to represent the difficulty of finding out God by the mere light of Nature.

Ver. 28. In him we live, and move, and have our being—Doddridge, "in him we live, and are moved, and do exist"—Epicurus also his offspring.—The passage, possibly supposed to be here referred to, is thus translated.—

"Jesus's presence fills all space, upholds this ball, All need his aid, his power supports us all; For we are suffering all, and he in love, Plants out to man his labour from above."

See the Phænomena of Anaxagoras. The same words, with the variation of a letter only are to be found in the Hymn of Chthonius. See Doddridge Ver. 29. God winked at—Doddridge, "overlooked." This text does not, cannot mean that God is in any case indifferent to the conduct of his creatures; for it is added, that he commands all men every where to repent, and was appointed a day to judge them. So it was with the nations of Canaan—winked, he appeared to close his eyes against their iniquities, until they

A. M. 405
A. D. 51
J. 15: 45-21
K. 14: 17
L. Col 1: 12
M. Tit 1: 17
N. 1: 10-15, &c
O. Ro 3: 25
P. Luc 21: 17
Tit 2: 11, 12
Q. Ro 2: 16
R. or, offered faith.
S. 1: 25, 5.
T. Luc 11: 18
e. 21: 25.
U. Ro 16: 3

32 ¶ And when they heard of the resurrection of the dead, some mocked: and others said, We will hear thee again of this matter.

33 So Paul departed from among them. 34 Howbeit certain men clave unto him, and believed: among the which was Dionysius the Areopagite, and a woman named Damaris, and others with them.

CHAPTER XVIII.

3 Paul laboureth with his hands, and preacheth at Corinth to the Gentiles. 9 The Lord encourageh him in a vision. 12 He is accused before Gallio the deputy, but is dismissed. 15 Afterwards passing from city to city he strengtheneth the disciples. 21 Apollus, being more perfectly instructed by Aquila and Priscilla, 28 preacheth Christ with great efficacy.

AFTER these things Paul departed from Athens, and came to Corinth:

2 And found a certain Jew named Aquila, born in Pontus, lately come from Italy, with his wife Priscilla; (because that Claudius had commanded all Jews to depart from Rome;) and came unto them.

3 And because he was of the same craft, he letting them loose, to follow them, and, when they laid down, to sacrifice to the god whose altar was nearest. Some of these sheep, it is supposed, might lie down, at a time when Athens was far from being so full of idols as in Paul's time, at a distance from any statue or temple, (or perhaps at an equal distance between two,) when, not knowing to what god to direct their worship, they dedicated an altar "to the unknown god," who presided over the spot where the sheep rested. Thus there might be (as is indeed reported) more than one altar of this description. That which Paul saw furnished him with a text for his address, from which he discoursed to them of the one great invisible Being, to them unknown, who formed and governs all things. "Him, therefore, whom ye ignorantly worship," and seem to grope after in the dark, "Him, declare I unto you." This great Being, he proceeds to state, had "made of one blood all nations of men"—or, more literally and properly, "the whole nation of mankind;" representing the world as one great family, "the offspring" of the same Almighty Father, in whom "all live, and move, and do exist." He thence infers that this Universal Parent of mankind could in no way resemble statues of metal or of stone, but was a being of infinite power and activity, presiding over all his creatures, and taking account of all their actions, with the design, at some future day, of bringing all before his bar. With this design he had commanded all men to repent of their idolatry and other crimes, and had ordained that some august person, whose name he preached, to be the judge; and though he had been rejected and crucified by his own nation, yet had God, most high, given assurance of such design "in that he had raised him from the dead."

Here he could proceed no farther. The very idea of a resurrection appeared to them all so absurd—to Stoics as well as Epicureans—that they began to mock and ridicule; and even others, not so rude, thought it a matter of so little consequence, that it were better to defer the subject "to a more convenient season." As, however, there was a Joseph and a Nicodemus, in the Jewish sanhedrim, who believed in Jesus, so, even among the judges of the Areopagus, there was a Dionysius who believed, as well as a noble lady, of the name of Damaris, which, with a few others, were all the fruit of his labours in this metropolis of science, literature, and taste.

CHAP. XVIII. Ver. 1—28. Paul preaches at Corinth, and afterwards at Ephesus the character and talents of Apollus.—From Athens Paul went to Corinth, at that time the metropolis of Greece. "It was," (says Mr. Milner) at once full of opulence, learning, luxury, and sensuality. Here Providence gave him the acquaintance and friendship of Aquila and Priscilla, two Jewish Christians lately expelled from Italy with other Jews by an edict of the Emperor Claudius. With them he wrought as a tent-maker, being of the same occupation; for every Jew, whether rich or poor, was obliged to follow "some trade." After the arrival of Silas and Timothy, the apostle earnestly addressed his countrymen in the synagogue at Corinth, but meeting with little beside opposition and abuse were full, and then fulfilled at once his threatnings against them, and his promise to Alcibiades. See Gen. xv. 16.

Ver. 21. Given a surname—i. e. evidence to support our faith, namely, the evidence of Christ's resurrection.

Ver. 21. Dionysius was the Areopagite.—A member of the tribunal Areopagus, the spot on which the place of Athens. There are two volumes, both, of the apostle's trial of justice at Athens. There are two volumes, both, of the apostle's trial of justice at Athens. There are two volumes, both, of the apostle's trial of justice at Athens.

CHAP. XVIII. Ver. 1. Corinth.—[The capital of Achaia, and the ornament of Greece, was situated on the north of the Isthmus which connects Peloponnesus with Attica, at the distance of 60 stadia from the Egæan and Ionian seas, on each side. It was celebrated for its extensive commerce, wealth, and luxury, for its magnificence and grandeur, its elegant and magnificent temples, palaces, theatres, and other public buildings, and for the learning and ingenuity of its inhabitants and the number of its seminaries, where philosophy was publicly taught.]—Barter.

Ver. 2. Claudius had commanded, &c.—This is mentioned by Suetonius in the life of Claudius, and Christians were at this time considered only as a Jewish sect. See Lardner's Cred.

abode with them, and ^b wrought: for by their occupation they were tent-makers.

4 And he reasoned in the ^c synagogue every sabbath, and persuaded the Jews and the Greeks.

5 And when ^d Silas and Timotheus were come from Macedonia, Paul was pressed in the spirit, and testified to the Jews that Jesus ^e was Christ.

6 And when they opposed ^f themselves, and blasphemed, he shook ^g his raiment, and said unto them, Your ^h blood be upon your own heads; I am clean: from henceforth I will go unto the Gentiles.

7 And he departed thence, and entered into a certain ⁱ man's house, named Justus, ^j one that worshipped God, whose house joined hard to the synagogue.

8 And ^k Crispus, the chief ruler of the synagogue, believed on the Lord with all his house; and many of the Corinthians hearing believed, and were baptized.

9 ¶ Then spake the Lord to Paul in the night by a vision, Be not afraid, but speak, and hold not thy peace:

10 For I am with thee, and no man shall set on thee to hurt thee: for I have much people in this city.

11 And he ^l continued ^m there a year and six months, teaching the word of God among them.

12 ¶ And when Gallio was the deputy of Achaia, the Jews made insurrection with one accord against Paul, and brought him to the judgment seat.

13 Saying, This ⁿ fellow persuadeth men to worship God contrary to the law.

14 And when Paul was now about to open ^o his mouth, Gallio said unto the Jews, If it were a matter of wrong or wicked lewdness, O ye Jews, ^p reason would that I should bear with you:

15 But if it be a question of words and names, and of your ^q law, look ye to it; for I will be no judge of such matters.

16 And he drave them from the judgment seat.

17 Then all the Greeks took ^r Sosthenes, the chief ruler of the synagogue, and beat him before the judgment seat. And Gallio cared for none of those things.

18 ¶ And Paul ^s after this tarried ^t there yet a good while, and then took his leave of the brethren, and sailed thence into Syria, and with him Priscilla and Aquila; having shorn ^u his head in ^v Cenchrea: for he had a vow.

19 And he came to Ephesus, and left them there: but he himself entered into the synagogue, and reasoned ^w with the Jews.

20 When they desired him to tarry longer time with them, he consented not;

21 But bade them farewell, saying, I must by all means keep this feast that cometh in ^x Jerusalem: but I will return again unto you, if ^y God will. And he sailed from Ephesus.

22 And when he had landed at Cesarea, and gone up, and saluted the church, he went down to Antioch.

23 And after he had spent some time ^z there, he departed, and went over ^{aa} all the country of ^{ab} Galatia and Phrygia in order, strengthening ^{ac} all the disciples.

24 ¶ And a certain Jew named ^{ad} Apollos, born at Alexandria, an eloquent man, and mighty in the scriptures, came to Ephesus.

25 This man was instructed in the way of the Lord; and being fervent ^{ae} in the spirit, he spake and taught diligently the things of the Lord, knowing ^{af} only the baptism of John.

26 And he began to speak boldly in the synagogue: whom when Aquila and Priscilla had heard, they took him unto ^{ag} them, and expounded unto him the way of God more ^{ah} perfectly.

27 And when he was disposed to pass into Achaia, the brethren wrote, exhorting the disciples to receive him: who, when he was from them, he turned to the Gentiles, and shaking his garment, with an intimation that he was free from the blood of his own nation, who had refused his message, he immediately devoted his whole attention to the idolatrous Corinthians. Crispus, however, the chief ruler of the synagogue, believed on the Lord with all his house, as did also Justus, at whose house he lodged, adjoining to the synagogue. Many also of the idolatrous Corinthians believed, and were baptized, and it is possible that he might now be ready to think his work here completed; but, in a vision of the night, he was animated and encouraged to persevere by the assurance of his heavenly Master: "Be not afraid; but speak and hold not thy peace, for I have much people in this city." He accordingly continued there a full year and a half, "teaching the word of God among them."

It was to be expected that the Jews would be exasperated by his success among the Gentiles, and they made zealous attempts to hinder him. "But the moderate spirit of the Roman government (says the excellent church historian above cited) prevented them from raising any serious persecution. Gallio, the proconsul, brother to the famous Seneca, was perfectly indifferent concerning the progress of Christianity, and refused to pay the least attention to their complaints against St. Paul."

Ver. 3. Tent-makers—A very important trade at that time, when tents were much in use; and ranking probably with our trunk-making. The early Romans made no secret of their trades. One was summoned the shoemaker, another the baker, &c. (See Doddridge). Paul's motive was evidently that he might not be burdensome to the churches for support. See 1 Co. iv. 12. 2 Co. xii. 14.

Ver. 5. Pressed in the spirit—Doddridge, "borne away by this spirit." Hermans and others, "by the spirit," meaning the Holy Ghost. But some ancient copies read, "he was earnestly employed in the word," i. e. in preaching. See Griesbach.

Ver. 6. Shook his raiment—As signifying, as he said, that he was clean, "pure," or "clear" of their blood. Compare chap. xx. 26. A like ceremony is still used in Turkey. See Oriental Lit. No. 1325.

Ver. 7. Justus, one that worshipped God—i. e. a Jewish proselyte.

Ver. 10. Set on thee—Doddridge, "fall on thee."

Ver. 12. Gallio—Was the eldest brother of the celebrated philosopher L. A. Seneca, who describes him as a most mild and amiable man. Baynes. Deputy—i. e. Proconsul of Achaia, or Greece.—Achaia—Achaia proper, was a province of Peloponnesus, bounded on the north by the gulf of Corinth, on the south by Elis and Arcadia, on the east by Sicyon, and on the west by the Ionia sea; but in the largest sense, it comprehended all Greece.—B.

who now finding himself effectually preserved from the fury of his countrymen, remained in Corinth some considerable time longer than the above-mentioned year and a half.

The Romans evidently, and indeed justly, considered the Jews as a factious, quarrelsome, and superstitious people; and it was upon this principle that Gallio refused to listen to their complaints; and, indeed, afterwards, when the Greeks took Sosthenes, who was a ringleader against the Christians, and beat him before the judgment seat, he refused to interfere; for which, however, we cannot commend him, for he ought to have kept the peace; but "Gallio cared for none of those things."

From Corinth Paul came to Ephesus, another celebrated Greek city, whither Aquila and Priscilla accompanied him. Here he addressed the Jews with better acceptance, for they wished him to tarry with them; but, having determined to attend the next feast at Jerusalem, he proceeded on his journey promising shortly to return.

After Paul had left this city, Apollos came, an Alexandrian Jew, who is described as "an eloquent man, mighty in the Scriptures, and fervent in spirit," but as yet but partially acquainted with Christianity, "knowing only the baptism of John." Aquila and Priscilla, however, when they heard his

Ver. 11. Wrong—i. e. injustice.

Ver. 17. Sosthenes, the chief ruler—Probably the successor of Crispus, who had been converted, (ver. 8.) and of course of an opposite spirit, and in this case the persecutor.

Ver. 18. Cenchrea—(Now Kerki, was the port of Corinth, on the east side of the Isthmus, and about nine miles from the city.)—Lagaria.—For he had a vow—This appears to have been the vow of the Nazarene, for it is said, he had "shaved his head at Cenchrea." By the original law, it appears that Nazarenes were to shave their heads "at the door of the tabernacle," (Num. vi. 18); but this must have been dispensed with, in the instance of persons residing in foreign countries, as well as that of going up to the three great feasts; the Rabbins, however, considered such persons as bound to come to Jerusalem to observe them, and this is supposed to be the reason that Paul was so anxious to go up and keep the approaching feast, ver. 21. It should not be concealed, however, that Grattus, Hermann, Ritsius, and others, consider Aquila and Priscilla as the person who had made the vow; and the meaning Aquila and Priscilla, contrary to every other instance; it leaves this interpretation. If this be adopted, the word there, in ver. 19, must refer, not to Ephesus, but to Cenchrea.

Ver. 25. Mighty in the scriptures—Namely of the Old Testament, the New not being yet written.

come, * helped them much which had believed through grace :

28 For he mightily convinced the Jews, and that publicly, showing by the scriptures that Jesus was Christ.

CHAPTER XIX.

5 The Holy Ghost is given by Paul's hands. 8 The Jews blaspheme his doctrine, which is confirmed by miracles. 13 The Jewish exorcists are beaten by the devil. 19 Curious arts, as magic, 21 Demetrius, for love of gain, excites an uproar against Paul, 25 which is appeased by the town clerk.

AND it came to pass, that, while Apollos was at Corinth, Paul having passed through the upper coasts came to Ephesus : and finding certain disciples,

2 He said unto them, Have ye received the Holy Ghost since ye believed ? And they said unto him, We have not : so much as heard whether there be any Holy Ghost.

3 And he said unto them, Unto what then were ye baptized ? And they said, Unto John's baptism.

4 Then said Paul, John verily baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying unto the people, that they should believe on him which should come after him, that is, on Christ Jesus.

5 When they heard this, they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus.

6 And when Paul had laid his hands upon them, the Holy Ghost came on them ; and they spake with tongues, and prophesied.

7 And all the men were about twelve.

8 ¶ And he went into the synagogue, and spake boldly for the space of three months, disputing and persuading the things concerning the kingdom of God.

9 But when divers were hardened, and believed not, but spake evil of that way before the multitude, he departed from them, and separated the disciples, disputing daily in the school of one Tyrannus.

A M. cir 4060
A D. 7. 56.
a 1 Co 3.6
b Ep 2.8
c Jo 5. 21
d or, is the Christ
ver 3
a 1 Co 5. 5, 6
b e 3. 16
1 Sa 3.7
c e 18. 25
d Mat 3. 11.
e Jo 1. 13.
f e 3. 16
g e 3. 17
h e 2. 4
10. 16.
i 1 Co 11. 1.
Ac
j e 18. 19
k e 28. 25
A M. cir 4063
A D. cir 57.
l Ro 11. 7
He 4. 13
m 2 Ti 1. 15
n Ps 119. 12
Jul 10.
o ver 23
u 1 Ti 6. 7
p e 30. 14
e 20. 18
r Ma 16. 20
s e 1. 15
t Ma 9. 18
u Lu 9. 49
v Lu 9. 29
w Lu 1. 65.
e 2. 43.
5. 31.
x Mat 3. 6
Ro 10. 10
y e 12. 21
A M. cir 4063
A D. cir 59.
z Ga 2. 1

10 And this continued by the space of two years ; so that all they which dwelt in Asia heard the word of the Lord Jesus, both Jews and Greeks.

11 And God wrought special miracles by the hands of Paul :

12 So that from his body were brought unto the sick handkerchiefs or aprons, and the diseases departed from them, and the evil spirits went out of them.

13 ¶ Then certain of the vagabond Jews, exorcists, took upon them to call over them which had evil spirits the name of the Lord Jesus, saying, We adjure you by Jesus whom Paul preacheth.

14 And there were seven sons of one Sceva, a Jew, and chief of the priests, which did so.

15 And the evil spirit answered and said, Jesus I know, and Paul I know ; but who are ye ?

16 And the man in whom the evil spirit was leaped on them, and overcame them, and prevailed against them, so that they fled out of that house naked and wounded.

17 And this was known to all the Jews and Greeks also dwelling at Ephesus ; and fear fell on them all, and the name of the Lord Jesus was magnified.

18 And many that believed came, and confessed, and showed their deeds.

19 Many of them also which used curious arts brought their books together, and burnt them before all men : and they counted the price of them, and found it fifty thousand pieces of silver.

20 So mightily grew the word of God and prevailed.

21 ¶ After these things were ended, Paul purposed in the spirit, when he had passed admirable talents and slender information, took him to their home, instructed him more fully in the peculiar truths of the gospel, and gave him letters of commendation to the brethren whither he travelled, to whom he became very useful, especially in preaching to the Jews, whom "he mightily convinced, and that publicly, showing by the Scriptures that Jesus was the Christ," the true Messiah, promised to their fathers.

CHAP. XIX. Ver. 1—22. The Holy Ghost given by Paul's hands. The Jewish exorcists confounded, and their books burnt.—We now find Paul returned to Ephesus, according to his promise, (chap. xviii. 21,) where he finds about a dozen of John's disciples, who, though they associated with the Christians, had received only John's baptism, and appear to have heard nothing of the miraculous events of the day of Pentecost. They now, however, willingly consented to receive baptism in the name of Jesus, after which, Paul laying his hands on them, they received the extraordinary gifts of the Holy Spirit, and prophesied and spake with tongues.

Paul, during his three months' continuance here, attended and preached at the Jewish synagogue, "disputing" with objectors, and "persuading" them to believe in Christ Jesus, and to receive the doctrines and precepts of his kingdom. Some of the Jews, however, were so hardened, that they not only refused to receive the truth themselves, but abused those who did believe, inasmuch that Paul and his friends were obliged to withdraw from them, and held their meetings in the school-room of one Tyrannus. "All at Ephesus and the adjacent country heard the word of the Lord Jesus, and many of them, both Jews and Greeks, believed."

"In no place (says Mr. Winer) does the word of God seem so much to have triumphed as at Ephesus. No less numerous than those of Corinth, the believers were much more spiritual. The work of conversion was deep, vigorous, and soul-transforming to a great degree. Many persons, struck with the horror of their former crimes, made an open confession; and many, who had dealt in the abominations of sorcery, now showed their sincere detestation of them, by burning their books before all men, the price of which amounted to a large sum. So mightily grew the word of God, and prevailed! Thus triumphs the sacred historian. Satan must have trem-

CHAP. XIX. Ver. 1. The upper coasts—i. e. The upper parts of Asia Minor, which were more remote from the Mediterranean sea.—Ephesus—A much celebrated city of Ionia in Asia Minor, and the metropolis of Proconnesia. Asia, was situated on the river Cayster, and on the side of a hill, about 35 miles north of Miletus, 40 south of Smyrna, 100 west of Laodicea, and 5 miles from the Egean sea. It was particularly famous for a magnificent temple of Diana, 425 feet long and 220 broad ; which was supported by 127 columns 70 feet high. It had become a ruinous place when the emperor Justinian filled Constantinople with its statues, and raised the church of St. Sophia on its columns. A. D. 568—569; and all that remains of this once splendid city, about half a mile from the village of Atræsalick, when visited by Dr. Chandler, was inhabited by "a few Greek peasants, living in extreme wretchedness, dependance, and insensibility." An American clergyman who visited it in 1821, says, "not a human being lives in Ephesus; and at Atræsalick there are merely a few Turkish huts." The canal which has now been removed out of its place. See ii. 5—10.

Ver. 2. Whether there be any Holy Ghost—That is, whether it be yet given. A parallel allusion occurs John vii. 39. "The Holy Ghost was not yet given," i. e. "not yet given," as our translators supply the word. So here, they "had not heard whether the Holy Ghost were yet given." This is the sense we believe generally given to the passage; and it is difficult to believe that any of John's disciples should not have heard of the Holy Ghost, for he said, "I indeed baptize you with water unto repentance, but he that cometh after me . . . he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost." Mat. iii. 11. John i. 33.

Ver. 5. Baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus.—This seems clearly to indicate, that John's was not Christian baptism, or it would not have been repeated.

Ver. 8. The Holy Ghost came on them.—Namely, his miraculous powers; for, it is added, "They spake with tongues, and prophesied."

Ver. 10. All they which dwelt in Asia—This term (Asia) was used to very different extents in different periods. Ptolemy says, "Asia, throughout the Acts of the Apostles and the Epistles of St. Paul, does not mean the whole of Asia Minor, or Anatolia, nor even the whole of the Proconnesia Asia; but a district in the anterior part of that country, called Lydian Asia, divided from the rest, much as Portugal is from Spain, and of which distinct Ephesus was the capital."

Ver. 12. Handkerchiefs or aprons.—The former the Asiatics usually carry in their hands to wipe off perspiration, as we are informed by Cassianus and Haymer; was the case both formerly and is to this day; the latter resembled napkins tied before them, for "half round," as the original imports, see John vi. 5; a term used by the ancients, when doing any thing that bound and them—as, nothing, tent-making. Even these were made the instruments of curing diseases and expelling demons.

Ver. 13. Exorcists.—The original term literally means those who cast out demons, by adjuring them in God's name. That some of the Jews made this profession, even in our Lord's time, is certain from Mat. x. 25—28. Mark ix. 38. Luke ix. 49. &c. The Jewish exorcists probably used the name of the God of Abraham, but finding the name of Jesus, as they supposed, a more potent charm, were willing, as Dr. Hammond remarks, (on Mat. vii. 27,) to exchange it for that of Jesus.

Ver. 19. Curious arts.—The principal of these were, 1. Astrology, or the prediction of events by the configuration of the planets. 2. Necromancy, or conjuring (whether really or in pretence) with the souls of dead men, or with infernal spirits. The witch of Endor was a pretender to this art. 3. Sancti, 3. Magia, the power of producing wonderful effects by secret arts, or spiritual agency; but it is often used in a sense so extensive as to include both the preceding. 4. A science peculiar to this people, was that of the Ephesian Lots, or mystic characters, of which some account may be found both in Hammond and Doddridge, but which as we do not pretend to understand we shall not attempt to explain. They were, however, used as magical spells, or charms, by these people.—"Fifty thousand pieces of silver." Probably about £-900. The Earl of Rochester, of whom it has been said, that he was "a great wit, a great scholar, a great poet, a great sinner, and a great penitent," left a strict charge to the person in whose custody his papers were, to burn all his profane and lewd writings, as being only fit to contaminate view and immorality, by which he had so much offended God, and shamed and blasphemed that holy religion into which he had been baptized.

through Macedonia and Achaia, to go to Jerusalem, saying, After I have been there, I must also see ^a Rome.

22 So he sent into Macedonia two of them that ministered unto him, Timotheus and ^b Erastus; but he himself stayed in Asia for a season.

23 And the same time there arose no small stir ^c about that way.

24 For a certain man named Demetrius, a silversmith, which made silver shrines for Diana, brought no small ^d gain unto the craftsmen;

25 Whom he called ^e together with the workmen of like occupation, and said, Sirs, ye know that by this craft we have our wealth.

26 Moreover ye see and hear, that not alone at Ephesus, but almost throughout all Asia, this Paul hath persuaded and turned away much people, saying ^f that they be no gods, which are made with hands:

27 So that not only this our craft is in danger to be set at nought; but also that the temple of the great goddess Diana should be ^g despised, and her magnificence should be destroyed, whom all Asia and the world ^h worshippeth.

28 And when they heard these sayings, they were full of ⁱ wrath, and cried out, saying, Great is Diana of the Ephesians.

A. M. clir.
A. D. cir.
59

a Ro 15:23,

28.

b Ro 16:23,

2 Ti 4:20.

c 2 Co 1:8,

6:9.

d c 16:16,19

e Re 18:11.

f Ps 115:4,

Is 44:10,

20.

g Zep 2:11.

h 1 Jn 5:19,

Re 13:5.

i Je 50:28.

j Ro 16:23,

1 Co 1:14

k Col 4:10

l c 21:12.

m c 21:31.

n 1 Ti 1:20,

2 Ti 1:14

o Ep 2:12.

p the temple-keeper

29 And the whole city was filled with confusion: and having caught ¹ Gaius and ² Aristarchus, men of Macedonia, Paul's companions in travel, they rushed with one accord into the theatre.

30 And when Paul would have entered in unto the people, the disciples suffered him not.

31 And certain of the chief of Asia, which were his friends, sent unto him, desiring ¹ him that he would not adventure himself into the theatre.

32 Some ² therefore cried one thing, and some another: for the assembly was confused; and the more part knew not wherefore they were come together.

33 And they drew Alexander out of the multitude, the Jews putting him forward. And Alexander ³ beckoned with the hand, and would have made his defence unto the people.

34 But when they knew that he was a Jew, all with one voice about the space of two hours cried out, Great is Diana of the Ephesians.

35 And when the town clerk had appeased the people, he said, Ye men ⁴ of Ephesus, what man is there that knoweth not how that the city of the Ephesians is ⁵ a worshipper of the great goddess Diana, and of the image which fell down from Jupiter?

36 Seeing then that these things cannot be bled for his kingdom: the emptiness of all the systems of philosophy appeared no less palpable than the flagitiousness of vice, and the enormities of idolatry. The spiritual power of Jesus was never seen in a stronger light since the day of Pentecost; and the venal priesthood of Diana, the celebrated goddess of Ephesus, apprehended the total ruin of her hierarchy."

We are farther informed, that it pleased God to honour Paul with powers singularly miraculous, such as the cure of diseases and the ejection of demons, by means of handkerchiefs and aprons which he wore, of which we recollect nothing parallel in the New Testament. But every instrument is equally effective when endued with a divine virtue—the power is alone of God.

Satan is ever imitating where he cannot rival; he now stirred up certain ragabond (or travelling) Jews, the seven sons of a chief priest, exorcists by profession, who took upon them to call over them that had evil spirits, saying, "We adjure you by Jesus, whom Paul preacheth." This was a dangerous experiment. Jesus they knew, and Paul they knew, but these men they knew not; they were glad therefore to escape naked and wounded from the hands of one of these demoniaics. Dr. Boothroyd says, "I should think that this man was insane." We should think so too, and believe that maniacs often are possessed; yet we would by no means assert that all are possessed who are insane, or all insane who are possessed.

This miracle had a salutary effect in calling the public attention to the divine superiority of the Christian religion; and the present contest reminds us of that between Moses and the magicians of Egypt. The latter, indeed, did wonders in the sight of Pharaoh, by turning their rods (apparently) into serpents; but that of Moses evinced a superior power, by devouring them. (See on Exod. vii. and viii. exposition and notes.) Ephesus seems to have been at this time as much famed for curious arts as Egypt, at least if we may judge by the quantity of books here brought together to be burned, which, valued at the lowest calculation, were worth $8,436. (Doddridge.) It is well known in what estimation curious books of this kind were formerly held, both astrological and magical; yet such a fear now fell upon the professors of these arts, that they voluntarily ly brought them and cast them into the fire; and those who had believed in Jesus, by this act confessed their guilt, and renounced such practices for ever. Much do we regret that any who profess the name of Christian (and we have known some such) should waste their precious time on studies so unholy and unprofitable.

We neither pretend nor aspire to any skill in these mysteries of iniquity. The far greater part of them are unquestionably artifice and trick; and yet, since "the prince of the power of the air" holds a mighty dominion in this world, we are far from considering him inactive, or attributing all to human skill or effort. Indeed we cannot, without a violence to the sacred narrative, which subverts the authority of the Scriptures, and sets aside their inspiration. Mrs. More remarks, that at the time of the French Revolution, many persons sold their copies of the infidel writings of Voltaire and others very cheap; but they had not the honesty to burn them; this, therefore, only increased their circulation, instead of checking it.

Ver. 23–41. Demetrius raises an uproar against Paul, which is suppressed by the town-clerk.—We have here an instance how much idolatry was supported by private interest among the pagans. Besides a large establishment of priests and priestesses, many others were maintained by the erection of temples and the manufacture of idols, not only for the temples and public processions, but also portable representations of the temple and the indwelling deity, both on medals and enclosed in boxes, (like those of the French musical boxes,) to be carried in the pocket or girdle, for the purpose of private idolatry, or perhaps of fashion. Demetrius, and a numerous body of fellow-craftsmen, it appears, lived by the various branches of this trade, and he makes no secret of it among them, that he was actuated more by his interest than devotion: "Ye know that by this craft we have our wealth." It was necessary, however, to carry this point with the populace, that he should put on the mask of religious zeal, and praise "the great goddess Diana," her image, and her temple, which, indeed, for its beauty and magnificence, was considered as one of the wonders of the world.

The image of Diana was a female figure, crowned with a

Ver. 22. Erastus—Chamberlain of Corinth.—See Rom xvi 23

Ver. 23. No small stir about that way.—Namely, the Christian worship, in opposition to idolatry.

Ver. 24. Which made silver shrines.—These shrines are understood to mean small models of the temple, with the goddess within; and Pliny mentions such of the Venus of Cnidus. The late Mr. Taylor, in his Fragments, No. cxxvii, has given various figures of this goddess, most of them ending in what artists call a term; as also the copy of a medal exhibiting the famous temple of Diana, with the idol in the centre.—Craftsmen—i. e. artisans, including casters, chasers, engravers, &c.

Ver. 26. Saying that they be no gods, which are made with hands—Implying, as Doddridge remarks, that Demetrius would have them believe they were.

Ver. 28. Diana.—[The Ephesian Diana is represented in some statues all covered with breasts, from the shoulders down to the feet; and in others from the breast to the bottom of the abdomen; from which we find that she was widely different from Diana the huntress, and that she represented Nature, as is stated on two inscriptions in Montfaucon.]—Boothroyd.

Ver. 29. Into the theatre.—Theatres, it is known, were sometimes used for public meetings; but from the great tumult raised on this occasion, and other circumstances, it has been supposed that the Ephesians were at this time celebrating games to the honour of Diana.—Macedonia.—[An extensive province of Greece, was bounded on the north by the mountains of Haemus, on the south by Epirus and Achaia, on the east by the Egean sea and Thrace, and on the west by the Adriatic sea; celebrated in all histories as being the third kingdom which, under Alexander the Great, obtained the empire of the world, and had under it 150 nations.]—Bosquet.

Ver. 31. Certain of the chief of Asia.—The Asiarchs, here mentioned, were the priests who presided in the Greek games, whence a principal reason of the conjecture in the last note; some of these, it appears, were so far friendly to Paul, (as a man of talents, perhaps,) that they wished to save his life.

Ver. 33. Alexander.—Who this is was uncertain; some have supposed it to have been "Alexander the cooper-smith," but it is plain, from the opposition made to him, that he was a friend of Paul.

Ver. 35. The town clerk.—Doddridge, "The Chancellor." Taylor, "The Recorder," which is more literal. This appears to have been an officer of high rank and great influence.—Is a worshipper.—Doddridge, "Is devoted to." He means to represent the city of Ephesus as the guardian (Neokoros) of her temple, her image, and her rites. Mr. Taylor seems to think it impossible that the Ephesians could believe that a carved statue came down from heaven; but if the people of Rome can believe that the house of "our Lady of Loretto" was removed thither from Nazareth in a night, what is there more incredible in believing that a statue should be lowered from the sky? This original statue of Diana, according to different accounts, was of ivory, of gold, or the vine.—Orient. Lit. No. 1431. 1435.

spoken against, ye ought to be quiet, and to do * nothing rashly.

37 For ye have brought hither these men, which are neither * robbers of churches, nor yet blasphemers of your goddess.

38 Wherefore if Demetrius, and the craftsmen which are with him, have a matter against any man, * the law is open, and there are deputies: let them implead one another.

39 But if ye inquire any thing concerning other matters, it shall be determined in a * lawful assembly.

40 For we are in danger to be called in question for this day's uproar, there being no cause whereby we may give an account of this course.

41 And when he had thus spoken, he dismissed the * assembly.

CHAPTER XX.

1 Paul goeth to Macedonia. 7 He celebrateth the Lord's supper, and preacheth. 9 Eutychus having fallen down dead, it is raised to life. 17 At Miletum he calleth the elders together, telleth them what shall befall to himself, 28 commendeth to all his flock to them, 32 warneth them of false teachers, 32 commendeth them to God, 36 praveith with them, and goeth his way.

AND after the uproar * was ceased, Paul called unto him the disciples, and embraced them, and departed for to go b into Macedonia. 2 And when he had gone over those parts, kind of turret, (sometimes triple,) her neck ornamented with signs of the zodiac and other emblematical figures, her body covered with from two to four rows of small breasts with nipples, and all her drapery adorned with carved figures of lions, oxen, deer, or other animals, down to her feet. There can be no doubt but this image was intended to represent the humanity of Nature to man and all the animal creation, for, on some of the statues have been found this inscription, "All-diversified Nature, the universal mother." Such seems to have been the light in which philosophers viewed the idol; but the vulgar look no farther than external forms: give them a beautiful and splendid figure to adore, and they make little inquiry after the properties of the being it may be intended to represent.

While, however, we pity the folly and stupidity of these ignorant heathen, we can but admire the temper and moderation of some of the magistrates, particularly the town clerk or recorder of Ephesus, who discovers great address in the manner in which he governs and controls these "beasts of Ephesus;" and the argument he uses in favour of Paul and his companions does them honour as well as himself. 1. They were not (as he observes) guilty of sacrilege; they had done no violence to their temples, an excess into which zealous reformers too often fall, and of which some of our countrymen, at the time of the reformation, cannot be wholly cleared; nor, 2. Did they abuse (or blaspheme) either the goddess or her priests. They taught, indeed, "that they be no gods which are made with hands;" and thus they endeavoured to enlighten their minds; but they cautiously avoided exasperation, either in their language or their actions. We are happy to see that the same course is pursued by our modern missionaries; and we doubt not but, eventually, their labours will be crowned with a like success, of which, indeed, we have had a happy specimen, both among the civilized Pagans of the East, and the rude, uncultivated savages of the South.

As to Paul's conduct on this occasion, he was not deficient either in zeal or courage, for it appears he would have plunged into the theatre amidst all the mob, had it not been for the prudence of his friends, who used their utmost exertions to prevent him.

CHAP. XX. Ver. 1—16. Paul goeth to Macedonia, and preaches at Troas.—This great commotion of the worshippers of the Ephesian goddess, Diana, having subsided, Paul called a meeting of the brethren, and took an affectionate leave of them. He then, passing through Troas, from thence crossed the sea to Macedonia, where he visited the Philippians, Thessalonians, and Bereans, to whom he had before sent Timothy and Erastus, the former of whom had since returned, and remained in Ephesus. From Macedonia Paul came to Greece, (or Achaia,) where he abode three months, and chiefly (it should seem) at Corinth. From thence he was about to sail

Ver. 37. Robbers of churches—The word "churches" is here very improperly introduced; the original (hierousion) means sacrilegious persons—"robbers of temples," as Doddridge renders it.

Ver. 38. The law is open—"Court days are kept." Doddridge, "Courts are held"—And there are deputies—i. e. the Roman proconsuls, or procurators.

Ver. 39. Lawful assembly—i. e. lawfully called together. CHAP. XX. Ver. 2. Greece—[That is Greece properly so called, bounded on the west by Epirus, on the east by the Egean sea, on the north by Macedonia, and on the south by the Peloponnesus. In its largest acceptation, it also comprehended all Macedonia, Thessaly, Epirus, Peloponnesus, and the Circæan islands.] Bagster.

Ver. 3. Troas—[For us—Another indirect hint that Luke the Evangelist was now travelling with Paul.—Troas—Was a maritime city and country of Phrygia, in Asia Minor, anciently called Dardania, lying on the Hellespont, west of Mysia.]—Bagster.

A M. ex.
4063
A D. cir.
59

q Pr 14 29
r c 25 8

a or, the c hurt things are kept.

t or, only nary
u 2 Co 1 8.

a c 19 40
b 1 Co 16 5
1 Th 1 5

c 1 Th 2 3, 11

A M. cir.
1061
A D. cir.
106

d c 20 12
25 3.
2 Co 11 25

e c 19 29
f c 16 1.
1 Co 16 17

g 1 Th 1 7
2 Th 1 12
Tit 3 12

h c 21 29
f 1 49
i Ex 24 15
2 Th 1 13

k 1 Co 16 2
Ez 1 16
1 c 24 36
1 Co 16 16

l 11 20 31
m c 1 13

and had given them much * exhortation, he came into Greece,

3 And there abode three months. And when the Jews laid wait d for him, as he was about to sail into Syria, he purposed to return through Macedonia.

1 And there accompanied him into Asia Sopater of Berea; and of the Thessalonians, * Aristarchus and Secundus; and Gaius of Derbe, and * Timothy; and of Asia, * Tychicus and * Trophimus.

5 These going before tarried for us at Troas.

6 And we sailed away from Philippi after the days * of unleavened bread, and came unto them to Troas in five days; where we abode seven days.

7 ¶ And upon the first * day of the week, when the disciples came together to break * bread, Paul preached unto them, ready to depart on the morrow; and continued his speech until midnight.

8 And there were many lights in the upper * chamber, where they were gathered together.

9 And there sat in the window a certain young man named Eutychus, being fallen into a deep sleep: and as Paul was long preaching, he into Syria, with some relief for his poor brethren in Judea. Finding, however, that his design was known, and that he was waylaid by some of his old enemies, the Jews, he resolved to return through Macedonia to avoid them, and several of his brethren and conductors going on before, waited for him at Troas, in Phrygia, where Paul staid seven days, as it should seem, to worship with them on the following Sabbath.

We have before remarked, in treating of the fourth command, that the devotion of a seventh part of our time to public worship was enjoined from the beginning, and might justly be considered as a part of the moral law. The particular day, however, seems to have been a point of minor importance, and as the injunction of the Jewish sabbath is sometimes made in reference to the deliverance from Egypt, as well as to the rest at the creation, (compare Deut. v. 15, with Gen. ii. 2,) it seems so far to have been a part of the ceremonial law, and of course to have subsided with it. (See Rom. xiv. 5. Col. ii. 16.) It would, however, be very contrary to the spirit and tenor of the New Testament, to suppose that Christians should have no stated times for divine worship; and we do in fact find that, from the time of our Lord's resurrection, there is no recognition of a seventh day sabbath in the Christian church, especially among the gentiles, though there are many proofs of this first day of the week being occupied in religious worship.

In this our Lord himself set the example by repeatedly appearing on that day to his disciples. (John xx. 1, 19, 26.) On that day, it is believed, fell the day of Pentecost; and, in the chapter now before us, we find the Christians, at Troas, were accustomed to meet on the same day for religious worship, and for "breaking bread," or the administration of the Lord's Supper. On this day the churches were required to make collections for their poor and afflicted brethren. (1 Cor. xvi. 2.) This day also appears to be marked by the Apostle John as the Lord's day, (Rev. i. 10,) which we naturally understand to mean, the day on which he arose from the dead. The first day of the week was, therefore, peculiarly honoured in apostolic times, and we know that it has been observed as the Christian Sabbath ever since.

A question has been raised, however, on the expression, (ver. 7.) "When the disciples came together to break bread," which, it is agreed, might apply to those charitable meals which the first Christians held with each other, and which were certainly not held without prayer for a divine blessing; yet, as it is here stated that the special object of their meeting on the "first day" was to "break bread;" and since the Lord's Supper is clearly designated by St. Paul as breaking bread, (1 Cor. x. 16;) and as we know that the sacrament just named was usually celebrated on that day, it seems most natural so to apply it in the passage now before us. (See note on ver. 7.) We are no friends, generally speaking, to long sermons; but

Ver. 6. Philippi—[So called after Philip, king of Macedonia, who fortified it against the incursions of the Thracians, was one of the chief cities of Macedonia situated at the east of the river Stramon, on a rising ground which abounded with springs, and on the borders of Thracia.]—Bagster.

Ver. 7. Came together to break bread—In Acts ii. 42, 46 we have followed Doddridge, in referring this phrase to the friendly meals of the disciples. But, upon farther consideration, we are inclined to make a distinction between "the breaking of bread, and prayers," in verse 42, which, as closely connected with public worship, we should refer to the Eucharist; and the "breaking of bread from house to house," as connected with "eating their meat with gladness;" this we would apply to their friendly and domestic meals.

Ver. 9. In a window—Doddridge, "an open window," with a wooden casement, which he supposes was not open to admit the air, on account of the many lamps burning, (ver. 8.) As we know not the construction of the building, we cannot exactly tell how he fell. Perhaps it was a large house, with three lofts or stores, fitted up in a temporary manner for the occasion.

sunk down with sleep, and fell down from the third loft, and was taken up dead.

10 And Paul went down, and fell ^a on him, and embracing him said, ^a Trouble not yourselves; for his life is in him.

11 When he therefore was come up again, and had broken bread, and eaten, and talked a long while, even till break of day, so he departed.

12 And they brought the young man alive, and were not a little comforted.

13 ¶ And we went before to ship, and sailed unto Assos, there intending to take in Paul: for so had he appointed, minding himself to go afoot.

14 And when he met with us at Assos, we took him in, and came to Mitylene.

15 And we sailed thence, and came the next day over against Chios; and the next day we arrived at Samos, and tarried at Trogyllium; and the next day we came to Miletus.

16 For Paul had determined to sail by Ephesus, because he would not spend the time in Asia: for he hasted, if it were possible for him, to be ^a at Jerusalem the day of ^a Pentecost.

17 ¶ And from Miletus he sent to Ephesus, and called the elders of the church.

18 And when they were come to him, he said unto them, Ye know, from the first day ^a that I came into Asia, after what manner I have been with you at all seasons,

19 Serving the Lord with all ^a humility of mind, and with many ^a tears, and ^a temptations, which befell me by ^a the lying in wait of the Jews:

20 And how ^a I kept back nothing that was profitable unto you, but have showed you, and have taught you publicly, ^a and from house to house,

21 Testifying both to the Jews, and also to the Greeks, repentance ^a toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ.

A. M. cir.
4061.
A. D. cir.
60.

1 Ki. 17. 21
2 Ki. 4. 34
o Mat. 9. 24.
p c 14. 7.
21. 17.
q c 2. 1.
1 Co. 16. 8.
r c 19. 1. 10.
1 Co. 15. 9.
10.
1 Th. 3. 18.
u c 13. 11.
v ver. 3.
w ver. 27.
x 2 Th. 4. 2.
y Mat. 15.
Lxx. 24. 47.

z c 19. 21.
1 J. 14. 14.
b c 9. 16.
21. 11.
c or, wait
for me.
d c 21. 13.
Ro. 8. 35.
37.
e c 14. 16.
2 Ti. 4. 7.
f 2 Co. 4. 1.
g c 14. 11.
h 2 Co. 7. 2.
i c 14. 11.
j Col. 4. 17.
k He. 13. 17.
l J. 14. 15.
Jc. 15.
Jn. 21. 15.
17.

m Ep. 1. 14.
Col. 1. 14.
He. 9. 12.
1 J. 14. 15.
1 Pe. 1. 18.
19.
Re. 5. 9.
n Mat. 7. 15.
2 Pe. 2. 1.
o Jc. 13. 20.

23.
p c 31. 2. 3.
Zec. 11. 17.
p 1 Jn. 2. 19.
Jude. 4. 6.
q c 14. 15.
r Col. 1. 29.
s Jn. 17. 17.
t c 25. 18.
u c 14. 12.
He. 9. 15.
1 Fe. 4. 1.
u 1 S. 12. 3.
1 Co. 9. 12.
2 Co. 7. 2.
v c 18. 3.
1 Co. 14. 12.
1 J. 13.
2 Th. 3. 8.

22 And now, behold, I go ^a bound in the spirit unto Jerusalem, not ^a knowing the things that shall befall me there:

23 Save that the Holy Ghost witnesseth in every city, saying, ^b that bonds and afflictions ^c abide me.

24 But none ^d of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that I might ^e finish my course with joy, and the ministry, ^f which I have received ^g of the Lord Jesus, to testify the gospel of the grace of God.

25 And now, behold, I know that ye all, among whom I have gone preaching the kingdom of God, shall see my face no more.

26 Wherefore I take you to record this day that I ^{am} ^b pure from the blood of all men.

27 For I have not shunned to declare unto you all the counsel ⁱ of God.

28 Take heed ^j therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you ^k overseers, to feed ^l the church of God, which he hath purchased ^m with his own blood.

29 For I know this, that after my departing shall grievous wolves ⁿ enter in among you, not sparing ^o the flock.

30 Also of ^p your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them.

31 Therefore ^q watch, and remember, that by the space of three years I ceased not to warn ^r every one night and day with tears.

32 And now, brethren, I commend you to God, and to the word of his grace, which ^s is able to build you up, and to give you an inheritance ^t among all them which are sanctified.

33 I ^u have coveted no man's silver, or gold, or apparel.

34 Yea, ye yourselves ^v know, that these hands have ministered ^w unto my necessities, and to them that were with me.

from such a preacher, and on such an occasion, no service could appear long or tedious. At the same time, it can be only on extraordinary occasions, wherein the Christian affections are deeply interested, that such sermons should be tolerated; for, generally speaking, they weary more than they edify the hearers.

The melancholy incident here related of Eutychus, must not only have interrupted, but damped the pleasure of the present meeting; yet this must have been more than compensated by the pleasure received from his restoration, especially to his friends. We are far from apologizing for sleepers in public worship, nor does this instance afford either encouragement or apology for such conduct; for where would Eutychus have been if Paul had not been there? and who would willingly die sleeping under a sermon? As, however, we know nothing of this young man, charity would lead us to hope that there might be palative circumstances in his case.

Ver. 17—38. Paul's farewell address to the elders of the church at Ephesus.—Though Paul dare not trust himself to stop at Ephesus, lest he should be detained by the kindness of his friends, his own feelings would not suffer him to pass them unnoticed: when, therefore, he anchored off Miletus, he sent a special messenger to desire the elders (or presbyters) of Ephesus to meet him there. They did so; and he addressed to them the most tender and affectionate charge that ever was delivered on such an occasion—and inferior only (if it may be called inferior) to that which his Divine Master delivered to his apostles just before his death. The charge now before us (limited as our room is) we must not pass without some observations.

1. We have his solemn appeal to them as to his affection, fidelity, and disinterestedness, when he laboured among them, as mentioned in ch. xix. "Ye know, from the first day that I came into Asia, after what manner I have been with you in all seasons." 2. He gives a brief summary of the doctrines which he had delivered among them, "Repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ;" which comprise "all the counsel of God" for man's salvation. Convi-

Ver. 13. Assos.—[Assos, Trogyllium, and Miletus, (now called Melas and Palatsha) were maritime cities of Asia Minor; the former in the province of Trous the second in Lydia, a little below Ephesus, and about five miles from Samos, and the latter in Caria, about ten stadia south of the mouth of the river Meander. Mitylene was a city on the east side of the island of Lesbos, now Mytilini, reckoned about seven miles from the main land; next to which is the island of Chios, now Scio, opposite Smyrna, and about four leagues from the continent; and south-east of which is the island of Samos, now Samos, about five miles from the coast of Asia.]—Bagster.—To go afoot—Or "by land."

Ver. 15. To sail by Ephesus—i. e. to sail past it, that he might not be detained there.

Ver. 19. Temptations.—Doddrige, "trials"

Ver. 22. Bound in the spirit.—Our translators, by referring in the margin to chap. xii, understood this in the sense of being firmly resolved: but Doddrige, and the commentators generally, explain this, of his being under "a strong impulse" of the Spirit of God.

Ver. 26. Pure from the blood of all men.—See note on chap. xviii. 6.

Ver. 27. For I have not shunned.—Doddrige says, "the proper import of the word in such a connexion, (as used by Demosthenes and Lucian) is to disprove any important truth; at least to decline the publication of it." All the counsel of God.—There is no doubt but the original term (tauta) means both decree and advice. The former in Luke xxiii. 51. Acts ii. 23, and elsewhere. But this cannot be the sense here, for who shall declare all the divine decrees? The latter must be understood, Luke vii. 20. In Acts xxvii. 42. 43. we read, "The soldiers' counsel (i. e. advice) was to kill the prisoners; but the centurion, willing (i. e. determined) to save Paul, kept them from their purpose" for with it to them. Here we have both senses of the word.

Ver. 28. Overseers—Gr. Episkopos, or Bishops. The German Lutherans call their Bishops "superintendents."—To feed the church of God.—Græch gives no less than six readings. That of our common version is found in about seventeen Greek MSS., of which one, the Vatican, (in the Pope's library,) is reckoned of the 5th or 6th century. This reading is also supported by the Syriac of the 6th, and two Fathers of the close of the 4th century. Another reading, "The church of the Lord," has the following authorities:—Of MSS., all the most ancient, the most valuable, and those derived from different and independent sources, viz. the Alexandrian, the Ethiopic, the Cambridge, Alp Lavd's, and many others of various dates, from the 4th to the 8th centuries. Of the Versions, the two Coptic, the Armenian, the Old Italic; of Fathers, Irenæus, Eusebius, Athanasius, Chrysostom, and many others. The preponderance of evidence is thus in favour of Lord, (Kurios), which is therefore decidedly adopted by Græsch, and approved by Dr. P. Smith. Brothmud, however, adopts another reading, which embraces both, "Lord and God." On this he judiciously remarks, "I have preferred the last, (the one just named,) as supported by the greater number of MSS. collated, [viz. one ancient and 46 others,] and as accounting best for the other variations. For it is more easy to omit a word in transcribing than to insert one; and one transcriber might omit God and insert Lord, as judging the latter more accordant with what follows. The reading he admits to be singular, but finds the sentiment in John xv. 25: and the phrase "church of the Lord," occurs not in the New Testament.

Ver. 29. Grievous wolves.—Our Lord describes false prophets as "wolves in sheep's clothing;" so false teachers in the Christian church are described as not only erroneous, but rapacious—"not sparing the flock."

Ver. 31. Three years.—See chap. xix. 8, 10. After preaching three months in the synagogue, he taught two years in the school of Tyrannus: but the 35 I have showed you all things, how that so labouring ye ought to ^a support the weak, and to remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how he said, it ^a is more blessed to give than to receive.

36 ¶ And when he had thus spoken, he kneeled ^b down, and prayed with them all.

37 And they all wept sore, and ^c fell on Paul's neck, and kissed him.

38 Sorrowing most of all for the ^a words which he spake, that they should see his face no more. And they accompanied him unto the ship.

CHAPTER XXI.

¹ Paul will not by any means be dissuaded from going to Jerusalem. 9 Philip's daughters prophesies. 17 Paul cometh to Jerusalem: 27 where he is apprehended, and in great danger, 31 but by the chief captain is rescued, and permitted to speak to the people.

AND it came to pass, that after we were gotten from them, and had launched, we came with a straight course unto Coos, and the day following unto Rhodes, and from thence unto Patara:

2 And finding a ship sailing over unto Phenicia, we went aboard, and set forth.

3 Now when we had discovered Cyprus, we left it on the left hand, and sailed into Syria, and landed at Tyre: for there the ship was to unlade her burden.

4 And finding disciples, we tarried there seven days: who said ^a to Paul through the Spirit, that he should not go up to Jerusalem.

5 And when we had accomplished those days, tion of sin, though not the foundation of faith in Christ, is necessary previous to laying that foundation. Those who know not their need of such a Redeemer, cannot value him as such; but when they know and feel this, faith in Christ provides them with righteousness, both for justification and a holy life. We add, 3. That Paul taught "both publicly and from house to house." The labours of the pulpit are far from being the whole of ministerial duty: in domestic preaching "from house to house," it is much more difficult to be faithful, and still more arduous is the task to exhibit in the life all the precepts taught. Of Paul, indeed, it might well be said,—

"His preaching much, but more his practice wrought,
(A living sermon on the truths he taught.)
For this by rules severe his life he squared.
That all might see the doctrines which they heard!"—Dryden.

4. We remark, that Paul's labours, both public and private, severe as they might be, formed but a part only of his duty. He had not only to labour, but also to suffer. "The Holy Ghost witnesseth, (said he,) in every city, that bonds and afflictions abide (or wait for) me;" watching, as it were, for my arrival—as his history abundantly evinces. 5. That no labours, no dangers, no sufferings, daunted or discouraged him in his work! God, his Saviour, had purchased the church "with his own blood;" and he "counted not his life," his blo d, dear to himself, so that he might be instrumental in edifying that church;—so that he might "finish his course with joy," and receive from his Master that divine plaudit, "Well done, good and faithful servant!" 6. He closes all with earnest prayer, commending them to God and to the word of his grace: exhorting them to "support the weak" and relieve the necessitous; and reminding them particularly of an unrecorded saying of our Lord Jesus, that "it is more blessed to give than to receive." The concluding verses are imitatively beautiful and pathetic. They require no comment, and they admit no paraphrase. "And when he had thus spoken, he kneeled down, and prayed with them all. And they all wept sore, and fell on Paul's neck, and kissed him; sorrowing most of all for the words that he spake, that they should see his face no more. And they accompanied him unto the ship."

CHAP. XXI. Ver. 1—20. Paul resolutely pursues his journey to Jerusalem, notwithstanding the predicted consequences. It was with no small difficulty that St. Paul "got" from the brethren. The original implies that he was obliged to tear or wrest himself from them, to pursue his voyage. He next three years may probably include his preaching in the neighbouring towns and villages. So Doddridge.

Ver. 35. More blessed, &c.—This is a saying of Christ, traditionally preserved by the apostles, and happily here recorded.

CHAP. XXI. Ver. 1. Gotten from them.—Hammond, "plucked or snatched away." It is "torn away from them." It implies a reluctancy on both sides to part. —Coos—(Coos, Cos, or Co, now Zia, is an island in the Egean sea, one of those called Cyclades, near the south west point of Asia Minor, and about 15 miles from Halicarnassus. —Rhodes—is a celebrated island in the same sea, southward of Cyprus, from which it is distant about 20 miles, next to Cyprus and Lesbos in extent, being 120 miles in circumference. It was remarkable for the clearness of the air, and its pleasant and healthy climate, and chiefly for its Colossus of brass 70 cubits high, with each finger as large as an ordinary man, standing astride over the mouth of the harbour, so that ships in full sail passed between its legs. —Patara—Was a maritime town of Lycia in Asia Minor, situated on the eastern side of the river Xanthus, with a capacious harbour, and a temple and oracle of Apollo.—Bagster

A M cir
4061
A D ch 601

w Ro 15:1
Ep 4:28
1 Th 5:11

x Lu 14:12
11

y c 21:5

z Ge 48:29

a ver 25

a ver 12

b c 20:26

c c 26:40

d Ep 4:11
2 Ti 4:5

e c 6:5

f Jew 12:28
c 17

g c 11:28

h ver 33
c 20:23

i Mat 16:28

we departed and went our way; and they all brought us on our way, with wives and children, till we were out of the city: and we kneeled ^b down on the shore, and prayed.

6 And when we had taken our leave one of another, we took ship; and they returned home again.

7 And when we had finished our course from Tyre, we came to Ptolemais, and saluted the brethren, and abode with them one day.

8 And the next day we that were of Paul's company departed, and came unto Cesarea: and we entered into the house of Philip ^c the evangelist, ^d which was one of the ^e seven; and abode with him.

9 And the same man had four daughters, virgins, which ^f did prophesy.

10 ¶ And as we tarried there many days, there came down from Judea a certain prophet, named ^g Agabus.

11 And when he was come unto us, he took Paul's girdle, and bound his own hands and feet, and said, Thus saith the Holy Ghost, So ^h shall the Jews at Jerusalem bind the man that owneth this girdle, and shall deliver him into the hands of the Gentiles.

12 And when we heard these things, both we, and they of that place, ⁱ besought him not to go up to Jerusalem.

13 Then Paul answered, What mean ye to landed at Tyre, where the ship was to unlade her freight; there, finding disciples endowed with gifts of prophecy, they warned him by the Spirit, that he had better not go up to Jerusalem. So Beza explains the passage: "They, understanding by the revelation of the Spirit, what dangers awaited Paul, out of affection, and not by any special divine command, entreated him not to go up to Jerusalem, being ignorant of what the same Spirit had commanded Paul." The warning was afterwards repeated at Cesarea, by Agabus, who predicted by a sign, in the manner of the old prophets, that he should be there imprisoned. "And when we heard these things, (saith Luke,) both we, and they of that place, besought him not to go up to Jerusalem." At this it is evident that Paul's mind was stirred and agitated, and he broke out into this impassioned exclamation—"What mean ye to weep and break my heart? for I am ready, not to be bound only, but also to die at Jerusalem, for the name of the Lord Jesus." Thus "none of these things moved him;" and therefore, adds the inspired historian, when (we found) he would not be persuaded, we ceased, saying, "The will of the Lord be done."

It would afford but little edification to our readers to examine the progress of Paul's journey, (which is best done upon the map;) we shall only remark the general opinion, that Paul did not fulfil his whole voyage in one ship, but in two or three, (as was common in those coasting voyages,) as circumstances might require. The chief fact we here wish to remark is, the strong bond of affection that united Christians with their common Lord. Wherever they went, the first inquiry seems to have been, Are there here any that love our Lord Jesus? and that circumstance, independent of all others, was a bond "strong as death." Fellow Christians were brothers and sisters in the same family; they were children of the same heavenly Father, bought with the same blood, actuated by the same Spirit; so that they were indeed one, not in name and opinion only, but in heart. They also paid a particular attention to the heralds of salvation: when any one came preaching the Lord Jesus, they were attracted to him as by magnetism: they clung together as grapes upon the true vine; and we may believe they seldom parted without kneeling together in prayer, whether it were in the church, or in the house, or "on the sea shore," as at Tyre; and it was this invincible attachment which occasioned the heathen to say proverbially, "See how these Christians love!"

But we must not generalize.—When Paul came to Jerusalem

Ver. 2. And finding a ship, &c.—This was the second vessel, the first carried them only to Patara. —Set forth—i. e. set sail.

Ver. 4. And finding disciples, &c.—Doddridge, "We continued there seven days, finding disciples, who told Paul, by the Spirit, not to go." &c.

Ver. 6. We took ship—This was the third vessel; the second stayed at Tyre; the third carried them on to Ptolemais. Here they left this vessel, and travelled by land to Cesarea, and so on to Jerusalem.

Ver. 7. Ptolemais—An ancient city called Acco, (Jud. i. 31), but rebuilt by Ptoleme, who gave it his name, and now known as Acre.

Ver. 8. Philip the evangelist—See chap. vi. 5; viii. 26 &c.

Ver. 13. What mean ye?—Compare chap. xv. 24. When Luther was summoned to attend the diet at Worms, his friends, notwithstanding the safe conduct granted to him by the emperor, Charles V., apprehending danger to his person, would have dissuaded him from going thither. Luther replied, "I am determined to enter the city in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, though many devils should oppose me: as here are ties upon all the houses at Worms." He was accompanied from Watzenburg by some divines, and one hundred weep and to break my heart? for I am ready not to be bound only, but also to die at Jerusalem for the name of the Lord Jesus.

14 And when he would not be persuaded, we ceased, saying, The will of the Lord be done.

15 And after those days we took up our carriages, and went up to Jerusalem.

16 There went with us also certain of the disciples of Cesarea, and brought with them one Mnason of Cyprus, an old disciple, with whom we should lodge.

17 ¶ And when we were come to Jerusalem, the brethren received us gladly.

18 And the day following Paul went in with us unto James; and all the elders were present.

19 And when he had saluted them, he declared particularly what things God had wrought among the Gentiles by his ministry.

20 And when they heard it, they glorified the Lord, and said unto him, Thou seest, brother, how many thousands of Jews there are which believe; and they are all zealous of the law:

21 And they are informed of thee, that thou teachest all the Jews which are among the Gentiles to forsake Moses, saying that they ought not to circumcise their children, neither to walk after the customs.

22 What is it therefore? the multitude must needs come together: for they will hear that thou art come.

23 Do therefore this that we say to thee: We have four men which have a vow on them;

24 Them take, and purify thyself with them, and be at charges with them, that they may shave their heads: and all may know that

A. M. clir. 4954.
A. D. cir. 60.
j 2 Ti. 4. 6.
k Mat. 6. 10.
26. 42.
l Pr. 16. 31.
m ec. 13. 4.
n ec. 15. 13.
&c.
Ga. 1. 19.
o Ro. 15. 19.
p 2 Co. 20. 21.
2 Co. 12. 12.
q ec. 24. 3.
Ro. 10. 2.
r Ga. 5. 3.
s ec. 19. 32.
t Na. 6. 2.
13. 18.
c. 18. 13.
u ec. 17. 20, 29.
v 1 Co. 9. 20.
w ec. 24. 13.
x Nu. 6. 13.
y ec. 24. 18.
z ec. 36. 21.
a ec. 6. 13, 14.
24. 5, 6.
b ec. 20. 4.
c 1 Co. 11. 23, &c. d ec. 23. 27.
21. 7.

those things, whereof they were informed concerning thee, are nothing; but that thou thyself also walkest orderly, and keepest the law.

25 As touching the Gentiles which believe, we have written and concluded that they observe no such thing, save only that they keep themselves from things offered to idols, and from blood, and from strangled, and from fornication.

26 Then Paul took the men, and the next day purifying himself with them entered into the temple, to signify the accomplishment of the days of purification, until that an offering should be offered for every one of them.

27 ¶ And when the seven days were almost ended, the Jews which were of Asia, when they saw him in the temple, stirred up all the people, and laid hands on him,

28 Crying out, Men of Israel, help: This is the man, that teacheth all men every where against the people, and the law, and this place: and farther, brought Greeks also into the temple, and hath polluted this holy place.

29 (For they had seen before with him in the city Trophimus an Ephesian, whom they supposed that Paul had brought into the temple.)

30 And all the city was moved, and the people ran together: and they took Paul, and drew him out of the temple: and forthwith the doors were shut.

31 And as they went about to kill him, tidings came unto the chief captain of the band, that all Jerusalem was in an uproar.

32 Who immediately took soldiers and centurions, and ran down unto them: and when he was introduced to the apostle James, and the elders of that church: and when he related what (wonderful) things God had wrought among the Gentiles by his ministry, they glorified the Lord, and, in return, directed him to observe what, also, the Lord had done among his countrymen, the Jews: "Thou seest, brother, how many thousands of Jews there are which believe!"

Ver. 21—40. Paul, conforming to the customs of the Mosaic law, is set upon by the Jews, but rescued by the chief captain.—Our last section introduced Paul to his brethren at Jerusalem. At the same time, as they joyfully state the number of converted Jews now in Jerusalem, they use this as an argument with him to conform to the Jewish rites, for they were "all zealous of the law." On this account they had been strongly prejudiced against Paul, because they had heard it reported that he had encouraged the Jewish converts, residing among the Gentiles, to neglect circumcision, and other rites of the Mosaic law. This his brethren did not believe; but in order to counteract a report so likely to impede his usefulness, they wish him to unite with four brethren that were then under the vow of the Nazarite, and defray (in part or in whole) the charge of their joint sacrifices, the price of which must have been considerable. (See Numbers vi. 14, 15.)

If it were Paul who took the vow at Cenebrea, (ch. xviii. 18.) and he was now come to Jerusalem to offer the appointed sacrifices, this proposal was very opportune; but to that no reference is here made. It was, however, according to Josephus, an ancient custom among the Jews, for others who had not taken the Nazarite's vow themselves, to contribute toward, or to defray wholly, the expenses of sacrifice for others, especially those who were not well able to afford the charge. This some thought a work of great merit; but it is not to be supposed our apostle, who was a great opponent of the doctrine of human merit, undertook it with such views, but merely to abate the prejudices of his Jewish brethren.

Paul's sentiments on the Jewish dispensation are fully explained in his Epistles. He considered the Jewish ritual as no longer obligatory; yet he did not wish to treat it with contempt, nor to offend his Jewish brethren, who did not yet see its abrogation. Infidel writers have abused his conduct in this respect, as trimming and time-serving; but as his object was not worldly interest, but to subserve the cause of Christ, we see not with what propriety it can be condemned. He became "all things to all men," that by any means, "he might save some." (1 Cor. ix. 22.)

This conciliatory measure, however, had an effect far different from what had been intended. It was not to be supposed that Paul would, or could, refrain from speaking to a Gentile convert in the city; but his being seen to do this was sufficient to raise an alarm, when his old enemies were on the watch. He had been seen with one "Trophimus, an Ephesian," whom they supposed he had brought into the temple; probably from seeing there a person somewhat like him. On this ground (whether real or pretended) an alarm was raised: Paul was seized and dragged out of the temple, and the door closed, to prevent other Gentiles from going in. The whole city was immediately in an uproar, and they fell to beating Paul, and would doubtless have killed him, if the Roman power had not interfered. But notice of the riot being given to the chief officer of the Roman band, which kept guard at the outer gates of the temple, to prevent any riot during the public festivals, he came immediately, with soldiers, to his rescue; and, supposing him some great criminal, (particularly the Egyptian, who had made a riot some time before,) he ordered him to be bound with two chains, and inquired into the charges against him; but obtaining no satisfaction from his accusers, he commanded him to be taken to the barracks. When he stepped out of the carriage, he said, in presence of a great number of persons, "God shall be true to me."

Ver. 15. Carriages.—[The word carriages here denotes any thing that is carried, baggage or baggage. The original, apokousmenoi, from apo, from, and keuo, I put into, baggage, signifies, having packed up one's baggage.]—Bagster.

Ver. 16. Brought with them one Mnason.—[Pronounced Nason.] [Or, "conducting us to one Mnason," with whom we might lodge," Mnason, a native of Cyprus, probably then lived at Jerusalem; though he might have been down at Cesarea, met the apostles, and invited them to lodge with him.]—Bagster.

Ver. 20. How many thousands.—Doddridge, "Myriads," (so the Greek,) but he thinks the word here rather be taken for a large, than a precise number; perhaps, he says, twenty or thirty thousand were present at Jerusalem to keep the feast: but we believe there were often many more.

Ver. 21. That they ought not to circumcise, &c.—St. Paul's conduct, with regard to Timothy, might have been a sufficient answer to this part of the charge. See ch. xvi. 3.

Ver. 24. Be at charges with them.—[That is, in furnishing sacrifices; which was a common and very popular act among the Jews. Thus Josephus ob-trine of human merit, undertook it with such views, but merely to abate the prejudices of his Jewish brethren.

Paul's sentiments on the Jewish dispensation are fully explained in his Epistles. He considered the Jewish ritual as no longer obligatory; yet he did not wish to treat it with contempt, nor to offend his Jewish brethren, who did not yet see its abrogation. Infidel writers have abused his conduct in this respect, as trimming and time-serving; but as his object was not worldly interest, but to subserve the cause of Christ, we see not with what propriety it can be condemned. He became "all things to all men," that by any means, "he might save some." (1 Cor. ix. 22.)

This conciliatory measure, however, had an effect far different from what had been intended. It was not to be supposed that Paul would, or could, refrain from speaking to a Gentile convert in the city; but his being seen to do this was sufficient to raise an alarm, when his old enemies were on the watch. He had been seen with one "Trophimus, an Ephesian," whom they supposed he had brought into the temple; probably from seeing there a person somewhat like him. On this ground (whether real or pretended) an alarm was raised: Paul was seized and dragged out of the temple, and the door closed, to prevent other Gentiles from going in. The whole city was immediately in an uproar, and they fell to beating Paul, and would doubtless have killed him, if the Roman power had not interfered. But notice of the riot being given to the chief officer of the Roman band, which kept guard at the outer gates of the temple, to prevent any riot during the public festivals, he came immediately, with soldiers, to his rescue; and, supposing him some great criminal, (particularly the Egyptian, who had made a riot some time before,) he ordered him to be bound with two chains, and inquired into the charges against him; but obtaining no satisfaction from his accusers, he commanded him to be taken to the barracks. When he stepped out of the carriage, he said, in presence of a great number of persons, "God shall be true to me."

Ver. 15. Carriages.—[The word carriages here denotes any thing that is carried, baggage or baggage. The original, apokousmenoi, from apo, from, and keuo, I put into, baggage, signifies, having packed up one's baggage.]—Bagster.

Ver. 16. Brought with them one Mnason.—[Pronounced Nason.] [Or, "conducting us to one Mnason," with whom we might lodge," Mnason, a native of Cyprus, probably then lived at Jerusalem; though he might have been down at Cesarea, met the apostles, and invited them to lodge with him.]—Bagster.

Ver. 20. How many thousands.—Doddridge, "Myriads," (so the Greek,) but he thinks the word here rather be taken for a large, than a precise number; perhaps, he says, twenty or thirty thousand were present at Jerusalem to keep the feast: but we believe there were often many more.

Ver. 21. That they ought not to circumcise, &c.—St. Paul's conduct, with regard to Timothy, might have been a sufficient answer to this part of the charge. See ch. xvi. 3.

Ver. 24. Be at charges with them.—[That is, in furnishing sacrifices; which was a common and very popular act among the Jews. Thus Josephus ob-trine of human merit, undertook it with such views, but merely to abate the prejudices of his Jewish brethren.

Paul's sentiments on the Jewish dispensation are fully explained in his Epistles. He considered the Jewish ritual as no longer obligatory; yet he did not wish to treat it with contempt, nor to offend his Jewish brethren, who did not yet see its abrogation. Infidel writers have abused his conduct in this respect, as trimming and time-serving; but as his object was not worldly interest, but to subserve the cause of Christ, we see not with what propriety it can be condemned. He became "all things to all men," that by any means, "he might save some." (1 Cor. ix. 22.)

This conciliatory measure, however, had an effect far different from what had been intended. It was not to be supposed that Paul would, or could, refrain from speaking to a Gentile convert in the city; but his being seen to do this was sufficient to raise an alarm, when his old enemies were on the watch. He had been seen with one "Trophimus, an Ephesian," whom they supposed he had brought into the temple; probably from seeing there a person somewhat like him. On this ground (whether real or pretended) an alarm was raised: Paul was seized and dragged out of the temple, and the door closed, to prevent other Gentiles from going in. The whole city was immediately in an uproar, and they fell to beating Paul, and would doubtless have killed him, if the Roman power had not interfered. But notice of the riot being given to the chief officer of the Roman band, which kept guard at the outer gates of the temple, to prevent any riot during the public festivals, he came immediately, with soldiers, to his rescue; and, supposing him some great criminal, (particularly the Egyptian, who had made a riot some time before,) he ordered him to be bound with two chains, and inquired into the charges against him; but obtaining no satisfaction from his accusers, he command-they saw the chief captain and the soldiers, they left beating of Paul.

33 Then the chief captain came near, and took him, and commanded him to be bound with two chains; and demanded who he was, and what he had done.

34 And some cried one thing, some another, among the multitude; and when he could not know the certainty for the tumult, he commanded him to be carried into the castle.

35 And when he came upon the stairs, so it was, that he was borne of the soldiers for the violence of the people.

36 For the multitude of the people followed after, crying, Away with him.

37 ¶ And as Paul was to be led into the castle, he said unto the chief captain, May I speak unto thee? Who said, Canst thou speak Greek?

38 Art not thou that Egyptian, which before these days madest an uproar, and leddest out into the wilderness four thousand men that were murderers?

39 But Paul said, I am a man which am a Jew of Tarsus, a city in Cilicia, a citizen of no mean city: and I beseech thee, suffer me to speak unto the people.

40 And when he had given him license, Paul stood on the stairs, and beckoned with the hand unto the people. And when there was made a great silence, he spake unto them in the Hebrew tongue, saying,

CHAPTER XXII.

1 Paul declared at large, how he was converted to the faith, and called to his apostleship. 22 At the very mentioning of the Gentiles, the people exclaim on him. 24 The Jews had been scourged, 25 but claiming the privilege of a Roman, he escaped.

MEN, brethren, and fathers, hear ye my defence which I make now unto you.

2 (And when they heard that he spake in the Hebrew tongue to them, they kept the more silence: and he saith,)

3 I am verily a man which am a Jew, born in Tarsus, a city in Cilicia, yet brought up in this city at the feet of Gamaliel, and taught according to the perfect manner of the law

A M. 408
A D. 60

e ver 11
e 20, 21
e 22, 10, 16

g 15, 55, 9
h 1, 3, 13

i 1, 22, 18
j 19, 15
k 22, 22
l 15, 1, 13

m 1, 22
n 22, 22
o 22, 22

p 22, 22
q 22, 22
r 22, 22

s 22, 22
t 22, 22
u 22, 22

v 22, 22
w 22, 22
x 22, 22

y 22, 22
z 22, 22
aa 22, 22

ab 22, 22
ac 22, 22
ad 22, 22

ae 22, 22
af 22, 22
ag 22, 22

ah 22, 22
ai 22, 22
aj 22, 22

ak 22, 22
al 22, 22
am 22, 22

an 22, 22
ao 22, 22
ap 22, 22

aq 22, 22
ar 22, 22
as 22, 22

at 22, 22
au 22, 22
av 22, 22

aw 22, 22
ax 22, 22
ay 22, 22

az 22, 22
ba 22, 22
bb 22, 22

of the fathers, and I was zealous toward God as ye all are this day.

4 And I persecuted this way unto the death, binding and delivering into prisons both men and women.

5 As also the high priest doth bear me witness, and all the estate of the elders: from whom also I received letters unto the brethren, and went to Damascus, to bring them which were there bound unto Jerusalem, for to be punished.

6 And it came to pass, that, as I made my journey, and was come nigh unto Damascus about noon, suddenly there shone from heaven a great light round about me.

7 And I fell unto the ground, and heard a voice saying unto me, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?

8 And I answered, Who art thou, Lord? And he said unto me, I am Jesus of Nazareth, whom thou persecutest.

9 And they that were with me saw indeed the light, and were afraid; but they heard not the voice of him that spake to me.

10 And I said, What shall I do, Lord? And the Lord said unto me, Arise, and go into Damascus; and there it shall be told thee of all things which are appointed for thee to do.

11 And when I could not see for the glory of that light, being led by the hand of them that were with me, I came into Damascus.

12 And one Ananias, a devout man according to the law, having a good report of all the Jews which dwell there, 13 Came unto me, and stood, and said unto me, Brother Saul, receive thy sight. And the same hour I looked up upon him.

14 And he said, The God of our fathers hath chosen thee, that thou shouldest know his will, and see that Just One, and shouldest hear the voice of his mouth.

15 For thou shalt be his witness unto all men of what thou hast seen and heard.

ed him to be brought immediately to the castle of Antonia, on the stairs (or steps) of which he obtained leave to speak in his own defence.

CHAP. XXII. Ver. 1—30. Paul's defence to his brethren, in the Hebrew tongue.—Having obtained permission of the Roman commander, Paul now addresses his countrymen in their own dialect, which, for some time, procured their attention. The account of his birth, education, persecuting zeal, and extraordinary conversion, having been before narrated, will require but little observation here, especially as the narrative will again come under our notice in his speech before Agrippa.

The only new fact here developed in relation to St. Paul, is the trance which he had in the temple, when the Lord Jesus appeared to him, and warned him to leave Jerusalem, and go and preach unto the Gentiles. In this case Paul seems to have had too much confidence in his own strength, and but a slight acquaintance with the obduracy of the human heart. He thought the narrative he could unfold would be so affecting and convincing—such an appeal to facts within their own knowledge, as must be irresistible: that when they saw a man who had been brought up in the same religious principles, and had been actuated by the same persecuting zeal as themselves; that such a man had been so completely changed, that he was now ready to die in the behalf of that Jesus whom he so bitterly had persecuted, that his ministry must have been here abundantly successful. So it is said of the celebrated Melancthon, when he first began to preach, that he thought his arguments and his eloquence would be irresistible; but a little experience convinced him, as himself expressed it, "that old Adam was indeed too strong for young Melancthon." Paul was not left, however, thus to waste his strength by "going a warfare," as it were, "at his own expense." He was directed whither to go, and a power went with him that insured success. But when his countrymen heard it avowed that his commission was to the Gentiles, they (as on former occasions) would not hear another word, but "lifted up their voices" in one continued cry—"Away with such a fellow from the earth."

It is probable that the chief captain did not well understand this speech, which was in Hebrew, from his having previously

Ver. 34. The castle—[This was the castle built by John Hyrcanus, the high priest, at the angle formed by the northern and western porticoes of the outer court of the temple. It was anciently called Bab el; but Herod having repaired and beautified it, called it Antonia in honour of his friend Mark Antony. Josephus describes it as having four towers, from one of which the whole temple was overlooked; and that one of the towers was joined to the porticoes of the temple, and had a double pair of stairs from it, by which the soldiers in the garrison were used to come down with their arms to the porticoes, on the festivals, to keep the people quiet.]—Banister.

Ver. 35. That Egyptian, &c.—[This Egyptian is mentioned by Josephus, who says that he pretended to be a prophet, and persuaded a multitude of people to follow him to the top of mount Olivet, telling them that they should see the walls of the city fall down before them; but Felix attacked them with horse and foot, killed 400 on the spot, took 200 prisoners, and put the Egyptian himself to flight.]—Banister.

Ver. 36. Tarsus—[Tarsus, now called Tarsous and Tarassus, was an ancient and celebrated city of Cilicia, situated in a plain on the banks of the Cydnus. It was made the metropolis of Cilicia; and from its adherence to the Romans, it was made a free city, and probably endowed with the citizenship of Rome, by Julius Cæsar. It was a rich and populous city; and was once the rival of Alexandria and Athens in literature and the polite arts. Josephus 1—Banister. A citizen of no mean city—The people of Tarsus boasted their high antiquity from Tarschich, the son of Javan, Gen. x. 4. They also aspired to literary fame, compare note on ch. ix. 11, 2 and were rendered eminent by wealth and commerce. See note on chap. xx. 28.

CHAP. XXII. Ver. 1. My defence—Greek, apologia. Scott says, "The sacred writers never use this word, or the corresponding verb, except when the person spoken of defended himself from some charge brought against him. . . . They never call the preaching of the gospel an apology."

Ver. 2. In the Hebrew tongue—That is, as then spoken, which the learned are properly well agreed was the Syro Chaldaic, a Syro dialect.

Ver. 3. Born in Tarsus—See note on chap. xxi. 29.—Brought up at the feet of Gamaliel—The Jewish students used to sit on the ground before the feet of their Rabbins.

Ver. 4. Unto the death—Unto death.—Bishop Loxeth.

Ver. 5. The high priest—Of that time, namely, Caiaphas, (see Doddridge supposes.)

Ver. 6. And it came to pass—[It is evident that the apostle considered his extraordinary conversion as a most complete demonstration of the truth of Christianity; and when all the particulars of his education, his previous religious principles, his zeal, his equity against Christians, and his prospects of secular honours and pre-eminence by persecuting them, are compared with the subsequent part of his life, and the sudden transition from a furious persecutor to a zealous preacher of the gospel, in which he laboured and suffered to the end of his life, and for which he died a martyr, it must convince every candid and impartial person, that no rational account can be given of this change, except what he himself assigns, and consequently, if that be true, that his testimony is divine.]—Banister.

Ver. 9. Heard the voice of him that spake—Compare note on chap. ix. 7.

Ver. 12. And one Ananias—Compare chap. ix. 10, of seq.

Ver. 14. That Just One—Namely, Jesus Christ. See chap. ix. 11; vii. 52.

16 And now why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord.

17 And it came to pass, that, when I was come again to Jerusalem, even while I prayed in the temple, I was in a trance;

18 And saw him saying unto me, Make haste, and get thee quickly out of Jerusalem: for they will not receive thy testimony concerning me.

19 And I said, Lord, they know that I imprisoned and beat in every synagogue them that believed on thee:

20 And when the blood of thy martyr Stephen was shed, I also was standing by, and consenting unto his death, and kept the raiment of them that slew him.

21 And he said unto me, Depart: for I will send thee far hence unto the Gentiles.

22 ¶ And they gave him audience unto this word, and then lifted up their voices, and said, Away with such a fellow from the earth: for it is not fit that he should live.

23 And as they cried out, and cast off their clothes, and threw dust into the air,

24 The chief captain commanded him to be brought into the castle, and bade that he should be examined by scourging; that he might know wherefore they cried so against him.

25 ¶ And as they bound him with thongs, Paul said unto the centurion that stood by, Is it lawful for you to scourge a man that is a Roman, and uncondemned?

26 When the centurion heard that, he went and told the chief captain, saying, Take heed what thou doest: for this man is a Roman.

27 Then the chief captain came, and said unto him, Tell me, art thou a Roman? He said, Yea.

28 And the chief captain answered, With a great sum obtained I this freedom. And Paul said, But I was free born.

29 Then straightway they departed from him which should have examined him: and the chief captain also was afraid, after he knew that he was a Roman, and because he had bound him.

30 ¶ On the morrow, because he would have known the certainty wherefore he was accused of the Jews, he loosed him from his bands, and commanded the chief priests and all their council to appear, and brought Paul down, and set him before them.

CHAPTER XXIII.

1 As Paul pleadeth his cause, 2 Ananias commandeth them to smite him. 7 Dissension naming his accusers. 11 God encourageth him. 14 The Jews' laying wait for Paul. 20 is declared unto the chief captain. 27 He sendeth him to Felix the governor.

AND Paul, earnestly beholding the council, said, Men and brethren, I have lived in all good conscience before God until this day.

2 And the high priest Ananias commanded them that stood by him to smite him on the mouth.

3 Then said Paul unto him, God shall smite thee, thou whitened wall: for sittest thou to judge me after the law, and commandest me to be smitten contrary to the law?

4 And they that stood by said, Revilest thou God's high priest?

5 Then said Paul, I wist not, brethren, that he was the high priest: for it is written, Thou shalt not speak evil of the ruler of thy people.

6 ¶ But when Paul perceived that the one part were Sadducees, and the other Pharisees, he cried out in the council, Men and brethren, I am a Pharisee, the son of a Pharisee: of the hope and resurrection of the dead I am called in question.

7 And when he had so said, there arose a dissension between the Pharisees and the Sadducees; and the multitude was divided.

8 For the Sadducees say that there is no resurrection, neither angel, nor spirit: but the Pharisees confess both.

9 And there arose a great cry: and the scribes that were of the Pharisees' part arose, and strove, saying, We find no evil in this man: but if a spirit or an angel hath spoken to him, let us not fight against God.

asked the apostle, (ch. xxi. 37.) Canst thou speak Greek? He was therefore about to have recourse to the barbarous custom of that age, of extorting confession by the torture of the whip, but Paul's privilege as a Roman citizen again saved him from it; and finding with whom he now had to do, the chief captain loosed his bands, and ordered all his accusers to appear before him on the following day, when Paul was set before them, again to make his own defence.

CHAP. XXIII. Ver. 1-16. Paul's defence before the sanhedrim.—LYSIAS, the chief captain, seems here to have maintained the full dignity of the Roman power, for though he brought down the prisoner before the council, it was by his command (ch. xxii. 30) that the chief priests and council were now assembled, with Ananias in the chair: but probably without his official robes, or the insignia of his former office. Paul again began his defence, avoiding repetition of what he had said the

Ver. 16. And wash away thy sins.—See chap. ii. 38, and compare 1 Peter iii. 21.

Ver. 17. When I was come again to Jerusalem.—After he had been to Damascus and Arabia—then while he was in the temple—perhaps in a portico, and at a time when no one was with him.

Ver. 19. Lord, they know.—Paul is understood here to plead for the probability of his success among the Jews, on the ground of his having been formerly a persecutor.

Ver. 20. Consenting unto his death.—So ch. vii. 1. Scott thinks this version much too weak. "The word rendered 'consenting,' implies a complacency in the deed; and the word rendered 'death,' implies 'murder'."

Ver. 23. Cast off their clothes.—Sir J. Chardin mentions, that the Persians, when they complain to their sovereign, go in numbers, with strange cries, tearing their garments, and casting dust into the air.—Harmel's Obs.

Ver. 24. The chief captain.—As the chief captain did not understand Hebrew, he was reluctant of the charge against Paul, and also of the defence which the apostle had made; but as he saw that they grew more and more outrageous, he supposed that Paul must have given them the highest provocation, and therefore, according to the barbarous and irrational practice which has existed in all countries, he determined to put him to the torture, in order to make him confess his crime.—Bagster.—Examined by scourging.—This is the cruel method by which evidence was formerly extorted; but it was not applicable to a Roman citizen. See note on ch. xvi. 37.

Ver. 25. Is it lawful for you?—[By the Roman law, no magistrate was allowed to punish a Roman citizen capitively, or by inflicting stripes, or even binding him; and the same expression, I am a Roman citizen, are sturd the severest defence, and obtained, if not an escape, at least a delay of his punishment].—Bagster.

Ver. 28. I was free born.—[It is extremely probable, that the inhabitants of day before, in these simple and inoffensive terms:—"Men and brethren, I have lived in all good conscience before God until this day." This was only pleading not "guilty," as every prisoner has certainly a right to do when put on trial; yet so offended was this priestly tyrant, Ananias, that he ordered Paul to be smitten on the mouth to silence him; on which the apostle, by the spirit of prophecy, predicted the judgment that shortly after came upon him. The expression, "Thou whitened wall," seems to have an allusion to that of our Lord, who compares the Scribes and Pharisees to "whited sepulchres," which are beautiful without and rottenness within. (Matt. xxiii. 27.) And the judgment predicted was remarkably fulfilled; for though he stood on good terms towards the Jews in general, he so cruelly defrauded the inferior priests, as to bring on him the public vengeance; and, after his house had been burnt to ashes in a public tumult, when he attempted to Tarsus, born in that city, had the same rights and privileges as Roman citizens, in consequence of a grant or charter from Julius Cæsar, from whom it was called Julianopolis. But, if this were not the case, St. Paul's father, or some of his ancestors, might have been rewarded with the freedom of the city of Rome, for his fidelity and bravery in some military service, as Josephus says several of the Jews were; or he might have obtained it by purchase, as in the instance of the chief captain.—Bagster.

CHAP. XXIII. Ver. 2. To smite him on the mouth.—Haywood mentions, that when a rebel Persian chief was brought before one of Nadir Shah's generals, his answers not pleasing him, he ordered him to be struck across the mouth, to silence him, which was done with such violence, that the blood issued forth.—Compare 1 Kings xxi. 24.

Ver. 3. God shall smite thee.—[God did smite him in a remarkable manner, for about five years after this, after his house had been reduced to ashes, in a tumult raised by his own son, he was rescued and taken in the royal palace; where, having attempted in vain to hide himself, he was dragged out and slain.—See Josephus.]—Bagster.

Ver. 5. I wist (knew) not.—Ananias had certainly been high priest some years before, but was sent to Rome prisoner, under some charges of misconduct; and though he had been acquitted, he had not been reinstated, but one Jonathan appointed in his room. Jonathan, however, had been murdered, and one Ismael appointed in his stead, but had not yet taken possession of his office, and in this interval of vacancy, Ananias pushed himself forward to preside in the council, but probably without either the robes or insignia of his former office. This is the explanation of the learned Macchaetis, and is adopted by Preb. Townsend. See also Boothroyd.

Ver. 6. Of the hope and resurrection.—&c.—For a vindication at large of Paul's conduct in this place, see Dr. Findlay's Answer to Voltaire.

Ver. 9. Fight against God.—Compare Acts v. 29; ix. 5.

10 ¶ And when there arose a great dissension, the chief captain, fearing lest Paul should have been pulled in pieces of them, commanded the soldiers to go down, and to take him by force from among them, and to bring him into the castle.

11 And the night following the Lord stood by him, and said, Be of good cheer, Paul: for as thou hast testified of me in Jerusalem, so must thou bear witness also at Rome.

12 ¶ And when it was day, certain of the Jews banded together, and bound themselves under a curse, saying that they would neither eat nor drink until they had killed Paul.

13 And they were more than forty which had made this conspiracy.

14 And they came to the chief priests and elders, and said, We have bound ourselves under a great curse, that we will eat nothing until we have slain Paul.

15 Now therefore ye with the council signify to the chief captain that he bring him down unto you to-morrow, as though ye would inquire something more perfectly concerning him: and we, or ever he come near, are ready to kill him.

16 And when Paul's sister's son heard of their lying in wait, he went and entered into the castle, and told Paul.

A M. cor 1061
A 17. cor 161
k Pz 46 1, 7
c 15 3
27, 25, 24
1 c 28 30, 31.
to 1 15
in ver 21, 30,
c 25 3.
u or, with an oath of execration.
o De 31 13.
p 11a 1, 9.
q 15 21 11
37, 32, 33.
r 2Sa 17 17
s Pr 22 3
Mat 10 16
t c 28 17
Ep 3 1
41 Phl 9
u ver 12
v Ex 22 2

17 Then Paul called one of the centurions unto him, and said, Bring this young man unto the chief captain: for he hath a certain thing to tell him.

18 So he took him, and brought him to the chief captain, and said, Paul the prisoner called me unto him, and prayed me to bring this young man unto thee, who hath something to say unto thee.

19 Then the chief captain took him by the hand, and went with him aside privately, and asked him, What is that thou hast to tell me?

20 And he said, The Jews have agreed to desire thee that thou wouldest bring down Paul to-morrow into the council, as though they would inquire somewhat of him more perfectly.

21 But do not thou yield unto them: for there lie in wait for him of them more than forty men, which have bound themselves with an oath, that they will neither eat nor drink till they have killed him: and now are they ready, looking for a promise from thee.

22 So the chief captain then let the young man depart, and charged him, See thou tell no man that thou hast showed these things to me.

23 And he called unto him two centurions, saying, Make ready two hundred soldiers to hide himself even in an old aqueduct, he was dragged out and slain—about five years subsequent to this period.

Upon this speech of Paul, however, some bystanders ventured to reprove him, saying, "Revilest thou God's High Priest?" to which he calmly replied, "I wist (or knew) not, brethren, that he was the High Priest," or I would not have done so, for it is written, "Thou shalt not speak evil of the ruler of thy people."

But a question here arises, How was it that Paul, as an inspired man, knew not that Ananias was High Priest? To this it has been answered, 1. As to Paul's inspiration, it supplied him only with knowledge appropriate to his official duty, and not with political information; and the office of High Priest had been so often changed since they had been under the Roman power, that a stranger at Jerusalem, as Paul had been for some time, might well be ignorant both of his person and his name: but, 2. Ananias was not now, either in right or in fact, High Priest; and called so only in courtesy, as having formerly filled the office, and assuming the chair till another should take the place.

A dissension now arose in the council, which Paul has been accused of raising, but, perhaps, without sufficient reason. Some circumstance might occur to show the heterogeneous principles of the council, one part being infidel Sadducees, and the other zealous Pharisees, on which Paul, taking the advantage of their dissension, (as we conceive he might justly do,) called out that he was "a Pharisee, the son of a Pharisee;" and that it was for "the hope and resurrection of the dead" that he was now called in question. And this was not only true in reference to the resurrection of Christ, but, in as much as our resurrection depends on his, the resurrection of mankind in general: for, as he elsewhere argues, "if Christ be not raised," then is it in vain to hope for any resurrection. (1 Cor. xv. 12—22.)

By this statement in behalf of a resurrection, it appears that Paul partially drew the Pharisees on his side, who, recollecting what he had said the day before of seeing a vision and hearing a voice from heaven, began to think within themselves that there might be some truth in it; and, if he had so done, (which their principles admitted to be at least possible,) it was wrong thus violently to condemn him on that account, lest they should be found to "fight against God." Thus the Pharisees, who believed in a future state and resurrection, and the Sadducees, who denied both, fell to quarrelling, and so violent was the fray, that the chief captain was obliged again to interfere, to prevent Paul from being torn to pieces.

But the more bitter and malevolent of his enemies, who now appear to have been the Sadducees, combined against him, and forty men bound themselves under an oath to murder him. That "God in heaven that revealeth secrets," discovered it, however, to one of Paul's nephews, and he secretly reported it to the chief captain, who, to disappoint their murderous design, sent him off by night, under a strong military guard, to Felix, the governor of Cesarea, where he resided. In the mean time, to support Paul under all these trials, he was favoured with another heavenly vision, the Lord Jesus himself standing by him, and saying, "Fear not, Paul: for as thou hast testified of me in Jerusalem, so must thou bear witness of me also at Rome."

Ver. 17—35. Paul rescued by the chief captain, and sent to Festus at Cesarea.—Murder is a crime held in detestation by all civilized nations, and ought to have been so particularly by the Jews, who were expressly taught by a divine oracle, "He that sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed." (Gen. ix. 4.) Assassination is a crime that mixes cowardice with cruelty, and demands a twofold vengeance. How, then, shall we account for it, that these Jews should not only attempt assassination, but clothe their determination under the sacred form of anathema—an oath blended with the most awful imprecations! All originates in the principle of religious intolerance, which, assuming the prerogative of Deity, to judge the conscience, impiously aspires to wield the thunderbolts of the Almighty against our supposed enemies. This is the principle on which Saul the Pharisee "breathed out threatenings and slaughter" against the saints; and the measure which he meted out to them, was afterwards measured to him again by his former friends, the priests and scribes. This principle, which leads us to take judgment out of the hands of God, and execute it on all we judge to be his foes, is the bitterest poison in all the existing systems of intolerance, and especially of popery. We are not now considering the right which the civil power unquestionably has to preserve peace among hostile sects and parties, which is necessary for the public good; but when any power, civil or ecclesiastical, dictates to men what they must believe, and how they must worship, under certain temporal pains and penalties, it assumes the authority of God, and invades the rights of man. Happy are we, in this land of liberty, to know that intolerance, in every form, is as illegal as it is unchristian.

But how shall we account for it, that Pagans should show a regard to the rights of conscience and of men, of which God's chosen people appear ignorant, or rather, to which they were evidently hostile? The fact is, that the Jews were, at this time, in a state of the most awful apostacy, and upon the brink of national destruction. Little, however, can be said in favour of Pagan toleration. It was not founded on the rights of conscience, but on the principle that all religions were alike. So Gibbon, the celebrated historian of the Roman Empire, observes: "The various modes of worship which prevailed in the Roman world, were all considered by the people as equally true; by the philosopher, as equally false; and by the magistrate, as equally useful." But when Christianity be-

Ver. 12 That they would neither eat.—(Such execrable vows as these were not unusual among the Jews, who, from their perverted traditions, clung to themselves a right of punishing, without any legal process, those whom they considered transgressors of the law; and in some cases, as in the case of one who had forsaken the law of Moses, they thought they were justified in killing them.) They therefore made no scruple of requiring the chief priests and elders with their conspiracy against the life of Paul and applying for their continuance and support—who, being chiefly of the sect of the Sadducees, and the apostle's bitterest enemies, were so far from blaming them for it, that they gladly aided and abetted them in this mode of despatching him, and on its failure they soon afterwards determined upon making a similar attempt. If these were, in their bad way, conscientious men, they were under no necessity of punishing for direct, when the providence of God had hindered them from accomplishing their vow, for their vows of abstinence from eating and drinking were as easy to loose as to bind, any of them, as men or Rabbinic having power to absolve them, as Lightfoot has shown from the Talmud.—B.

Ver. 14 A great curse.—Doed (i.e., a solemn anathema)—see note on Num. xxv. 6.

go to Cesarea, and horsemen threescore and ten, and spearmen two hundred, at the third hour of the night;

24 And provide them beasts, that they may set Paul on, and bring him safe unto Felix the governor.

25 And he wrote a letter after this manner:

26 Claudius Lysias unto the most excellent governor Felix sendeth greeting:

27 This ^w man was taken of the Jews, and should have been killed of them: then came I with an army, and rescued him, having understood that he was a Roman.

28 And ^a when I would have known the cause wherefore they accused him, I brought him forth into their council:

29 Whom I perceived to be accused of questions ^y of their law, but to have nothing ^z laid to his charge worthy of death or of bonds.

30 And when ^a it was told me how that the Jews laid wait for the man, I sent straightway to thee, and gave ^b commandment to his accusers also to say before thee what they had against him. Farewell.

31 Then the soldiers, as it was commanded them, took Paul, and brought him by night to Antipatris.

32 On the morrow they left the horsemen to go with him, and returned to the castle:

33 Who, when they came to Cesarea, and delivered the epistle ^c to the governor, presented Paul also before him.

34 And when the governor had read the letter, he asked of what province he was. And when he understood that he was of ^d Cilicia;

35 I will hear thee, said he, when thine accusers ^e are also come. And he commanded him to be kept in ^f Herod's judgment hall.

CHAPTER XXIV.

1 Paul being accused by Tertullus the orator, 10 answered for his life and doctrine. 24 He preacheth Christ to the governor and his wife. 25 The governor hopeth for a bribe, but in vain. 27 At last, going out of his office, he leaveh Paul in prison.

AND after five days Ananias ^a the high priest descended with the elders, and with a certain orator named Tertullus, who informed ^b the governor against Paul.

2 And when he was called forth, Tertullus began to accuse him, saying, Seeing that by thee we enjoy great quietness, and that very worthy deeds ^c are done unto this nation by thy providence,

3 We accept it always, and in all places, most noble Felix, with all thankfulness.

4 Notwithstanding, that I be not farther tedious unto thee, I pray thee that thou wouldest hear us of thy clemency a few words.

5 For we have found this man ^a a pestilent fellow, and ^d a mover of sedition among all the Jews throughout the world, and a ringleader of the sect of the Nazarenes:

6 Who also hath gone about to profane ^e the temple: whom we took, and would have judged ^f according to our law.

7 But the chief ^g captain Lysias came upon us, and with great violence took him away out of our hands,

8 Commanding his accusers ^h to come unto thee: by examining of whom thyself mayest take knowledge of all these things, whereof we accuse him.

9 And the Jews also assented, saying that these things were so.

10 ⁱ Then Paul, after that the ^j governor had gan to spread extensively, and was found hostile to every kind of vice, then it became odious, and the object of Pagan persecution. It must be here remarked, that Christianity, in the first age, attacked Paganism by argument and persuasion only; as we see in Paul's noble defence before the Areopagites. It defaced none of its idols, and broke down none of its altars; and had Pagans employed only the same weapons, it would have been a bloodless contest; but Paganism had no arguments, and when thus attacked could answer only by the sword. This, however, was not employed till the imperial power fell into the hands of Nero, who is entitled to the ignominy of being author of the first general persecution of Christians by Pagan Rome.

We have been led into these digressive remarks by the liberal conduct of Claudius Lysias, in rescuing Paul from Jewish persecution and determined assassination. The conduct of Felix, also, or rather the Roman laws, must be commended, which allowed the prisoner to defend himself before his accusers in open court; the governor's meanness, however, in seeking a bribe for his liberation, has fixed a stain upon his character which is indelible; but Paul's trial, and Felix's behaviour, will come regularly before us in the next section.

CHAP. XXIV. Ver. 1—27. Paul pleads his cause before Felix.—Nothing can show more forcibly the inveterate hatred of the Jews against Paul, than their unwearying pursuit of him from time to time, and from place to place—even to Cesarea, which appears to have been more than 70 miles from Jerusalem. Nor did they spare expense for professional orators, who, as we all well know, do not travel for nothing. In this address of Tertullus, we have also a fair specimen of the flattering style of these venal pleaders, whose office was to make “the worse appear the better cause.”—“Almost every word of this oration is false,” says Dr. Doddridge; particularly “the accusation against Paul, and the encomium on Felix. All historians agree that he was a man of so bad a character, that his government was a plague to all the provinces over which he presided: and, as for Judea, its state under Felix was so far from being what Tertullus here represents, that Josephus (besides what he says of the barbarous and cowardly assassination of Jonathan, the High Priest, by his means) declares that the Jews accused him before Nero of insufferable oppressions, and had certainly ruined him, if his brother Pallas had not interposed in his favour.” As to his “worthy deeds,” the only thing that can be said in favour of him is, that he cleared the country of robbers and impostors.

With respect to Paul, we will hear him speak for himself: and without attempting flattery, like Tertullus, we may observe he treats Felix, as a judge, with great respect, and expresses his satisfaction at being called before him, as he knew that he was not altogether a stranger to Jewish laws and customs, in which he may allude, perhaps, to his being married to Drusilla, who was a Jewess. As to Paul's attempting to raise a sedition, there was no pretence for it, as he had been there but a few days for many years past; and with respect to his introducing Gentiles into the holy precincts of the temple, he had indeed been seen with an Ephesian in the city, but he went into the temple with Jews only, with whom he was united in the performance of a religious vow. (See ch. xviii. 23—30.) It is true that he belonged to “the sect of the Nazarenes,” i. e. the followers of Jesus of Nazareth; and after the way which they called heresy, or a sect, did he worship the God of Israel, believing all things contained in the law or the prophets, and particularly the resurrection of the dead; the avowal of which had brought upon him the vengeance of the Sadducees, to which sect (strange to tell!) belonged many of the higher order of priests as well as laymen.

Felix, finding in all this no crime of which, as Roman governor, he could well take cognizance, and that they had brought no witness as to the material points, of raising a riot or defiling the temple, he deferred his decision till the chief

Ver. 21. Felix.—This was Claudius Felix, the successor of Cumanus in the government of Judea. He was a freedman of the emperor Claudius, and brother of Pallas, also a freedman, the chief favourite of the emperor. Tacitus calls him Antonius Felix; and gives us to understand, that he governed with all the authority of a king, and the baseness and insolence of a quondam slave. According to Suetonius he had three queens to his wives; that is, he was married thrice, and each time to the daughter or niece of a king. He was a base, more than, and cruel governor; and when he was recalled to Rome, A. D. 60, the Jews brought forward so many proofs of his extortions and violence before Nero, to whom they accused him, that he would certainly have been executed or ruined, if it had not been prevented by the influence of his brother Pallas. Josephus [—Engster.

Ver. 31. Antipatris.—The ancient Cephara Sata, was so called by Herod the Great, in honour of his father Antiochus. It was situated in a very fruitful plain, watered with many springs and rivulets, and pretty near the mountain in the way from Jerusalem to Cesarea, (Josephus,) 150 stadia, or 17 miles from Joppa, and according to the Old Jerusalem Itinerary, 10 miles from Lydda, and 25 from Cesarea.]—Engster.

Ver. 35. Herod's judgment hall.—Or Pretorium, one of Herod's palaces, with a state prison, probably, in the tower of it.

CHAP. XXIV. Ver. 1. Ananias . . . descended with the elders—i. e. came down from Jerusalem to Cesarea; and they brought with them a professed orator and advocate, to plead their cause.

Ver. 2. Seeing that by thee.—[Felix, bad as he was, had certainly rendered some services to Judea. He had entirely subdued a very formidable banditti which had infested the country, and sent their captain, Eleazar, to Rome. (Josephus) had suppressed the sedition raised by the Egyptian impostor, (ch. xxi. 38.) and had quelled a very afflictive disturbance which took place between the Syrians and Jews of Cesarea. But, though Tertullus might truly say “by thee we enjoy great quietness,” yet it is evident that he was guilty of the grossest flattery, as we have seen, both from his own historians and Josephus, that he was both a bad man and a bad governor.]—Engster.

—By thy providence.—Wesley, “prudence.” Doddridge, “prudent administration.”

Ver. 5. A pestilent fellow.—More emphatically, “a pestilence:” or, as we should say, a pest to society.

beckoned unto him to speak, answered, Forasmuch as I know that thou hast been of many years a judge unto this nation, I do the more cheerfully answer for myself:

11 Because that thou mayest understand, that there are yet but twelve days since I went up to ^hJerusalem for to worship.

12 And they neither found me in the temple disputing with any man, neither raising up the people, neither in the synagogues, nor in the city :

13 Neither can they prove ⁱⁿ the things whereof they now accuse me.

14 But this I confess unto thee, that after the way which they call heresy, so ^u worship I the God of ^v my fathers, believing all things which are ^w written in the law and ^x in the prophets:

15 And have hope ⁱⁿ toward God, which they themselves also allow that there shall be a resurrection ^{of} of the dead, both of the just and unjust.

16 And herein do I exercise myself, to have : always a conscience void of offence toward God, and toward men.

17 Now after many years I came "to bring alms to my nation, and offerings.

18 Whereupon certain Jews from Asia found me purified in the temple, neither with multitude, nor with tumult.

19 Who ought to have been here * before thee, and object, if they had aught against me.

20 Or else let these same here say, if they have found any evil doing in me, while I stood before the council,

21 Except it be for this one voice, that I cried standing among them, Touching the resurrection of the dead I am called in question by you this day,

22 ¶ And when Felix heard these things, having more perfect knowledge of that way, he deferred them, and said, When Lysias ^w the chief captain shall come down, I will know the uttermost of your matter.

captain, Lysias, should come to Cesarea, when he would again hear the cause; in the mean time, finding it was a malicious prosecution, he committed him to the care of a Roman centurion, with orders for his being liberally treated.

Before Lysias arrived, however, his own wife, Drusilla, came, who was a Jewess, and he seems to have considered this a proper opportunity to hear farther "concerning the faith in Christ." On this occasion Paul seems to have been regardless of his own circumstances, but reasoned so forcibly on "righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come," that even Felix trembled. And well, indeed, he might, if he was the character represented by Josephus. No topic could be better calculated to alarm a rapacious tyrant, a seducer, and an adulterer; no eloquence more adapted to make him tremble, than the masterly and energetic reasoning of St. Paul. He did tremble, and could bear no more; but hastily dismissed the preacher—"Go thy way for this time: when I have a convenient season I will send for thee." Alas! how many have thus put away from them the words of eternal life, and found no other opportunity for ever!

As to Felix, he desired no more; but hoped—as Paul was a Roman citizen, that he should have received a bribe for his liberation; but, as this was not the case, (for Paul would neither bribe nor be bribed,) after dallying with the cause two years, till Festus (his successor) came, he left him in confinement, “willing to show the Jews a pleasure.”

CHAP. XXV. Ver. 1-27. Paul being accused before Festus, appeals to Cæsar.—We have seen, in the close of the preceding Ver. 10. Many years—According to Bishop Pearson, five and a half; but according to Mr. Biscoe, seven.

¶ V. 14. *Heresy—This is the same word that, in ver. 5, is translated sect, which is admitted to be its primary meaning; though it afterwards acquired a theological or ecclesiastical use, as implying the maintenance of important or fundamental error. So Dr. Watts defines heresy to be “Not in religion a mistake of judgment, (though in fundamentals) but expressing such erroneous judgment, either teaching or disseminating it; or openly supporting and asserting those that do.” This I conceive (said he) to be the true scriptural notion of heresy.” Waterland’s Importance of the Trinity

Ver. 22 Having more perfectly known thee—Doddridge, "After I have been more accurately informed." Dr. D. remarks, that the words themselves are ambiguous, and may refer to his having obtained by this examination a

[illegible]

23 And he commanded a centurion to keep Paul, and to let him have *liberty, and that he should forbid none of his acquaintance to minister or come unto him.

24 • And after certain days, when Felix came with his wife Drusilla, which was a Jewess, he sent for Paul, and heard him concerning the faith in Christ.

25 And as he reasoned of ¹ righteousness, temperance, ² and judgment ³ to come, Felix ⁴ trembled, and answered, Go ⁵ thy way for this time ; when I have a convenient season, I will call for thee.

26 ¶ He hoped also that money ^d should have been given him of Paul, that he might loose him: wherefore he sent for him the oftener, and communed with him.

27 But after two years Porcius Festus came into Felix' room: and Felix, willing to show the Jews a pleasure, left Paul bound.

CHAPTER XXV.

2 The Jews accuse Paul before Festus. 8 He answereth for himself, 11 and appeareth unto Cæsar. 14 Afterwards Festus openeth his matter to king Agrippa, 23 and he is brought forth. 25 Festus cleareth him of having done any thing worthy of death.

NOW when Festus was come into the province, after three days he ascended from Cesarea to Jerusalem.

2 Then the high priest and the chief of the Jews informed him against Paul, and besought him.

3 And desired favour against him, that he would send for him to Jerusalem, laying ^a wait in the way to kill him.

1 But Festus answered, that Paul should be kept at Cesarea, and that he himself would depart shortly thither.

5 Let them therefore, said he, which among you are able, go down with me, and accuse this man, if there be any wickedness in him.

^b more than ten days, he went down unto Caesarea; and the next day sitting on the judgment seat commanded Paul to be brought.

7 And when he was come, the Jews which chapter, that Felix left Paul a prisoner to please the Jews: accordingly, no sooner had Festus arrived at Jerusalem, than the High Priest and the chief of the Jews applied to him against Paul, desiring that he would send for him from Cæsarea to Jerusalem, while he was there, at the same time laying in wait, on the way, to kill him. Whether Festus had seen the letter of Lysias to Felix, stating that the Jews had before done so, (ch. xxiii. 26-30,) or whether it was a special act of His providence, who controls the hearts of princes, in order to preserve Paul, Festus refused to listen to their request, but required them to go with him to Cæsarea, whither he went in about ten days afterwards. The next day after their arrival, Paul and his accusers were brought before him, and they laid so many things to his charge, that though they could not prove them, Festus showed an evident disposition to oblige the Jews, by sending him back to Jerusalem. Paul, however, resisted this, as illegal and unjust, and knowing that he was to bear witness for Christ at Rome also, (ch. xxiii. 11,) at once appealed to Cæsar; Festus admitted the appeal, and it appears he had no right to refuse a Roman citizen.

A few days after this, however, King Agrippa, and his sister, Bernice, came upon a visit to Festus at Caesarea, on which occasion the latter related the circumstances of Paul's case, against whom the Jews had obtained judgment, on account of a pretended conviction that had previously taken place. Festus, however, gave them to understand that the Roman laws did not allow this, but required the accusers to appear face to face, and that the accused should be allowed to answer for better knowledge of the subject; or, more properly, (as Beza and Lactantius explain them,) to a desire of obtaining further information, which Lysias came, which seems far more natural.

Ver. 21. Praxilla — Josephus says, "this woman was the daughter of Herod Azrippa, at first married, and sister to the Azrippa mentioned in the next chapter." She had been married to Azizus, king of the Emesenes, but Felix seduced her by means of one Simon, a magician, so that they, in fact, lived in adultery, under the mask of marriage.

Ver 27. Pareus Festos. —(Pareus Festos was put into the government of Judea in the sixth or seventh year of Nero, and died about two years after of wounds, and was succeeded by Albinus c. A.D. 68.)

came down from Jerusalem stood round about, and laid many and grievous complaints against Paul, which ^a they could not prove.

8 ¶ While he answered for himself, Neither against the law of the Jews, neither against the temple, nor yet against Cesar, have I offended any thing at all.

9 But Festus, willing to do the Jews a pleasure, answered Paul, and said, Wilt thou go up to Jerusalem, and there be judged of these things before me?

10 Then said Paul, I stand at Cesar's judgment seat, where I ought to be judged: to the Jews have I done no wrong, as thou very well knowest.

11 For if I be an offender, or have committed any thing worthy of death, I refuse not to die: but if there be none of these things whereof these accuse me, no man may deliver me unto them. I appeal ^b unto Cesar.

12 Then Festus, when he had conferred with the council, answered, Hast thou appealed unto Cesar? unto Cesar shalt thou go.

13 ¶ And after certain days king Agrippa and Bernice came unto Cesarea to salute Festus.

14 And when they had been there many days, Festus declared Paul's cause unto the king, saying, There is a certain man left in bonds by Felix:

15 About whom, when ^c I was at Jerusalem, the chief priests and the elders of the Jews informed me, desiring to have judgment against him.

16 To whom I answered, It is not the manner of the Romans to deliver any man to die, before that he which is accused have the accusers face to face, and have license to answer for himself concerning the crime laid against him.

17 Therefore, when ^d they were come hither, without any delay on the morrow I sat on the judgment seat, and commanded the man to be brought forth.

18 Against whom when the accusers stood up, they brought none accusation of such things as I supposed:

19 But ^e had certain questions against him of their own superstition, and of one Jesus, which was dead, whom Paul affirmed to be alive.

20 And because ^f I doubted of such manner of questions, I asked ^g him whether he would go to Jerusalem, and there be judged of these matters.

21 But when Paul had appealed to be reserved unto the ^h hearing of Augustus, I commanded him to be kept till I might send him to Cesar.

22 Then Agrippa said unto Festus, I would also hear the man myself. To-morrow, said he, thou shalt hear him.

23 ¶ And on the morrow, when Agrippa was come, and Bernice, with great ⁱ pomp, and was entered into the place of hearing, with the chief captains, and principal men of the city, at Festus' commandment Paul ^k was brought forth.

24 And Festus said, King Agrippa, and all men which are here present with us, ye see this man, about whom all ^l the multitude of the Jews have dealt with me, both at Jerusalem, and ^m also here, crying ⁿ that he ought not to live any longer.

25 But when I found that he had committed nothing ^o worthy of death, and that he himself hath appealed ^p to Augustus, I have determined to send him.

26 Of whom I have no certain thing to write unto my lord. Wherefore I have brought him forth before you, and specially before thee, O king Agrippa, that, after examination had, I might have somewhat to write.

27 For ^q it seemeth to me unreasonable to send a prisoner, and not withal to signify the crimes ^r laid against him.

CHAPTER XXVI.

2 Paul, in the presence of Agrippa, declares his life from his childhood, 12 and how miraculously he was converted, and called to his apostleship. 21 Festus charges him to be mad, whereunto he answereth modestly. 28 Agrippa is almost persuaded to be a Christian. 31 The whole company pronounce him innocent.

THEN Agrippa said unto Paul, Thou art permitted to speak for thyself. Then Paul himself. This was therefore done; but when the accusers came, they left their witnesses behind, and substantiated no one charge that he had expected, but "had certain questions against him of their religion, and of one Jesus, which was dead, whom Paul affirmed to be alive." Not understanding such questions, Festus had inquired if Paul was willing to go to Jerusalem to be judged, but he had declined this, and appealed to Cesar, to whom, therefore, he must be sent.

The curiosity of Agrippa being excited by this account, he expressed a great desire to see this celebrated prisoner, and to hear what he had to advance in favour of a sect which was "every where spoken against." This was immediately agreed to, and the following day was appointed for the hearing. Accordingly, next morning, Agrippa, with his sister, Bernice, came into court in great pomp, with the chief captains and principal men of the city, and Paul also was brought before them. Festus now, pointing to him, told the court that this was the man whom Claudius had given to Agrippa the tetrarchy of Philip, he nevertheless kept the province of Judaea in his own hands, and governed it by procurators sent from Rome. Josephus—Bagster.

Ver. 10. I stand at Cesar's judgment seat—Doddridge, "Tribunal." The tribunals of the Roman procurators were held in Cesar's name, and by commission from him. So our courts are held in the name of the people, the state, or the commonwealth.

Ver. 11. Appealed unto Cesar—[An appeal to the emperor was the right of a Roman citizen, and was highly respected; the Julian law condemned those magistrates, and others, as violators of the public peace, who had put to death, tortured, scourged, imprisoned, or condemned any Roman citizen who had appealed to Cesar. This law was so sacred and imperative, that, in the persecution under Trajan, Pliny would not attempt to put to death Roman citizens, who were proved to have been Christians, but determined to send them to Rome, probably because they had appealed.]—Bagster.

Ver. 13. King Agrippa.—This Agrippa was the son of Herod Agrippa, (chap. xiv.) who, on his father's death was thought too young to succeed him, (being only seventeen,) but had now the tetrarchies of Philip and Lysanias, with part of Galilee.—Bernice.—[Or Berenice, was the daughter of Herod Agrippa, and sister of king Agrippa. She was first married to her uncle Herod, king of Chalcis, whose death, she went to her brother Agrippa, with whom she was said to live in incest, which is alluded to by Jerome. She was afterwards married to Polemon, king of Cilicia, but soon left him to live with her brother. (Josephus) Titus Vespasian fell in love with her, and would have made her empress, had he not been prevented by the clamour of the Romans.]—Bagster.

Ver. 15. Desiring to have judgment—i. e. on the ground of his trial before Felix. Chap. xxv. 1. &c.

to whom he had referred, against whom the Jews had cried out that he was "not fit to live;" and he was desirous to have him examined before King Agrippa, that he might have something definite to write respecting him.

CHAP. XXVI. Ver. 1—32. Paul's defence before Agrippa.—Paul's rank as a public speaker has been often underrated. With a person rather diminutive, and a voice perhaps weak, or in some respects defective, (see 2 Cor. x. 10,) he every where commanded attention, except from the turbulent and bigoted Jews; and sometimes even from them, when he addressed them in their own language, (ch. xxii. 2;) and, when he spoke in Greek, Felix, his judge, trembled before him; Festus thought him transported beyond himself, in an ecstasy of frenzy; and King Agrippa was almost persuaded to be a convert. We must be cautious, however, (and he is the first to caution us,) not to ascribe too much to Paul, since, as an apostle, he certainly came within that promise, "When ye are brought before

Ver. 16. Face to face.—Paul complains of the want of this, chap. xxiv. 19. The Jews of Asia did not attend his trial.

Ver. 19. Of their own superstition.—Doddridge, "their own religion;" Hammond, "way of worship." See note on chapter xvii. 22.

Ver. 21. Augustus.—Meaning Nero.

Ver. 23. Place of hearing.—Doddridge, "audience."

Ver. 24. King Agrippa.—Was the son of Herod Agrippa; who upon the death of his uncle Herod king of Chalcis, A. D. 48, succeeded to his dominions, by the favour of the emperor Claudius. (Josephus.) Four years afterwards, Claudius removed him from that kingdom to a larger one; giving him the tetrarchy of Philip, that of Lysanias, and the province which Varus governed. Nero afterwards added Judaea to Perea, Tarchaea and Tiberias. Claudius gave him the power of appointing the high priest among the Jews, and instances of his exercise of this power may be seen in Josephus. He was strongly attached to the Romans, and did every thing in his power to prevent the Jews from rebelling; and when he could not prevail, he united his troops to those of Titus, and assisted at the siege of Jerusalem. After the ruin of his country, he retired with his sister Bernice to Rome, where he died, aged 70, about A. D. 90. Tacitus—Bagster.—Dra't—Doddridge, "pleaded."

Ver. 25. Augustus.—[The honourable title of Augustus, that is, venerable, or august, which was first conferred by the senate on Octavianus Cesar, was afterwards assumed by succeeding Roman emperors. Nero, the blood-thirsty tyrant, was the emperor at this time.]—Bagster.

Ver. 26. Unto my lord.—i. e. the emperor.—[The title Lord was refused both by Augustus and Tiberius, who forbade, even by public edicts, its application to themselves. Tiberius used to say, he was lord only of his slaves, emperor of his troops, and prince of the senate. Nero, however, would have it.]—Bagster.

stretched forth the hand, and answered for himself:

2 I think myself happy, king Agrippa, because I shall answer for myself this day before thee touching all the things whereof I am accused of the Jews:

3 Especially because I know thee to be a expert in all customs and questions which are among the Jews: wherefore I beseech thee to hear me patiently.

4 My manner of life from my youth, which was at the first among mine own nation at Jerusalem, know all the Jews:

5 Which knew me from the beginning, if they would testify, that after the most straitest sect of our religion I lived a Pharisee.

6 And now I stand and am judged for the hope of the promise made of God unto our fathers:

7 Unto which promise our twelve tribes, instantly serving God day and night, hope to come. For which hope's sake, king Agrippa, I am accused of the Jews.

8 Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you, that God should raise the dead?

9 I verily thought with myself, that I ought to do many things contrary to the name of Jesus of Nazareth.

10 Which thing I also did in Jerusalem: and many of the saints did I shut up in prison, having received authority from the chief priests; and when they were put to death, I gave my voice against them.

11 And I punished them oft in every synagogue, and compelled them to blaspheme; and being exceedingly mad against them, I persecuted them even unto strange cities.

12 Whereupon as I went to Damascus with authority and commission from the chief priests,

13 At mid-day, O king, I saw in the way a light from heaven, above the brightness of the

A M 4066
A D 62
b De 17, 18
c 23, 4
e 2 Ti 3, 10
d e 22, 3
Ph 3, 5
e c 23, 6
Ge 3, 15
e 22, 3
49, 10
De 18, 15
28, 7, 12
Ps 124, 11
Is 14, 2
7, 14
9, 6, 7
c 13, 35
33, 11, 46, 1
Eze 34, 23
Is 9, 2, 4
e 22, 3
Zec 13, 1
7
Mal 3, 1
c 13, 35
Ga 4, 4
g Lu 2, 7
1 Th 3, 10
h night and day
1 Co 15, 12, 30
1 Ti 1, 13
c 8, 3
Ga 1, 13
c 9, 14
a Lu 17, 17
c 9, 3
o Ep 3, 7
c Lu 1, 23, 25
p c 22, 15
g c 22, 15
Ro 11, 13
e 1, 35, 5
42, 7
e Lu 1, 79
Jo 8, 12
2 Co 4, 6
Ep 1, 1
c Lu 1, 30
1 Pe 2, 9
a Lu 1, 77
Ep 1, 7
c Lu 1, 14
v Ep 1, 1
Col 1, 12
1 Pe 1, 4
a Lu 1, 17
c 20, 32
1 Co 1, 70
Re 21, 7
e 1, 1
He 11, 6
y c 9, 10, 46
2 Mar 5, 8
a c 21, 30
b Lu 21, 27, 46
c Jo 15, 23

sun, shining round about me and them which journeyed with me

14 And when we were all fallen to the earth, I heard a voice speaking unto me, and saying in the Hebrew tongue, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me? it is hard for thee to kick against the pricks.

15 And I said, Who art thou, Lord? And he said, I am Jesus whom thou persecutest.

16 But rise, and stand upon thy feet: for I have appeared unto thee for this purpose, to make thee a minister and a witness both of these things which thou hast seen, and of those things in the which I will appear unto thee;

17 Delivering thee from the people, and from the Gentiles, unto whom now I send thee.

18 To open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins, and inheritance among them which are sanctified by faith that is in me.

19 Whereupon, O king Agrippa, I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision:

20 But showed first unto them of Damascus, and at Jerusalem, and throughout all the coasts of Judea, and then to the Gentiles, that they should repent and turn to God, and do works meet for repentance.

21 For these causes the Jews caught me in the temple, and went about to kill me.

22 Having therefore obtained help of God, I continue unto this day, witnessing both to small and great, saying none other things than those which the prophets and Moses did say should come:

23 That Christ should suffer, and that he should be the first that should rise from the dead, and should show light unto the people, and to the Gentiles.

24 And as he thus spake for himself, Festus governors and kings for my sake . . . take no thought how or what ye shall speak, for in that same hour it shall be given you." (Matt. x. 19.) His orations, indeed, have in them all the fervour of prophetic inspiration, with the perfect coolness of deliberation and self-possession. With the utmost indifference to his own fate, he aims at the conversion of his hearers. "I would to God, that not only thou, (king Agrippa,) but also all that hear me this day, were both almost and altogether such as I am, except these bonds."—holding up to view, probably, the chain with which he had been bound to the soldier under whose care he was. (See Acts xii. 6, and note.)

The account which Paul here gives of his former life and conversion, is so similar to what he had repeatedly given, particularly in chap. ix., that we shall chiefly confine our present remarks to what passed between Paul and Festus. Several circumstances mentioned by Paul seem to have formed the ground of the governor's suspicions relative to his understanding being affected. His initiatory studies in general literature at Tarsus, and his progress in Jewish and Rabbinical literature under Gamaliel, might be supposed too much for so weak a frame. The severe mortifications and multifarious devotions of his austere and superstitious sect, might strengthen the suspicion: and one article, at least, of his creed, the doctrine of a resurrection, appeared to Pagans, as well as Sadducees, so utterly irrational and ridiculous, that they would hardly think a man sound in his intellects who could cordially believe it: but what would crown the whole, and might be considered as forming a demonstration of his insanity, was his wild and visionary scheme, as Festus would consider it, of attempting to convert the whole Gentile world to the faith of the crucified Nazarene. What! a Jew, like Paul, teach morals and religion to the disciples of Socrates and Plato?—a Jew "turn from darkness unto light," the illumined philosophers of Greece and Rome! "Surely, Paul, thy learning must have made thee mad to think of it."

But what does he reply? With the utmost calmness, and the greatest respect to the governor, he denies the charge. "I am not mad, most noble Festus; but speak forth the words of truth and soberness."

This charge has been often repeated, in various forms, by the enemies of Christianity. Finding the pretence of his being an impostor, or the dupe of such, to be utterly untenable, since no rational motive could be assigned, why a man, with such prospects as Paul had from his education, talents, and connections, should sacrifice his ease and interests, and even risk his life in such a cause—

"Starving his gain, and martyrdom his price."

On this ground modern infidels have generally considered Paul as a fanatic, an enthusiast, or insane. That his zeal was fervid, in whatever he considered to be true and just, is certain; but the strength and coolness with which he reasoned, the kindness and benevolence with which he acted, and, above all, the purity and consistency of his life and conduct, abundantly demonstrate that he was neither an enthusiast nor insane. Where is the enthusiast whose writings have borne the test of seventeen or eighteen centuries; and particularly that minute and critical comparison to be found in Dr. Paley's Horæ Paulinæ? Here all his Epistles are shown to exhibit an exact harmony with each other, and with St. Luke's History of the Acts of the Apostles, even in the most minute particulars.

But to return to Paul's own defence. Having denied the joining the popular cry, or clamour, against them. The Syriac renders it, "I joined with those that condemned them."

Ver. 11. Compelled them to blaspheme.—Pliny says that the heathen persecutors obliged professors of Christianity, not only to renounce Christ, but to curse him; and the Jews were not less virulent. See Doddridge.

Ver. 12–15. Whereupon, &c.—Compare chap. ix. 3–5.

Ver. 16. To make thee a minister and a witness.—Part of this commission seems to have been delivered by the medium of Ananias; at least it corresponds therewith. See chap. ix. 15–17.

Ver. 20. Showed first unto them of Damascus.—Compare chap. ix. 19–22.

Ver. 21. For these causes.—That is, because he preached Jesus first to the Jews, and then also to the Gentiles.—The Jews caught me, &c.—See chap. xxi. 28.

Ver. 22. Both to small and great.—i. e. to all ranks of society.

Ver. 23. The first that should rise.—Compare 1 Co. xv. 20.

CHAP. XXVI. Ver. 5. Most straitest sect.—Doddridge, "the strictest sect." Josephus says, "The Pharisees were reckoned the most religious of any of the Jews, and to be the most exact and skilful in explaining the laws." Jewish War, book i. chap. v. § 2.

Ver. 6. Stand and am judged.—"Stand judged." Dr. John Edwards.

Ver. 7. Unto which promise.—Paul contends that the promise to the fathers included, not only the doctrine of a future life, but of a resurrection from the dead. See our Lord, Matt. xii. 32. Compare chap. xiii. 6.—Day and night.—Gr. "Night and day."

Ver. 8. Why should it be thought, &c.—"What! is it thought a thing incredible?" &c. Such is the punctuation of Beza, Dr. J. Edwards, &c.; and Doddridge remarks, that "this is suited to the animated manner of Paul's speaking."

Ver. 10. I gave my voice.—Doddridge, "Vote!" but as Paul (or rather Saul) never had any vote in the Sanhedrim, Lardner explains this of his said with a loud voice, Paul, thou art beside thyself; much learning doth make thee ^a mad.

25 But he said, I am not mad, most noble Festus; but speak forth the words of truth and soberness.

26 For the king knoweth of these things, before whom also I speak freely: for I am persuaded that none of these things are hidden from him; for this thing was not done in a corner.

27 King Agrippa, believest thou the prophets? I know that thou believest.

28 Then Agrippa said unto Paul, Almost thou ^a persuadest me to be a Christian.

29 And Paul said, I would ^a to God, that not only thou, but also all that hear me this day, were both almost, and altogether such as I am, except these bonds.

30 ¶ And when he had thus spoken, the king rose up, and the governor, and Bernice, and they that sat with them:

31 And when they were gone aside, they talked between themselves, saying, This man doeth nothing worthy of death or of bonds.

32 Then said Agrippa unto Festus, This man might have been set at liberty, if he had not appealed unto Cesar.

CHAPTER XXVII.

^a Paul shipping toward Rome, 10 foretelleth of the danger of the voyage, 11 but is not believed, 14 They are tossed to and fro with tempest, 41 and suffer shipwreck, 22, 34, 44 yet all come safe to land.

AND when it was determined that we should sail into Italy, they delivered ^a Paul and certain other prisoners unto one named Julius, a centurion of Augustus' band.

2 And entering into a ship of Adramyttium, we launched, meaning to sail by the coasts of charge exhibited against him by Festus, he turns round and appeals to king Agrippa, then sitting by him. "The king knoweth of these things, before whom I speak freely, for I am persuaded that none of these things are hidden from him: for this thing was not done in a corner." Then, in his quick and animated manner, Paul interrogates him—"King Agrippa, believest thou the prophets?" and, without waiting for an answer, immediately rejoins, "I know that thou believest."

This implies that Agrippa was not only a Jew, but a Pharisee; for the Sadducees did not receive the prophets. (See exposition of Matt. xxii. 15, &c.) He was, therefore, "almost" persuaded by Paul's arguments to become a Christian: but, alas! it was "almost" only. The consciousness of a licentious life, together with the dread of the opposition he was sure to meet with, prevented him from going farther; and this has been the unhappy case of thousands, whose judgments have been convinced of the truth of Christianity, but either the offence of the cross, or the lusts of their own hearts, have effectually prevented them from cordially receiving it. Thus Paul lamented; and so will every faithful Christian minister, and pray as Paul did, "I would to God that not only thou, but also all that hear me this day, were not only almost, but altogether such as I am"—a devoted follower of the Lord Jesus—which is, indeed, the exact definition of a Christian.

The assembly now broke up. The governor's objections must have been silenced, and the king was almost converted. They were disposed, therefore, to hear no more; but all agreed, that if Paul had not appealed to Cesar, he might have been set at liberty. The providence of God had, however, wisely determined otherwise—He must "bear witness at Rome also."

CHAP. XXVII. Ver. 1—26. Paul's voyage to Rome.—The

Ver. 21. Much learning doth make thee mad.—Doddridge, "Much study drives thee to madness." This, adds the Doctor, is the exact import of the original.

Ver. 28. Almost.—Gr. "In a little;" that is, in some things—partially. Bp. Hopkins.

Ver. 29. Both almost, and altogether.—Gr. "In little and in much;" i. e. altogether. These bonds.—It has been thought that Festus would hardly have let Paul to plead in chains; but, perhaps he preferred this: we know that some martyrs endured chains for Christ, more than chains of gold; and Lardner cites an instance of a Roman citizen of quality pleading before the senate in his chains.

CHAP. XXVII. Ver. 1. We should sail.—Some ancient copies and versions read, "He should sail," referring to Paul only; yet Luke and Aristarchus appear, by ver. 2, to have gone with him. Of Aristarchus, see chap. xix. 29; xx. 4. Col. iv. 10. Philoemon 24.—Italy.—[Is a well-known country of Europe, bounded by the Adriatic or Venetian Gulf on the east, the Tyrrhene or Tuscan sea on the west, and by the Alps on the north.]—Bagster.—Certain other prisoners.—Lardner proves that prisoners of importance used to be sent from Judaea to Rome.—Of Augustus' band.—Doddridge, "Of the Augustan cohort."

Ver. 2. Adramyttium.—[Now Adramyti, was a maritime city of Mysia in Asia Minor, seated at the foot of Mount Ida, on a gulf of the same name, opposite the island of Lesbos.]—Bagster.

A. M. 4066.

A. D. 62.

d 2 Ki. 9. 11.

e Ja. 1. 23, 24

f 1 Co. 7. 7.

a c 25. 12, 25

b c 19. 29.

c e 21. 23.

28. 16.

d or, Candy

e The Fast

was on the 10th day of the 7th

month

1. e. 23. 27.

29.

f 2 Ki. 6. 9.

10.

Da. 2. 20.

Am. 3. 7.

g or, injury

h Pr. 27. 12.

Asia; one ^b Aristarchus, a Macedonian of Thessalonica, being with us.

3 And the next day we touched at Sidon. And Julius courteously ^c entreated Paul, and gave him liberty to go unto his friends to refresh himself.

4 And when we had launched from thence, we sailed under Cyprus, because the winds were contrary.

5 And when we had sailed over the sea of Cilicia and Pamphylia, we came to Myra, a city of Lycia.

6 And there the centurion found a ship of Alexandria sailing into Italy; and he put us therein.

7 And when we had sailed slowly many days, and scarce were come over against Cnidus, the wind not suffering us, we sailed under ^d Crete, over against Salmone;

8 And, hardly passing it, came unto a place which is called The Fair Havens; nigh whereunto was the city of Lasea.

9 Now when much time was spent, and when sailing was now dangerous, because the ^e fast was now already past, Paul admonished them,

10 And said unto them, Sirs, I perceive ^f that this voyage will be with ^g hurt and much damage, not only of the lading and ship, but also of our lives.

11 Nevertheless the centurion ^h believed the master and the owner of the ship, more than those things which were spoken by Paul.

12 ¶ And because the haven was not commodious to winter in, the more part advised to depart thence also, if by any means they might attain to Phenice, and there to winter; which time now came for Paul's departure; and Julius, a centurion of the Augustan band, going to Rome, probably on other business, it was thought a convenient opportunity to send Paul, and "certain other prisoners," under his care. Whether Luke and Aristarchus had been implicated in the same charge, and are to be included among "the other prisoners," or whether they went as the companions or domestics of St. Paul, is uncertain. No doubt the enjoyment of his company was more than a counterbalance to either imprisonment or the dangers of the voyage. It is a happy event to us that Luke was there, as he has recorded the circumstances of the voyage, and afforded us, in a degree, the pleasure of travelling with them, without participating in any of their dangers.

It may be proper here to remark, that in the infancy of the art of navigation, and before the discovery of the compass, navigators dare not venture into the open sea, but were obliged to coast it near the shore. And here we may remark the harmony subsisting between the plans of providence and redemption. While the propagation of the Gospel was to be confined comparatively to a narrow boundary, the vessels then in use, and the science of early days, might be sufficient; but before the Gospel was to be sent to the farthest parts of India, and across the Atlantic to another hemisphere, the compass was invented, and vast improvements made in naval architecture: and how far the wonderful discoveries of steam navigation may be employed in rapidly extending the Scriptures and the heralds of salvation, like lightning playing on the bosom of the ocean, remains to be seen by our posterity.

If the Christian church of that age had had the direction of Paul's voyage, they would doubtless have chosen another season, and have provided for him a smoother sea and fairer

Ver. 4. Cyprus.—One of the largest islands in the Mediterranean. See chap. xiii. 13—12.

Ver. 5. Myra.—Was a city of Mysia, situated on a hill, 20 stadia from the sea.

Ver. 6. Alexandria.—[Now Scanderon, was a celebrated city and port of Egypt, built by Alexander the Great, situated on the Mediterranean and the lake Meotis, opposite the island of Pharos, and about 12 miles from the western branch of the Nile.]—Bagster.

Ver. 7. Cnidus.—[Was a town and promontory of Caria in Asia Minor, opposite Crete, now Cape Krio.]—Crete.—Now called Candia, or Candy, is a large island in the Mediterranean, 250 miles in length, 50 in breadth, and 600 in circumference, lying at the entrance of the Ægean sea.—Salmone.—Now Salamina, was a city and cape on the east of the island of Crete.]—Bagster.

Ver. 8. Fair Havens.—[The Fair Havens, still known by the same name, was a port on the south-eastern part of Crete, near Lasea, of which nothing now remains.]—Bagster.

Ver. 9. The fast was now already past.—i. e. The great day of atonement, which occurred in the last week of our September—a dangerous time for sailing in the Mediterranean.

Ver. 11. The master . . . of the ship.—i. e. the pilot who steered the vessel.

Ver. 12. Phenice.—[Was a sea-port on the western side of Crete; probably defended from the fury of the winds by a high and winding shore, forming a semicircle, and perhaps by some small island in front; leaving two openings, one towards the south-west, and the other towards the north-west.]—Bagster.

is a haven of ¹ Crete, and lieth toward the south west and north west.

13 And when the south wind blew softly, supposing that they had obtained their purpose, loosing ¹ thence, they sailed close by Crete.

14 But not long after there ² arose against it a tempestuous ¹ wind, called Euroclydon.

15 And when the ship was caught, and could not bear up into the wind, we let her drive.

16 And running under a certain island which is called Claudia, we had much work to come by the boat:

17 Which when they had taken up, they used helps, undergirding the ship; and, fearing lest they should fall ³ into the quicksands, strake sail, and so were driven.

18 And we being exceedingly ⁴ tossed with a tempest, the next day they lightened the ship;

19 And the third day we cast out ⁵ with our own hands the tackling of the ship.

20 And when neither ⁶ sun nor stars in many days appeared, and no small tempest lay on us, all hope ⁷ that we should be saved was then taken away.

21 ¶ But after long abstinence Paul stood forth in the midst of them, and said; Sirs, ye should have hearkened ⁸ unto me, and not have loosed ⁹ from Crete, and to have gained this harm and loss.

22 And now I ¹⁰ exhort you to be of good cheer: for there shall be no loss of any man's life among you, but of the ship.

23 For there stood by me this night ¹¹ the angel ¹² of God, whose ¹³ I am, and whom ¹⁴ I serve.

24 Saying, Fear not, Paul; thou must be brought before Cesar: and, lo, God hath given thee ¹⁵ all them that sail with thee.

25 Wherefore, sirs, be of good cheer: for ¹⁶ I skies. But he that "rides on the whirlwind, and directs the storm," is pleased to display his wisdom, power, and goodness, not in avoiding dangers, but in surmounting them. Paul seems to have had early apprehensions of the perils they were likely to meet with, and before he received any revelation on the subject, advised them to stop at Crete. This advice was, however, overruled by the shipmaster and the navigators; and stormy winds and darksome skies were employed as a sort of ground whereon to display the glory of God.

Paul had earnestly pressed what he thought a measure of safety, but in vain; and began now, possibly, to indulge the most painful foreboding, both as to his own safety, and that of his companions. Perhaps, also, he might have perplexing fears, relative to an object which was evidently near his heart, namely, that he might "preach the Gospel to them that were at Rome also," and bear witness to his crucified Master in the court of Nero. But all was safe; the plan was laid by infinite wisdom, and the most adverse circumstances were the appointed means for its accomplishment. To calm his mind, and support his faith, an angel is commissioned from the skies, and brings him the assurance—"Fear not, Paul; thou must be brought before Cesar; and lo! God hath given thee all them that sail with thee." Paul, not willing to keep the good tidings to himself, (as what good man could?) next morning came forth in the midst of all the ship's company, and related the vision. "And now I exhort you, be of good cheer, (said he,) for there shall be no loss of any man's life among you. For there stood by me this night the angel of God, whose I am, and whom I serve," and he gave me this assurance—namely, what the angel had said to him, as above

A. M. 4066.
A. D. 62.

1 ver 7.

2 ver 21.

k ur, beat.

l Pa. 107 25.

m ver 41.

n Pa. 107 27.

o Job 24.

Jo. 1.5.

p Pa. 105 28.

q Eze 37 11.

r ver 10.

s ver 13.

t Job 22 29.

u Ec 3 4 5, 9.

v He 1 14.

w De 32 9.

Is 13 5.

Is 44 5.

Mal 3 17.

Jo. 17 9 10.

1 Ti 5 13, 20.

1 Th 5 9, 10.

x Ps 116 16.

Is 41 21.

Is 3 17.

Is 11 7.

Is 12 26.

Ro 1 9.

2 Ti 3 1.

y Ge 19 21.

29.

z Lu 1 45.

Jo 4 20.

2 Ti 1 12.

2 Ti 1 12.

a c 28 1.

b Ps 130 6.

c Mat 15 32.

Is 55 2.

d 1 Ki 1 52.

Mat 10 30.

Lu 12 7.

21 18.

e 1 Sa 9 13.

Mat 15 36.

Ma 15 36.

Ma 15 36.

Jo 6 11.

23.

1 Ti 4 3, 4.

believe God, that it shall be even as it was told me.

26 Howbeit we must be cast upon a certain ¹⁷ island.

27 But when the fourteenth night was come, as we were driven up and down in Adria, about midnight the shipmen deemed that they drew near to some country;

28 And sounded, and found it twenty fathoms: and when they had gone a little farther, they sounded again, and found it fifteen fathoms.

29 Then fearing lest they should have fallen upon rocks, they cast four anchors out of the stern, and wished ¹⁸ for the day.

30 And as the shipmen were about to flee out of the ship, when they had let down the boat into the sea, under colour as though they would have cast anchors out of the foreship,

31 Paul said to the centurion and to the soldiers, Except these abide in the ship, ye cannot be saved.

32 Then the soldiers cut off the ropes of the boat, and let her fall off.

33 And while the day was coming on, Paul besought them all to take meat, saying, This day is the fourteenth day that ye have tarried and continued fasting, having taken nothing.

34 Wherefore I pray you to take some meat: for this ¹⁹ is for your health: for there ²⁰ shall not a hair fall from the head of any of you.

35 And when he had thus spoken, he took bread, and ²¹ gave thanks to God in presence of them all: and when he had broken it, he began to eat.

36 Then were they all of good cheer, and they also took some meat.

37 And we were in all in the ship two hundred threescore and sixteen souls.

recited. But we must not pass without remark the noble avowal Paul here makes of his heavenly Master—"whose I am, (says he,) and whom I serve." Those who faithfully serve God assuredly belong to him; and those who have truly given themselves up to him, will assuredly study in all things to obey and serve him. "Wherefore, sirs, be of good cheer: for I believe God, that it shall be even as it was told me."

Here we must be allowed to add, that faith in the word of God is the way to Christian consolation; and the want of this, the cause of our dejection, discomfiture, and sometimes despair. We have only to look to the evidence, that the assertion on which we build is from himself, and we cannot rest too firmly, or act too boldly on it.

Ver. 27-34. The shipwreck of Paul and his companions, with their safe escape to shore.—Dreadfully distressing is it to think of a whole ship's company, of 276 souls, fasting, that is, taking no proper meal, for fourteen days together; but landmen know little of seamen's hardships; however, when Paul had obtained a divine assurance that they should all get safe to land, he strongly urged them to take both bread and meat, and himself set the example, giving "thanks to God" in presence of them all. By this, it appears, they were encouraged to follow his example, and, having eaten all they thought proper, threw the rest of their provisions into the sea, where they had some time before (ver. 19) cast every thing they could then spare.

The ship's crew, indeed, made an attempt to escape with their long-boat, and leave the rest to their fate; but St. Paul having told the centurion, that except these should abide in the ship none could be saved, the soldiers prevented them, by cutting Ver. 14. Arose against it—Query, what? 1. Against the ship? So Doddridge, Wolfius, Schleusner, &c. Or, 2. Against the island Crete, mentioned in the preceding verse? Kinnool, Toivarsund, &c.—Euroclydon.—Dr. Shairp explains this of the wind called a Levant, which blows in all directions. The learned Bentley (who is followed by Hammond and others) contends here for the reading of the Alexandrian MS. and Vulgate, Euraquilo, that is, E. wind; but this is opposed by Bryant and Burnell. Ver. 15. Could not bear up into the wind.—The original properly signifies to bear up; or, in the sea phrase, "to huff up against the wind;" or to look the storm in the face. On the prow of the ancient ships was placed a round piece of wood, called the eye of the ship, from being fixed in its foredeck.

Ver. 16. Claudia.—Called Cauda, and Gaudos by Meta and Pliny, and Claudius by Ptolemy, and now Gozo, according to Docteur Shairp, is a small island, situated at the south-western extremity of the island of Crete. 1—B.

Ver. 17. Undergirding the ship.—i. e. twisting the cable several times round the vessel, to prevent its bulging. Orient. Lit. No. 1457.

Ver. 20. Neither sun nor stars.—Before the mariner's compass was discovered, it was by these they sailed.—Was then taken.—Campbell, "was thenceforth taken," &c.

Ver. 27. Driven up and down in Adria.—Doddridge, "In the Adriatic sea."—[Adria, strictly speaking, was the name of the Adriatic gulf, now the Gulf of Venice, an arm of the Mediterranean, about 200 miles long, and 50 broad, stretching along the eastern shores of Italy on one side, and Dalmatia, Slavonia, and Macedonia, on the other. But the term Adria was extended far beyond the limits of this gulf, and appears to have been given to an indefinite extent of sea, as we say, generally, the Levant. It is observable, that the sacred historian does not say in the Adriatic gulf, but in Adria, which, says Hesychius, was the same as the Ionian sea; and Strabo says, that the Ionian gulf "is a part of that now called the Adriatic." But not only the Ionian, but even the Sicilian sea, and part of that which washes Crete, were called the Adriatic.—Bagster.

Ver. 29. Four anchors.—Rather, a "four fluked anchor," or an anchor with four points, to hold the ground. Such are described both by Bruce and Buckingham.—Out of the stern.—It is evident the ancients sometimes did this; and Sir John Chardin says, the modern Egyptian vessels always carry their anchors at their stern. Orient. Lit. No. 1158.

Ver. 32. Let her fall off.—i. e. let her drift away, that the sailors might not use it for escape.

Ver. 33. This is the fourteenth day.—Some render it, "all this fourth day," (Marking in Bowyer,) confining the fasting to one day; but this is a hard-ship scarcely worth naming.

Ver. 34. Not a hair.—See Mo^s x. 30, 31.

38 And when they had eaten enough, they lightened the ship, and cast out the wheat into the sea.

39 And when it was day, they knew not the land: but they discovered a certain creek with a shore, into the which they were minded, if it were possible, to thrust in the ship.

40 And when they had taken up the anchors, they committed themselves unto the sea, and loosed the rudder bands, and hoised up the mainsail to the wind, and made toward shore.

41 And falling into a place where two seas met, they ran the ship aground; and the forepart stuck fast, and remained unmoved, but the hinder part was broken with the violence of the waves.

A. M. 4066.
A. D. 62.
For, cut the anchors, they left them in the sea, &c.

g Ps 74 29,

h 2Co. II 15

i Ps 107 28
30.
ver. 22.

a c. 27 26.

42 And the soldiers counsel^a was to kill the prisoners, lest any of them should swim out, and escape.

43 But the centurion, willing to save^b Paul, kept them from their purpose; and commanded that they which could swim should cast themselves first into the sea, and get to land:

44 And the rest, some on boards, and some on broken pieces of the ship. And so it came to pass, that they escaped all safe to land.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

¹ Paul after his shipwreck is kindly entertained of the barbarians. ⁵ The viper on his hand hurteth him not. ⁸ He healeth many diseases in the island. ¹¹ They depart towards Rome. ¹⁷ He declareth to the Jews the cause of his coming. ²⁴ After his preaching some were persuaded, and some believed not. ³⁰ Yet he preacheth there two years.

AND when they were escaped, then they knew that the island^a was called Melita.

away their boat, and leaving it to the winds and waves. It may seem strange, that, after assuring them that none should perish in this shipwreck, the apostle should afterwards insist on retaining in the ship the mariners, as absolutely necessary to that end. But, as Mr. Scott remarks, "If the end was absolutely decreed, the means of attaining it were so decreed likewise; and the case is the same in things of still higher importance." Nothing can be more inconsistent with Scripture, or with Christian philosophy, than to suppose that the end is to be attained without means: this is the rock on which enthusiasts have often split.

The soldiers seem to have acted on principles as base and selfish as those of the sailors; for whereas the latter were for deserting the vessel, and leaving the rest to shift for themselves, the soldiers were for murdering the prisoners to prevent their escape, though Paul had assured them that all should get safe to land. The proposal, however, on the part of the soldiers, seems to disclose the awful secret, that such was the state of morals, even among the Romans, that it was their practice rather to murder their prisoners, though uncondemned, than by any means to suffer them to escape. A like practice

(we shudder to relate it) long obtained, and, we fear, is not yet extinct, among Europeans in the African slave trade, who drown the wretched Negroes by dozens and by scores, when they have more than they know what to do with.

Providence, however, had determined otherwise; and though the centurion expresses no horror or surprise at the proposal, yet his partiality to Paul and his companions determined him to save the whole; and therefore ordered that all who could swim should cast themselves first into the sea; and the rest, some on boards, (or planks), and some on broken pieces of the ship: and so it came to pass that they all escaped safe to land." Practical writers have considered this as an unfit emblem of the manner in which some Christians escape spiritual shipwreck: tossed about by a tempestuous world, their lives are full of trouble and peril, and their deaths perhaps embittered with anxiety and pain; yet, casting themselves on the mercy of God, through Christ, for his sake they are all saved at last. Happy those who land on the celestial shore, with smiling skies, and under a gale of holy and heavenly consolations.

CHAP. XXVIII. Ver. 1—16. Paul's shipwreck at Melita, and arrival at Rome.—It has been generally considered that

Ver. 38. The wheat into the sea.—[The Romans imported corn from Egypt, by way of Alexandria, to which this ship belonged; for a curious account of which see Bryant's Treatise on the Exemption.]—Barst. "with a (level) shore," convenient for landing. "A bay with a beach," says the late Mr. Newton, who was more conversant with nautical affairs than most commentators. See note on ch. xxviii. 1.

Ver. 40. Taken up—Margin. "cut"—the anchors, they committed themselves.—Margin. "they left them (the anchors) in the sea."—Loosed the rudder bands.—[The "bands of the rudders;" for large vessels in ancient times had two or more rudders, which were fastened to the ship by means of bands, or chains, by which they were hoisted out of the water when incapable of being used. These bands being loosed, the rudders would fall into their proper places, and serve to steer the vessel into the creek, which they had in view.—Holm.—Osborn. for "loosed."—The mainsail.—So our translators render the Greek word; but Gratus (who contends that the original in ver. 17, signifies the mainsail, and consequently that the mainsail was now gone, ver. 19), supposes that it was a sail near the fore part of the ship, answering either to what we call the foresail or the jib; which is more in accordance with the account that Stephens has collected from the best authorities.]

Ver. 41. Where two seas met.—Bochart. "washed on each side by the sea;" meaning on isthmus, or narrow neck of land; but Bryant understands the phrase to refer to a cape, or headland, the natural barrier of a harbour. See Parkhurst in Dithalassos. See note on chap. xxviii. 1.

Ver. 43. Willing to save Paul.—Because Paul was a Roman citizen, and could not be put to death without a trial and condemnation. Some suppose, that the Centurion had become either a Christian, or decidedly favourable to Christianity, and was confident of the innocence of Paul. Doddridge makes the following remark: "Thus God, for Paul's sake, not only saved all the rest of the ship's company from being lost in the sea, but kept the prisoners from being murdered according to the unjust and barbarous proposal of the soldiers, who could have thought of no worse scheme had they been all condemned murderers, and had these guards, instead of conveying them to their trial, been carrying them to the place of execution.—They which could swim.—Were commanded first to cast themselves into the sea and get to land; in order either to assist the others who were unable to swim, or if they were soldiers, to keep a guard over the prisoners.

Ver. 44. Some on boards, &c.—Notwithstanding the revelation made to Paul, "that there should be no loss of any man's life, but of the ship," ver. 22, and "there shall not a hair fall from the head of any," ver. 31, still it was incumbent on them to use diligently all the means of safety within their reach. The purposes of God always include the means requisite for the accomplishment of those purposes. It was necessary for the shipmen to remain on board and do their duty in managing the ship, ver. 30 and 31. It was necessary that the 22 persons in the ship should either swim or use the boards and broken pieces, or they would have failed of safety. Dependence upon God does not supersede activity. But when properly viewed, it is a strong motive to the vigorous performance of all that lies in our power.

CHAP. XXVIII. Ver. 1. Melita—Melita, now Malta, is an island in the Mediterranean sea, about fifty miles from the coast of Sicily, towards Africa; and is one immense rock of white soft limestone, twenty miles long, twelve in its greatest breadth, and sixty in circumference. It has alternately been possessed by the Phœnicians, Phœnicians, Greeks, Carthaginians, Romans, Goths, Saracens, Sicilians, Knights of St. John, French, and now by the English. The present population, including Turks, is 102,000, which, considering that the whole island is little else than a rock, is very large; being 67 to the square mile. "The space that in English supports 152 people, and in Holland 224, contains in Malta 1103." The rock is soft and friable; and much of it has been broken up, walled into terraces, and covered with soil, some of which has been imported from Sicily. It is an island of platforms or terraces; ascend a hill, and you look down upon a surface of the richest green; but look up, from the shore, and you see only the gray walls that support the terraces, and Malta seems to be one entire rock. There are many level and fertile spots, but the enclosures are small and the walls high. The fields seem at a distance like larger than pounds, in that pleasant country where there are pounds and field-drivers. The roads are mere lanes, generally too narrow for two carriages to pass abreast, and when one enters, a horn is sounded to keep others out; but most of the roads are too rough for wheels."—Modern Traveller.

ler. Some, however, with the learned Jacob Bryant, are of opinion, that this island was Melita in the Adriatic gulf, near Illyricum; but it may be sufficient to observe, that the course of the Alexandrian ship, first to Syracuse, and then to Rhegium, proves that it was the present Malta, as the proper course for the Illyrian Melita would have been first to Rhegium, before it reached Syracuse, which indeed it need not have gone to at all. On the identity of this with Malta, we subjoin the following letter, extracted from the New York Observer of August 21, 1824.

"My dear Christian Brother—You will perhaps think it strange, that I should reside more than two entire years in this island, without once visiting, during that period, the spot where it is supposed the apostle to the Gentiles was shipwrecked. A few days ago, for the first time, I visited what is here called 'St. Paul's Bay,' distant from Valetta, the principal city in the island, about six miles. In reading the account of the apostle's shipwreck as it is recorded in the Acts of the Apostles, I have always encountered difficulties which I could not overcome. The difficulty of understanding this account, is much greater in our English translation than in the original. In the English, we hear of their 'falling into a place where two seas met;' the original is (eis topon dithalasson) a place washed on both sides by the sea. On the N. W. side of St. Paul's Bay, there is a tongue of land extremely rocky, that extends half a mile, perhaps, or more, into the sea, in a direction from S. W. to N. E. This, of course, is washed on both sides, as often as the wind blows from the east, or N. E., which was anciently called Euroclydon, but at present Gregale. The sea, brought in by this wind, dashes upon the point of this tongue of land, is divided, and then sweeps along on both its sides. Upon this point the natives say the vessel struck, and its present appearance renders this opinion highly probable to my own mind, though others might think differently. The vessel struck on the rocks, probably, for I saw no sand near the place, and I believe there is none.

"Our translation informs us, that they discovered 'a certain creek with a shore.' This language, to me, conveys no idea. A creek without a shore would be a paradox. Who ever saw a creek without two shores? The original is not attended by this difficulty. They discovered a certain gulf, or bay, having a shore or a convenient landing place. Such in reality is the bay of St. Paul. It can be distinctly and easily seen from the ocean, that this bay has a good and convenient shore for landing, while many other parts of the island present to the ocean a bold and appalling shore, where it would be totally impracticable, if not impossible, to land, especially during a storm.

"The depth of water in this bay is not great, for you can distinctly see the bottom when half a mile, or more, from the land; and as you approach the land the depth is gradually diminished, until you would imagine that it were possible to wade, while you are several rods distant from the shore. The bottom is solid rock, and not sand. The bay extends inland, I should think, (for we did not measure it,) at least a mile, and probably considerably farther, and is, perhaps, half a mile in width.

"There is a small church standing on the spot where it is said the apostle gathered the bundle of sticks and put them on the fire, whence the viper came forth and fastened on his hand. A bundle of sticks might easily be gathered now near the same spot, from the branches of fig trees, carob trees, and other small trees, growing within the neighbouring enclosures.

"Our visit to this bay was by water, and from nearly the same direction in which the apostle probably was driven by the furious cyclone. This bay so well answers to the description given in the Acts of the place where Paul was wrecked, that I can entertain no doubt that it is the same. It has certainly all the prominent features of the place, where the pen of inspiration informs us, the ship which bore the apostle was broken in pieces by the violence of the waves. I am not aware, that any other place is pointed out in the island, where that remarkable event is supposed to have happened.

"If we reflect on the marvellous preservation of the whole company on board, amounting to 276 persons, wrecked on a tremendous storm upon an unknown coast, the preservation of the apostle from the mortal bite of the viper, and the succeeding miracles which he afterwards wrought in the island, thus exciting universal attention, it seems to me highly probable, and almost certain, that the spot where he was wrecked would be ever afterwards remembered. "The holy apostle and his shipwrecked companions have gone, ages ago, to their long home; the vipers, which then infested the island, have long since disappeared; but every winter hears still the loud roar of the fierce Euroclydon, and the shores feel the terrible shock of the mountain waves which it sets in motion;—but, alas! though the same winds still blow, and the same ocean

2 And the barbarous ^b people showed us no little kindness: for they kindled a fire, and received us every one, because of the present rain, and because of the cold.

3 ¶ And when Paul had gathered a bundle of sticks, and laid them on the fire, there came a viper out of the heat, and fastened on his hand.

4 And when the barbarians saw the venomous beast hang on his hand, they said among themselves, No doubt ^a this man is a murderer, whom, though he hath escaped the sea, yet vengeance suffereth not to live.

5 And he shook off the beast into the fire, and felt ^c no harm.

6 Howbeit they looked when he should have swollen, or fallen down dead suddenly: but after they had looked a great while, and saw no harm come to him, they changed their minds, and said ^d that he was a god.

7 ¶ In the same quarters were possessions of the chief man of the island, whose name was Publius; who received us, and lodged us three days courteously.

8 And it came to pass, that the father of Publius lay sick of a fever, and of a bloody flux:

this Melita was the well-known isle of Malta, in the Mediterranean Sea; but, a few years since, the very learned and ingenious Jacob Bryant opposed this idea, and strenuously contended, that the Melita here named must intend not Malta, but Melida, a smaller island in the Adriatic Gulf, or Gulf of Venice; and Prebendary Townsend has presented his objections and arguments in a manner so forcible, that we were about adopting it, till we met with a letter from Rev. Daniel Temple, who has lately left the island, after residing there more than two years. His letter we have subjoined in the notes. This has fully inclined us to the former opinion, that Melita was Malta.

Several objections, however, have been raised against the tradition, that St. Paul's Melita is Malta, some of which are obviated in our notes. That which is chiefly insisted on seems to be, that the inhabitants of Malta were at this time far from being "barbarians," as here called, Malta being not only a place of trade, but containing elegant buildings and curiosities of art, as well as nature. To this we would reply, that the term barbarous was applied by the Greeks to all who spoke languages which themselves did not understand; and these were evidently not barbarians in conduct or behaviour. If we compare with this the case of a vessel wrecked on the coast of Cornwall, only in the last century, and the treatment which the crew would then and there have met with, we fear it would furnish a much stronger argument that Britons were then barbarians, than this history does, that the Maltese were so eighteen centuries before; for we read here of no wreckers flocking to the shore to plunder. As to the argument from vipers being found there, that the country was not yet cleared from wood, we believe that these animals are not even yet extinct in England; but the history before us presents one viper only, and that was thought so extraordinary, that they concluded it must be a visitation from heaven to punish murder. The people, though heathens, were not savages, but, on the contrary, displayed that kindness and hospitality which would have disgraced the inhabitants of no part of either Italy or Greece. When the strangers landed, they made a fire to warm them, and, as Paul expresses it, "showed no little kindness." They were afterwards, at least Paul and his companions, received into the house of Publius, the chief man on the island; and when Paul had cured him of a fever, this brought other sick persons to him with various disorders, and they discovered more gratitude and good sense than the apostle seems to have met with elsewhere—"Who honoured us (saith he) with many honours, and when we departed they laden us with such things as were necessary."

Here Paul and his companions, as also the centurion and his company, stopped three months, and then sailed towards Rome in the ship Castor and Pollux, (or the sign Geminus in the Zodiac.) By the way, however, they stopped three days at Syracuse, and seven at Puteoli. From thence they went on as far as Appii Forum and the Three Taverns, (a place so called,) where sundry brethren met them from Rome; whom, when Paul saw, he thanked God and took courage: and it is well when our Christian intercourse has the happy effect to excite our gratitude toward God, and to animate us in our Christian warfare.

Paul having arrived at Rome, accompanied by his Christian friends, the centurion who had treated him with the greatest kindness through all his journey, now surrendered him and his fellow-prisoners to the captain of the guard; doubtless, not without a recommendation to his kind attentions. Indeed, such was the conduct and behaviour of the apostle, and such the gracious protection of his heavenly Master, that wherever he went he appears to have found a friend. In the present into whom ^b Paul entered in, and prayed, and laid ^b his hands on him, and healed him.

9 So when this was done, others also, which had diseases in the island, came, and were healed:

10 Who also honoured ^c us with many honours; and when we departed, they laden us with such things ^d as were necessary.

11 ¶ And after three months we departed in a ship of Alexandria, which had wintered in the isle, whose sign was Castor and Pollux.

12 And landing at Syracuse, we tarried there three days.

13 And from thence we fetched a compass, and came to Rhegium: and after one day the south wind blew, and we came the next day to Puteoli:

14 Where we found brethren, and were desired to tarry with them seven days: and so we went toward Rome.

15 And from thence, when the brethren heard of us, they came ^k to meet us as far as Appii Forum, and the Three Taverns: whom when Paul saw, he thanked God, and took ^k courage.

16 And when we came to Rome, the centurion delivered the prisoners to the captain of still roars, the same gospel which Paul preached, is preached here no longer; the same Saviour whom he adored, I fear, is known and adored only by a very few.

"After reading this short description of St. Paul's Bay, and then glancing at the present state of the island, you will unite, I trust, with me, in praying, that God would send hither another apostle, holy and zealous as Paul, to preach again the unsearchable riches of Christ, as the natives believe Paul did, when he was sent by Divine Providence to visit this island eighteen hundred years ago."

I remain your very affectionate brother.

"D TEMPLE"

Ver. 2. The barbarous people.—Bar, a Chaldee word, which signifies without. Whence Bar, a stranger, or one of another country. In the Samaritan version it is Bari, a foreigner; so that the word being doubled, as Barbari, denotes a great foreigner. The inhabitants of this island, according to Bochart, were originally a colony of Phœnicians, or Carthaginians, and had still their ancient language in use, which, though mixed with some Greek and Latin words, was unintelligible to the Greeks, who called all barbarians whose language was unintelligible.—Orient. Lit. No. 1459.

Ver. 3. A viper.—The most venomous and fatal of all serpents, and thought by the ancients to be sent by heaven to punish the most enormous crimes.

Ver. 4. Beast.—Rather, animal, or creature.

Ver. 5. Said that he was a god.—But it seems an unlucky conjecture of Grotius and Whitby, that they took him for Hercules, since he was a man of small stature, and weak bodily frame. We should rather have guessed Apollo, or Mercury, as in ch. xiv. 12.

Ver. 10. Who honoured us with many honours.—That is, bestowed many gifts upon us. "Manoah said to the angel of the Lord, What is thy name, that when thy words shall come to pass, we may do thee honour?" that is, may give thee a gift or do thee honour with some gift. See also Num. xiii. 16. and 1 Tim. v. 3.—Lightfoot.

Ver. 11. Whose sign—i. e. the name of the vessel, which was generally dedicated to some deity.

Ver. 12. Syracuse.—[Syracuse was the capital of Sicily, situated on the eastern side of the island, 72 miles S. by E. of Messina, and about 112 of Palermo. In its ancient state of splendour, it was twenty-two and a half miles in extent, according to Strabo, and such was its opulence, that, when the Tomasi took it, they found more riches in it, than they did at Carthage.]—B.

clined it must be a visitation from heaven to punish murder. The people, though heathens, were not savages, but, on the contrary, displayed that kindness and hospitality which would have disgraced the inhabitants of no part of either Italy or Greece. When the strangers landed, they made a fire to warm them, and, as Paul expresses it, "showed no little kindness." They were afterwards, at least Paul and his companions, received into the house of Publius, the chief man on the island; and when Paul had cured him of a fever, this brought other sick persons to him with various disorders, and they discovered more gratitude and good sense than the apostle seems to have met with elsewhere—"Who honoured us (saith he) with many honours, and when we departed they laden us with such things as were necessary."

Here Paul and his companions, as also the centurion and his company, stopped three months, and then sailed towards Rome in the ship Castor and Pollux, (or the sign Geminus in the Zodiac.) By the way, however, they stopped three days at Syracuse, and seven at Puteoli. From thence they went on as far as Appii Forum and the Three Taverns, (a place so called,) where sundry brethren met them from Rome; whom, when Paul saw, he thanked God and took courage: and it is well when our Christian intercourse has the happy effect to excite our gratitude toward God, and to animate us in our Christian warfare.

Paul having arrived at Rome, accompanied by his Christian friends, the centurion who had treated him with the greatest kindness through all his journey, now surrendered him and his fellow-prisoners to the captain of the guard; doubtless, not without a recommendation to his kind attentions. Indeed, such was the conduct and behaviour of the apostle, and such the gracious protection of his heavenly Master, that wherever he went he appears to have found a friend. In the present in-"Syracuse is built on the extremity of a point of land, (the ancient island of Ortygia,) the neck of which is so fortified that to go out we passed seven gates. Without the gates is the place of the old cities, which had 1,200,000 people, but of which there is now hardly one stone upon another. The plough has not passed over them, for the Sicilians have too little to do with that venerable implement, but the goats browse among them. Two or three columns have been raised, (I think,) and now stand upon their bases. Wherever the earth is turned up, coins, medals, or statues, are found, and old roads may be had for about their value as copper."—Modern Traveller.

Ver. 13. Rhegium.—[Rhegium, now Reggio, was a maritime city and promontory in Italy, opposite Messina.—Puteoli.—Now Pozzuoli, is an ancient sea-port of Campania, in the kingdom of Naples, about eight miles S. W. of that city, standing on a hill in a creek opposite to Baia.]—Bagster.

Ver. 14. Tarry with them seven days.—St. Paul and the rest abide at Puteoli (a city, a large great mart town, where there are havens for ships made by art and labour seven days, at the entreaty of the Christians of that place, which redounded to the credit of the Centurion, whose leave must have been obtained in that case, so that his yielding so far may somewhat argue, that he favoured Christianity).—Lightfoot.

Ver. 15. Appii Forum, and The Three Taverns.—The former was a market in the Appian Way, both which received their names from the Appian family; and probably a B-M-market, like Billingsgate, from its being chiefly inhabited by watermen; as "The Three Taverns," by publicans or unkeepers. Neither place was far from Rome, but the Three Taverns nearest. Via Appia and Appii Forum are much spoken of in authors; but the mention of the Three Taverns is not so frequent. There is mention, in Zonaras, of the Three victualling houses; where, Seventy the emperor was strangled by the treason of Maximianus Herodius, and Maximian his son.—Lightfoot.

Ver. 16. Rome.—[Rome, the capital of Italy, and once of the whole world, is situated on the banks of the Tiber, about 16 miles from the sea, 410 miles S. S. E. of Vienna, 600 S. E. of Paris, 730 E. by N. of Madrid, 260 W. of Constantinople, and 780 S. E. of London.]—Bagster.

The captain of the pretorian band.—"The guard."—Doddridge.—"The prefect or captain of the pretorian band." It was customary for prisoners who were brought to Rome to be delivered to the prefect or commander of the pretorian cohorts, who had the charge of the state prisoners; as appears from the instance of Agrippa, who was taken into custody by Macro, the pretorian prefect who succeeded Sejanus.—Orient.

the guard; but Paul was suffered to dwell by himself ^a with a soldier that kept him.

17 ¶ And it came to pass, that after three days Paul called the chief of the Jews together: and when they were come together, he said unto them, Men and brethren, though ^a I have committed nothing against the people, or customs of our fathers, yet was I delivered ^a prisoner from Jerusalem into the hands of the Romans.

18 Who, when ^b they had examined me, would have let me go, because there was no cause of death in me.

19 But when the Jews spake against it, I was constrained to appeal ^a unto Cæsar; not that I had aught to accuse my nation of.

20 For this cause therefore have I called for you, to see you, and to speak with you: because that for the hope ^a of Israel I am bound with this ^a chain.

21 And they said unto him, We neither received letters out of Judea concerning thee, neither any of the brethren that came showed or spake any harm of thee.

22 But we desire to hear of thee what thou thinkest: for as concerning this sect, we know that every where ^a it is spoken against.

23 ¶ And when they had appointed him a day, there came many to him into his ^a lodging; to whom he ^a expounded and testified the kingdom of God, persuading them concern-stance, Paul was suffered to dwell in his own hired house, under the care of a single soldier, and all his friends were allowed to visit him.

Ver. 17-31. Paul appeals to the Jews, and afterwards to the Gentiles.—Paul's object was one only, wherever he might go. It was to proclaim Jesus as the Messiah and Saviour of the world, both to Jews and Gentiles. Accordingly, he no sooner arrives at Rome, than he calls together his countrymen, tells them the reason of his coming thither, and the true ground of his being persecuted by his brethren.—“For the hope of Israel I am bound with this chain!” exhibiting the chain which bound him to a Roman soldier. This expression, “the hope of Israel,” may be applied both to the person of the Messiah, who was truly “the hope of Israel,” and to the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead, and especially of Christ, which was the hope for which he had repeatedly been “called in question.”

His brethren expressed a readiness to hear him; and accordingly, on an appointed day, came to him at his lodging, when he “testified to them the kingdom of God,” that is, of the Messiah; “persuading them concerning Jesus, both out of the law of Moses, and out of the prophets, from morning until evening.” And the consequence was, as generally has been Cust. No. 1351.—To dwell by himself.—Doddridge, “to dwell apart from other persons, in a house of his own.”—With a soldier—i. e. chained to one. See note on ch. xxvi. 29.

Ver. 20. This chain.—[That is, the chain with which he was bound to the “soldier that kept him,” (ver. 16.) a mode of custody which Lardner has shown was in use among the Romans. It is in exact conformity, therefore, with the truth of St. Paul's situation at this time, that he declares himself to be “an ambassador in chains,” (Eph. vi. 20;) and the exactness is the more remarkable, as a chain is no where used in the singular number to express any other kind of custody. See Bagster.]

Ver. 25. Well spake the Holy Ghost, &c.—This passage from Isa. vi. 9, 10, is quoted in the New Testament oftener than any other—six times; namely, in each of the gospels, here, and in ch. xi. 8; yet in such variety of expression, as plainly proves the apostles did not confine themselves exactly either to the words of the original, (Hebrew,) or the Greek version.

Ver. 30. In his own hired house.—Lardner proves from Ulpian, that the CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF ACTS.

[THE Acts of the Apostles is a most valuable portion of Divine Revelation; and, independently of its universal reception in the Christian church as an authentic and inspired production, it bears the most satisfactory internal evidence of its authenticity and truth. It is not a made up history: the language and manner of every speaker are different; and the same speaker is different in his manner according to the audience he addresses. St. Luke's long address upon St. Paul, and his having been an eye witness of many of the facts which he has recorded, independently of his divine inspiration, render him a most respectable and credible historian; and his medical knowledge, for he is allowed to have been a physician, enabled him both to form a proper judgment of the miraculous cures which were performed by St. Paul, and to give an authentic and circumstantial detail of them. The plainness and simplicity of the narrative are also strong circumstances in its favour. The writer evidently appears to have been very honest and impartial; and to have set down, very fairly, the objections which were made to Christianity, both by Jews and Heathens, and the reflections which were cast upon it, and upon its first preachers. He has likewise, with a just and honest freedom, mentioned the weaknesses, faults, and prejudices, both of the Apostles and their converts. There is also a great and remarkable harmony between the occasional hints dispersed throughout St. Paul's epistles, and this history; so that the Acts is the best clue to guide us in studying the Epistles of that Apostle. The other parts of the New Testament are likewise in perfect unison with this history, and tend greatly to confirm it; and the doctrines and principles are every where the same. The Gospels close with a reference to those things recorded in the Acts, particularly the promise of the Holy Spirit, which we know from this history, was poured ing Jesus, both ^a out of the law of Moses, and out of the prophets, from morning till evening.

24 And some ^a believed the things which were spoken, and some believed not.

25 And when they agreed not among themselves, they departed, after that Paul had spoken one word, Well spake the Holy Ghost by Esaias ^a the prophet unto our fathers,

26 Saying, Go unto this people, and say, Hearing ye shall hear, and shall not understand; and seeing ye shall see, and not perceive:

27 For the heart of this people is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes have they closed; lest they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and understand with their heart, and should be converted, and I should heal them.

28 Be it known therefore unto you, that the salvation of God is sent unto the ^a Gentiles, and that they will hear it.

29 And when he had said these words, the Jews departed, and had great reasoning among themselves.

30 ¶ And Paul dwelt two whole years in his own hired house, and received all that came in unto him, 31 Preaching ^a the kingdom of God, and teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ, with all confidence, no man forbidding him.

found, some believed, and others believed not. To the latter he applied the same Scripture (Isaiah vi. 9.) that our Lord had applied to them at Jerusalem, about thirty years before.—“The heart of this people is waxed gross,” &c. (see Matt. xiii. 14, 15;) and in consequence confined his chief attention to the Gentiles. Thus Paul dwelt two years in his own hired house, preaching with all confidence, no man forbidding him.

Paul's arrival in Rome is dated in Bible chronology, in A. D. 63, and by others two years earlier; but his Epistle to the Romans is supposed to have been written in 57 or 58; and even then we hear that their faith was spoken of throughout the world, so that the gospel must have been planted in the capital of the Roman empire at a very early period, though by whom is not recorded. On Paul's approaching the city, we find a deputation from the church went out to meet and welcome him, by whom he was much encouraged and refreshed. While here, beside constant preaching, both to Jews and Gentiles, he appears to have written his Epistles to the Ephesians, Philippians, and Colossians; probably that to the Hebrews, and more certainly that to Philemon. His second to Timothy was also written from Rome, but at a later period, and but just before his death.

proconsul was to judge whether a person under accusation was to be thrown into prison, or delivered to a soldier to keep, or committed to sureties, or trusted on his parole of honour. It appears from hence, that the persecution of Christians at Rome was not then begun; and perhaps Paul's friends in Nero's family, (Phil. iv. 22) used their interest with the Emperor to procure him this liberty.—Doddridge.

Much of Paul's time was also occupied in corresponding; and at the end of two years, it is highly probable he was set at liberty. Whether he went again into the East, is doubtful; but Clement of Rome (in his first epistle) expressly says, that he preached in the West to its utmost bounds, which must include Spain; and Theodoret adds, that he went to the islands of the sea, of which Britain is understood to be one; and there is the best authority to believe that, after this, he returned to Rome, where, according to primitive tradition, he was beheaded by order of Nero, A. D. 66, at Aqua Salvia, three miles from Rome, and interred in the Via Ostensis, two miles from the city, where Constantine erected a church.

out by Christ upon his disciples after his ascension; and the Epistles of the other Apostles, as well as those of St. Paul, plainly suppose, that these facts had actually occurred which are related in the Acts of the Apostles. So that the history of the Acts is one of the most important parts of the Sacred History; for, without it, neither the Gospels nor Epistles could have been so clearly understood; but, by the aid of it, the whole scheme of the Christian Revelation is set before us in a clear and easy view. Lastly, even the incidental circumstances mentioned by St. Luke, correspond so exactly, and without any previous view of such correspondence, with the accounts of the best ancient historians, both Jews and Heathens, that no person who had forged such a history in later ages, could have had the same external confirmation; but he must have betrayed himself by alluding to some customs or opinions which have since sprung up, or by misrepresenting some circumstance, or using some phrase or expression not then in use. The plea of forgery, therefore, in later ages, cannot be allowed; and, if St. Luke had published his history at so early a period, when some of the Apostles, and many other persons concerned in the transactions, were alive, and his account had not been true, he would have exposed himself to an easy confutation, and certain infamy. Since, therefore, the Acts of the Apostles are in themselves consistent and uniform; the incidental relations agreeable to the best historians that have come down to us; and the main facts, supported and confirmed by the other books of the New Testament, as well as by the unanimous testimony of the ancient fathers, we may justly conclude, that if any history of former times deserves credit, the Acts of the Apostles ought to be received and credited; and, if the history of the Acts of the Apostles be true, Christianity cannot be false.—Bagster.

INTRODUCTION TO THE EPISTLES OF ST. PAUL.

(HAVING gone through the historical books of the New Testament, what remains (except the last) are Epistolary; and by far the larger part of these were written by the Apostle to the Gentiles. The Epistles, especially Paul's, being addressed to persons or societies already initiated into the principles of Christianity, enter more deeply into the distinguishing doctrines of the Gospel, and the controversies which in that early age were raised thereon, and particularly by Jewish converts, who were extremely loth to relax their prejudices in favour of the Jewish institutions.

Much has been said for and against Paul's style. Dr. Macknight, who objects to some of the strong language of the learned Beza, still admits that it contains beauty and the highest character, and passages to which it would be difficult to find any of superior merit among the most admired classical writers of Greece and Rome.

"Paul," says Mr. Locke, "is full of the matter he treats; and writes with warmth, which usually neglects method, and these partitions and pauses which men, educated in the schools of rhetoricians, usually observe." It must be remembered, that Paul's object was not to advance his own fame as a writer, but the glory of his Saviour; that classical writers did not always furnish words or phrases sufficient to explain the mysteries of the Gospel; that the connexion between the New and Old Testaments often led him necessarily to adopt Hebrew allusions, terms, and phrases, which, though they may be considered as blemishes in Greek composition, form some of his chief beauties as a Christian teacher; and who he to them who have the pressing garlands of human eloquence on the cross of Christ, thereby any degree to be taken from our view.

The Epistle to the Hebrews, though it does not bear the author's name, is now universally ascribed to St. Paul, and was written from Italy, and probably from Rome, in the years 62 or 63. Thus, with the Epistles to the Romans and Galatians, are perhaps the most difficult to explain, as referring frequently to the prophetic writings and to Jewish literature.

We shall only here add, that in addition to Doddridge and other Expositors of the New Testament, we shall, throughout the Apostolical Epistles, carefully compare them with the popular versions ("New Translations and Commentaries") of Macknight and Boothroyd, and pay a particular attention to those writers who have devoted their attention to single Epistles only.

TABLE OF ST. PAUL'S EPISTLES.

Order of the Books	In the English Bible According to date.	To whom written.	Where written.		When written.
			According to margin.	According to Mr. Turner.	In our Bible.	In Mr. Horne.
1	5	To the Romans.	Corinth.	Corinth.	A. D. 60	A. D. 57 or 6
2	4	1st to the Corinthians.	Philippi.	Ephesus	59	57
3	6	2d to the Corinthians.	Philippi.	Macedonia.	60	58
4	3	To the Galatians.	Rome.	Corinth.	58	52 or 3
5	7	To the Ephesians.	Rome.	Rome.	64	61
6	8	To the Philippians.	Rome.	Rome.	64	62 or 9
7	9	To the Colossians.	Rome.	Rome.	64	62
8	1	1st to the Thessalonians.	Athens.	Corinth.	54	51
9	2	2d to the Thessalonians.	Athens.	Corinth.	54	52
10	12	1st to Timothy.	Laodicea.	Macedonia.	65	61
11	14	2d to Timothy.	Rome.	Rome.	66	63
12	13	To Titus.	Neapolis.	Macedonia.	65	61
13	10	To Philemon.	Rome.	Rome.	61	62 or 3
14	11	To the Hebrews.	Italy.	perhaps Rome.	64	62 or 3

Considerable additional interest will be felt in the Epistles of Paul, by simply reading them in the chronological order in which they were written. The above table gives that order, according to the best information which at so late a period can be collected. A knowledge of the place from whence the letter was written, also the occasion which called it forth, throw much light upon its contents. The place is named in the table, and the occasion, when known, will be found either in the introductory remarks or the notes.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE ROMANS.

(THAT St. Paul was the author of the Epistle to the Romans is proved, not only by the whole current of Christian antiquity, but by the most satisfactory internal evidence. We find that it was dictated by the Apostle in the Greek language to his amanuensis Tertius, (ch. xvi. 22,) and was forwarded to the Church at Rome by Phoebe, a deaconess of Cenchreae, a port of Corinth, (ch. xvi. 1.) It is farther evident that it was written from that city, from his mentioning Gaius with whom he lodged at Corinth, (ch. xvi. 23. 1 Co i. 14,) as well as Erastus the chamberlain of that city, (2 Tim. iv. 20.) It also appears that it was written there, at the time that the Apostle was preparing to take the contributions of the churches to Jerusalem, (ch. xv. 25—27,) and consequently, the most probable date assigned to this Epistle is A. D. 58, which is supported by Bishop Tomline, Lardner, Lord Barrington, Benson, and others.

It is not certain at what time, or by whom, the gospel was first preached at Rome; but it has been conjectured, with much probability, that it was carried thither by some of the Jews who were converted on the day of Pentecost (Ac i. 10). St. Paul himself had not yet visited that city; but being made fully acquainted with the circumstances of the church there by Aquila and Priscilla, (ch. xvi. 3.) he deemed it proper to adopt this method of establishing believers in the faith, and of giving them such a comprehensive view of the Christian religion, as might guard them against the insinuations of false teachers of various descriptions.—Tagster.

CHAPTER I.

1 Paul commendeth his calling to the Romans, 9 and his desire to come to them. 16 What his gospel is, and the righteousness which it sheweth. 18 God is angry with all manner of sin. 21 What were the sins of the Gentiles

PAUL, a servant of ^a Jesus Christ, called ^b to be an apostle, separated ^c unto the gospel of God,

2 (Which he had promised afore by his prophets in the holy scriptures.)

3 Concerning his Son Jesus Christ our Lord, which was made ^d of the seed of David according to the flesh;

4 And ^e declared ^f to be the Son of God with power, according to the ^g spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead:

5 By whom we have received grace and

A M 402.
A. D. 58.

a Ac 9:23
b Ac 9:15
c 1 Co 1:1
d Ac 13:2
e 1 Tim 1:5
f Ps 9:56
g det. missal
h 13:33, 34
i Re 1:12
j He 9:14
k or, to the obedience of faith.
l Av 16:56
m 1 Co 12
n Th 3:7
o 1 Co 13:3
p &c
q 2 Pe 1:2

apostleship, ^h for obedience to the faith among all nations, for his name:

6 Among whom are ye also the called of Jesus Christ:

7 To all that be in Rome, beloved of God, called ⁱ to be saints: Grace ^k to you, and peace from God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ.

8 First, I thank my God through Jesus Christ for you all, that your faith ^l is spoken of throughout the whole world.

9 For God is my witness, whom ^m I serve ⁿ with my spirit in the gospel of his Son, that without ceasing ^o I make mention of you always in my prayers;

10 Making request, if by any means now at

CHAP. I. VER. 1—16. Paul glories in preaching the Gospel, both to Jews and Gentiles.—"St. Paul commences this Epistle (as Cor observes) by a short but comprehensive inscription, in which he asserts his authority as an apostle, endeavours to impress the Jews with a favourable opinion of the gospel, and gives an interesting summary of its principal doctrines, and of the privileges of real Christians. He then proceeds to state his ardent affection for the Christians at Rome, and his earnest desire to preach to them; which naturally leads him to refer to the grand distinguishing doctrine of the gospel, Justification by faith, a topic which he fully explains and vindicates in several of the subsequent chapters of this Epistle." In the introduction to this, as to most of his Epistles, the apostle fails not to introduce the dear and honoured name which he adored, as the foundation of his hope and joy; Jesus, the Son of God, who "was made (or born) of the seed of David, according to the flesh;" but "declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the Spirit of Holiness, (or the Holy Spirit,) by the resurrection from the dead."

The apostle proceeds to state, how much he rejoiced in finding that their faith was spoken of "throughout the whole world;" that is, so far as the gospel had been preached—namely, the boundaries of the Roman empire, which was, "all the world" to them. (See note on Luke ii. 1.) And at the same time he assures them, with what persevering earnestness, he prayed for their spiritual prosperity, and how earnestly he desired to visit them, that he might impart to them some spiritual gifts, which the Holy Ghost had intrusted him with, for the church's be-

CHAP. I. VER. 1. Paul, &c.—It was anciently the practice to prefix the name, instead of subscribing it at the end of letters, as is now customary.—Called to be an apostle—Paul not being converted till after the death of Jesus, the judging teachers were ready to dispute his title to be an apostle, which seems to be the reason of his so constantly insisting on the heavenly vision, wherein he was called by Christ himself to the apostleship. See Acts xvi. 19—23.

Ver. 4. And declared—Doddridge, "determinately marked out." Boothroyd, "proved to be the Son of God with power." Cor., "powerfully demonstrated." &c.—The spirit of holiness—(or Holy Spirit.) Doddridge says, "It seems to me no little agreeable to the style of Scripture in general, to call the divine nature of Christ the spirit of holiness, (or the Holy Spirit,) that, highly as I esteem the many learned and accurate commentators who have given it this turn, I rather refer it to the operation of the Spirit of God in the production of Christ's body, by which means the opposition between "according to the flesh," and "according to the spirit," will be preserved; the one referring to the materials acted upon, the other to the divine and miraculous agent. See Luke i. 35.—By the resurrection—Macknight, "By (his) resurrection."

Ver. 5. Grace and apostleship—Doddridge, "Grace and an apostolical mission."—For obedience to the faith—In order to promote the obedience of faith—"Prof. Stuart."

Ver. 7. Called to be saints—As in ver. 1. Paul is not said to be "called an apostle," but "called to be" one: so here, these Romans are not merely called saints, but "called" by the grace of God "to be such;"—"the called of Christ Jesus." See chap. viii. 20.

Ver. 8. Throughout the whole world—i. e. throughout the whole Roman empire. See note, Luke ii. 1.

length I might have a prosperous journey by the will of God to come unto you.

11 For I long to see you, that I may impart unto you some spiritual gift, to the end ye may be established;

12 That is, that I may be comforted together with you by the mutual faith both of you and me.

13 Now I would not have you ignorant, brethren, that oftentimes I purposed to come unto you, (but was let hitherto,) that I might have some fruit among you also, even as among other Gentiles.

14 I am debtor both to the Greeks, and to the Barbarians; both to the wise, and to the unwise.

15 So, as much as in me is, I am ready to preach the gospel to you that are at Rome also.

16 For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek.

17 For therein is the righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith: as it is written, The just shall live by faith.

18 For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men, who hold the truth in unrighteousness;

19 Because that which may be known of God is manifest in them; for God hath showed it unto them.

20 For the invisible things of him from the nefit. For in this respect he considered himself as indebted to all nations, and to all classes of society, to whom he owed his utmost exertions in the propagation of the gospel: "for (adds he) I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ." And why not? "Because it is the power of God unto salvation, to every one that believeth." The Jewish Rabbies, indeed, were ashamed of it, for it was to them "a stumbling-block;" and the Greeks, because it was to them "foolishness;" but Paul, on the contrary, gloried in it, because it is, "to them that believe, the wisdom of God, and the power of God;" that is, a way of salvation in which the wisdom and power of God, as well as his mercy, are eminently displayed, both to Jews and Gentiles. In bringing this subject home to our own times, and to our own bosoms, it must be confessed, that there are many professing Christians who are both ashamed of, and a disgrace to the gospel: but those who are not a disgrace to it—that is, those who believe and act upon its principles—will never be ashamed of it; because, 1. It meets and satisfies all their necessities: they are sinners, such as Christ came to save. 2. It provides them a guide in all difficulties, namely, the Holy Spirit, whom the Father has promised to all who ask him. 3. It animates and encourages them under all their fears and trials; for it is by the gospel that "life and immortality are brought to light." 4. In its tendency and effects, it affords the brightest evidence of its own divinity. (See Dr. Watts' Sermon, xv. xvi. xvii.—three of the best discourses ever printed.)

Ver. 17—25. The necessity of faith, and awful consequences of infidelity.—In the gospel of Christ, as a divine scheme of salvation, is the righteousness of God gloriously revealed. 1. It is displayed and illustrated in the doctrine of Christ's atonement for human guilt; and, 2. In the sanctification of believers by the influences of the Holy Spirit.

Thus it is that "the righteousness of God is gradually revealed," or (as it is here expressed) "from faith to faith;" that is, from one degree of faith to another, till it is completely revealed, and crowned with everlasting life. Thus it is that our salvation, "all through, from one end to the other," as Locke expresses it, is founded on faith in God through Christ; accord-

Ver. 11. Some spiritual gift.—This refers probably to a miraculous gift. See 1 Co. xii. 1—3; xiv. 1, 12.
Ver. 12. By the mutual faith both of you and me.—A pious soul, says Calvin, relies not to seek confirmation even from mere beginners in knowledge. There is none so poor in the church of Christ, that he cannot add to our stores. We are hindered by pride from availing ourselves of this advantage.

Ver. 13. But was let—i. e. hindered.

Ver. 16. For it is—Cox, Boothroyd, &c., "Because it is," &c.

Ver. 17. For therein is the righteousness, &c.—Macknight, "For the righteousness of God is revealed in it, in order to (produce) faith," &c. The righteousness of God is the justification or pardoning mercy bestowed on sinners who are under the curse of the divine law.—The just shall live by faith.—This appears to be quoted from Hab. ii. 4, and very nearly corresponds with the reading of the LXX. To "live by" (or "from," Gr. ek) faith, implies, that the righteous (or justified) man derives his safety here, and his salvation hereafter, from his faith in God.

Ver. 18. Who hold the truth in unrighteousness.—The original verb means either to gain hold, or to keep hold; and the latter, sometimes in the

A. M. cir.
4062.
A. D. cir.
58.

p Ja. 4. 15.

q c. 15. 23, 32.

r c. 15. 29.

s or, in.

t 2 Pe. 1. 1.

u 1 Co. 9. 16.

v Ma. 8. 38.

2 Ti. 1. 8.

w Je. 23. 29.

1 Co. 1. 18.

x Ma. 16. 16.

y Ac. 3. 26.

z c. 21. 25.

a Hab. 2. 4.

b Ep. 5. 6.

c or, to them.

d Ju. 1. 9.

e Pa. 19. 1.

&c.

f or, that they may be.

g Je. 2. 5.

h Ep. 4. 17.

i Je. 8. 9.

i Is. 40. 15.

Ec. 8. 10.

j Ps. 81. 12.

2 Th. 2. 11.

k Am. 2. 4.

l or, rather.

m Ep. 5. 12.

n or, to acknowledge.

ledge.

creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things * that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead; † so that they are without excuse:

21 Because that, when they knew God, they glorified him not as God, neither were thankful; but became ‡ vain in their imaginations, and their foolish heart was darkened.

22 Professing themselves to be wise, they † became fools,

23 And changed the glory of the uncorruptible God into an image † made like to corruptible man, and to birds, and four-footed beasts, and creeping things.

24 Wherefore God also gave † them up to uncleanness through the lusts of their own hearts, to dishonour their own bodies between themselves:

25 Who changed the truth of God † into a lie, and worshipped and served the creature † more than the Creator, who is blessed for ever. Amen.

26 For this cause God gave them up unto vile † affections: for even their women did change the natural use into that which is against nature:

27 And likewise also the men, leaving the natural use of the woman, burned in their lust one toward another; men with men working that which is unseemly, and receiving in themselves that recompense of their error which was meet.

28 And even as they did not like † to retain ingly, as the prophet Habakkuk assured the Jews, that by believing in his word of promise, they should escape the miseries of the Babylonish captivity; so believers trusting in Christ shall be delivered from the miseries of sin, and of eternal death.

And as the righteousness of God is revealed in the salvation of believers, so it is awfully displayed in the punishment of unbelievers. "For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men." The former term, [ungodliness,] when used alone, may comprehend every kind of sin; but when used with unrighteousness or lasciviousness, (which plainly relates to the second table of the law,) refers more particularly, as we conceive, to impiety, or sins against God, comprehending the opposite crimes of atheism and idolatry. In the former, [atheism,] men were without excuse, because, even "from the creation of the world, the invisible things of him," [God,] namely, "his eternal power and Godhead, were clearly seen; so that they [who denied his being and perfections] were utterly without excuse." For as every work of art (a watch or clock, for instance) clearly proves the previous existence of an artist; so, much more does the immense machinery of nature demonstrate the being and perfections of the Creator.

The far greater part of the heathen world fell into the contrary error of idolatry and polytheism. "Professing themselves to be wise"—that is, to be sophists and philosophers—"they became fools;" and such fools, that they "changed the glory of the incorruptible God into an image [or images] made like to corruptible man, and to birds, and four-footed beasts, and creeping things;" for instance, the bull and the eagle, the beetle and the serpent. Thus they changed the truth of God into a lie, conceived of the true God as of an idol; and "served the creature more than," or rather instead of, "the Creator." He therefore "gave them up to uncleanness, through the lusts of their own hearts;" and thus licentiousness became connected with idolatry, and the most unnatural lusts were admitted to form part of their religious rites.

It is true that the philosophers had a twofold doctrine, public and secret: in the former they encouraged the idolatries of sense of keeping back, or withholding. 2 Thes. ii. 6, 7. See Parkhurst in Katech. The heathen did retain, in the works of nature, a sufficient proof of the Divine Providence to render their infidelity inexcusable, and still rouse so their vices; and these vices also did withhold, or restrain the progress of the truth. Doddridge, "restrain," Macknight, "confine." "Who hinder the truth by unrighteousness?"—Prof. Stuart. The Apostle here particularly designates the heathen as hindering the truth by unrighteousness.

Ver. 19. In them—Macknight, "among them." So Doddridge.
Ver. 20. The invisible, &c.—Macknight, "His invisible things, even his eternal power," &c. "God," says Aristotle, "who is invisible to every mortal, is seen by his works."

Ver. 24. Gave them up.—See Gen. vi. 3.

Ver. 28. Gave them up unto vile affections.—"Those unnatural crimes, which are now considered most scandalous, and most severely punished when discovered, so far from being prohibited by the religion and laws of the heathen, were authorized in both, and avowedly practised by persons of the greatest celebrity among them."—Cox. See also Macknight. Many of the heathen philosophers represent virtue and vice as the mere creatures of statute and

God in their knowledge. God gave them over to a reprobate mind, to do those things which are not convenient;

29 Being filled with all unrighteousness, fornication, wickedness, covetousness, maliciousness; full of envy, murder, debate, deceit, malignity; whisperers.

30 Backbiters, haters of God, spiteful, proud, boasters, inventors of evil things, disobedient to parents,

31 Without understanding, covenant-breakers, without natural affection, implacable, unmerciful:

32 Who, knowing the judgment of God, that they which commit such things are worthy of death, not only do the same, but have pleasure in them that do them.

CHAPTER II.

1 They that sin, though they condemn it in others, cannot excuse themselves, 6 and much less escape the judgment of God, 9 whether they be Jews or Gentiles. 11 The Gentiles cannot escape, 17 not yet the Jews, 25 whom their circumcision shall not profit, if they keep not the law.

THEREFORE thou art inexcusable, O man, whosever thou art, that judgest: for wherein thou judgest another, thou condemnest thyself; for thou that judgest doest the same things.

2 But we are sure that the judgment of God is according to truth against them which commit such things.

3 And thinkest thou this, O man, that judgest them which do such things, and doest the same, that thou shalt escape the judgment of God?

4 Or despisest thou the riches of his goodness and forbearance and long-suffering; not knowing that the goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance?

5 But after thy hardness and impenitent heart treasurest up unto thyself wrath against the day of wrath and revelation of the righteous judgment of God;

A. M. cir.
4062
A. D. c. r.
36
o or, a moral evil
of judgment.
p or, unexcusable.
q or, consistent with them
a 2 Sa 12 6, 7.
b 9 23.
c 14 63, 7,
A. c. d Jo 4 2
e Is 30 18
f De 32 34
g Ec 12 11.

h 17 24 12
Mat 16 27
Ro 20 12
i 1 Ti 6 3, 4
j 2 Th 1 5
k or, Greek
l 1 Pe 1 7
m or, Greek
n De 10 17
2 Th 1 9, 7
o 1 Pe 1 17
p Ja 1 22, 25
q 1 Co 11 14
r or, he conscience witnessing with them
s or, he tires himself.
s 1 La 3 17,
t c 16 25
u vs 28
v Ps 147 19, 20
w or, trust
the things that differ
x Phi 1 10

6 Who will render to every man according to his deeds:

7 To them who by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory and honour and immortality, eternal life:

8 But unto them that are contentious, and do not obey the truth, but obey unrighteousness, indignation and wrath,

9 Tribulation and anguish, upon every soul of man that doeth evil, of the Jew first, and also of the Gentile;

10 But glory, honour, and peace, to every man that worketh good, to the Jew first, and also to the Gentile:

11 For there is no respect of persons with God.

12 For as many as have sinned without law shall also perish without law: and as many as have sinned in the law shall be judged by the law:

13 (For the hearers of the law are just before God, but the doers of the law shall be justified.

14 For when the Gentiles, which have not the law, do by nature the things contained in the law, these, having not the law, are a law unto themselves:

15 Which show the work of the law written in their hearts, their conscience also bearing witness, and their thoughts the mean while accusing or else excusing one another;)

16 In the day when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ according to my gospel.

17 Behold, thou art called a Jew, and retest in the law, and makest thy boast of God,

18 And knowest his will, and approvest the things that are more excellent, being instructed out of the law;

the multitude; in the latter it is supposed they taught the spiritual and eternal nature of God; but we believe this was the case in very few instances; those who rejected the vulgar superstition, often sunk into a sort of philosophic atheism, and worshipped Nature.

In the course of eighteen centuries the worshipping of idols, stocks, and stones, has been in great part abolished from the Pagan world; much, however, remains to be done in this respect in India, China, Africa, and elsewhere; but as the Spirit of God accompanies the progress of missionary labours, we trust that these nations will follow the example of the South Sea Islanders, and give "their idols to the moles and to the bats," or rather scatter them to the winds and to the seas; no more substituting the creature for "the Creator, who is blessed," and shall be "blessed for ever. Amen."

CHAP. II. Ver. 1—29. Those are most inexcusable, who commit themselves the sin they condemn in others.—The apostle having delivered the most awful, and at the same time the most accurate description of the heathen world, which was perhaps ever written, he was sure of the approbation of the Jews, who would instantly pronounce them deserving of God's eternal curse, and everlasting condemnation. He then suddenly turns the argument upon his countrymen, and endeavours to convince them that they were not only equally guilty, but more inexcusable; as they had been favoured, not only with the same natural light, but with a divine revelation also, in the law of Moses and the prophets; and this circumstance, so far from excusing them, was a great aggravation of their guilt, and made their case more dreadfully alarming. That the Jews were, indeed, equally guilty of the crimes here enumerated, we have not only the authority of the apostles, but the testimony of Josephus, their own historian, who declares that there was not a more wicked nation under heaven. And he afterwards adds, "I verily believe, that if the Romans had delayed to destroy these wicked wretches, their city would either have been swallowed up by the earth, or overwhelmed by the waters, or struck with fire from heaven, as another Sodom; for it produced a far more impious generation than those who suffered such punishment."

This being the awful case with both Jews and Gentiles, the custom; or to use the words of Justin, they maintain, "that there is nothing either virtuous or vicious, but that things are made good or evil merely by the force of opinion."

Ver. 28. Things not convenient.—"A figure of speech, intimating the most detestable crimes."—Cox.

Ver. 30. Inventors of evil things.—That is, probably, of false and scandalous reports, agreeing with the preceding article—"Backbiters," &c.

Ver. 31. Without natural affection.—This is supposed to refer particularly to the Stoics.

Ver. 32. Have pleasure in them that do them.—"To behold vice with complacency, is the last stage of a degenerate mind."—Cox. Paul considers this as the very climax of all the charges that he had to bring against the heathen, that they not only plunged into acts of wickedness, but had given their more deliberate approbation to such doings.—Prof. Stuart.

CHAP. II. Ver. 1. Therefore—This word here has been the subject of much discussion, from the difficulty of showing how it stands connected as an illative particle, with the preceding discourse. "The connection," says Prof. Stuart, appears to be this: Since it will be conceded, that those who know the ordinances of God, against such vices as have been named, and still practise them, and applaud others for doing so, are worthy of punishment; it follows, therefore, that all who are so enlightened as to disapprove of such crimes, and who still commit them, are even yet more worthy of punishment."

Ver. 2. The judgment.—MacKnight. "The sentence," i. e. the judgment pronounced. Compare chap. v. 16 Chrysostom thus paraphrases this verse: "Thou shalt not escape thine own condemnation, and shalt thou escape that of God?"

Ver. 4. Or despisest thou—MacKnight. "Dost thou misconstrue?" But Doddridge, Cox, and Boothroyd, prefer the common rendering.

Ver. 5. Hardness and impenitent—MacKnight. "Obdurate and impenitent—Revelation of the righteous, &c.—When God's righteous judgment shall be revealed—1. e. in the great day of judgment.—Stuart.

Ver. 6. His deeds—Doddridge. "His works." This word, "works," should be preserved throughout, on account of the argument founded on it, Ver. 8. They that are contentious—Gr. "Are or contentions" Doddridge. "Children of Contention," which preserves the Hebrew idiom.

Ver. 12. Without law—Doddridge and Cox, of divine revelation generally; but we must remember, that at this time (A. D. 60,) scarcely any of the New Testament was published.—Sinners in—Doddridge, &c., "under the law."

Ver. 13. For not the hearers, &c.—Not those who merely enjoy the external privilege of a revelation have any just claim to divine approbation; it is only those who obey the precepts of such a revelation who have any ground to expect this.—Stuart.—"The doers of the law shall be justified."—This is the first time the important term "justified," occurs in this epistle: and it is evidently used in a forensic sense, referring to a judicial sentence, as in Mat. xii. 37.—"A Jew sinned in respect of any of the precepts [of the Mosaic law,] and did not offer the prescribed sacrifice, he could not be acquitted or justified."

Ver. 14. For when the Gentiles—Thus the voice of conscience, which proceeds from a moral feeling of dislike or approbation, and the judgment of the mind when it examines the nature of actions, unite in testifying, that what the moral law of God requires, is impressed in some good measure on the hearts even of the heathen.—Prof. Stuart.

Ver. 15. Their thoughts the mean while, &c.—Doddridge. "Their mutual reasonings among themselves, accusing or defending." &c.

Ver. 16. In the day, &c.—This verse connects with verse 12, the three intervening verses (13, 14, and 15) being a parenthesis, and the sense is, that "In the day of judgment, the heathen who sinned against the light of nature, and their own consciences, will be thereby judged, but the Jews, who had been favoured with a written revelation by Moses and the prophets, will be subjected to a severe scrutiny, according to their obedience or disobedience to it."

According to my gospel—Not any written gospel or history of Jesus Christ, but the doctrine of the gospel, which had been preached by Paul.

Ver. 17. Called a Jew—Bearest the name of a Jew.—Doddridge, Cox, &c. But Boothroyd, following Griesbach, reads, on the authority of some MSS and ancient versions, "But if thou be called a Jew, and rest in the law and glory in God," &c.

19 And art confident that thou thyself art a guide of the blind, a light of them which are in darkness, 20 An instructor of the foolish, a teacher of babes, which hast the form of knowledge and of the truth in the law.

21 Thou art therefore which teachest another, teachest thou not thyself? thou that preachest a man should not steal, dost thou steal?

22 Thou that sayest a man should not commit adultery, dost thou commit adultery? thou that abhorrest idols, dost thou commit sacrifice?

23 Thou that makest thy boast of the law, through breaking the law dishonourest thou God?

24 For the name of God is blasphemed among the Gentiles, through you, as it is written.

25 For circumcision verily profiteth, if thou keep the law: but if thou be a breaker of the law, thy circumcision is made uncircumcision.

26 Therefore if the uncircumcision keep the righteousness of the law, shall not his uncircumcision be counted for circumcision?

27 And shall not uncircumcision which is by nature, if it fulfil the law, judge thee, who by the letter and circumcision dost transgress the law?

28 For he is not a Jew, which is one outwardly; neither is that circumcision, which is outward in the flesh:

29 But he is a Jew, which is one inwardly; and circumcision is that of the heart, in the

A. M. cir.
4062.
A. D. cir.
58.

y 2 Ti. 1. 13.

3. 5.

z Mat. 23. 3.

&c.

a Eze. 36. 29.

23.

b Ga. 5. 3.

c Ac. 10. 34.

35.

d Mat. 12.

41, 42.

e Mat. 9. 9.

Jo. 8. 39.

e 9. 6, 7.

Gal. 6. 15.

Re. 2. 9.

f De. 10. 16.

30. 6.

Je. 4. 4.

Phi. 3. 3.

Col. 2. 11.

g 2 Co. 10. 18.

a De. 4. 7, 8.

b e 10. 16.

He. 12.

c Ps. 51. 4.

d Job. 8. 3.

e e 6. 1. 15.

f charged.

spirit, ana not in the letter; whose praise is not of men, but of God.

CHAPTER III.

1 The Jews' prerogative: 3 which they have not lost: 9 howbeit the law convinces them also of their sin: therefore no flesh is justified by the law, 28 but all, without difference, by faith only: 31 and yet the law is not abolished.

WHAT advantage then hath the Jew? or what profit is there of circumcision?

2 Much every way: chiefly, because that unto them were committed the oracles of God.

3 For what if some did not believe? shall their unbelief make the faith of God without effect?

4 God forbid: yea, let God be true, but every man a liar; as it is written, That thou mightest be justified in thy sayings, and mightest overcome when thou art judged.

5 But if our unrighteousness commend the righteousness of God, what shall we say? Is God unrighteous who taketh vengeance? (I speak as a man.)

6 God forbid: for then how shall God judge the world?

7 For if the truth of God hath more abounded through my lie unto his glory; why yet am I also judged as a sinner?

8 And not rather, (as we be slanderously reported, and as some affirm that we say,) Let us do evil, that good may come? whose damnation is just.

9 What then? are we better than they? No, in no wise: for we have before proved both Jews and Gentiles, that they are all under sin; apostle proceeds to argue the impossibility of either being saved by their own works of righteousness, and that on two grounds: First, a fallen and guilty creature can never be justified by his good works; and, secondly, if even that were possible, neither Jews nor Gentiles had any such works to boast. Consequently, that to neither Jew nor Gentile was there any hope of salvation, but through the mercy of God in Christ Jesus. For as to the former, there was no merit in hearing a law which they neglected to obey; nor had the Gentiles any ground to be vain of their science, while, whatever they might know, they did not acknowledge and adore the Author of their being.

When it is said, (verse 13,) "The doers of the law will be justified," we must not, however, infer hence, that they will be justified by any merit in either their faith or their obedience, which would be contrary to the whole tenor of Paul's reasoning in this Epistle; but only that obedience to the will of God is the necessary evidence of our interest in his mercy. So, on these words, Mr. Cor judiciously remarks—"The apostle does not here refer to the originating cause of a person's justification, which is the mercy of God; or to the meritorious cause, which is nothing less than the obedience and imprecation of Christ; but to the character of those who will finally be justified."

As to the covenant of circumcision, in which the Jews boasted and placed their confidence, it was an external rite only, and "he is not a Jew," in the best sense, who is such only "outwardly;" "But he is a Jew" indeed—a worshipper of the God of Israel—"who is one inwardly; and [the true] circumcision is that of the heart; in the spirit, (and,) not in the letter; whose praise (as the term Jew intimates) is not of men, but of God."

CHAP. III. Ver. 1—19. Some Jewish objections answered, and all men proved guilty before God.—The apostle here introduces and answers several objections which a Jew might be expected to make to his doctrine in the preceding chapter, relative to circumcision.—If a Jew have no preference to a Gentile, "what advantage then is there in being a child of Abraham, or in receiving circumcision?" To this the apostle replies, "Much every way"—or in every respect; but chiefly, because that to them [the Jews] were intrusted the oracles of God, containing at once the revelation of man's duty and of God's mercy. And what if some—yea, if many—did not believe, could their unbelief disannul or make of no effect the truth and faithfulness of God?—Far be that! Let God be revered as true, though every man should thereby be convicted of falsehood. But, rejoins the unbelieving Jew, supposing our unrighteousness to recommend the righteousness of God, or his glory to be advanced by our unbelief, which has opened the door of salvation to the Gentiles, are we to be condemned on that account?—In this case, is not God unjust in taking vengeance on those who promote his glory?—I speak and reason as a man.

At this St. Paul again spurns, (ver. 6,) and deprecates the idea of God's injustice: if God were unjust, how then would he be qualified for the universal judge?—Or "how should God judge the world?"—In verse 7 the objector again comes forward in a somewhat different form—"Suppose, (says he,) in denying Jesus to be the Christ, I have been guilty of error or falsehood; yet if that falsehood has been the means, as you (Paul) pretend, of bringing a host of Gentiles to believe in him, and has thereby increased the number of his worshippers, and advanced the glory of God, why am I to be condemned as a sinner on that account?"—The following verse (8) is evidently Paul's language; but it is not easy to trace the connexion. Dr. Doddridge explains it, as taking up the objector abruptly, and asking, "And why may not I [Paul] say, upon the same principles of reasoning, (as is indeed reported of us,) Let us do evil that good may come—Let us sin to magnify divine grace?" A sentiment which, we fear, if not openly avowed or acted upon, has been secretly cherished and encouraged by some popular preachers of the present day, who, instead of being abashed and confounded, seem to glory in the magnitude of their former sins. But of such principles, or practices, the apostle subjoins this awful censure, "their damnation is just." This decree also strikes directly at the root of an error which prevailed too early in some parts of the Christian church, that duplicity, and prevarication, and even persecution, are then lawful, when they subserve the interests of the church—a principle from which the church of Rome has not yet cleared

Ver. 13. A guide of the blind, &c.—These are titles in which the Rabbinues were used in glory, in reference to the Gentiles.

Ver. 22. Thou that sayest—Doddridge, "that preachest." So Cor—Dost thou commit sacrifice?—MacKnight, "rob temples." See Mat iii. 8.

Ver. 25. Is made (or becomes) uncircumcision— i. e. is rendered miserable and useless.

Ver. 26. Shall not his uncircumcision, &c.—That is, a Gentile who fears God shall be preferred far before a Jew who apostatizes from him.

Ver. 27. The uncircumcision which is by nature— i. e. which is natural to man.—By the letter and circumcision.—MacKnight, "By the literal circumcision."

Ver. 29. But he is a Jew.—Rabbi Lipman states, that "Faith does not consist in circumcision, but in the heart. He who has not genuine faith is not a partaker of the Jewish circumcision; but he who has genuine faith is a Jew, although not circumcised;" agreeably to which is the maxim of the Talmudists, "That the Jews sit in the inmost recesses of the heart."—Bagster.—Whose praise, &c.—The praise of the Jew, who is truly a Jew after the hidden or internal man, is not of men but of God. Man looketh on the outward appearance, but God looketh on the heart.—Prof. Stuart.

CHAP. III. Ver. 3. Make the faith of God without effect.—Doddridge, "Disannul the faith of God;" which may mean either our faith in him, or his fidelity to us. MacKnight and Cor prefer the latter.

Ver. 4. Let God be true.—Let God be regarded as faithful, although all men should thereby be deemed guilty of unfaithfulness. Stuart.—But every man— Or, "Though every man be," &c. Doddridge and MacKnight.

Ver. 5. Is God unrighteous who taketh vengeance?—Doddridge, MacKnight, &c. taking this to be the objection of a Jew, (as ver. 1.) render the words, "Is not God unrighteous?" which version the latter has shown the Greek will bear: but taking them as the words of the apostle, the negative must be omitted.

Ver. 6. God forbid.—Gr. "Let it not be."—So ver. 4, and frequently. MacKnight. "By no means;" and others, "Far be it." We confess the common rendering is more animated and pointed; but we fear the introduction of God's name here and elsewhere, (when not in the original,) has occasioned too often a light and trifling use of the divine name.

Ver. 8. Whose damnation.—Doddridge and MacKnight, "Condemnation."

Ver. 9. Proved.—Gr. "charged."

10 As it is ^g written, There is none righteous, no, not one :

11 There is none that understandeth, there is none that seeketh after God.

12 They are all gone out of the way, they are together become unprofitable ; there is none that doeth good, no, not one.

13 Their ^h throat is an open sepulchre ; with their tongues they have used deceit ; the poison of asps is under their lips :

14 Whose mouth is full of cursing and bitterness .

15 Their feet ^k are swift to shed blood :

16 Destruction and misery are in their ways :

17 And the way of peace have they not known :

18 There is no fear of God before their eyes.

19 Now we know that what things soever the law saith, it saith to them who are under the law : that every ^m mouth may be stopped, and all the world may become ⁿ guilty before God.

20 Therefore ^o by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight : for by the law is the knowledge of sin.

21 But now the righteousness of God without the law is manifested, being witnessed by the ^p law and the prophets ;

22 Even the righteousness of God which is by faith ^q of Jesus Christ unto all and upon all them that believe : for there is no difference :

23 For all ^r have sinned, and come short of the glory of God ;

24 Being justified freely by his grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus :

25 Whom God hath ^s set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteousness for the ^t remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God ;

26 To declare, I say, at this time his right-

A. M. cir
4062.
A. D. cir
58.

g Ps 11
Ps 53.

h Ps 5.9

i Ps 140.3

j Ps 10.7

k Is. 50.7,8.

l Ps. 36.1

m Ps 107.42

n or, subject to the judgment of God.

o Ps 113.2

p Ac. 26.22

q c 5.1, &c.

r Ec. 7.20

s or, foreordained

t or, propiating sacr.

u Ac. 13.38, 39

v ver 20.22

w Ga. 3.5,28

x He 10.15, 16

y Mat. 3.9

z c 3.27

1 Co 1.29.

a Ec 15.6

b c 11.6

c Hab 2.4

d Ps 22.1,2

eousness : that ^a he might be just, and the justifier of him which believeth in Jesus.

27 Where is boasting then ? It is excluded. By what law ? of works ? Nay : but by the law of faith.

28 Therefore we conclude that ^a a man is justified by faith without the deeds of the law

29 Is he the God of the Jews only ? is he not also of the Gentiles ? Yes, of the Gentiles also :

30 Seeing it is one God, which ^w shall justify the circumcision by faith, and uncircumcision through faith.

31 Do we then make void the law through ^x faith ? God forbid : yea, we establish the law.

CHAPTER IV.

1 Abraham's faith was imputed to him for righteousness, 10 before he was circumcised.
11 By faith only he and his seed received the promise 16 Abraham is the father of all that believe. 24 Our faith also shall be imputed to us for righteousness.

WHAT shall we then say that Abraham, our father ^a as pertaining to the flesh, hath found ?

2 For if he were justified by works, he hath ^{whereof} to glory ; but not ^b before God.

3 For what saith the ^c Scripture ? Abraham believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteousness.

4 Now to him that worketh ^d is the reward not reckoned of grace, but of debt.

5 But to him that worketh not, but believeth on him that justifieth the ungodly, his faith ^e is counted for righteousness.

6 Even as David also describeth the blessedness of the man, unto whom God imputeth righteousness without works.

7 Saying, ^f Blessed are they whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sins are covered.

8 Blessed is the man to whom the Lord will not impute sin.

9 Cometh this blessedness then upon the circumcision ^{only}, or upon the uncircumcision herself, nor can, till in the most public manner she denounces and anathematizes the diabolical decree of the Council of Constance—that "no faith is to be kept with heretics."

St. Paul now reverts to the doctrine of the preceding chapter, that both Jews and Gentiles are equally guilty before God ; and after citing several passages from the Old Testament, in proof of this, most of which we have already noticed, he draws this most important inference. That "no flesh" neither Jew nor Greek—can possibly be justified before God by any works or righteousness of their own.

Ver. 20—31. Both Jews and Gentiles, being equally guilty before God, can only be justified through Christ.—St. Paul establishes his position, that "by the deeds of the law can no flesh living be justified in his sight," by this consideration, "that by the law is the knowledge of sin ;" and that which convicts us of sin can never justify us in the sight of God. The question now arises, How then can we be saved ? The answer is short and easy—We must be "justified freely by God's grace, through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus." Here we have, first, the primary, originating cause of our salvation, namely, the grace (or mercy) of God in choosing and ordaining us to everlasting life—"God so loved the world" as to give his Son for man's salvation, (John iii. 16.) 2. We have the meritorious and procuring cause—the propitiatory atonement offered in the obedience and death of Jesus Christ—who "suffered for us—the just for the unjust, that he might bring us unto God," (1 Pet. iii. 18.) 3. The instrumental cause. It is "through faith in his blood for the remission of sins," and this faith is not of ourselves, it is the gift of God, (Ephes. ii. 8.) Now, by this scheme of salvation, we are taught—1. That "the righteousness of God is manifested"—that is, it is displayed and magnified in the death and atonement of Jesus Christ, whereby God can "be just and the justifier of them that believe in Jesus : " and, 2. That, with this faith, no works of the law, either ceremonial or moral, are to be mixed, though undoubtedly they will result from it. This doctrine appears to us sufficiently evident in the Scriptures we have quoted.

On this doctrine of justification by faith alone, which shall subjoin the eleventh Article of the Church of England, which appears to us drawn up with remarkable judgment and precision. It says, "We are accounted righteous before God, only for the merit of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ, by faith, and not for our works or deserving : wherefore that we are justified by faith only, is a most wholesome doctrine, and very full of comfort, as more largely is expressed in the Homily of Justification."

This was also the doctrine of all the Reformed churches, particularly those of Helvetia, Poland, and Angsburgh.

The great objection to this doctrine is, that it "makes void the law of God through faith." This our apostle not only denies in the strongest manner ; but, on the contrary, asserts that it establishes the law. This refers chiefly to the moral law, the authority of which was eminently honoured and established by the obedience of the Son of God, and by the strict obligation imposed on all Christians to follow his example : and even as to the ceremonial law, though its obligation is removed, its injunctions are specially honoured by being shown to be uniformly typical of Christ and his redemption.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1—25. Abraham's faith imputed to him for righteousness, as ours shall also be, if we believe in Christ.—There is some difference among the most learned commentators in explaining the opening verse of this chapter. Had this Epistle been addressed to Hebrew converts, we should have had no hesitation in explaining the term "according to the flesh" in the most natural and obvious sense, as referring to the natural seed of Abraham : but since it is expressly ad-

Ver 15—17. Their feet, &c.—i. e. they are ready and swift to engage in crimes of the highest degree—destruction and misery attend their steps, i. e. wherever they go, they spread destruction and misery around them. The way of happiness they take no knowledge of, or they give no heed to what concerns their own true welfare, or that of others.—Stuart.

Ver 19. What the law saith.—Doddridge. This proves that the term "law" extends to the whole Scriptures of the Old Testament, as none of the passages here referred to are in the Pentateuch.—Become guilty before God.—Doddridge "stand convicted before God."

Ver 20. By the deeds.—Doddridge, "works."

Ver 23. Come short of the glory of God—i. e. have failed in rendering him that glory which is his due.—Doddridge. Beza says, it is an allusion to those who, in far Greek games, fell short of the goal.

Ver 25. Set forth.—Doddridge, "proposed."—A propitiation.—Macknight a "propitiatory," an allusion to the Jewish mercy seat, or propitiatory, which was the cover of the ark, whereon the Jewish high priest annually sprinkled blood.—Heb. ix. 25.

Ver 26. That he might be just, &c.—That is, that his justice might not be impeached in his justifying sinners through Christ.

Ver 27. The law of faith—i. e. the gospel.

Ver 31. Make void.—Doddridge, "set aside." Macknight, "Make useless."

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1. As pertaining to the flesh, hath found?—Macknight, "obtained by the flesh." See Gal. iii. 3. Phil. iii. 3, 4.

Ver 2. It was counted.—As the same verb frequently occurs in this chapter, (says Mr. Cox.) it seemed desirable always to translate it by the same word (reckoned,) instead of arbitrarily varying it, as in the unauthorized version, where it is indifferently rendered, counted, reckoned, and imputed.

Ver 5. The ungodly.—"It is not here implied," says Mr. Cox, "that they who are justified may continue in a state of ungodliness, (which would also? for we say that faith was reckoned to Abraham for righteousness.

10 How was it then reckoned? when he was in circumcision, or in uncircumcision? Not in circumcision, but in uncircumcision.

11 And ^a he received the sign of circumcision, a seal of the righteousness of the faith which he had yet being uncircumcised; that he might be the father ^b of all them that believe, though they be not circumcised; that righteousness might be imputed unto them also:

12 And the father of circumcision to them who are not of the circumcision only, but who also walk in the steps of that faith of our father Abraham, which he had being yet uncircumcised.

13 For the promise, that ^c he should be the heir of the world, was not to Abraham, or to his seed, through the law, but through the righteousness of faith.

14 For if ^d they which are of the law be heirs, faith is made void, and the promise made of none effect:

15 Because the law ^e worketh wrath: for where no law is, there is no transgression.

16 Therefore it is of faith, that it might be by grace; to the end the promise might be sure to all the seed; not to that only which is of the law, but to that also which is of the faith of Abraham; who is the father of us all.

17 (As it is written, ^f we have made thee a father of many nations.) ^g before him whom he believed, even God, who quickeneth ^h the dead, and calleth those ⁱ things which be not as though they were.

18 Who against hope believed in hope, that ressed to Gentile converts, namely, the Romans, we are more disposed, with Hammond and Whithy, Claude, Boothroyd, and Cox, to refer it to circumcision. "What advantage, then, did our father Abraham derive from circumcision?" that is, Was he justified thereby? If so, he hath "whereof to glory" before God; but, surely, neither he, nor any man, hath whereof to glory before God; therefore Abraham was not justified by circumcision, nor by any other works. And if Abraham was not justified by works, then neither can we be. And that Abraham was not thus justified is farther evident, because he was justified "in uncircumcision;" that is, before he was circumcised.

But how, then, was Abraham justified? By faith in God's promise relative to the Messiah, in whom all nations were to be blessed, as we shall find the apostle clearly explains himself in his Epistle to the Galatians, ch. iii. Abraham was, therefore, justified by faith in Christ, as we also shall be, if we believe in him. But neither was Abraham, nor can we be justified by any merit either of our faith or of our works; for, as stated in this chapter, (ver. 16,) our salvation is of faith, that it might be by grace, that is, by God's free favour: to make, therefore, our justification, which is one grand branch of our salvation, to be of works, is to attempt to defeat God's great design in the plan of our redemption.

But, it is said, this faith was reckoned or imputed to Abraham, as it shall be to us Christians, for righteousness or justification—not as a debt or claim, but as a favour bestowed on us for Christ's sake, on whom our faith must rest. "I think (says Dr. Doddridge) nothing can be easier than to understand how this may be said in full consistence with our being justified by the imputation of the righteousness of Christ; that is, our being treated by God as righteous, for the sake of what he has done and suffered: for, though this be the meritorious cause of our acceptance with God, yet faith may be said to be imputed to us in order to our being justified, or becoming so completely in opposition to what the apostle states in a subsequent part of this Epistle; but merely that they had been ungodly, and consequently that their justification originated from the free mercy of God."

Ver. 10. In uncircumcision.—"Faith was reckoned to Abraham for righteousness," at least 14 years before he was circumcised; the former having taken place some time before Ishmael's birth, at which time he was 86 years old, and the other when Ishmael was 13 years of age; and Abraham 99. See Ge. xv 5, 6, 16; xvi. 1-3, xvii. 1, 22-27. —Bayer.

Ver. 11. Seal—i. e. a full confirmation. "This seems an incontestable proof that circumcision was a seal of the covenant of grace, and not merely of temporal promises."—Doddridge.

Ver. 13. Heir of the world.—Not personally, but in his seed, in whom all the nations of the earth should be blessed.

Ver. 14. They which are of the law—i. e. they who seek salvation by the law, and not by faith, are not the children of Abraham's faith, nor heirs with him of the same promises. See Heb. xi. 9.

Ver. 15. Where no law is.—(When no law, or rule of duty, is enacted and acknowledged, there is no transgression, and consequently no punishment.

A. M. cir. 4062.
A. D. cir. 58.

Ge. 17, 10, 11.

h Lu. 19, 9.
Jn. 8, 33.

Gal. 3, 7, 29.

i Ge. 17, 4.

j Ga. 3, 18.

k Ec. 5, 20.

l 1 Ju. 2, 4.

m Ge. 17, 5.

n like unto.

o Ep. 2, 5.

p 1 Co. 1, 28.
1 Pe. 2, 10.

q Ge. 15, 5.

r He. 11, 11.

s Ge. 18, 14.

t Lu. 1, 37, 45.

He. 11, 19.

u Ec. 1, 5, 11.

u Ac. 2, 39.

v Ma. 16, 16.

Jn. 3, 14.

16.

w Is. 53, 56.

2 Co. 5, 21.

He. 9, 26.

1 Pe. 2, 24.

He. 1, 5.

x 1 Co. 15, 17.

1 Pe. 1, 21.

a Is. 32, 17.

Ec. 2, 14.

Col. 1, 20.

b Ju. 14, 6.

c He. 3, 6.

d Mat. 5, 11.

Jn. 12, 12.

he might become the father of many nations, according to that which was spoken, ^a So shall thy seed be.

19 And being not weak in faith, he considered not his own body now dead, when he was about a hundred years old, neither yet the deadness ^b of Sarah's womb:

20 He staggered not at the promise of God through unbelief; but was strong in faith, giving glory to God;

21 And being fully persuaded that, what he had promised, he was ^c able also to perform.

22 And therefore it was imputed to him for righteousness.

23 Now ^d it was not written for his sake alone, that it was imputed to him;

24 But for us ^e also, to whom it shall be imputed, if we believe ^f on him that raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead;

25 Who was delivered ^g for our offences, and was raised ^h again for our justification.

CHAPTER V.

1 Being justified by faith, we have peace with God, ^a and joy in our hope. ^b That since we were reconciled by his blood, when we were enemies, ^c we shall much more be saved being reconciled. ^d As sin and death came by Adam, ^e so much more righteousness and life by Jesus Christ. ^f Where sin abounded, grace did superabound.

2 THEREFORE ^a being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ:

3 By whom ^b also we have access by faith into this grace wherein we stand, and rejoice ^c in the hope of the glory of God.

4 And not only so, but we glory ^d in tribulations also: knowing that tribulation worketh patience;

5 And patience, experience; and experience, hope:

righteous; that is, as we are enlarged as debtors in the book of God's account, what Christ has done in fulfilling all righteousness for us, is charged as the grand balance of the account: but that it may appear that we are, according to the tenor of the Gospel, entitled to the benefit of this, it is also entered in the book of God's remembrance "that we are believers;" and thus appearing, we are graciously discharged, yea, and rewarded, as if we ourselves had been perfectly innocent and obedient."

Christ was not only "delivered (to death) for our offences, but raised again for our justification."—"In the death of Christ (says Mr. Cox) we see an atonement made for sin, and in his resurrection a proof that his atonement was accepted. He may also be said to be raised for our justification, because we are justified through his intercession; and he could not have interceded had he not been raised."

CHAP. V. Ver. 1-21. The happy consequences of our justification.—The apostle having laid down "the most wholesome" doctrine of justification by faith, proceeds now to consider the practical effects arising from it; and, in the first place, the consolation derived therefrom by true believers. Assured of pardon and justification through our Lord Jesus Christ, the love and peace of God are shed abroad in their hearts by the Holy Spirit—they have access to communion with God here, and rejoice in hope of the glory of God to be revealed hereafter. Thus are they supported in tribulations of every kind; "tribulation worketh patience—patience (produces) experience of the divine goodness—and "experience (engenders) hope"—a hope that will not disappoint the expectation, but infinitely exceed it; and of which the possessor will never have reason to be ashamed.

The apostle now enters upon another topic; from the consideration of their having obtained pardon while in a state of sin and unbelief, he draws an argument to hope for farther blessings. He now shows the ground on which we receive

"Nomos," says Bishop Middleton, "is used by St. Paul, of every rule of life, of every revelation, especially of the Mosaic law. Our English version, by having almost constantly said the law, whatever be the meaning of nomos in the original, has made this most difficult, epistle still more obscure." When without the article, it is commonly used for law in general, when with the article, of the Mosaic law.—Bayer.

Ver. 16. The father of us all.—That is, of believing Gentiles, as well as Jews.

Ver. 17. Before.—Boothroyd, "In the sight of." So Macknight.—"Calleth those things which be not—i. e. do not yet exist—as though they were." To him who "seeth the end from the beginning," (Isa. xlv. 10,) all things, past or future, are alike present.

Ver. 19. His own body.—See Gen. xviii. 11.

Ver. 22. And therefore—i. e. his faith.

Ver. 25. Delivered.—See Acts ii. 23, 24.

CHAP. V. Ver. 2. By whom we have access.—Some critics suppose this alludes to the formal introduction of a heathen worshipper into the immediate presence of his idol: but why may it not rather allude to the introduction of a

5 And hope ^a maketh not ashamed; because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us.

6 For when we were yet without strength, ^a in due ^b time Christ died for the ungodly.

7 For scarcely for a righteous man will one die: yet peradventure for a good man some would even dare to die.

8 But God commendeth his love toward us, in that, while ^a we were yet sinners, Christ died for us.

9 Much more then, being now justified by his blood, we shall be saved ^a from wrath through him.

10 For if, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son, much ^a more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by ^a his life.

11 And not only ^a so, but we also ^a joy in God through our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom we have now received the ^a atonement.

12 Wherefore, as by ^a one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, ^a for that all have sinned:

13 (For until the law sin was in the world: but sin is not ^a imputed when there is no law.)

14 Nevertheless death reigned ^a from Adam to Moses, even over them that had not sinned after the similitude of Adam's transgression, who is ^a the figure of him that was to come.

15 But not as the offence, so also ^a is the free gift. For if through the offence of one many

A. M. cir.
A. D. cir.
58.

e. Plin 1 20
f. Ep 1 13, 14

g. accord.
into the time

h. Ga 4 4.
i. Ju 15 13.
j. 12 23 18.

k. 1 Ju 3 16.
l. He 9 14.

m. 1 Th 1 10.
n. 1 Co 8 22.

o. Ju 11 19.
p. Hab 3 18.

q. of, in whom.
r. e 4 15.

s. 1 Ju 5 4.
t. 1 Co 15 22.
u. 1 Co 15 22, 43.

v. Ep 2 8.
w. 1 Co 11 11.
x. Mat 20 28.

y. 1 Ju 2 2.
z. 1 Co 1 18.

aa. of, by one offence.
ab. Ju 10 10.

ac. e 6 23.
ad. of, by one offence.

ae. of, by one righteousness.
af. 1 Ju 12 22.

ag. e 7 13.
ah. 1 Co 10 10.
ai. 1 Th 1 14.

aj. 1 Ju 1 17.
ak. 1 Co 15 22.
al. ver 6 11.

am. Col 3 4.
an. 1 Pe 2 24.

be dead, much more the grace ^a of God, and the gift by grace, which is by one man, Jesus Christ, hath abounded unto ^a many.

16 And not as ^a it was by one that sinned, so is the gift: for the judgment was by one to condemnation, but the free gift ^a is of many ^a offences unto justification.

17 For if ^a by one man's offence death reigned by one; much more they which receive abundance ^a of grace and of the gift ^a of righteousness shall reign in life by one, Jesus Christ.)

18 Therefore, as ^a by the offence of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation; even so ^a by the righteousness of one the free gift came upon all ^a men unto justification of life.

19 For as by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous.

20 ^a Moreover the law entered, that the offence might abound. But where sin abounded, grace did much more ^a abound:

21 That as sin hath reigned unto death, even so might grace ^a reign through righteousness unto eternal life by Jesus Christ our Lord.

CHAPTER VI.

1 We may not live in sin, 2 for we are dead unto it, 3 as appeareth by our baptism. 12 Let not sin reign any more, 18 because we have yielded ourselves to the service of righteousness, 23 and for that death is the wages of sin.

WHAT shall we say then? Shall ^a we continue in sin, that grace may abound?

2 God forbid. How shall we, that are dead ^a to sin, live any longer therein?

these benefits, namely, our relation to Christ Jesus, in the covenant of grace made with him, of which he is the head and surety. Here a comparison is drawn between Adam the first, as the head and father of all mankind, and Christ, the second Adam, as he is expressly called in 1 Cor. xv. 47. The former being the head of all his natural descendants, to whom his first sin, whereby he violated God's covenant with him, conveyed death with all its fatal consequences: the latter, being in like manner the head of all his people, to all who believe, and are justified by faith in him—he eventually conveys not only temporal, but also spiritual and eternal life; and this by a resurrection both spiritual and literal—raising them to newness of life here, and to a new and immortal life hereafter.

That all men—Jews as well as Gentiles—are sinners and guilty before God, our apostle had largely proved in the preceding part of this Epistle, and he now asserts that their guilt commenced in Adam, and therefore extended to all his posterity, who were alike connected with him.

What follows, with reference to the two great heads of mankind, Adam and Christ, requires some explication; the sin of the one fell upon man universally, and all men are sinners: the righteousness of the other [Christ] is offered to the same extent, though it avails only to them who by faith receive it. Mr. Cor says, that the meaning of the apostle seems to be . . . "That the Gospel reveals a remedy fully adequate to the salvation of all men; and actually eternal to the salvation of all who do not wilfully reject the remedy. As far as Christians are concerned, their loss by the fall is more than repaired to them; for they enjoy a capacity of obtaining the might have said a promise of receiving] a far greater degree of happiness and glory than that of Adam in Paradise." The effects of Christ's atonement exceed those of Adam's sin in some other respects. We were involved in misery by one transgression; but are saved from infinite offences. Our misery admitted of a perfect remedy; but our salvation, when completed, is beyond all danger of relapse.

CHAP. VI. Ver. 1. 23. We must not live in sin, nor suffer it to reign in us.—By a strong and beautiful imagery here introduced, believers are said to be crucified, dead and buried with Christ, by their baptism and Christian profession, in which indeed the early Christians were often exposed to martyrdom; but the figures used may farther intimate, 1. Their spiritual union with Christ as the members of his mystical body, "growing together," more and more, into intimate union subject into the royal presence by the king's son.—This grace wherein we stand—Namely, the grace of adoption: Christ introduces his adopted brethren into the Father's presence.

Ver. 6. Yet without strength.—"The original," (Athenas), says Mr. Cor, "signifies weak through sickness; and here refers to the pernicious influence of sin, which affects, as it were, the whole man with an incurable malady." See Isa 1 5.—In due time—viz. the time predestined.

Ver. 7. A righteous man.—A man of kindness and benevolence. Godwyn thinks that this and the preceding verse allude to a rabbinical distinction of the Jews into three classes—good, just, and ungodly.

Ver. 10. Saved by his life—i. e. by his being raised from the dead. Compare ch. iv. 25.

Ver. 11. Received the atonement.—Doddridge and Macknight, "the reconciliation." The Greek noun is nearly related to the verb twice rendered reconciled in the preceding verse. Reconciliation, however, certainly implies atonement.

Ver. 12–19. Wherefore, as by one man sin entered, &c.—"The main design of this passage," says Professor Stuart, "is indeed plain. It lies, one may say, upon the very face of it. It is this; viz. to call our views respecting the blessings which Christ has procured for us, by a comparison of them with the evil consequences which ensued upon the fall of our first ancestor, and by showing that the blessings in question not only extend to the removal of these evils, but even far beyond this; so that the grace of the gospel has not only abounded, but superabounded."

A full synopsis of what is taught in ver. 12–19, comprises the following particulars; viz. Sin entered the world [commenced] by the offence of Adam, and death, i. e. punishment or misery, came in as the necessary result of it. In like manner, death came upon all men, because ^a all became sinners, ver. 12.

It is indeed true, that all men have been the subjects of sin and death; for that even those have been so, who have not lived under the light of revelation, or been made acquainted with any express commands of God, is proved from the fact, that all those who lived between Adam and Moses, were sinners, and lay under sentence of death, ver. 13, 14.

Adam, who was the occasion of introducing sin into the world, and of bringing sin and death upon all men, may be considered as a Typus of Christ, in regard to the influence which he has had on others; (but not as to the kind of influence, or the degree of it, for here is a wide diversity;) ver. 14, last clause.

That the kind and degree of influence which Adam had on all men, is not like that which Christ has on them; or that Adam, when regarded as a Typus of Christ, is not to be so regarded in these respects, is plain. 1. From the fact, that Adam occasioned the condemnation of all men, but Christ delivers many kind from condemnation, and bestows eternal happiness on them, ver. 15. 2. The condemnation of which Adam was the occasion, has respect only to one offence, the pardon which Christ procured, extends to many offences, ver. 16. Hence, 3. If death reigned over men because of one offence; much more shall they reign in life, who through Christ receive pardon for many offences, and a title to future blessedness, ver. 17.

Having thus guarded his readers against extending the idea of Typus to points of which Typus cannot be predicated; and having shown that the influence of Christ on the human race is exactly the reverse of that of Adam, in respect to its kind or nature; and also that it far surpasses it in degree; the apostle now returns to the consideration of the real point of resemblance or Typus between Adam and Christ, viz. the universality or extent of influence. Thus he states as follows.

"As the consequences of Adam's sin were extended to all men, so the consequences of Christ's obedience [viz. unto death] are extended to all; i. e. Jews and Gentiles all come on an equal footing into the kingdom of Christ, or the blessings which the gospel proffers are made equally accessible to all men without exception; and to all on the same terms or conditions, ver. 18, 19. Compare, as an illustration of this last idea, Rom. in 23–30."

Ver. 14. Figure of him.—(Or, "type, pattern or resemblance, of him who was to come," i. e. the Messiah; in this, says Beza, that each of them shares what he has with his; but they are clearly unlike in this, that Adam by nature communicates sin unto death to his posterity, but Christ by grace communicates sin unto life to his people unto life.)—Beza.

Ver. 18. By the offence of one.—"The whole context," says Dr. Hare, "clearly shows that the Apostle is reasoning against a common error of his day, viz. that the benefits of Christ's mediation were to be restricted to the Jews, and not extended at all to the Gentiles. To disprove this, he runs a sort of parallel between Adam and Christ; and argues, that, as in consequence of the first transgression all have fallen into a state of sin and condemnation, so the provisions of mercy, through Christ, extend to all—to all classes of men, whether Gentiles or Jews."

Ver. 21. As sin hath reigned, &c.—"Sin and grace are here most happily personified under the character of two mighty monarchs exercising their power over their respective subjects."—Cor.

CHAP. VI. Ver. 1. What shall we say then?—Margn and Doddridge, "What shall we say then?—(Shall we say) Let us continue," &c. Compare ch. 8.

Ver. 2. God forbid.—Macknight, "By no means."—How shall we, &c.—i. e. How shall we who are dead to lust live in adultery? How shall we who are dead to the world live in the pursuit of its wealth and pleasures?

3 Know ye not, that so many of us as ^e were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into ^d his death?

4 Therefore we are buried ^e with him by baptism into death: that like ^f as Christ was raised up from the dead by ^g the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness ^h of life.

5 For if ⁱ we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also ^j in the likeness of his resurrection:

6 Knowing this, that our old man is crucified with ^k him, that the body ^l of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin.

7 For ^m he that is dead is ⁿ freed from sin.

8 Now if we be dead with Christ, we believe that we shall also live with him:

9 Knowing that ^o Christ being raised from the dead dieth no more; death hath no more dominion over him.

10 For in that he died, he died ^p unto sin once: but in that he liveth, he liveth unto God.

11 Likewise reckon ye also yourselves to be ^q dead indeed unto sin, but ^r alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord.

12 Let ^s not sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof.

13 Neither yield ye your members ^t as ^u instruments of unrighteousness unto sin: but yield ^v yourselves unto God, as those that are alive from the dead, and your members as instruments of righteousness unto God.

14 For sin shall not have ^w dominion over you: for ye are not under the law, but under grace.

15 What then? shall we sin, because we are not under the law, but under grace? God forbid.

16 Know ye not, that to whom ^x ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey; whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness?

17 But God be thanked, that ye were the servants of sin, but ye have obeyed from the heart that form ^y of doctrine ^z which was delivered you.

A. M. cir.

A. D. cir.

58.

c or, a re.

d 1 Co. 15:29

e Col. 2:12

f 1 Pe. 3:21

g 1 Th. 5:11

h 2 Co. 13:4

i Mat. 25:2

j 3

k Ga. 6:15

l P. 4:22

m 1 Jo. 2:6

n 1 Th. 5:10

o Col. 2:11

p 1 Pe. 4:1

q or, just.

r Re. 1:18

s He. 9:23

t or, 2.

u Ga. 2:19

v Ps. 19:13

w 1 Th. 5:13

x arms, or, weapons.

y c. 12:1

z Jo. 7:19

a Mt. 8:34

b 2 Pe. 2:19

c 2 Ti. 1:13

d whereunto ye were delivered.

e y Jo. 8:32

f ver. 16.

g or, to.

h c. 7.

i c. 1:32

j Ja. 1:13

k Ge. 2:17

l c. 5:17, 21.

m 1 Pe. 4:1

n 1 Co. 7:39

o Mat. 5:32

p Ga. 5:18

q Ga. 5:22

r Ro. 8:9, 9

s passions

t c. 6:21

u or, being

v dead to w that.

18 Being then made free ^a from sin, ye became the servants of righteousness.

19 I speak after the manner of men, because of the infirmity of your flesh: for as ye have yielded your members servants to uncleanness and to iniquity unto iniquity; even so now yield your members servants to righteousness unto holiness.

20 For when ye were the servants ^b of sin, ye were free ^c from righteousness.

21 What fruit ^d had ye then in those things whereof ye are now ashamed? for the end ^e of those things is death.

22 But now being made free from sin, and become servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life.

23 For ^f the wages of sin is death; but the gift ^g of God is eternal ^h life through Jesus Christ our Lord.

CHAPTER VII.

1 No law hath power over a man longer than he liveth. 4 But we are dead to the law. 7 Yet is not the law sin, 12 but holy, just, good, 16 as I acknowledge, while am grieved because I cannot keep it.

KNOW ye not, brethren, (for I speak to them that know the law,) how that the law hath dominion over a man as long as he liveth?

2 For ^a the woman which hath a husband is bound by the law to ^b her husband so long as he liveth; but if the husband be dead, she is loosed from the law of ^c her husband.

3 So then if, while ^d her husband liveth, she be married to another man, she shall be called an adulteress: but if her husband be dead, she is free from that law; so that she is no adulteress, though she be married to another man.

4 Wherefore, my brethren, ye also are become dead to the law ^e by the body of Christ; that ye should be married to another, ^f even to him who is raised from the dead, that we should bring forth ^g fruit unto God.

5 For when we were ^h in the flesh, the ⁱ motions of sins, which were by the law, did work in our members to bring forth fruit ^j unto death.

6 But now we are delivered from the law, ^k that being dead wherein we were held; that we should serve in newness of spirit, and not ^l in the oldness of the letter.

and communion with him. 2. Their tender sympathy in his sufferings and death, their lively joy in his resurrection, and the influence of both in mortifying the flesh and sin, and in raising them to newness of life, and animating them with the prospect of future and everlasting felicity. 3. Their increasing conformity to his sufferings and death, by being crucified to the world, and separated from its criminal pleasures, even as a man dead and buried is from all the concerns of the present life. The consequence of which was, that they who had formerly been the slaves of sin, and laboured only for the wages of eternal death, were now enlisted as volunteers in the service of their Redeemer; and so far from living in sin, as had been slanderously reported, they had for ever renounced both its service and its delights: all the members of their body were turned into weapons against the enemy of their souls. And being now liberated from sin, and become the servants of God, they were bringing forth the fruits of holiness, which would end in nothing short of everlasting life; and their continual prayer is—

"O for a heart submissive, meek,
My dear Redeemer's throne;
Where only Christ is heard to speak,
Where Jesus reigns alone."

CHAP. VII. Ver. 1—25. The law of Moses compared to that of marriage, and the Christian's deliverance therefrom:—the contest between the flesh and spirit.—The law of marriage was originally ordained for life, and no law can follow us beyond the grave. Even the law of Moses, to which the Jews

Ver. 3. Were (twice over)—Doddridge, "Have been."

Ver. 4. Into death.—Doddridge and Macknight, "Into this death."

Ver. 5. Planted together.—Vulgate and Doddridge, "Made to grow together."

Ver. 6. Old man crucified.—Five persons, says Brooks, "were studying what were the best means to mortify sin; one said, to meditate on death; the second, to meditate on judgment; the third, to meditate on the joys of heaven; the fourth, to meditate on the torments of hell; the fifth, to meditate on the blood and sufferings of Jesus Christ; and certainly the last is the choicest and strongest motive of all. If ever we would cast off our despairing thoughts, we must dwell and muse much upon, and apply this precious blood to our own souls; so shall sorrow and mourning flee away."—Might be destroyed.—Doddridge, "enervated," that it might not destroy us.

Ver. 7. Is freed.—Doddridge says, "the word here seems to import, being acquitted from future claims of subjection." So Macknight.

Ver. 10. Died unto sin once.—Doddridge, "Died for sin once."

Ver. 13. As instruments.—i. c. military instruments.—Unto sin.—i. e. as soldiers armed in the cause of sin.

Ver. 14. Not under the law, but under grace.—The two dispensations are here contrasted, as in John 1:17.

Ver. 17. But God be thanked, that ye were the servants of sin.—This is one of the most unhappy translations in the New Testament. Bishop Lancelotti renders it, "But thanks be to God, that [though] ye were the slaves of sin; yet have ye obeyed from the heart the doctrine, on the model of which ye were formed." Doddridge translates it to the same effect thus:—Thanks be to God, that whereas ye were the servants of sin, ye have obeyed from the heart the model of doctrine into which ye were delivered." The allusion undoubtedly is to the casting of figures in a mould.—Form of doctrine which was delivered you.—The margin reads, "whereunto ye were delivered." So Macknight.

Ver. 19. After the manner of men.—See chap. iii. 5.

Ver. 20. Free from righteousness.—i. e. not under the control of its precepts.

Ver. 21. What fruit had ye, &c.—i. e. what advantage did ye derive from a life of sinful pleasures?

Ver. 23. The wages of sin is death.—The term "wages," according to Macknight, is an allusion particularly to the pay of soldiers. Sin is here described as a tyrant, whose service is sure to end in misery and death; Jesus, as a conqueror, bestowing the rich reward of eternal life and happiness. The death here mentioned must certainly be more than temporal.

CHAP. VII. Ver. 1. Over a man.—(Or person, either man or woman; en thronos and homo having this exact of signification.)—Bogster.—As long as he liveth.—Doddridge, "as long as he liveth," meaning the law; but by the gospel the law is dissolved on both sides. The Christian is dead to the Mosaic law, and the law to him, as to all hopes of salvation from it.

Ver. 2. The woman.—(Rather, a woman. The apostle here illustrates the position laid down in the preceding verse by a familiar instance.)—Bogster.

Ver. 5. When we were in the flesh.—We understand by this expression, an unconverted state.—Which were by the law.—i. e. By the law was the knowledge of sin.—chap. iii. 20. So here, ver. 7.—Fruit unto death.—i. e. deadly fruits, or wicked works, in opposition to good works, or fruit towards God.

Ver. 6. In newness of spirit.—i. e. in a new and spiritual manner.—Cox.

7 What shall we say then? Is the law sin? God forbid. Nay, I had not ¹ known sin, but by the law: for I had not known lust, except the law had ² said, 'Thou shalt not covet.'

8 But sin, taking occasion by the commandment, wrought in me all manner of concupiscence. For without the law sin was dead.

9 For I was alive without the law once: but when the commandment came, sin revived, and I died.

10 And the commandment, which was ordained to life, I found to be unto death.

11 For sin, taking occasion by the commandment, deceived me, and by it slew me.

12 Wherefore the law ³ is holy, and the commandment holy, and just, and good.

13 Was then that which is good made death unto me? God forbid. But sin, that it might appear sin, working death in me by that which is good: that sin by the commandment might become exceeding sinful.

14 For we know that the law is spiritual: but I am carnal, sold ⁴ under sin.

15 For that which I do I ⁵ allow not: for what I would, that do I not: but what I hate, that do I.

A M. cir. 4062.
A D. cir. 58.
i c. 3. 20.
j or, concupiscence.
k Ex 20 17.
l Ec 20 11, &c.
m Ps 19 7, 9.
n 2 Ki 17 17.
o know.
p Ge 6 5.
q Ga 5 17.
r Ps 65 3.
s Ps 12.
t 2 Co 4 16.
u Ps 34.
v c 6 13, 19.
w Ps 142 7.
x or, this body of death.
y Ps 88 5.
z 1 Co 15 57.

16 If then I do that which I would not, I consent unto the law that it is good.

17 Now then it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me.

18 For I know that in me (that is, in my flesh,) dwelleth no ⁶ good thing: for to will is present with me; but how to perform that which is good I find not.

19 For ⁷ the good that I would I do not: but the evil which I would not, that I do.

20 Now if I do that I would not, it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me.

21 I find then a law, that, when I would do good, evil is present ⁸ with me.

22 For I delight ⁹ in the law of God after the inward ¹⁰ man:

23 But I see another law in ¹¹ my members, warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity ¹² to the law of sin which is in my members.

24 O ¹³ wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from ¹⁴ the body of this ¹⁵ death?

25 I ¹⁶ thank God through Jesus Christ our Lord. So then with the mind I myself serve the law of God; but with the flesh the law of sin.

had been married by the Sinai covenant, had dominion over a man no longer than he lived. But this law was become metaphorically dead, as to any authoritative command over them, upon their being married to Christ by faith. So, on the other hand, they were dead to the law, no longer looking to it for justification or eternal life. This mode of reasoning, though it may appear to us somewhat obscure, was perfectly familiar and intelligible to the Jews, and we shall find several similar examples in Paul's Epistles, and especially in those to the Galatians and to the Hebrews.

The first part of this chapter seems addressed particularly to Jewish converts—"I speak (says he) to them that know the law"—and of these were probably many, as a great number of Jews resided in Rome. And when Paul adverts to himself and to his own experience, it must be remembered that he also was a Jew, and born under the Mosaic law. The great majority of members might be, however, Gentile converts, who had lived under the law of Nature only, to which they were as much wedded as were the Jews to the Mosaic law; that is, they expected life and salvation therefrom: Paul therefore now adverts to this, and shows that, as a covenant of life, they must be divorced from that also, though not as a rule of life, in which respect the obligation of the moral law is universal and eternal: and therefore Paul himself still obeyed it with his heart and mind, notwithstanding the leanings of his corrupt nature to flesh and sin.

But the chief difficulty in the chapter now before us relates to the contest between the flesh and spirit—the old and new man. Many learned commentators are of opinion that the Apostle here speaks not in his own, but in a borrowed character; and the great majority of them, among whom are Drs. Hammond, Taylor, and Macknight, consider him as speaking in the character of an unconverted Jew. It is plain the speaker was a convinced sinner, for he says, (ver. 14,) that sin had "deceived him," and that the law had "slain him." He was convinced that in himself, naturally, there dwelt nothing good. He felt within him the struggle of the contrary principles of flesh and spirit—of good and evil: his flesh or corrupt nature tempting him to sin, whilst in his new or regenerate nature he delighted in the law of God; and though he confessed and bewailed his union to that corrupt nature which was a body of sin and death, yet he thanked God, through Jesus Christ, that notwithstanding all his temptations and his failures, with the heart and mind he "served the law of God." Now, then, whether the apostle spake this "of himself, or of some other man," that man must have been converted by the grace of God. But it is equally plain that he spake this of himself only: for what can be more express than, "I thank God through Jesus Christ our Lord—with the mind I MYSELF serve the law of God."

The only remaining question is, How can we consistently apply to a pious and virtuous man, as Paul now was, some of the expressions here used? And, first, we would remark that it was his manner—even his glory—to debase himself, and to magnify his Lord. He not only had been the chief of sinners, but even now, when not inferior to the chief of the apostles, still he speaks of himself as "less than the least of all saints." 2. The best and holiest of men in all ages have not scrupled to apply these confessions to themselves and their own experience. Of this Augustine is a striking and well-known instance in the primitive church; and without making a parade of modern names, those of Bp. Hall and Dr. Watts, are abundantly sufficient. Will any living Christian say to such men as these, "Stand by, for I am holier than thou?"

Let us now inquire which of the expressions here used is inapplicable to a wise and good man, as was St Paul. The strongest expression here used is in verse 14—"I am carnal, sold under sin;" but it is very obvious the expression is not used absolutely, but comparatively—"The law is spiritual, but I am carnal,"—not absolutely and wholly so; but as to the flesh, (ver. 18,) and in comparison with the infinitely pure law of God. With regard to the expression "sold under sin," it is materially different from what is said of Ahab, (with which it often has been compared,) who "sold himself to work evil;" (1 Kings xxi. 26;) whereas the apostle was "sold under sin;" brought into captivity by that "carnal mind," of which he says in the next chapter, (ver. 7,) it is "not subject to the law of God, neither, indeed, can be."

Again, he complains that, in his flesh, he finds, "no good thing;"—that though he had a will to do good, he had not of himself strength to perform it; so that the good which he would he often did not, while he often did what he could neither allow nor approve: but this language is so far from suiting the character of an unconverted man, that he could not use it with propriety; for though such a one may often sin against his judgment and his conscience, yet his heart goes

Ver. 7. Is the law sin?—i. e. sinful or inclining us to sin?—I had not known lust—Or what lust was, namely, that it was an inordinate or unlawful desire.—Thou shalt not covet—Paul here refers to his own experience, were it not for his knowledge of God's law, he would not have known the criminality of lust.

Ver. 8. Concupiscence.—Macknight, "strong desire;" which here means lust, and is so rendered in the preceding verse.—For without the law—Rather, "For without a law sin is dead." Where there is no law, there is no transgression; for sin is the transgression of the law: the very essence of sin consists in the violation of some positive law.—Engster.

Ver. 9. I was alive, &c.—Notwithstanding what is said in the exposition, we do not think this proves the speaker to be either Jew or Gentile, but a converted man. Before he understood the law in its spirituality, as explained by our Lord in Mat. v. 28, he was "alive;" and well; or, as our Lord expresses it, he was, like other Pharisees, "whole, needing no physician," Mat. ix. 12; but "when the law came," i. e. appeared to him as it really is, he was "sick;" he felt the danger he was in, and "died," as to all hope of life or salvation thereby.

Ver. 10. Which was ordained to life.—See chap. v. 5.

Ver. 13. Might become.—i. e. might evidently appear—exceeding sinful.—i. e. in its true colours—rather criminal and execrable.

Ver. 14. The law is spiritual.—See on verse 9.

Ver. 15. I allow not.—Galaker, Doddridge, Macknight, and Coz, "approve not." Sin that dwelleth in me.—To illustrate this passage, Doddridge alludes to the story of Araspe, in Xenophon's Cyropaedia, who on being re-proved by Cyrus for some improper conduct toward Panthaea, replied—"Alas! now I know myself, and perceive plainly that I have two souls; one that inclines me to good, and the other to evil: in your presence the former prevails; but when I am alone, I am conquered by the latter."

Ver. 24. The body of this death.—Martin, "this body of death," alluding to a cruel custom of fastening the living to the dead. Doddridge says—"It is well known that some ancient writers mention this as a cruelty practised by some tyrants on miserable captives who fell into their hands; and a more forcible and expressive image of the case represented, cannot surely enter into the mind of man." That such a cruelty was once practised is certain from Virgil:—

"What words can paint those execrable times;
The subjects' sufferings, and the tyrant's crimes!"

The living and the dead, at his command.

Were compied, face to face and hand to hand:

Till chok'd with stench, in both'd embraces tied,

The ling'ring wretches parted away and died."—Dryden.

Ver. 25. But.—Doddridge, "though;" (Gr. de)—with the flesh, &c.—Macknight and others read these words in the interrogative, but, we think, in direct contradiction to the apostle's train of argument. See the opening of chap. viii. A more full, and we think, a complete justification of the application of this chapter to Paul's own case, may be found in Gill's Cause of God and Truth. Prof. Stuart, in his commentary, interprets ver. 5–25 as having respect to a person under the law, and not under grace.

CHAPTER. VIII.

They that are in Christ, and live according to the Spirit, are free from condemnation. 5, 13 What harm cometh of the flesh, 6, 14 and what good of the Spirit: 17 and what of being God's child, 19 whose glorious deliverance all things long for, 29 was beforehand decreed from God. 38 What can sever us from his love?

THERE is therefore now no ^a condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk ^b not after the flesh, but after the Spirit.

2 For the law of the Spirit of life ^c in Christ Jesus hath made me free ^d from the law of sin and death.

3 For what the law could not ^e do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending his own Son ^f in the likeness of sinful flesh, and ^g for sin, condemned sin in the flesh:

4 That the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk ^h not after the flesh, but after the Spirit.

5 For they that are after the ⁱ flesh do mind the things of the flesh; but they that are after the Spirit the things ^j of the Spirit.

6 For ^k to be carnally minded is ^l death; but ^m to be spiritually minded ⁿ is life and peace.

7 Because ^k the carnal mind is enmity against God: for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be.

with his sin. When St. Paul says, "If I do that I would not, it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me;" we are aware the language has been often adopted by bad men as an apology for sin; but for what sin did Paul thus apologise? His language is that of penitence and regret: "O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" or this dead body of sin, which, like a corpse chained to him, dragged down his new and spiritual nature towards the earth and sin.

It is also a mistake to attribute moral perfection, or even infallibility of conduct, to an inspired person, even the chief of the apostles; for not only does Paul thus bewail himself, but James says, "In many things we all offend," (James iii. 2.) and even the amiable and beloved John, "If we say we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us." 1 John i. 8.

CHAP. VIII. 1-16. The privileges of believers in conversion and adoption.—This chapter is generally considered as closely connected with the preceding; so much so, that Dr. Doddridge considers their separation as one of the most unhappy divisions made of the chapters of the New Testament. "With the mind," (says Paul,) that is, with the nobler powers of my spirit, "I myself serve the law of God, though with the flesh the law of sin;" but the main question is, While this contention prevailed within, which way was his life and conversation bent? Did he "walk after the flesh," fulfilling the lusts thereof? or did he not, notwithstanding the struggle which it cost him, turn his back upon these, and follow the dictates of his new nature, and of the Spirit of God, by which it was inspired? His well known character and conduct must give the answer. "Walking," therefore, "after," or according to "the Spirit," he justly inferred that there was no condemnation to him: "For (saith he) the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus," that is, the spiritual life which I enjoy, hath "prevailed and triumphed over the law," or power "of sin and death;" and liberated me from its dominion. "For what the law could not do"—What was that? The law could neither justify nor sanctify; but "what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the [depravity of the] flesh," that God hath done by "sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh;" though himself perfectly unstained by sin, God visited our sins upon him as our substitute, and by him "the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled" both for and in us, and all who "walk not after the flesh, but after the spirit." This walking after or according to the things of the spirit, or spiritual things, is here explained by "minding," that is, being devoted to spiritual things; as walking after the flesh is also interpreted of attachment and devotion to carnal and worldly objects. To be thus carnally minded is declared to be death in the most awful sense, as implying not only spiritual, but eternal death; for the carnal mind cannot be subjected to God's law, nor can the carnally minded, while in that state, please him. The cause of this distinction is plainly shown to originate in the work of the Spirit of God; for "if any man have not the Spirit of God, he is not one of his children;" but if the Spirit of God dwell

A. M. cir. 4052.
A. D. cir. 58.

a Jn. 3.18.
b Ga. 3.16.
c 2 Co. 3.6.
d Ga. 2.19.
5.1.
e Ac. 13.39.
He 7.18.
19.
f Ga. 3.13.
g or, by a sacrifice for sin.
h ver. 1.
i Jn. 3.6.
l Co. 1.48.
j 1 Co. 2.14.
k the minding of the
of the l Ga. 6.8.
m the minding of the spirit.

n 1 Co. 6.19.
Ga. 4.6.
o 2 Co. 4.14.
p or, because of.
q Ps. 116.16.
r Col. 3.5.
s Ga. 5.18.
t 2 Ti. 1.7.
u 1 Co. 2.12.
v Je. 3.19.
Ga. 4.5,6.

8 So then they that are in the flesh cannot please God.

9 But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell ^a in you. Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his.

10 And if Christ ^b be in you, the body ^c is dead because of sin; but the Spirit ^d is life because of righteousness.

11 But if the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, ^e he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies ^f by his Spirit that dwelleth in you.

12 Therefore, brethren, we are debtors, not ^g to the flesh, to live after the flesh.

13 For if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die: but if ye through the Spirit do mortify ^h the deeds of the body, ye shall live.

14 For as many as are led ⁱ by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God.

15 For ye have not received the spirit of bondage ^j again to fear; but ^k ye have received the Spirit of ^l adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father.

in us, then do we mortify the deeds of the flesh; then are we his children. "For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God," by adoption and grace;—and having received the Spirit of adoption, they are so far delivered from alarm and fear, and call upon God, as their Father which is in heaven.

"The Mosaic dispensation (says Mr. Cox) indirectly tended to excite in the minds of the Jews an awful and servile dread of the Supreme Being; but the Gospel is eminently calculated to inspire believers with a spirit of love towards God, and a lively confidence in his favour and protection. A 'spirit of adoption,' the happy privilege of all real Christians, entitles them to address God under the endearing character of a friend who is reconciled to them, and a Father who loves them with more than paternal affection. The word Father being expressed both in Syriac and Greek, beautifully represents Jewish and Gentile believers as joining in the same worship, and enjoying the same filial relationship to God."

The close of this section leads us to speak of the grace of adoption as bestowed on those who, by faith, are received into the family of God. In every act of adoption, a child is taken from another family, (or perhaps from a more distant branch of the same), and introduced as the son and heir of the adopter, a practice that is observed, more or less, in almost all countries. But the most important point for our present consideration is, the witness of the Spirit here spoken of: "The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God." And it is the more important that we should understand the nature of this blessing, as, by mistakes on this subject, many have been led into the errors of a dangerous enthusiasm: to avoid which, we shall refer our readers to the temperate and judicious remarks of the pious and amiable Dr. Watts:—"The substance of this testimony of the Spirit to our adoption, may (says the Doctor) be represented after this manner:—The Spirit of God, in his word, has described the marks and characters of his children; and, by his gracious influence, he works these holy dispositions, these characters, in our hearts: God has given us a conscience, which is a faculty of comparing ourselves with the rule of his word, and judging accordingly. The Spirit of God, by his power and by his providence, awakens these holy dispositions into lively exercise: he assists our inquiring and our judging faculties; helps us to compare our own souls with his word; and thus confirms our own spirits in the belief of this proposition, that we are the children of God. This is the more common and ordinary way and method, whereby God is pleased to give the comforts of adoption to his people." (Evang. Disc. No. xi.)

The same judicious writer, however, (in his subsequent discourse,) admits that there are instances of a more extraordinary nature to be found in the experience of men eminent for piety and usefulness, (such as the venerable John Howe, for example;) but we ought to be very cautious not to reason from them in any way that should lead us to slight the ordinary means of grace, or to act under the influence of extraordinary impressions, instead of following the written word.

CHAP. VIII. Ver. 1. No condemnation.—The Greek is emphatic, "Not one condemnation."—Who walk not after—(Greek, kata) "according to;" so throughout the chapter.

Ver. 3. What the law could not do.—Literally, "the impossible of the law." This expression is evidently elliptical, and Boothroyd thus supplies the ellipsis—"What the law could not do—God [hath done,] sending, &c.—And for sin." The word sin is, in both Testaments, sometimes used in the sense of a sacrifice for sin. See 2 Corinthians v. 21.—Condemned sin in the flesh—i. e. punished it in our surety under a legal sentence, on our account.

Ver. 4. In us.—This is the most usual sense, but it often means for us, and both senses may be here included. The law was fulfilled for us by Christ, and is fulfilled in us by the work of his Holy Spirit.

Ver. 6. For.—Doddridge, "Now." Ver. 7. Because the carnal mind is enmity, &c.—The carnal mind is the object of aversion to God.

Ver. 8. They that are in the flesh—i. e. that "walk after the flesh," as in verse 1.

Ver. 10. The body is dead—i. e. mortal, or condemned to die. Ver. 15 Spirit of bondage—Or "of slaves." See Gal. iv. 3.—We cry, Abba, Father.—Abba is Syriac for Father. M. Claude says, "St. Paul alludes to a law among the Jews, which forbade slaves to call a freeman Abba."

16 The Spirit itself beareth ^w witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God :

17 And if children, then heirs ; ^a heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ ; ^b if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together.

18 For ^c I reckon ^d that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us.

19 For the earnest expectation of the creature waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God.

20 For the creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of him who hath subjected the same in hope.

21 Because ^e the creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God.

A M ca.
A. 14, cr.
55
w 24 v 1 22
1 Jo 4 13
x Ac 26 13
1 Pe 1 1
y 2 Th 2 11, 12
z 2 Co 4 17.
a 2 Pe 3 13.
b or, every creature.
c Ep 1 4
d Ac 5 2, 4
e Lu 21 28
1 2 Co 5 7
g Zec 12 10

22 For we know that ^b the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now.

23 And not only they, but ourselves also, which have the first-fruits ^c of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan ^d within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption ^e of our body.

24 For we are saved by hope : but hope that is seen is not hope : for what a man seeth, why doth he yet hope ^f for ?

25 But if we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it.

26 Likewise the Spirit also helpeth our infirmities : for we know not what we should pray for as we ought : but ^g the Spirit itself maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered.

Ver. 17—27. The blessedness of believers, and the vanity of the world.—The concluding paragraph of our preceding section connects so intimately with the present, that we cannot avoid reverting to it in the beginning of this. The Spirit, according to St. Paul, bearing "witness with our spirit," that we are the children of God ; it bears witness also, that if children, then are we heirs ; heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ ; if so be that we suffer with him, that we also may be glorified together. These, indeed, are great and mysterious truths, and must appear utterly unaccountable and incredible to those who are strangers to the spiritual and divine influences above referred to. To those, however, who by faith are enabled to cry, "Abba, Father," they afford consolation under all their trials, because they reasonably infer, that if they are made partakers with their Lord and Saviour in the trials and sufferings of the present life, they also shall be glorified together in a better world. "For I reckon (says the apostle) that the sufferings of this present time, are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in (and to) us," in another life.

The following passage, however, is confessedly obscure, and being attended with such difficulty, has of course met with a variety of interpretations. It has been asked, 1. What is meant by the creature of creation (for it is the same word in the original) here referred to ? 2. What is the vanity to which it was involuntarily subjected ? And, 3. What the glory to which it is hereafter to be restored ?

Not having room to enumerate the different answers which have been given to these questions, we shall simply state our own conceptions on the subject. 1. It may be recollected that our Lord commanded his Gospel to be preached "to every creature," (Mark xvi. 15) and that St. Paul asserts in his Epistle to the Colossians, (i. 23,) written but a few years after this, that it had been so preached—meaning to every rational creature : to such, therefore we restrain it.—2. This rational creature, as our apostle stated in chap. v. 12, &c., had been made "subject to vanity" and death, not willingly or through any act of their own, but by the sin of their first father, Adam ; in consequence of which they were continually groaning together under the miseries which their own sin, and that of their first progenitor, had drawn upon them.—And, 3. Not only was there an infinitude of heavenly bliss set before them in the heavenly world, but a far better state of things was promised them, even in the present life : first, in the Gospel dispensation ; secondly, in the glories of the millennium ; and, finally, in the general resurrection of the dead.

All these particulars might admit of an enlargement that would, we think, tend to establish our interpretation ; but suffice it to add, upon the second head only, it is well known that a general expectation was prevalent through the world, from the time of the Hebrew prophets and the pagan sylvans, that some mighty revolution would take place under the expected

Saviour of the world : and both our Lord and his apostles encouraged such expectations by promises of the universal spread of knowledge, peace, and happiness. Then shall "the creature"—the rational creation—and, in a figurative sense, even the inanimate creation, be "delivered from the bondage of corruption," and admitted to participate "the glorious liberty of the children of God."

When the apostle, in the preceding verses, speaks of the creature being "made subject to vanity," he says it was "by reason of," or rather, "by Him who had subjected (the same) in hope." This is differently referred to by some (as Doddridge) to Adam, whose fall subjected our unhappy world to misery and corruption ; but by others (as Macknight, Boothroyd, Cor., &c.) to God himself, who, upon that event, doomed the world to such subjection ; but the former, in the act of his fall, had certainly no thought about his recovery, and the Supreme Being cannot be the subject of either hope or expectation : He who can command all things can hope nothing. The best modern critics and commentators, therefore, read the passage with a parenthesis, thus :—"The earnest expectation of the creature (or creation) waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God :—(for the creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by [or through] him that subjected the same :)—in hope, that the creature (or creation) itself also shall be delivered," &c. Here hope is properly applied to the general expectation of mankind, of another and better state of things, and this hope, or earnest expectation, was entertained, not only by the world at large, but even by believers, who, notwithstanding they had received the first-fruits of the Spirit, still lived under the expectation of greater things in the present state, and the final completion of their hopes and expectations in the redemption of their bodies from the grave, which is attributed to the same Holy Spirit, who in the present life quickens the soul from spiritual death. (See ver. 10, 11.)

When, in the next verse, the apostle adds, "even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption," he intimates a weariness of the world, and an indifference to both its riches and pleasures, very uncommon with Christians in the present day, who frequently seek with anxiety those very things with which the primitive Christians were weary and disgusted. And though here and there are doubtless some, and even many, who look beyond the present state, there are few who carry forward their wishes to the grand period of the resurrection, when the body shall be redeemed from the grave. Whether it be from a more lively view of the intermediate state, or a more distant one of the resurrection, this doctrine seldom affects us as it did believers of the apostolic age.

Still, however, our religion consists in hope—in the hope of "another and a better world ;" in the mean time it is our duty to wait with patience, and pursue with ardour, the path of duty ; and when our strength fails, (as, alas ! it soon does,) and the make them regard their present temporary sufferings as altogether unworthy to be accounted of."

Ver. 18 Revealed in us.—Doddridge, "to us." (Gr. eis) Ver. 19 The earnest expectation.—Literally, "the stretching forth of the neck," or "heaving" in looking with great anxiety. See Macknight.

Ver. 20 But by reason of.—(Gr. diu Doddridge, &c.)—"In hope.—The connecting this verse with the following (ver. 21) seems the best, and perhaps the only way of clearing up the obscure passage, and is therefore adopted by Locke, Doddridge, Gouge, Macknight, Cor., Boothroyd, &c.

Ver. 21 In hope.—Bretnise.—Rather, In hope that, &c.—(Gr. en) Hammond, Doddridge, &c.

Ver. 22 The whole creation (or every creature) groaneth.—&c.—In our exposition we have made this not only to the rational creation, but by the figure, prosopopoeia, even to the inanimate creation, which being defiled by sin, will be purified by fire. 2 Peter i. 7. Some have hence inferred a resurrection, not only of the rational, but animal creation ; for this, however, we can find no authority in the text ; and not being revealed, we are not called to give an opinion on the subject.—Travailing in pain.—The world at this time was lag with revolutions, and with convulsions.

Ver. 23 The adoption.—&c.—The Romans had a twofold form of adoption : the first, was a private transaction between the parties, receiving the person adopted into the family ; the second, was a public recognition in the forum. Hope thinks the latter here alluded to. Compare 1 John ii. 2.

Ver. 24 Hope that is seen.—i. e. the object of which is present. Hope necessarily regards the future, as in next verse.

Ver. 26 Helpeth our infirmities.—Cor., "Assisteth us under our infirmities." The original alludes to assisting a person to bear a burden.—Doddridge.

27 And he ^h that searcheth the hearts knoweth what ^{is} the mind of the Spirit, ⁱ because he maketh intercession for the saints according ¹ to the will of God.

28 And we know ^k that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to ^{his} purpose.

29 For whom he did ^l foreknow, he also did predestinate ^{to be} conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the first-born among many brethren.

30 Moreover whom he did predestinate, them he also ^m called: and whom he called, them he also ⁿ justified; and whom he justified, them he also ^o glorified.

31 What shall we then say to these things? If ^p God be for us, who can be against us?

32 He ^q that spared not his own Son, but de-

A. M. 4062.
A. D. 58.
h. Je. 17. 10.
i. Ro. 2. 23.
j. 1. Cor. 13. 11.
k. Ps. 46. 1-2.
l. He. 4. 6.
m. 1. Tim. 2. 4.
n. He. 9. 13.
o. Ro. 8. 30.
p. 1. Cor. 12. 22.
q. 1. Ps. 136.
r. Co. 5. 6. 10.

burdens of life become too heavy for us, the Comforter, whom our Lord long since had promised his disciples, lays hold, as I were, of the other end of the load, and supports both us and it. Thus it is we teach our infant children frequently to try their strength, by assisting them to carry things beyond it; supporting them from falling, yet, at times, relaxing that support, that they may learn the necessity of our assistance.

The expression, "he intercedeth for" the saints, Dr. Macknight renders "he complaineth"—and the second time (verse 27) "strongly complaineth" for them; which suggests this beautiful idea, that when believers "groan within themselves," and know not "what to pray for as they ought," the Spirit gives energy to their complaints, and aids their pleas "with groans unutterable," or "unutterable." And "he who searcheth the heart," hears "the groaning" of the oppressed, and the "sighing of the needy;" (Exod. ii. 24. Ps. xli. 5.) he also knoweth the mind of the Spirit, and that he always makes "intercession for them according to the will of God." When, therefore, believers think their prayers pass unheard or unregarded, it may be well to consider whether their heavenly Father may not have listened rather to the pleadings of his own Spirit, who may substitute what we need for what we desire; and, instead of what might really be injurious, gives that only which is good for us.

Ver. 28—30. The golden chain of a believer's privileges.—So we hesitate not to call the series of divine blessings here introduced, and which we shall feel it our duty to examine with some distinctness, for every link of it was formed in heaven. In the preceding verses St. Paul had been speaking of bondage, groans, and traveling pains; but, adds he, distressing as these things may be—"We know that all things work together," or co-operate, for good to them that love God. Many of the heathens uttered fine things on the advantages of affliction, particularly Plato, who says, "Whether a righteous man be in poverty, sickness, or any other calamity, we must conclude that it will turn to his advantage, either in life or death." (Republic, Book ix.) But Paul's representation is far more beautiful. He looks not only to the end of these evils, but assumes us that, even at the present time, all things "are working together" (so Mr. Cox) for our good. Some have illustrated this metaphor from "the art of the apothecary," who so compounds a variety of heterogeneous ingredients, some nauseous, and others dangerous, as to produce a salutary medicine; or it may be explained in allusion to the mechanism of a machine, in which a variety of motions, simple and compound, vertical and horizontal, are combined to produce certain mechanical effects.

It has been disputed whether, among the "all things" here named, moral evil should be included. Far be it from the writer to offer one word in apology for sin, or attempt to palliate its malignity; yet, as the skillful physician can produce the most salutary effects from poisons, and, in so doing, most efficiently display his skill; so we consider it nothing derogatory to his honour, that the Divine Being overrules the worst actions of men to promote his glory. The apostasy of our first parent was an evil of immense magnitude; yet, when the great scheme of redemption shall be completed, who shall say that the evil has not been overbalanced by that redemption? The crucifixion of Christ was a crime of the most fearful character; and yet out of that has arisen, through the operation of infinite wisdom, the salvation of mankind. "All things, therefore, work together for good;" but no thanks to the guilty agents. Thus, also, it was, in the conduct of Joseph's brethren, as honestly afterwards told them, "Ye thought evil against me, but God meant it unto good." (Gen. l. 20.) Sin so far as man is concerned in it, is "the absolute thing which God hateth" (Jer. xlv. 4) yet may all the divine attributes be gloriously displayed in its subjection and counteraction, and in the infinite benefits which arise therefrom.

Yet, when all things are said to work together for good, we must inquire to whom they eventually do this? and the answer is, to those "who are the called according to" God's eternal "purpose." By "eternal calling," as divines call it, we understand the drawing of sinners to Christ by God the Father; (John vi. 44;) or, which is the same thing, their conversion by the Holy Spirit. We have said, these are the called according to God's eternal purpose, and so does the apostle, "for whom he foreknew he also did predestinate." That the Almighty does foreknow future events—all future events, and that to the infinite extent of his own existence, cannot be denied, without denying his omniscience; though, at the same time, to reconcile this with man's free-will, so as to silence all objections, is that to which we do not pretend; yea, it is that to which neither Milton was equal, nor yet his angels. This is one of the things which we "know not now," but probably may know hereafter. (John xii. 7.)

We must carefully observe, however, the object of predestination, namely, that the elect may be conformed to the moral image of Christ; for that this, and not merely a conformity either in present sufferings or in future glory, is intended, is most evident from the comparison of other Scriptures, particularly from Ephes. i. 3, where the very end of their election is stated to be, "that they should be holy;" and thus St. Peter (1. Epis. i. 3) speaks of believers as "elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, through sanctification of the Spirit unto obedience," &c. And while this truth is borne in mind, namely, that holiness is the great end of election, this doctrine can surely do no harm; unless, indeed, any man should be so awfully perverse as to say, I will persevere in sin, because God has predestinated me to be holy! But predestination originates in foreknowledge; "whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate;" from which some have hastily inferred, that God predestinated those to holiness whom he fore-saw would be holy, making their holiness the source of God's decree, instead of the reverse. It is true, indeed, as Mr. Cox observes, that "As knowledge frequently in the language of Scripture implies approbation, so fore-knowledge often includes the notion of love and favourable regard;" (Rom. xi. 2. Amos iii. 2.) But thence to infer that our election originates in works foreseen, is to make our salvation not "of grace," as the Scriptures teach us, but of human merit, and the sinner the first moving cause in his own salvation.

Other divines, to avoid the doctrine of personal election, and its supposed consequences, have considered it in reference to the Jewish nation; but it would be as difficult to believe that the Almighty could foresee any thing in the Jewish nation to attract his love, as it would be to believe the same of any individual sinner; indeed, we shall find St. Paul, in our next chapter (verse 11,) expressly arguing to the contrary. Besides, as Dr. Macknight remarks, (who was far enough from being a Calvinist,) as the foreknowledge here mentioned "is connected with sanctification, justification, and glorification, it must be a foreknowledge of individuals, as heirs of eternal life." We are therefore compelled to believe, that this predestination refers to God's unmerited love to sinners, whom he "predestinated to be conformed to the image of his Son," as is here said, and not in any foreseen resemblance which could occasion God's decree. We shall only here add, that, with the venerable Fathers of the church of England, we consider that "the godly consideration of predestination, and of our election in Christ, is full of sweet, pleasant, and unspeakable comfort to godly persons, and such as feel in themselves the working of the Spirit of Christ, mortifying the works of the flesh, and their earthly members, and drawing up their mind to high and heavenly things; as well as because it doth greatly establish and confirm their faith of eternal salvation to be enjoyed through Christ, as because it doth fervently kindle their hope towards God." But "or curious and carnal persons, lacking the Spirit of Christ, to have continually before their eyes the sentence of God's predestination, is a most dangerous downfall, whereby the devil doth thrust them into desperation, or into wretchedness of most unclean living, no less perilous than desperation."

Ver. 31—39. The Christian triumph.—It should seem that the apostle Paul did not consider the Scripture doctrine of predestination in that alarming view that some modern divines

Ver. 27. He (the Holy Spirit) maketh intercession.—The word intercession seems to be used not only in the sense of pleading, or interceding, but Doddridge thinks it is here used in the sense of naming a person's affairs as their own. So Schlosser, in allusion to the passage, says, "The phrase sounds a note at an individual's ear, to be the agent, attorney, or advocate in a cause; or, in common life, to interpose on another's behalf." He used to say—"Macknight's translation, 'complaineth' relates to the same idea of agency: the attorney lodges complaints on the behalf of his clients."

Ver. 28. Work together for good.—When the Rev. Bernard Gilin was on his way to London, to be tried before the French party, he broke his leg by a fall, which put a stop for some time to his journey. The person in whose custody he was, took occasion from the circumstance to rebuke him for his inactivity; he used frequently to make, "that nothing but pain to us but what is intended for our good," asking him, "Whether he thought his broken leg was so?" He answered meekly "He made no question but it was." And indeed, so it proved, for before he was able to travel, Queen Mary died (being thus) awfully rescued, he returned to Houghton through crowds of people, expressing the utmost joy, and blessing God for his deliverance.

Ver. 29. Forbears.—To constitute or appoint beforehand—to foreordain.

Rev. 17.—The first-born among many brethren.—See Ps. lxxv. 27.

Ver. 30. They be also glorified.—The term sanctification here is here omitted, though the doctrine is necessarily implied, some have supposed as Barnes, for instance, that it must be included under justification; but we should rather include it under the last article, glorification, which is its completion.

Ver. 32. His own Son.—Macknight, "his proper Son;" the original being emphatic, corresponding with John v. 18—For us all— as an atonement for the sins of men.

ivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things ?

32 Who ^a shall lay any thing to the charge of God's elect ? It is God that justifieth.

31 Who is he that condemneth ? It is Christ that died, yea rather, that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us.

35 Who shall separate us from the love of Christ ? shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword ?

36 As it is ^a written, For thy sake we are killed all the day long ; we are accounted as sheep for the slaughter.

37 Nay, in ^a all these things we are more than conquerors through him ^a that loved us.

38 For I am persuaded, that ^a neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come,

39 Nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord.

CHAPTER IX.

^a Paul is sorry for the Jews. 7 All the seed of Abraham were not the children of the promise. 15 Paul hath mercy upon whom he will. 21 The potter may do with his clay what he list. 25 The calling of the twelves, and rebelling of the Jews were justified. 32 The cause why the Jews had not reached the righteousness of faith.

I SAY the truth in Christ, I lie not, my conscience also bearing me witness in the Holy Ghost, have done : for no sooner has he stated it, than he bursts into the language of triumph and exultation, in " thoughts that breathe and words that burn."—"What, then, shall we say to these things ? If God be for us, who can be against us ?" The energy and rapidity with which he proceeds to the close of the chapter defies analysis, and would be injured by the tapeness of paraphrase or exposition ; we shall, therefore, only offer two or three cursory observations on particular passages.

1. The argument which our apostle derives from the love of the Father, and the incarnation and sufferings of the Son, to satisfy the believing Romans that they should be suffered to wait nothing really necessary and good for them, is most forcible and conclusive. "Can he deny you any thing who has given his own Son for your redemption ?" Can God, who justifies, become your accuser ? Or shall the Judge condemn you that died for your redemption, and lives to intercede on your behalf. The very idea is infinitely absurd.

2. They are not only assured that they shall not be deserted by their heavenly Father, or their elder brother ; but also that none of the evils of the present life, nor even the world of spirits, shall be able to separate them from God, or happiness, or heaven. On the contrary, we are assured that, in all these things, they shall be conquerors, and more than conquerors—they shall triumph over all their foes.

On this last expression we give the beautiful comment of an excellent practical writer. "In our patient hearing of the trials allotted to us, (says Dr. Leane,) we are not only conquerors, but more than conquerors, that is, triumphers. These are more than conquerors that conquer with little loss. Many conquests are dear bought ; but what do the suffering saints lose ? That which the gold loses in the furnace—nothing but the dross.—They are more than conquerors whose rewards are exceedingly rich : glory, honour, and peace, a crown of righteousness that fade-th not away. In this the suffering saints have triumphed. . . . As afflictions abound, consolations much more abound.

"There was one more than a conqueror when 'pressed above measure.' He that embraced the stake, and said, 'Welcome, the cross of Christ ; welcome, exalting life ; he that dated his life from 'the delectable orchard of the Lebanon prison ;' he that said, 'In these flames I feel no more pain than if I was on a bed of down ;' she that, a little before her martyrdom, being asked how she did, said, 'Well and merry, and going to

A Mt. cir. 40-2
A D. cir. 58
1a 50-55
a De 42-10, 11
c Ps 41-22
1 Co 14-15
30-31
u 1Co 15-57
v Jude 21
w Jam 10-28, 31
a Ex 22-32
b c separated
c De 7-6
d Ps 90-16, 16-19
e Mt. testam.
f Ge 17-2
Jw 2-11
Jc 31-33
g 1b 117-19
c 3-2 n Ex 12-25
f Ep 2-12
j c 11-28
k Lu 3-23,
Ac
l Ju 1-1
m 1a 35-11
u c 2-23, 29
c 1a 2-12
p Ga 4-25
q He 1-10, 11
r He 35-21,
25.

2 That I have great heaviness and continual sorrow in my heart.

3 For ^a I could wish that myself were ^b accursed from Christ for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh :

4 Who are Israelites ; to whom pertaineth the ^c adoption, and the ^d glory, and the ^e covenants, and the giving of the ^f law ; and the ^h service of God, and the ⁱ promises ;

5 Whose are the ^j fathers, and of ^k whom as concerning the flesh Christ came, who is ^l over all, God blessed for ever. Amen.

6 Not as though the word of God hath taken ^m none effect. For ⁿ they are not all Israel, which are of Israel :

7 Neither, because they are the seed of Abraham, are they all children : but, in ^o Isaac shall thy seed be called.

8 That is, They which are the children of the flesh, these are not the children of God ; but the children ^p of the promise are counted for the seed.

9 For this is the word of promise, ^q At this time will I come, and Sarah shall have a son.

10 And not only this ; but when Rebecca ^r also had conceived by one, even ^s by our father Isaac :

11 (For the children being not yet born, neither having done any good or evil, that the heaven : those who have gone smiling to the stake, and stood singing in the flames—these were more than conquerors."

CHAP. IX. Ver. 1.—16. Paul's deep concern for the salvation of his countrymen—believers Abraham's true seed.—In the opening of this chapter all commentators are agreed that the apostle meant to express, in the strongest terms, his attachment to his Jewish brethren, though they are much divided in their interpretations of his phraseology. We shall mention here only two or three of them, which we consider as the most probable.

Dr. John Edwards, taking the words as they lie in our translation, thus paraphrases them : "For such is my affection, that, if it were lawful and consistent, I could wish that I myself were anathema, that is, separated from Christ, (so Marg.) or (after his example) subjected to all temporal miseries, or even eternal, for the salvation of my brethren." This, however, must be considered as a strong hyperbole ; for surely nothing could reconcile Paul to the idea of eternal separation from his Lord and Master. (See on Exod. xxxii. 33.) Others, therefore, confine the anathema to temporal calamities united with ecclesiastical excommunication, a punishment which the Jews considered in a light so serious, that their relations fasted and went into mourning for them. (Orient. Lit. No. 1454.) Many, however, render the words more literally, and, by enclosing part of them in a parenthesis, read the passage thus :—"I have . . . continual sorrow in my heart (for I once did wish myself anathema from Christ) for my brethren, my kinsmen," &c., thus making the recollection of his past state before conversion, when he glared in his opposition to Christ, and probably imprecated on himself the most dreadful curses if ever he should believe in him, the ground both of his distress and of his supplications on their behalf.

St. Paul now enumerates the peculiar privileges of the Hebrews, (more fully than in chap. vi.,) among which he reckons the shekinah, or the glory which attended the tabernacle and temple in ancient time, but of which they had long since been deprived by their sins ; and crowns the climax by a reference to the Messiah, as descend ed from their fathers : "Of (or from) whom Christ came, (or descended,) who is over all, God blessed for ever : Amen." In this his object appears to be, to turn their attention from the crucified Nazarene, whom they despised, to the exalted Saviour whom he adored, and recommended to their faith.

Ver. 3. Who shall lay any thing, &c.—Doddridge, "Who shall lodge any accusation against ?" &c.—It is God—Dr. S. Baris is followed by 1st Bridge, Newcome, Boothright, &c. renders the whole of this and the following verse interrogatively, as follows :—"Who shall lodge any accusation against the elect of God ? Shall God who justifieth ? Who is he that condemneth ?" (Said Christ who did ?) &c.

Ver. 37. More than conquerors—1 "We enjoy a triumph, with which none but conquerors of the first class were honoured." The following passage has been quoted from Demosthenes, (De Corona, § 92,) as somewhat parallel with this of St. Paul, ver. 38 "As for me," says Demosthenes, "neither tempting opportunity, nor respecting speech, nor great promises, nor hope, nor fear, nor fear, nor any other thing, has ever induced me to betray my country, or to be afraid doing what I thought would contribute to its advancement and honour."

CHAP. IX. Ver. 1. I say the truth in Christ—1 "I speak as a Christian, and as an apostle of Christ." But Smith explains this as an appeal to Christ in the nature of an oath.

Ver. 3. I could wish—1 "If it were lawful and consistent," says Edwards, "supposing the inducement to be here used for the motive of ad, which there are some examples." Waterland, who is followed by Doddridge, approves this ;

Ver. 7. Neither because they are the seed, &c.—Compare chap. iv. 12, 14.

purpose of God according to election might stand, not of works, but of him that calleth;)

12 It was said unto her, The * elder shall serve the * younger.

13 As it is * written, Jacob have I loved, but Esau have I hated.

14 What shall we say then? Is * there unrighteousness with God? God forbid.

15 For he saith to Moses, I * will have mercy on whom I will have mercy, and I will have compassion on whom I will have compassion.

16 So then it is not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth, but of God that showeth mercy.

17 For the scripture saith * unto Pharaoh, Even for this same purpose have I raised thee up, that I might show my power in thee, and that my name might be declared throughout all the earth.

18 Therefore hath he mercy on whom he will have mercy, and whom he will he hardeneth.

19 Thou wilt say then unto me, Why doth he yet find fault? for who * hath resisted his will?

20 Nay but, O man, who art thou that repliest against God? Shall * the thing formed say to him that formed it, Why hast thou made me thus?

21 Hath not the potter * power over the clay,

A. M. cir.
1692.
A. D. cir.
35.

a or, greater

1 or, lesser.

n Mal 1:2,3

† De 32:4

w Ex 33:19

x Ex 9:16.

y 24 A, 20 B.

Da 4:35.

z or, earnest

again, or,

disputest

with God.

a 1:20-15

b 1:20-18.

c 17:16-1.

d 2Ti 1:20

e or, mode

up.

f Ep 1:18.

g 1 Th 5:9.

h Ho 2:23.

i Ho 1:10.

j 1:10-22.

k or, the account.

l 1:28-32

m 1:1-9

n 1:3-22.

o 1:19-21.

p 1:13-19

of the same lump to make one vessel unto honour, and another unto dishonour?

22 What * if God, willing to show his wrath, and to make his power known, endured with much long-suffering the vessels * of wrath * fitted to destruction?

23 And that he might make known the riches * of his glory on the vessels of mercy, which * he had afore prepared unto glory,

24 Even us, whom he hath called, not of the Jews only, but also of the Gentiles?

25 As he saith also in Osee, ^b I will call them my people, which were not my people; and her beloved, which was not beloved.

26 And * it shall come to pass, that in the place where it was said unto them, Ye are not my people; there shall they be called the children of the living God.

27 Esaias also crieth concerning Israel, Though the number of the children of Israel be as the sand of the sea, a remnant shall be saved:

28 For he will finish * the work, and cut it short in righteousness: because * a short work will the Lord make upon the earth.

29 And as Esaias said before, ^m Except the Lord of Sabaoth had left us a seed, we * had been as Sodom, and been made like unto Gomorrah.

The inspired writer now returns to his former topic, chap. iii. 3. "What (said he) if some did not believe, shall their unbelief make the faith of God without effect?" So here, "Now it is not possible that the word of God should have failed" of its effect; but "they are not all Israel," in the true sense of the word, that are of the posterity of Jacob; nor "because they are the seed of Abraham, are they therefore all children" of the promise, for the promise was limited to the seed of Isaac, saying, "in Isaac shall thy seed be called." And, again, when Isaac had two children, the younger was preferred; "Jacob have I loved, but Esau have I hated." We have, however, before had occasion to observe, on Luke xiv. 26, that the term hate is not always to be taken absolutely, for no man is bound "to hate his own flesh;" but the text before us is quoted from Mal. i. 3, where it evidently means that God loved Jacob in a sense in which he did not love Esau; and gave to his posterity the land of Canaan, with many privileges that were given to no other nation. And this preference of Jacob to Esau, was declared before the birth of either, that it might not be supposed dependent on the conduct of the individual; but the result of mere favour. This instance of the divine conduct is here given to show, that neither the blessings of providence nor grace are given in consideration of human merit; but according to his own words, "I will have mercy on whom I will have mercy." So God bestows or withholds his favours as he thinks proper; and salvation is "not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth;" that is, the blessings of providence, and, by analogy, those of grace also, depend not on man, but on God only. To apply this doctrine to the argument before us, the dispensation of the gospel was given neither to Jews nor Gentiles under any consideration of their merits or demerits; but merely because use such was the good pleasure of God, who claims the right to confer his blessings as he pleases.

Ver. 17-31. God's judgments on Pharaoh and the unbelieving Jews, and his mercy to the Gentiles.—Another case, of a nature somewhat different, is now brought forward in the person of Pharaoh, king of Egypt. There were possibly other kings as wicked as Pharaoh, and equally meriting the divine displeasure; but as Jehovah had selected Jacob to display his gratuitous mercy to himself and his posterity, so Pharaoh was raised up by the Almighty, in order to display in him the divine power as superior to the highest throne on earth, and the divine wisdom as confounding even that of Egypt; that thus the name of Jehovah might be "declared throughout all the (then known habitable) earth." And comparing this instance with that of Jacob above mentioned, in the one (Jacob,) the God of Israel exhibited his sovereignty in showing mercy to whom he pleased, and preparing him as a vessel of mercy for his glory; and in the other, (Pharaoh,) by making his power known, after much long-suffering, in executing his wrath on those who had previously fitted themselves for destruction, as was the case with Pharaoh.

It is indeed said of the Lord, in verse 18, that "whom he will he hardeneth; and in the history of Pharaoh, it is repeatedly remarked, (in Exodus, ch. ix. 12; x. 1, &c.,) that the Lord "hardened Pharaoh's heart." In addition to what we have there remarked on this event, we now add the following observations from the late judicious Mr. Fuller. "God is said to do that which is done upon the minds of men by the ordinary influence of second causes, which causes would not have been productive of such effects but for their depravity. The hardness of clay, no less than the softness of wax, is ascribed to the sun; yet the sun's producing either of these effects is entirely owing to the qualities of the object on which it shines. God hardened the heart of Pharaoh, by so ordering things in his providence, that certain considerations should present themselves to his mind when under certain circumstances, and which (he being righteously given up of God) would be certain to provoke his pride and resentment, and to determine him to run all risks, for the sake of having his will. In other words, God led him into temptation, and there, in just judgment, left him to its influence."

But here arises an objection—If God hardens the hearts of sinners, "Why doth he yet find fault?"—"The apostle had justly concluded (says Cor) that God might bestow his favours on whom and according to what terms he judged fit, and permit those who rejected such terms to be hardened. A caviller might, however, object that the continuance of the Jews in a state of disobedience, was the consequence of the determination of God to leave them to themselves; and hence might arrogantly demand, How God could still find fault with them? To such an objector the apostle indignantly rejoins, 'Nay, but, O man, who art thou,' with all thy imagined wisdom and discernment, 'who entered into a debate with God?' If God for a season spare wicked persons, who, by filling up the measure of their iniquities, have fitted themselves for destruction, that he may deliver greater good for those who, by his grace are prepared for glory, viz. for the believing Gentiles, as well as for the remnant of believers among the Jews,—have the reprobated Jews any reason to complain? May not a sovereign, without injustice, delay the execution of a criminal, if such delay appear to him likely to be beneficial to his obedient subjects, and calculated to subserve some important purpose for the welfare of his kingdom in general? God had thus acted in the case of Pharaoh, and He was about to do the same in the case of the Jews. The apostle then shows that the calling of the Gentiles in general, and the rejection of many of the Jews for their unbelief, had been plainly predicted by the prophets, so that any objections which the Jews might raise against the equity of the divine proceedings, in these respects, would at once be futile and anti-scriptural."

Some learned men, indeed, wish to confine all that is here said to the dealings of Providence with nations only, on which Scott remarks—"It is wonderful that the great Locke should confidently assert, that the apostle here speaks of men notionally and not personally, in reference to their eternal estate; when the rejection of the Jewish nation, with the reservation of 'a remnant, according to the election of grace,' was the heaven, earth, or hell."—Fitted—The original, being in the middle voice, implies that they fitted themselves—Shorteneth. The Apostle, by employing the appellation of the vessels of wrath, varies on the similitude of the potter, by which he had illustrated the sovereignty of God in Ephesians.

Ver. 28. Finish the work—Doddridge, "cutting short his account." &c.—From the earth—Or "land;" namely of Israel.

Ver. 21. Hath not the potter—Doddridge remarks, that Pharaoh has used the same similitude. But see Jer. xviii. 6.

Ver. 22. What if God, &c.—This (says Pres. Edwards) is spoken of in the end of the day of judgment, which is the time appointed for the highest exercises of God's authority as moral governor of the world, and is the day of the consummation of God's moral government with respect to all his subjects in 30 What shall we say then? That ^a the Gentiles, which followed not after righteousness, have attained to righteousness, even the righteousness ^b which is of faith.

31 But Israel, which ^c followed after the law of righteousness, hath not attained to the law of righteousness.

32 Wherefore? Because they sought it not by faith, but as it were by the works of the law. For they stumbled at that stumbling-stone;

33 As it is written, ^d Behold, I lay in Sion a stumbling-stone and rock of offence: and whosoever believeth on him shall not be ^e ashamed.

CHAPTER X.

^f The scripture sheweth the difference between the righteousness of the law, and that of faith. It and that all, both Jew and Gentile, that believe, shall not be confounded, but that the Gentiles shall receive the word and believe. By Israel was not ignorant of these things.

BRETHREN, my heart's desire and prayer ^g to God for Israel is, that they might be saved.

2 For I bear them record that they have a zeal ^h of God, but not according to knowledge.

3 For they being ignorant ⁱ of God's righteousness, and going about to establish their own righteousness, have not submitted themselves unto the righteousness of God.

4 For Christ ^j is the end ^k of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth.

5 For Moses describeth ^l the righteousness which is of the law. That the man which doeth those things shall live by them.

6 But the righteousness which is of faith speaketh on this wise, Say ^m not in thy heart, Who shall ascend into heaven? (that is, to bring Christ down from above:)

7 Or, Who shall descend into the deep? (that is, to bring up Christ again from the dead.)

8 But what saith it? The word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy heart: that is, the word of faith which we preach;

A. M. 4000.
A. D. 57.
o c 10:39.
p c 1:17.
q 10:9.
r 10:2.
s 11:7.
t Ps 118:22.
u 8:11.
v cor. founded.
w Ac 21:20.
x c 9:21.
y c 8:31.
z He 10:14.
1 Le 18:5.
2 He 10:12.
3 11.
4 1 Ju 4:2.
5 g Ac 27.
6 h Is 28:16.
7 4c 23.
8 i Ac 17:9.
9 Ga 3:26.
10 j 1 Ti 2:5.
11 k Joel 2:32.
12 l 1 Co 1:2.
13 m Na 1:15.
14 n Ac 28:24.
15 He 1:2.
16 o L 21:1.
17 Jo 12:28.
18 p The nearness of us.
19 q of preaching.
20 r Ps 134.
21 Mat 28:19.
22 Col 1:6,23.
23 s De 32:21.
24 t Tit 3:3.
25 u L 65:13.

9 That if ^a thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thy heart ^b that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved.

10 For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation.

11 For the scripture saith, ^c Whosoever believeth on him shall not be ashamed.

12 For ^d there is no difference between the Jew and the Greek: for ^e the same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him.

13 For ^f whosoever shall call ^g upon the name of the Lord shall be saved.

14 How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher?

15 And how shall they preach, except they be sent? as it is written, ^h How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things!

16 But ⁱ they have not all obeyed the gospel. For Esaias saith, ^j Lord, who hath believed ^k our report?

17 So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God.

18 But I say, Have they not heard? Yes verily, their ^l sound went into all the earth, and their words unto the ends of the world.

19 But I say, Did not Israel know? First Moses saith, ^m I will provoke you to jealousy by them that are no people, and by a foolish nation I will anger you.

20 But Esaias is very bold, and saith, I was found of them that sought me not; ⁿ I was made manifest unto them that asked not after me.

21 But to Israel he saith. All day long I have apostle's main subject, to illustrate which all the other examples are introduced. This remnant consisted of a small number of individuals, not of a nation; and the Gentile converts were individuals out of their several nations, forming, with the Jewish converts, the Christian church; and not whole nations, or one whole nation, chosen, as a collective body, to succeed to the external advantages, which the nation of Israel had forfeited; and surely "the vessels of mercy before prepared unto glory," which the apostle next mentions, must have been chosen, not to external advantages, but to eternal life.

CHAP. X. Ver. 1-21. Paul further distinguishes between the law and the gospel, and shows that the call of the Gentiles had been foretold.—It has been said that the doctrine of predestination has a tendency to harden the heart against feelings of tenderness for our fellow sinners; and to render persons indifferent to their salvation, under the suspicion of their not being elected. But with God's secret will we have really no concern: "the things that are revealed belong to us and to our children for ever," and our only concern with them is, to believe and to obey them: "to do all the words" of God's blessed book. (See Deut. xxix. 29.) Among those precepts, some of the first and most important are, to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ ourselves, and to recommend faith in him and obedience to his will, so far as our means extend, to all our fellow sinners. And without attempting any invidious comparison, it cannot be denied that many predestinarians rank among the most zealous and active propagators of the gospel. St. Paul himself, who had written more in the support of this truth than all the other writers of the New Testament, was certainly not exceeded by any of them in the zeal with which he sought the conversion of both Jews and Gentiles; and "his heart's desire and prayer to God" for both was, "that they might be saved."

But it is to the former class that the apostle chiefly addresses himself in this and the following chapters, bearing them record "that they had a zeal for God," that is, for their religion; but it was "not according to knowledge." They were ignorant even of the great and important doctrine of justification, and being ignorant of God's righteousness, that is, the righteousness which he had provided in his Son, they went about seeking to establish their own righteousness; whereas he assures them that "Christ is the end of the law;" as in him was exhibited the perfection of the moral law, and the fulfilment of the ceremonial.

In what follows, the apostle refers to the farewell discourse of Moses to the Israelites, in which he speaks of the laws which he had delivered, as not so high that they must be again fetched from heaven, as at Sinai; nor so foreign and obscure that the deep must be fathomed for them; but as brought near, that is, rendered easy and familiar to them: so God had "brought near his righteousness for their salvation." (Isa. xlv. 13.) After exhibiting it in the types and figures of the law at a distance, he had now, in the gospel, applied it home to their hearts and consciences, saying, "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thy heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved." Knowledge is, however, necessary, previous to faith; it is necessary, therefore, that the gospel should be preached to both Jews and Gentiles; and those who feel their need of it, and its suitability to their necessities, will hail it with a hearty welcome, and say, with the prophet Isaiah, (chap. li. 7.) "How beautiful are the feet of them that publish it!" But this is not

Ver. 30. Which followed not after.—The terms here used are antagonistic. To "follow after," or pursue, was to engage in the race—to attain, was to gain the prize, which was righteousness, or justification; which the unbelieving Jews lost by stumbling, verse 22.

CHAP. X. Ver. 2. For Israel, &c.—By this fine apology for the Jews, the Apostle prepares them for the harsher truths which he was about to deliver.

Ver. 3. God's righteousness.—"God's method of justification," says Alpin. Neque enim, God's method of saving sinners.—Bagster.

Ver. 4. End of the law.—The object, scope, or final cause; the end proposed and intended. In this sense Esau observes that Texas is used by Arrian—Bagster. Doddridge, "Secure and down." Beza thinks Christ is so called, because by his death he hath procured that justification for sinners through faith, which the law proposed to bestow through works. MacKnight.

"The end or purpose for which the law was given, namely, (by its types, &c.) to lead the Jews to believe in Christ."

Ver. 6. Say not in thy heart.—The Apostle here takes the general sentiment, and expresses it in his own language; beautifully accommodating what Moses says of the law to his present purpose.—Bagster.

Ver. 7. Into the deep.—(Greek, abysos.) Campbell refers it to hades, the world of spirits. Bishop Lenth thinks that Moses here alludes to a custom of the Egyptians, who hanged their dead on the outer side of a lake, in what they called "the isle of the blessed."

Ver. 8. The word is nigh thee.—Things obscure, or difficult to be obtained (says Mr. Coat) were represented by the Jews as being far off, when as such as were plain or easily attainable, were said to be nigh.

Ver. 9. The Lord Jesus.—Doddridge, "Jesus the Lord."

Ver. 11. Shall not be ashamed.—See chap. ix. 33.

Ver. 12. Lord over all.—Doddridge, "Lord of all." So the Greek. Compare ch. x. 36.

Ver. 16. Our report.—Our preaching.

Ver. 19. Their song.—(Similar to this elegant accommodation of these words, is the prediction of them in a passage of Zohar, Genes. "These words are the servants of the Messiah, and measure out both the things above and the things beneath.")—Bagster.

Ver. 20. Esaias is very bold—i. e. open and plain in his predictions. Compare 2 Co. iii. 12.

off, and thou, * being a wild olive tree, wert grafted in * among them, and with them partakest of the root and fatness of the olive tree;

18 Boast * not against the branches. But if thou boast, thou bearest not the root, but the root thee.

19 Thou wilt say then, The branches were broken off, that I might be grafted in.

20 Well; because of unbelief they were broken off, and thou standest by faith. Be not high-minded, but * fear:

21 For if God spared not the natural branches, take heed lest he also spare not thee.

22 Behold therefore the goodness and severity of God: on them which fell, severity; but toward thee, goodness, * if thou continue in his goodness; otherwise thou * also shalt be cut off.

23 And they also, if * they abide not in unbelief, shall be grafted in: for God is able to graft them in again.*

24 For if thou wert cut out of the olive tree which is wild by nature, and wert grafted contrary to nature into a good olive tree: how much more shall these, which be the natural branches, be grafted into their own olive tree!

25 For I would not, brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, lest ye should be wise in your own conceits; that * blindness in part * is happened to Israel, until the fulness * of the Gentiles be come in.

26 And so all Israel shall be saved: as it is written, * There shall come out of Sion the Deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob:

latter to be doubly careful lest they should provoke the Almighty, by their infidelity, in like manner to reject them. Indeed, the calamities which, but a few years since, had nearly overwhelmed the French nation, ought to be a warning to others against imbibing their infidel principles, which are now rapidly spreading in the countries round them; but to which there is happily a great counteraction in the erection of Bible, missionary, and other religious societies on the Continent; and it is to such institutions that we look, in God's good time, for the introduction of the glorious period of the Millennium. In the mean time, let us pray that God may not give to those nations "the spirit of slumber," lest they dream away the opportunities of mercy thus afforded them.

But, to return to the text before us, we find the apostle concludes all the great doctrinal truths which he had advanced, with this solemn warning to us Gentile Christians—"Boast not against the [original] branches" of God's church, namely, the Jews: "but, if thou dost boast, [remember,] thou bearest not the root, but the root thee." And if "Thou wilt say, The [natural] branches were broken off, [namely, the Jews,] that I might be grafted in. Well! [remember] because of unbelief they were broken off, and thou standest by faith. Be not, therefore, high minded, but fear, . . . lest he also spare not thee. Behold, therefore, [and at once consider,] the goodness and severity of God!"

The apostle then compares the calling of the Gentiles, as founded on the rejection of the Jews, to the grafting of the branches of the wild olive into a good and fruitful olive-tree: a practice contrary to nature, and what is never done by man, though the opposite is not uncommon. But "God's ways are not our ways." He can control nature, and command fertility. The apostle concludes this interesting discourse with observing, that Jews and Gentiles, in their turn, having been disobedient to God, he hath looked them all up as condemned criminals, that he might, in one and the same manner, have mercy on all, by making them his people, and bestowing on them, from mere favour, the blessings promised in the covenant with Abraham. (Ver. 30—32.) And being deeply affected with the survey which he had taken of God's dealings with mankind, he cried out, as ravished with the grandeur of the view, Oh the riches both of the wisdom and of the knowledge of God! How unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out! (Ver. 33, 34, 35.)

"In this sublime manner hath the apostle finished his discourse concerning the dispensations of religion which have

A M. 1062
A P. 55
a Ep 2 14, 15
1 Co 10 12
v Ph 2 12
w He 3 6, 11
x Ju 23, 28
y 2 Co 3 16
z or, hard-ness
a ver 7.
2 Co 3 11
b Lu 21 21
c Le 20 20
d 1 Jo 31 31, 32
e He 10 16
f De 10 15
g Nu 20 19
h Pr 22 2
i or, obeyed
j 3 Jo 322
k or, that they all up to the
l Ps 107 5, 6
m 1 Jo 11 7
n Ps 42 7
o Jo 10 13
p Jo 13 15
q 1 Jo 41 11
r 1 Jo 8 16
s 2 Jo 4 16
t Rom.
u 1 Co 6 15
v 20
w 1 Jo 2 15

27 For * this is my covenant unto them, when I shall take away their sins.

28 As concerning the gospel, they are enemies for your sakes; but as touching the election, *they are beloved * for the fathers' sakes*.

29 For the gifts and calling of God are without repentance.

30 For as ye in times * past have not believed God, yet have now obtained mercy through their unbelief:

31 Even so have these also now not * believed, that through your mercy they also may obtain mercy.

32 For God * hath concluded them all in unbelief, that he might have mercy upon all 33 O * the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable * are his judgments, and his ways past finding out!

34 For * who hath known the mind of the Lord? or who hath been his counsellor?

35 Or * who hath first given to him, and it shall be recompensed unto him again?

36 For * of him, and through him, and to him, are all things; to * whom be glory for ever. Amen.

CHAPTER XII.

1. O's queries must move in a pensive God. 2. No man must think too well of himself. 3. But, et cetera, every one on that calling when he is called. 4. Love, and many other duties, are required of us. 5. Devotion is specially for adieu.

I BESEECH you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies * a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service.

2 And * be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your taken place in the different ages of the world. And from his account it appears that these dispensations were adapted to the then circumstances of mankind; that they are parts of a grand design, formed by God, for delivering the human race from the evil consequences of sin, and for exalting them to the highest perfection of which their nature is capable; and that, both in its progress and its accomplishment, the scheme of man's salvation contributes to the establishment of God's moral government, and to the displaying of his perfections in all their lustre to the whole intelligence in creation." (Macknight.)

CHAP. XII. Ver. 1—21. A practical exhortation to devotion to God.—"The nature and excellency of the gospel having been fully developed, (says C. C.) the apostle labours to persuade all professing Christians [and especially true believers] to act in a manner suitable to their high vocation. For this purpose he commences by urging upon them the necessity of an entire consecration of themselves to God, and an earnest endeavour to glorify him in their respective stations. I beseech you, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy [and] acceptable to God, which is your reasonable service. The terms here used are scriptural, and forcibly intimate that, as under the Old Testament dispensation, the burnt-offerings were wholly the Lord's property, so Christians are required to give up themselves entirely to the service of God. And this service is most reasonable, both in itself and as compared with other forms of worship. It is reasonable in itself, because thereby we render nothing to God but what we have received from him, "our life, our soul, our all;" and because we are gainers by the surrender; for, in giving up ourselves to him as a faithful Creator and as a merciful Redeemer, we know that he will preserve us to that great day, when he will receive his chosen into everlasting felicity. (2 Tim. 1. 12.)—Viewed comparatively, it is also not only infinitely more reasonable than any of the Pagan superstitions, but also far preferable to the carnal services of the Jews, which, indeed, owed all their excellency to a prospective reference to Christianity.

The first thing here recommended is Devotion—and "Devotion (as Luce justly observes) signifies a life given, or devoted to God. He, therefore, is the devout man, who lives no longer to his own will, or the way and spirit of the world, but to the sole will of God: who considers God in every thing, who serves God in every thing, who makes all the parts of his common life parts of piety, by doing every thing in the name of God, and under such rules as are conformable to his glory."

Ver. 29. Without repentance.—i. e. God never repents of the grace and favour which he bestows. See John viii. 1.

Ver. 32. Hath concluded all in unbelief.—That is, hath considered Jews and Gentiles as alike guilty, that he might on both display the same mercy. See chap. ix. 30.

CHAP. XII. Ver. 1. A living sacrifice.—This implies that the body was not to be presented without the soul.

mind, that ye may prove ^a what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God.

3 For I say, through the grace given unto me, to every man that is among you, not to think of himself more highly ^d than he ought to think; but to think ^e soberly, according as God hath dealt to every man the measure ^f of faith.

4 For as we have many ^g members in one body, and all members have not the same office:

5 So we, being many, are one body ^h in Christ, and every one members one of another.

6 Having then gifts differing ⁱ according to the grace that is given to us, whether prophecy, let us prophecy according to the proportion of faith;

7 Or ministry, let us wait on our ministering: or he that teacheth, on teaching;

8 Or he that exhorteth, on exhortation: he that giveth, let him do it ^k with simplicity; he that ruleth, with diligence; he that showeth mercy, with ^m cheerfulness.

9 Let love be without ⁿ dissimulation. Abhor ^o that which is evil; cleave to that which is good.

10 Be kindly ^p affectioned unto to another ^q with brotherly love; in honour preferring one ^r another;

11 Not slothful in ^s business; ^t fervent in spirit; serving ^u the Lord;

12 Rejoicing ^v in hope; patient ^w in tribulation; continuing ^x instant in prayer;

13 ^y Distributing to the necessity of saints; given to ^z hospitality.

14 Bless ^a them which persecute you: bless, and curse not.

15 Rejoice ^b with them that do rejoice, and weep with them that weep.

16 Be ^c of the same mind one toward another. Mind ^d not high things, but ^e condescend to

A. M. cir. 4002.
A. D. cir. 50.

c Ep 5.10,
d c 11.20,
e to sobriety,
f Ep 4.7,
g 1 Co. 12.4,
h 12,
i 1 Pe 1.22,
j 1 Pe 4.10,
k or, im-partially,
l or, liberally,
m 1 Pe 10.2,
n c 9.7,
o 1 Pe 1.22,
p Ps 34.11,
q 1 Pe 4.17,
r or, in the love of the brethren.
s 1 Pe 3.1,
t Ac 20.34,
u 35,
v 1 Co 14.12,
w c 5.2,3,
x Ja 1.4,
y Ps 18.1,
z He 13.16,
a He 13.2,
b 1 Pe 4.9,
c 1 Mnt 5.44,
d 1 Co. 12.25,
e 1 Pe 3.4,
f c 15.3,
g or, because of unlike things.

f Is 5.21,
g Mal 5.39,
h 2 Co. 8.41,
i Ps 34.11,
j He 12.11,
k 1 Pe 19.15,
l De 32.35,
m 1 Pe 25.21,
n 22,
o 1 Pe 5.44,
p 1 Pe 16.32,
q 1 Pe 2.13,
r 1 Pe 2.1,
s or, ordered,
t 1 Pe 2.14,
u Ep 8.2,
v Mat. 23.21

men of low estate. ^f Be not wise in your own conceits.

17 Recompense ^g to no man evil for evil. Provide ^h things honest in the sight of all men.

18 If it be possible, as much as lieth in you, live peaceably ⁱ with all men.

19 Dearly beloved, avenge ^j not yourselves, but rather give place unto wrath: for it is written, ^k Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord.

20 Therefore if ^l thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink: for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head.

21 Be ^m not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 Subjection, and many other duties, we owe to the magistrates. 8 Love is the fulfilling of the Law. 11 Gintony and drunkenness, and the works of darkness, are out of season in the time of the gospel.

LET every soul be subject ^a unto the higher powers. For there ^b is no power but of God: the powers that be are ^c ordained of God.

2 Whosoever therefore resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of God: and they that resist shall receive to themselves damnation.

3 For rulers are not a terror to good works, but to the evil. Wilt thou then not be afraid of the power? do ^d that which is good, and thou shalt have praise of the same:

4 For he is the minister of God to thee for good. But if thou do that which is evil, be afraid; for he beareth not the sword in vain: for he is the minister of God, a revenger to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil.

5 Wherefore ^e ye must needs be subject, not only for wrath, but also for conscience' sake.

6 For, for this cause pay ye tribute also: for they are God's ministers, attending continually upon this very thing.

7 Render therefore to all ^f their dues: tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom cus-

The first instance required of devotedness to God, is non-conformity to the world—its pleasures, its hopes, and its pursuits: and it is only by a "transformation"—not conforming to the world, but under the temper and spirit of Christ Jesus, that we can possibly prove by our own experience what really is the good, acceptable, and perfect will of God. And so far is this devotedness of heart from implying a neglect or contempt of moral duties, that it is, in fact, the only source from which they can arise, so as to be acceptable to God: for when moral, or even religious duties are performed from motives of ostentation, to excite the praise of men; or from views of merit in them, and with the mercenary hope of reward, they are so far from being acceptable to God, that they are abhorred by him. Such good works as these constituted the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees; and except our righteousness be of a nature far superior to theirs, our Lord himself assures us there is no hope of our acceptance—we "shall in no case enter the kingdom of heaven." (Mat. v. 20.)

The duties principally here enjoined are humility, and especially a low and modest estimation of our spiritual gifts and graces: (ver. 3—8.) sincere and intense affection to the brethren: vigour, and activity, and fervent zeal in the service of Christ: Christian sympathy and charity to the afflicted and necessitous: and that duty which is the peculiar glory of Christianity, however despicable it may appear to carnal men the rendering good for evil.

"Tender and kind be all our thoughts:
Through all our lives let us be true;
So God forgives our numerous faults,
For the dear sake of Christ, his Son."—Watts.

CHAP. XIII. Ver. 1—14. St. Paul enforces obedience to civil authorities, and to their just dues.—We agree with the venerable and pious Mrs. Hannah More, that "the gospel was never intended to dissolve the ancient ties between sovereign and subject, master and servant, parent and child; but rather to draw them closer, to strengthen a natural by a lawful and moral obligation. As the charge of disaffection was from the first most injurious to the religion of Jesus, it is obvious why the Apostle [Paul] was so frequent and so earnest in vindicating it from this calumny. It is apparent from every part of the New Testament, that our Lord never intended to introduce any change into the civil government of Judea, where he preached, nor into any part of the world to which his religion might extend. As his object was of a nature specifically different, his discourses were always directed to that other object. His politics were uniformly conversant about his own kingdom, which was not of this world. If he spake of human governments at all, it was only incidentally, as cir-

Ver. 2. That ye may prove.—Doddridge, "Experimentally know."
Ver. 3. The measure of faith.—This refers, perhaps, to the faith by which they were enabled to work miracles.

Ver. 6. Prophesy.—Pronouncing by inspiration, whether in the way of prediction, or otherwise.—According to the proportion of faith.—If we suppose the prophetic gift to be given in proportion to the exercise of faith, i. e. dependence on God . . . we have, I think, the clearest explication the phrase will admit.—Doddridge.

Ver. 7. Ministry.—Lit. rap.—"deaconship." The sense appears to us to be, that all the servants of Christ were to exert themselves to the utmost, in their different lines of duty, whether in public or in private—whether as inspired or uninspired teachers, catechists, or Scripture readers—all were to do their best. So Mr. Cox.

Ver. 8. He that ruleth.—Or "presideth," as Doddridge renders it after Lord Barrington; but as the same word is in the last chapter (verse 2) applied to Phile, it probably means a person taking the lead in any department, either of ministerial duty or Christian charity. But see ch. xvi. 1.

Ver. 10. Be kindly affectioned.—The original term, philostorgos, Mr. Cox observes, "is exceedingly expressive; philos, signifying delight in a thing, and storge, that tender affection which mothers naturally bear to their own offspring."

Ver. 13. Given to hospitality.—This was a virtue of primary importance in the East, where there are few public inns; and at this time, as Doddridge observes, it was peculiarly important, as Christians were persecuted both by Jews and heathens.

Ver. 16. Be of the same mind.—Cox, "be united in affection to each other."
Ver. 17. Provide things honest.—Gr. Kaia, good, useful, profitable.—Parkhurst.

Ver. 19. Give place unto wrath.—i. e. submit, and do not return it. Leave that to him who hath said—Vengeance is mine.—Vengeance here means retributive justice, as chap. ii. 5.

Ver. 20. Therefore if thine enemy hunger, feed him.—Prov. xxv. 21, 22.—Thou shalt heap coals of fire, &c.—The expression here quoted from Solomon, refers to the method adopted in melting and purifying certain metals; and is generally explained to signify, that the enemy shall by such means be melted down; but Mr. Thibbys explains it to mean, rather, that by such means the Abighly will be engaged to take the sufferer's part. See Ps. cxi. 9, 10.

CHAP. XIII. Ver. 1. The higher powers.—i. e. "the supreme authority," whether it be vested in the people, or the nobles, or the sovereign, or be shared among these three orders, or what-ever form of government may be established.—Macknight.—No power but of God—i. e. derived from him, and ordained by him.

Ver. 2. Then that resist.—Namely, the lawful exercise of authority, of whatever nature the government may be.—Shall receive . . . damnation.—(Gr. krima.) Doddridge and Cox, "Condemnation." Macknight, "Punishment." Boothroyd, "Judgment."

Ver. 3. Rulers are not a terror.—i. e. such is not the design for which they are appointed.

Ver. 4. A revenger.—Doddridge, "An avenger."

Ver. 6. Upon this very thing.—Doddridge, "To this one affair."

tom; fear to whom fear; honour to whom honour.

8 Owe no man any thing, but to love one another: for he that loveth another hath fulfilled the law.

9 For this, Thou shalt not commit adultery, Thou shalt not kill, Thou shalt not steal, Thou shalt not bear false witness, Thou shalt not covet; and if there be any other commandment, it is briefly comprehended in this saying, namely, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.

10 Love worketh no ill to his neighbour: therefore love is the fulfilling of the law.

11 And that, knowing the time, that now it is high time to awake out of sleep: for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed.

12 The night is far spent, the day is at hand: let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armour of light.

13 Let us walk honestly, as in the day: not in rioting and drunkenness, not in chambering and wantonness, not in strife and envying.

14 But put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ, and make not provision for the flesh, to fulfil the lusts thereof.

CHAPTER XIV.

3 Men may not condemn nor condemn one the other for things in debate: 13 but take heed that they give no offence in them: 15 for that the apostle proveth unlawful by many reasons

HIM that is weak in the faith receive ye, but a not to doubtful disputations.

2 For one believeth that he may eat all things: another, who is weak, eateth herbs.

3 Let not him that eateth despise him that eateth not; and let not him which eateth not circumstances occurred, and as it gave him occasion to display or enforce some act of obedience. He discreetly entangled the Pharisees in the insidious net which they had spread for him, by directing in answer to their ensnaring question, that the things which belonged even to their sovereign whom they detested [the Roman emperor] should be rendered to him.

"St. Paul exhibited at once a striking proof of the soundness of his own principles, and of the peaceable character of Christianity, in his full and explicit exposition of the allegiance due to the ruling powers. It is observable, that in the very short period from the origin of Christianity, under Augustus, to the time at which St. Paul wrote, there were four successive Roman emperors, each of whom was worse than the preceding, as if it had been providentially so determined, as a test of the meek and quiet spirit of Christianity, whose followers never manifested resistance to any of these oppressive masters. St. Paul knew how to unite a respect for the government with a just abhorrence of the vices of the governor." In this instance, Mrs. More farther remarks, no governor is named; and as the Roman emperor and senate did not always act in concurrence, with his usual exquisite prudence, in addressing the people of Rome, Paul makes choice of an ambiguous expression, "the higher powers, without specifically determining what those powers were."

In citing these remarks from Mrs. More, we would add with her, that "we are not advocating the cause of passive obedience;" for it would be quite inconsistent with the mild and peaceable spirit of Christianity, to advocate the cause of arbitrary power in a land of liberty, as ours happily is.

Our obedience, therefore, while nothing contrary to our consciences is enforced, ought to be voluntary, cheerful, and uniform; and as St. Paul, as well as his Divine Master, enjoins the paying tribute to Cesar, we should scorn to avoid, by any mean evasion, our just proportion to the expenses of the state, or to defraud the public revenue, by encouraging smuggling or any illicit commerce. Such practices, however lightly

Ver. 7. Fear to whom fear—Dodridge, "Reverence to whom reverence." Ver. 11. It is high time—MacKnight, "It is already the hour."—Our salvation is nearer—i. e. the completion of it—than when we believed—i. e. than when we first believed. So Dodridge, Ver. 8 &c.

Ver. 13. Let us walk honestly—Dodridge, "Innately."—Not in rioting.—MacKnight, "revelling." The Greek (homois) denotes feasting, with lascivious songs and dances in honour of Bacchus.

Ver. 14. But put ye on—[This is a Greek phrase signifying to assume the interests of a person, to enter into his views, to imitate him.]—fasten—Chap. XIV. Ver. 2. Eateth herbs—Cor. "vegetables." Rutha refers to the Essenes, a Jewish sect, who in Gentile countries (as was Italy) ate no meat at all, as they often could not have it killed according to their law.

Ver. 5. Another esteemeth—[The Apostle is here speaking of the Jewish fasts and festivals; and of course his observations do not regard the sabbath, which was instituted at the creation; and which being a type of the rest which remaineth for the people of God,] must continue in force, as all types do, till the antitype, or thing signified, takes place, that is, till the consummation of all things.—Bozster.—Let every man be fully persuaded—Dodridge, "Let every man freely enjoy his own sentiment." So Cox. The allu-

A M. cir
4062
A D. cir
54

g Ja 28.

h Ex 20.13.
Ac.

i Lu 10.18
Mat 22.
30.10

j 1 Th 5.5.

k Ep 5.11

l Ep 6.13.

m or, decently

n Ph 4.8.

o 1 Pe 1.2.

p 1 Pe 1.3.

q 1 Co 6.9.
10

r Co 3.57.

s Ga 5.16

a or, not to be as disputed thoughts.

b La 1.1.

c La 40.29

d Co 2.16

e or, not to be as disputed.

f 1 Pe 4.2

g La 2.3.

h.

i La 15.23

judge him that eateth: for God hath received him.

4 Who art thou that judgest another man's servant? to his own master he standeth or faileth. Yea, he shall be holden up: for God is able to make him stand.

5 One man esteemeth one day above another: another esteemeth every day alike. Let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind.

6 He that regardeth the day, regardeth it unto the Lord; and he that regardeth not the day, to the Lord he doth not regard it. He that eateth, eateth to the Lord, for he giveth God thanks; and he that eateth not, to the Lord he eateth not, and giveth God thanks.

7 For none of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself.

8 For whether we live, we live unto the Lord; and whether we die, we die unto the Lord: whether we live therefore, or die, we are the Lord's.

9 For to this end Christ both died, and rose, and revived, that he might be Lord both of the dead and living.

10 But why dost thou judge thy brother? or why dost thou set at nought thy brother? for we shall all stand before the judgment-seat of Christ.

11 For it is written, As I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God.

12 So then every one of us shall give account of himself to God.

13 Let us not therefore judge one another any they may be thought of by some, are equally contrary to the gospel and to the law; and how those who practise them can attempt to claim the protection of the government to their persons and their property is utterly unaccountable.

Next to obedience to governors, St. Paul enforces the principles of equity between man and man, comprehending the precepts of the second table, all of which the apostle comprehends, as his Master had before done, in one word, "Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself."

The conclusion of the chapter is particularly animated and beautiful. Considering mankind, and even in a great measure professing Christians, as sleeping in ignorance and sin, the apostle admonishes them that their night is nearly ended, and the hour is come to awake to the service of God, and cast off the works of darkness (as the rising sun dissipates the shades of night,) and clothe themselves with the armour of light, that is, with the suit of Christian graces; (Ephes. vi. 13. &c.) or, as he afterwards expresses it, "Put on the Lord Jesus Christ." Chrysostom (the most eloquent of the Greek Fathers) has been cited to show, that, to put on another person, was to imitate his character. The allusion appears to us theatrical. To put on Cesar, or Cato, is to act his part, the hero or the patriot; and to put on Christ is to copy his tempers and his example.

We cannot close our exposition without remarking that this verse and the preceding, as himself tells us, were mainly instrumental to the conversion of St. Augustin, in the fourth century, by inducing him to put away the works of darkness, and "put on the Lord Jesus."

CHAP. XIV. Ver. 1—23. Christians not to censure, nor to give offence to one another.—The church of Rome, we have before remarked, consisted partly of Jews and partly of Gentiles, from which circumstance disputes appear to have arisen in it at a very early period, and that chiefly on two points—on the eating of certain meats, and the observance of certain days. These originated in the same principle as the question son is to a vessel in full sail, with wind and tide: "Let every man go on in his own way without impediment."

Ver. 6. To the Lord he doth not regard it.—Perhaps the English idiom, and the true sense of the words, would be better preserved by rendering, "He that disregards the day, to the Lord he disregards it." Thus, we apprehend, refers only to the Jewish holidays, and especially the seventh day sabbath, to which the Gentiles, having adopted the first day of the week instead, might reasonably refuse conformity.

Ver. 7. None liveth to himself, &c.—MacKnight, in both members of the sentence, "by himself." Cox, "according to the will of."

"Live whilst you live," the epigram would say, "And seek the pleasures of the present day."
"Live whilst you live," the sacred preacher cries,
And give to God each moment as it flies.
Lord, in my views, let both united be;
I live in pleasure whilst I live to thee.

Ver. 9. Lord both of the dead and living—i. e. our Lord both in life and death more; but judge this rather, that no man put a stumbling-block or an occasion to fall in his brother's way.

14 I know, and am persuaded by the Lord Jesus, that there is nothing ¹unclean of itself; but to him that esteemeth any thing to be ²unclean, to him it is unclean.

15 But if thy brother be grieved with thy meat, now walkest thou not ³charitably. Destroy ⁴not him with thy meat, for whom Christ died.

16 Let not then your good be evil spoken of:

17 For ⁵the kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but ⁶righteousness, and ⁷peace, and joy ⁸in the Holy Ghost.

18 For he that in these things serveth Christ is acceptable to God, and approved of men.

19 Let ⁹us therefore follow after the things which make for peace, and ¹⁰things wherewith one may edify another.

20 For meat destroy not the work of God. All things indeed are ¹¹pure; but it is ¹²evil for that man who eateth with offence.

21 It is good neither to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor any thing whereby thy brother stumbleth, or is offended, or is made weak.

22 Hast thou faith? have it to thyself before God. Happy ¹³is he that condemneth not himself in that thing which he alloweth.

23 And he that ¹⁴doubteth is damned if he eat, because he eateth not of faith: for whatsoever ¹⁵is not of faith is sin.

CHAPTER XV.

1 The strong must bear with the weak. 2 We may not please ourselves. 3 For Christ did not so. 7 but receive one the other, as Christ did us all. 8 both Jews, and Gentiles. 15 Paul excuseth his writing, 25 and promises to see them, 30 and requesteth their prayers.

WE then that are strong ought to ¹⁶bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves.

A. M. cir. 4062.
A. D. cir. 58.

Common, according to the best copy.
1 1 Cor. 9. 11.
2 1 Mm. 6. 33.
3 1 Ph. 3. 9.
4 1 Ph. 16. 33.
5 1 Ph. 4. 7.
6 1 Ph. 15. 13.
7 1 Ph. 34. 41.
8 1 Ph. 12. 14.
9 1 Ph. 11. 12.
10 1 Ph. 11. 5.
11 1 Ph. 3. 21.
12 1 Ph. 11. 10.
13 1 Ph. 11. 10.
14 1 Ph. 11. 10.
15 1 Ph. 11. 10.
16 1 Ph. 11. 10.
17 1 Ph. 11. 10.
18 1 Ph. 11. 10.
19 1 Ph. 11. 10.
20 1 Ph. 11. 10.
21 1 Ph. 11. 10.
22 1 Ph. 11. 10.
23 1 Ph. 11. 10.
24 1 Ph. 11. 10.
25 1 Ph. 11. 10.
26 1 Ph. 11. 10.
27 1 Ph. 11. 10.
28 1 Ph. 11. 10.
29 1 Ph. 11. 10.
30 1 Ph. 11. 10.

1 1 Ph. 11. 10.
2 1 Ph. 11. 10.
3 1 Ph. 11. 10.
4 1 Ph. 11. 10.
5 1 Ph. 11. 10.
6 1 Ph. 11. 10.
7 1 Ph. 11. 10.
8 1 Ph. 11. 10.
9 1 Ph. 11. 10.
10 1 Ph. 11. 10.
11 1 Ph. 11. 10.
12 1 Ph. 11. 10.
13 1 Ph. 11. 10.
14 1 Ph. 11. 10.
15 1 Ph. 11. 10.
16 1 Ph. 11. 10.
17 1 Ph. 11. 10.
18 1 Ph. 11. 10.
19 1 Ph. 11. 10.
20 1 Ph. 11. 10.
21 1 Ph. 11. 10.
22 1 Ph. 11. 10.
23 1 Ph. 11. 10.
24 1 Ph. 11. 10.
25 1 Ph. 11. 10.
26 1 Ph. 11. 10.
27 1 Ph. 11. 10.
28 1 Ph. 11. 10.
29 1 Ph. 11. 10.
30 1 Ph. 11. 10.

2 Let every one of us please his neighbour ¹⁷for his good to edification.

3 For even Christ ¹⁸pleased not himself; but, as it is written, ¹⁹The reproaches of them that reproached thee fell on me.

4 For whatsoever ²⁰things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the scriptures might have hope.

5 Now the God of patience and consolation grant you to be like-minded ²¹one toward another ²²according to Christ Jesus:

6 That ye may with one ²³mind and one mouth glorify God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ.

7 Wherefore receive ye one another, as Christ also ²⁴received us to the glory of God.

8 Now I say that Jesus Christ was a minister of the circumcision for the truth of God, to confirm ²⁵the promises made unto the fathers:

9 And that the Gentiles might glorify God for his mercy; as it is written, ²⁶For this cause I will confess to thee among the Gentiles, and sing unto thy name.

10 And again he saith, ²⁷Rejoice, ye Gentiles, with his people.

11 And again, ²⁸Praise the Lord, all ye Gentiles; and laud him, all ye people.

12 And again, Esaias saith, ²⁹There shall be a root ³⁰of Jesse, and he that shall rise to reign over the Gentiles: in him shall the Gentiles trust.

13 Now the God of hope fill you with all ³¹joy and peace in believing, that ye may abound in hope, through the power of the Holy Ghost.

14 And I myself also am persuaded ³²of you, my brethren, that ye also are full of goodness, filled with all ³³knowledge, able also to admonish one another.

of circumcision, namely, the perpetuity of the Jewish law, and its obligation on the Gentiles. The last question laid, however, been decided by the Council of Jerusalem, and should not have been revived; but St. Paul, instead of interposing officially, and deciding the question by apostolical authority, recommends a spirit of conciliation and forbearance between the parties. Without examining the chapter verse by verse, we shall offer only two or three general remarks.

1. We have the great principle of communion originally adopted in the Christian church, namely, to receive all whom God receives; for thus it is decided—him that ate meats in general, as did the Gentiles, was not to judge him who ate those only allowed by the law of Moses; nor was he who followed the strictness of the Mosaic law to censure the Gentile, who not being born under that law, was not governed by it; neither was to reject the other, because "God had received him;" but each was cordially to receive the other into Christian fellowship and communion. "For the kingdom of God is . . . righteousness and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost;" and "he that in these things serveth Christ, (says Paul,) is acceptable to God, and approved of men." Consequently, converted Jews and Gentiles ought to "receive one another," (chap. xvi. 7.) as both of them had been received by Christ himself.

2. We have the great law of Christian toleration, as it respects the conduct of Christians towards each other. Each may consider the other as "weak in the faith;" but "God hath received him," and so must we: for while each acts from a conscientious principle, whether he eat meat or vegetables—whether he observes the Jewish holidays, or not—his eating or refraining, observing or disregarding holidays while arising from a sense of duty, are alike acceptable to God. The kingdom of God, as already stated, consists in "righteousness and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost," in comparison with which, in themselves considered, ritual observances, under this dispensation, are of little value.

3. Christians, having devoted themselves wholly unto God, as expressed in chap. xii. 1, are no more their own masters; but whether they live, they must study to live to his glory, or whether they die, it must be in his service; even by martyrdom, if called thereto. And not only are Christians not their own masters, but they are fellow-servants, and not only fellow-servants, but fellow-sinners, who must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ, and render an account to him of all their conduct. Let them not, therefore, put a stumbling-block in the way of any of their weaker brethren, lest they should occasion him to fall for whom Christ died, as well as for themselves.

4. So far from wantonly or carelessly offending weak believers, Christians should rather deny themselves even in lawful things; refraining from any action that might grieve or offend their brethren, and so unbinge their minds and unsettle their principles, than do which, the apostle says, "it were good neither to eat flesh or to drink wine;" at all; and Paul declares that, sooner than do so, he would himself "eat no flesh while the world standeth." (1 Cor. viii. 13.) A noble declaration, and highly worthy of imitation.

The concluding verse of this chapter has been often misunderstood; the sense given in the margin of our Bibles, and by the ablest commentators, is, that he who, in his own mind, discriminates between meats, and yet eats them against his conscience, is condemned both in his own conscience and before God; that being always criminal which a man does contrary to his conscience and better judgment.

CHAP. XV. Ver. 1—33. In this chapter the same subject is continued, and, in the close of it, the apostle implores for the church at Rome the divine benediction.—The first thing on which we remark is, that "whatsoever was written aforetime was written for our learning;" (or instruction;) Paul, therefore, quotes a variety of passages from the Old Testament, which, if all of them did not refer directly or immediately to the subject to which he applies them, admit of an easy accommodation; indeed, in the manner in which the apostolic writers apply both the law and the prophets to Christ and the gospel, there seems good reason to conclude they contain more of both than has generally been supposed.

Dr. Macknight remarks, that "the apostle, in the 7th verse of this chapter, having exhorted the Jewish and Gentile Christians to live to his glory, and before God.—Whatsoever is not of faith—Macknight, "from (or ek) faith;" that is, whatsoever a person does, while his own conscience and judgment of condemn him, is sin before God.

CHAP. XV. Ver. 3. The reproaches of them that reproached thee.—On this quotation Bishop Horne remarks, "The usage our Lord used with from his brethren (the Jews,) for his zeal for the house of God, would comfort those who meet with the same usage, on the same ground."

Ver. 9. For this cause I will confess to thee.—Bishop Horne says, "This verse is by the apostle produced as a proof that the Gentiles were one day to glorify God, for the mercy vouchsafed them by Jesus Christ."

Ver. 14. Unclean.—Gr. "common," twice. See Acts x. 15.
Ver. 15. Not charitably.—1. According to love; which charity, from the Latin caritas, properly signified, though now restricted to alms giving. 1-B.—Destroy not.—The words used both here and in ver. 20 imply, literally, destruction by loosening the materials of which a building, &c. may be composed; and seem to imply the loosening or disturbing of a person's faith and principles, and peace of mind; for it does not appear how our uncharitable conduct can destroy the soul of a fellow-Christian: the greater danger is to ourselves. Compare ver. 21; also 1 Cor. xiii. 11.
Ver. 23. Is damned.—Doddridge and Macknight, "condemned," i. e.

15 Nevertheless, brethren, I have written the more boldly unto you in some sort, as putting you in mind, because ^a of the grace that is given to me of God,

16 That I should be the minister of Jesus Christ to the Gentiles, ministering the gospel of God, that the ^a offering ^a up of the Gentiles might be acceptable, being sanctified ^a by the Holy Ghost.

17 I have therefore whereof I may glory ^a through Jesus Christ in those things ^a which pertain to God.

18 For I will not dare to speak of any of those things which Christ hath not wrought by me, to make ^a the Gentiles obedient, by word and deed,

19 Through mighty ^a signs and wonders, by the power of the Spirit of God; so that from Jerusalem, and round about unto Illyricum, I ^a have fully preached the gospel of Christ.

20 Yea, so have I strived to preach the gospel, not where Christ was named, ^a lest I should build upon another man's foundation:

21 But as it is written, ^a To whom he was not spoken of, they shall see: and they that have not heard shall understand.

22 For which cause also I have been ^a much hindered ^a from coming to you.

23 But now having no more place in these parts, and having a great desire these many years to come unto you:

24 Whosoever I take my journey into Spain, I will come to you: for I trust to see you in my journey, and to be ^a brought on my way thitherward by you, if first I be somewhat filled ^a with your company.

A. M. 68
A. D. 68
Ep. 4. 7, 8

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

1. Cor. xiii. 10
1. Th. ii. 10

25 But now I go ^a unto Jerusalem to minister unto the saints.

26 For it hath pleased them of Macedonia and Achaia to make a certain contribution for the poor saints which are at Jerusalem.

27 It hath pleased them verily; and their debtors they are. For if the Gentiles have been made partakers of their spiritual things, their duty is ^a also to minister unto them in carnal things.

28 When therefore I have performed this, and have sealed to them this ^a fruit, I will come by you into Spain.

29 And I am sure that, when ^a I come unto you, I shall come in the fulness of the blessing of the gospel of Christ.

30 Now I beseech you, brethren, for the Lord Jesus Christ's sake, and for the ^a love of the Spirit, that ye strive ^a together with me in your prayers to God for me;

31 That ^a I may be delivered from them that ^a do not believe in Judea; and that my service which ^a I have for Jerusalem may be accepted of the saints:

32 That I may come unto you with joy by the will of God, and may with you be refreshed.

33 Now the God of peace ^a be with you all. Amen.

CHAPTER XVI.

3 Paul saluteth the brethren to greet him, 17 and adviseth them to take heed of those which cause division and offences, 27 and after kindly salutations exhort with praise and thanks to God.

1 I COMMEND unto you Phebe our sister, which is a servant of the church which is at Cenchrea;

2 That ye receive ^a her in the Lord, as becometh saints, and that ye assist her in what-tians at Rome to a cordial union, from the consideration that Christ had received both into his church, naturally turned his thoughts to an objection which might be made to this doctrine, namely, that if Christ had meant to receive the Gentiles he would have preached to them himself. To this the apostle replied, that Jesus Christ was born a Jew, and preached to the Jews only; [being ^a a minister of the circumcision:] because thereby, in the end, he most effectually accomplished God's promises to the fathers, concerning the blessing of the nations in Abraham's seed. (Ver. 8, 9).—Farther, because the Jews were unwilling to be united with the Gentiles in one church, the apostle quoted various passages from their own prophets, foretelling that the Gentiles in future times would be Messiah's subjects, and join the Jews in worshipping the true God. (Ver. 9—12.) Wherefore, God having determined from the beginning to make the Gentiles his people, the Jewish believers were bound to acknowledge such of them as were converted, for their brethren and fellow-heirs of the promises of God, notwithstanding they did not obey the law of Moses. And having thus established the title of the Gentiles to all the privileges of the people of God under the gospel dispensation, the apostle prayed that God would fill them with all joy and peace, through the firm belief of their title to these great blessings. (Ver. 13.)

Both the doctrinal and practical part of this Epistle being now finished, the apostle makes a handsome apology to the Romans for writing so long a letter to persons with whom he was not personally acquainted. He tells them, that having a good opinion of their virtue and knowledge, (ver. 14.) he had on that account written to them with the more freedom, to bring things to their remembrance. He then refers to his office as apostle to the Gentiles, and to the success with which he had already been favoured: he tells them that he was now going up to Jerusalem with the contributions of the brethren of Macedonia and Achaia, and hoped afterwards to pass through Rome in his way to Spain; and adds his earnest entreaty, for Christ's sake and for the love of the Spirit, that they would strive together in their prayers to God for him, that he might have a prosperous journey, by the will of God, to visit and commune with them, and that he might be delivered from his untimely brethren in passing through Jerusalem.

CHAP. XVI. Ver. 1—27. Paul's salutations, and those of his brethren, to eminent characters in the church of Rome.—Some of these have been before mentioned, and of others we shall add such particulars as history affords. Phebe is called a servant or deaconess of the church at Cenchrea, by whom Paul sent this Epistle to the church at Rome. "In the apostolic age (observes Cor) grave and pious females were frequently appointed to the office of deaconesses. Their duty appears principally to have consisted in giving private instruction to catechumens, or persons who were candidates for baptism, especially to those of their own sex, and in ministering to the temporal and spiritual wants of such as were sick, or imprisoned on account of their profession of Christianity. It is probable, from the second verse, that Phebe was a person of some property, and one who entertained the apostles and preachers who came to minister at Cenchrea."

Of Priscilla and Aquila we had some mention before. (Acts xvii. 2 and 26.) They had gone to Corinth at the time that Claudius banished the Jews from Rome, but returned, as it should seem, on the repeal of that decree. They were persons eminent both for Christian knowledge and piety, and being of the same occupation with Paul, (that is, tent-makers,) they had worked together at Corinth; and, on some occasion not expressly mentioned, it appears that they had risked their lives in his defence. Paul calls them his "helpers in Christ Jesus;" and mentions a church or congregation held in their house. Of the assistance which they afforded to the cause of Christ,

Ver. 15. In some sort, as putting you in mind, &c.—Dobridge, "In this part (of my epistle), as stirring up," &c. Macknight, "Partly as calling them to remembrance." Chr. "In some degree."

Ver. 18. I will not dare to speak of any of those things which Christ hath not wrought— a Not exaggerate the facts, &c. De Prie Saunders renders it, "I would not dare to speak of any things, except of those which Christ hath wrought through me," &c. He adds, "the two negatives appear to be put for strengthening the affirmation." Q "I may venture to speak freely of what Christ has done, for that is to his glory, not my own."

Ver. 19. Round about unto Illyricum— a as far as its western shores, [Illyricum, or Ulyria, was a country of Europe, lying N. and N. W. of Macedonia, on the eastern coast of the Adriatic gulf, opposite Italy. It was distinguished into two parts; Lalonia north, now Croatia; and Dalmatia south, still retaining the same name.] The account of St. Paul's second visit to the peninsula of Greece, Ac. xx. 1, 2, says Dr. Porter, leads us to suppose, that in going over Macedonia, he had passed so far to the west, as to reach into those parts of the country which were contiguous to Illyricum, if he did not enter Illyricum itself. The history and the Epistle therefore so far agree; and the agreement is much strengthened by a coincidence of time; for much he-fore the time when this epistle was written, he could not have said so as his route in his former journey, confined him to the eastern side of the peninsula, a considerable distance from Illyricum. 1. Beger Ver. 21. Whosoever I take my journey into Spain— Dobridge infers hence, compared with verse 20, that no Christian church had hitherto been founded in that country, though an ancient legend makes James to have resided there fifteen years. [Spain is a large country in the west of Europe, which anciently comprehended both Spain and Portugal, separated from Gaul or France by the Pyrenees, and bounded on a very other side by the sea.] B Ver. 25. I go unto Jerusalem— See Acts ix. 1, &c. See Paley's Horæ Paul. chap. i. No. 1.

Ver. 27. Their spiritual things— a The blessings of the gospel, which was first preached to the Jews.—Cornel—a temporal things.

Ver. 28. Served to them— a continued (in them). CHAP. XVI. Ver. 1, 4. servant— a deaconess. Some suppose that deaconesses were usually widows, and well advanced in years. See 1 Tim. iii. 11, &c.

Ver. 2. Assist her— Probably she had come to Rome on private business of her own, and might need assistance and advice.

soever business she hath need of you : for she hath been a succourer of many, and of myself also.

3 Greet ^b Priscilla and Aquila my helpers in Christ Jesus :

4 Who have for my life laid down their own necks : unto whom not only I give thanks, but also all the churches of the Gentiles.

5 Likewise greet the church that is in their ^c house. Salute my well-beloved Epenetus, who is the first-fruits of Achaia unto Christ.

6 Greet Mary, who bestowed much labour on us.

7 Salute Andronicus and Junia, my kinsmen, and my fellow-prisoners, who are of note among the apostles, who also were in ^d Christ before me.

8 Greet Amplias my beloved in the Lord.

9 Salute Urbanus, our helper in Christ, and Stachys my beloved.

10 Salute Apelles approved in Christ. Salute them which are of Aristobulus' ^e household.

11 Salute Herodion my kinsman. Greet them that be of the ^e household of Narcissus, which are in the Lord.

12 Salute Tryphena and Tryphosa, who labour in the Lord. Salute the beloved Persis, which laboured much in the Lord.

13 Salute Rufus chosen ^f in the Lord, and his mother and mine.

14 Salute Asyncritus, Phlegon, Hermas, Patrobas, Hermes, and the brethren which are with them.

15 Salute Philologus, and Julia, Nereus, and his sister, and Olympas, and all the saints which are with them.

16 Salute one another with a holy kiss. ^g The churches of Christ salute you.

17 Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them which cause ^h divisions and offences contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned ; and avoid ⁱ them.

18 For they that are such serve not our Lord Jesus Christ, but their own ^j belly ; and by good ^k words and big speeches deceive the hearts of the simple.

19 For your obedience is come ^l abroad unto all men. I am glad therefore on your behalf : but yet I would have you ^m wise unto that which is good, and ⁿ simple concerning evil.

20 And ^o the God of peace shall ^p bruise ^q Satan under your feet ^r shortly. ^s The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ ^t be with you. Amen.

21 Timotheus my work-fellow, and Lucius, and Jason, and Sosipater, my kinsmen, salute you, and Tertius, who wrote this epistle, salute you in the Lord.

23 Gaius ^u my host, and of the whole church, saluteth you. ^v Erastus the chamberlain of the city saluteth you, and Quartus a brother.

24 The ^v grace of our Lord Jesus Christ ^w be with you all. Amen.

25 Now ^x to him that is of power to establish you according to my gospel, and the preaching of Jesus Christ, according to the revelation ^y of the mystery, which was kept secret since the world began,

26 But now is made manifest, and by the scriptures of the prophets, according to the commandment of the everlasting God, made known to all ^z nations for the obedience of faith :

27 To God ^a only wise, ^b be glory through Jesus Christ for ever. Amen.

¶ Written to the Romans from Corinthus, and sent by Phebe servant of the church ^c at Cenchrea.

we have a farther specimen in the instruction which they gave to Apollos, in the chapter already referred to. Of the other persons here mentioned little is known, except that Aristobulus, who had been sent prisoner to Rome on some political account, was of the royal house of the Maccabees, and that Narcissus was the prime minister of Claudius ; yet in both their households there were saints and followers of the Lord Jesus.

From no mention being made, however, of Peter among the persons saluted, it is sufficiently evident he was not then at Rome, much less could he have been bishop of the church there, as the Roman Catholics pretend. The charge to salute one another with a holy kiss, alludes, as we well know, to an Oriental custom, which it is thought the Christians borrowed from the Jewish synagogue ; and was not promiscuous between the two sexes, but each saluted their own sex only. Yet, " chastely and prudently as it was managed, (says Dr. Doddridge,) it seems to have been the occasion of those false and scandalous reports, which were so industriously propagated among the heathen, of practices in Christian assemblies ; on which a count it seems to have been laid aside very early."

Having remembered distinctly those who were chiefly eminent for their Christian piety, he now cautions the believers at Rome against certain persons of a contrary description ; chiefly, it is thought, those Jewish zealots, who, as mentioned in the early part of this Epistle, corrupted the gospel by an intermixture of Hebrew ceremonies, and strongly opposed the important doctrine of salvation by grace alone. He beseeches the Christians of Rome to mark them which cause divisions and offences, contrary to the doctrine which they had learned from him, and from the other apostles of our Lord. These men caused divisions by endeavouring to separate the Jewish and Gentile converts ; and they caused offences by introducing stumbling-blocks in the way of weak and simple Christians. They served not Jesus Christ, but their own bellies, by consulting their own interests and gratification, in preference to the cause and glory of our Saviour. He assures the brethren, however, that as, according to the first promise, Satan (the old serpent) had been trampled under our Saviour's feet ; so also, shortly, he should be bruised under their feet, by a restoration of peace and harmony in the church.

St. Paul then adds the salutation of Timothy, Luke, and other brethren that were with him, and the usual apostolical benedictions ; and concludes, finally, with an animated doxology " to God the only wise," through Jesus Christ our Lord.

Ver. 3. Greet Priscilla.—Had the dates of time in this epistle fixed the writing of it to any date prior to St. Paul's first residence at Corinth, the salutation of Aquila and Priscilla would have contradicted the history, because it would have been prior to his acquaintance with these persons. If they had fixed it during that residence at Corinth, during his journey to Jerusalem, or during his progress through Asia Minor, an equal contradiction would have been incurred, because during all that time, they were either with St. Paul, or abiding at Ephesus. Lastly, had they fixed this epistle to be either contemporary with the first epistle to the Corinthians, or prior to it, a similar contradiction would have ensued, for they were then with St. Paul. As it is, all things are consistent. See Paley.—Bagster.

Ver. 4. Laid down their own necks.—An allusion to persons presenting themselves to decapitation to save others. The expression is proverbial.

Ver. 5. The first-fruits of Achaia.—i. e. one of the first converts.

Ver. 11. Hermas.—Supposed to be the author of an ancient allegory called The Pastor. (or shepherd,) which is still preserved.

Ver. 19. Is come abroad.—i. e. the report of it.

Ver. 20. Bruise Satan.—This seems to allude to the first promise. Gen. iii. 15. Ver. 21. Timotheus.—i. e. Timothy. —Lucius.—Probably Luke the Evangelist, says Dr. Lardner.—And Jason.—See Acts xiv. 7.—Sosipater.—Acts xv. 4.

Ver. 22. I Tertius.—Perhaps Silas, the names being of the same import ; Paul being, as it is thought, not very ready in forming the Greek characters, is supposed to have employed the man as an amanuensis. See 2 Co. xvi. 21. Ver. 23. Gaius.—See 1 Co. i. 14.—Erastus.—Acts xix. 22. The chamberlain or treasurer of the city ; he to whom the receipt and expenditure of the public money were intrusted.

Ver. 25. My gospel.—i. e. the gospel which Paul preached.—Of the mystery.—Either salvation generally, or, in particular, the calling of the Gentiles. Ver. 26. Now to him, &c.—In many ancient MSS. Various Greek Fathers, &c. these verses are placed at the end of chap. xiv. ; so Griesbach. The Alexandrian Manuscript has them in both places. All Paul's other Epistles end with a doxology.

Ver. 27. From Corinthus.—i. e. Corinth.—Sent by Phebe. See verse 1

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE EPISTLE TO THE ROMANS.

[The Epistle to the Romans is "a writing," says Dr. Macknight, "which, for sublimity and truth of sentiment, for brevity and strength of expression, for regularity in its structure, but above all for the unspeakable importance of the discoveries which it contains, stands unrivalled by any mere human composition, and as far exceeds the most celebrated productions of the learned Greeks and Romans, as the shining of the sun exceeds the twinkling of the stars."—St. Paul, as Dr. Taylor justly observes, "was a great genius and a fine writer ; and he seems to have exercised all his talents, as well as the most perfect Christian temper, in drawing up this Epistle. The plan of it is very extensive, and it is surprising to see what a spacious field of knowledge he has comprised ; and how many various designs, arguments, explications, instructions, and exhortations, he has executed in so small a compass. The whole Epistle is to be taken in connexion, or considered as one continued discourse ; and the sense of every part must be taken from the drift of the whole. Every sentence, or verse, is not to be regarded as a distinct mathematical proposition, or theorem, or as a sentence in the book of Proverbs, where sense is absolute, and independent of what goes before, or comes after ; but we must remember, that every sentence, especially in the argumentative part, bears relation to, and is dependent upon, the whole discourse ; and cannot be understood unless we understand the scope and drift of the whole. And therefore, the whole Epistle, or at least the eleven first chapters of it, ought to be read over at once, without stopping. As to the use and excellency of this Epistle, I shall leave it to speak for itself, when the reader has studied and well digested its contents. . . . The Apostle's manner of writing is with great care and love, I may add, perspicuity too; for it will not be difficult to understand him, if our minds are unprejudiced, and at liberty to attend to the subject he is upon, and to the current scriptural sense of the words he uses. For he keeps very strictly to the standard of scripture phraseology. He takes great care to guard and explain every part of his subject. And I may venture to say he has left no part of it unexplained or unguarded. Never was an author more exact and cautious in this than he. Sometimes he writes notes upon a sentence, liable to exception and wanting explanation, as ch. ii. 12-15. Here the 13th and 15th verses are a comment upon the former part of v. 12. Sometimes he comments upon a single word; as ch. x. 11-15. The 12th and 13th verses are a comment upon peris, every one, in the 11th. He was sensible of a perspicuous brevity, as ch. x. 13, 14. For unto the many men in the world, &c. Surely never was there a greater variety of useful sentiments crowded into a smaller compass; and yet so skillfully, that one part very clearly explains another. It is by this unparalleled art, that the Apostle has brought such a variety of arguments, instructions, and sentiments, all stated, proved, and sufficiently guarded, & explained, in 1400 words, within the limits of a letter, which has made it a magazine of the most rich, extensive, useful, and profitable knowledge. He treats his countrymen, the Jews, with great caution and tenderness. . . . His transitions and advances to an important subject are very dexterous and apposite; as ch. iii. 1-17. He often carries on a complicated design, and while he is teaching one thing, gives us an opportunity of hearing one or two more. See ch. xiii. 1-5. He teaches the duty of subjects, and at the same time instructs magistrates in their duty, and shows the grounds of their authority. He is a nervous reasoner, and a close writer, who never loses sight of his subject, and who throws in every colour that may enliven it. He writes under a deep and lively sense of the truth and importance of the Gospel, as a man who clearly understood it, and in whose heart and affections it reigned far superior to all temporal considerations."—Bagster.

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS.

[THAT the first Epistle to the Corinthians is the genuine production of St. Paul, has been universally admitted by the Christian church in all ages, nor indeed can it be doubted, as it is supported by the strongest internal evidence. It purports to have been written by him after he had already been at Corinth, (ch. i. 1.) when upon the eve of another visit to that church; (ch. x. 19. xvi. 5.) and while he abode at Ephesus, (ch. xvi. 8, 19. Ac. xviii. 18.) Now as St. Paul departed from Ephesus, where he had resided three years, in order to proceed to Corinth, about A. D. 57, (Ac. xv. 1.) it follows, that this Epistle was written about that time. The subscription to this Epistle, which states that it was written at Philippi, cannot be correct, as it is contradicted by the declaration of St. Paul himself. It appears that it was written by the Apostle in answer to certain inquiries of the Corinthians by letter, (ch. vi. 1; xvi. 12, 17.) and also to correct certain schisms and disorders which prevailed among them, and of which he had been informed by "them which were of the house of Chloe."—Bagster.

CHAPTER I.

After his salutation and thanksgiving, 10 he exhorted them to unity, and 12 to reprove their dissensions. 18 God destroyed the wisdom of the wise, 21 &c. the foolishness of preaching, and 28 called not the wise, mighty, and noble, but 27, the foolish, weak, and men of no account.

PAUL, called ^a to be an apostle of Jesus Christ ^b through the will of God, and Sosthenes ^b our brother,

2 Unto the church of God which is at Corinth, to them ^c that are sanctified ^e in Christ Jesus, called ^d to be saints, with all that in every place call ^e upon the name of Jesus Christ our Lord, both theirs and ours:

3 Grace ^b be unto you, and peace, from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

4 I thank my God always on your behalf, for the grace of God which is given you by Jesus Christ;

5 That in every thing ye are enriched by him, in all utterance, and in all knowledge;

6 Even as the testimony of Christ was confirmed in you:

7 So that ye come behind in no gift; waiting ^a for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ:

8 Who shall also confirm ^m you unto the end, that ye may be blameless in the day of our Lord Jesus Christ.

A. M. 404.
A. D. 57.
A. Ro. 11.
b. Ac. 18. 17.
c. Ac. 18. 1.
Ac.
d. 3 Jo. 1.
e. 2 Jo. 12. 19.
f. 2 Th. 1. 9.
g. 1 Th. 1. 15.
h. 2 Th. 2. 22.
i. 1 Th. 1. 4.
j. Ro. 1. 5.
k. 2 Co. 8. 7.
l. 2 Th. 2. 13.
m. 2 Th. 3. 12.
n. 1 Th. 3. 13.
o. 2 Th. 3. 4.
p. 1 Jo. 1. 3.
q. 2 Jo. 1. 11.
r. 1 Th. 3. 8.
s. 1 Th. 3. 8.
t. Ac. 19. 1.
u. 3 Jo. 1. 19.
v. Ac. 18. 5.
w. Ro. 16. 23.
x. 3 Jo. 1. 15.
y. e. 16. 15, 17.

9 God ^{is} faithful, by whom ye were called unto the fellowship ⁿ of his Son Jesus Christ our Lord.

10 Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no ⁿ divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment.

11 For it hath been declared unto me of you, my brethren, by them ^{which are of the house of} Chloe, that there are contentions among you.

12 Now this I say, that every one of you saith, I am of Paul; and I of ^a Apollos; and I of ^c Cephas; and I of Christ.

13 Is Christ divided? was Paul crucified for you? or were ye baptized in the name of Paul?

14 I thank God that I baptized none of you, but Crispus and Gaius:

15 Lest any should say that I had baptized in mine own name.

16 And I baptized also the household of ^a Stephanas; besides, I know not whether I baptized any other.

17 For Christ sent me not to baptize, but to CHAP. I. Ver. 1-31. After his usual salutation, Paul thanks God on the behalf of the Corinthians, and exhorts them to the purity and simplicity of the Gospel.—On the first preaching of the gospel in this idolatrous and licentious city, and the planting of the first Christian church there, we have seen a concise account in the book of Acts, chap. xviii., by which it appears that Paul was the honoured instrument of its introduction, assisted by Aquila and Priscilla, and followed by the eloquent Apollos. But after Paul left the city, a Judaizing teacher, of the sect of the Sadducees, (for he denied the resurrection,) and, as it is thought, a person of some rank, endeavoured to degrade his character and depreciate his talents, denying his apostolical mission, and alleging that his bodily presence was weak, and his speech contemptible. The design of this Epistle was, therefore, to vindicate his character and mission, and repel the injurious insinuations that had been thrown out against him; and this will account for the strain of self-vindication that pervades it.

After asserting his apostolical character, he thanks God for the gifts and graces that had been conferred upon them, thereby delicately reminding them, that it was through his instru-mentality that they had been conferred; and assures them, that God being faithful to his promises, would "not forsake the work of his own hands," but confirm and preserve them blameless to the coming of the Lord Jesus. In the mean time, he is grieved to hear that there are schisms or divisions among them, forming themselves into factions, as it were, under different leaders, in the manner of the heathen, who boasted themselves to be of popular sects, and the disciples of certain celebrated philosophers. On this subject he demonstrates with them with great energy. "What then?" as if he had said, "Is the mystical body of Christ divided? or, who am I, (Paul,) that you should make me the leader of a sect? Was I crucified for you? or were you baptized in my name?" The idea is reproband with abhorrence, that either he or his brethren should form a schism in the church.

As to himself, so far from aspiring to be the leader of a sect, he was simply a preacher of the cross; of that doctrine which was "to the Jews a stumbling-block, and to the Greeks foolishness;" but to all who cordially believed it, a demonstration of "the wisdom and the power of God." The apostle then proceeds to contrast his doctrine and conduct with that CHAP. I. Ver. 1. Sosthenes our brother.—This was a Corinthian teacher, who attended on Paul in his travels, and by many, thought to be the same mentioned in Acts xviii. 17, supposing him to have been an afterwards converted; but of this we have no evidence.

Ver. 2. Call upon the name, &c.—Invoke the name, &c. See Acts ix. 14; Rom. x. 12-13. "Christians (says Mr. Stuart) were so habituated to address their supplications to Christ that 'They who invoke Christ,' became, it would seem, a kind of proper name, by which they were in primitive times designated as brethren." Thus Paul, (1 Co. i. 2.) addresses himself to all, who invoke the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, in every place. That the verb epikaleo, is an appropriate one to designate the act of prayer, will not be questioned. The literal translation of it is, to invoke. The simple meaning of the passage is, "I address myself to all Christians." But instead of using the name Christians directly, the apostle uses a periphrasis, and says, to all the invokers of Christ, i. e. to those who pray to him, meaning the same as agios, kletos, &c. in the context. He has signified, too, that the practice of invoking Christ, was not confined to Corinth. He addresses "those who pray to Christ, in every place."

Ver. 5. To utterance.—Repeating continually to the gift of tongues.

Ver. 6. Erin, &c. (Mark iv. 11.)—When?—The testimony of Christ.—i. e. Paul's testimony concerning him—was confirmed, &c.

Ver. 10. No divisions.—Of the nature of these divisions see verse 12; also chap. xi. 18.

Ver. 11. By them—of the house of Chloe.—Glossa supposes the three persons mentioned, chap. xvi. 5, to have been of the house of Chloe.

Ver. 12. For of Paul, &c.—They were beginning to divide into factions, according to the influence to their favourite preachers, like the disciples of Jewish leaders and Pagan philosophers.

Ver. 15. Lest any should say—This seems to us to imply that some sectarian preachers had baptized in their own name.

Ver. 17. Christ sent me not to baptize—i. e. baptizing was properly performed by preachers of a rank inferior to apostles. See Mark xvi. 16.

preach the gospel: not with wisdom ^v of words, lest the cross of Christ should be made of none effect.

18 For the preaching of the cross is to them ^v that perish foolishness; but unto us which are saved it is the power ^v of God.

19 For it is written, ^v I will destroy the wisdom of the wise, and will bring to nothing the understanding of the prudent.

20 Where ^v is the wise? where ^v is the scribe? where ^v is the disputer of this world? hath not God made foolish ^v the wisdom of this world?

21 For ^v after that in the wisdom of God the world by wisdom knew not God, it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe.

22 For the Jews require a ^v sign, and the Greeks seek after wisdom:

23 But we preach Christ crucified, unto the Jews a ^v stumbling-block, and unto the Greeks foolishness;

24 But unto them which are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ the ^v power of God, and the wisdom of God.

25 Because the foolishness of God is wiser than men; and the weakness of God is stronger than men.

26 For ye see your calling, brethren, how that not ^v many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called:

27 But God ^v hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty;

A. M. 4961.

A. D. 57.

v. 1, 2, 13

w or, speech

x 2 Co 2:15.

y Ro 1:16.

z Is 25:14.

a Je 9:9.

b Is 33:18.

c Is 43:25.

d Lu 10:21.

e Ro 1:20.

f 2 Co 2:15.

g Mat 12:28.

h 1 Co 1:18.

i 1 Th 2:8.

j ver 15.

k 2 Co 3:12.

l 1 Co 1:18.

m Ps 92.

n Mat 11:25.

o

p Ro 2:27.

q 2 Co 5:17.

r Ep 1:3, 10.

s Ep 1:17.

t 1 Co 2:3.

u Is 45:14.

v Je 27:5, 6.

w Ro 4:25.

x ver 4, 13.

y Ga 6:11.

z or, person.

a 2 Co 1:16.

b 1 Th 1:5.

c 1 Co 1:5.

d 2 Co 3:15.

e Ps 33:10.

f Ps 4:5.

28 And base things of the world, and things which are despised, hath God chosen, ^v yea, and things which are not, to bring to nought things that are:

29 That ^v no flesh should glory in his presence.

30 But of him are ye in ^v Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us ^v wisdom, and ^v righteousness, and ^v sanctification, and ^v redemption:

31 That, according as it is written, ^v He that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord.

CHAPTER II.

He declareth that his preaching, though it bring not excellency of speech, or of human wisdom, yet consisteth in the 1, 3 power of God: and so far excelleth the wisdom of this world, and the human sense, as that 14 the natural man cannot understand it.

AND I, brethren, when I came to you, came not ^v with excellency of speech or of wisdom, declaring unto you the testimony of God.

2 For I determined not to know any thing among you, save ^v Jesus Christ, and him crucified.

3 And I was with you in weakness, and in fear, and in much trembling.

4 And my speech and my preaching was not with ^v enticing words of ^v man's wisdom, but in demonstration ^v of the Spirit and of power:

5 That your faith should not ^v stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God.

6 Howbeit we speak wisdom among them ^v that are perfect: yet not the wisdom of this world, nor of the princes of this world, that come to ^v nought:

7 But we speak the wisdom of God in a mystery, ^v even the hidden ^v wisdom, which God ordained before the world unto our glory:

8 Which none of the princes of this world of the proud Scribes, and disputers of the Jewish schools, and the idle wisdom of the philosophic Greeks; who, while they amused themselves, and teased each other, effected no change in the hearts and lives of their disciples. Their wisdom, however dazzling, was in vain; but the doctrine of the cross, however foolish it might be thought, stemmed the tide of the human passions, humbled the pride of man's heart, and brought him as a penitent to the foot of the cross, where only mercy was to be obtained.

Paul admits, indeed, that the doctrine which he preached was derided both by Jews and Greeks, for its simplicity, and the want of worldly wisdom; he confesses that neither the preachers nor the professors of it were distinguished either by rank, or by riches, or by science; but this he contends, however reproached by men, was God's plan, who had determined, by that doctrine which they called "foolishness," to confound the wisdom of the worldly wise; and by those means, and those agents which they considered as weak and ignoble, to confound the great and mighty, that no flesh should glory in his presence; but that he who gloried under the gospel dispensation, should glory only in the Lord Jesus, as being "made unto us wisdom and righteousness, sanctification and redemption."

CHAP. II. Ver. 1—15. The preaching of the cross far preferable to human wisdom.—In this chapter we remark, and shall attempt to illustrate, three important positions.

1. The doctrine of "Christ crucified" is the sum and substance of the gospel. Christ himself is the source of wisdom and righteousness, of sanctification and redemption. Much has been said of preaching natural religion as preparatory to the gospel; and it is true, that Paul, at Athens, preached the God of Nature and of Providence; but it is also certain, that in the same discourse he preached to them Jesus and the resurrection, repentance and judgment to come; and wherever these truths are wanting, little is to be expected from natural religion and moral suasion. A remarkable incident, illustrative of this subject, occurs in the history of the Missions of the United (or Moravian) Brethren in Greenland. Long had they preached natural religion with little and with doubtful effect, until, one day, one of the brethren was reading part of a translation which he had made into their language, from one of the evangelists, relative to the sufferings of Jesus Christ; which, in the first instance, excited their curiosity, then their admiration, and, finally, ended in their unequivocal conversion. About the same time, others of the brethren visiting some heathen at a distance, and preaching to them "Christ, and him crucified," they were much affected, and said, "What things have come about now? Your present discourse makes quite another impression upon us, than when you always told us of God, and the two first parents. We continually said, we believed it all, but were tired with hearing of it, and thought, What signifies that to us? But now we find there is something interesting in it; we also see that our people have experienced something real in their hearts, because they can speak of it and pray, and we cannot."

"By the persevering zeal of the Brethren, (says Burder,) more than 20,000 of the most destitute of mankind, in different regions of the earth, are recovered from the power of Satan unto God, and now walk with him as dear children, adorning the doctrine of God our Saviour; and thousands more, who have departed in the faith of the gospel, have entered into the joy of their Lord."

2. This doctrine of "Christ crucified," owes none of its efficacy to the researches of scholastic learning, or the ornaments of human eloquence. It requires us not to ascend to heaven, in the study of astronomy, nor to cross the seas to explore the occult sciences of Egypt, or the recondite tradition of Greece, but only a simple credence of well-attested facts. (See Rom. x. 6—9.) It requires no choice selection of words, nor eloquent display of tropes and figures to embellish it. It is attended with the demonstration of the Spirit in prophecies and miracles, and with the power of divine grace to impress the heart.

Yet, 3. The gospel has in itself mysteries far more profound than those of Paganism, and heights far more sublime than Gentile science can reach; but they are of a nature perfectly distinct. They require a spiritual capacity, which none but God can give, and without which they will appear to carnal

Ver. 19, 20. For it is written, I will destroy, &c.—These words are quoted by way of allusion, rather than of argument.

Ver. 21. Wisdom of God—(Dr Lightfoot well observes, "that the wisdom of God, is not to be understood of that wisdom which had God for its author, but of that wisdom which had God for its object." There was, among the heathen, wisdom about natural things, that is, philosophy; and wisdom about God, that is, divinity. But the world, in its depravity, could not, by wisdom, know God." The wisest of the heathen had no just and correct views of the Divine nature; of which the works of Cicero and Lucretius are innumerable proofs.)—Revelation—By the foolishness of preaching—i. e. by that preaching which men call foolishness.

Ver. 22. A sign—i. e. a miracle.—Wisdom—i. e. philosophy.

Ver. 26. Ye see your calling—i. e. those whom you called by grace, and even those called to preach the gospel. Dr Hammond prefers the former interpretation, and Dr Wally the latter.

Ver. 28. And base things—Doddridge refers to the Moravian Mission to Maubach in illustration of this: their converts were from the lowest of the people, and even their preachers far more remarkable for piety, humility, and patience, than for learning or science. Other missions might be referred to with equal propriety; and it is thus the gospel triumphs.

Ver. 30. Who of God is made unto us, &c.—See chap. vi. 11.

CHAP. II. Ver. 3. Excellency of speech—The apostle means, that nice choice and arrangement of words, that artificial sounding and distillation of periods, those rhetorical connexions, transitions, and figures, and those studied tones and gestures, in which, according to the Greeks, the perfection of eloquence consisted.—Macknight—The testimony of God—i. e. the witness which had been given to the gospel by the divine power, in the gifts of prophecy and miracles.

Ver. 6. Them that are perfect—i. e. who are well instructed in this divine system—alluding to those who were adepts in the pagan mysteries.

Ver. 7. Which God ordained before the world—See Rom. iii. 25; viii. 29.

Ver. 8. The princes of this world—May include both the Jewish rulers and knew: for I had they known it, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory.

9 But as it is written, * Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him.

10 But † God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit: for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep ^m things of God.

11 For what ^m man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of man which is in him? even ^o so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God.

12 Now we have received, not ^p the spirit of the world, but the Spirit which is of God; that ^q we might know the things that are freely given to us of God.

13 Which things also we speak, * not ^r in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth; comparing spiritual things with spiritual.

14 But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned.

15 But he † that is spiritual ^s judgeth all things, yet he himself is ^t judged of no man.

16 For ^u who hath known the mind of the Lord, that he ^v may instruct him? But we have ^w the mind of Christ.

CHAPTER III.

2 Milk is fit for children. 3 Strife and division, arguments of a fleshly mind. 7 He that planteth, and he that watereth, is sowing. 9 The ministers are God's fellow-labourers. 13 Christ the only foundation. 16. Also the temple of God, which is must be kept holy. 19 The wisdom of the world is foolishness with God.

AND I, brethren, could not speak unto you as ^a unto spiritual, but as unto carnal, even as unto babes ^b in Christ.

2 I have fed you with milk, and not with meat: for hitherto ^c ye were not able to hear it, neither yet now are ye able.

3 For ye are yet carnal: for ^d whereas there is among you envying, and strife, and ^e divisions, are ye not carnal, and walk ^f as men.

4 For while one saith, I ^g am of Paul; and another, I am of Apollos; are ye not carnal?

5 Who then is Paul, and who is Apollos, but ministers by whom ^h ye believed, even ⁱ as the Lord gave to every man?

6 I have planted, Apollos watered; but God ^j gave the increase.

7 So then neither ^k is he that planteth any thing, neither he that watereth; but God that giveth the increase.

8 Now he that planteth and he that watereth are one; and every man ^l shall receive his own reward according to his own labour.

and sensual men but foolishness indeed. These are things which the natural eye and ear cannot perceive, nor can the carnal heart devise; but the Holy Spirit of God can alone communicate them to men.

On this subject we give the following quotation from the eloquent Robert Hall:—"The peculiar doctrines of Christianity are distinguished by a spirit irreconcilably at variance with that of the world. The deep repentance it enjoins, strikes at the pride and levity of the human heart. The mystery of an incarnate Saviour must necessarily confound the reason, and shock the prejudices of a mind, that will admit nothing that it cannot perfectly reduce to the principles of philosophy. The whole tenor of the life of Christ, the objects he pursued, and the profound humiliation he exhibited, must convict of madness and folly, the favourite pursuits of mankind. The virtues usually practised in society, and the models of excellence most admired, there, are so remote from that holiness which is enjoined in the New Testament, that it is impossible for a taste which is formed on the one, to perceive the charms of the other. The happiness which it proposes in a union with God, and a participation of the image of Christ, is so far from being congenial with the inclinations of worldly men, that it can scarcely be mentioned without exciting their ridicule and scorn."

CHAP. III. VER. 1-23. The Corinthians again reproved for their internal divisions and party spirit, and exhorted to Christian union.—Co-operation in the cause of Christ implies a maturity of strength and wisdom; and the want of it, weakness both in grace and knowledge. The apostle illustrates this by two distinct similes. In the first, the church is compared to a garden, or rather a vineyard, in which ministers of different rank and talents, are employed to plant and water the young vines: Paul had planted, and Apollos watered; but he is anxious to impress upon their minds, that God alone had given, or could give, the increase. So it is in nature: planting and watering are the work of man; but rain, and air, and sunshine, come alone from God. Nevertheless the labourer shall not go without his hire; for every man who works in God's vineyard shall be rewarded "according to his own labour," whatever that may be. God's rewards, however, are not of merit, but of grace; they shall be apportioned to our labours, but in no case can we have any claim, but from his gracious promises.

From this and similar passages, the late Mr. Fuller forcibly and ingeniously argues, a variety of rewards to God's faithful labourers, in proportion to their exertions. And this, indeed, is none other doctrine than what is advanced in the parables of our Lord himself. (See Mat. xlv. 28, 29. Luke xix. 16-19, 24, &c.; and Fuller's Essay on the Diversity of Future Rewards.)

In the other similitude, the Christian church is compared to a temple, of which Christ is the great foundation stone, or rock, on which believers are individually laid, as living stones, till the whole forms one living temple. Some of these stones were so highly embellished with Christian graces, that they might be compared to precious stones, or stones ornamented with the precious metals. Such were the materials which Paul and his coadjutors collected for this work; but others, in which he evidently alludes to the false teachers, his opponents, who, though they might adopt the same foundation, were far less choice in their materials, and collected "wood, hay, or stubble," that is, materials of a far inferior kind. These represent professors of an unworthy character, who may be drawn into the church of Christ, by relaxing its discipline, or debasing its doctrines, so as to render them more palatable to corrupt nature; by these means a man's congregation may be enlarged, and he may flatter himself with great success, and a rich reward; but there is a fire which will try his works; and if the materials of which it is formed will not stand that fire, he may himself be saved by escaping (as it were) through the flames, but can expect no reward for collecting such unworthy materials to build up the church of God.

An important question here arises—What may be intended by this fire? The church of Rome explains it of the fire of persecution, which they suppose to be kept burning from the time of the fall to the day of judgment; but of that fire we know nothing from the Scriptures; nor is it (according to their doctrine) to try our work, but our persons. Protestant commentators apply this generally to the day of judgment, and to the conflagration of the world; and that great day will certainly discover and destroy every species of hypocrisy, when many, it is to be feared, will escape with difficulty, as through the flames of a burning habitation. There is another fire, however, even that of persecution, which we think comports better with the context, and with the apostle's argument. Converts hastily collected, and without a proper discrimination of character, will seldom stand this "fiery trial," as St. Peter calls it. (1 Epes. iv. 12, 13.) Yet will be scattered by the tempest of persecution, like the leaves in autumn.

The apostle again reminds the Corinthian believers, that they were the temple of God, and consecrated to his service; if any man, therefore, should defile or destroy that temple, he must expect from the indwelling Deity a punishment answerable to his offence. The destruction here referred to is defilement, which makes it unfit for the residence of a holy God, and therefore destroys it as a temple. The destruction here threatened to such men, is the loss of their labour and reward; notwithstanding which, if they possess integrity of heart, they themselves may be saved, as St. Paul here states it, though with difficulty and loss.

From what here follows, it should seem that the false teachers, above referred to, affected an extraordinary degree of learning and science, Pagan or Rabbinical; either of which, when not according with the simplicity of the Scriptures, the Roman governor. Some of the former seem to have acted from wild malice. (Mat. xii. 24-32. John xiv. 22-24.) but the greater part, probably, acted through ignorance. (Acts vi. 17; xii. 27.)

Ver. 9. Eye hath not seen.—This passage is not taken from the LXX, nor is an exact translation of the Hebrew; but it gives the general sense. Ver. 11. The natural man.—Fuller and Macknight. "The animal man," but the same term is rendered sensual, James, ix. 10. Jude ver. 19. The exact idea of the apostle appears to us to be, that of a man governed merely by animal passions and instincts.

Ver. 15. He that is spiritual judgeth.—The spiritual man understands the two-fold state of human nature, before and after conversion; but the natural or carnal man can understand neither.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1. As unto carnal.—Not absolutely so, but in a great measure: weak in the faith, and "babes in Christ." See Rom. vi. 14.

Ver. 2. With milk.—That is, with the simplest truths of Christianity, not its deeper mysteries.

Ver. 3. And divisions.—Fuller and Macknight. "A different word from chap. i. 10.

Ver. 8. Are one.—Equal; of the same rank; or, as he explains it in the next verse, fellow-labourers.

9 For we are labourers together ¹ with God: ye are God's ^m husbandry, ye are God's ⁿ building.
10 According ^o to the grace of God which is given unto me, as a wise master-builder, I have laid the foundation, and another buildeth thereon. But let every man take heed how he buildeth thereupon.

11 For other foundation can no man lay than that is ^p laid, which is Jesus Christ.

12 Now if any man build upon this foundation gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, stubble;

13 Every man's work shall be made manifest: for the day shall declare it, because it ^q shall be revealed by fire; and the ^r fire shall fry every man's work of what sort it is.

14 If any man's work abide which he hath builded thereupon, he shall receive a reward.

15 If any man's work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss: but he himself shall be saved; yet so ^s as by fire.

16 Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?

17 If any man ^t defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy: for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are.

18 Let no man deceive himself. ^u If any man among you seemeth to be wise in this world, let him become a fool, that he may be wise.

19 For the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God. For it is written, ^v He taketh the wise in their own craftiness.

20 And again, ^w The Lord knoweth the thoughts of the wise, that they are vain.

21 Therefore let ^x no man glory in men. For all things are yours;

A. M. 4061.
A. D. 57.
1 2 Co. 6.1.
mer, dilige
n 11c. 3.6.
1 Pe 2.5.
o Ro. 12.3.
p 1s 28.16
Mat. 16.18
p. 2.20.
2 Ti 2.19.
q is.
r 2Co. 13.9.
1 Ti 1.7.
4.12.
s 2Co. 2.2.
1 Jude 23.
t 2 Co. 6.16
u or, destroy
v Pr 26.12
w Job 5.13.
x Ps 94.11.
y Je 9.23,24
z Ro 11.8.
a 2 Co 6.4. b 1s 12.42
Tit. 1.7
1 Pe 4.10. c day.
d Ps 132.2
e Mat. 7.1
f Ro 2.16
2 Co. 12.
g shall guisheth thee.
h Jo 1.17.
i Re 3.17.

22 Whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, or things present, or things to come; all are yours;

23 And ye ^z are Christ's; and Christ is God's.

CHAPTER IV.

1 In what account the ministers ought to be had. 2 We have nothing which we have not received. 3 The apostles spectacles to the world, angels, and men. 12 the filth and offscouring of the world: 15 yet our fathers in Christ, 16 whom we ought to follow.

LET a man so account of us, as of the ministers ^a of Christ, and stewards of the mysteries of God.

2 Moreover it is required in ^b stewards, that a man be found faithful.

3 But with me it is a very small thing that I should be judged of you, or of man's ^c judgment: yea, I judge not mine own self.

4 For I know nothing by myself; ^d yet am I not hereby justified: but he that judgeth me is the Lord.

5 Therefore judge ^e nothing before the time, until the Lord come, who ^f both will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will make manifest the counsels of the hearts: and then shall every man have praise of God.

6 And these things, brethren, I have in a figure transferred to myself and to Apollos for your sakes; that ye might learn in us not to think of men above that which is written, that no one of you be puffed up for one against another.

7 For who ^g maketh thee to differ from another? and what ^h hast thou that thou didst not receive? now if thou didst receive it, why dost thou glory, as if thou hadst not received it?

8 Now ye are full, now ye are ⁱ rich, ye have would have a tendency to corrupt the church of God: for as the wisdom of God was foolishness with man, so is "the wisdom of this world foolishness with God." Nor is there any occasion for Christians to contend relative to the talents or labours of their preachers, since by having an interest in Christ, they had an interest in the Divine Being himself, in all his servants, and in the whole creation. That is, as he had before expressed himself in his Epistle to the Romans, "All things work together for their good;" and nothing can ever separate them from his love. (Rom. viii. 28, 29.) "Always supposing (says Dr. Watts) that the Christian maintains his character, and acts in his station becoming the dignity of his holy and heavenly calling."

"All things are ours"—the gift of God,
And purchas'd with our Saviour's blood;
While his god of Spirit shows his love
To use, and to enjoy them too."—Watts.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1—21. Ministers stewards of God's house, and accountable to him for the employment of their talents.—Paul having assured the Corinthians, that among the "all things" which were theirs, himself and brethren must be reckoned; here directs them in what light they were to be considered, namely, as "the servants of Christ, and stewards of the mysteries of God;" these they were to dispense, as they found them in the gospel, with the utmost fidelity and impartiality, seeing they must render an account to God, when they shall be called to appear before him. St. Paul then adds, that in naming his beloved brethren, Peter and Apollos only, instead of many others, that he wished his beloved Corinthians to compare their lives and labours with those of others, who had opposed him. They, indeed, had abounded in fair speeches, and boasted of their ministerial talents, not considering, whatever talents they possessed, they had nothing but what they had received; and studiously avoiding the pain and stigma of the cross, they lived in ease and affluence and honour, while he and his brethren were like those unhappy gladiators, who were brought into the theatre with no prospect short of certain death. To comprehend this allusion, we must understand that it refers to a custom among the Romans, "of bringing forth those persons into the theatre, on the after part of the day, either to fight with each other, or with wild beasts, who were appointed to certain death, and had not that poor chance of escaping, which those brought forth in the morning had. Such kind of spectacles were so common in all the provinces, that it is no wonder we should find such an allusion here." The terms "set forth," or exhibited, and "a spectacle," (Gr. theatron.) meaning a theatrical spectacle, have in this case a beautiful propriety; and men and angels are represented as the surrounding spectators. See Doddridge.

"We are fools," he adds, "for Christ's sake;" i. e. exhibited to the world as such: but "ye are wise in your Christian profession, and strong, and honourable;" that is, so esteemed by men. What is added, of hunger, thirst, and nakedness, was doubtless often literally true of the apostles, as well as of the ancient patriarchs. (Heb. xi. 37.) Very strong is the expression afterwards used, when Paul speaks of himself and brethren as esteemed the filth of the world, and the offscouring of all things"—alluding to those wretches who were offered by the heathen as expiatory sacrifices to their gods, on which every reproach was heaped, even as the sins of Israel were laid upon the head of their expiatory sacrifices.

In the close of this chapter, the apostle mentions his sending Timothy with this Epistle, and mentions his expectation of shortly coming himself, clothed with apostolic powers, that is, with the power of working miracles; and then would he call upon his boasting opponents to show the like authority; lest by persisting in their opposition, they should draw down upon themselves the like judgments that had befallen Ananias and Sapphira, Elymas the sorcerer, and others. (See Acts v. 5—10; xiii. 10, 11. 1 Tim. i. 20.) He wishes, however, to avoid this

Ver. 9 Labourers together with God—Doddridge, "Fellow-labourers of God"—that is, "belonging to him"—MacKnight.

Ver. 10 As a wise master-builder—i. e. as a judicious architect.

Ver. 15 So as by fire—Doddridge and MacKnight, "So as through the (or a) fire." Compare Ps. lxxi. 12. Amos iv. 4. Zech. ii. 2. Jude ver. 23.

Ver. 17 Defile . . . destroy.—The same words in the original.

Ver. 21 Let no man glory in men—Compare chap. i. 31.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. Stewards.—See Mat. xxiv. 45, &c.; and compare chap. iii. 5, 22.

Ver. 3 I judge not mine own self, &c.—This seems to oppose what the apostle says, ch. i. 31, and therefore requires explanation. The term judge, in Scripture, has various acceptations; and so has the Greek participle (allu.) here rendered yea. After attentively examining Doddridge, MacKnight, and others, the Editor here leaves to suggest the following, which differs little from our authorized version: "It is a small thing for me to be judged of you, or, &c. because, or since, (allu.) I judge not myself; i. e. I am not convict myself of any fault."

Ver. 4 I know nothing by myself.—Parkhurst (in Synecdoche). "I am not conscious to myself of any thing evil," i. e. in his conduct towards them.

The celebrated Mr. Shepherd, when on his death-bed, said to some young ministers who had come to see him, "Your work is great, and calls for great seriousness." With respect to himself, he told these three things: First, That the studying of his sermons very frequently cost him tears. Secondly, Before he preached any sermon to others, he got good by it himself. And, thirdly, That he always went to the pulpit, as if he were immediately after to render an account to his Master.

Ver. 5 Then shall every man—Doddridge, "every one"—have praise of God—i. e. every wise and faithful steward. Compare verse 2 with Mat. xxv. 45, 46.

Ver. 6 These things . . . I have in a figure transferred to myself, &c.—Locke and others "have inferred from hence, that not St. Paul and Apollos, but some other persons were set up among the Corinthians for heads of parties, for whose names the apostle substituted his own, and that of his most intimate friend; but the learned and judicious Histius well observes, that it is probable their names were used among some others omitted; and the figure was only this, that the names of St. Paul and Apollos were used to signify themselves, and any others so extolled: and when the apostle would say how little ministers were in themselves, he chose, out of humility and prireigned as kings without us: and I would to God ye did reign, that we also might reign with you.

The sufferings of the apostles. 1 CORINTHIANS.—CHAP. V., VI. Heinous offenders to be avoided.

9 For I think that God hath set forth us the apostles last, as it were appointed to death: for we ^k are made a ^l spectacle unto the world, and to angels, and to men.

10 We are fools for Christ's sake, but ye are wise in Christ; we are weak, but ye are strong; ye are honourable, but we are despised.

11 Even unto this present hour we both hunger, and thirst, and are ^m naked, and are buffeted, and have no certain dwelling-place;

12 And ⁿ labour, working with our own hands: being ^o reviled, we bless; being persecuted, we suffer it:

13 Being defamed, we entreat: we are made as the filth of the earth, and are the offscouring ^p of all things unto this day.

14 I write not these things to shame you, but as my beloved sons ^q I warn you.

15 For though ye have ten thousand instructors in Christ, yet have ye not many fathers: for in Christ Jesus I have begotten you through the gospel.

16 Wherefore I beseech you, be ye followers of me.

17 For this cause have I sent unto you Timotheus, who is my beloved son, and faithful in the Lord, who shall bring you into remembrance of my ways which be in Christ, as I teach every where in every church.

18 Now some are puffed up, as though I would not come to you.

19 But I will come to you shortly, ^r if the Lord will, and will know, not the speech of them which are puffed up, but ^s the power.

20 For the kingdom ^t of God is not in word, but in power.

21 What will ye? shall ^u I come unto you by a rod, or in love, and in the spirit of meekness?

CHAPTER V.

1 The incestuous person: 6 is cause rather of shame unto them, than of rejoicing. 7 The old leaven is to be purged out. 10 Heinous offenders are to be shamed and avoided.

IT is reported commonly that there is fornication among you, and such fornication as is not so much as named among the Gentiles, that ^a one should have his father's wife.

painful necessity, and to be received in the spirit of love and meekness.

CHAP. V. Ver. 1—13. The necessity of excluding from the church incestuous persons, and all heinous offenders.—The term here used for fornication is of extensive import, and sometimes includes adultery, and every species of uncleanness; but this species of fornication was of a nature so aggravated, as not to be named, even among the heathen, but with reprobation. It is astonishing, therefore, that it should be tolerated for a moment in a Christian church. The apostle directs them how to proceed in order to exclude the offending member from their communion. This he calls delivering him over to Satan, who reigns as god of this world, and claims a dominion in the hearts of all those who apostatize from Christ. This is said to be "for the punishment of the flesh," probably by some severe illness; it being evident that the apostles, and Paul in particular, had such power, as in the case of Hymeneus and Alexander, (1 Tim. i. 20,) and gives us reason to hope that, dence, rather to take such freedom with himself, and his most particular and intimate friend, than with others."—Doddridge.—Above that which is written.—Namely, as servants and stewards, ver. 1. Compare chap. in. 7.

Ver. 9. I would—Or, wish; the word "God" is not in the Greek. Doddridge's paraphrase of this verse gives, we think, its true sense—"Ye are full; ye are rich;" you enjoy so great a degree of prosperity and plenty, that ye have even reigned as kings without us;" so happy in a variety of secular enjoyments, that you have hardly missed my company. And, indeed, "I wish you did reign," in the truest and noblest sense, and were altogether as happy as you think yourselves. See Rev. i. 6.

CHAP. V. Ver. 1. Not so much as named among the Gentiles.—Cicero, indeed, calls it an incredible and unheard-of wickedness.—Doddridge.—His father's wife.—i. e. his step-mother, or mother-in-law, his father being living; otherwise she would have been his father's widow.

Ver. 3. Present in spirit.—Some suppose this to refer to the exercise of some miraculous power; but Dr. P. Smith says, "I perceive no evidence of any thing, more than that exercise of the imagination in cases strongly interesting to us; which is no uncommon form of speech in all languages, to denote a deal presence." See Col. ii. 5.

Ver. 4. Power of our Lord.—i. e. miraculous power.

A. M. 3164
A. D. 57

J. ur, the
last apostles.

k. He. 10. 33.

l. theatre.

m. Re. 8. 33.

n. Ac. 20. 34.

o. Mat. 5. 44.
Ac. 7. 60.

p. La. 3. 45

q. 1 Th. 2. 41.

r. Ja. 4. 45

s. Ga. 2. 6

t. Ro. 14. 17

u. 2 Co. 13. 10

a. De. 27. 20.

b. 2 Co. 7. 7

c. Col. 2. 5.

d. or, determined.

e. 2 Co. 2. 9, 10.

f. Mar. 16. 19
Jn. 20. 23.

g. 1 Th. 1. 20.

h. c. 11. 32.

i. Ja. 4. 16.

j. La. 13. 32.

k. Lu. 53. 7
1 Pe. 1. 19
Re. 5. 6, 12.

l. or, slain

m. or, holy day.

n. Ex. 13. 6.

o. Mat. 16. 6, 12.

p. Ex. 5. 11
2 Th. 3. 14.

q. Re. 16. 17.
2 Jn. 10.

r. Ma. 4. 11.

s. Mat. 18. 17

a. De. 7. 22.
Mat. 19. 28
Jude 14, 15
Re. 20. 4.

2 And ye are puffed up, and have not rather ^b mourned, that he that hath done this deed might be taken away from among you.

3 For I verily, as absent ^c in body, but present in spirit, have ^d judged already, as though I were present, concerning him that hath so done this deed,

4 In the name ^e of our Lord Jesus Christ, when ye are gathered together, and my spirit, with the power ^f of our Lord Jesus Christ,

5 To deliver ^g such a one unto Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that ^h the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus.

6 Your glorying ⁱ is not good. Know ye not that a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump?

7 Purge out therefore the old leaven, that ye may be a new lump, as ye are unleavened. For even Christ our ^k passover is ^l sacrificed for us:

8 Therefore let us keep ^m the ⁿ feast, not with old leaven, neither with the ^o leaven of malice and wickedness; but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth.

9 I wrote unto you in an epistle ^p not to company with fornicators:

10 Yet not altogether with the fornicators of this world, or with the covetous, or extortioners, or with idolaters; for then must ye needs go out of the world.

11 But now I have written unto you not to keep company, if ^q any man that is called a brother be a fornicator, or covetous, or an idolater, or a railer, or a drunkard, or an extortioner; with such a one no not to eat.

12 For what have I to do to judge them also that are ^r without? do not ye judge them that are within?

13 But them that are without God judgeth. Therefore put away ^s from among yourselves that wicked person.

CHAPTER VI.

1 The Corinthians must not vex their brethren, in going to law with them; 6 especially under officials. 9 The murmurers shall not inherit the kingdom of God. 13 Our bodies are the members of Christ, 19 and temples of the Holy Ghost. 16, 17 They must not therefore be defiled.

DARE any of you, having a matter against another, go to law before the unjust, and not before the saints?

2 Do ye not know that the saints ^a shall judge after all, the party might be saved—"Yet so as by (or through) fire." See chap. iii. 15.

The apostle first writes to the Corinthians not to keep company with fornicators; yet, considering that this licentious city was full of such characters, he farther explains himself, as not meaning that they might not do business with them; he only cautions them, not to form intimacies with them; and this applies particularly to the case of Christian brethren, who had been guilty of such enormities, in whom the crime was far more aggravated: much less should they allow such to communicate with them in the Christian Passover, the Supper of our Lord. And we cannot help observing here, that covetous persons, and extortioners, and railers, are ranked in the same class with fornicators, idolaters, and drunkards! Alas, how would a rigid attention to this rule thin some of our popular congregations!

CHAP. VI. Ver. 1—20. Against going to law with the brethren before heathen judges. All believers members of Christ's mys-

Ver. 7. Purge out . . . the old leaven.—i. e. the leaven of hypocrisy. See Luke xii. 1.

Ver. 9. I wrote unto you in an epistle.—From this, some have inferred that St. Paul had written an Epistle to the Corinthians before this; and we are by no means sure that we have all the writings of the apostles, more than of the prophets. Others, however, so render this ver., and verse 11, as to study them in the present letter. "I write (or have written) to you [in this epistle] not to [keep] company," &c. So Hammond, Whitby, Dr. Edwards, Claude, Lardner, Macknight, Boothroyd, &c.

Ver. 10. Not altogether.—i. e. not in the civil concerns of life.

Ver. 12. For what have I to do to judge them also that are without?.—That is, "I confine these remarks to those who are within the church, because I have no right to judge them that are without"—God judgeth them.—Do not ye judge? &c.—The connexion is here obscure, unless we allow ourselves to supply the adversative particle, but, before it, as this: "I have no right to judge those that are without; but do not ye yourselves judge them that are within? If so, surely I (Paul) may."

CHAP. VI. Ver. 1. Dare any of you, &c.—"Josephus observes, that the Romans (who were now masters of Corinth) permitted the Jews who resided in foreign countries to decide private affairs, where nothing capital was it.

the world? and if the world shall be judged by you, are ye unworthy to judge the smallest matters?

3 Know ye not that we shall judge angels? how much more things that pertain to this life?

4 If then ye have judgments of things pertaining to this life, set them to judge who are least esteemed in the church.

5 I speak to your shame. Is it so, that there is not a wise man among you? no, not one that shall be able to judge between his brethren?

6 But brother goeth to law with brother, and that before the unbelievers.

7 Now therefore there is utterly a fault among you, because ye go to law one with another. Why do ye not rather ^b take wrong? why do ye not rather suffer yourselves to be ^c defrauded?

8 Nay, ye do wrong, and defraud, and that your brethren.

9 Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God? Be not deceived: neither ^d fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind,

10 Nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God.

11 And such ^e were some of you: but ye are ^f washed, but ye are ^g sanctified, but ye are ^h justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God.

12 All things are lawful unto me, but all things

A. M. 4061.
A. D. 57.

b Pr 20.22
Gal 5.39, 40.
Ro 12.17, 19.
1 Th 5.15.

c 1 Th 4.6.
Gal 5.19, 21.
Eph 4.4, 5.
1 Th 4.12, 14, 18.

d Ro 12.15.
e Ep 2.1, 2.
5.8.
Col 3.7.
Tit 3.3, 6.

f He 10.22.
g He 2.11.
h Ro 8.30.

i or, profitable.
j 1 Co 9.7.

k Mat 15.
17, 30.
Ro 14.17.

l 1 Th 4.3, 7.
m Ro 12.1.
n Ep 5.23.
o Ro 6.5, 9.
p Ep 5.30.

q Ge 2.21.
Mat 19.3.
r Jn 17.21.
23.
Ep 4.4.

s Pr 6.25.
t 2 Ti 27.
27.
28.

u Ro 12.7, 8.
v Ac 20.28.
w 1 Co 1.13, 19.
Ro 5.9.
w 1 Pe 2.9.

are not expedient: all things are lawful for me, but I will not be brought under the power of any.

13 Meats ^a for the belly, and the belly for meats: but God shall destroy both it and them. Now the body is not ^b for fornication, but for the ^c Lord; and the Lord ^d for the body.

14 And ^e God hath both raised up the Lord, and will also raise up us by his own power.

15 Know ye not that your bodies are the members ^f of Christ? shall I then take the members of Christ, and make them the members of a harlot? God forbid.

16 What? know ye not that he which is joined to a harlot is one body? for ^g two, saith he, shall be one flesh.

17 But he that is joined unto the Lord is one ^h spirit.

18 Flee ⁱ fornication. Every sin that a man doeth is without the body; but he that committeth fornication sinneth against his own body.

19 What? know ye not that your ^j body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not ^k your own?

20 For ye are bought ^l with a price: therefore glorify ^m God in your body, and in your spirit which are God's.

CHAPTER VII.

² He treateth of marriage, 4 showing it to be a remedy against fornication: 10 and that the bond thereof ought not lightly to be dissolved. 18, 20 Every man must be content with his vocation. 25 Virginity wherefore to be embraced. 35 And for what respects we may either marry, or abstain from marrying.

NOW concerning the things whereof ⁿ I wrote unto me: It is good for a man not to touch a woman.

tical body.—By the severe reproof with which this chapter commences, it should seem to have been a common practice with the Corinthian Christians to appeal to the Pagan tribunals, on matters of complaint against each other, on the pretence that themselves were not qualified to judge each other. But the apostle spurs at this, under the idea that they shall be honoured to judge angels, and consequently be qualified thereto. What is meant, however, by saints judging angels and the world, is a matter of much controversy, and we can form but very inadequate ideas of that august scene till we behold it. How far angels, perfect or fallen, may be made the subjects of a general judgment, is not for us to say; nor is it necessary for us to ascertain what part saints or apostles may sustain in this awful scene. It is enough for us to know that Christ will be the supreme Judge, and that the companions of his passion shall participate in all his glory.

The advice which follows, rather to suffer wrong, in many cases, than to go to law, is the same that our Lord gave to his disciples, in Matt. v. 39—42; and is, indeed, no less applicable to us in the present age, when immense sums are annually thrown away in unnecessary litigations, where the best that can be expected often is, that both parties will be losers; and when this happens, as it sometimes does, among professing Christians, it shows an equal deficiency of religion and of good sense: but it is to be feared that many now, as in St. Paul's time, go to law, not so much to procure justice for themselves, as to defraud their brethren: these, however, are classed by the apostle with the vilest of mankind. "Such (he adds) were some of you;" but he now hopes better things of them: "Ye are washed, ye are sanctified, ye are justified." These are the saints of which he speaks, (verse 2,) who shall judge the world, and even angels; and yet these are the men whom the world despise and ridicule: but, despised as they may be, the Lord Almighty says, they are "the excellent in whom all his delight is!" (Ps. xvi. 1.)

In verse 12, the apostle adverts to another subject, and one certainly of no small interest. "All things (says he) are lawful unto me;" that is, all things that are lawful to others are so to me; and he then instances, in two particulars: 1. In respect of meats—a variety and choice of food was as lawful to him as to others; and, 2. With respect to living with the other sex, as he says in chap. ix. 5, "Have we not power (or right) to lead about a sister, a wife, as well as other apostles?" Certainly he had; but he denied himself all the indulgences of the table and a married life, because they were inconsistent with that laborious course to which he had devoted himself, for the extensive propagation of the gospel. "All things," in both these respects, were as lawful to him as to others; but they were "not expedient;" i. e. they did not accord with his plans of devotedness to Christ, as an apostle. "Meats for the belly, and the belly for meats," says he; but these are all perishable things, and "God shall destroy both it and them" in the course of nature, though the body shall be raised again at the last day. But in the latter part of the verse he does not say, "The body is for fornication," &c. but, on the contrary, "The body is not for fornication, but for the Lord." Adverting, then, to the original law on which marriage is founded, (Gen. ii. 24,) he says, "Know ye not that your bodies are members of Christ? shall I then (adds he) take the members of Christ, and make the members of a harlot? God forbid." This brings the subject home, then, to the case of the incestuous Corinthian, (see chap. v. 1,) who, supposing him to be what he professed to be, had, in his own person, united a member of Christ with an incestuous harlot. He then concludes this part of the subject with an important precept—"Flee fornication;" that is, not only avoid it, but flee from it, as from the face of a serpent, or the approach of an overwhelming deluge. As Solomon says, emphatically, of the "path of the wicked" generally—"Avoid it; pass not by it; turn from it, (Marg. keep aloof of it,) and pass away;" and this precept is enforced by two arguments: 1. Your bodies are the temples of the Holy Ghost, and to defile them with a harlot is sacrilege—than which no crime was held in greater abhorrence by the heathen. 2. "You are bought with a price;" namely, that of the precious blood of Christ; your body and spirit are therefore both God's, and ought to be consecrated to his service.

CHAP. VII. Ver. 1—24. Of marriage as a remedy against fornication.—The mutual property which the husband and question, among themselves; and from hence Dr. Lardner argues the justice of this rebuke of St. Paul, as there is no doubt but the Christians might have had the same privilege as they were looked upon as a Jewish sect. But, separate from that, they might certainly, by mutual compact, have chosen their brethren as referees, by way of arbitration;—Doddridge. It is observable, that the Greek church have such a dread of the Turkish magistracy, that they take the advice of St. Paul, and generally refer their disputes among themselves to the decision of their own prelates.—Hughes' Travels in Sicily.

Ver. 3 We shall judge angels—i. e. fallen angels, as the text is generally understood: but if it must be taken literally, the term judge must be used with great latitude, though not with greater, perhaps, than when applied to the judgment of mankind. It may refer only to the plaintiff of the redeemed.

Ver. 4 If then ye have judgments—Doddridge, "controversies"—matters which call for judgment.—Set them,—Doddridge, "Do ye set them?" Rather, perhaps, Why do ye set them? &c.—Who are least esteemed—Doddridge, "of no esteem," or not esteemed; i. e. the heathen. The sense is, If you have disputes among yourselves concerning worldly matters, why do you refer them to the judgment of the heathen? (For the apostle perhaps meant that the meanest persons in the church were competent to decide the causes which they brought before the heathen magistrature.)—Bagster.

Ver. 7 Why do ye not rather take—(Doddridge, "endure")—wrong?

Ver. 9 Nor adulterers.—If there are any persons in the community who are unfaithful in the conjugal relation, and who are accustomed to "drink stolen waters as sweeter than their own;" these are usually much pleased to hear that there is no hell, and that adulterers shall inherit the kingdom of God.—Nor effeminate.—The original term is much stronger than the translation, and refers to certain men dressed in women's apparel, for the use of the next class, "abusers of themselves with mankind," both which were allowed in the heathen temples, and Corinth was so infamous for its voluptuousness, that Ælian says, it was thereby totally ruined. Orient. Lit. No. 1173.

Ver. 11 Ye are sanctified.—[We have here an instance, as Dr. Whitby remarks of the figure called hyperbaton, by which the words are transposed from their plain grammatical order; for we "are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus," and "sanctified by the Spirit of our God," as in Phil. 5.]—Bagster.

Ver. 18 Every sin.—Doddridge, "every [other] sin." All and every are often used for many and most. Xenophon represents Socrates as saying, that "intemperate men hurt themselves far more than others; whereas others sinners secure some profit to themselves, though they are injurious to others."

CHAP. VII. Ver. 1. Not to touch—Parkhurst, "To have nothing to do with"—a woman.

2 Nevertheless, to avoid fornication, let every man have his own wife, and let every woman have her own husband.

3 Let the husband render unto the wife due benevolence: and likewise also the wife unto the husband.

4 The wife hath not power of her own body, but the husband: and likewise also the husband hath not power of his own body, but the wife.

5 Defraud ye not one the other, except it be with consent for a time, that ye may give yourselves to fasting and prayer; and come together again, that Satan tempt you not for your incontinency.

6 But I speak this by permission, and not of commandment.

7 For I would that all men were even as I myself. But every man hath his proper gift of God, one after this manner, and another after that.

8 I say therefore to the unmarried and widows, It is good for them if they abide even as I.

9 But if they cannot contain, let them marry: for it is better to marry than to burn.

10 And unto the married I command, yet not I, but the Lord, Let the wife depart from her husband:

11 But and if she depart, let her remain unmarried, or be reconciled to her husband: and let not the husband put away his wife.

12 But to the rest speak I, not the Lord: If any brother hath a wife that believeth not, and she be pleased to dwell with him, let him not put her away.

13 And the woman which hath a husband that believeth not, and if he be pleased to dwell with her, let her not leave him.

A. M. 4061.
A. D. 57.

a. Ex. 21. 10.
1 Pe. 3. 7.

b. Joel. 2. 16.

c. 1 Th. 3. 5.

d. Mat. 19. 11, 12.

e. 1 Th. 5. 14.

f. Mal. 2. 14.

g. Mat. 19. 6, 9.

h. Eccl. 10. 11 &c.

i. Mat. 2. 15, 16.

j. Ro. 12. 18.

k. 14. 19.

l. He. 12. 14.

m. 1 in.

n. 1 Pe. 3. 1, 2.

o. 1 Pet. 3. 2.

p. Eccl. 5. 6.

q. 1 Jo. 12. 13.

r. 1 Pe. 2. 7.

s. He. 13. 5.

t. 1 Jo. 4. 36.

u. Ro. 6. 18.

v. 1 Pe. 1. 18.

w. Eccl. 6. 20.

x. ver. 17, 20.

y. ver. 6, 10, 40.

14 For the unbelieving husband is sanctified by the wife, and the unbelieving wife is sanctified by the husband: else were your children unclean; but now are they holy.

15 But if the unbelieving depart, let him depart. A brother or a sister is not under bondage in such cases: but God hath called us to peace.

16 For what knowest thou, O wife, whether thou shalt save thy husband? or how knowest thou, O man, whether thou shalt save thy wife?

17 But as God hath distributed to every man, as the Lord hath called every one, so let him walk. And so ordain I in all churches.

18 Is any man called being circumcised? let him not become uncircumcised. Is any called in uncircumcision? let him not be circumcised.

19 Circumcision is nothing, and uncircumcision is nothing, but the keeping of the commandments of God.

20 Let every man abide in the same calling wherein he was called.

21 Art thou called being a servant? care not for it: but if thou mayest be made free, use it rather.

22 For he that is called in the Lord, being a servant, is the Lord's freeman: likewise also he that is called, being free, is Christ's servant.

23 Ye are bought with a price: be not ye the servants of men.

24 Brethren, let every man, wherein he is called, therein abide with God.

25 Now concerning virgins I have no commandment of the Lord: yet I give my judgment, that if a virgin be betrothed to a husband, she is allowed to have in each other's person exclusively, shows that, however polygamy might be tolerated under the Old Testament dispensation, it derives no sanction from the New. The doctrine here laid down is also in direct opposition to that of a community of wives, recommended by Plato and other philosophers and legislators of ancient Greece, who considered matrimony only in relation to the state, and children as the common property of the republic. Our apostle, on the contrary, considers it as a divine institution, though obligatory on those only who felt its expediency. Those, however, who entered into this state, were bound to confine themselves to the laws of its institution, according to which the parties were united to each other for life, except only in those cases in which divorces were permitted by the divine law.

This chapter, however, has a reference to certain questions, containing, as it should seem, cases of conscience, which the Corinthians had previously proposed to the apostle, and concerning which, as the letter is not preserved, we can only judge by his replies.

Besides the general question of the expediency of marriage, he notices the subordinate one relative to separations of the married pair; in answer to which, he allows of none, but by mutual consent—for a limited time—and for some important object, as for the purpose of prayer and fasting. But in case of a woman having already left her husband, he directs her not to think of marrying another, but to remain unmarried, (that is, single,) till she can be reconciled to her former husband.

But the most important question relates to the case of one party being converted to Christianity, and the other not, which the Christian believers probably considered as a sufficient ground for separation; but not so the apostle. Neither is allowed to put away the other: "The unbelieving husband is sanctified by the (believing) wife, and the unbelieving wife in like manner by the (believing) husband," so that the connexion is perfectly lawful, and the children are legitimate; or, in a ceremonial sense, holy. But if the unbelieving husband or wife is determined voluntarily to leave the other, so be it; let them patiently submit. Christianity disturbs not any of the laws or institutions of civil life.

If any man, therefore, be called, being circumcised, let him not renounce his circumcision: or if he be called in uncircumcision, let him not be circumcised. Neither circumcision nor uncircumcision is a bar to God's favour. If one be called, being a servant or a slave, let him not be impatient for his liberty, nor, on the other hand, refuse the offer or opportunity of being free, since freedom is always preferable to servitude. Notwithstanding, however, a converted servant is the Lord's freeman; and a converted freeman the Lord's servant.

Ver. 25—40. Farther remarks on marriage, and on the difference between a single and a married life.—Here an immediately occurred, in which the conversion of one party has been the means of converting the other also; and where this has had absolutely been the case, yet, in many other cases, the converted party has had a powerful effect in restraining the other from vice, and especially in procuring the religious education of the children. Thus for the husband has "sanctified" the wife, and the wife the husband; and the children, though born perhaps in heathenism, have been brought up under Christian instruction, and introduced to the privileges of the Christian church, accounted holy, and in many instances, by divine grace made truly so. Compare the note following.

Ver. 16. For what knowest thou, O wife, &c.—This passage may be understood two ways, as connected with the context; either as a reason why the deserted party should not be too anxious for the return of his or her heathen partner; "for what," or "how knowest thou, O wife, whether thou shalt save thy husband?" And if not, the union of a Christian and a Pagan promises but little comfort. So Macknight. Or, if we read with Doddridge, "How knowest thou, O wife, but thou mayest save thy husband?" then it may operate as an argument to induce her to abide with the husband in case of his return; so on the other hand with the husband.

Ver. 17. As God hath distributed to every man.—Namely, his proper lot; or allotted to each his proper talent and situation to improve it—so let him walk, whether he be single or married, circumcised or uncircumcised, &c.—So ordain I—i. e. by my apostolical authority.

Ver. 18. Become uncircumcised.—(Let him not endeavour to appear uncircumcised; which was sometimes affected, as appears from Celsus.)—B.

Ver. 21. Servant.—(Rather, a slave, the property of another, and bought with his money. In these verses, the Apostle shows, that Christianity makes no change in our civil connections.)—Bagster.

Ver. 23. Be not ye the servants of men.—That is, if you can avoid it, as in the verse preceding.

Ver. 25. Note concerning virgins.—The original term applies to both sexes; 1267 ment, as one that hath obtained mercy of the Lord to be ^a faithful.

26 I suppose therefore that this is good for the present ^a distress, I say, that ^b it is good for a man so to be.

27 Art thou bound unto a wife? seek not to be loosed. Art thou loosed from a wife? seek not a wife.

28 But and if thou marry, thou ^c hast not sinned; and if a virgin marry, she hath not sinned. Nevertheless such shall have trouble in the flesh; but I spare you.

29 But this I say, brethren, the time ^d is short; it remaineth, that both they that have wives be as though they had none;

30 And they that weep, as though they wept not; and they that rejoice, as though they rejoiced not; and they that buy, as though they possessed not;

31 And they that use this world, as not abusing it: for the fashion ^e of this world passeth away.

32 But I would have you without carefulness. He that is unmarried ^f careth for the things ^g that belong to the Lord, how he may please the Lord:

33 But he that is married careth for the things that are of the world, how he may please ^h his wife.

34 There is difference also between a wife and a virgin. The unmarried woman careth for the things of the Lord, that she may be

A. M. 4001.
A. D. 57.
z 1 Ti. 1. 12.
a or, necessity.
b ver. 1, 8.
c He 13. 4.
d 1 Pe. 4. 7.
2 Pe. 3. 8, 9.
e Pe 39. 6.
Ja 4. 14.
1 Th 5. 7.
1 Jo. 2. 17.
f 1 Ti 6. 5.
g of the Lord, as ver. 34.
h Lu. 10. 40.
42.
i ver. 28.
j Ro. 7. 2.
k 2 Co. 6. 14.
l ver. 25.
m 2 Pe. 3. 15.
16.
n Ac 15. 10.
19.
b Ro. 11. 14.
22.
c ver. 47. 10.
d e 13.

holy both in body and in spirit: but she that is married ^b careth for the things of the world, how she may please her husband.

35 And this I speak for your own profit; not that I may cast a snare upon you, but for that which is comely, and that ye may attend upon the Lord without distraction.

36 But if any man think that he becometh himself uncomely toward his virgin, if she pass the flower of her age, and need so require, let him do what he will, he sinneth not: let them marry.

37 Nevertheless, he that standeth steadfast in his heart, having no necessity, but hath power over his own will, and hath so decreed in his heart that he will keep his virgin, doeth well.

38 So ⁱ then he that giveth her in marriage doeth well; but he that giveth her not in marriage doeth better.

39 The wife ^j is bound by the law as long as her husband liveth; but if her husband be dead, she is at liberty to be married to whom she will; only ^k in the Lord.

40 But she is happier if she so abide, after ^l my judgment: and I think ^m also that I have the Spirit of God.

CHAPTER VIII.

¹ To abstain from meats offered to idols. 8, 9 We must not abuse our Christian liberty, to the offence of our brethren; 11 but must bridle our knowledge with charity.

NOW as touching things offered ^a unto idols, we know that we all have ^b knowledge, ^c Knowledge puffeth up, but ^d charity edifieth.

portant distinction arises, to which it seems necessary for us now to attend, as it regards the preceding as well as following verses of the chapter, which have been often quoted to prove the apostle wrote not by inspiration. We consider particular exceptions, however, as establishing a general conclusion; that is, when the apostle, whom we consider as speaking in his writings generally by inspiration, names some particular instances in which he does not pretend so to write, this establishes the general point of his inspiration. Many able commentators think, however, that St. Paul, by the phrases in question, (such as, "I speak by permission, and not of commandment;" "To the rest speak I, not the Lord," &c.) does not mean to distinguish between what he spoke by inspiration as an apostle, and what he spoke as a private individual; but to distinguish his own determinations as an apostle, and those of his Lord and Master, when on earth; which latter he must have derived either from immediate revelation, (Gal. ii. 12. Ephes. iii. 3,) or from a Hebrew copy of St. Matthew's Gospel, the only one (if any) then extant. The reasons on which this latter opinion rests, will be found in our notes to this chapter. (See also Prebend. Townsend's New Test. Arranged.) As it does not become us to be dogmatical, we shall leave our readers to form their own judgment. But that even apostles were not always under the influence of inspiration, is clear from the circumstance of Peter and Paul, in one instance, withstanding each other to the face. (Gal. ii. 11–14.)

But to advert to the latter part of the chapter now before us, what the apostle says dissuasive of marriage, ought not, we conceive, to be construed in opposition to the institution itself, which is unquestionably of divine origin, but merely in reference to the then "present distress," (ver. 26,) through persecution, and the predicted destruction of Jerusalem, which, indeed, occurred within about a dozen years after Paul's writing this Epistle. (See Matt. xxiv. 19, 20.)

If, as we conceive, these verses be addressed to parents or guardians, the advice here given will be to this effect—that, in present circumstances of existing and expected distress, St. Paul thought it advisable for parents to withhold their children, and especially their daughters, from marriage, the father's consent being always necessary to its being legal: but, adds he, "If a parent thinks that thereby he should wrong his daughter, or unreasonably thwart her wishes, or violate any honourable engagement, let him do as he thinks right." "He that giveth her in marriage doeth well; but he that giveth her not in marriage [in the present necessity] doeth better."

But if we refer the case (as some do) to the young persons themselves, he says, Art thou bound to a wife? seek not to be loosed. Art thou loosed [or at liberty] from a wife? seek not a wife." That is, those already married should endeavour to fulfil the duties of their station; but those not enthrall'd in such engagement, would do well to pause for the present. Clouds of darkness and distress are gathering round the political horizon, storms of persecution are rising on every side, and it becomes us to be as detached as possible from the encumbrances of the present life; to "use the world," so far as to fulfil our duties in the various situations in which we may be placed, "without abusing it," by making it our rest, our home.

In giving the preference to a single life, the apostle considers the advantages which it possessed for personal devotion, and active service in the cause of Christ; and also the trials it avoided, when Christians were exposed to persecution. In these happy days of peace and liberty it is, indeed, difficult to form an adequate idea of their distress, who, encumbered by wives and children, had to fly from place to place, to avoid their persecutors; and who, indeed, suffered many deaths, in the tortures inflicted on those so closely connected with them in matrimonial or parental ties.

It is a gross abuse, however, of the apostle's design, to argue hence the advantages of monastic institutions, whereby, indeed, many avoid domestic trials, but plunge themselves into temptations to vice, that far more than overbalance all those trials, and so disgrace the cause which they pretend to serve. Let those who have the gift of continence, and no taste for domestic society, enjoy the ease and felicity of a single life, but let them not condemn their brethren.

In the close of this chapter, we have a word respecting second marriages, which the apostle clearly legalizes—"She is at liberty to be married" again, "only in the Lord;" at the same time, as in the case of virgins, he gives his opinion, that, in present circumstances, it was happier for her to remain single.

CHAP. VIII. Ver. 1–13. On eating meat offered to idols

^a See Rev. xiv. 4.) and is by Boothroyd rendered "single persons"—"I have no commandment of the Lord—i. e. of the Lord Jesus, as in the case above stated, ver. 10—Yet I give my judgment—To give judgment is a judicial phrase.—As one that hath obtained mercy of the Lord to be faithful—i. e. faithful to my conscience, and to my duty as an apostle.

Ver. 26. Trouble—Doddridge, "I apprehend." MacKnight, "I declare." The original term (trouble) implies a legal opinion.—For the present distress—Doddridge, "emergency."—So to be—i. e. to be a virgin; namely, single or unmarried.

Ver. 28. Trouble in the flesh—i. e. domestic affliction, and persecution. Compare verse 26.

Ver. 29. As though they had none—That is, this is not a time for the enjoyment of carnal pleasures, or to seek after worldly gain. Our joys and sorrows should both be moderated.

Ver. 31. The fashion—(Greek, Schema.) "The form," pageantry, &c.—[Grotius remarks, that the Apostle's expression is borrowed from the theatre; where the phrase means that the scene changes, and presents an appearance entirely new.]—Bagster.

Ver. 32. Without carefulness—Doddridge, "without anxious care."

Ver. 35. Not that I may cast a snare upon you.—The Greek word (brocho) signifies a cord, which the hunters used to cast over wild cattle, to ensnare them—a thing practised to this day in South America.—Which is comely—i. e. becoming, consistent. Paul did not wish to fetter the minds of the Corinthians, but only to lead them to act consistently with their profession.

Ver. 36. Toward his virgin, if she pass the flower (i. e. the prime) of her age.—[Some interpret this of a man's continuing in a state of celibacy; but such a construction of the original appears without example. It appears most obvious to explain it of a parent, or guardian, who had the charge of a virgin. Ten parthenon autou, in Greek, signifies his virgin daughter.]—Bagster. A single life was a reproach among the Jews after the age of twenty; if, therefore, his daughter approach that age, and is impatient of reproach, &c.

Ver. 37. Having no necessity—i. e. either from her impotency, or from his own circumstances—as for instance, his inability to maintain her.

Ver. 40. I think—Doddridge, "I appear to have the Spirit," &c. MacKnight, "I am certain that I have." Dr. M. is confident that the Greek (doko) does not imply doubt, and refers for proof to chap. iv. 9; vii. 2; xi. 16; xiv. 32, &c. See also chap. x. 12.

CHAP. VIII. Ver. 1. We know, &c.—It is generally understood, that great

2 And * if any man think that he knoweth any thing, he knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know.

3 But if any man love God, the same is known of him.

4 As concerning therefore the eating of those things that are offered in sacrifice unto idols, we know that an idol is nothing in the world, and that there is none other ^b God but one.

5 For though there be that are ^c called gods, whether in heaven or in earth, (as there be gods many, and lords many.)

6 But to us there is but one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we ^k in him; and one Lord Jesus Christ, by whom ^l are all things, and we by him.

7 Howbeit there is not in every man that knowledge: for some with conscience of the idol unto this hour eat it as a thing offered unto an idol; and their conscience being weak is defiled.

8 But meat ^m commendeth us not to God: for neither, if we eat, ⁿ are we the better; neither, if we eat not, ^o are we the worse.

9 But take heed lest by any means this ^p liberty ^q of yours become a stumbling-block to them that are weak.

10 For if any man see thee which hast knowledge sit at meat in the idol's temple, shall not the conscience of him which is weak be ^r emboldened to eat those things which are offered to idols;

11 And through thy knowledge shall the weak brother perish, for whom Christ died?

12 But ^s when ye sin so against the brethren, and wound their weak conscience, ye sin against Christ.

13 Wherefore, if meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest ^t I make my brother to offend.

CHAPTER IX.

1 He sheweth his liberty. 7 and that the minister ought to live by the gospel: 15 yet that himself hath of his own accord abstained, 1st to be either chargeable unto them 22 or to ^u grieve unto any, in matters indifferent. 24 Our life is like unto a race.

AM I not an apostle? am I not free? have I not seen ^a Jesus Christ our Lord? are not ye my work ^b in the Lord?

2 If I be not an apostle unto others, yet doubtless I am to you: for the seal of mine apostleship are ye in the Lord.

3 Mine answer to them that do examine me is this.

4 Have we not power to eat and to drink?

5 Have we not power to lead about a sister, ^c a wife, as well as other apostles, and as the brethren of the Lord, and Cephas?

6 Or I only and Barnabas, have not we ^d power to forbear working?

7 Who goeth a warfare ^e any time at his own

—“When the heathens (says Dr. Macknight) offered sacrifices of such animals as were fit for food, a part of the carcass was burnt on the altar, a part was given to the priest, and on the remainder the offerers feasted with their friends, either in the idol's temple or at home. Sometimes, also, a part was sent as a present to such as they wished to oblige; and, if the sacrifice was large, a part of it was sold in the public market. To their idolatrous feasts the heathens often invited the Christians of their acquaintance in Corinth; and some of the brethren there, desirous of preserving the friendship of their neighbours, accepted these invitations, perhaps at the persuasion of the false teachers, who called it an innocent method of avoiding persecution. They knew [that] an idol was nothing in the world, and therefore the partaking of the sacrifice, even in the idol's temple, could not [they supposed] be reckoned a worshiping of the idol. Besides, such a feast was considered [by them] as a common meal, which, under the gospel, they were at liberty to eat. . . . These arguments, it is true, are not explicitly stated by the apostle; but the things he hath written in this [chap.] and in chap. x. being direct confutations of them, we may believe they were mentioned by the Corinthian brethren in their letter referred to in chap. vii. 1.

“Agreeably to this supposition, the apostle begins his discourse concerning the eating of things sacrificed to idols, with acknowledging that the generality of Christians had much more knowledge than the heathens. But at the same time he told them, that knowledge often puffeth up individuals with pride, and maketh them neglect the good of their neighbours, whereas love leadeth one to edify his neighbour, (verse 1.) Next he declares, that whoever is vain of his knowledge, and maketh an uncharitable use of it, knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know; because true knowledge always maketh a man humble and charitable, (verse 3.) . . . Having laid down these principles, the apostle, in answer to the first argument, whereby the partaking [of idol sacrifices] was pretended to be justified, acknowledged that most Christians know [that] an idol is ‘nothing in the world,’ and that there is no other God but one, and no other Lord but Jesus, (ver. 4–6.) But at the same time he [tells] them there were some weak brethren, who had not that knowledge. . . . In them, therefore, the eating of such sacrifices was certainly an act of idolatry, whereby their conscience was defiled, (ver. 7.) Next, to the argument that the things sacrificed [were] meats, the eating of which was lawful under the gospel . . . the apostle replied, that in the use of their Christian liberty of eating all kinds of meats without distinction, they were bound to take care not to lead the weak into sin by their example, (ver. 9.) This he calls sinning against the brethren, and against Christ, (ver. 12.) Then, in a high strain of Christian benevolence, he declared, that if his eating any kind of flesh occasioned his brother to sin, he would abstain from it all his life, (ver. 13.) By saying this, the apostle insinuated to the faction, that, whatever they might pretend, their real motives for joining in [these] idolatrous feasts were of a sensual kind. They loved good cheer and merriment; but [out of regard to] their brethren, it was their duty willingly to have denied themselves all such gratifications,” even supposing them to be lawful; since by this conduct they might offend weak brethren, whose consciences were less enlightened.

CHAP. IX. Ver. 1–27. Paul claims the rights of a Christian minister and an apostle.—The questions proposed in the opening of this chapter clearly show on what grounds St. Paul rested his claim to be an apostle, and more especially to the Corinthians, who had been chiefly called by his ministry, and collected into a Christian church. At the same time he states the privileges to which, as a minister and an apostle, he was particularly entitled:—1. His right, as a preacher of the gospel, to live on the gospel which he preached: this, however, he waived, and chose rather to work with his own hands at tent-making, than to be an expense to his converts or a burden to the church. (See 2 Thess. iii. 8, 9.) 2. His right to marry; for so we understand his “leading about a sister, a wife,” like Peter, who, on all hands, is allowed to have been a married man. (See Matt. viii. 14.)

The same principle which led St. Paul to sacrifice his privileges and personal comforts to the great cause of the Saviour, led him also, in other cases, to accommodate himself to the prejudices of both Jews and Gentiles, so far as he conscientiously part of the first paragraph in this chapter should be included in a parenthesis, but critics are divided where to place the marks; most place them in the middle of the first and fourth verses. If we might be permitted, however, to offer a suggestion, we should confine the parenthesis to the first verse, thus:—“If ye know [for [sic] we all have [this] knowledge] namely, that the heathen gods are no gods at all: yet let us not be vain of our knowledge, for knowledge puffeth up, &c. Such we suppose to be the sense of this intricate and involved passage.—“Charity edifieth”—i. e. buildeth up—as a family is built up by love. See Ps. xxviii. 5 Prov. xv. 1.

Ver. 2. If any man think—Macknight, “is confident.” See note on chap. vii. 40.

Ver. 4. An idol is nothing.—The Hebrews gave them a name that implied this, which is thought to be here alluded to; and Whitby shows, that the position here asserted was a common aphorism among the Jewish doctors.

Ver. 7. Not in every man—Doddridge, “Not in all men”—even not in some professing Christians.—“For some, with conscience of the idol, &c.—i. e. supposing that, though the idol itself may be an insensible statue, it may be inhabited by some un-mortal demon; and, thus supposing, they become guilty of idolatry.”

Ver. 8. Meat commendeth us not—i. e. the eating or refraining from any particular kind of food, in itself considered.

Ver. 9. This liberty—Macknight, “right.” So they claimed it; but the apostle does not concede it. See chap. x. 19–23.

Ver. 10. If any man see thee—That is, seeing you do so, he may be encouraged to do the same, without the knowledge and enlightened views which you possess, and thus may lead him into idolatry, and thereby wound his conscience.—“Be emboldened”—Macknight, “edified,” or “built up”; i. e. in error and in vice. Compare note chap. viii. 1.

Ver. 11. Shall the weak brother perish?—See note on Rom. xiv. 15. CHAP. IX. Ver. 1. Am I not free?—Meaning, that his time and talents were at his own disposal. He was not in bondage to any man—a circumstance necessary to capacitate him for his itinerant labours.—Have I not seen Jesus Christ?—This was necessary, in order to his being a competent witness of Christ's resurrection.

Ver. 4. Power to eat and to drink?—[Rather, authority or right. Power is only the ability to do a thing; whereas the apostle means a right to do what he is speaking of.]—Baesler. That is, labouring for the public good, have we not a right to live at the public charge?

Ver. 5. To lead about a sister, a wife?—i. e. a Christian wife, or a wife who was a sister in Christ.—Macknight. Roman Catholics render it, “a sister, a woman”; but Doddridge remarks, “the word (Greek) has no force at all here, if it be rendered a woman, since a sister must needs be such; and it is very unlikely that an apostle should carry about with him a woman to whom he was not married; yet this is what they pretend of Cephas, (or Peter,) and of our Lord's brothers.”

Ver. 7. Who goeth a warfare, &c.—i. e. who labours without expecting to reap some of the fruits of his labour?

charges? who planteth ^a a vineyard, and eateth not of the fruit thereof? or who feedeth ^a a flock, and eateth not of the milk of the flock?

8 Say I these things as a man? or saith not the law the same also?

9 For it is written ^b in the law of Moses, Thou shalt not muzzle the mouth of the ox that treadeth out the corn. Doth God take care for oxen?

10 Or saith he it altogether for our sakes? For our sakes, no doubt, this is written: that he ^c that plougheth should plough in hope; and that he that thresheth in hope should be partaker of his hope.

11 If ^d we have sown unto you spiritual things, is it a great thing if we shall reap your carnal things?

12 If others be partakers of this power over you, are not we rather? Nevertheless ^e we have not used this power; but suffer all things, lest we should hinder the gospel of Christ.

13 Do ye not know that they which minister about holy things ^f live of the things of the temple? and they ^g which wait at the altar are partakers with the altar?

14 Even so hath the Lord ^h ordained that they ⁱ which preach the gospel should live of the gospel.

15 But I ^j have used none of these things: neither have I written these things, that it should be so done unto me: for ^k it were better for me to die, than that any man should make my glorying void.

16 For though I preach the gospel, I have nothing to glory of: for ^l necessity is laid upon me; yea, wo is unto me, if I preach not the gospel!

17 For if I do this thing willingly, I have a reward: but if against my will, a dispensation ^m of the gospel is committed unto me.

18 What is my reward then? Verily that, when I preach the gospel, I may make the

A. M. 4061.
A. D. 57.

1 Cor. 20.6.
Pr. 27.13.

g 1 Pe. 5.2

h De. 25.4.

i Tu. 5.13.

j 2 Ti. 2.6.

k Ro. 15.27

l 2 Co. 11.7

m 12.14.

n 1 Cor. 9.1.

o Na. 18.3.

p De. 18.1.

q Lu. 10.7.

r Ga. 6.6.

s Ac. 20.34.

t Th. 3.3.

u 2 Co. 11.10.

v Je. 1.17.

w 20.9.

x Col. 1.25.

y Ro. 1.14.

z Ga. 5.13.

aa Ac. 16.3.

ab 21.23.26.

ac c. 7.32.

ad w Ro. 15.1.

ae 2 Co. 11.29.

af x 10.33.

ag y Ro. 11.14.

ah z Ph. 2.16.

ai 1 Ti. 6.12.

aj 2 Ti. 2.5.

ak a 2 Ti. 4.8.

al Ja. 1.12.

am 1 Pe. 5.4.

an Re. 2.10.

ao 3.11.

ap b Ro. 8.13.

aq Ex. 13.21.

ar Nu. 9.18.

as 22.

at b Ex. 14.19.

au 22.29.

av c Ex. 16.15.

aw 35.

ax Ne. 9.15.

ay 20.

az Ps. 78.24.

ba 25.

gospel of Christ without charge, that I abuse not my power in the gospel.

19 For though I be free from all men, yet have I made myself servant ^a unto all, that I might gain the more.

20 And unto the Jews I ^b became as a Jew, that I might gain the Jews; to them that are under the law, as under the law, that I might gain them that are under the law;

21 To them that are without law, as without law, (being not ^c without law to God, but under the law to Christ,) that I might gain them that are without law.

22 To the weak ^d became I as weak, that I might gain the weak: I ^e am made all things to all men, that ^f I might by all means save some.

23 And this I do for the gospel's sake, that I might be partaker thereof with you.

24 Know ye not that they which run in a race run all, but one receiveth the prize? So ^g run, that ye may obtain.

25 And every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things. Now they do ^h it to obtain a corruptible crown; but we an ⁱ incorruptible.

26 I therefore so run, not as uncertainly; so fight I, not as one that beateth the air:

27 But ^j I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection: lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway.

CHAPTER X.

1 The sacraments of the Jews 6 are types of ours, 7 and their punishments, 11 examples for us. 14 We must flee from idolatry. 21 We must not make the Lord's table the table of devils: 24 and in things indifferent we must have regard of our brethren.

MOREOVER, brethren, I would not that ye should be ignorant, how that all our fathers were under ^a the cloud, and ^b all passed through the sea;

2 And were all baptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea;

3 And did all eat the same spiritual ^c meat;

tiously could, in order to gain them to the gospel; as he says in ver. 22, "I am made all things to all men, that, by all means, I might win some."

"He was aware, (says Mr. Robert Hall,) that contentions about practices and opinions, comparatively insignificant, were generally the most vehemently and uncharitably carried on by men who are the most cold and indifferent in the defence of truths of the most awful moment. Inflexible in himself in every thing which was of vital importance, yet accommodating in trivial matters, about which men of narrow views pertinaciously contend, he shaped the course of his usefulness to the winding current of life, and to the flexure of circumstances; and was ever on the watch to see how, by giving way in things indifferent, he might gain men to the great cause which he lived only to promote."

In the latter part of this chapter, St. Paul explains the grounds and motives of his conduct in some beautiful allusions to the gymnastic exercises of the Greeks and the Olympic games. First, in reference to the stadium, or foot-race, in which, though many ran, one only, namely, the foremost of them, was crowned. So he ran—and exhorts the Corinthians also to run, that they might gain the prize. He then observes, that to all who contended in these games, whether in running or combating, it was absolutely necessary that they should practice temperance; and this he recommends as equally necessary in order to run the Christian course, or fight the good fight of faith; in both which we contend, not for a fading and corruptible garland, but for a crown of immortal glory. In this contest the apostle farther remarks, that he ran "not unobserved by the judge" who is to award the prize; and he fought not as one that beats the air, merely vapouring without an antagonist; but he boxed, (alluding to the same games,) "bruised, and mortified his flesh," in order to keep his body in subjection to the interests of his soul—"Lest having, as a herald, (says he,) proclaimed the gospel to others, I should myself be disapproved, and rejected by that Judge who alone distributes the rewards of immortality."

CHAP. X. Ver. 1—33. The Jewish institutions being types of ours, the punishments inflicted on their abuse should operate as warnings to us Christians.—In the first place, their passing through the Red Sea initiated them into the religion of Moses in a manner similar to that in which Christians are of laurel; in the Isthmian or Corinthian, of the pine, &c. Most of these were evergreens, but they would soon grow dry, and break to pieces.

Ver. 26. Not as uncertainly.—"Not as unnoticed," namely, by the judge; or, "not as neglecting the boundary marks of the course." See Doddridge.

—So fight I—Macknight, "So I box." Ver. 27. I keep under my body—Doddridge, "I mortify my body." The original term properly signifies to strike on the face, as boxers did.—Doddridge, "Bring it into subjection."—"I drag off as a slave," as the victors did their conquered antagonists.—Lest when I have preached—Doddridge, "Served as a herald." Macknight, "proclaimed" to others. "I myself should be a cast-away"—Doddridge, "I myself should be disapproved," namely, by the judge. Macknight, "Lest I myself should be not approved." [One disapproved by the judge of the games, as not having fairly deserved the prize.]—Bagster.

CHAP. X. Ver. 1. All our fathers, &c.—Paul speaks of himself and Jewish brethren.—Under the cloud, &c.—If water baptism is here alluded to, as many think, it does not seem to imply immersion, for it was the Egyptian army that was immersed; but it is not unlikely, that in the cloud passing over them to guard their rear, (which it did effectually, by involving their enemies in rain and darkness,) it might distil upon the Israelites a mist, or gentle rain, while at the same time their garments were sprinkled with the ocean's spray.

Ver. 2. Baptized unto Moses, &c.—By means of the cloud and the passage of the Red sea, an obligation similar to that arising from baptism was imposed on them to obey Moses; i. e. all those who passed with Moses through the Red sea, and followed with him the cloud which preceded their march, bound themselves by this act to honour, obey and follow him.—Rob. Wahl

Ver. 9. Doth God take care for oxen?—i. e. for oxen only.

Ver. 10. Or saith he it altogether—Macknight, "chiefly"—for our sakes?

Ver. 12. If others be partakers, &c.—are not we rather?—Macknight, "Ought not we rather?"

Ver. 13. Do ye not know? &c.—This was true, both with respect to the Jews and the heathen.

Ver. 16. Nothing to glory of [in that]—So Doddridge. His glory was in preaching the gospel gratis.

Ver. 20. Become as a Jew—See Acts xvi. 3; xxi. 26.

Ver. 21. To them that are without law—i. e. the Mosaic law; namely, the Gentiles.

Ver. 23. That I might be partaker.—Namely, of the blessings of the gospel; but Peace renders it, "a joint communicator," which is the sense given by Doddridge.

Ver. 24. So run, that ye may obtain—Macknight, "That ye may lay hold on the prize." [The apostle here refers to the Isthmian games, so called from being celebrated on the isthmus of Corinth.]—Bagster.

Ver. 25. Is temperate in all things.—"Would you," says Epictetus, "be a victor in the Olympic games? So in good truth would I, for it is a glorious thing; but you consider what must so before and what may follow, and so proceed to the attempt. You must then live by rule; you must oblige yourself to constant exercise, at the appointed hour, in heat and cold; you must abstain from wine and cold liquors; in a word, you must be as submissive to all the directions of your master as to those of a physician."—Enchir. chap. 35.—A corruptible crown.—It is well known that the crown in the Olympic games, sacred to Jupiter, was of wildolive; in the Pythian, sacred to Apollo,

4 And did all drink the same spiritual ^a drink: for they drank of that spiritual Rock that ^b followed them: and that Rock was Christ.

5 But with many of them God was not well pleased: for they were overthrown ^c in the wilderness.

6 Now these things were ^d our examples, to the intent we should not lust after evil things, as they ^e also lusted.

7 Neither be ye idolaters, as were some of them; as it is ^f written, The people sat down to eat and drink, and rose up to play.

8 Neither let us commit fornication, as some ^g of them committed, and fell in one day three and twenty thousand.

9 Neither let us tempt ^h Christ, as some of them also tempted, and were destroyed of ⁱ serpents.

10 Neither murmur ye, as some of them also ^j murmured, and were destroyed of the ^k destroyer.

11 Now all these things happened unto them for ^l ensamples: and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come.

12 Wherefore ^m let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall.

13 There hath no temptation taken you but ⁿ such as is common to man: but God is faithful, who ^o will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; ^p but will with the

A. M. 4961.
A. D. 57.
d Ex 17. 6.
No 20. 11.
e or, went with.
f Nu 14. 29.
35.
36. 64. 65.
He 3. 17.
Jude 5.
g the figures.
h Nu 11. 4.
33. 34.
i Ex 32. 6.
j Nu 25. 1.
9.
k Ex 17. 2, 7.
l Nu 21. 6.
m Nu 14. 29.
n 1 Sa 24. 16.
o or, types.
p Pr 28. 14.
Ro 11. 29.
q or, mode rate.
r Da 3. 17.
2 Pe 2. 9.
s Ja 5. 11.
t 1 Jo 5. 21.
u Ro 4. 1, 12.
v c 9. 13.
w c 8. 4.
x Le 17. 7.
De 32. 17.
Ps 106. 37.
y De 32. 38.
z De 32. 21.
Job 9. 4.
Eze 22. 14.
a c 6. 12.

temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it.

14 Wherefore, my dearly beloved, ^q flee from idolatry.

15 I speak as to wise men; judge ye what I say.

16 The cup of blessing, which we bless, is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? The bread which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Christ?

17 For we being many are one bread, and one body: for we are all partakers of that one bread.

18 Behold Israel after ^r the flesh: ^s are not they which eat of the sacrifices partakers of the altar?

19 What say I then? that the idol ^t is any thing, or that which is offered in sacrifice to idols is any thing?

20 But I say, that the things which the Gentiles sacrifice, they sacrifice to ^u devils, and not to God: and I would not that ye should have fellowship with devils.

21 Ye cannot drink the cup of the Lord, and the cup ^v of devils: ye cannot be partakers of the Lord's table, and of the table of devils.

22 Do we ^w provoke the Lord to jealousy? are we stronger than he?

23 All ^x things are lawful for me, but all things are not expedient: all things are lawful for me, but all things edify not.

introduced into the church by baptism. Thus the feeding of Israel, by manna from heaven, our Lord himself represents as figurative of his doctrine and precepts, (John vi. 51, &c. ;) while the water from the rock, which followed them to a considerable distance through the wilderness, typified also the grace which flows from Christ, who is the rock of our salvation. (John iv. 10, &c.)

As these merciful supplies of temporal food represented the blessings of the new dispensation, so the impious and ungrateful behaviour of Israel but too justly represented the improper and unbelieving conduct of many nominal Christians and hypocritical professors. The history of Israel is, therefore, but too justly figurative or typical of the New Testament church, which consists not of true Israelites only, but also of many who have nothing but the name, and who, therefore, when tribulation or persecution ariseth, because of the word, are offended and apostatize, even because, as our Lord tells us, they have no root (of piety) in themselves. (Matt. xiii. 20.) "Wherefore, (saith Paul,) let him that thinketh," and is confident "that he standeth" firm, "take heed lest he fall." The Scriptures, while they encourage believers with promises of persevering grace, no less earnestly caution us against presumption and neglect. The whole work of God is carried on by means of his own appointment.

St. Paul now returns to the subject of idolatry, and cautions his beloved Corinthians against being drawn into it, as was Israel in the instances he had recited; and we are much inclined to believe that the great temptation which drew Israel into idolatry was the same with which the people of Corinth were now tempted, viz. luxury and conviviality; they were invited to feast in the idol temples, the natural consequence of which would be uniting in the music and dancing which followed, and these would as naturally lead to that licentiousness, for which these heathen temples were so much frequented.

The apostle now adverts to the solemnities of the Lord's Supper, as a farther guard to them against partaking of the idol-feasts. This was indeed the common temptation of the heathen world; but there was an easy and an obvious way of escape, in keeping aloof from the heathen temples; and here is a strong argument to induce them so to do. In the Christian sacrament they held communion with the Saviour; they spiritually ate his flesh and drank his blood. But "what communion hath Christ with Belial?" or with any of the idols of the heathen world? It is true, indeed, Christians consider their lifeless images as mere masses of wood or stone; but since the heathen themselves supposed them to be inhabited by demons or devils, (as our translators call them,) and therefore worshipped them, to unite with them in any part of their devotions was to hold communion with them and with their gods; but, says he, "I would not that ye should have fellowship with demons." That would be to provoke the Almighty to jealousy, as the idolatrous Jews did; and they might expect the like awful consequences as befell them. To attempt this would be to "provoke the Lord to jealousy," as they did, which would be as imprudent as it was criminal; for who can contend with him?

Dr. Macknight here remarks—"With respect to the questions whether the meats sacrificed to idols, which were offered in the markets, might be eaten by Christians, and whether they might eat of those meats in the houses of the heathens, when set before them as a common, and not as a religious meal, the apostle observed, first, that although, under the gospel, all meats were lawful, all meats were not expedient for every person; and even where they are expedient, the eating of them may not extend to the edification of others, (ver. 23.) Secondly, that in the use of meats, one ought to study not his own advantage only, but the advantage of his neighbour also, (ver. 24.) And having laid down these principles, he desired the Corinthians to eat whatever was sold in the shambles, without inquiring whether it had been sacrificed to idols or not; because they knew that idols have no dominion over the world, but that 'the earth is the Lord's,' and all that it contains, (ver. 25, 26.) And if a heathen invited them to his house, and they inclined to go, they were to eat whatever was set before them, asking no questions for con-

Ver. 4. That followed them.—Dr. Wall calculated that this water, which was a stream, or river, from the rock of Horeb, running in a descent, might attend upon Israel in their peregrinations for 37 years, till they came to Ezion Gaher, a sea-port, where it might run into the ocean. See Num. xxxiii. 36.

Ver. 5. God was not well pleased.—Because they murmured and repined through unbelief. Compare Heb. ix. 16, 17.

Ver. 6. Our examples.—Margin and Doddridge, "figures;" or, more literally, "types."

Ver. 9. Neither let us tempt Christ.—This is said on the conviction that the Lord, who inhabited the Shechinah, or cloud of glory, was none other than the Messiah, John i. 14.—Destroyed of (or by) serpents.

Ver. 10. Destroyed of the destroyer.—i. e. death.

Ver. 11. Ensembles.—Old English for "examples." Margin and Doddridge, "figures;" or more literally, "types."—Ends of the world.—Gr. "of the ages," elsewhere called the last times, the last days, &c. See Heb. i. 2.

Ver. 12. He that thinketh—or is confident—he standeth.—Firmly fixed in the divine favour," says Macknight. See note on chap. vii. 40.

Ver. 13. Such as is common to man.—According to Doddridge, such as is proportionable to human strength.

Ver. 15. What I say.—i. e. What I am about to say, as in next verse.

Ver. 16. The bread.—Macknight, "The loaf"—which we break.—So it (artos) is rendered, Mat. xvi. 9.

Ver. 17. For we, &c.,—10r. "Because there is one bread, (or loaf,) we, who are many, are one body." By this sacrament, and the faith professed in it, and the grace implied, Christians were united as the members in the human body, seeing they were one with Christ, and had fellowship with him, and one another, by partaking of the same bread, as a token of their feeding by faith on the same spiritual nourishment for their souls.]—Baxter.—One body.—i. a. mystically.

Ver. 18. Behold.—Doddridge, "Consider," &c.—Partakers of the altar.—i. e. participators in the atonement, and in the worship. So by eating of these idolatrous sacrifices you participate in the idolatry.

Ver. 20. Sacrifice to devils.—Gr. "to demons." Eisner has "proved at large," says Doddridge, "from incontestable authorities, that the demons were considered as present at these sacrifices, and as taking part with the worshippers in the common feast; by which (as Mammonides expresses it) friendship, brotherhood, and familiarity, were contracted between them, because all ate at one table, and sat at one board."

Ver. 21. The cup—the table of devils.—Gr. "demons," throughout this and the verse preceding. Our opinion of the existence of devils, or evil spirits, and their power over mankind, has been already given in various parts of the Gospels, and their connexion with the interests of idolatry will hardly be disputed.

Ver. 23. All things are lawful.—See chap. vi. 12.

24 Let ^b no man seek his own, but every man another's wealth.

25 Whatsoever ^c is sold in the shambles, that eat, asking no question for conscience' sake:

26 For ^d the earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof.

27 If any of them that believe not bid you to a feast, and ye be disposed to go; whatsoever ^e is set before you, eat, asking no question for conscience' sake.

28 But if any man say unto you, This is offered in sacrifice unto idols, eat ^f not for his sake that showed it, and for conscience' sake: for ^g the earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof:

29 Conscience, I say, not thine own, but of the other: for why is my liberty judged of another man's conscience?

30 For if I by ^h grace be a partaker, why am I evil spoken of for that for which I give thanks?

31 Whether ⁱ therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God.

32 Give ^k none offence, neither to the Jews, nor to the ^l Gentiles, nor to the church of God:

33 Even as I please all men in all things, not seeking mine own profit, but the profit of many, that they may be saved.

CHAPTER XI.

1 He reproveth them, because in holy assemblies 4 their men prayed with their heads covered, and 6 women with their heads uncovered, 17 and because generally their meetings were not for the letter, but for the worship, as, 21 namely, in profaning with their own leas the Lord's supper. 23 Lastly, he calleth them to the first institution thereof.

BE ye followers ^a of me, even as I also am of Christ.

2 Now I praise you, brethren, that ^b ye remember me in all things, and keep ^c the ^d ordinances, as I delivered them to you.

science' sake; because, by no reasonable construction could that action be considered as a worshipping of idols, even though the meat they were going to eat had been sacrificed to an idol, (ver. 27.) But if, on such an occasion, either a Heathen, or a Jew, or a weak Christian, should say to them, this is meat sacrificed to an idol, they were to abstain from it on account of the weak conscience of him who showed it; because, by showing it, he declared that he considered the eating of that meat as a partaking in the worship of the idol to whom it had been offered, (ver. 28.) If thou reply, 'Seeing God has allowed me to eat all kinds of meat, why should I be blamed for eating any particular meat, for which I give God thanks?' (ver. 29, 30,) my answer is, for the very reason that, by the free gift of God, all his good creatures are bestowed on thee, thou art bound in eating and drinking, as in all thy actions, to consult the glory of God, who has commanded thee, even in indifferent actions, to consult what may be good for the edification of others, (ver. 31.)'

Upon these grounds St. Paul exhorts the Corinthians not so to use their Christian liberty as to give occasion of stumbling to either Jews or Greeks. This was the apostle's own method; and, in the first verse of the following chapter, he exhorts them in this instance to follow him, even as he had followed his divine Master.

CHAP. XI. VER. 1—31. St. Paul corrects sundry irregularities.

Ver. 24. Another's wealth.—Dodridge, 'Welfare'; the old English term 'weal' seems more exact and appropriate in this place.

Ver. 25. In the shambles.—Dodridge remarks, that the Grecian priests having often more animal sacrifices than could be eaten, took this method to dispose of the surplus.

Ver. 31. Whether therefore, &c.—The apostle concludes the subject by giving them a general rule, sufficient to regulate every man's conscience and practice,—that whether they eat or drink, or whatsoever they do, to do it all with an habitual aim to the glory of God; by considering his precepts, and the propriety, expediency, appearance, and tendency of their actions.]—Bagster.

Ver. 33. As I please all men.—See chap. ix. 19—22.

CHAP. XI. VER. 1. Be ye followers of me.—[This verse should not have been separated from the preceding chapter, with which it is intimately connected, and to which it forms an appropriate conclusion.]—Bagster. So Dodridge, Macknight, Boothroyd, and Townsend.

Ver. 2. Keep the ordinances.—Dodridge, 'charges'; which word here means the doctrines of Christ and his apostles, whether delivered by preaching, or in writing; but doctrines or precepts delivered from hand to hand, for a succession of ages, before they were committed to writing, as were those of the Pharisees and the Papists, can command neither obedience nor respect.

Ver. 4. Every man. . . having his head covered.—Macknight, 'Having a veil upon his head.' This seems to be the sense of the passage, though not literally so expressed. It is probable that the Pharisees had introduced the custom of men's wearing veils, in imitation of the heathen; it had a tendency, however, to confound the distinct character of the sexes, and is therefore here reproached.

Ver. 5. Woman with head uncovered.—[In the East, if a woman appear in public unveiled, she is immediately supposed to be deficient in modesty; and consequently she would dishonour her head, her husband, not only by appa-

A. M. 4061.

A. D. 57.

b Phi. 2, 4, 21.

c 1 Ti. 4, 4.

d De. 10, 14.

Ps. 24, 1.

50, 12.

e Lu. 10, 7.

f c. 8, 10, 32.

g ver. 26.

h ag. thanks-giving.

i Ro. 14, 6.

j 1 Co. 3, 17.

k 1 Co. 11, 14.

l Ro. 14, 13.

2 Co. 6, 3.

1 Greeks.

a Ep. 5, 1.

1 Th. 1, 6.

b c. 4, 17.

c Lu. 1, 6.

d tradi-tion.

e Ep. 5, 23.

f Ge. 3, 16.

g Ge. 3, 1.

5, 6.

h Jo. 14, 23.

c. 15, 27, 28.

i Ac. 21, 9.

j Nu. 5, 18.

De. 21, 12.

k Ge. 2, 18.

22, 23.

l i. e. a covering, in sign that she is under the power of her husband.

Ge. 24, 65.

m Ro. 11, 36.

n or, veil.

o 1 Ti. 4, 4.

3 But I would have you know, that the head ^e of every man is Christ; ^f and the head of the woman is the man; ^g and the head of Christ is God.

4 Every man praying or prophesying, having his head covered, dishonoureth his head.

5 But every woman ^h that prayeth or prophesieth with her head uncovered dishonoureth her head: for that is even all one as if she were shaven.

6 For if the woman be not covered, let her also be ⁱ shorn: but if it be a shame for a woman to be shorn or shaven, let her be covered.

7 For a man indeed ought not to cover his head, forasmuch as he is the ^j image and glory of God: but the woman is the glory of the man.

8 For ^k the man is not of the woman: but the woman of the man.

9 Neither was the man created for the woman; but the woman for the man.

10 For this cause ought the woman to have ^l power on her head because of the angels.

11 Nevertheless neither is the man without the woman, neither the woman without the man, in the Lord.

12 For as the woman is of the man, even so is the man also by the woman; but all ^m things of God.

13 Judge in yourselves: is it comely that a woman pray unto God uncovered?

14 Doth not even nature itself teach you, that, if a man have long hair, it is a shame unto him?

15 But if a woman have long hair, it is a glory to her: for her hair is given her for a ⁿ covering.

16 But ^o if any man seem to be contentious, ties and indecencies, into which he hears that the Corinthians had fallen.—The first relates to the manner in which the different sexes had exercised their prophetic gifts, for it is most certain that the extraordinary gifts bestowed on the day of Pentecost were not confined to the male sex, for we read of prophetesses as well as prophets, (Acts ii. 17, 18; xxi. 9, &c.) and the apostle does not censure the exercise of these gifts, but only some indecorous circumstances in the dress and manner of the prophetesses. To understand St. Paul's reproofs, it is necessary to recur to the use of veils both among the Jews and Greeks. These were evidently worn by the women as a token of modesty and subjection, and to show that they were under the power of their husbands. On the other hand, men, for the contrary reason, prayed, preached, or prophesied, with their heads uncovered, to show that they were under no such subjection; and the ground of this distinction is founded in nature and in general custom: for a woman veiled was under coverture, that is, under the protection of her husband, or (if single) of her father. But this practice in men was effeminate, and at the same time dishonoured God, whom they represented; while the women, by an opposite conduct, dishonoured the men. These improper customs, it should seem, had been introduced by some of the false teachers who had opposed Paul, and had endeavoured probably to bring into contempt the regulations he had established. The first of these was, that they were throwing off the sign of her subjection, but by appearing like those women who had their hair shorn off, or shaven, as the punishment of adultery; a custom which Tacitus informs us prevailed among the Germans.]—Bagster.

Ver. 6. Shorn or shaven.—The first word, as distinguished from the second, means to have the hair cut close, or cropped. Macknight says, the Jews and ancient Germans used to punish adulteresses by shaving their heads.

Ver. 10. Power on her head.—Meaning a veil, as intimating her being under coverture, or subject to the power of her husband.—Because of the angels.—This is very perplexing. 1. Some say, human angels; i. e. the angels of the churches, (Rev. i. 20.) But if the thing were itself indecent, it must surely be as indecorous before laymen as before the clergy. 2. Others say, evil angels, demons, who are no doubt often present in our churches; but there seems no reverence due to them, nor reason in the precept so understood. 3. Hammond, Dodridge, &c. interpret it of holy angels, who certainly attend our assemblies, and demand respect. See Heb. i. 14; 1 Peter i. 12.

Ver. 14. If a man have long hair.—In the East, the men wear their hair very short, and the women very long. Long hair in the men is a mark of effeminacy.—It is a shame.—[Because a proof of effeminacy and folly; and because it was considered as a mark of minority. It may also be remarked, that there were a set of wretched despicable beings, both at Rome and Corinth, called Patrics, who are said to have imitated the dress and manners of women.]—Bagster.

Ver. 15. A glory.—[Or, an honour or credit to her; as indicating that she had done nothing to deprive her of it; and also showing that she did not object to wear it as a natural veil, and as an emblem of subjection.]—Bagster.

Ver. 16. But if &c..—[But if any person puts himself forward as a defender of these points, let him know that we have no such custom either among the Jews or the churches of Christ.]—Bagster.

we have no such custom, neither the churches of God.

17 Now in this that I declare unto you I praise you not, that ye come together not for the better, but for the worse.

18 For first of all, when ye come together in the church, I hear ^p that there be ^a divisions among you; and I partly believe it.

19 For there must ^b be also ^a heresies among you, that ^c they which are approved may be made manifest among you.

20 When ye come together therefore into one place, ^a this is not to eat the Lord's supper.

21 For in eating every one taketh before other his own supper: and one is hungry, and ^a another is drunken.

22 What? have ye not houses to eat and to drink in? or despise ye the church of God, and shame them that ^a have not? What shall I say to you? shall I praise you in this? I praise you not.

23 For ^a I have received of the Lord that which also I delivered unto you, That the Lord Jesus ^a the same night in which he was betrayed took bread:

24 And when he had given thanks, he brake it, and said, Take, eat: this is my body, which is broken for you: this do ^a in remembrance of me.

25 After the same manner also he took the cup, when he had supped, saying, This cup is the new testament in my blood: this do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me.

26 For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ^a ye do show the Lord's death till he ^b come.

27 Wherefore whosoever shall eat this bread, and drink this cup of the Lord, ^a unworthily, lished when present with them; but he appeals to their reason against the indecorous character of their innovations, and their inconsistency with the practice of all the Christian churches.

What the apostle says of divisions (or schisms) among them is repetition, (see chap. i. 10, &c.) and into the nature of heresies we shall have a farther occasion to inquire. See Gal. v. 20.

A more serious abuse than any of the preceding, appears to have taken place relative to the Lord's Supper, which they seem, in some degree, to have assimilated to the feasts in the idol-temples, mingling with the sacred elements the provisions for their own suppers, forming convivial parties in the church; and while the poor were unprovided for, the rich indulged themselves to great excess.

Shocked at the idea, the apostle expresses himself with more than his usual severity. "What! (says he) have ye not houses to eat and drink in, that ye come to the Lord's table to take your meals; and instead of being united as the disciples of Christ should be, ye fall into little parties with your favourite leaders, and such of you as have provisions eat and drink even to excess; while the poor, who are guests equally welcome at the Lord's table with the rich, are neglected and despised. "This is not [the way] to eat the Lord's Supper;" and then he proceeds to repeat what he had before delivered to them; namely, "That the Lord Jesus, the same night in which he was betrayed, took bread"—that is, took one of the unleavened cakes that had been provided for the Passover, and brake and distributed it to his disciples, as we find related by the Evangelists. (Matt. xxvi. 26—28. Luke xxii. 19, 20.) Now in this way of celebrating the Lord's Supper, believers show (or exhibit) the emblems of his sufferings and death in a most striking manner, as thus represented by an eminent divine of the present day:—

Ver. 20. This is not to eat, &c.—Margm. "Ye cannot eat" the Lord's Supper—i. e. not in this way. Macknight, "Your coming together into one place is not," &c.; i. e. it is not merely meeting at the same place, unless you are united in the same devotional views.

Ver. 21. Is drunken—Doddridge, "Drinks to excess."

Ver. 22. And shame them that have not—That is, says Doddridge, "that have not provisions and accommodations of their own;"—i. e. the poor.

Ver. 26. Eat this bread—Anti-papistical writers here observe, that this element bears the name of bread after consecration; consequently was not transubstantiated.

Ver. 27. Shall be guilty.—That is, "Shall be guilty with respect to the body and blood of Christ."—(In making any distinction between the bread and wine which represent them, and that used on ordinary occasions.)—Bæster.

Ver. 29. Denunciation—Macknight, "punishment;" but all commentators agree in reproaching what the former calls "an unhappy mistake" in our version. See our note on Rom. xiv. 23.

Ver. 30. Many sleep.—Commentators generally apply this to the sleep of

A. M. 4061
A. D. 57

p. c. 1. 11, 12

q. or, schisma

r. Mat. 18. 7.

2 Pe. 2. 1, 2

s. or, sects

t. Lu. 2. 35

u. or, ye are not out

v. 2 Pe. 2. 13

Jude. 12

w. are not

x. c. 15. 3

y. Mat. 26. 26

z. or, for a

aa. or, show

bb. Re. 22. 36

cc. Ju. 6. 63, 64

dd. 1 Th. 2. 1

ee. 2 Co. 13. 5

ff. 1 Th. 3. 10

gg. Judgement

Re. 13. 2

hh. Ps. 32. 5

ii. 1 Ju. 1. 9

jj. Ps. 94. 12

kk. He. 12. 5

ll. Judgment

a. 1 Th. 1. 9

b. Ma. 9. 39

c. Lu. 14. 1, 2

d. or, ana-

tema

e. Mat. 16. 17

f. He. 4. 10

g. or, ministra-

trics

h. Ro. 12. 6

i. &c.

shall be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord.

28 But let a man examine ^a himself, and so let him eat of that bread, and drink of that cup.

29 For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh ^a damnation to himself, not discerning the Lord's body.

30 For this cause many are weak and sickly among you, and many sleep.

31 For if ^a we would judge ourselves, we should not be judged.

32 But when we are judged, we ^a are chastened of the Lord, that we should not be condemned with the world.

33 Wherefore, my brethren, when ye come together to eat, tarry one for another.

34 And if any man hunger, let him eat at home; that ye come not together unto ^a condemnation. And the rest will I set in order when I come.

CHAPTER XII.

1 Spiritual gifts 4 are divers, 7 yet all profit without 8 And to that end are diversely bestowed 12 that by the like proportion, as the members of a natural body tend all to the 16 mutual decency, 21 service, and 25 succour of the same body; 27 so we should do one for another, to make up the mystical body of Christ.

NOW concerning spiritual gifts, brethren, I would not have you ignorant.

2 Ye know that ye were Gentiles, carried away unto these dumb ^a idols, even as ye were led.

3 Wherefore I give you to understand, that no man ^a speaking by the Spirit of God calleth Jesus ^a accursed: and ^a that no man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost.

4 Now there are diversities ^a of gifts, but the same Spirit.

5 And there are differences of ^a administrations, but the same Lord.

6 And there are diversities ^a of operations, but it is the same God which worketh all in all.

"In eating of this bread, and drinking of this cup, (says Dr. Belfrage,) we show the manner of our Lord's death. The breaking of the bread represents the sufferings of his body; the pouring out of the wine, the shedding of his blood. And while we contemplate these, shall not penitential sorrow rend our hearts? Shall not we pour out our hearts before him, in the language of devotional feeling? . . . In eating of this bread, and drinking of this cup, we profess our interest in the blessings of Christ's death,"—show our affectionate remembrance of his love and kindness, and our inviolable attachment to the doctrine of the cross.

But this is not a feast to be partaken of with levity or indifference: "Let a man examine himself" with what temper and disposition he is prepared to receive it, and if he discern therein the emblems of our Lord's death, and feels a proper sense of his obligations to his love—"So let him eat." But "he that eateth and drinketh unworthily," that is, as Dr. Doddridge explains it, "in an irreverent, profane, and unworthy manner," is guilty of [profaning] the body and blood of Christ, and thereby eateth and drinketh judgment unto himself. For this cause many are weak and sickly, and many sleep in religious indifference, if not in death.

CHAP. XII. Ver. 1—31. The variety of spiritual gifts, and their design.—One great cause of the dissensions and divisions in the church of Corinth, certainly was the improper display of spiritual gifts among its members, and their undue attachment to the most showy and popular talents, instead of those which were the most useful to the church. It appears, also, that there were false pretensions to these gifts in some instances, which fact induces the apostle to insert a caveat against their being mislead by ambitious and vain-glorious men. 1. They might be certain that no man, though he were a Hebrew of the Hebrews, or even the high priest himself, death; and it is true, that the death of believers is called a sleep, (ch. xv. 21.) but this is called a chastening of the Lord, that sleep might not be condemned, (verse 32.) which implies a recovery from that sleep. We therefore incline to understand the phrase as implying a religious torpor. See Mat. xxv. 5. Ephes. v. 14.

CHAP. XII. Ver. 2. These dumb idols—The images with which, in that idolatrous city, they were every where surrounded.—Even as ye were led—By the popular superstition, and by the artifices of their priests.

Ver. 3. Accursed—Gr. Anathema.—Moses says, "He that is hanged, is accursed of God." (Deut. xxi. 23.) which applies equally to those that were crucified, so that "The hanged Christ" is applied to our Lord Jesus Christ by the infidel Jews, as a title of reproach, to the present day.

Ver. 4. Gifts—[Gracious endowments by the extraordinary influence of the Holy Spirit.]—Bæster.

Ver. 6. The same God—Comparing this verse with the two preceding, we have an argument for the proper divinity of the Holy Spirit, here called both God and Lord.

7 But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit ^h withal.

8 For to one is given by the ⁱ Spirit the word of ^j wisdom; to another the word of ^k knowledge by the same Spirit;

9 To another faith ^l by the same Spirit; to another the gifts of ^m healing by the same Spirit;

10 To another the working of miracles; to another prophecy; to another discerning of ⁿ spirits; to another divers kinds of ^o tongues; to another the interpretation of tongues:

11 But all these worketh that one and the self-same Spirit, dividing ^p to every man severally as he will.

12 For as the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body: so ^q also is Christ.

13 For by one Spirit are we all ^r baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or ^s Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to ^t drink into one Spirit.

14 For the body is not one member, but many.

15 If the foot shall say, Because I am not the hand, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body?

16 And if the ear shall say, Because I am not the eye, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body?

17 If the whole body were an eye, where were the hearing? If the whole were hearing, where were the smelling?

18 But now hath God set ^u the members every one of them in the body, as ^v it hath pleased him.

19 And if they were all one member, where were the body?

could speak by the Spirit of God, who reviled our Saviour for his crucifixion, as it is well known the unbelieving Jews did. If even they should work miracles and cast out devils, they could no more act under the influence of God's Spirit, than could the prophets of idolatry spoken of by Moses. (Deut. xiii. 1-5.) On the other hand, he that should call Jesus Lord, and should seek to promote his honour and service, might fairly be considered as speaking under the influences of the Holy Spirit.

We are aware that learned and good men have attempted to distinguish and explain the various operations of the Divine Spirit, and to appropriate them to the different classes of Christian ministers; but however ingenious may be the conjecture, (see note on ver. 28.) we doubt if it can be depended on: for various gifts, we apprehend, were conferred on the same persons, and perhaps all of them on the apostles.

Ver. 8. To one is given . . . the word of wisdom . . . the word of knowledge—Ver. 9. To another is given in his Arranged New Testament a copious abstract of the very learned discussions of the first Lord Barrington, (the friend of Watts and Doddridge), to which we shall make some references, without pledging ourselves to adopt his explanations, though nearly followed, not only by Mr. T., but also by Bishop Horsley and Dr. Hales. By "the word of wisdom," he understands that knowledge peculiar to an apostle; and by "the word of knowledge," the like attainment of the prophets. But with all due submission to these great names, we consider wisdom as an immediate endowment from heaven; knowledge, as an acquired talent, no less the gift of God, though the result of experience and of study. Paul eminently possessed both.

Ver. 9. To another faith—According to Locke, a full persuasion of the truth of the gospel.

Ver. 10. The working of miracles—This, as distinguished from the gift of healing, may intend the power of inflicting disease and death, as in the case of Ananias and Sapphira, &c.—Discerning of spirits—i. e. of detecting hypocrisy, or imposition, as in the case just referred to.—Divers kinds of tongues . . . the interpretation of tongues—From this distinction of talent, it is evident that some possessed the talent of interpreting tongues who had not the power of speaking them.

Ver. 11. Severally as he will—Doddridge, "As he thinketh fit." Macknight, "As he pleaseth." From this expression has been forcibly argued the distinct personality of the Holy Spirit.

Ver. 12. For as the body is one—(The apostle here illustrates the wisdom and goodness of the Holy Spirit, in his distribution of spiritual gifts, by the similitude of the human body; which, though formed of many members, constitutes one harmonious system, every member having its proper use and capacity for the common benefit.)—Bagster.—So also is Christ—i. e. Christ mystical, or his true church.

Ver. 13. Drink into one Spirit.—Namely, the Spirit of Christ, which also animates his church.

Ver. 15. If the foot shall say.—This beautiful apologue reminds us of the political apologue of Menenius Agrippa. At a time when the lower orders of the Roman people were rising in insurrection against the nobles, this celebrated orator and general addressed to them this fable:—That once upon a time, when the different members of the human body were not in that state of unity in which they now are, they became discontented, because all the fruits of their labour were bestowed upon the belly, which did nothing but lie

A. M. 4061.
A. D. 57.

h Ep. 4.7.

i 1a. 11. 2, 3.

j c. 2, 6, 7.

k c. 13. 2.

l Ep. 2. 8.

m Ma. 16. 13
Ja. 5. 14.

n 1 Jn. 4. 1.

o Ac. 2. 4, 7.

II.

p ver. 6.

q ver. 7.

r 1 Jn. 1. 16.

Ep. 4. 8.

s Greeks.

t Jn. 7. 37.

39.

u ver. 28.

v Ro. 12. 3.

ver. 11.

w Ec. 4. 9. 12

9, 14, 15.

x or, put on

y or, division.

z Ep. 5. 30.

a Lu. 6. 13.

b Ac. 13. 1.

c ver. 10.

d ver. 9.

e Nu. 11. 17.

f He. 13. 17.

34.

g or, kinds.

h Ac. 2. 8. 11.

i or, potency.

j c. 14. 39.

k Ma. 5. 6.

Lu. 10. 42.

a 2 Co. 12. 4.

b 1 Pe. 4. 8.

20 But now are they many members, yet out one body.

21 And the eye cannot say unto the hand, I have no need of thee: nor again the head to the feet, I have no need of you.

22 Nay, much more those ^w members of the body, which seem to be more feeble, are necessary:

23 And those members of the body, which we think to be less honourable, upon these we ^x bestow more abundant honour; and our uncomely parts have more abundant comeliness.

24 For our comely parts have no need: but God hath tempered the body together, having given more abundant honour to that part which lacked:

25 That there should be no ^y schism in the body; but that the members should have the same care one for another.

26 And whether one member suffer, all the members suffer with it; or one member be honoured, all the members rejoice with it.

27 Now ye are the body of Christ, and members ^z in particular.

28 And God hath set some in the church, first ^a apostles, secondarily ^b prophets, thirdly teachers, after that ^c miracles, then gifts of ^d healings, ^e helps, ^f governments, ^g diversities of ^h tongues.

29 Are all apostles? are all prophets? are all teachers? are all ⁱ workers of miracles?

30 Have all the gifts of healing? do all speak with tongues? do all interpret?

31 But covet ^j earnestly the best ^k gifts; and yet show ^l unto you a more excellent way.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 All gifts, 2, 3 how excellent & ever, are nothing worth without charity. 4 The praises thereof, and 13 prelation before hope and faith.

THOUGH I speak with the tongues of men and of ^a angels, and have not ^b charity, I

The apostle Paul then illustrates the use of these various gifts to the body of Christ mystical, or the Christian church, the members of which he compares to the different members of the human body, all of which contribute, by their different functions, to the service and perfection of the whole; so that no Christian ought to be despised for the meanness, nor idolized for the splendour, of his gifts. All the officers of the church, and all its members, are useful and honourable in their respective places. The Corinthians, however, encouraged an ambition for the best or most splendid gifts; but the apostle holds out to them a far better way in true Christian charity, or in love to God and man.

CHAP. XIII. Ver. 1-13. The pre-eminence of Christian love to all other gifts.—Dr. Doddridge, Macknight, and other eminent commentators, begin this chapter with the last verse of the preceding; and if, with our translators, we understand at ease and enjoy them. The hands therefore refused to convey food to the mouth, the mouth to receive it, and the teeth to chew it. Acting on this principle, they reduced the copulency of the belly. But, at the same time, the whole body, with all its members, became enfeebled, and were reduced to the last stage of a decline. It was then found that the idle belly (as they called it) contributed no less to the nourishment of the whole body than the other members did to the support of the belly.—This ingenious fable convinced the people that the senators were as necessary to the body politic as were themselves.—Livy, bk. ii. chap. 32.

Ver. 23. Our uncomely parts have more abundant comeliness—i. e. by means of ornamental dress. So in the mystical body of Christ, those members of least apparent consequence, and personal comeliness, are often endowed with talents of the first order—they "have more abundant comeliness."

Ver. 25. That there should be no schism.—The same word is used chap. i. 10; xi. 18; and it appears from the context in the former place, that the Corinthians split themselves into little parties under the name, though without the sanction of their favourite preachers; so far, at least, as respects Paul, Apollos, and Cephas. These parties, though they met in one house, probably met in separate rooms, and held little or no communion with each other. See chap. xi. 20-22.

Ver. 26. Whether one member suffer, &c.—This is the doctrine of sympathy, arising literally from the nervous system, by which the head and the heart participate in the sufferings of the hand or foot, &c. So in a Christian church, the heads of it should sympathize in the sufferings of the humblest members.

Ver. 28. First apostles, &c.—Mr. Townsend has given a table, comparing this and the two following verses with verses 8 to 10, and assigning to each order of ministers his peculiar talent, as to apostles wisdom, to prophets knowledge, &c. according to the system of Lord Barrington, Ep. Horsley, &c.; but we confess that this system appears to us more ingenious than satisfactory. After that miracles, then gifts, &c.—i. e. those who had the power of working miracles, and healing diseases.—Helps, governments—May refer, as we conceive, to those who assisted or superintended schools, or other charities for the poor.

Ver. 31. But covet earnestly—Macknight, "Ye earnestly desire the best gifts; but I show you," &c. So Doddridge in effect.

CHAP. XIII. Ver. 1. And have not charity.—The original word, (agape.) though sometimes rendered charity, is more frequently and accurately reoam become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal.

2 And though I have the gift of ^e prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove ^d mountains, and have not charity, I am ^e nothing.

3 And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing.

4 Charity suffereth ^b long, and is kind; charity ⁱ envieth not; charity ^j vaunteth not itself, is not puffed ^k up,

5 Doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not ⁱ her own, is not ^m easily provoked, thinketh no evil;

6 Rejoiceth ^o not in iniquity, but rejoiceth ^o in the truth;

7 Beareth ^p all things, believeth ^q all things, hopeth ^r all things, endureth ^s all things.

8 Charity never faileth: but whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge, it shall vanish away.

9 For we know in ^t part, and we prophesy in part.

that as an exhortation to seek, by prayer to God, the best miraculous gifts, we may fairly infer that St. Paul intended, by that term, those gifts which were best adapted for the edification of the church, (see chap. xiv. 1.) "Yet (says he) I show you a more excellent way," and then proceeds, in the chapter before us, to show them that way as consisting in love to God, and to each other. So Doddridge remarks, the word "must be here taken in the noblest sense, for such a love to the whole church, and the whole world, as arises from principles of true piety, and ultimately centres in God."

This love is commended, 1. For its indispensable necessity; without it all other things are nothing. The eloquence of an angel would be as unmeaning as the clanging cymbal. The highest miraculous gifts are of no avail; and even the most liberal charities, or the most ardent zeal of martyrdom, are alike unacceptable to God, unless they spring from love to him. 2. Love is commended for its many amiable qualities. It is intimately connected with all the Christian graces: patience, kindness, meekness; whatever is virtuous, and whatever is of good report. Lastly, Love is praised for its durability—when all other gifts, and even graces, fail, this shall be eternal.

What is said of the failure of the extraordinary gifts here mentioned, is, by Bp. Warburton, applied to their withdrawal from the Christian church, when it became established in the world; and thus, indeed, the fact was: but the whole tide of commentators is against him; and the latter verses seem to have an evident reference to a future state. The passage is, therefore, generally understood to refer to the cessation, not only of the extraordinary powers given for the first propagation of the gospel; but also of all the knowledge and wisdom in the world, which we have reason to believe will be but as nothing compared with that of heaven.

This the apostle illustrates by two comparisons. All the knowledge and wisdom attainable in this world is but like the education of a child at school, previous to his application to the higher pursuits of science, literature, or public life; nor does the accomplished scholar look back with greater contempt on his first juvenile studies, than we, in a future state, shall look back on all our present attainments. Nor is this at all incredible: all Europe was struck with admiration at the scientific discoveries of Sir Isaac Newton; yet in what light did he consider them in the decline of life? "I seem (said he) like a boy who has been playing on the seashore, and amusing himself with picking up curious shells and pebbles." But with how much more contempt must such a man look down on these things, when he had launched into the ocean of eternity.

Secondly, St. Paul compares all the discoveries of the present state to looking through a medium imperfectly transparent, which gives but a very obscure view of the objects; or, rather, to viewing them in a brazen mirror, (for such were the dered love, and no doubt our translators here so meant it; and so it is used in the writings of Milton, Dryden, Hooker, and Atterbury, as may be seen in Dr. Johnson. There is no doubt, however, but that our translators derived the word immediately from the Vulgate, carnitas; but its insertion here has unhappily led many persons to conclude that amalgam, or practical benevolence, is the only thing intended; though that is exactly contrary to verse 3—as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal—This probably refers to the different kinds of cymbal used by the ancients, the large and small; the former very sonorous, the latter more like bells. See Ps. cl. 5.

Ver. 2. And have not charity—This word should have been rendered love, throughout the chapter.

Ver. 7. Beareth—Doddridge, "covereth"—all things.—More ready to conceal a fault than to expose it.

A M 4061
A D 57.
c c 14 1
d Mat 17 29
e Mat 21 19
f Mat 6 1 2
g Mat 7 22
h Ja 2 14
i Pr 10 12
j Ja 3 16
k Col 2 13
l 1 Co 12
m Pr 14 17
n Ro 1 22
o or, with
p Ro 15 1
q 1 s 19 96
r Ro 9 4
s Job 13 15
t c s 2
u 1 Jo 3 2
v or, rejoicing
w 2 Co 3 15
x or, in a riddle
y He 10 35
z 1 Pe 1 21
a Ep 1 3
b Ac 10 45
c Ac 22 9
d hearth.

10 But ^a when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away.

11 When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I ^a thought as a child: but when I became a man, I put away childish things.

12 For now we see through a ^w glass, ^x darkly; but then face to face: now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known.

13 And now abideth ^y faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity.

CHAPTER XIV.

1 Prophecy is commended, 2, 3, 4 and preferred before speaking with tongues, 6 by a comparison drawn from musical instruments. 12 B. th must be referred to edification, 22 as to their true and proper end. 26 The true use of such is taught, 29 and the abuse taxed. 34 Women are forbidden to speak in the church.

FOLLOW after charity, and desire spiritual ^a gifts, but rather that ye may prophesy.

2 For he that speaketh in an unknown tongue ^b speaketh not unto men, but unto God: for ^c no man ^d understandeth him; howbeit in the spirit he speaketh mysteries.

3 But he that prophesieth speaketh unto men to edification, and exhortation, and comfort.

4 He that speaketh in an unknown tongue edifieth himself; but he that prophesieth edifieth the church.

5 I would that ye all spake with tongues, but mirrors of the ancients, Exod. xxxviii. 8.) by which they were imperfectly reflected. These are, indeed, the only ways in which we can now view divine truths: we see them either directly, and then obscurely, through a dense medium, as viewing the orb of day through a fog; or we see them, as it were, by reflection, in enigmas. This may be somewhat elucidated by a reference to Num. xii. 8, in which the God of Israel challenges Aaron and Miriam, "If there be a prophet among you, (that is, if either of you be endowed with prophetic powers,) I, the Lord, will make myself known to him in a vision, and will speak unto him in a dream." But, as to Moses, it is added, "With him I will speak mouth to mouth, even apparently, (or by open vision,) and not in dark speeches," or enigmas, which is the word here used.

The knowledge of a future state will differ from our present knowledge in two respects:—1. It will be clear, and not obscured by the medium through which it is conveyed; it will not be enigmatical. 2. It will be complete, full, and not partial: "Then (says Paul) I shall know even as I am known," i. e. by the higher orders of being with which I shall be associated.

It is added—"Now abideth faith, hope, charity, (or rather love,) the three chief graces of Christianity, but the greatest of these is love"—and that in the various respects above mentioned—its necessity, its excellency, and its perpetuity. The clause "now abideth faith," &c., (says Dr. Macknight,) implies that the graces spoken of are not always to abide; for, seeing "faith is the persuasion of things hoped for" (Heb. xi. 1.) and "hope that is seen is not hope" (Rom. viii. 24.) in heaven, where all the objects of faith and hope are put in our possession, there can be no place for either. It is quite otherwise with love—love will burn with a delightful warmth and brightness to all eternity.

"This is the grace that reigns on high.

And brightly shall for ever burn.

When Hope shall in enjoyment die,

And Faith to intuition turn."—Simon Browne.

CHAP. XIV. Ver. 1—20. St. Paul farther cautions the Corinthians against a vain display of their extraordinary gifts.

—From the things written in this chapter, (says Dr. Macknight,) it appears that the brethren at Corinth had erred in their opinion of the comparative excellence of spiritual gifts, and had been guilty of great irregularities in the exercise of these gifts. In particular, they preferred the gift of speaking foreign languages to all the rest, because [probably] it made them appear respectable in the eyes of the unbelieving Greeks. But by their speaking long and often, to display a talent of which they were evidently vain, they excluded other brethren from speaking, whose exercises were far better adapted to instruct the church, as they were devoted chiefly to the exposition of the Old Testament Scriptures, on which their faith was primarily founded. This exposition of the prophets, and of the

Ver. 10. When that which is perfect is come—i. e. when perfection shall succeed to imperfection, namely in a future world.

Ver. 12. We see through a glass—Or, through a heaven mirror.—Though glass was probably made before this time, we have no proof of its being used for windows before the third century, thin plates of horn, &c. being used instead; and perhaps it was long before it was manufactured to be so transparent as at present, and telescopes are allowed to be a much more modern invention. (See Ency. Brit.)—Darkly.—See Ps. xlix. 4.

CHAP. XIV. Ver. 1. Follow after—Doddridge, "murmure." The original word alludes to the action of hunters in the chase. Seek to promote love (which is the true charity) eagerly, earnestly, perpetually.

Ver. 4. Edifieth himself—i. e. himself only. So Macknight.—Compare 1 Peter i. 10—12.

rather that ye prophesied: for greater is he that prophesieth than he that speaketh with tongues, except he interpret, that the church may receive edifying.

6 Now, brethren, if I come unto you speaking with tongues, what shall I profit you, except I shall speak to you either by revelation, or by knowledge, or by prophesying, or by doctrine?

7 And even things without life giving sound, whether pipe or harp, except they give a distinction in the sounds, how shall it be known what is piped or harped?

8 For if the trumpet give an uncertain sound, who shall prepare himself to the battle?

9 So likewise ye, except ye utter by the tongue words easy to be understood, how shall it be known what is spoken? for ye shall speak into the air.

10 There are, it may be, so many kinds of voices in the world, and none of them is without signification.

11 Therefore if I know not the meaning of the voice, I shall be unto him that speaketh a barbarian, and he that speaketh shall be a barbarian unto me.

12 Even so ye, forasmuch as ye are zealous of spiritual gifts, seek that ye may excel to the edifying of the church.

13 Wherefore let him that speaketh in an unknown tongue pray that he may interpret.

14 For if I pray in an unknown tongue, my spirit prayeth, but my understanding is unfruitful.

15 What is it then? I will pray with the spirit, and I will pray with the understanding also: I will sing with the spirit, and I will sing with the understanding also.

16 Else when thou shalt bless with the spirit, how shall he that occupieth the room of the unlearned say Amen at thy giving of thanks, seeing he understandeth not what thou sayest?

prophecies concerning Christ, was called prophesying, and is held in the highest honour by our apostle, and pronounced superior to the other; from which we may learn to value spiritual gifts, not according to their splendour, but their utility. The gift of tongues was evidently designed for the conversion of the heathen, and was therefore abused when addressed to persons who could not understand them; and the reproof given to the Corinthians on this point may be well applied to preachers, who, by their learned and eloquent discourses, shoot over the heads of their hearers—as it has sometimes been expressed.

We have seen how earnestly St. Paul renounced the words of human wisdom in the second chapter of this Epistle; and here, so far from glorying in the display of the extraordinary endowments, as to the knowledge of foreign languages, he solemnly declares that he had rather speak "five words" or sentences, so as to be generally understood, than "ten thousand" to excite wonder and admiration.

Against this abuse the apostle urges several considerations, as, first, he that spoke in an unknown language spake to God only, and conveyed no instruction to his brethren; nor could

Ver. 5. Greater is he.—Every man ranks in the church according to his usefulness.

Ver. 6. By revelation, &c.—This seems to refer to the different ways in which the church was edified by apostolic gifts.

Ver. 7. And even things, &c.—I may, as if he had said, illustrate this further from even lifeless things, which are made use of to give sound, as for instance, a pipe or harp; if these were to utter mere sounds without order, harmony, or melody, though every tone of music might be in the sounds, no person could discern a tune, or receive pleasure from such sounds; and they could give no direction to those who were to sing or dance to them, unless a proper distinction was observed. So also, if the trumpet should be blown at random, without any distinction between that sound which calls the combatants to the field, and that which sounds a retreat, and other sounds of different meanings, what soldier could understand when to "prepare himself to battle"? If, then, an intelligible distinction of sounds be necessary in the concerns of life, how much more must they be so in those of religion?—Bagster.—A distinction in the sounds—MacKnight, "notes." This verse seems to refer to dancing, as the next does to military music.

Ver. 10. So many kinds of voices.—Doddridge and MacKnight, "of languages (as ye speak)."

Ver. 11. A barbarian.—So the Greeks and Romans esteemed all other nations.

Ver. 14. My understanding is unfruitful.—i. e. affords no instruction to others.

Ver. 16. He that occupieth the room of the unlearned.—i. e. private individuals not endowed with miraculous gifts. So Doddridge, MacKnight, &c.

17 For thou verily givest thanks well, but the other is not edified.

18 I thank my God, I speak with tongues more than ye all:

19 Yet in the church I had rather speak five words with my understanding, than by my voice I might teach others also, than ten thousand words in an unknown tongue.

20 Brethren, be not children in understanding: howbeit in malice be ye children, but in understanding be men.

21 In the law it is written, "With men of other tongues and other lips will I speak unto this people; and yet for all that will they not hear me, saith the Lord.

22 Wherefore tongues are for a sign, not to them that believe, but to them that believe not: but prophesying serveth not for them that believe not, but for them which believe.

23 If therefore the whole church be come together into one place, and all speak with tongues, and there come in those that are unlearned, or unbelievers, will they not say that ye are mad?

24 But if all prophesy, and there come in one that believeth not, or one unlearned, he is convinced of all, he is judged of all:

25 And thus are the secrets of his heart made manifest; and so falling down on his face he will worship God, and report that God is in you of a truth.

26 How is it then, brethren? when ye come together, every one of you hath a psalm, hath a doctrine, hath a tongue, hath a revelation, hath an interpretation. Let all things be done unto edifying.

27 If any man speak in an unknown tongue, let it be by two, or at the most by three, and that by course; and let one interpret.

28 But if there be no interpreter, let him keep silence in the church; and let him speak to himself, and to God.

they, when he engaged in public prayer, know when to introduce an audible Amen, as (says Mocknight) was the custom from the beginning in the Christian church, in imitation of the ancient Jewish worship. (See Dent. xxvii. 15. Neh. viii. 6.) This affords so powerful an argument against the use of prayers in an unknown tongue, as practised in the church of Rome, that it seems wonderful such a custom should ever have been adopted by any who acknowledged the inspiration of St. Paul.

Ver. 21—40. On the exercise of miraculous gifts, continued.—After some farther remarks and directions as to the conduct of their devotional meetings, the apostle enters a caveat against females speaking in the church, which it has been found difficult to reconcile with the directions which he gives in chap. xi. 5, &c., as to women's prophesying. On this subject we venture to remark, 1. That when God bestows any extraordinary gifts on females, there is no human power which has a right to forbid their exercise, and certainly no apostle would. Even Anna was allowed to prophesy in the temple as well as Simeon; Philip, the deacon, had two daughters which did prophesy; and the Spirit, on the day of Pentecost, was doubt-

Ver. 21. In the law.—i. e. in the Old Testament. (The passage quoted is taken from the prophet Isaiah; but the term torah, (law) was used by the Jews to express the whole Scriptures, law, prophets, and hagiographia; and they used it to distinguish these Sacred Writings from the words of the Scribes. It is not taken from the LXX from which it varies as much as any words can differ from others where the general meaning is similar. It accords much more with the Hebrew: and may be considered as a translation from it; only what is said of God in the third person, in the Hebrew, is here expressed in the first person, with the addition of saith the Lord.—Randolph. Ver. 22. Tongues are for a sign.—i. e. for a miracle, to convince the unbelievers.

Ver. 23. The whole church.—i. e. evidently the congregation of believers, as the word implies, though used afterwards for the place of assembly; as is the case with the word "Meeting," among Dissenters.—That ye are mad.—That is, from hearing you all talk so unintelligibly. Comp. Acts ii. 13.

Ver. 25. Thus are the secrets of his heart made manifest.—This refers to the work of the Holy Spirit on men's consciences.

Ver. 26. Every one (MacKnight, "each") of you hath, &c.—This, according to Mr. Harmer, is to be understood of extemporary (rather inspired) devotional songs; such we read of repeatedly in the Old Testament, as in the times of Moses and David.

Ver. 27. Let it be by two, &c.—i. e. according to Doddridge, "two or three" speakers, and one interpreter; but MacKnight renders it, "Let it be two or at most three (sentences) and separately; and let one interpret."—[Let not more than two, or at most three, be so engaged at one time of assembling; and let this be done by course, one after another.]—Bagster.

29 Let ^b the prophets speak two or three, and let the other judge.

30 If any thing be revealed to another that sitteth by, let the ^c first hold his peace.

31 For ye may all prophesy one by one, that all may learn, and all may be comforted.

32 And the spirits ^d of the prophets are subject to the prophets.

33 For God is not the author of ^e confusion, but of peace, as ^f in all churches of the saints.

34 Let ^g your women keep silence in the churches: for it is not permitted unto them to speak; but they are commanded to be ^h under obedience, as also saith ⁱ the law.

35 And if they will learn any thing, let them ask their husbands at home: for it is a shame for women to speak in the church.

36 What? came the word of God out from you? or ^j came it unto you only?

37 If ^k any man think himself to be a prophet, or spiritual, let him acknowledge that the things that I write unto you are the commandments of the Lord.

38 But if any man be ignorant, let him be ignorant.

39 Wherefore, brethren, covet to prophesy, and forbid not to speak with tongues.

40 Let ^l all things be done decently and in order.

CHAPTER XV

3 By Christ's resurrection, 12 he proves the necessity of our resurrection, against all such as deny the resurrection of the body. 21 The fruit, 25 and manner thereof, 31 and of the changing of them that shall be found alive at the last day.

MOREOVER, brethren, I ^a declare unto you the gospel which I preached unto you, which ^b also ye have received, and wherein ^c ye stand;

2 By which also ye are saved, if ^d ye ^e keep in memory ^f what I preached unto you, unless ^g ye have believed in vain.

3 For I delivered unto you first of all that

A. M. 4661.
A. D. 57.
b ver. 29.
1 Th 5:19, 20.
c Job 32:11.
d 1 Jn 4:1.
e tumult, or, confusion.
f c 11:16.
g 1 Th 2:11, 12.
h Ep 5:22.
Tit 2:5.
1 Pe 3:1.
i Gn 3:16.
Nu 30:3.
12.
Est 1:20.
j c 4:7.
k 2 Co 10:7.
1 Jn 4:5.
l ver 35, 38.
m Ga 1:11.
n c 14:5.
o 1 Pe 5:12.
p He 3:6.
q or, hold fast.
r by what speech.
s Ga 3:4.
h 1e 3:15.
Ps 24:4.
Ac 1:53:1.
Ro 9:26.
Da 9:26.
1 Co 13:7.
1 Co 24:25.
46.
i Ps 16:10.
Ho 6:2.
j Lu 24:34.
k Ac 9:17.
l or, an abortive.
m Ep 5:7, 8.
n Mat 10:10.
o Ac 26:8.
p 1 Th 4:14.
q Ac 17:31.
r Ro 4:25.

which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according ^b to the scriptures;

4 And that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according ^c to the scriptures:

5 And that he was seen of ^d Cephas, then of the twelve:

6 After that, he was seen of above five hundred brethren at once; of whom the greater part remain unto this present, but some are fallen asleep.

7 After that, he was seen of James, then of all the apostles.

8 And last ^k of all he was seen of me also, as of ^l one born out of due time.

9 For I am the least ^m of the apostles, that am not meet to be called an apostle, because I persecuted the church of God.

10 But by the grace of God I am what I am; and his grace which was bestowed upon me was not in vain; but I laboured more abundantly than they all: yet not ⁿ I, but the grace of God which was with me.

11 Therefore whether it were I or they, so we preach, and so ye believed.

12 Now if Christ be preached that he rose from the dead, how ^o say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead?

13 But if ^p there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen:

14 And if ^q Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain.

15 Yea, and we are found false witnesses of God; because we have testified of God that he raised up Christ: whom he raised not up, if so be that the dead rise not.

16 For if the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised.

17 And if Christ be not raised, your faith ^r is vain: ye are yet in your sins.

less poured upon both sexes, as had been predicted. (Acts i. 17, 18.) And Paul's prohibition of a woman's praying or prophesying unveiled, was certainly an acknowledgment of their right under such regulation.—2. In the present chapter nothing is said of women as to prophesying or praying; but only against their speaking or talking in the churches, which we humbly conceive regards rather their interference in church government, which was unbecoming their subjection to the other sex. Neither were they allowed to ask questions, which might interrupt the course of their meetings, either for business or devotion. "Let them ask their husbands at home," (ver. 35.) but, in public, "Let things be done decently, and in order," (ver. 40.) that is, according to Doddridge, "Let all [your meetings] be conducted in a regular manner, to prevent such disturbances, disputes, and scandals, for the future, as have already arisen in your society, and will proceed to greater evils, if you do not immediately set upon reforming them." If women were allowed to prophesy or preach in the public congregation, we conceive it was only on particular occasions, and under special divine influence.

CHAP. XV. Ver. 1—19. Christ's resurrection, the ground and pledge of ours.—The resurrection of the body, however ridiculed by ancient or modern philosophers, is a fundamental truth of Christianity, constantly insisted upon in the public preaching of the apostles, (as we find in the Book of Acts,) as well as in the apostolical epistles. But as the general resurrection arises out of Christ's resurrection, it was necessary, therefore, to establish that fact, as the foundation of this doctrine. Now, as a fact can only be established by testimony, St. Paul here refers to the various witnesses by whose testimony it may be established. After his resurrection, our Lord was "seen of Cephas, (or Peter,) of the twelve," or body of the apostles, and afterwards of "five hundred brethren at once," of whom, says the apostle, "the greater part remain (alive) unto this present, (time.)" The other appearances are mentioned by the Evangelists; but this is not, though it is thought to be referred to in Mat. xxviii. 10.

The modest manner in which St. Paul speaks of himself, as one of these witnesses, is very remarkable. He calls himself an abortive—"one born out of due time," and too insignificant to deserve notice: because, though an apostle, and especially so to the Corinthians, (chap. ix. 2.) he had been a persecutor of the church of God; yet since he had been born again, and become a child of God, and a servant of Christ, he had been indefatigable in serving the great cause in which he was now engaged. This he mentions, however, not to praise himself, but to honour his divine Master. "It was not I," (says he,) but the grace of God which was with me;" and to that grace he gives all the glory.

After this exordium, he adverts to the subject already named, and which was now evidently in full view of his mind—the general resurrection, as arising out of the fact of Christ's resurrection. To this fact he, as an apostle, and as one who had himself seen Christ after his resurrection, bore unequivocal evidence: and upon it founding the resurrection of all believers, he thus reasons—"If there be no resurrection, then Christ is not risen: then is our preaching vain, and your faith also is vain. We are found false witnesses concerning God, in saying that he raised his Son, Jesus, from the dead," (Acts n. 24, &c.) and you also are left to perish "in your sins;" (the atonement of Christ being of no avail if it be not accepted of God, and the evidence of acceptance resting on his resurrection.)

Ver. 29. Let the other judge.—Literally, "discerninate" between truth and error.—Dr. P. Smith.

Ver. 32. The spirits of the prophets.—In verse 12, where the original is the same, our translators render it "spiritual gifts," the noun being supplied, as Macknight thinks it should be here—"The spiritual [gifts] of the prophets are subject to the prophets."—[These who were actuated by the Holy Spirit, in the very moments of inspiration, still retained the free use of themselves, and continued masters of their rational and persuasive faculties.—Bp. Warburton.]—Bagster.

Ver. 36. What? came the word, &c.—Doddridge says, the Scottishism, "Whether did the word of God come forth from you alone?" would be the exactest version. This excellent expositor considers these words as addressed to the church at large; but Macknight, as addressed to the women only; as much as to say, "Did Christ employ any of your sex as apostles? or did the word only come to you by the ministry of men?"

Ver. 37. They are the commandments of the Lord.—This is a direct assertion of the apostle's inspiration.

Ver. 38. But if any man be ignorant.—i. e. neither a prophet nor inspired.—let him remain so.

CHAP. XV. Ver. 2. What I preached.—Doddridge, "those joyful tidings," &c.

Ver. 3. First of all that, &c.—Doddridge, "Among the first [things,] that which," &c.

Ver. 4. Rose again the third day, according, &c.—He was not to see corruption, which generally occurred before the fourth day. See John xi. 39.

Ver. 5. Then of the twelve.—So they were called, though only ten of them were present, Judas being dead, and Thomas absent. They were called the twelve, as implying their office: so the Romans spake of the Triumviri and Decemviri, when meaning only a part of them.

Ver. 12. Then is Christ not risen.—Doddridge, "neither is Christ raised."

So in verse 14.

Ver. 17. Ye are yet in your sins.—[If Christ be not risen, ye have no evidence of God's having accepted his mediation for you, nor, consequently of your being justified.]—Bagster.

18 Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished.

19 If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable.

20 But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first-fruits of them that slept.

21 For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead.

22 For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive.

23 But every man in his own order: Christ the first-fruits; afterward they that are Christ's at his coming.

24 Then cometh the end, when he shall have delivered up the kingdom to God, even the Father; when he shall have put down all rule and all authority and power.

25 For he must reign, till he hath put all enemies under his feet.

26 The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death.

27 For he hath put all things under his feet.

A. M. 4061.
A. D. 57.
s Ju 16.2.
e 4.13.
2 Ti 3.12.
1 Pt 1.3.
u Ac 6.23.
Col 1.18.
v Ro 5.12, 17.
w 1 Ti 3.3.
x 1 Th 4.15.
17.
y Do 7.14, 27.
z 2 Co 6.10.
45.3. 6.
10.1.
10.1.
Ep 1.13.
a Ro 8.35.
b 2 Ti 1.10.
c Ro 3.13.
d Ps 8.
e Ph 3.21.
d e 11.3.
f Ro 8.35.
g Some read, our.
h Phil 3.3.
i Ro 8.35.
j or, by spirit.
k Ro 2.21.
l Ro 12.13.
m Ro 15.11.
n Ep 5.14.
o c 6.5.

But when he saith, all things are put under him, it is manifest that he is excepted, which did put all things under him.

28 And when all things shall be subdued unto him, then shall the Son also himself be subject unto him that put all things under him, that God may be all in all.

29 Else what shall they do which are baptized for the dead, if the dead rise not at all? why are they then baptized for the dead?

30 And why stand we in jeopardy every hour?

31 I protest by your rejoicing which I have in Christ Jesus our Lord, I die daily.

32 If after the manner of men I have fought with beasts at Ephesus, what advantageth it me, if the dead rise not? let us eat and drink; for to-morrow we die.

33 Be not deceived: evil communications corrupt good manners.

34 Awake to righteousness, and sin not; for some have not the knowledge of God: I speak this to your shame.

nion. (Acts v. 31; xiii. 30. Rom. iv. 25.) So important is this doctrine, that on it depends our hopes of another life, and "if in this life only we have hope," that is, if our hope extends not beyond the grave, "then are we of all men most miserable," and to be pitied. As if he had said, our Christian profession exposes us to all the miseries of the present life, and even death itself; where, then, can we look for consolation or reward, but to "another and a better world?"

It may be said, this might be sought for in the intermediate state, and this state we do not deny; but it must necessarily be both temporary and imperfect, since it extends only to the mind, and will terminate with the day of judgment. Indeed, this state, though repeatedly referred to in the New Testament as a state of rest, and peace, and happiness, is never mentioned as the final hope and reward of Christians, which is always placed beyond the day of judgment, as in Matt. xxv. 34. "Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom." &c.

Ver. 20-34. The doctrine of the resurrection farther considered, in relation to Christ's mediatorial character and kingdom.—The conclusion from the preceding reasoning is, not only that Christ is risen, but also, that he is risen as a public character—risen as an earnest and security to his people, that they also shall be raised—he is the first-fruits of the great harvest of the general resurrection of the just: for it is to them, and to them only, we think, with Doddridge, Paul refers throughout this chapter. It may be well here to turn back to the Epistle to the Romans, chap. v., in which we have seen Adam and Christ described as respectively the representatives of those connected with them: Adam as the head of all mankind, proceeding from him by ordinary generation; and Christ as the head of all his chosen and regenerated people. As in virtue of the former relation all mankind were involved in sin and death through the first Adam, so, through their relation to the second Adam, (Christ,) all believers become entitled to the high privilege of a resurrection to eternal life.

We now come to contemplate the mediatorial kingdom of the Lord Jesus, its completion, and the surrender here spoken of: "Then cometh the end," &c.—"The end of which Paul speaks (says Mr. And. Fuller) does not mean the end of Christ's kingdom, but of the world, and the things thereof. The delivering up the kingdom to the Father will not put an end to it, but eternally establish it in a new and more glorious form. Christ shall not cease to reign, though the mode of his administration be different. As a divine person, he will always be one with the Father; and though his mediatorial kingdom shall cease, yet the effects of it will remain for ever. There will never be a period in duration in which the Redeemer of sinners will be thrown into the shade, or become of less account than he now is; or in which 'honour, and glory, and blessing,' will cease to be ascribed to him by the whole creation." Rev. v. 12-14.

Upon the same passage the learned Bp. Pearson remarks—"When all the enemies of Christ shall be subdued, when all the chosen of God shall be actually brought into his kingdom, when those which refused him to reign over them shall be slain; that is, when the whole office of the mediator shall be completed and fulfilled, then every branch of the execution shall cease. As, therefore, there shall no longer continue any act of the prophetic part to instruct us, nor any act of the priestly part to intercede for us, so there shall be no farther act of this regal power of the mediator necessary, to defend and preserve us. The beatific vision shall succeed our information and instruction, a present fruition will prevent oblation and intercession, and perfect security will need no actual defence and protection. As, therefore, the general notion of a mediator ceaseth when all are made one, because a mediator is not a mediator of one, (Gal. iii. 20;) so every part or branch of that mediatorship, as such, must also cease, because that unity is in all parts complete. Then cometh the end," &c.

"Now, though the mediatorship of Christ be then resigned, because the end thereof will then be performed; though the regal office, as part of that mediatorship, be also resigned with the whole; yet we must not think that Christ shall cease to be a king, or lose any of the power and honour which before he had. The dominion which he hath [as mediator] was given him as a reward for what he suffered: and certainly the reward shall not cease when the work is done. He hath promised to make us kings and priests, which however we expect in heaven, believing we shall reign with him for ever, and therefore for ever must believe him king."

By the resignation of the kingdom to the Father, we do not understand the giving up rank, authority, or power; but rather a submitting of all his mediatorial government to the Father's public approbation, and presenting the subjects of his kingdom before the throne. So Paul (Heb. ii. 13) represents Messiah as saying, "Behold I, and the children which God hath given me;" as if he had said, "Here am I, and these are the children thou didst give me to redeem and save." "Thine they were, and thou gavest them to me, and none is lost save the son of perdition, that the Scripture might be fulfilled." Thus said the Saviour when he had finished his work on earth. (See John xvii. throughout.) And something like this may be his language when all his mediatorial office is fulfilled in heaven. Then "God shall be all in all"—that is, the universe shall be governed as before the mediatorial system was introduced. No more sacrifice for sin being needed, no more intercession for sinners will then be offered, nor will there remain any enemies to be subdued. Peace and harmony will be restored to our creation, and God alone will reign (as Macknight renders it) "over all things, in all places" of his dominion. We are not to suppose, however, that their obligation to the Saviour will ever be obliterated from the hearts of the redeemed, or that he will ever forget or neglect the purchase of his blood.

If this were not the case, says the apostle, "What shall they do who are baptized for [in hope of] the resurrection of the dead? and to fill up the ranks in the Christian army which

Ver. 18. Are perished.—This verse implies, that all who had been saved, were saved through Christ's death and resurrection.

Ver. 19. Most miserable.—Doddridge, "Pitiable."

Ver. 20. Become the first-fruits.—This is said in allusion to the law, Levit. xiii. 11. [The resurrection of Christ has been demonstrated, and our resurrection necessarily follows: as sure as the first-fruits are the proof that there is a harvest, so surely the resurrection of Christ is a proof of ours.]—Bagster.

Ver. 22. For as in Adam, &c.—The whole context shows, that the Apostle in this passage is speaking of the resurrection of the body, and has no reference to the future condition either of the righteous or the wicked. His meaning is, that, as the first Adam was the cause of natural death, so Christ, the second Adam, is the author of the resurrection.

Ver. 23. Afterward they that are Christ's.—This plainly shows that the resurrection of believers will be distinct, and precede that of the wicked.—At his coming—i. e. at his second coming to raise the dead, and judge the world.

Ver. 24. Then cometh the end.—(The mediatorial kingdom: an allusion to 1278 the case of Roman viceroys, or governors of provinces; who, when their administration was ended, delivered up their government into the hands of the emperor.)—Bagster.

Ver. 27. He is excepted.—i. e. God the Father.

Ver. 29. Baptized for the dead.—[That is, probably, as Ellis and Doddridge interpret, "who are baptized in the room of the dead;" referring to the case of those who presented themselves for baptism immediately after the martyrdom of their brethren or friends; as if fresh soldiers should enlist and press forward to the assault, to supply the places of those who had fallen.]—Bagster. Macknight considers the passage as elliptical, and reads it, "Baptized for [the resurrection of] the dead." In Rob. Wahl the passage is thus paraphrased—If the dead do not rise, of what avail is it to expose ourselves to so many dangers in the hope of a future reward?

Ver. 31. I protest by your rejoicing.—Macknight, "By the boasting (which I have) on account of Christ Jesus." &c.

Ver. 32. If . . . I have fought, &c.—Lardner understands this hyperbolically—"If I had"—and not that he literally did so.

35 But some man will say, How ^o are the dead raised up? and with what body do they come?

36 Thou fool, that ^p which thou sowest is not quickened, except it die:

37 And that which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body that shall be, but bare grain, it may chance of wheat, or of some other grain:

38 But God ^q giveth it a body as it hath pleased him, and to every seed his own body.

39 All flesh is not the same flesh: but there is one kind of flesh of men, another flesh of beasts, another of fishes, and another of birds.

40 There ^r are also celestial bodies, and bodies terrestrial: but the glory of the celestial is one, and the glory of the terrestrial is another.

41 There is one glory of the ^s sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars: for one star differeth from another star in glory.

42 So also is the resurrection of the dead. It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption:

A. M. 4061.

D. 57.

o Ere 37.3.

p Ju 12.21

q Ge 1.11,

12

r Ge 1.16.

s Ps 19.4,5

t Da 12.3.

Mat 13.13

Pho.3.21.

u Lu 24.31

Ju 50.19,

26

v Ge 2.7

w Ju 5.21

6.33,40.

x Ju 3.13,34

y Ro 9.29.

z Ju 3.3,5

43 It ^t is sown in dishonour; it is raised in glory: it is sown in weakness; it is raised in power:

44 It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body. There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual ^u body.

45 And so it is written, ^v The first man Adam was made a living soul; the ^w last Adam was made a quickening spirit.

46 Howbeit that was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural; and afterward that which is spiritual.

47 The ^x first man is of the earth, earthy: the second man is the Lord from heaven.

48 As is the earthy, such are they also that are earthy: and as is the heavenly, such are they also that are heavenly.

49 And as we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also ^y bear the image of the heavenly.

50 Now this I say, brethren, that ^z flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption.

are broken by death and martyrdom?" Or why do we stand continually exposed to the same dangers?—in jeopardy every hour, and daily living in the expectation of being called to die? If, speaking after the manner of men, I have fought with beasts at Ephesus, "when I was assaulted by the savage fury of Demetrius and his mob," (Acts xix. 24)—or if I even had encountered wild beasts in the theatre—whether I had escaped, or been destroyed, what reward would there remain for me, if the dead rise not?

In concluding this part of his subject, the apostle seems to intimate that the Corinthians had suffered, both in principle and practice, from their connexion with Epicurean philosophers and their disciples; thus he insinuates in quoting a saying from a Greek poet, which had probably become a proverbial saying with them, as the translation has long been with us—"Evil communications corrupt good manners;" by which he evidently means, that associating with persons of infidel principles and corrupt morals, has a great tendency to corrupt the mind and manners. The apostle, therefore, attempts to rouse them from their delusion—that is, such of them as had been drawn into such connexions: "Awake to righteousness, and sin not!"

"O God! awake our souls to righteousness,
And on our hearts eternal things impress!"

Ver. 35—50. The resurrection of the dead.—The apostle now comes to explain, so far as the mysterious subject can be rendered intelligible to our present faculties, the nature of this resurrection; and this he does by analogy, comparing the death and resurrection of our bodies to the process of vegetation in the production of corn. It is true the subject might have been illustrated from other analogies, particularly from the natural history of insects; and the changes which human nature undergoes might have been well illustrated from the changes which pass on certain insects, from the caterpillar to the chrysalis, and from the chrysalis to the fly; whereby the creature which before crawled upon the earth, by means of passing through a state of insensibility, becomes the inhabitant of another region, and flies in the midst of heaven. So man goes to sleep a worm, and wakes an angel.

The analogy here used, seems to have been borrowed from a suggestion of our Lord himself, (John xii. 24.) that "except a grain of wheat fall into the ground and die," it cannot bring forth fruit. There is one grand distinction, however, between the two cases: the grain of corn that vegetates brings forth many, even "thirty, sixty, or a hundred fold;" but in man, the individual which dies is alone restored to life. We do not think it necessary, or even appropriate, to enter into any philosophical inquiries, in this place, as to the nature of that death to which every grain of corn is subject in the earth. Whether it be absolute, or apparent only, like the chrysalis of the caterpillar, it is sufficient to illustrate the subject. The change of state in man, from death to immortal life, can hardly be more wonderful than that of the worm to the butterfly, or than that of an inert single grain of wheat to the wavy stalk and the golden ear. "But God giveth . . . to every seed his, own body."

The identity of every body, and particularly of the human body, is a subject of great and insuperable difficulty with us. It is supposed to reside in some secret germ, known to the Creator. In the living body, indeed, we find no difficulty in proving its identity; but it is chiefly from its connexion with the same mind that we ascertain the fact. For if we consider the changes which a human body undergoes during the course of three or four score years, in size and in form, through the progress of age, the operations of nature, and the accidents of disease, it would seem in many cases impossible to identify the body, but from the residence of the same intellect, and the consciousness of the individual world. But as God, in the propagation of his creatures, gives to every kind its proper flesh, (whether beast, or bird, or fish,) and to every vegetable its proper form, &c., so will he associate to every human mind its proper body, though, whether composed of any or how many of the same particles, it may not be possible for us to ascertain.

"The single grain of wheat which is sown, (says Mr. Fuller,) does not reproduce itself, but produces another like itself: for to every seed is given its own body: that is, a body of its own nature or kind. So also is the resurrection of the dead. If the body do not retain the sameness of identity, it will produce the sameness of nature or kind. God giveth it a body as it pleaseth him, and to every seed its own body."

But the introduction of celestial bodies in this place—sun, moon, and stars, with birds, beasts, and fishes, seems to us mysterious and perplexing; unless, indeed, it be designed to intimate that the glorified bodies of the redeemed, at the resurrection, will as much exceed their present forms as the celestial orbs exceed those terrestrial bodies. So the prophet Daniel tells us, (ch. xii. 3.) that "then the wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever."

In this life, indeed, we all bear the image of the first Adam, "of the earth, earthy;" and at death this is sown a "natural body;" but in the last day it shall be raised a spiritual body, like that of "the second Adam, the Lord from heaven." The former was made "a living soul;" the latter Adam is "a quickening (a life-giving) spirit." And as we have borne the image of the earthy, so must we "bear the image of the heavenly;" or, as the same apostle elsewhere expresses it—"The Lord Jesus shall change our vile bodies, to be transformed like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able to subdue all things unto himself." (Phil. iii. 21.)

Could we accurately ascertain the nature of Christ's present

Ver. 36 Thou fool—Doddridge, "Thoughtless creature"—"Except it be—Macnight, "rot"—Doddridge, ("appear to) die." [That is, the germ, or principle of vegetable life, does not spring up in the form of a plant, till the external body, consisting of the tubes or forinaceous part of the seed, dies, and is decomposed; and thus, forming a fine earth, becomes the appropriate nourishment of the young plant that is springing into life, till it thus becomes capable of deriving nutriment and support from the grosser particles of earth in which it was deposited.]—Bozster.

Ver. 38 His own body—Macnight, "its proper body" (Greek idion) i. e. "the body proper to its own kind." So Doddridge, "Not the body which it had before; so this will not prove the identity of the resurrection body; but only, as Macnight expresses it, 'The raised body of the souls will resemble their body which was laid in the grave, so far as their new state will admit.'" In one respect we know that they will materially differ. See Luke xx. 35. It is the general opinion, however, and is largely argued by Mr. Drey, in his ingenious Essay "On the Resurrection of the Body" chap. vi, that there is a principle of identity (some germ or stamen) which will be preserved till the resurrection; though what this is, it seems utterly in vain to conjecture.

Ver. 41 One star differeth from another star in glory.—This, it is probable, is literally true: we know of no two bodies in nature, perfectly alike, nor any two bodies which have uniformly the same motion. This applies particularly to the heavenly bodies; and if we are to consider this (as many do) as referring metaphorically to the saints, it may be equally true that spiritual bodies have the same diversity, though all glorious. Though the earth is now supposed to have 800 millions of inhabitants, or more, it is probable that "the human race divine," in every instance, varies in some of its features.

Ver. 41 A spiritual body—is a body refined from all the corruption and defilement attached to matter in the present state.

Ver. 47 The Lord from heaven—The word Lord is wanting in some ancient MSS., and Tertullian says, was inserted by Marcion; yet both Doddridge and Macnight retain it. The Vulgate reads, "The second man from heaven is heavenly." Dr. Pyle Smith remarks, that in the ancient book Zohar, Messiah is called "The Adam on high;" and so distinguished from the first man, who is called the "Adam below."

Ver. 50 Flesh and blood—i. e. in its present corrupt state; or, as in the next member of the sentence, corruption. "Our bodies, after they are raised from the dead, (says Mr. Fuller,) may be flesh and blood, and yet not what they now are."

51 Behold, I show you a mystery; We ^a shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, 52 In a ^b moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the ^c trumpet shall sound, and the dead ^d shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed.

53 For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal ^e must put on immortality.

54 So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death ^f is swallowed up in victory.

55 O ^g death, where is thy sting? O ^h grave, where is thy victory?

56 The ⁱ sting of death is sin; and ^j the strength of sin is the law.

57 But thanks ^k be to God, which giveth us the victory ^l through our Lord Jesus Christ.

58 Therefore, my beloved brethren, ^m be ye steadfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labour is not in vain in the Lord.

CHAPTER XVI.

ⁿ He exhorted them to relieve the want of the brethren at Jerusalem: 10 commendeth Timothy: 13 and after friendly admonitions, 16 shutteth up his epistle with divers salutations.

NOW concerning the collection for the saints, as ^a I have given order to the churches of Galatia, even so do ye.

2 Upon the first ^b day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath body, we might also easily ascertain what ours will be. The apostle indeed says, that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of heaven;—yet our Lord himself speaks of his raised body as composed of “flesh and bones,” and as bearing the marks of his crucifixion. (Luke xxiv. 39—43.) In the same passage we find, also, that Jesus did eat with them, even animal food, namely, a piece of “an broiled fish and of a honey-comb;” which seems clearly to imply that his resurrection body contained all the organs necessary to receiving food. We stop here, however, being desirous not to push our inquiries beyond the letter of the text on subjects wherein we are so liable to err. When the glorious events here predicted shall be accomplished, we shall, doubtless, find reason to exclaim, with the queen of Sheba, that the half had not been told us.

Ver. 51—53. The effect of the last trumpet, and the Christian's final triumph!—“Behold! I show you a mystery,” says the apostle. A mystery is a secret—but that secret may be, at least partially, revealed; and here a scene opens to us, full of “terrible majesty.” The “trumpet of the archangel” shakes both earth and heaven, and the voice of God awakens the dead—that is, the dead saints, for they alone are referred to in this first resurrection. Poets and painters have amused themselves in sketching this awful scene, and have represented the awaking dead as crawling from beneath their tombs; but the event defies every attempt of human imagination—in a moment—in the twinkling of an eye—the dead saints are raised, and the living changed. It can be compared only to that Almighty fiat, “Let light be, and light was.” (Gen. i. 3.)

And with what ease is all this effected, as relates to the happy subjects of this change—it is only a change of dress! The old garment of mortality and corruption shall be thrown prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come.

3 And when I come, whomsoever ^c ye shall approve by your letters, them will I send to bring your ^d liberality unto Jerusalem.

4 And if it be meet that I go also, they shall go with me.

5 Now I will come unto you, ^e when I shall pass through Macedonia: for I do pass through Macedonia.

6 And it may be that I will abide, yea, and winter with you, that ye may bring me on my journey whithersoever I go.

7 For I will not see you now by the way, but I trust to tarry a while with you, if the Lord permit.

8 But I will tarry at Ephesus until Pentecost.

9 For a great ^f door and effectual is opened unto me, and there are many ^g adversaries.

10 Now if Timotheus ^h come, see that he may be with you without fear: for he worketh ⁱ the work of the Lord, as I also do.

11 Let no man therefore despise ^j him: but conduct ^k him forth in peace, that he may come unto me: for I look for him with the brethren.

12 As touching our brother ^l Apollos, I greatly desired him to come unto you with the brethren: but his will was not at all to come at this time; but he will come when he shall have convenient time.

13 Watch ^m ye, stand ⁿ fast in the faith, quit you like ^o men, be ^p strong.

A. M. 4061.
A. D. 57.
a 1 Th. 4. 15
b 1 Cor. 15. 52
c 2 Cor. 9. 14.
Mat. 24. 31
d 1 Cor. 15. 52
e 2 Cor. 5. 4.
1 Th. 3. 2.
f 1 Cor. 15. 25.
g 1 Th. 3. 14.
h or, hell.
i 1 Cor. 6. 22.
j 1 Cor. 15. 10.
k 1 Cor. 7. 25.
l 1 Cor. 8. 97.
1 Th. 5. 4, 5.
m 2 Cor. 3. 14.
n 1 Cor. 2. 10.
o 1 Cor. 2. 10.
p 1 Cor. 10.
c 2 Cor. 5. 19
d gift.
e 2 Cor. 1. 15.
f 1 Cor. 2. 12.
g 1 Cor. 3. 18.
h 1 Cor. 19. 22.
i 1 Th. 2. 19.
j 1 Th. 4. 12.
k 3 Th. 6.
l 1 Cor. 12.
m 1 Cor. 5. 3.
n 2 Th. 2. 15.
o 1 Cor. 13.
p 1 Cor. 6. 10.

Force as ten times, terrible as hell,
He shook a dreadful dart; what seem'd his head,
The likeness of a kingly crown had on."

But the sacred writers compare the monster to a dragon, whose sting is sin, and its wound always fatal; but, through the death of our Lord Jesus, that sting is drawn, and the poison is extracted.

CHAP. XVI. Ver. 1—24. Direct admonitions and salutations to the church at Corinth.—We humbly conceive, that the last verse of the preceding chapter connects more properly with the present. From the consideration of the resurrection, and judgment to come, the apostle earnestly exhorts the Corinthians to steadfastness and diligence in the work of the Lord, and especially in the duty of Christian benevolence, under the consideration that their labour “was not in vain,” for great would be their reward in heaven. He then proceeds to urge upon them a provision for the poor saints; and particularly, as that was now the usual day of meeting for devotion, that on the first day of the week, each one should deposit something in the treasury of the church, as God had prospered him, for their poor brethren at Jerusalem, who were doubtless much harassed by their infidel countrymen in that city.

“The churches of Galatia and Phrygia (says Dr. Paley) churches, why should ‘the first day of the week’ be mentioned in this connexion?” On Sunday, says Justin Martyr, “all Christians, in the city or country, meet together, because that is the day of our Lord’s resurrection; and then we read the writings of the prophets and apostles. This being done, the president makes an oration to the assembly, exhorting them to imitate and do the things which they have heard; then we all join in prayer, and after that we celebrate the sacrament.”—Scott.—Lay by him in store—Doddridge. “Lay something by, treasure it up,” namely, in the common stock.—Instead of in store, Macknight reads, “in the treasury;” i. e. the public stock of the church. This plan of setting apart, to benevolent uses, a portion of the gains of each week is admirably adapted to promote the spirit of liberality. The sums being comparatively small, avarice is not excited. But when the portion of a year’s profits is looked at, it is so large that avarice listens her talions upon it, and nothing short of the grace of God can unfasten her grasp.

Ver. 3. Your liberality—Greek, “gift” or, “grace.”

Ver. 5. When I pass through Macedonia.—By chap. ii. it appears that Paul had been at Corinth, and by this verse, that he was about to visit it a second time. But instead of sailing directly from Ephesus to Corinth, as he had formerly purposed, he intended to go round through Macedonia; and that he did so, appears from Acts xx. 1, 2.

Ver. 8. I will tarry at Ephesus until Pentecost.—This, compared with verse 6.—“And it may be, that I will winter with you,” fixes the time of writing this Epistle—after winter, but before Pentecost, which includes the time of the Passover, about which time Benson, from chap. v. 7, 8, supposes it to have been written.

Ver. 9. For a great door and effectual.—See 2 Cor. ii. 12. Col. iv. 3. Rev. iii. 8. Ver. 10. If Timotheus come.—Timotheus had been sent before the apostle into Macedonia, with directions to visit Corinth.

Ver. 12. Our brother Apollos.—It seems, that a party at Corinth opposed

Ver. 51. We shall all be changed.—i. e. We believers. Macknight. Nothing like this is said of the wicked. Compare Phil. iii. 21.

Ver. 52. The trumpet shall sound.—The awful sound of this trumpet is generally illustrated by a reference to the thunders of Sinai, which seem to have been attended with volcanic phenomena. See Heb. xii. 19. Bishop Berkeley, who heard an eruption of Vesuvius at twelve miles distance, compares it to the raging together of a tempest and a troubled sea, mixed with the roaring of thunder and of artillery: and some of the volcanic eruptions of South America are said to have been heard from 150 to 600 miles. See Diel's Christ. Philos.

Ver. 54. Death is swallowed up in victory.—Gr. “for ever.” Whitby and Macknight. Compare verse 26. But the same word is rendered victory in ver. 55 and 57.

Ver. 55. O grave.—Greek, Hades, or the invisible world. The Jews speak of the angel of death as having the keys of Hades; and St. Paul describes Satan under a similar character.—“Him that hath the power of death, that is, the devil.” Heb. ii. 14.

Ver. 56. The sting of death is sin.—For it is sin that arms death with all its terrors.—And the strength of sin is the law.—Because it is by the law that we have the knowledge, and feel the consequences of sin.

CHAP. XVI. Ver. 1. Concerning the collection.—“It is evident, that the Corinthians had been previously made acquainted with the apostle’s intention, of raising a contribution from the Gentile churches for the poor Christians in Judea; and, as they were more wealthy than most of their brethren, he did not intimate even a doubt of their liberality in that good work. But he judged it proper to point out to them the method, about which he had given orders in the churches of Galatia, whence he had lately come.”—Scott.

Ver. 2. First day of the week.—“The argument from this passage for the observance of the first day of the week, as ‘the Lord’s day,’ the Christian Sabbath, is very conclusive: for, unless that were the custom in apostolical

14 Let *all your things be done with charity.
15 I beseech you, brethren, (ye know the house of Stephanas, that it is * the first-fruits of Achaia, and that they have addicted themselves to the ministry of the saints.)

16 That ye submit *yourselves unto such, and to every one that helpeth with us, and laboureth.

17 I am glad of the coming of Stephanas and Fortunatus and Achaicus: for that which was lacking * on your part they have supplied.

18 For they have refreshed my spirit and yours: therefore acknowledge * ye them that are such.

19 The churches of Asia salute you. * Aquila

A. M. 4001.
A. D. 51.
q. 1 Pe. 4. 8.
r. Ro. 16. 5.
s. He 13. 17.
t. Phi. 2. 30.
u. 1 Th. 5. 12.
v. Ac. 19. 25.
w. Ro. 16. 5.
15.
x. Ep. 6. 21.
y. Ga. 1. 8, 9.
z. Jude. 14, 15.
a. R. 16. 20.

and Priscilla salute you much in the Lord, with the * church that is in their house.

20 All the brethren greet you. Greet ye one another with a holy kiss.

21 The salutation of * me Paul with mine own hand.

22 If any man love * not the Lord Jesus Christ, let him be * Anathema * Maran-atha.

23 The grace * of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you.

24 My love be with you all in Christ Jesus. Amen.

¶ The first epistle to the Corinthians was written from Philippi by St. Paul, and Fortunatus, and Achaicus, and Timotheus.

were the last churches which Paul had visited before writing this Epistle. He was now at Ephesus, and he came thither immediately from visiting those churches, Acts xviii. 23; xix. 1. And when this is very evident that the same subject was strongly impressed on his mind; for speaking of the other apostles, Paul says, "They would that we should remember the past; the same which I also was forward to do." This is one of many incidents remarked by this ingenious writer, to show the harmony between the book of Acts and the Apostolical Epistles, and which clearly prove their authenticity, as the circumstances are too minute and incidental to have occurred to any one who had attempted forgery. (See Horæ Paul. chap. iii. No. 10.) Another circumstance of a like nature is found in verse 11 of this chapter, where, speaking of Timothy to the Corinthians, Paul says, "Let no man despise him;" a charge given concerning no other of Paul's messengers; and what danger was there of his being despised more than others? Turn to 1 Tim. iv. 12, (says Paley), and you will find that Timothy was a young man, younger probably than those who were usually employed in the Christian ministry; and that Paul, apprehending lest he should on that account be exposed to contempt, urges upon him the caution there inserted, Let no man despise thy youth.

themselves attached to Apollos, in order to cover their opposition to the apostle. St. Paul greatly disdained, and exhorted that eminent minister to do as among them, with Timothy and Erastus, or with Stephanas and his friends, when they returned to Corinth.

Ver. 22. Anathema Maran-atha.—When the Jews lost the power of life and death, they used, nevertheless, to pronounce an Anathema on persons who, according to the Mosaic law, should have been executed, and such a person became an Anathema (Heb. Cherem), or accursed. . . . Now, to excommunicate, that God would, one way or another, interpose, to add that efficacy to his own sentence which they could not give it, it is very probable they might use the words Maran-atha; that is, in Syriac, The Lord cometh, or he will surely and quickly come to put this sentence in execution. . . . In beautiful allusion to this, when the apostle was speaking of a sent alienation from Christ, renounced under the forms of Christianity, (which might perhaps be the case among many of the Corinthians,) as this was not a crime capable of being convicted and censured in the Christian church, he re-

After a friendly assurance of his kind wishes and intentions toward the Corinthians, and a friendly apology on behalf of Apollos, the apostle gives them this animating exhortation:—

Watch ye, stand fast in the Lord, quit yourselves like men"—all which, as military terms, are highly appropriate to the Christian soldier, who has to watch, as well as fight with principalities and powers—with "the world, the flesh, and the devil." At the same time, while his utmost enmities are to be thus exerted, the kind st afflictions are to be exemplified toward his brethren—"Let all things be done with charity," or Christian love. He particularly recommends to their attention "the house of Stephanas," who had "addicted themselves to the ministry (or service) of the saints." Then, after certain salutations, he thus solemnly concludes:—"If any man love not the Lord Jesus Christ, let him be"—he shall be—"Anathema Maran-atha"—"accursed when the Lord shall come."

To conclude all, (says Dr. Doddridge,) let us lay up in our memory, and often review this awful sentence, this Anathema Maran-atha; which, to give it the greater weight, the apostle records with his own hand. Let it ever be remembered, that professing Christians, who do not sincerely love their Master, he under the heaviest curse which an apostle can pronounce, or God inflict."

minds them that the Lord Jesus Christ will come himself and punish."—Bishop Patrick in Doddridge. This is the passage signified to be referred to in the preceding verse, as written with his own hand. Exhorted on one occasion, preached from the above passage. At the conclusion of the service, when Psalm arose to pronounce the benediction, he paused, and said, "How shall I bless this whole assembly, when every person in it, who hath not the Lord Jesus Christ as Anathema Maran-atha?" The solemnity of this address affected the assembly; and one gentleman, a person of rank, was so overcome by his feelings, that he fell so prostrate to the floor. . . . P. S. The superscription to this Epistle, which states it to have been written from Philippi, is so plainly opposed to verse 8, in this chapter, and to other parts of this Epistle, that it is almost universally rejected as spurious and unauthentic, particularly by Doddridge, MacKnight, and Paley. The former says, "I hope it will be remembered, that no credit is to be given to any of these additions, which have been very presumptuously made, and, I think, very ingenuously retained."

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE FIRST EPISTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS.

CORINTH, favored by its situation between two seas, rose to the summit of dignity and splendor. From its extensive commerce, it abounded with riches, and was furnished with all the necessaries of life, and superfluities of life; and far excelled all the cities in the world in the magnificence of its public buildings, such as temples, palaces, theatres, porticoes, colonnades, baths, and other edifices. But wealth produced luxury, and luxury a total corruption of manners; so that the inhabitants became infamous to a proverb; lasciviousness in particular being not only tolerated, but forming a considerable portion of their religion. Notwithstanding this, the arts, sciences, and literature, still continued to flourish, every part of the Grecian learning being highly cultivated; so that before its destruction by the Romans, Cicero wrote Marc. c. 53, seemed not to call it, "The light of all Greece." It possessed numerous schools, in which philosophy and rhetoric were taught by able masters, and strangers resorted thither from all quarters to be instructed in the sciences. Affected in these circumstances will account for several things mentioned by the Apostle in his letters to his city, which things without this knowledge of their previous Gentile state and customs, we could not comprehend. It is indubitably certain, as the Apostle states, that they carried these things to an extent that was never practised in any other Gentile country; and yet, even in Corinth, the Gospel of Jesus Christ, effecting what learning and philosophy were utterly unable to accomplish, prevailed over universal corruption and depravity, so much so that it became the seat of a flourishing Christian church. We have already seen, that the sense of this church had been distorted by false teachers, who made great pretensions to wisdom, eloquence, and knowledge of the Christian life; and that it was to compose these differences, to correct certain abuses, and to answer various questions relative to which they had written to the Apostle, that he composed this Epistle to the Church of Corinth. With what consummate skill and soundness of argument he establishes doctrines, meets objections, and refutes erroneous opinions, the attentive reader need not be informed; while his candour, love, faithfulness, and holy zeal, are apparent in every page. The Corinthians abounded in knowledge, science, eloquence, and various extraordinary gifts and endowments, and for these the Apostle gives them full credit, but, in many cases, distinctly enough marked in this Epistle, they were grossly ignorant of the genius and design of the gospel. Many, since their time, have put words and observances in place of the weightier matters of the law, and the spirit of the gospel. The Apostle has taken great pains to correct these abuses among the Corinthians, and to insist on that great merchandise able and eternal truth, that bear to God and man, filling the heart, subduing the passions, regulating the affections, and producing universal benevolence and beneficence, as the fulfilling of the whole law; and that all professions, knowledge, and gifts, without this, are absolutely useless. But this Epistle contains no more than what is found in the thirteenth chapter, it would be an unparalleled monument of the Apostle's deep acquaintance with God; and so invaluable a part of the sum and substance of the gospel, left by God's mercy to the church, as a touchstone for the trial of errors, counterpoises of faith, and trial of avowances, to the end of time. Though this Epistle contains more local matter, and more matter of private application, than any other in the New Testament; and though, perhaps, it may possess less matter for general use than other parts of the Sacred Writings, yet it is both highly interesting and useful; gives an insight into several customs, and not a few forms of superstition, and circumstances relative to the discipline of the primitive church, which we can find nowhere else; shows us how many important things may, in a state of ignorance, or Christian infancy, be consistent with a sincere belief of the gospel, and a warm and zealous attachment to it; reads a very useful lesson to those who disturb the peace of society, and make schisms in the church of Christ; and confirms, illustrates, and defends many of the most important parts of Christian doctrine and practice. [—Bagster.]

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS.

THAT St. Paul was the author of this Epistle has never been doubted, and is amply confirmed by internal evidence; from which it appears, that it was written by the Apostle in Macedonia, and probably at Philippi, as the subscription affirms, after the manner at Ephesus, about a year after the preceding, and in consequence of the arguments which he had conveyed of the favorable reception of the first; and afterwards sent to the Corinthians by Titus and his associates. Accordingly the Apostle identifies himself from the charge of levity, or worldly policy, in delaying his journey to Corinth, assigning those reasons for this part of his conduct which could not have been disclosed with propriety till the effect of his former epistle had appeared, declares the justice of his sentence against the incestuous person, and gives suitable directions respecting his restoration; expatiates on his own conduct in the Christian ministry; intimates many exhortations with the approval of his motives and fervent affections in the sacred work; exerts them with great address and earnestness, to complete their exertions for their now brethren in Judea, showing the manifold advantages of such services; contrasts more directly, yet evidently, with great rebuke, his own gifts, labours, sufferings, and conduct, with the pretences of their false teachers, showing himself to be "not a whit" inferior to any of the apostles, and concludes with various admonitions and affectionate good wishes and prayers. [—Bagster.]

CHAPTER I.

^e The apostle encourages them against troubles, by the comforts and deliverances which he had given them, as in all his epistles, & so particularly in his late danger in Asia. 12. And calling into his own conscience, and the 13 to witness of his sincere manner of preaching the immutable truth of the gospel, 15 he excels his not coming to them, as proceeding out of lightness, but of his lenity towards them.

PAUL, an apostle ^a of Jesus Christ by the will of God, and Timothy ^b our brother, unto the church of God which is at Corinth, with all the saints ^c which are in all Achaia:

2 Grace ^d be to you and peace from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

3 Blessed ^e be God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies, and the God of all comfort;

4 Who comforteth us in all our tribulation, that we may be able to comfort them which are in any trouble by the comfort, wherewith we ourselves are comforted of God.

5 For as the sufferings ^f of Christ abound in us, so our consolation also aboundeth by Christ.

6 And whether we be afflicted, it is for ^g your consolation and salvation, which is ^h effectual in the enduring of the same sufferings which we also suffer: or whether we be comforted, it is for your consolation and salvation.

7 And our hope of you is steadfast, knowing, that as ⁱ ye are partakers of the sufferings, so shall ye be also of the consolation.

8 For we would not, brethren, have you ignorant of our trouble ^j which came to us in Asia, that we were pressed out of measure, above strength, inasmuch that we despaired even of life:

9 But we had the sentence of death in ourselves, that we should not trust ^k in ourselves, but in God which raiseth the dead:

10 Who ^l delivered us from so great a death, and doth deliver: in whom we trust that he will yet deliver us;

11 Ye also helping ^m together by prayer for CHAP. I. Ver. 1—24. Paul, after his usual apostolical benediction, thanks God on behalf of the Corinthian church, and encourages them under their trials.—This Epistle, as stated in our Table of Apostolical Epistles, appears to have been written within a year after the preceding; and probably, as mentioned at the end of it, from Philippi in Macedonia. To understand this Epistle rightly, the reader must be informed, that Titus, who seems to have been the bearer of the first Epistle, as well as of this, (chap. viii. 17, 18,) spent some time in Corinth, in order to obtain a correct knowledge of the state and circumstances of that church, and of their feelings towards the apostle, which he communicated to him, when they met in Macedonia; and it is evident that upon his information, are founded both the commendations and reproofs in this epistle. But these are not all to be considered as addressed to the same individuals; for it is clear that this church was composed of very heterogeneous materials—Jews and Gentiles, saints and hypocrites; and while some were entitled to Paul's warmest commendations, others merited his severest censures.

Dr. Doddridge remarks, that out of St. Paul's thirteen Epistles, eleven of them begin with exclamations of joy, praise, and thanksgiving, which fact sufficiently shows his amiable disposition, and the deep interest which the apostle felt in the prosperity and happiness of the churches. The doctrine here inculcated is also highly interesting and important, namely, that ministers, and even apostles, enjoy and endure, not only the common lot of joy and suffering in their own persons but, being public characters, both the afflictions which they endure, and the consolations which they enjoy, are all intended for the instruction and consolation of the church of Christ; that they (ministers) may be "able to comfort those who are in any trouble." And the advantage is reciprocal: ministers partake (ver. 11) in the prayers and sympathies of their people.

CHAP. I. Ver. 1. And Timothy.—By this it appears that Timothy had returned to Paul in Macedonia, and was now with him.

Ver. 5. The sufferings of Christ.—Mocknight, "for Christ." Doddridge explains it, "sufferings in the cause of Christ."

Ver. 9. The sentence of death.—Meaning that death was fully expected by them.

Ver. 10. So great.—Mocknight, "So terrible,"—a death.

Ver. 11. Ye also helping together by prayer.—Doddridge, "Working together in prayer."—That for the gift bestowed upon us.—Doddridge, "That so the favour obtained for us by the important prayers of many."

Ver. 12. In simplicity and godly sincerity.—Gr, "In the simplicity and sincerity of God; i. e. in the sight of God." On the latter word Leigh says, "A use word." It is a metaphor, either from such things as are tried by being

A. M. cir.
A. D. cir.
5s

a 1&2Ti 1:1

b Phil 1:1

c Col 1:2

d Eph 1:3

e Col 1:21

f e 4:15

g or, wrought

h Rom 17:2

i Ac 19:23, &c

j or, en-suer

k Je 17:5,7

l 2 Pe 2:9

m Ro 15:20

n Phil 1:19

o Ja 5:16, 18

p 1 Co 2:4, 13

q 1 Co 15:10

r Phil 4:1

s or, grace

t Ac 2:5

u e 10:2

v or, preaching

w Mat 5:37

x Mat 11:4

y Ro 15:8,9

z He 1:8

a 2 Th 2:17

b 1 Pe 5:10

c 1 Th 2:20

d Re 3:18

e Ep 1:13, 17

f 2 Ti 2:19

g Ro 8:9,11

h 16

us, that for the gift bestowed upon us by the means of many persons thanks may be given by many on our behalf.

12 For our rejoicing is this, the testimony of our conscience, that in simplicity and godly sincerity, not ^a with fleshly wisdom, but by the grace of ^b God, we have had our conversation in the world, and more abundantly to your ward.

13 For we write none other things unto you, than what ye read or acknowledge; and I trust ye shall acknowledge even to the end;

14 As also ye have acknowledged us in part, that ^c we are your rejoicing, even as ye also are ours in the day of the Lord Jesus.

15 And in this confidence I was minded to come unto you before, that ye might have a second ^d benefit;

16 And to pass by you into Macedonia, and to come again out of Macedonia unto you, and of you to be brought on my ^e way toward Judea.

17 When I therefore was thus minded, did I use lightness? or the things that I purpose, do I purpose according ^f to the flesh, that with me there should be yea yea, and nay nay?

18 But as God is true, our ^g word toward you was not ^h yea and nay.

19 For the ⁱ Son of God, Jesus Christ, who was preached among you by us, even by me and Silvanus and Timotheus, was not yea and nay, but in him was yea.

20 For all the promises of God ^j in him are yea, and in him Amen, unto the glory of God by us.

21 Now he which establisheth ^k us with you in Christ, and hath anointed ^l us, is God;

22 Who hath also sealed ^m us, and given the earnest of the Spirit ⁿ in our hearts.

23 Moreover I call God for a record upon

As an instance of this, St. Paul appears to advert to the opposition he had met with in Ephesus, when he was in danger of being torn to pieces by the mob that Demetrius had raised, (Acts xix. 29, 31 &c) when his friends, as he acknowledges, interested themselves for him in prayer to God, as well as by their personal exertions on his behalf.

"The consolation of which the apostle speaks" so strongly in this chapter, says Dr. Mocknight very justly, "was derived from the presence of Christ with him in his affliction; from a sense of the love of Christ shed abroad in his heart; from the joy which the success of the gospel gave him; from the assured hope of the reward which was prepared for him; from his knowledge of the influence of his sufferings to encourage others; and from the enlarged views which he had of the government of God, whereby all things are made to work together for good to them who love him."

But the concluding verses of this chapter are of peculiar interest and importance, and must not be passed without a remark, or two.—5 We note the stability of the gospel: all the promises of God are in him, [Christ], yea, i. e. plainly asserted; and in him, amen, or faithfully accomplished, "to the glory of God."—2, 16. By the earnest of the Spirit in our hearts, we understand those divine influences which our Lord promised to all believers, to guide them into truth and righteousness; and which may properly be considered as an "earnest" of those higher influences which shall finally prepare them for heaven and glory. "As we are born again by the Spirit, (says Bishop Pearson) and receive from him our regeneration, so we are assured by the same Spirit of our adoption; and because, being 'sons,' we are also 'heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ,' by the same Spirit we have the pledge, or rather 'the earnest of our inheritance.' For 'He which establisheth us in Christ, and hath anointed us, is God, who hath also sealed us, and hath given the earnest of his Spirit held up against the beams of the sun, to see what faults are in them; or else from such things as are purged and clarified by the heat of the sun from the gross matter that is in them. Met. sincerus, is lucy sine cinis, or without wax."—Conversation—That is, "we have conducted ourselves;" for anastrophe in Greek, and conversatio in Latin are used to denote the whole of a man's conduct, his tone and character of his life.—Egester.

Ver. 13. To what ye read—i. e. in the Scriptures; but as the word is ambiguous, Doddridge explains it, "Than what you know."

Ver. 15. A second benefit.—Gr, "peace," or gift; meaning the advantage of Paul's personal ministry a second time.

Ver. 17. Yea yea, &c—That is, honest and plain dealing.

Ver. 18. Our record—Meaning the word preached.—Not yea and nay. Not wavering, uncertain, or contradictory. So Doddridge.

my soul, that to spare you I came not as yet unto Corinth.
21 Not for that we have dominion over your faith, but are helpers of your joy: for by faith ye stand.

CHAPTER II.

Having showed the reasons why he came not to them, he requests them to forgive and to excommunicate 1 person, 10 even as himself also upon his free penitence had long since done: 12 declaring what why he departed from Troas to Macedonia, 14 and the happy success which God gave to his preaching in all places.

BUT I determined this with myself, that I would not come again to you in heaviness.

2 For if I make you sorry, who is he then that maketh me glad, but the same which is made sorry by me?

3 And I wrote this same unto you, lest, when I came, I should have sorrow from them of whom I ought to rejoice; having confidence in you all, that my joy is the joy of you all.

4 For out of much affliction and anguish of heart I wrote unto you with many tears; not that ye should be grieved, but that ye might know the love which I have more abundantly unto you.

5 But if any have caused grief, he hath not grieved me, but in part: that I may not overcharge you all.

6 Sufficient to such a man is this punishment, which was inflicted of many.

7 So that contrariwise ye ought rather to forgive him, and comfort him, lest perhaps such a one should be swallowed up with overmuch sorrow.

8 Wherefore I beseech you that ye would confirm your love toward him.

9 For to this end also did I write, that I might

A M. dir. 11. cir 55.
b 1 Co 3.5. 1 Pe 5.3.
c Ro 11.20. 1 Co 15.1.
d A 1.21. 12.20,21. 13.10.
e 11.2.
f 1 Co 5.4,5. 1 Ti 5.20.
g Ga 6.1.
h e 7.15.
i or, rebuke.
j Ac 16.8.
k 1 Co 10.19.
l e 7.5,6.
m Ro 8.37.
n Co 1.3.
o 1 Co 1.18.
p Ju 9.39. 11 Pe 2.7,8.
q e 3.5,6.
r or, deal discreetly with.
s Ac 11.27.
t or, of.
u e 5.19.
v Ac 15.27.

know the proof of you, whether ye be obedient in all things.

10 To whom ye forgive any thing, I forgive also: for if I forgave any thing, to whom I forgave it, for your sakes forgave I it in the person of Christ;

11 Lest Satan should get an advantage of us: for we are not ignorant of his devices.

12 Furthermore, when I came to Troas to preach Christ's gospel, and a door was opened unto me of the Lord, 13 I had no rest in my spirit, because I found not Titus my brother: but taking my leave of them, I went from thence into Macedonia.

14 Now thanks be unto God, which always causeth us to triumph in Christ, and maketh manifest the savour of his knowledge by us in every place.

15 For we are unto God a sweet savour of Christ, in them that are saved, and in them that perish:

16 To the one we are the savour of death unto death; and to the other the savour of life unto life. And who is sufficient for these things?

17 For we are not as many, which corrupt the word of God: but as of sincerity, but as of God, in the sight of God speak we in Christ.

CHAPTER III.

1 Lest their false teachers should charge him with vain glory, he sheweth the faith and graces of the Corinthians to be a sufficient commendation of his ministry. 6 Whereupon entering a comparison between the ministers of the law and of the gospel, 12 he proveth that his ministry is so far the more excellent, as the gospel of life and liberty is more glorious than the law of condemnation.

DO we begin again to commend ourselves? or need we, as some others, epistles of in our hearts. . . . The Spirit of God, as given unto us in this life, (continues that excellent prelate,) though it have not the proper nature of a pledge, as in the gifts received here being no way equivalent to the promised reward, nor given in the stead of any thing already due; yet it is to be looked upon as an earnest, being part of that reward which is promised.

CHAP. II. Ver. 1-17. The reasons that Paul had not come to Corinth—the cause of the person excommunicated—the triumph of Paul's ministry.—If we understand the opening of this chapter, it is to this effect: That he delayed coming to the Corinthians, lest, from what he had heard of them, he should be compelled to treat them with severity, and thereby grieve them; at the same time nothing would give him more joy than to see the penitence of the offenders; and he had no doubt but the whole church would rejoice with him. He then adverts to the case of the person whom, according to his direction in the first Epistle, (chap. v.) they had excommunicated from the church for the complicated crimes of incest and adultery; but who now seemed so deeply to have bewailed his situation, that the same apostle, who before urged his exclusion from the church, now exhorts them to forgive and comfort him, lest Satan should gain advantage over them, by driving him to despair; and, at the same time, lest the false teachers should also take advantage, by representing (as many have since done) the doctrines of St. Paul as having that fatal tendency.

The chapter closes with a hymn of thanksgiving, and an allusion to a Roman triumph. According to Macknight, the apostle represents Christ as a victorious general, riding in a triumphal procession through the world, attended by his apostles, prophets, evangelists, and other ministers of the gospel, and followed by all the idolatrous nations as his captives. (Compare Rev. vi. 2; xiv. 11, &c.) Among these preachers of the gospel diffused the smell [savour] of the knowledge of Christ, [in a manner as fragrant flowers and perfumes were liberally scattered in a Roman triumph.] This knowledge, to those who believed, was [“a savour of life,” or] a vivifying smell, [or savour,] ending in life to them; but to unbelievers, it was as little fragrant or grateful as the odours of the procession to those condemned to die (as were many of the captives, in the close of the procession: it was a smell [or savour] of death, [to unbelievers,] ending in death, if they continued in unbelief.” Thus, in the success of the gospel, we have triumphs of grace in those who are thereby converted; and triumphs of justice, in those who obstinately reject it, to their own condemnation and ruin. In both cases, however, the faithful servants of Christ are accepted and approved; because their labours, however weak without divine support, are sincere and upright, as in the sight of God.

Ministers, it has been justly remarked, should diffuse the savour of Christ in their example and their conversation, as well as in their public ministry.

“When one that holds communion with the skies, Has filled his urn where these pure waters rise, And once more mingles with us menial things, ‘Tis even as if an angel shook his wings; bounded fragrance fills the current vale, That tells us whence his treasures are supplied.”—Copeley.

But to God himself faithful ministers “are a sweet savour of Christ [both] in them that are saved, and in them that perish.”—“We serve a good Master, (says an eloquent and able preacher.) Duty only is ours; and even with regard to this, he allows us to depend upon him for ability to discharge it; and in estimating our services, he adverts into the account, not only all that we do, but all that we intend and wish to do, but in which we are hindered; and says, ‘It is well that it was in thine heart.’”

CHAP. III. Ver. 1-18. The ministry of the gospel commended in preference to the law.—The false teachers and sectarian leaders had probably introduced themselves at Corinth by letters of recommendation, artfully obtained from some of the churches in Judea; but Paul had better credentials. He

Ver. 23. To spare you, I came not as yet unto Corinth.—e. As Doddridge explains it, it was from tenderness towards the Corinthians.—So Macknight, “To avoid punishing you, I have not as yet come to Corinth,”—wishing to give you time to repent.

Ver. 24. Not that we have dominion over your faith.—The apostles were only servants of Christ, and had no authority but what they derived from him, and from the teachings of the Holy Spirit.—See Mat. xx. 25.

CHAP. II. Ver. 1. In heaviness.—Doddridge, “in grief.”

Ver. 2. (We) but the same that is made sorry by me 1.—Doddridge, “grieved for us.”

Ver. 3. The joy of you all.—i. e. you all rejoice with me.

Ver. 5. Not grieved me, but in part.—i. e. “not grieved me (only) but in part,” or in a degree, all of you.

Ver. 6. This punishment.—Doddridge, “rebuke.”—Inflicted of many.—Namely, according to Doddridge, “by the whole church.”

Ver. 10. For your sakes.—i. e. to restore peace and union to your body.—Of Christ.—i. e. clothed with his authority.

Ver. 11. Lest Satan should get an advantage of us.—Macknight, “That we may not be over-reached by Satan.”

Ver. 13. I had no rest.—because I found not Titus.—When we had sent to Corinth to make inquires, and who had not returned.

Ver. 14. Causeth us to triumph.—[“Who causeth us, along in triumph,” an allusion to the custom of victorious generals, who, in their triumphal processions, carried some of their relatives with them in their chariot.—The savour of his knowledge.—In triumphs, the streets, through which the victor passed, were strewn with flowers; the temples were opened, and every altar smoked with offerings and incense, so that the whole city was filled with the perfume. Behind the triumphal car followed the kings, princes, and other captives of note, loaded with chains; some of whom were put to death at the close of the procession, and others had their lives granted them.” To the former the smell of the flowers and incense would be “a savour of death unto death,” and to the latter, “a savour of life unto life.”—1 Peter.

Ver. 17. Which corrupt.—Doddridge, “adulterate.” He thinks it refers to those who deal in wines and other liquors, and often lower them with water.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1. Do we—Macknight, “Must we”—begin again to commend ourselves?—i. e. to produce afresh the evidence of our apostleship.

See 1st Ep. chap. ix.

commendation to you, or letters of commendation from you?

2 Ye are our epistle written in our hearts, known and read of all men:

3 Forasmuch as ye are manifestly declared to be the epistle of Christ ministered by us, written not with ink, but with the Spirit of the living God; not in tables of stone, but in fleshy tables of the heart.

4 And such trust have we through Christ to God-ward:

5 Not that we are sufficient of ourselves to think any thing as of ourselves; but our sufficiency is of God;

6 Who also hath made us able ministers of the new testament; not of the letter, but of the spirit: for the letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life.

7 But if the ministration of death, written and engraven in stones, was glorious, so that the children of Israel could not steadfastly behold the face of Moses for the glory of his countenance; which glory was to be done away:

8 How shall not the ministration of the spirit be rather glorious?

9 For if the ministration of condemnation be glory, much more doth the ministration of righteousness exceed in glory.

10 For even that which was made glorious had no glory in this respect, by reason of the glory that excelleth.

11 For if that which was done away was glorious, much more that which remaineth is glorious.

12 Seeing then that we have such hope, we use great plainness of speech:

A Mic. 4:2
A D. cir. 55

e 1 Co. 13:2
d Ex. 21:12

e Je. 31:33
e. 14, 19.

f Ju. 15:5
g 1 Co. 15:19

h 1 Pt. 2:13
i 1 Pt. 1:12

j Mat. 26:22
He. 5:6, 10

k Ro. 2:21, 22

l Ro. 1:15, 19, 20

m Ju. 6:43
Ro. 5:2

n 1 Pt. 2:13
29, 35

o Ro. 5:20, 21

p 1 Pt. 2:13
n. 1

q Ro. 10:4
r Ro. 11:7, 8, 25

s 1 Pt. 2:13
t 1 Co. 15:45

u Ro. 8:2
v 1 Co. 13:12

w Ro. 2:29
x Ps. 81:7

y 1 Pt. 2:13
z. 1

1 Pt. 2:13
1 Pt. 2:13

1 Pt. 2:13
1 Pt. 2:13

1 Pt. 2:13
1 Pt. 2:13

1 Pt. 2:13
1 Pt. 2:13

1 Pt. 2:13
1 Pt. 2:13

1 Pt. 2:13
1 Pt. 2:13

1 Pt. 2:13
1 Pt. 2:13

1 Pt. 2:13
1 Pt. 2:13

1 Pt. 2:13
1 Pt. 2:13

1 Pt. 2:13
1 Pt. 2:13

1 Pt. 2:13
1 Pt. 2:13

1 Pt. 2:13
1 Pt. 2:13

1 Pt. 2:13
1 Pt. 2:13

1 Pt. 2:13
1 Pt. 2:13

1 Pt. 2:13
1 Pt. 2:13

1 Pt. 2:13
1 Pt. 2:13

1 Pt. 2:13
1 Pt. 2:13

1 Pt. 2:13
1 Pt. 2:13

1 Pt. 2:13
1 Pt. 2:13

1 Pt. 2:13
1 Pt. 2:13

1 Pt. 2:13
1 Pt. 2:13

1 Pt. 2:13
1 Pt. 2:13

1 Pt. 2:13
1 Pt. 2:13

1 Pt. 2:13
1 Pt. 2:13

1 Pt. 2:13
1 Pt. 2:13

1 Pt. 2:13
1 Pt. 2:13

1 Pt. 2:13
1 Pt. 2:13

1 Pt. 2:13
1 Pt. 2:13

1 Pt. 2:13
1 Pt. 2:13

13 And not as Moses, which put a veil over his face, that the children of Israel could not steadfastly look to the end of that which is abolished:

14 But their minds were blinded: for until this day remaineth the same veil untaken away in the reading of the old testament; which veil is done away in Christ.

15 But even unto this day, when Moses is read, the veil is upon their heart.

16 Nevertheless when it shall turn to the Lord, the veil shall be taken away.

17 Now the Lord is that Spirit: and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty.

18 But we all, with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord.

CHAPTER IV.

I do declare how he hath used all sincerity and faithful diligence in preaching the gospel, 1 and how the troubles and persecutions which he daily endureth for the same, 2 (redound to the praise of God's power, 12) the benefit of the church, 16 and to the apostle's own eternal glory.

1 HEREFORE seeing we have this ministry, as we have received mercy, we faint not;

2 But have renounced the hidden things of dishonesty, not walking in craftiness, nor handling the word of God deceitfully; but by manifestation of the truth commending ourselves to every man's conscience in the sight of God.

3 But if our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost:

4 In whom the god of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them.

appeals to their own hearts in many of which he well knew his name was deeply inscribed: they had each an interest in the affections of the other. He appeals also to their experience: whatever evidence they possessed of their own conversion and sanctification, was to them a most forcible argument in his favour, since he had been the honoured instrument of their conversion. They were "the epistle of Christ," and "written by the Spirit of God," to whom he gives all the glory. On this passage, Dr. Watts beautifully remarks, that every true believer has in himself such a witness to the truth of the Christian religion, as does not depend on "the exact truth of letters and syllables, nor on the critical knowledge of the copies of the Bible, nor on this old manuscript, or the other new translation. . . . The substance of Christianity is so scattered through all the New Testament, that every manuscript and every translation has enough of the gospel to save souls by it, and make a man a Christian. I think this point of great importance in our age, which has taken so many steps to heathenism and infidelity; for this argument or evidence will feed a Christian in the profession of the true religion, though he may not have skill enough to defend his Bible. . . . Why do you believe in Jesus? [asks the unbeliever.] If you have this answer ready at hand, I have found the efficacy and power of the gospel in my heart, this will be sufficient to answer every cavil." (Watts's Sermons.)

This work of grace in the hearts of the Corinthians, the apostle considers as a letter of recommendation to them, far preferable to any epistle written with ink or engraven on stone. He is careful, however, that nothing should be attributed to himself, but that all his success should be referred to God, by whose grace alone both himself and his colleagues had been made able and efficient ministers of the New Testament, (or covenant,) not of the Old, the letters of which were cut in tables of stone, but of the Spirit; that is, the spiritual dispensation of the gospel, the truths of which are written upon the hearts of all true Christians. The letter of the divine law could, indeed, only give the knowledge of sin and its penalty—death; but the latter was, on the contrary, adapted to communicate life and spirit—It is "the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus." (Rom. vii. 2.)

That ministration was, indeed, attended with some glory, a glory with which the countenance of the legislator (Moses) was emblematically surrounded; still, however, it was the ministration of death, for it could not give life; but, notwithstanding that dispensation was not without glory, how much more glorious must that be which communicates eternal life! Moses found it necessary to wear a veil, and to this day his law is veiled by the unbelief of his nation; nor shall that veil be taken from their hearts till they shall turn to the Lord Jesus as the true Messiah, who is himself the soul and spirit of the new dispensation; by whom we are liberated from the bondage of the law and the obscurity of the types. Indeed, as Moses, by looking to the glory of the Shechinah, was himself clothed with glory, so we, beholding in the gospel, as in a resplendent mirror, the glory of the Lord Jesus, are changed into the same image, from one degree of grace and glory to another, till, by his spirit, we are completely transformed into our Redeemer's glorious image.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1—18. The sincerity, trials, and triumphs of Paul and his brethren.—Having, in the preceding chapter, stated the superior excellence of the gospel above the law, St. Paul here states the encouragement which he and his brethren derived therefrom in its promulgation. Having thereby obtained mercy themselves, they were anxious, at all risks, to preach it for the salvation of others, and determined to do it with the greatest simplicity and integrity. If, indeed, their gospel was hidden beneath a veil, it should not be by any artifice of theirs. They would not leave it concealed under the veil of Mosaic types and ceremonies, to which the Judaizing teachers were prone to return, nor would they veil it with the false philosophy of the Greeks or Asiatics; neither would they adulterate or debase it by any dishonest arts, such as vintners

Ver. 2. Ye are our epistle written in our hearts.—By supposing that in this passage the apostle calls the Corinthians, not Christ's letter of recommendation in favour of him, but a copy of that letter, and that the letter itself was written on the apostle's heart, but the copy of it on the hearts of the Corinthians, all the force of metaphors in this highly figurative passage, will be removed. Christ's letter of recommendation in favour of the apostle was his own glorious conversion and faithful labours. &c.—MacKnight.

Ver. 3. Forasmuch as.—The supplementary words, so far, are omitted by Doddridge, who reads, "Ye are manifest as" &c.

Ver. 4. To God-ward.—i. e. towards God.

Ver. 5. To think any thing as of ourselves.—Doddridge, "to reckon upon any thing as from ourselves."

Ver. 6. Of the new testament.—Or "covenant."—See Introduction to the New Testament, § 1.

Ver. 7. The ministration of death.—See Rom. vii. 10.

Ver. 8. How much more shall the ministration of the spirit be glorious?—Doddridge, "How much more shall the ministration of the spirit be glorious?"

Ver. 11. Done away.—Doddridge, "abolished," namely, the Mosaic law of types, &c.

Ver. 13. Moses, which put a veil over his face.—See Exod. xxxiv. 35.—That which is abolished.—Namely, the Mosaic law.

Ver. 14. Their minds were blinded.—See Rom. xi. 8.

Ver. 15. But even unto this day.—This blindness unhappily extends even to our day.

Ver. 16. When?—Namely, the heart of the Jewish nation.—MacKnight.

Ver. 17. Now the Lord is that Spirit.—The Lord Christ is that Spirit, (ver. 6.) He is the blessed Author and Instigator of that spiritual economy we are now under.

Ver. 18. As in a glass.—i. e. in a mirror. See 1 Co. xiii. 12, and note. CHAP. IV. Ver. 2. Response.—MacKnight, "The most exact rendering."

Ver. 3. If our gospel be hid, it is hid.—Doddridge, MacKnight, &c., "If veiled, it is veiled." Compare chap. iii. 13—16.

Ver. 4. The image of God.—See Heb. i. 3.

5 For we preach not ourselves, but Christ Jesus the Lord; and ourselves your servants for Jesus' sake.

6 For God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ.

7 But we have this treasure in earthen vessels, that the excellency of the power may be of God, and not of us.

8 We are troubled on every side, yet not distressed; we are perplexed, but not in despair;

9 Persecuted, but not forsaken; cast down, but not destroyed;

10 Always bearing about in the body the dying of the Lord Jesus, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our body.

11 For we which live are always delivered unto death for Jesus' sake, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our mortal flesh.

12 So then death worketh in us, but life in you.

13 We having the same spirit of faith, according as it is written, I believed, and therefore have I spoken; we also believe, and therefore speak;

14 Knowing that he which raised up the Lord Jesus shall raise up us also by Jesus, and shall present us with you.

15 For all things are for your sakes, that the

A M cor
102
A D 10
53
g 10 13
h it is he who hath
i 1 Co 25,
1 e 7 5
k or, not altogether without help of means l Ga 6 17
m 2 Co 2 11, 12
n 1 Co 15
31, 49
o e 13 9
p 2 Pe 1 11
q P 116 10
r P 1 1
s 1 Th 5 1, 2
22
t e 3 19
u 1 Co 15 55
v R 7 22
w Ro 1 15, 24
x He 1 1
y 1 J 4 19
z 1 Pe 1 13, 15
a 1 Pe 1 4
b Ro 8 23
c Ro 8 18
10, 15
d 1 Co 15 51

abundant grace might through the thanksgiving of many redound to the glory of God.

16 For which cause we faint not; but though our outward man perish, yet the inward man is renewed day by day.

17 For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory;

18 While we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen: for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal.

CHAPTER V.

1 That in his assured hope of immortal glory, and in expectation of it, and of the general judgment, he laboured to keep a quiet conscience, 12 that the heavy burden of himself, 14 but as one that having received life from Christ, are disinterested to live as a new creature to Christ only, 18 and 15 his ministry of reconciliation to reconcile the others also to Christ in his life.

FOR we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle be dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.

2 For in this we groan, earnestly desiring to be clothed upon with our house which is from heaven:

3 If so be that being clothed we shall not be found naked.

4 For that that are in this tabernacle do groan, being burdened: not for that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life.

of those times (as well as of our own) were known to practice. If the gospel they preached was veiled, it was veiled only to those who were perishing through their own obstinacy and unbelief: whose minds Satan, "the god of this world," hath blinded, "lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ should shine upon them."

Here observe—1. That God and Satan are placed in contrast: the latter darkens the understanding by his influences, whence the Jews call him Satanol, the god who blinds; but the true God, on the contrary, illuminates the understanding of men by the grace of his Holy Spirit. [He is light, and in him is no darkness.] 2. That this work of illumination in the mind is compared to the first creation of "light out of darkness," as being wrought in the same sovereign, efficacious, and instantaneous manner."—(Hos. Def.)

When Satan is, however, called the "god of this world," we must not understand it as conferring upon him any title of honour, any more than our Lord's calling him "the prince of this world," (John xii. 31,) conferred on him a rightful dominion. As a prince he is a usurper, and as a deity an idol: he is a prince without right, and a god without divinity.

When the apostle says, "We preach not ourselves," the declaration may be fairly understood to imply that they sought neither to gratify their vanity, nor promote their secular interest, nor to raise a religious party; by all which motives, it is to be feared, the Judaizing teachers who opposed him were more or less influenced. The apostles preached not to advance their fame, their interest, or their authority; but as the faithful servants of Christ, solely to promote the glory of their Master and the salvation of mankind. "For our parts, (as if he had said,) we are but frail and earthen vessels, of little value and of less strength; yet, worthless as we are, to us is committed the invaluable treasure of the gospel; and we, therefore, in the midst (though continually exposed to death) of dangers and of enemies, are preserved that we may be to you the means and instruments of eternal life and salvation."

Ver. 7. In earthen vessels—In frail creatures, constitutionally exposed to be crushed and broken. The original (tektonika) seems to be derivation to refer to the shells of fishes, some of which while they are extremely frail, in close treasures of "latent virtue," as the shell of the porphyry from which fish was exhaled the famous Tyrian dye.—May 15 of God—Doddridge, "up per hole of God."

Ver. 8. Troubled on every side, yet not distressed—We conceive "troubled" on every side, but not crushed," would be more literal and expressive. Humanity and Mortality think it refers to the weaknesses in the public games, who sometimes so grouped their adversaries, as to deprive them of the power of resistance.

Ver. 9. Cast down, but not destroyed—Another allusion, perhaps, to wrestlers who might be thrown down when not killed, "nor" "died of."

Ver. 10. The dying—That is, marks of sufferings analogous to his. See chap. i. 5, 6, and compare these verses with 1 Epist. chap. ii. 11–13.

Ver. 12. Death worketh in us—i. e. "we are dying daily that you may live."

Ver. 13. Knowing that, &c.—That is, we regard not the sufferings of our bodies, however fatal, since we know that, if killed, our bodies shall be raised again at the last day. See 1 Epist. ch. 19 &c.

Ver. 15. Light affliction—Mat. xi. 29, the same epithet, "light," is applied by our Lord to the yoke and burden which he lays on us. It may be light because it may be suffering—but both are light extremely so, compared with the reward.—Light affliction—&c. (From this passage the eloquent Chrysostom remarks, that the apostle here "admonishes those present, by thus putting a nimble foot into lightness to weight affliction to glory, not to be satisfied with this, but to add another word, and doubles it, saying, happier be upon heaven, (so the Greek,) that is, 'a greatness excessively exceeding.'")—

The apostle then states what it was that supported him and his colleagues under all their trials—it was looking from things temporal to things eternal; and weighing against their present momentary afflictions, a vast, accumulating, and eternal weight of glory.

And wake through death to endless life above.—Paine, 11.

CHAP. V. VER. 1–10. The desire of immortality, the expectation of a future judgment, and the practical influence of these doctrines.—In the opening of this chapter the apostle draws a beautiful comparison between the feeble body which we here inhabit, and which he compares to a tent—which is a temporary erection easily removed; and the permanent habitation—the everlasting mansions which our Saviour is gone to prepare for all his people. This tent of human flesh is far from weather-proof: it is liable to cracks, and rents, or (to drop the metaphor) it is exposed to a variety of mortal ills, as well as to the attacks of evil enemies. We, therefore, "groan, being burdened," not merely from a desire to rid ourselves of "this mortal coil," but from a desire to enter into that immortal residence which is provided for us in another world—where into Christ, our fore-runner, is for us entered.

We here pause a few moments to remark upon the evidence which this chapter affords of an intermediate state between death and judgment. Dr. Sam. Clarke, in a judicious discourse from this text, remarks—"1. That we must all shortly be absent of a part from the body. 2. That this state is not a state of absolute insensibility; but, 3. to good men, a state of great happiness, a being present with the Lord. 4. The consideration of this intermediate happiness is a great comfort and support against the fear of death; we are confident, and willing rather to be absent from the body, &c. 5. This intermediate state, though a state of happiness, is by no means equal to that happiness which good men shall be possessed of after the resurrection." (See Robinson's Claude.)

Of these propositions we shall here offer some confirmatory

Weight of glory—This is a Hebrew noun, the same word which in that language signifies weight, signifies also glory.

Ver. 15. Who are looking—The word, starein (says Macknight) properly signifies to look at a mark which we intend to hit.—to aim—so Lechler.

CHAP. V. VER. 11. Our earthly house of this tabernacle—The Hebrew term for "house" (domos) is of very extensive use. It is used for a tent, Gen. xxv. 15; compare Heb. vi. 9. Mr. Parsons says, "The Persians call a richly ornamented tent a house of gold." Macknight remarks this verse, "When our house which is a tent is destroyed." So the Greek phrase (tena) is used for temple in Job. x. 22, 1 J. i. 10. 2. We also prefer "destroyed" to "dissolved," because the word strictly means to break or throw down, or pull to pieces, which is peculiarly applicable to a tent. (See 1 Peter.) The word having lost the metaphorical use of the body, "The tented house" or a tabernacle, &c. is not erected for a shelter for a time, and a house of permanent abode, is very striking.—Forster.

Ver. 2. For in this tabernacle of tents we groan earnestly desiring to be clothed—To be clothed with a house (says a bas) from tents (as is quite in the Jewish taste). The Rabbi Zelman on Exod. x. 36, says, Moses was "clothed with the cloud," so we read in the book of Revelations of an angel "clothed with a cloud," and of a woman "clothed with the sun" (Rev. x. 1, vi. 17). The word "house," is also used for a part of dress, a veil is the "house of the face," a kerchief the "house of the eyes." The sacred writers also use the term clothed, as we do in Job. x. 36, so they speak of being clothed with lambs' skin or with shame (1 Pet. v. 5, 18, xxvi. 36) much as we talk of a habit of virginity or of a veil, and not only so, but they speak of being "clothed with righteousness," or "with truth" (1 J. 3. 18, 21, 24). Ezek. xxxi. 16, a god is clothed in holiness in a habit of all the work of the war-horse is described as being "clothed with thunder." (Job xxxix. 19.)

5 Now he that hath wrought ^f us for the self-same thing ^{is} God, who also hath given unto us the earnest ^g of the Spirit.

6 Therefore ^{we} are always confident, knowing that, whilst we are at home in the body, we are absent from the Lord :

7 (For ^h we walk by faith, not by sight :)

8 We are confident, ^I say, and ⁱ willing rather to be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord.

9 Wherefore we ^{labour}, that, whether present or absent, we may be accepted of him.

10 For ^k we must all appear before the judgment-seat of Christ; that every one may receive ^l the things ^{done} in ^{his} body, according to that he hath done, whether ^{it} be good or bad.

11 Knowing therefore the terror ^m of the Lord, we persuade men; ^{but} ⁿ we are made manifest unto God; and ^I trust also are made manifest in your consciences.

12 For ^o we commend not ourselves again

A. M. cir. 4062.
A. D. cir. 53.
f is 28, 29.
g Ep 1 14.
h Ro 8 24, 25.
i Phil 1 23.
j endog. bur.
k Ro 14 10.
l c 7 3.
m Ju 10 31.
n Jude 23.
o c 4 2.
c 3 1.
p the fore.
q c 11 16, 17.
r Ca 8 6.
s Ro 5 15.
t 1 Co 6 19, 20.
u tr him be.
v Ju 3 3.
w Ga 6 15.
x Is 65 17.
y It 21 5.

unto you, but give you occasion to glory on our behalf, that ye may have somewhat to answer them which glory in ^p appearance, and not in heart.

13 For whether we be beside ^q ourselves, ^{it} is to God : or whether we be sober, ^{it} is for your cause.

14 For the love of Christ ^r constraineth us; because we thus judge, that if one died for all, then ^s were all dead :

15 And ^{that} he died for all, that ^t they which live should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto him which died for them, and rose again.

16 Wherefore henceforth know we no man after the flesh : yea, though we have known Christ after the flesh, yet now henceforth know we ^{him} no more.

17 Therefore if any man ^{be} in Christ, ^u he is a new ^v creature : old things are passed away, ^w behold, all things are become new.

proofs. 1. That there is an intermediate state is clear; for, when we are "absent from the body," we are "present with the Lord;" and, 2. that it is not a state of mere insensibility is most evident, from the parable of the rich man and Lazarus, on which see our expos. of Luke xvi. 19—31. 3. That it is a state of happiness to good men may be safely inferred from our Lord's promise to the penitent thief, when on the cross; on which turn also to our expos. of Luke xxiii. 39—43; as also from the dying words of Stephen, Acts vi. 29. 4. That the consideration of this intermediate state was a great support to Paul himself, is abundantly evident from his desiring to "depart and be with Christ," which would be very unaccountable if he did not hope to meet with him till the resurrection, which it is evident from his own writings he did not expect for many years, if not many centuries, to come. See 2 Thess. ii. 1—12. This doctrine receives farther confirmation from chap. xii. 1—4. Phil. i. 20—23. 1 Peter i. 8, 9. Rev. ii. 7; vi. 9. And there are many passages in the devotional parts of the Old Testament, already noticed, which plainly indicate a like desire to be "absent from the body and present with the Lord," as Psalm lxxviii. 11, &c.

The practical influence of this doctrine, in exciting to diligence and activity, is a strong presumption of its truth, which may be farther strengthened by considering the benumbing consequences of the contrary hypothesis. Try the effect of telling a wicked man that he shall be punished at the end of a thousand years or more, and will it not harden him in sin? This is not the way in which the apostles preached the "terror of the Lord," in order to persuade men to repentance, (ver. 11.)

To that end the apostles urged the most important doctrine of a future judgment; and, instead of placing at a great and uncertain distance that awful period, bring it near: "The day of the Lord is at hand"—"The Judge standeth before the door," (Rom. xii. 3. James v. 9. Heb. ix. 27.)—And thus they might do with the greatest propriety, since the day of death is thus near, which we have reason to believe fixes the happiness or misery of every individual of mankind, by a scrutiny equally decisive, though not equally public, with the last judgment. Whether the passage now before us, (ver. 10.) refers to the former or latter event, we presume not to decide. The one will fix the other; for the decisions of the Supreme Judge admit neither of revision nor appeal.

Ver. 11—21. The constraining power of the love of Christ, and the doctrine of reconciliation.—St. Paul again assures the Corinthians of his affection towards them, notwithstanding all the insinuations of his enemies. What those insinuations were we can only gather from his replies: we may fairly infer, however, from ver. 13, that they brought against him a charge similar to that of Festus, that he was mad, though indeed they were not so polite as the governor, who attributed his derangement to excessive study, (Acts xxvi. 24.) He tells them, whether he and his condutors were beside (or carried beyond) themselves, it was to God, that is, in the promotion of his glory; and if they were sober and in good earnest, it was for their sakes: "For (saith he) the love of Christ constraineth us."—"Whether," says M. Superville, (a Lutheran divine), "we here understand the love of Christ towards us, or our love towards him, it is of little importance: we may join both together, for it is certain, that his love and ours must meet before our hearts are entirely captivated by him. It is his love that gives birth to a mutual affection in us: it is his fire that enkindles ours."—But the Corinthians might object, Why this zeal in your ministry? It arises from the conclusion, that "if one died for all, then were all dead." As our object is not theological controversy, we shall not think it necessary to enter into the question how far this term all here extends. Thus far is certain, that Christ died for both Jews and Gentiles—for men of all nations, of all characters, and all professions; and if he died for all these, then, certainly, they all were dead; and, if he died for them, it was that they should live to him: it is, therefore, that faithful ministers are so earnest for their conversion. Every thing in Christianity has a practical bearing, and the truth and importance of every doctrine may be fairly estimated by its tendency to promote the salvation of mankind.

St. Paul, therefore, laying aside all partialities, national, or sectarian, aims alone at the great object of personal conversion, which he presses upon all men as the main object of his apostolical commission—"Be ye reconciled to God."

It is worthy of observation, that the apostle here says nothing of reconciling God to man—that is not the work of men or angels. The God whom we offended reconciles us to himself through the Son of his love, and by means of his own appointment. "He hath made him to be for us a sin-offering, who himself knew no sin, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him;" or, in plain terms, that we might be accepted as righteous before God, for his sake.

When it is said, that "God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself," we interpret St. Paul by his divine Master, who teaches us, that "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." (John iii. 16.) So we understand St. Paul, that "God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself"—not that all the world should absolutely be saved, but those only who believe on him; for "he that believeth not is condemned already." (John iii. 18.)

The apostle next opens his official character: "God hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation."—Now, then, we are ambassadors for Christ; as though God did beseech (you) by us, we pray you, in Christ's stead, "Be ye reconciled to God." (Comp. Rom. v. 9—11.)

The great duty of ambassadors in foreign courts, is to preserve or restore peace; to remove obstacles, and prevent misunderstandings. God himself having restored peace by an act of grace to sinners, entrusts them, by his apostles and ministers in all succeeding ages, not to oppose nor to neglect this act of mercy; but since God is reconciled to man by the obedience and death of his Son, to receive and adore the offered mercy, and become cordially reconciled, not only to his gospel but to his law, to his providential government and to all his will: for if any man be reconciled to God through Christ, and become a real, and not a nominal Christian only, he is from henceforward a new creature, endowed with new sentiments, new tempers, and new feelings. The love of Christ purifies and elevates his affections, gives a new direction to

Ver. 5. The self-same thing.—Macknight, "This very (desire.)"—The earnest of the Spirit.—See chap. i. 22.

Ver. 6. Whilst we are at home in the body, we are absent.—Macknight, "from home"—from the Lord; i. e. while at our earthly, we are necessarily from our heavenly home.

Ver. 8. Absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord.—Macknight, "From home out of the body; and to be at home with the Lord."

Ver. 9. We labour.—Macknight, "Strive earnestly."—Dodgidge, "Make it the height of our ambition."—Whether present or absent.—Macknight, "Whether at home or from home."—"We may be accepted of him."—Macknight, "acceptable to him."

Ver. 10. Judgment-seat.—Dodgidge and Macknight, "Tribunal." See Mat. xxv. 31—46.

Ver. 11. The terror of the Lord.—That is, his terrible judgments against sin. See Heb. x. 31.

Ver. 12. In appearance.—i. e. in outward show, "putting (as we say) a good face on their conduct."

Ver. 13. To God.—Macknight, "For God;" i. e. for his glory.

Ver. 14. Then were all dead.—i. e. all for whom Christ died were under a sentence of condemnation, or it needed not that he should offer an atonement for them.

Ver. 15. Henceforth know we no man after the flesh.—i. e. we make no difference in our ministry as to Jews or Gentiles, rich or poor, &c., for all are equally guilty, and stand in need of the same mercy. See Rom. ii. 10, &c.

Ver. 17. A new creature.—Dodgidge, "There is) a new creation;" all things are in such a mind become new.

18 And all things are of God, who hath reconciled us ^a to himself by Jesus Christ, and hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation ;

19 To wit, that God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing their trespasses ^y unto them ; and hath ^z committed unto us the word of reconciliation.

20 Now then we are ^a ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us : we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God.

21 For ¹ he hath made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin ; that we might be made ² the righteousness of God in him.

CHAPTER VI.

1 Then he hath approved himself a faithful minister of Christ, both by his exhortations, 3 and by integrity of life, 4 and by patient enduring all kinds of affliction and tribulations for the gospel, 10-13 which he speaketh the more boldly amongst them, because his heart is open to them, 15 and he expecteth the like affection from them again. 16 Ext. "toe to see the society and pollution of debaters, as being themselves 'copies of the living to be'."

WE then, as workers ^a together with him, beseech you also that ye receive not the grace of God in ^b vain.

2 (For he saith, 'I have heard thee in a time accepted, and in the day of salvation have I succoured thee : behold, now is the accepted time ; behold, now is the day of salvation.')

3 Giving no ^d offence in any thing, that the ministry be not blamed:

4 But in all things * approving ourselves as the ministers ^f of God, in much patience, in afflictions, in necessities, in distresses,

5 In ^a stripes, in imprisonments, ^b in tumults,
in labours, in watchings, in fastings ;

6 By pureness, by knowledge, by long-suffering, by kindness, by the Holy Ghost, by love unfeigned.

7 By the word of truth, by the power of his energies and religious zeal, and opens to him prospects of celestial glory. At the same time, old prejudices, carnal principles, and sinful affections, subside and sink as the new creation rises.

"Mighty Redeemer, set us free
From our old state of sin;
O make our souls alive to thee;
Create new powers within!"—Watts.

CHAP. VI. Ver. 1-1st. Paul's affection to the Corinthians, and his earnest exhortation to them to avoid idolaters.—The apostle here beseeches his brethren, as fellow-labourers, not to neglect the special privileges bestowed on them, as ambassadors of Christ; and entreats all whom he addresses, not to neglect the golden opportunity alluded to them by the gospel of the grace of God, of seeking that salvation so long predicted, and so expensively accomplished in the sufferings and death of Christ. Here was a remedy of sovereign efficacy provided; and aggravated would be their guilt, who neglected and despised it; or if they delayed its application to their own case, when to-morrow, perhaps, it might be too late for ever. (See H-b, p. 3.)

He then reminds his brethren in the ministry of the labours and sufferings they were called to endure, of the holy dispositions with which they ought to be sustained, and of the several means to be employed to render them available to their great object, the salvation of mankind, and to render themselves acceptable to their great Master, who had him- self taken the same path of sufferings and of labour. After enumerating these things with great distinctness, he bursts out into a passionate expression of his affection for the Corinthians, and his extreme anxiety for their salvation: "O ye Corinthians, our heart is enlarged" with affection, and "our mouth is open" freely to express it. "Now, for a recompense"—in return, (as if he had said,) may your bowels, my dear children, be enlarged toward us! and express your affection, not in words only, but in a kind attention to our advice.

The apostle then goes on to guard his Christian converts against any unnecessary connexion with their heathen neigh-

Ver. 18. And all things are of God—The blessed and only Creator—not from man, nor from any earthly source.

Ver 20 Beseech you pray you — Macknight reads this singularly and Mac^{an}ne supplies the word "men."—In Christ's stead—"When Christ was in the world, he pressed this treaty of reconciliation; and we [his apostles and inferior ministers] rise up in his stead, to urge it still farther."

Ver. 21. Make him to be sin—Paddodge and Macknight render it, "a sin offering," and the latter remarks, "There are many passages in the Old Testament where sin means a sin offering, as Hos. iv. 8; also in the New Testament. Heb. ix. 26—29, x. 11."

CHAPTER VI. Ver 1. As workers together—The supplementary words, "with God" seem here unnecessary. Marknight renders it, "As fellow labourers." Some were able to give the grace of God to numerical gifts and others to "the gospel of the grace of God." See Gal. 1. 6. 1 Cor. xv. 10. Titus. ii. 11. Gifts Cause of God, part 1, §. 11. But we rather connect this with the close of the

A. M. cir 4002 | God, by the armour ^k of righteousness on the
A. D. cir 1500 | right hand and on the left,

8 By honour and dishonour, by evil report and good report: as deceivers, and yet true:

9 As ^u unknown, and yet well known; as dying, and, behold, we live; ⁿ as chastened, and not killed;

10 As sorrowful, yet always rejoicing; as poor, yet making many rich; as having nothing, and yet possessing all things.

11 O ye Corinthians, our mouth is open unto you, ^p our heart is enlarged,

12 Ye are not straitened in us, but ye are straitened in your own bowels.

13 Now for a recompense in the same, (I speak as unto my children,) be ye also enlarged:

11 Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness?

15 And what concord hath Christ with Pelial?
or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel?

De 7:3, 16
1 Pe 2:29
1 Th 1:9, 10
1 Th 2:17
1 Th 3:9
Eph 2:21, 22
Eph 2:45
1 Co 6:12
1 Co 10:14

16 And what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for ye ^{are} the temple of the living God; as God hath said, I ^{will} dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people.

17 Wherefore I come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you.

18 And ^u will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty.

bours, particularly in social or domestic life. First and principally, he guards them against matrimonial connections with unbelievers: "Be ye not unequally yoked;" in which there seems to be an allusion to the Mosaic law, which forbade plowing "with an ox and an ass together," (Deut. xxii. 10;) the one the most laborious, and the other the most slothful of all animals; meaning hereby, perhaps, to intimate, that a heathen partner, in this state, would be a drawback upon all Christian duties and exertions, and greatly retard the course of obedience to the gospel. This must be particularly the case, as to the two great points of family cohesion, and the education of children. 2. He objects to Christians having any communion in their idolatrous worship, and particularly the convivial feasts in their temples, on which he had largely treated in his first epistle, but not, as it should seem, with complete success. (See 1 Epist. viii. 4, &c.)

Now, from neither of these dangers are we exempt even in the present age. Many professors scruple not to marry into Roman Catholic families; not even with the solemn hope of bringing them to the reformed religion; but with the most perfect indifference whether they had any, or what religion, provided the prison and fortune of the party were agreeable. It is true, that we have no invitations to dine in Catholic chapels; but it is not uncommon for Protestants to be drawn into them, to witness the splendour of their worship, and to hear their music; and then, how few are there who have the courage to show they take no part in the idolatry? It is a favourite maxim with the world, that "when we are at Rome we must do as they do at Rome;" which evidently implies, that it is much better to conform to any idolatrous worship, than to be guilty of a breach of what is called "good manners."

On the subject of convivial meetings, we have already offered some remarks (on I Cor. x) which may apply in greater measure to fashionable visits and parties of pleasure, in which though neither Jupiter nor Mars be worshipped, the god of this world—the gods of fashion, of pleasure, and of chance, are unequivocally acknowledged and adored; and the zeal with which they are served may put to the blush the devotions of preceding chapter, thus — "Receive out [thi]s grace of God in Ann"—i. e. the favour of being appointed an emissary for God.

Ver 2. For he saith—i. e. Jehovah to Messiah. Isa xlv 8; compare Heb.

Ver 6 By the Holy Ghost — Mackinigt "By a holy (or sanctified) spirit," these being all equally the fruits of the Holy Spirit's influence.

Ver 7 The annual of righteousness — See Ephes vi 11 — is — On the

Ver. 1. The ultimate in righteousness—“Righteousness” is the right hand and on the left—“Armed at all points,” as we say; or perhaps this may allude to soldiers who were taught to use their swords with both hands—ambidextrous.

Ver 43 Now for a recompense in the same—i. e. in return for my kindness

Ver 16. What agreement hath the temple of God with idols?—See the history of Baalim 1 Sam. x. 2. 4.

CHAPTER VII.

1 He proceedeth in exhorting them to purity of life, 2 and 1 to bear him like affection as he doth to them. 3 Whered less he might seem to doubt, he declared what comfort he took in his affliction, by the epist which Titus gave of their godly sorrow, which his former epistle had wrought in them. 13 and of their loving-kindness and obedience towards Titus, answerable to his former exhortations of them.

HAVING therefore these ^a promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ^b ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God.

2 Receive us; we have wronged no man, we have corrupted no man, ^c we have defrauded no man.

3 I speak not this to condemn you: for I have said ^d before, that ye are in our hearts to die and live with you.

4 Great is my boldness of speech toward you, great is my glorying of you: I am filled with comfort, I am exceeding joyful ^e in all our tribulation.

5 For, when we were come into Macedonia, our flesh had no rest, but we were troubled on every side; without ^f were fightings, within were fears.

6 Nevertheless God, that comforteth those that are cast down, comforted us by the coming of ^g Titus;

7 And not by his coming only, but by the consolation wherewith he was comforted in you, when he told us your earnest desire, your mourning, your fervent mind toward me; so that I rejoiced the more.

8 For though I made you sorry with a letter, I do not repent, though I ^h did repent: for I perceive that the same epistle hath made you sorry, though it were but for a season.

9 Now I rejoice, not that ye were made sorry, but that ye sorrowed to repentance: for ye were made sorry ⁱ after a godly manner, that ye might receive damage by us in nothing.

many nominal Christians. And not only are we forbidden to form such associations, but when formed, we are expressly commanded to relinquish them. "Come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord."

CHAP. VII. Ver. 1-16. Paul's consolation in the Corinthians.—This chapter opens with a natural, forcible, and important inference from the last verses of the preceding. Seeing that God hath given us such "exceedingly great and precious promises," as St. Peter calls them, (2 Epist. i. 4.) we ought thereby to be animated to serve him with the more zeal and energy; and to labour to "cleanse ourselves from all filthiness (or pollution) of the flesh and the spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God." Not that we are able to cleanse ourselves by our own strength, much less perfectly: but as it was in the attempt of the lame man to stretch forth his hand, that he received strength, (Matt. xii. 13.) so in our endeavours to attain this holiness, we have good reason, and encouragement to expect the assistance of his Holy Spirit; and though we cannot attain perfection, yet it is only by aiming at it, that we can approach it. As to the distinction between the impurity of flesh and spirit, we conceive the former to consist in sensual affections, and the latter in pride of heart, which, however decent we may think it, is an abomination in the sight of God.

After this important inference, which ought evidently to have closed the preceding chapter, St. Paul returns to speak farther of his tenderness towards the Corinthians, and of the joy which he derived from hearing of their affection towards him. In the first place, he protests that he had in no way injured them; yet, in so saying, he means not to insinuate that they were his accusers, or any way to grieve them, for they had a deep interest in the hearts of himself and brethren: and amidst all his afflictions, he derived great consolation from hearing of their welfare, and particularly from the accounts which Titus had given him of their pious sorrow; and their earnest desire to rectify what had been wrong amongst them, and of their affectionate regard to him, notwithstanding the fidelity of his reproofs. In consequence of this, though it gave him great pain to reprove them so sharply at the time, he now rejoiced heartily in the event, and was so satisfied with their conduct, and the penitence of the offenders, that his confidence was perfectly restored towards them.

CHAP. VII. Ver. 2. We have wronged—Doddridge, "I injured"—no man. Ver. 4. I am exceeding joyful—Doddridge, "I exceedingly abound in joy." who remarks, that the expression is exceedingly comical.

Ver. 8. For a season.—The sense is, he is glad, that though his epistle made them sorry, it was but for a season—literally, an hour. See Macknight.

Ver. 10. The sorrow of the world.—[The sorrow of carnal men about worldly objects, loss of fortune, fame, or friends; which, being separated from the fear and love of God, and faith in his providence and mercy, frequently drinks

A. M. cir.

A. D. cir.

4062.

a c 6 17, 18.

1 Jn. 3, 3.

b Ps. 51. 19.

Ez. 36. 25,

26.

c 1 Jn. 1. 7, 9.

d 1 Sa. 12. 3.

Ac. 20. 33.

c. 12. 17.

e c. 6. 11, 12.

f 1 Co. 1. 4.

c. 14.

g Ph. 2. 17.

Col. 1. 24.

h Ec. 3. 25.

i c. 2. 13.

j c. 2. 4.

k Je. 31. 9.

Eze. 7. 16.

l Ph. 17. 22.

m 1b. 66. 2.

n Tit. 3. 3.

o Ep. 5. 11.

p Ep. 1. 26.

q He. 4. 1.

r Ps. 42. 1.

1. 30. 5.

s Re. 3. 19.

Mat. 5. 29,

30.

t Ro. 14. 15.

Eze. 7. 16.

u Ro. 15. 32.

w borels.

x Ph. 2. 12.

y 2 Th. 3. 2.

Phl. 3. 21.

a c 9. 2, 4.

10 For godly sorrow ^k worketh repentance to salvation not to be repented of: but the sorrow of the world ^l worketh death.

11 For behold this self-same thing, that ye sorrowed after a godly ^m sort, what carefulness ⁿ it wrought in you, yea, what clearing ^o of yourselves, yea, what ^p indignation, yea, what ^q fear, yea, what ^r vehement ^s desire, yea, what ^t zeal, yea, what ^u revenge! In all things ye have approved ^v yourselves to be clear in this matter.

12 Wherefore, though I wrote unto you, I did it not for his cause that had done the wrong, nor for his cause that suffered wrong, but that our care for ^w you in the sight of God might appear unto you.

13 Therefore we were comforted in your comfort: yea, and exceedingly the more joyed we for the joy of Titus, because his spirit was refreshed ^x by you all.

14 For if I have boasted any thing to him of you, I am not ashamed; but as we spake all things to you in truth, even so our boasting, which I made before Titus, is found a truth.

15 And his ^y inward affection is more abundant toward you, whilst he remembereth the obedience of you all, how with ^z fear and trembling ye received him.

16 I rejoice therefore that I have confidence in you ^a in all things.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 He stretcheth them up to a liberal contribution for the poor saints at Jerusalem, by the example of the Abolition, 7 by commendation of their former forwardness, 9 by the example of Christ, 14 and by the spiritual profit that shall redound to themselves thereby: 16 commending to them the integrity and willingness of Titus, and thence other brethren, who upon his request, exhortation, and commendation, were purposely come to him of this business.

MOREOVER, brethren, we do you to wit of the grace of God bestowed on the churches of ^a Macedonia;

2 How that in a great trial of affliction the

The most important topic of remark in this chapter, is the different nature and properties of worldly and of godly sorrow, which may be distinguished in their cause, their character, and their effects. 1. They differ in their cause: worldly sorrow arises from the loss of worldly property, or carnal pleasures—from the failure of ambitious projects, or exposure to public shame. On the contrary, godly sorrow arises from a conviction of the evil nature of sin; from a painful sense of God's anger on account of it, and an apprehension of its just and awful consequences. 2. They differ in their character: worldly sorrow is either clamorous and angry, or sullen, peevish, and revengeful, and often mingled with rebellious murmurings against God. Godly sorrow, on the other hand, is meek and silent; or if it kindles the more violent passions of anger and revenge, it points them against the sinner's own conduct—against his sins. 3. They differ in their effects. "Worldly sorrow worketh death," by hardening the mind in unbelief; and as it leads the mind to despair, often ends in death, and utter destruction both of soul and body. But "godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation, not to be repented of." This repentance is the inseparable partner of faith; the Christian's guard against apostacy, and his guide to life eternal.

CHAP. VIII. Ver. 1-24. St. Paul again exhorts the Corinthians to Christian benevolence; commending the activity of Titus and some others.—In his former epistle, (ch. xxi.), our apostle had exhorted the Corinthians, who were a wealthy people, to exertions of Christian charity toward their poor brethren at Jerusalem; and he now informs them, to the honour of divine grace rather than to their own, that the churches of Philippi, Thessalonica, and other cities of Macedonia, though comparatively poor, and at the time much straitened, had eminently distinguished themselves in this cause by their generosity; not only giving their money, but their time and labour also, to assist in collecting for the saints at Jerusalem, who appear to have been peculiarly persecuted and distressed.

Having stated this fact to excite the emulation of the Corinthians, he set before them an example infinitely more exalted, and more binding upon their consciences, namely, that of our Lord Jesus Christ himself, who, though "he was rich,"—infinitely rich in wisdom, power, and glory, stooped down to up their spurs, breaks their proud rebellious hearts, or drives them to lay desperate hands on themselves. See the parallel passages 1—Paesler.

Ver. 11. Craveless—Doddridge, "diligence."—What clearing of yourselves—Macknight, "What apologizing." [In describing the effects of their sorrow, the Apostle speaks of the emotions of their minds, without mentioning the objects of these emotions; which he did, as Locke observes, from modesty, and from respect to the Corinthians.]—Paesler.

CHAP. VIII. Ver. 1. We do you to wit.—Hammond, "Make known to you."

abundance of their joy and their deep poverty abounded unto the riches of their liberality.

3 For to their power, I bare record, yea, and beyond their power they were willing of themselves;

4 Praying us with much entreaty that we would receive the gift, and take upon us the fellowship of the ministering to the saints.

5 And this they did, not as we hoped, but first gave their own selves to the Lord, and unto us by the will of God.

6 Inasmuch that we desired Titus, that as he had begun, so he would also finish in you the same grace also.

7 Therefore, as ye abound in every thing, in faith, and utterance, and knowledge, and in all diligence, and in your love to us, see that ye abound in this grace also.

8 I speak not by commandment, but by occasion of the forwardness of others, and to prove the sincerity of your love.

9 For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that, though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich.

10 And herein I give my advice: for this is expedient for you, who have begun before, not only to do, but also to be forward a year ago.

11 Now therefore perform the doing of it; that as there was a readiness to will, so there may be a performance also out of that which ye have.

12 For if there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not.

13 For I mean not that other men be eased, and ye burdened:

14 But by an equality, that now at this time your abundance may be a supply for their want, that their abundance also may be a supply for your want: that there may be equality:

A 14:11
B 14:11
C 14:11
D 14:11
E 14:11
F 14:11
G 14:11
H 14:11
I 14:11
J 14:11
K 14:11
L 14:11
M 14:11
N 14:11
O 14:11
P 14:11
Q 14:11
R 14:11
S 14:11
T 14:11
U 14:11
V 14:11
W 14:11
X 14:11
Y 14:11
Z 14:11

15 As it is written, "He that had gathered much had nothing over; and he that had gathered little had no lack."

16 But thanks be to God, which put the same earnest care into the heart of Titus for you.

17 For indeed he accepted the exhortation; but being more forward, of his own accord he went unto you.

18 And we have sent with him the brother, whose praise is in the gospel throughout all the churches;

19 And not that only, but who was also chosen of the churches to travel with us with this grace, which is administered by us to the glory of the same Lord, and declaration of your ready mind:

20 Avoiding this, that no man should blame us in this abundance which is administered by us:

21 Providing for honest things, not only in the sight of the Lord, but also in the sight of men.

22 And we have sent with them our brother, whom we have oftentimes proved diligent in many things, but now much more diligent, upon the great confidence which I have in you.

23 Whether any do inquire of Titus, he is my partner and fellow-helper concerning you; or our brethren be inquired of, they are the messengers of the churches, and the glory of Christ.

24 Wherefore show ye to them, and before the churches, the proof of your love, and of our boasting on your behalf.

CHAPTER IX.

1 He sheweth the reason why, though he knew their forwardness, yet he sent Titus and his brethren to enquire of them upon a third and thus, as he long had a kind of sowing of seed, 10 which shall bring a great increase to them. 13 and as giving a great sacrifice of thanksgivings unto God.

FOR as touching the ministering to the saints, it is superfluous for me to write to you:

2 For I know the forwardness of your mind, for which I boast of you to them of Macedonia, the lowest degree of degradation, poverty, and suffering, on our account.

"This was compassion like a God;"

such as neither mortals or angels could ever share, and such as ought to command, not only our admiration, but our devotion.

"O for this love, let rocks and hills
Their lying silence break!
And all harmonious human tongues
The Saviour's praises speak."—Watts

The Corinthian believers knew this love, and knowing it, it was their duty not only duly to appreciate, but humbly to imitate, and gratefully to return it, by showing kindness to their brethren in affliction; and to encourage those whose means were more limited than others, the apostle states that their charity will not be accepted of God, so much in regard to its magnitude, as to the principle in which it originated. "For if there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not." So our Lord estimated the widow's mite above all the ostentatious charity of the Pharisees. (Mark xii. 41—44.) The apostle farther gives them to understand, that if at any future time it should please Providence, to permit them to be visited with the same trials that their brethren now suffered, he should be no less urgent on their behalf, wishing to treat all the churches upon the same principle of equality, even as did the God of Israel in distributing the manna in the wilderness, who supplied the necessities of all, without leaving for any an unnecessary abundance. (See Exod. xvi. 18.)

The apostle now takes occasion to commend Titus, his "fellow-labourer," and at the same time to thank God for the grace conferred on him, whereby he was enabled to provide with so much liberality, and distribute with so much integrity, to the necessities of the poor brethren; it being the earnest desire, both of St. Paul and his colleagues, to discharge every obligation laid upon them, honestly and honourably before both God and man. "Wherefore I say he exhibit before all the proof of your regard to me, and justify the character I have given of you to the other churches."

CHAP. IX. Ver. 1—15. Further arguments and exhortations to liberality.—The apostle introduces this chapter (says Dr. Macknight) with remarking, that it was unnecessary and superfluous for him to discuss the propriety of the contributions to which he refers, since they were already in progress; yet, as he understood by Titus, that a good deal still remained to be done, he had sent the brethren mentioned in the prece-Ver. 2. Their deep poverty abounded.—That is, notwithstanding their deep poverty, "they have done wonders for the relief of their poor brethren." Doddridge. The Macedonians were a poor, and the Corinthians a rich people.—Macknight

Ver. 3. Beyond their power—I e "beyond what could have been expected from them."—Doddridge

Ver. 4. Gift.—Greek (charin) "grace," as in ver. 1, 6, &c.—And take upon us the fellowship—i. e. assist, or take part in ministering, &c.

Ver. 5. Not as we hoped—I e. Not merely as we hoped, but far beyond—gave their own selves.—That is, gave their own time and labour, as well as property.

Ver. 6. Finish in you the same grace.—Or "gift," which Doddridge thus paraphrases: "So he would also complete this instance of grace and liberality among you, and finish what yet remains to be done, as to collecting the intended contributions."

Ver. 7. This grace also.—Namely, liberality.

Ver. 8. Not by commandment.—Doddridge. "Not by (way of) command."

See note on 1 Co. vi. 6

Ver. 10. As to be forward—I e. to do good promptly.

Ver. 19. The brother.—Namely, Luke the Evangelist. So Doddridge, Macknight, and others.

Ver. 19. This grace.—[That is, the charitable contributions for the saints in Judea; respecting which Poley has some excellent remarks. There is, he observes, a circumstance of merit in the agreement between the two Epistles, which I am convinced, the author of a forgery would not have hit upon, or which, if he had hit upon it, he would have set forth with more clearness. The Second Epistle speaks of the Corinthians as having begun this charitable business a year before (ver. 10; ch. ix. 2). It appears, however, from other texts in the Epistle, that the contribution was not yet collected or paid; for Paul says, "I have written to you, but ye have not done it." (1 Cor. xvi. 1.) "They are urged to perform the doing of it." (ver. 11.) "And every man was exhorted to give as he purposed in his heart." (ch. ix. 7.) The contribution, therefore, was in readiness, yet not a cent had from the contributors; was begun, was forward long before yet not hitherto collected. Now this representation agrees with one, and only with one, supposition, namely, that every man had had his share, had already provided a fund from which he was afterwards to contribute—the very case which the First Epistle authorizes us to suppose to have existed. For in that Epistle, St. Paul had charged the Corinthians "upon the first day of the week, every one of them, to lay by in store as God had prospered him." (1 Co. xvi. 2.) Poley.

Ver. 22. Set with them—I e. with Luke and Titus.—our brother.—Doddridge supposes this other brother to be Archippus, others that it might be Silas, Timothy, or some other, but it is all conjecture.—Which have in you.

—Instead of the supplementary words "I have," Macknight supplies, "he hath," referring to the brother here intended.

Ver. 25. Fellow-helper.—Doddridge. "A fellow labourer."

that Achaia was ready a year ago; and your zeal hath provoked very many.

3 Yet have I sent the brethren, lest our boasting of you should be in vain in this behalf; that, as I said, ye may be ready:

4 Lest haply if they of Macedonia come with me, and find you unprepared, we (that we say not, ye) should be ashamed in this same confident ^b boasting.

5 Therefore I thought it necessary to exhort the brethren, that they would go before unto you, and make up beforehand your ^c bounty, ^d whereof ye had notice before, that the same might be ready, as a matter of bounty, and not as of covetousness.

6 But this I say, He ^e which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully.

7 Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not ^f grudgingly, or of necessity: for God loveth a cheerful ^g giver.

8 And ^h God is able to make all grace abound toward you; that ye, always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work.

9 (As it is written, He hath dispersed abroad; he hath given to the poor: his righteousness remaineth for ever.

10 Now he that ministereth seed to the sower both minister bread for your food, and multiply your seed sown, and increase the fruits ^k of your righteousness:)

A. M. cir.
1062.
A. D. cir.
38.
b c s 24.
c blessing
d or, which hath been
go. an. h given. f before.
e Ps 41: 13.
Pr 11: 24.
25.
19: 17.
29.
Ga 6: 7.
f D: 17: 7.
g Ex 35: 5.
Ro 12: 8.
h Phi 4: 19.
i Ps 112: 9.
j Is 55: 10.
k Ho 10: 12.

l amplif. i.
tyor, r.
dity.
m c. 11.
4: 15.
n c. 14.
o Mat 5: 16.
p c. 3: 1.
q Ja 1: 17.
r Ju 3: 16.
s Ro 12: 1.
t or, in outward appearance.
c ver. 19.
d 1 Co 4: 21.
e 12: 2, 10.
f or, reckon
g Ro 13: 3.

11 Being enriched in every thing to all bountifulness, which ^m causeth through us thanksgiving to God.

12 For the administration of this service not only supplieth ⁿ the want of the saints, but is abundant also by many thanksgivings unto God;

13 While by the experiment of this ministration they glorify ^o God for your professed subjection unto the gospel of Christ, and for your liberal distribution unto them, and unto all men;

14 And by their prayer for you, which long after you for the exceeding ^p grace of God in you.

15 Thanks ^q be unto God for his unspeakable gift.

CHAPTER X.

Against the false apostles, who disguised the weakness of his person and bodily presence, he seeth out the spiritual might and authority, with which he is armed against all adversary powers, 7 assuring them that, as he coming he will be found as mighty in word, as he is now in writing being absent; 12 and whilst taxing them for not acting out themselves beyond their compass, and vaunting themselves unto other men's labours.

NOW I Paul myself beseech ^a you by the meekness and gentleness of Christ, who ^b in presence ^c am base among you, but being absent am bold toward you:

2 But I beseech you, that I may not be bold when I am present with that confidence, where-with ^d I think to be bold against some, which ^e think of us as if we walked according to the flesh.

3 For though we walk in the flesh, we do not war after ^f the flesh:

ding chapter, to encourage them to go on, that his boasting concerning their being prepared might not be rendered false; but that, at length, they might be prepared [as he had expected.] For if the Macedonian brethren who were coming with him to Corinth, should find their collection not finished, he, not to say the Corinthians, would be ashamed of his constant boasting concerning them. He had judged it necessary, therefore, to entreat the brethren to go before him to Corinth, to persuade them to complete their collection, that whatever they should give, might appear as freely given, and not as forced from them by his presence. In the mean time, to encourage them to give liberally, he put them in mind of the rule—"He that soweth sparingly shall reap sparingly." He then desires each to consult his own heart and conscience, and to give what he proposed to give without murmuring or hesitation—"For God loveth a cheerful giver." And he whose cause they supported, and whose people they relieved, would not be backward to reward what was given out of love to him or them; and those whom they thus assisted would, in return, assist them by their earnest prayers at the throne of grace on their behalf. Nor ought they for a moment to hesitate at any thing they could do for God, when they recollected that he had "not spared his own and only begotten Son"—truly an "unspeakable gift!" which called for every exertion of praise and gratitude.

"On thou bounteous giver of all good,
Thou art of all thy gifts thyself the crown:
Give what thou canst—without thee we are poor,
And with thee rich, what wilt thou wilt away."—Cooper.

CHAP. X. Ver. 1—18. Paul defends himself against the insinuations of his enemies.—In this and the following chapters our apostle defends himself against the charges and insinuations of the false teachers and their adherents, who reproached him for the meanness of his personal appearance, and his deficiency in respect to those arts of rhetoric and elocution which were admired and studied by men who aspired to popular applause; at the same time they admit his Epistles to be weighty in authority, and powerful in expression; but then, say they, "his bodily presence is weak, and his speech contemptible." With respect to his person, "In the Philepatris of Lucien, Trephon (who said he was baptized by him) calls him, in ridicule, 'the big-nosed, bald-pated Galilean,' who had travelled through the air into the third heaven." And Cerysostom, the eloquent Greek Father, describes him as a "little man, about three cubits (or four feet and a half) high." And it is probable that his voice was weak, or inharmonious, which gave countenance to the charge of his speech or elocution being contemptible.

Paul's enemies, as it appears, had intimated that, when present with them, he appeared all meekness and humility, not daring to provoke any inquiries into his character or qualifications; but when absent, and at a distance he was bold in reproving, and assumed a tone of authority to which they thought him not entitled. In answer to this, that he might not again be charged with such presumption, he beseeches them, "by the meekness and gentleness of Christ," that they would not compel him, when next present with them, to be bold and severe with them generally, in the manner which he had already resolved to be bold in reproving some of them in particular who had charged him with walking according to the flesh; that is, according to the dictates of carnal wisdom and policy; "For though (says he) we walk in the flesh"—that is, though surrounded with all the infirmities of mortality—yet "do we not war after (or according to) the flesh; for the weapons of our warfare are not carnal"—not human force nor policy; neither philosophical science nor rhetorical skill; yet are they mighty in demolishing the strong holds of sin—in casting down the proud imaginations of the human heart, and in "bringing into captivity" or subjection, every notion or opinion inconsistent with the obedience due to Christ our Lord. At the same time that the apostle writes this, he reminds them of his having entrusted to him, by the Lord Jesus, a miraculous power able to avenge every act of obstinate disobedience. "And (says he) when your obedience is fulfilled," or become complete; that is, when you are brought to a complete submission to Christ, those who remain unsubdued may expect to be severely punished.

In these verses several effects of the apostolical warfare are CHAP. IX. Ver. 2. Achaia—A province of Greece, of which Corinth was the capital, and G. tho was deputy: Acts xviii. 12—Calmet.

Ver. 4. (That we say not, ye)—Doddridge, "Not to say, ye"—This same confident boasting—Literally, confidence in boasting.—MacKnight.

Ver. 5. Covetousness—Doddridge and MacKnight, extortion.—Ver. 6. He much soweth sparingly—An evident allusion to husbandry.—See ver. 9. Compare Prov. xi. 25.

Ver. 8. God is able to make all grace—i. e. every gift, (Greek, Charis). See notes on chap. vii. ver. 4 and 6. But spiritual blessings are not to be excluded.

Ver. 10. Now he that ministereth—Doddridge, "Now may he that supplieth seed to the sower and bread for food, supply and multiply." &c. MacKnight, "He who leads up the chariot, and also associates, and turns shares one; for another, so that there be no want or elation." Thus God, in the course of his providence, associates and connects causes and effects: keeps every thing in its proper place and dependence, and all upon himself; leads up the grand chains of causes and effects; provides seed to the hand of the sower, and gives him skill to determine the time when the earth should be sown; for its reception; and finally crowns the year with his goodness.—The asterisk.

Ver. 13. While by the experiment—Doddridge, "Experience"—(f this ministration)—Or "ministry." MacKnight explains it, "Through the proof which this ministry affords, (of your conversion,) glorifying God," &c.—Professing subjection—Literally, "The subjection of your confession;" meaning, "confession," "an avowed," and not secret or doubtful confession. See Hammond and Doddridge.

Ver. 15. His unspeakable gift—Whitby and others understand this of the grace of charity bestowed on the Corinthians; but Doddridge, and most evangelical expositors, refer it to the gift of Christ himself. See John iii. 16.

CHAP. X. Ver. 1. In presence—MacKnight explains it, "Nepherus Catana, a Greek historian of the 11th century, (lib. i. cap. 27,) who probably compared all the extraordinary information he could collect, speaks of our apostle as 'small of stature, stooping, and rather inclining to crookedness; pale faced, of an elderly look, bald on the head. His eyes lively, keen, and cheerful; shaded in part by his eyebrows, which hung a little over. His nose rather long, and not ungracefully bent. His hair pretty thick of hair, and of a sufficient length, and, like his locks, interwoven with grey.'"

Ver. 3. In the flesh—i. e. in the earthly house of this tabernacle. See chap. v. 1, 2, and notes.—After—according to—the flesh—Always means in a carnal, worldly manner.

4 (For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strong holds.)

5 Casting down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ;

6 And having in a readiness to revenge all disobedience, when your obedience is fulfilled.

7 Do ye look on things after the outward appearance? If any man trust to himself that he is Christ's, let him of himself think this again, that, as he is Christ's, even so are we Christ's.

8 For though I should boast somewhat more of our authority, which the Lord hath given us for edification, and not for your destruction, I should not be ashamed:

9 That I may not seem as if I would terrify you by letters.

10 For his letters, say they, are weighty and powerful; but his bodily presence is weak, and his speech contemptible.

11 Let such a one think this, that, such as we are in word by letters when we are absent, such will we be also in deed when we are present.

12 For we dare not make ourselves of the number, or compare ourselves with some that commend themselves; but they measuring themselves by themselves, and comparing themselves among themselves, are not wise.

13 But we will not boast of things without our measure, but according to the measure of the rule which God hath distributed to us, a measure to reach even unto you.

14 For we stretch not ourselves beyond our measure, as though we reached not unto you;

briefly stated:—1. The destruction of the strong holds occupied by Pagan idolatry. 2. The breaking down all the vain reasonings and imaginations of philosophy, which are so many walls or ramparts of inidelity. 3. The leading captive all the fine theories and hypotheses invented by man to oppose the laudable doctrines of the gospel; and, lastly, the miraculous punishment of those who refused to submit to apostolical authority.

And whereas they objected to him the meanness of his external appearance, he inquires, "Do ye look upon things according to their outward appearance?" only? But what are all ministers but the professed servants of Christ, and am not I the same? And though I should boast something more of my apostolical authority, I should see no reason to be ashamed, especially while that authority is used only for your edification, and not destruction.

From the latter part of this chapter, Dr. Macknight remarks two things.—1. That the apostles were specially appointed to preach the gospel in countries where it had not been preached before; and that chiefly on account of their extraordinary miraculous gifts. 2. That in preaching the gospel they were not to pass by or neglect any nation that lay in their way, where the gospel had not been preached before; but were to proceed in an orderly course from one country to another, that the light of the gospel might be imparted to all. But the false teacher (or teachers) here alluded to had come from Judea to Corinth, apparently to enter upon St. Paul's labours, and draw away from him those whom he had been instrumental in converting to Christ by his previous ministry.

CHAP. XI. Ver. 1—15. St. Paul's judgment of false teachers.—On the early part of this chapter we offer the following remarks:—

Ver. 4. Not carnal.—The gospel disowns all worldly means of propagation or conquest—especially such as have been improperly and falsely called holy wars.

Ver. 5. And having in a readiness to revenge.—Macknight, "And are prepared (by our miraculous power) to punish all disobedience [as I shall do at Corinth] when the obedience [of such of you as are disposed to repent] is complete."

Ver. 7. If is Christ's.—i. e. Christ's minister.

Ver. 8. I should not be ashamed.—i. e. "by his failing me when I try it on the disobedient among you."—Macknight.

Ver. 9. As if I would terrify you.—It was a dozen years, or more, before this, that St. Paul had smitten Elymus with blindness (Acts viii.) and he interpreted that they might construe some of his remarks into a threat of some similar punishment.

Ver. 10. His letters.—Dodridge, "Epistles." So ver. 9 and 11. The epistle before us seems to have been the sixth written by Paul; it is very possible, therefore, that those Corinthians might have seen two or three of them.—Powerful.—Dodridge and Macknight, "strong."

Ver. 12. For we dare not make, &c.—Dodridge, "For we presume not to number [black] ranks ourselves with some who commend themselves; i. e. look only to their own supposed merits and those of their own party."

A M. cir.
B 1862.
A. 1. 28.
g. 16. 13.
h. 17. 14.
i. or, 10.
j. e. 13. 34.
k. Je 1. 10.
l. or, respon-
ding.
m. 1 Co. 1. 19.
n. Ps. 18. 7.
o. E. 15. 24.
p. Mat. 11. 20.
q. 1 Co. 2. 19.
r. De 1. 12.
s. e. 7. 15.
t. 1 Co. 7. 2.
u. 1 Co. 13. 2.
v. 1. 14. 5.
w. without.
x. 1 Co. 13. 12.
y. or, 10.
z. Ro 15. 20.
a. or, included in you.
b. or, rule.
c. 1. 9. 21.
d. Ro 2. 20.
e. or, and i.
f. 1 Co. 2. 19.
g. 1 Co. 1. 13.
h. 1 Co. 1. 7.
i. or, with
me.
j. 1 Co. 15. 10.
k. 12. 11.
l. 1 Co. 1. 17.
m. 21. 13.

for we are come as far as to you also in preaching the gospel of Christ:

15 Not boasting of things without our measure, that is, of other men's labours; but having hope, when your faith is increased, that we shall be enlarged by you according to our rule abundantly,

16 To preach the gospel in the regions beyond you, and not to boast in another man's line of things made ready to our hand.

17 But he that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord.

18 For not he that commendeth himself is approved, but whom the Lord commendeth.

CHAPTER XI.

1 That of his jealousy over the Corinthians, who seemed to make more account of the false apostles than of him, he interjects into a letter commendations of himself, and his equality with the chief apostles, 1. of his preaching the gospel to them freely, and without any other charge; 2. showing that he was not inferior to those apostles in his power to punish the disobedient, and in the service of Christ, and in all kinds of ministry for his ministry, for his glory.

WOULD to God ye could bear with me a little in my folly; and indeed bear with me.

2 For I am jealous over you with godly jealousy: for I have espoused you to one husband, that I may present you as a chaste virgin to Christ.

3 But I fear, lest by any means, as the serpent beguiled Eve through his subtlety, so your minds should be corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ.

4 For if he that cometh preacheth another Jesus, whom we have not preached, or if ye receive another spirit, which ye have not received, or another gospel, which ye have not accepted, ye might well bear with him.

5 For I suppose I was not a whit behind the very chiefest apostles.

6 But though I be rude in speech, yet not

1. Conversion is an espousal to Christ, and all apostasy after such espousal is an aggravated species of spiritual adultery. Dr. Dodridge says, "This is much illustrated by recollecting that there was an officer among the Greeks, whose business it was to educate and form young women (especially those of rank and figure) designed for marriage, and then to present them to those who were to be their husbands; and if this officer permitted them, through negligence, to be corrupted between the espousals and the consummation of the marriage, great blame would naturally fall upon him." So it would be a matter of great grief to the apostle, if instead of preparing themselves for the marriage supper of the Lamb in heaven, any of them should be corrupted by anti-Christian errors.

2. The apostle compares the seduction of the Corinthians, by their false apostles, to the old serpent (the devil) beguiling Eve to her ruin, and that of her posterity. This may lead us to inquire, by what means was Eve deceived? It is to be recollected that the serpent did not directly contradict the declaration of the Almighty, "Thou shalt surely die;" but he began with insinuating doubts and queries.—"Yea,"—indeed! "Hath God said so and so?" and, when he found that she listened to his insinuations,—then he boldly adds, "Ye shall not surely die."—On the contrary, ye shall be immortalized, and become wise as gods. (Gen. iii. 1—5.) So it is highly probable that these instruments of Satan did not directly contradict the doctrine of the apostle; but first queried his divine authority, and then proceeded to insinuate that he was deceiving them, or was at least himself ignorant and deceived.

3. St. Paul guards the Corinthians against listening to any other doctrine than those which had been the means of leading them to conversion. "If, indeed, (as though he had said,)

Ver. 13. Not boast of things without our measure.—That is, we restrain our labours within the bounds prescribed by us of God. 1. The expression of this verse appears to be a quotation taken from the Isthmian and Olympic games. The measure was the length of the course; the rule or time, was probably the same with the plate rule, which marked the boundaries of the stadium; and the words, each unto, stretch out, &c., refer to the exertions made to win the race. 2. Begister. But perhaps the allusion may be to the division of the land of Canaan. See Ex. lxxviii. 55. Compare Rom. x. 18, with Ps. xlv. 1.

Ver. 15. Enlarged by you.—Dodridge, "Magnified by you."

CHAP. XI. Ver. 2. For I, &c.—Macknight, "Because I have betrothed you [by faith and holiness] to one husband, to present you [in dedication and conduct spotless, as a chaste virgin] to Christ."

Ver. 5. For I suppose—Dodridge, "I reckon." The same word is thus rendered, Rom. vii. 15. I was not a whit behind.—Macknight, "I am not inferior to our." See the epistolary apostles.—That is, Peter, James, and John; see Gal. ii. 9. It is evident from this that Paul did not acknowledge the superiority of Peter.

Ver. 6. Rude.—Dodridge, "unskilful." Macknight, "unlearned." Raphael cites a passage from Xenophon in which these the same word, rudis, he calls him self "a plain or ordinary man."—Not in knowledge.—Paul, notwithstanding of his poverty and low knowledge, received a liberal education under Gamaliel, (Acts xviii. 2), and was deeply versed in scriptural and ^b in knowledge; but we have been thoroughly made manifest ^c among you in all things.

⁷ Have I committed an offence in abasing myself that ye might be exalted, because I have preached to you the gospel of God freely?

⁸ I robbed other churches, taking wages of them, to do you service.

⁹ And when I was present with you, and wanted, I ^d was chargeable to no man: for that which was lacking to me the ^e brethren which came from Macedonia supplied: and in all things I have kept myself from being burdensome unto you, and so will I keep myself.

¹⁰ As the truth of Christ is in me, ^f no man shall stop me of this boasting in the regions of Achaia.

¹¹ Wherefore? because I love you not? God knoweth.

¹² But what I do, that I will do, that I may cut off occasion from them ^g which desire occasion; that wherein they glory, they may be found even as we.

¹³ For such are false ^h apostles, deceitful ⁱ workers, transforming themselves into the apostles of Christ.

¹⁴ And no marvel; for Satan ^j himself is transformed into an angel of light.

¹⁵ Therefore it is no great thing if his ministers also be transformed as the ministers of righteousness; whose end ^k shall be according to their works.

¹⁶ I say again, Let no man think me a ^l fool; if otherwise, yet as a fool ^m receive me, that I may boast myself a little.

¹⁷ That which I speak, I speak it ⁿ not after the Lord, but as it were foolishly, in this confidence ^o of boasting.

¹⁸ Seeing ^p that many glory after the flesh, I will glory also.

¹⁹ For ye suffer fools gladly, seeing ye yourselves are wise.

²⁰ For ye suffer, if a man bring you into

A. M. cir.
4062.
A. D. cir.
55.

h Ep. 3.4.
i c. 12. 12.

j Ac. 18.3.
1 Th. 2.9.

k Phi. 4.10.
15.

l this boasting shall not be stopped in me.

m Ga. 1.7.
Ph. 1.15.
&c.

n Ga. 2.4.
2 Pe. 2.1.
1 Jo. 4.1.
Re. 2.2.

o Phi. 3.2.
Tit. 1.10.
11.

p Ge. 3.1,5.
He. 12.9.

q Phi. 3.19.
r c. 12.6. 11.

s or, suffer.
t c. 7.12.
e. c. 9.4.

u Phi. 3.3,4.
1 Co. 1.10.

w 1 Co. 15.10.
x Ac. 9.16.
20.23.

y 1 Co. 15.20.
30.32.

z De. 25.3.
a Ac. 16.22.

b Ac. 14.19.
c Ac. c. 27.

d Ac. 14.5.
e Ac. 20.31.

f 1 Co. 4.11.
g Ac. 15.36.

h 1 Co. 9.22.
i c. 12.5,9,10.

j Gal. 3.5.
1 Th. 2.5.

k Ac. 9.34.
15.

bondage, if a man devour you, if a man take of you, if a man exalt himself, if a man smite you on the face.

²¹ I speak as concerning reproach, as though we had been weak. Howbeit wheresoever any is bold, (I speak foolishly,) I am bold also.

²² Are they Hebrews? so am I. Are they Israelites? so am I. Are they the seed of Abraham? so am I.

²³ Are they ministers of Christ? (I speak as a fool) I am more; in ^w labours more abundant, in ^x stripes above measure, in prisons more frequent, in ^y deaths oft.

²⁴ Of the Jews five times received I forty stripes ^z save one.

²⁵ Thrice was I beaten ^a with rods, once was I ^b stoned, thrice I suffered shipwreck, a ^c night and a day I have been in the deep;

²⁶ In journeyings often, in perils of waters, in perils of robbers, in perils ^d by mine own countrymen, in perils by the heathen, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren;

²⁷ In weariness and painfulness, in watchings ^e often, in ^f hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness.

²⁸ Beside those things that are without, that which cometh upon me daily, the care ^g of all the churches.

²⁹ Who ^h is weak, and I am not weak? who is offended, and I burn not?

³⁰ If I must needs glory, I will ⁱ glory of the things which concern mine infirmities.

³¹ The ^j God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which ^k is blessed for evermore, knoweth ^l that I lie not.

³² In Damascus ^m the governor under Aretas the king kept the city of the Damascus with a garrison, desirous to apprehend me:

³³ And through a window in a basket was I let down by the wall, and escaped his hands.

your new teacher could present you with a new Saviour, whose miracles were more convincing, or his doctrines more sublime; if another gospel were revealed, or another and more divine spirit poured from on high; then, indeed, you might have some pretence for listening to your new apostles; but as you know there is 'no other name given to man by which they can be saved, but that of Jesus,' (see Acts iv. 12,) listen not to their vain pretensions or seductive reasonings."

4. One thing, indeed, by which St. Paul gave great umbrage (as it should seem) to these teachers, was his refusing to receive any regular support from the churches, as the others did, and which unquestionably he had a right to do. But he gloried in making the propagation of the gospel as free as was the grace in which it originated; and therefore laboured hard in a common handicraft business, rather than burden any of the churches, and particularly the Corinthians; choosing rather to subsist on the voluntary donations of the poor Macedonians, than to be dependant on them, who, though more wealthy, were evidently less generous. (See ch. ix. 2. 4.) Thus he calls robbing other churches to spare them.

5. Both Satan and his emissaries frequently transform themselves into angels of light, for the better accomplishment of their dark designs. Of the former there can be no doubt, and of the latter there are too many unhappy proofs. It is not for us, who have not the gift of discerning spirits, to point out individual characters; but when men show more zeal to support a party than for the conversion of souls—when they evidence more anxiety to please their hearers than to profit them—when they aim to exalt themselves and debase the characters of their brethren—then, assuredly, are they "false apostles and deceitful workers, whose end shall be according to their works."

Ver. 16—33. Paul compelled to self-defence.—"It must be confessed (says Dr. Watts) that there are some . . . occur-

Jewish learning; but he was teiffully ignorant of the vain philosophy and rhetorical arts of the Greeks. See 1 Co. ii. 1—7.

Ver. 17. I speak it not after the Lord.—The apostle appears so jealous lest, by this appearance of boasting, he should bring any reproach upon the Saviour of mankind, that he takes it upon himself, as if he had said, "I am sensible of my own boasting, attribute it to my own weakness only, and not to the Lord by whom I am inspired."

Ver. 18. Many glory after the flesh.—See chap. x. 13; 1m 5. 6. Phil. iii. 1. Ver. 19. Ye suffer fools gladly, seeing ye yourselves are wise.—i. e. you readily suffer yourselves to be made fools (as in the next verse) by silly teachers, and why not by me? This is evidently spoken satirically, as also recess in his, which make it proper, and almost necessary, to speak of one's self to advantage; prudence and religion should direct us how to distinguish those seasons and occasions. A wise man, when he is constrained to speak of his own character, or to support his own honour, feels a sort of inward uneasiness, lest he should be taken for a vain-glorious fool; and is even ashamed to speak what is necessary for his own vindication, lest it should appear like vanity and boasting. See this notably exemplified in the conduct of Paul. . . . This very man, who counts himself less than the least of all the saints, was once reviled by some upstarts in the Corinthian church. . . . Then he is compelled to produce his own credentials, to display his own divine commission, and to make his superior qualifications known to the people. I suppose (says he) I was not a whit behind the very chiefest apostles; though I be rude in speech, yet not in knowledge, &c.; and then he recounts his abundant labours, his abundant sufferings, and his service to Christ and souls; but mark, how often this man of heavenly wisdom represents thus, his conduct, as acting like a fool; and he seems to blush while he boasts himself a little: Let no man think me a fool indeed; but, if you will think me so, yet as a fool receive me. . . . Boasting of one's self, in the judgment of a great apostle, is so foolish a thing, that, when wisdom itself requires him to practise it, he is quite ashamed of it, and almost expects that he shall be taken for a fool."

In looking over the list of Paul's sufferings, in the latter part of this chapter, we cannot but feel admiration at the number and weight of calamities which he sustained in the cause of Christ; but a small portion of which are recorded in the book of Acts. For instance, we have only on record one instance of his imprisonment, (viz. at Philippi) and one of his being scourged with rods. (Acts xvi. 20.) The shipwreck at Melita was long after his writing this Epistle, and therefore could not be one of the three here named. So numerous, so several other things in this chapter; and thus, perhaps, is what the apostle means by speaking boastfully, or, as it were, in jest.

Ver. 20. For ye suffer, if a man, &c.—Doddridge, "For you bear it, if" &c. So Mark 8:16.

Ver. 22. Are they Hebrews?—See Phil. iii. 5.

Ver. 24. Forty stripes save one.—See note on Dent. xxv. 3.

Ver. 28. Cometh upon me.—Doddridge, "useth in upon me."

Ver. 29. And I burn not.—i. e. with indignation.

Ver. 32. In Damascus. . . . Aretas the king.—This Aretas was an Arabian king and the father-in-law of Herod Antipas, upon whom he made war in consequence of his having divorced his daughter. Herod applied to Tiberius there be debates, envyings, wraths, strifes, backbitings, whisperings, swellings, tumults:

21 And lest, when I come again, my God will humble * me among you, and that I shall bewail many which have sinned already, and have not repented * of the uncleanness and * fornication and lasciviousness which they have committed.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 He threateneth severity, and the power of his apostleship against obstinate sinners. 5 And advising them to a trial of their faith, 7 and to a reformation of their sins before his coming, 11 he concludes his epistle with a general exhortation and a prayer.

THIS is the third time I am coming to you. In * the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established.

2 I told you before, and foretell you, as if I were present, the second time; and being absent now I write to them * which heretofore have sinned, and to all other, that, if I come again, I will not spare:

3 Since ye seek a proof of Christ's speaking in me, which to you-ward is not weak, but is mighty * in you.

4 For though ^d he was crucified through weakness, yet he liveth by the power of God. For we also are weak * in him, but we shall live with him by the power of God toward you.

5 Examine * yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves. Know ye not

A M cir.
4092
A. 12. or.
58.
v c 21
w Re 2:21.
x 1 Co 5:1.
a 1 Th 19:15
He 10:24,
29
b c 12:21
c 1 Co 9:2
d Phil 2:7,8
1 Pe 3:18

e or, with.

f 1 Co 11:28
1 Jm 3:20, 21.

g Ro 8:10
Ga 4:19

h 1 Co 9:27.
2 Th 3:5,8.

i Pr 21:20.

j 1 Th 3:10
He 6:1

k Tit 1:13.

l c 10:8.

m ver 9

n Ro 12:16.
15:5.
Ep 4:3.

o Phil 2:2.
1 Pe 3:8.

p Ro 16:16.

q Phil 2:1

your own selves, how that Jesus Christ * is in you, except ye be ^b reprobates?

6 But I trust that ye shall know that we are not reprobates.

7 Now I pray to God that ye do no evil; not that we should appear approved, but that ye should do that which is honest, though we be as reprobates.

8 For * we can do nothing against the truth, but for the truth.

9 For we are glad, when we are weak, and ye are strong; and this also we wish, even your * perfection.

10 Therefore I write these things being absent, lest being present I should use * sharpness, according * to the power which the Lord hath given me to edification, and not to destruction.

11 Finally, brethren, farewell. Be * perfect, be of good comfort, be * of one mind, live in peace; and the God of love and peace shall be with you.

12 Greet * one another with a holy kiss.

13 All the saints salute you.

14 The * grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the * communion of the Holy Ghost, be with you all. Amen.

¶ The second epistle to the Corinthians was written from Philippi, a city of Macedonia, by Titus and Lucas.

and grace of Christ, and "that the power of Christ might rest upon him."

"When I am weak, then am I strong; Grace my support, and Christ my song!"

From this prayer, which (as even Delsham admits) was offered to Jesus Christ, Dr. Pye Smith, and others, have drawn a forcible argument in favour of our Lord's divinity; for surely Paul knew better than to pray to a mere creature, and especially for a deliverance, which none but God could give.

The apostle having thus far justified himself, and rendered glory to God, tells the Corinthians, that he intended the third time to come to see them; but he much feared it would be little either to his satisfaction or to theirs: he was fearful of still finding among them the same disorders as ^{ad} before grieved him, and that he should be obliged to use to wards them a severity which would greatly grieve and mortify him. A good pastor always grieves for the wandering of his flock.

CHAP. XIII. Ver. 1-14. The apostle closes with exhorting the Corinthians to self-examination, unity, and love.—St. Paul begins this chapter with saying, "This is the third (time) I am coming to you," and yet it is evident he had been there but once, and that (as Dr. Paley states) this Epistle was written before his second visit. How, then, shall we understand this? A verse in the preceding chapter (ver. 14) fully explains this. He there says, "Behold, the third time I am ready (prepared) to come to you." The fact is, he had before made preparations to come, and arranged his affairs, as he says in ch. i. 15, "I was minded to come to you before, that ye might have a second benefit"—that is, a second visit; but in this he was, by some circumstance unknown to us, evidently disappointed: now, then, the third time he was minded, and prepared to visit sent, upon them, though he would not burden them himself; to which he replies, "Did I make a gain of you by any of them whom I sent?" Others consider this, as well as the following sentence, as spoken interrogatively; "Being crafty, did I take you in by guile? Did I make a gain of you?" &c.

CHAP. XIII. Ver. 1. In-Dudridge, "By"—the mouth of two or three witnesses.—See Num xxv 30. Deut. xvi. 8, and xv. 15.

Ver. 4. Weak in him.—Macknight, "with him;" that is, we are weak as he was in the days of his flesh; and we shall be strong, as he now is, being armed with his power, and mighty through his might.

Ver. 5. Reprobates.—Dudridge, "disapproved." We know of no instance in Scripture in which this word is used in reference to a divine decree. We observe it always signifying "disapproved," or "rejected" in consequence of such disapprobation. See Rom. i. 25. 2 Tim. iii. 8. Titus i. 16. "It does not them—but it was only to pay them a second visit: for so he says expressly, (ver. 2.) "I told you before, and foretell you (now,) as if I were present the second time." So that so far from a contradiction, as some have pretended, here is a remarkable coincidence of circumstances, as Dr. Paley has more fully shown.

Having announced his intention soon to come, he gives them to understand that he should make a strict inquiry into the state of the church, and inflict, by his apostolical powers, a summary punishment on those who had disgraced and brought reproach on their profession. In the mean time, he exhorts them all to examine themselves, whether they were "in the faith," or, in plain terms, whether they were true Christians; and, as a test of their Christianity, he says, "Know ye not your own selves, how that Jesus Christ is in you, except ye be reprobates;" that is, reprobated or rejected of God for your hypocrisy or apostasy; for it must be remembered that he was writing only to those who had professed Christianity.

To be in Christ, and have Christ formed in us, are expressions often used by St. Paul, and unequivocally express a regeneration, or new creation in the soul! so, Gal. iv. 19, "My little children, of whom I travail in birth, until Christ be formed in you." To be a reprobate, on the contrary, in the Scripture sense of the term, is to be disapproved, and consequently rejected of God, as not having that necessary proof of genuine and vital Christianity.

The benediction which concludes this Epistle—"The grace of the Lord Jesus," &c., is generally, and we think justly, considered as a conclusive proof of the divinity and personality of the Holy Trinity—or sacred Three in One.

appear that either the original word, or our English word 'reprobates,' is ever in Scripture used as the opposite to 'elect,' or indeed with direct reference to election; and as to reprobation, it is, I apprehend, a scriptural idea, (for those who are not 'chosen' must be rejected, (or passed by,) but not a scriptural word in any sense."—Scott.

Ver. 6. We are not reprobates—I. e. not disapproved.

Ver. 7. Though we be as reprobates.—I. e. though we be [treated by you] as though we were disapproved or rejected of God.

Ver. 9. Your perfection.—Dudridge, "Your perfect order." Macknight, "Your restoration." See Gal. vi. 1.

Ver. 10. Therefore I write.—Namely, to warn and caution you.

Ver. 11. Be of one mind.—Dudridge, "Attend to, (or mind) the same thing." So Macknight.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE SECOND EPISTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS

[The most remarkable circumstance, observes Mr. Scott, in this Epistle is, the confidence of the Apostle in the goodness of his cause, and in the power of God to bear him out in it. Opposed, as he then was, by a powerful and sagacious party, whose authority, reputation, and interest, were deeply concerned, and who were ready to seize on every thing that could discredit him, it is wonderful to hear him so firmly insist upon his apostolical authority, and so unreservedly appeal to the miraculous powers which he had exercised and conferred at Corinth. So far from shrinking from the contest, as afraid of some discovery being made, unfavourable to him and the common cause, he, with great modesty and modesty indeed, but with equal boldness and decision, expressly declares, that his opponents and despisers were the ministers of Satan, and menaces them with miraculous judgments, when as many of their deluded hearers had been brought to repentance and re-established in the faith, as proper means could in a reasonable time effect. It is inconceivable he a stronger internal testimony, not only of integrity, but of divine inspiration, can exist! Had there been any thing of imposture among the Christians, it was next to impossible but such a conduct must have occasioned a disclosure of it. Of the effects produced by this latter epistle we have no circumstantial account: for the journey which St. Paul took to Corinth, after he had written it, is mentioned by St. Luke only in few words, (Ac. xx. 2, 3.) We know, however, that St. Paul was there after he had written this Epistle; that the contributions for the poor brethren at Jerusalem were brought to him from different parts to that city, (Ro. xv. 25.) and that, after remaining there several months, he sent salutations from some of the principal members of that church, by whom he must have been greatly respected, to the church of Rome, (Ro. xvi. 23, 23.) From this time we hear no more of the false teacher and his party; and when Clement of Rome wrote his epistle to the Corinthians, St. Paul was considered by them as a venerable apostle, to whose authority he must appeal without fear of contradiction. The false teacher, therefore, must either have been silenced by St. Paul, by virtue of his apostolical powers, and by an act of severity, which he had threatened, (2 Co. xiii. 2, 3.) or the adversary of the apostle had at that time voluntarily quitted the place. Whichever was the cause, the effect produced must operate as a confirmation of our faith, and as a proof of St. Paul's divine mission.]—Bagster.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE GALATIANS.

[THE Galatians, or Gallogrecians, were the descendants of Gauls, who migrated from their own country, and after a series of disasters, got possession of a large district in Asia Minor, from them called Galatia (Γαλατία, Attica iv.). They are mentioned by historians as a tall and valiant people, who went nearly naked, and used for arms only a buckler and sword; and the impetuosity of their attack is said to have been proverbial. Their religion, however, in conversion, was extremely corrupt and superstitious; they are said to have worshipped the mother of the gods under the name of Adigatis, and to have offered human sacrifices of the prisoners they took in war. Though they spoke the Greek language, in common with almost all the inhabitants of Asia Minor, yet it appears from Jerome that they retained their original Gaulish language, even so late as the fifth century. Christianity appears to have been first planted in these regions by St. Paul himself, (ch. i. 6; iv. 13.), who visited the churches at least twice in that country, (Acts xvi. 6; xviii. 23.) It is evident that this Epistle was written so soon after their reception of the Gospel, as he complains of their speedy apostasy from his doctrine, (ch. i. 6.) and as there is no notice of his second journey into that country, it has been supposed, with north probability, that it was written soon after his first, and consequently about A. D. 52 or 53. It appears, that soon after the Apostle had left them, some Judaizing teachers intruded themselves into the churches; drawing them off from the true Gospel, to depend on ceremonial observances, and to the vain endeavour of "establishing their own righteousness."—B.

CHAPTER I.

6 He wonders that they have so soon left him and the gospel, & an I accuseth those that press him any other gospel than he did. 11 He berates the gospel not of men, but of God: 13 And sheweth what he was before his calling, 17 and what he did presently there for.

PAUL, an apostle, (not of men, neither by man, but by Jesus Christ, and God the Father, who raised him from the dead;)

2 And all the brethren which are with me, unto the churches of Galatia:

3 Grace be to you and peace from God the Father, and from our Lord Jesus Christ,

4 Who gave himself for our sins, that he might deliver us from this present evil world, according to the will of God and our Father:

5 To whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.

6 I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of Christ unto another gospel:

7 Which is not another; but there be some that trouble you, and would pervert the gospel of Christ.

8 But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.

9 As we said before, so say I now again, If any man preach any other gospel unto you

A M. 107
AD. 52
a Ac 9:6, 15
b Ac 2:1
c Ac 16:6
15-18
d Ro 1:7
e 1 Cor 10:17
f 2 Cor 13:11
g 1 Jo 2:16
h Ro 8:27
i c 13:17, 18
j 24:11, 12
k 24:12, 17
l c 13:10, 12
m De 12:1
n Re 2:18
o 20:12, 19
p 1 Th 2:4
q Jo 4:34
r 1 Cor 15:1
s 3
t Ep 3:3
u 9:12
v 9:9
s equal in g 20:1
h Ac 22:9
i Ph 5:6
j Ma 7:5
k 13
l 1:18, 19
m Ac 13:2
n 22:14, 15
o Ro 11:1
p 2 Cor 1:6
q Ac 9:15
r 2 Cor 5:16

than that ye have received, let him be accursed.

10 For do I now persuade men, or God? or do I seek to please men? for if I yet pleased men, I should not be the servant of Christ.

11 But I certify you, brethren, that the gospel which was preached of me is not after man.

12 For I neither received it of man, neither was I taught it, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ.

13 For ye have heard of my conversation in time past in the Jews' religion, how that beyond measure I persecuted the church of God, and wasted it;

14 And profited in the Jews' religion above many my equals in mine own nation, being more exceedingly zealous of the traditions of my fathers.

15 But when it pleased God, who separated me from my mother's womb, and called me by his grace,

16 To reveal his Son in me, that I might preach him among the heathen; immediately I conferred not with flesh and blood:

17 Neither went I up to Jerusalem to any of the apostles before me; but I went into Arabia, and returned again unto Damascus.

CHAP. I. Ver. 1-24. Paul reproves the Galatians for being so soon seduced into error.—Galatia was a province of the Lesser Asia, which was first evangelized by the labours of St. Paul; who passing through it in the latter part of A. D. 50, was received with much acceptance, and there planted several churches. (Acts xvi. 5, 6.) About four years after this, he paid them a second visit, when he confirmed and edified the churches he had before planted. (Acts xviii. 23.) Between these visits, (in 52 or 53,) this Epistle is supposed to have been written, in which we learn, that soon after his first visit, some Judaizing teachers from Judea attempted to subvert the gospel, and degrade the character of the apostle, as appointed not by Jesus Christ, as were the twelve, but by the church; and not equal, either in authority or gifts, to Peter and his companions. In opposition to these insinuations, the apostle begins with stating, that he was not chosen or appointed by any man, or by any number of men, but by Christ himself, and by God the Father, who raised him from the dead.

The churches of Galatia, like most of the first Christian churches, were composed both of Jews and Gentiles; and it was the former part, probably, that first listened to the legal doctrine, which made the rite of circumcision, and conformity to the Mosaic laws, necessary to salvation. The great object of this Epistle coincides with that of the Epistle to the Romans, as it respects the ground of our justification, which in both is declared to be by grace alone; the chief difference is, that in the latter (for the Epistle to the Romans was last written) he considers the impossibility of legal justification, both as regards to the law of Nature and the law of Moses; in this Epistle to the Galatians, confining himself to the Mosaic law, he contents himself with showing, that no justification before God could be obtained by obedience to that law, the reasons of which we shall see as we proceed. But some Jewish teachers, whether from their innate prejudices toward the Mosaic law, or from the desire to form a party, at the head of which they might themselves be placed, had seduced these Galatians from their allegiance to Christ, now their only Lord and Master, and persuaded them to desert to Moses, with whom those who were Gentiles had certainly nothing to do; and to whom even the Jews, having been liberated by Christ, owed no longer subjection. This the apostle regrets, and seems to attribute it to a feebleness of mind, much too common in every age, and not less to be lamented.

Luther, the great German Reformer, wrote (as is well known) a commentary on this book, of considerable extent, to which we shall often recur, is not quite; and of all his own writings, this was his favorite, because in it he largely and ably defended his favourite doctrine of "Justification by faith alone," which he considered as the grand article by which the church alone must stand or fall. This is the gospel which Paul had taught to the Galatians, and he pronounces a bitter anathema against him who should dare to preach any other, even though "he were an angel from heaven." We do not mean, however, to insinuate that there are not other truths of great importance connected with this; but this doctrine of free grace we consider as the very path or kernel of the gospel;

Ver. 11. Profited—Doddridge, "made proficiency."

Ver. 16. Among the heathen—See Acts ix. 15, and note.—Not with flesh and blood—i. e. neither with his own feelings, nor with any of his friends.

Ver. 17. I went into Arabia—That is, after a few days spent in Damascus, but this journey is not mentioned in the Acts, and was probably more for retirement than public labour. How long he tarried there is unknown, perhaps little more than a year, and from thence he returned to Damascus, where he finished the three years mentioned in ver. 18, and was then obliged to fly. See 2 Cor. xi. 32, 33. Arabia is an extensive country of western Asia lying between the Persian Gulf on the east, and the Red Sea on the west, the Indian Ocean on the south, and Syria on the north. It is generally divided into three parts—Arabia Felix, Arabia Petraea, and Arabia Deserta. The former is surrounded on three sides by the Persian Gulf, Indian Ocean, and Red Sea, being bounded on the north by Arabia Petraea, the capital of which was Petra, and which has Egypt on the west and Palestine and Arabia Deserta on the north; which latter has the mountains of Taurus on the west, the Euphrates on the east and Syria on the north, and from its vicinity to Damascus, was probably the Arabia to which St. Paul referred. See Fasti.

CHAP. I. Ver. 1. Not of men, neither by man—i. e. not from any society of men, neither appointed by any particular man, but &c. Mucknight—Who raised him—This circumstance is very properly introduced, because it was part of the apostolic office to be a witness of Christ's resurrection. Acts i. 22.

Ver. 2. And all the brethren—Particularly ministers and persons inspired, including, probably, Luke, Silas, and Timothy.

Ver. 6. So soon—If there were but four years between Paul's two visits to Galatia, and this Epistle was written in the interim, it should seem that apostasy must have been within a year or two after their conversion.

Ver. 7. Which is not another—i. e. which, in fact, is no gospel at all, though substituted for that of Jesus.

Ver. 10. Do I now persuade men, or God?—See note on 1 Cor. xvi. 22.

Ver. 11. Do I seek to please men, or to approve myself to God?—Doddridge. See Acts xii. 17. "Having made Blasius their friend," i. e. ingratiated themselves with him. "The same word is here used."

Ver. 11. Not after—Or "according to" man—i. e. not of human invention, its authority. See on ver. 1.

18 Then ^aafter three years I ^awent up to Jerusalem to see Peter, and abode with him fifteen days.

19 But other of the apostles saw I none, save James ^b the Lord's brother.

20 Now the things which I write unto you, behold, before God, I lie not.

21 Afterwards I ^ccame into the regions of Syria and Cilicia;

22 And was unknown by face unto the churches ^d of Judea which were in Christ:

23 But they had heard ^e only, That he which persecuted us in times past now preacheth the faith which once he destroyed.

24 And they glorified ^f God in me.

CHAPTER II.

¹ He sheweth when he went up again to Jerusalem, and for what purpose: 3 and that Titus was not circumcised: 11 and that he resisted Peter, and told him the reason, 14 why he and other, being Jews, do believe in Christ to be justified by faith, and not by works: 23 and 1 that they live not in sin, who are so justified.

THEN fourteen years ^aafter I went up again to Jerusalem with Barnabas, and took Titus with me also.

2 And I went up by revelation, and communicated unto them that gospel which I preach among the Gentiles, but ^bprivately to them which were of reputation, lest by any means I ^cshould run, or had run, in vain.

3 But neither Titus, who was with me, being a Greek, was compelled to be circumcised:

A. M. cir 4056.
A. D. cir 52.
z Ac. 9. 26.
a or, returned.
b Ma. 6. 3.
c Ac. 9. 30.
d 1 Th. 2. 11.
e Ac. 9. 13; 26. 1 Th. 1. 13.
f Ac. 21. 19, 21.
a Ac. 15. 2.
b or, secretly.
c Phi. 2. 16.

d Ac. 15. 1, 24.
e c. 5. 1, 13.
f 2 Co. 11. 20 c. 1. 3, 9.
g c. 6. 3.
h Ac. 10. 34 Jo. 2. 11.
i 1 Th. 2. 1 1 Th. 2. 7.
j Mat. 16. 14 Ep. 2. 20.
k Ro. 1. 5.
l Ro. 11. 20 Ro. 15. 25.

4 And that because of false ^d brethren unawares brought in, who came in privily to spy out our liberty ^e which we have in Christ Jesus, that they might bring us into ^f bondage;

5 To whom we gave place by subjection, no, not for an hour; that the truth of the gospel might continue with you.

6 But of those who seemed ^g to be somewhat, whatsoever they were, it maketh no matter to me: God ^h accepteth no man's person: for they who seemed to be somewhat in conference added nothing to me:

7 But contrariwise, when they saw that the gospel of the uncircumcision was committed unto ⁱ me, as the gospel of the circumcision was unto Peter;

8 (For he that wrought effectually in Peter to the apostleship of the circumcision, the same was mighty in me toward the Gentiles:)

9 And when James, Cephas, and John, who seemed to be ^j pillars, perceived the grace ^k that was given unto me, they gave to me and Barnabas the right hands of fellowship; that we ^lshould go unto the heathen, and they unto the circumcision.

10 Only ^mthey would that we should remember the poor; the same which I ⁿalso was forward to do.

the holy tempers and good works resulting from this principle may, indeed, be compared to the beautiful blossoms, or wholesome fruits, which this plant bears, and therefore as essential to the system.

In the following part of the chapter he offers other facts, in proof that he received both his authority and instructions alone from heaven; for upon his conversion, instead of going up to Jerusalem, either to consult or to receive instruction, he went immediately into Arabia, and did not go to Jerusalem till three years after his conversion; and then he found there only two of the apostles, with whom he stopped but a few days; so that he could receive from them neither his commission nor his information. And as to the Jewish churches there, he had no personal introduction even to them; only they heard, through Peter and James, that he now preached the faith he formerly persecuted, and "glorified God" on his account.

CHAP. II. Ver. 1—21. Paul continues to vindicate his authority, and states the principal topic of this Epistle.—Fourteen years after his conversion, and eleven years from the former visit, Paul, directed by a divine intimation, went up again to Jerusalem, with Barnabas and Titus, and there privately communicated to the apostles and elders the doctrine which he taught relative to the Mosaic ritual, and the doctrines which he taught relative to its abrogation by the gospel; and the liberation of Jews as well as Gentiles from its farther obligation. This was not done with a view to consult them on the truth of these principles, in which he had been instructed by Christ himself, but rather to inform them on what authority they were founded, before he delivered them to a promiscuous congregation.

In this instance it does not appear that our apostle met with any opposition from his brethren; for being under the same inspiration, they were all, of course, agreed in judgment.

Doddridge and Macknight consider this as the visit to Jerusalem mentioned in Acts xv. 2, &c., when Paul, being directed by a divine influence to go up to Jerusalem, was accompanied by Barnabas and certain others, who were deputed by the church at Antioch to lay the case before the council of the apostles when Peter himself became an advocate for the Gentiles, who it was agreed should be exempted from the Mosaic yoke; and yet when Peter came to Antioch soon after, while Paul and Barnabas were there, (Acts xv. 35,) his natural timidity returned, and he temporized in a manner that provoked Paul to reprove him publicly, which surely he dared not have done if he had been the "Prince of the Apostles," as the church of Rome pretends.

The case was simply this: When Peter came, knowing the sentiments of Paul and of the church of Antioch, he made no scruple to eat with the Gentiles, as they did; but when certain friends of James came from Jerusalem, who disapproved the liberal character and conduct of Paul and his brethren at Antioch, he withdrew, and refused to eat with the Gentiles any longer.

The French infidel wit, Voltaire, who turned every thing serious into farce, represents this as a dispute between Paul and Peter about eating meats prohibited to the Jews, (as pork and black-puddings, &c. Phil. Diet. in Peter.) But this is evident misrepresentation; neither did Paul censure Peter for eating any particular article, or with any particular persons; but for his inconsistency in eating with Gentiles at one time and refusing at another, merely because some brethren had come from Antioch who were of a different opinion; whereas he, as one of the chief pillars of the Christian church, ought to have maintained a more firm and consistent conduct. What he did was evidently not from difference of opinion, but from want of firmness; and his dissenting was the more dangerous to the peace and unity of the church, because that, when he deserted, "the other Jews dissented with him, and even Barnabas was drawn aside" by his example. The reply which he puts into the mouth of Peter has two faults—1. It is utterly false; and, 2. Nothing to the purpose. Indeed, it does not appear that Peter made any reply, and the words which Voltaire ascribes to him, are only something similar to what he uttered more than seven years before, on a very different occasion. (Acts xi. 5, 6.) See Dr. Finlay's Ans. to Volt. § 23.

We now come to examine the great doctrine of this Epistle, as well as of that to the Romans, namely, justification by faith alone—by which is not meant a dead faith, accompanied with no good works; but that those works have no part in our justification before God. Upon this subject we shall add a short extract from the third Homily: (Part 2):—

"Nor when they say [i. e. the Greek and Latin Fathers before referred to in this Homily] that we should be justified freely, do they mean that we might afterwards be idle, and that nothing should be required on our part afterwards. . . . But this saying, that we be justified by faith only, freely, and without works, is spoken for to take away clearly all merit of our works, as being unable to deserve our justification at God's hands, and thereby most plainly to express the weakness of man, and the goodness of God; . . . the imperfection of our own works, and the most abundant grace of our Saviour Christ; and therefore wholly to ascribe the merit and deserving of our justification unto Christ only, and to his most precious blood-shedding."

In the close of this chapter, the apostle explains how it is that believers in Christ still obey the law, though they look to no justification from it. "If while we seek to be justified by Christ, we are found sinners"—i. e. persevering in a course of sin, is Christ therefore to blame? "Is Christ therefore the minister of sin? God forbid!" So far, however, am I from living in sin, that though "I through the law am dead to the law," that is, as to all hopes of salvation from it—yet is this

Ver. 23. Once he destroyed.—Doddridge, "ravaged;" i. e. persecuted. See Acts i. 21.

CHAP. II. Ver. 1. Fourteen years after—Referring to the same era as in ver. 15, namely, his conversion. So Doddridge and Macknight. Supposing his conversion to have been in A. D. 28, this would bring us to the year 42. [This journey appears evidently to refer to that which the Apostle took to Jerusalem about the question of circumcision, mentioned in Ac. xv. 2, &c. These years, says Whitby, must be reckoned from the time of his conversion mentioned here, (chap. i. 18,) which took place A. D. 35. (or 33,) his journey to Peter was A. D. 38. (or 36,) and then between that and the council of Jerusalem, assembled A. D. 49. (or 52,) will be 14 intervening years.]—Bagster.

Ver. 2. By revelation—i. e. by divine intimation—but privately.—Meaning, perhaps, not individually—but apart from the other brethren.—Let I should run—That is, labour—in vain.—He means, lest he should not maintain the harmony or unanimity which he desired.

Ver. 4. Unawares brought in—Macknight, "secretly introduced."

Ver. 6. Seemed (Gr. were esteemed) to be somewhat—Doddridge, "appeared to be considerable," or "of reputation;" the same word as in ver. 2.—God accepteth no man's person—See Rom. ii. 11.—Added nothing unto me—i. e. said nothing in reply.

Ver. 7. Contrariwise—Doddridge, "on the contrary."—The circumcision—i. e. the Jews.

11 But when Peter was come to ^m Antioch, I withstood him to the face, because he was to be blamed.

12 For before that certain came from James, he did eat ^a with the Gentiles: but when they were come, he withdrew and separated himself, fearing them which were of the circumcision.

13 And the other Jews dissembled likewise with him; insomuch that Barnabas also was carried away with their dissimulation.

14 But when I saw that they walked not uprightly according to the truth ^o of the gospel, I said unto Peter ^p before them all, If thou, being a Jew, livest after the manner of Gentiles, and not as do the Jews, why compellest thou the Gentiles to live as do the Jews?

15 We ^q who are Jews by nature, and not sinners ^o of the Gentiles, 16 Knowing that ^r a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith ^s of Jesus Christ, even we have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law: for ^t by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified.

17 But if, while we seek to be justified by Christ, we ^u ourselves also are found sinners, ^v is therefore Christ the minister of sin? God forbid.

18 For if I build again the things which I destroyed, I make myself a transgressor.

19 For I ^w through the law am dead to the law, that I might live ^x unto God.

20 I am crucified ^y with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in ^z me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself ^a for me.

21 I do not frustrate the grace of God: for if ^b righteousness come by the law, then Christ is dead in vain.

CHAPTER III.

1 He asketh what moved him to leave the faith, and hang upon the law? 6 That they that believe are justified, 9 and blessed with Abraham. 10 And this he sheweth by many reasons.

O FOOLISH ^a Galatians, who ^b hath bewitched you, that ye should not obey the only "that I might live unto God," and be his devoted servant. But "I am crucified with Christ," and die unto sin, even as he died for sin: yet "nevertheless I live," namely, by faith in him: "yet (it is) not I," that live independent of Christ; "but Christ liveth in me," my life, my hope, and my salvation: and "the life which I now live, I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me." I do not therefore frustrate the grace of God, "or deprecate its value: [for (on the contrary) if righteousness (come) by the law]—if we could be justified by our own works," then (indeed) were Christ dead in vain."

CHAP. III. VER. 1—29. The folly of forsaking the gospel, and the blessedness of receiving it.—This chapter opens in the mingled language of pity and reproof, remonstrating with the Galatians upon their folly in forsaking the gospel, in which the infinite love and compassion of the Saviour had been so visibly and vividly exhibited before them as crucified for their sins, to return to a system of carnal ordinances, which, separate from the gospel it had prefigured, was merely a body without a soul. To desert the vivifying spirit of Christianity for the mere "carcass of dead piety," (which was all that was now left of the ritual law,) was, as Paul expresses it, to begin in the spirit, and seek to finish and perfect themselves by the flesh.

In confirmation of his doctrine as opposed to that of their legal teachers, St. Paul now appeals, 1. To the miracles which

Ver. 11 I withstood, &c.—Macknight, "I opposed him personally." It would seem that Paul did not regard Peter as infallible.

Ver. 18 If I build again, the things which I destroyed—i. e. If I should encourage sin, which is a violation of the law, for the destruction and suppression of which I labour, then, indeed, should "I build again," &c.

Ver. 19 I through the law, &c.—That is, "the more I consider its nature and tenor, the more I am convinced of the impossibility of justification by it." See Doddridge.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. O foolish Galatians—Doddridge, "thoughtless"—"Who hath bewitched you?—Doddridge, "enchanted you?" Macknight, "deceived you?" The latter remarks, that it alludes to the deceptions of jugglers, who impose upon the weak and credulous, by dazzling their sight with the rapidity of their motions.

Ver. 3 Are ye now made perfect—Macknight, "Ye now make yourselves perfect."—(The Gr. verb is in the middle voice.)

Ver. 4 So many—This seems to refer to the reproach and persecution they had suffered for Christ.

Ver. 11. The just shall live by faith.—Compare Hab. ii. 4. with Heb. x. 38.

A. M. cir.
4056
A. D. cir.
52

m Ac 15 35

u Ac 11 3.

o ver 5.

p 1 Ti 5 20

q Ep 2 3, 12

r Ac 13 38,

29

s Ro 3 30

a Ro 5 1

c 3 11, 23

t Ps 143 2

He 7 18,

19.

u 1 Jo 3 9,

10

v Ro 7 4, 10

8 2

w Ro 6 11,

13

2 Co 5 15

x c 5 24

6 14

y 1 Th 5 19

1 Pt 4 2

z Jo 10 11.

Ep 5 2

a He 7 11.

a Mat 7 26

b c 5 7

c Ep 1 13

d Ro 10 17

e c 4 9

f He 9 10

g or, great

h 2 Jo 8

i 2 Co 3 4

j Ge 15 6

k or, imputed.

l Jo 8 39

Ro 1 11

16

m ver 22

n Ge 12 3

22 18

Ac 3 25.

o c 4 25

p De 27 26.

q Hab 2 4

r Ro 10 5 6

s Ep 15 5

Eze 29 11

1 2 Co 5 21

c 4 5

u De 21 23

v Ro 4 9, 16

w Is 44 3

Eze 36 27

Joel 2 28,

32

x or, testament

y Ge 12 3, 7

17 7.

truth, before whose eyes Jesus Christ hath been evidently set forth, crucified among you?

2 This only would I learn of you, Received ye the Spirit by the works of the law, or ^a by the hearing of faith?

3 Are ye so foolish? having ^a begun in the Spirit, are ye now made perfect by ^t the flesh?

4 Have ye suffered ^a so many things in ^v vain? if it be yet in vain.

5 He therefore that ministereth ⁱ to you the Spirit, and worketh miracles among you, doeth he it by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith?

6 Even as Abraham ⁱ believed God, and it was ^a accounted to him for righteousness.

7 Know ye therefore that they which are of faith, the same are the children ⁱ of Abraham.

8 And the scripture, foreseeing that God would justify ^m the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, ^a In thee shall all nations be blessed.

9 So then ^o they which be of faith are blessed with faithful Abraham.

10 For as many as are of the works of the law are under the curse: for it is written, ^p Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them.

11 But that no man is justified by the law in the sight of God, it is evident: for, The ^a just shall live by faith.

12 And the law ^r is not of faith: but, The ^a man that doeth them shall live in them.

13 Christ ⁱ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us: for it is written, ^p Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree:

14 That ^a the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ; that we might receive the promise ^o of the Spirit through faith.

15 Brethren, I speak after the manner of men; Though it be but a man's ^a covenant, yet if it be confirmed, no man disannulleth, or addeth thereto.

16 Now to ^v Abraham and his seed were the

he had wrought among them. "He therefore that ministereth unto you, and worketh miracles among you," (meaning evidently himself,) doth he this "by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith?" is he a minister of the legal, or the evangelical system? The answer he leaves to them; and then appeals,

2. To the case of Abraham, who received all his blessings, not through the ritual services of Moses, which, indeed, were not then instituted, but through the covenant of grace, (which was the foundation of the gospel;) as it is said, "Abraham believed God, and it (his faith) was accounted (or imputed) to him for righteousness." But what did Abraham believe? He believed the promise of a seed, (or son,) "in whom all the nations of the earth" should eventually "be blessed;" and it is to those only who have faith in the promised Messiah, that the privilege belongs of being his children, as the same inspired writer argues at large, in the 4th chapter of his Epistle to the Romans. "So then they (and they only) which be (the children) of faith are blessed with faithful Abraham." On the other hand, they who still adhere to the law, as a covenant of life and salvation, are subject to its curse; "For it is written, Cursed is he that continueth not in all things written in the book of the law to do them." And as none of us have thus continued, we all, of course, are subject to its curse.

3. The same point may be argued as well from the prophets as from the law; for it is written in the prophet Habakkuk, glers, who impose upon the weak and credulous, by dazzling their sight with the rapidity of their motions.

Ver. 3 Are ye now made perfect—Macknight, "Ye now make yourselves perfect."—(The Gr. verb is in the middle voice.)

Ver. 4 So many—This seems to refer to the reproach and persecution they had suffered for Christ.

Ver. 11. The just shall live by faith.—Compare Hab. ii. 4. with Heb. x. 38.

Ver. 15 A man's covenant—We have remarked repeatedly, that the same word in Greek signifies both covenant and testament; but we think the former term agrees best here.

promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ.

17 And this I say, that the covenant, that was confirmed before of God in Christ, the law, which ² was four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannul, that it should make the promise of none effect.

18 For if ^a the inheritance be of the law, it is no more of promise: but God gave it to Abraham by promise.

19 Wherefore then serveth the law? ^b It was added because of transgressions, till the seed ^c should come to whom the promise was made; and it was ordained by angels ^d in the hand ^e of a mediator.

20 Now a mediator is not a mediator of one, but God ^f is one.

21 Is the law then against ^g the promises of God? God forbid: for if ^h there had been a law given which could have given life, verily righteousness should have been by the law.

22 But the scripture hath concluded all ⁱ under sin, that the promise ^j by faith of Jesus Christ might be given to them that believe.

23 But before faith came, we were kept under the law, shut up unto the faith which should afterwards be revealed.

24 Wherefore the law ^k was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith.

A. M. cir. 4056.
A. D. cir. 52.

z Ex. 12:30, 41.

h Ro. 4:11.

b Ro. 5:30.

c ver. 16.

d Ac. 7:53.

He. 2:2.

e Ex. 20:19.

He. 5:22.

31.

f De. 6:4.

g Mat. 5:17.

h e. 22.

i Ro. 2:9, 19, 23.

j Ro. 4:11, 12, 16.

k Col. 2:17.

He. 9:10.

1 Jn. 1:12.

1 Jn. 3:1, 2.

m Ro. 6:3.

n Col. 3:11.

o ver. 7.

p Ro. 4:17.

a or, rudiments.

Col. 2:8, 20.

b Ro. 8:15, 17.

25 But after that faith is come, we are no longer under a schoolmaster.

26 For ye are all the children ¹ of God by faith in Christ Jesus.

27 For ^m as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ.

28 There is ⁿ neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus.

29 And if ye be Christ's, then ^o are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs ^p according to the promise.

CHAPTER IV.

1 We were under the law till Christ came, as the heir is under his guardian till he be of age. 5 But Christ freed us from the law: 7 therefore we are servants no longer to it. 14 He remembereth their good will to him, and his to them, 22 and sheweth that we are the sons of Abraham by the freewoman.

NOW I say, That the heir, as long as he is a child, differeth nothing from a servant though he be lord of all;

2 But is under tutors and governors until the time appointed of the father.

3 Even so we, when we were children, were in bondage under the ^a elements of the world:

4 But when the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law.

5 To redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons.

6 And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit ^b of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father.

7 Wherefore thou art no more a servant, but

"The just shall live by faith:" but the law is not of faith, and therefore "cannot justify," or give us life. The gospel, however, which we believe, teaches us that "Christ hath redeemed us [both Jews and Gentiles] from the curse of the law, (by) being himself made a curse for us," by his crucifixion; for it is written, (Deut. xxi. 23.) "Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree." Now, as every honest man will keep his covenant, or promise, and especially when it is ratified on oath, much more the God of truth and righteousness, who, indeed, "cannot lie." Nor can his covenant, when once ratified by sacrifice or oath, be afterwards disannulled; consequently, God's covenant with Abraham cannot be set aside by the law of Moses, which was not given till 430 years afterwards, and then for a very different purpose—namely, to convince of sin, and lead us to seek for mercy.

Of this law it is said, that it was "ordained by [the ministry of] angels in the hands of a Mediator;" (see Ps. lxxv. 17, compare with Acts vii. 53;) and that Mediator was Moses, the servant of God; but the term Mediator implies two parties, of whom God is only one. The other was the people of Israel, to whom Moses delivered the tables of the law, which he received from the hands of God. But the gospel is a far more illustrious dispensation, brought from heaven by the Son of God himself, our divine Mediator with the Father.

There is not, however, any real inconsistency between these dispensations, the one being only preparatory to the other. If the law itself could have given life, then, indeed, salvation might have been by the law; but as it is, the law was only our guide, our conductor, or (as our translators express it) our schoolmaster to lead us unto Christ; in which there is an allusion to an ancient custom not generally observed. The Roman ladies, it seems, in the earliest and best times, used themselves to educate their children; but as times degenerated, this was intrusted to the servants and public schools. A slave, whose office it was to conduct the children to the public schools, and to assist them in learning their first lessons, was on that account called a pedagogue (the very word here used.) (D'Arnay's Priv. Life of the Rom. chap. vii.) Such is the office of the Mosaic law. The moral law shows us that we are sinners, and need a Saviour; the ceremonial law leads us to the cross to receive instruction. Every sacrifice directs to the great atonement for justification; and every ceremony points us to some doctrine or precept of Christianity. But "Faith being come"—This expression is, we apprehend, elliptical, and must intend either Christ, who is the object of faith, or the gospel, elsewhere called "the law of faith;" (Rom. iii. 27;) and here "the promise by faith of Jesus Christ."

But now being come to Christ, we are no longer under the care of a common pedagogue: God has committed us to the instruction of his own Son; so it was the custom of the Romans, after children had received the elements of instruction at school, to place them under the care of some eminent philosopher or rhetorician; unless the parent was sufficiently qualified to instruct them himself, as was the case with Augustus. (See D'Arnay, as above.) And this is the case not with a few only of God's favoured children, but with them all—Jew or Gentile, rich or poor, &c. They are all alike the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1.—31. Christ frees us from the sentence of the law—this illustrated by an allegory.—St. Paul here resumes his allusion to the mode of juvenile education, particularly among the Romans. The heir of an estate, while yet a child, differed nothing in authority from a servant or slave, and was even, in some cases, subjected to their control. So the church and children of God were in bondage, till liberated by Christ. But when "the fulness of the time," ordained and predicted, "came," then the Father sent forth his Son from his own bosom, and liberated them from their subject condition—introduced them into "the glorious liberty of the sons of God"—and bestowed on them the spirit of adoption, whereby they were allowed to claim the privilege of sons, and call the Most High their Father.

In verse 8, and sequel, the apostle proceeds to remonstrate with these Galatians, and blames them for that, after they had been admitted to the liberty of children, they suffered themselves to be drawn back, if not into the slavery of idolatry, at least into the thralldom of a carnal Judaism. The late Mr. Fuller justly remarks, that the apostle speaks in much more tolerant and gentle language to the Romans, (Rom. xiv. 5,) because he is there addressing himself to Jewish converts, who had been educated in the observance of those festivals, and who might innocently observe them, though not now bound to do so; but here he is addressing Gentile converts, who had never been in subjection to the law of Moses, nor were by any law, Christian or Mosaic, required so to be; but they had been beset by certain Judaizing teachers, who drew them into

Ver. 16. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many—i. e. the word seed is not here used in the plural sense, but in the singular, as in Gen. iii. 15; iv. 25; xxi. 12, &c.—Which—Macknight, "Who."

Ver. 17. Four hundred and thirty years—See note on Exod. xii. 40.

Ver. 20. A mediator is not a mediator of one—The very name not only implies two parties, but also a difference between them. The Jews could not come into the presence of God, but through the medium of Moses: nor can we entertain communion with God, but through the incarnation of our Saviour Christ. (Heb. x. 19, 20.)

Ver. 22. Hath concluded all under sin—Doddridge and Macknight, "Hath shut up [as criminals] all under [the condemnation of] sin."

Ver. 23. Kept under—shut up, &c.—May not this refer to the subjection of children to their father's slave, in the character of a pedagogue? The subject of the servant have had the authority of confining a child, when he should prove refractory, and neglect his lesson? See next verse.

Ver. 24. Our schoolmaster.—Gr. "Pedagogue." So next verse.

a son; and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ.

8 Howbeit then, when ye knew not God, ye did service unto them which by nature are no gods.

9 But now, after that ye have known God, or rather are known of God, how turn ye again to the weak and beggarly elements, wherunto ye desire again to be in bondage?

10 Ye observe days, and months, and times, and years.

11 I am afraid of you, lest I have bestowed upon you labour in vain.

12 Brethren, I beseech you, be as I am; for I am as ye are; ye have not injured me at all.

13 Ye know how through infirmity of the flesh I preached the gospel unto you at the first.

14 And my temptation which was in my flesh ye despised not, nor rejected; but received me as an angel of God, even as Christ Jesus.

15 Where is then the blessedness ye spake of? for I bear you record, that if it had been possible, ye would have plucked out your own eyes, and have given them to me.

16 Am I therefore become your enemy, because I tell you the truth?

17 They zealously affect you, but not well; yea, they would exclude you, that ye might affect them.

18 But it is good to be zealously affected always in a good thing, and not only when I am present with you.

19 My little children, of whom I travail in birth again until Christ be formed in you,

A. M. cir.
4056
A. D. cir.
52

c or, back.

d or, rudiments.

e 1 Co 2:3.

f 2Sa 19:27

g Mai. 10:40

h or, what was.

i Ro 10:2

j or, us.

k 1 Co 15:58

l 1 Co 1:15

m or, I am perplexed for you.

n Ge 16:15.

o Ge 21:1,2

p Ro 9:7,8

q 1 Co 10:11

r or, testaments

s Sin

t De 33:2

u or, is in the name read, with.

v He 12:22

w Re 21:2, 10

x Is 54:1

y Ec 3:25

z Ec 3:29

a Ge 14:9.

b Jn 13:19

c Ge 21:10, 12

20 I desire to be present with you now, and to change my voice; for I stand in doubt of you.

21 Tell me, ye that desire to be under the law, do ye not hear the law?

22 For it is written, that Abraham had two sons, the one by a bondmaid, the other by a freewoman.

23 But he who was of the bondwoman was born after the flesh; but he of the freewoman was by promise.

24 Which things are an allegory: for these are the two covenants; the one from the mount Sinai, which gendereth to bondage, which is Agar.

25 For this Agar is mount Sinai in Arabia, and answereth to Jerusalem which now is, and is in bondage with her children.

26 But Jerusalem which is above is free, which is the mother of us all.

27 For it is written, Rejoice, thou barren that bearest not; break forth and cry, thou that travailest not: for the desolate hath many more children than she which hath a husband.

28 Now we, brethren, as Isaac was, are the children of promise.

29 But as then he that was born after the flesh persecuted him that was born after the Spirit, even so it is now.

30 Nevertheless what saith the scripture? Cast out the bondwoman and her son: for the son of the bondwoman shall not be heir with the son of the freewoman.

31 So then, brethren, we are not children of the bondwoman, but of the free.

the observance of the Jewish festivals, which were now becoming obsolete, even to the Jews themselves; and he was jealous, lest by this compliance they should be drawn under the yoke of circumcision, and the whole Jewish law. He remonstrates with them, therefore, on returning to mere ritual services, which, though originally instituted by God, were now no more acceptable to him, when placed in opposition to the gospel, than the rites of Pagan superstition. Indeed, ritual services, abstracted from heart devotion, were never acceptable to the true God; and now those services were placed in opposition to his own gospel, they were no less an abomination than idolatry itself.

Verse 12. The apostle reminds them that he was once no less attached to these "beggarly elements" than they now were, or indeed could be; but he had seen the folly of such an attachment, and entreated them to profit by his example, and adhere to Christ and his gospel. "Be as I [am]; for I [was] as ye [are]."¹ He was a Hebrew of the Hebrews, and of the strictest sect of that religion; but the grace of God had weaned him from all undue attachment to outward forms, and he was anxious that grace might do the same for them. He reminds them of the attachment which they had formerly shown to him, notwithstanding his infirmities—when they received him as if it had been Christ in person; but such over-zealous professions are often marks of instability, and are soon followed by a reverse of feeling. He then begs them not to consider him as their enemy, because he had told them the truth, and endeavoured to guard against the pretended friendship of those Jewish teachers, who now enfeebled to ensnare them, and for that purpose had been trying to alienate their affections from him and from his brethren.

ish Genara, to prove that slaves were never allowed to address their masters under this title.

Ver. 8. Ye did service—Doddridge, "were in bondage." Macknight, "Ye served as slaves."—No gods—i. e. either mere idols of wood and stone, or, at best, the celestial luminaries.

Ver. 9. Known of God—i. e. acknowledged and distinguished by him.—How turn ye again?—But these had never been under the yoke before; now they can be said, turn back to the weak and beggarly elements; &c. Perhaps the omission of the article the in the translation would remove all difficulty, thus:—How turn ye again to weak and beggarly elements? meaning a religion of ceremonies and ceremonies; for the ceremonies of Judaism, abstracted from all reference to the Messiah, are no less "weak and beggarly" than those of Paganism. This agrees with the sense given of this passage by most commentators.

Ver. 10. Ye observe days, and months—This is generally supposed to refer to the Jewish festivals; but Archbishop Potter understands it in reference to the lucky and unlucky days of the superstitious Greeks and Romans. It does not, however, appear, that any attempt was made to draw the Galatians back to Paganism.

Ver. 12. For I am—This verb is wrong supplied. Doddridge, Macknight, and most modern translators, supply the past tense—"I was as ye are."

Ver. 14. My temptation in my flesh.—The thorn in his flesh; 2 Cor. xii. 7.

Ver. 15. The blessedness ye spake of—That is, the happiness they professed to enjoy under his ministry.

Ver. 17. They zealously affect you—i. e. "they profess great attachment."

In the latter part of this chapter, (verse 24–31,) the apostle introduces an allegorical exposition of the history of Hagar and Sarah, and their respective children, in application to the Jewish and Christian systems. It is well known that the Rabbies were always very fond of these allegories, and it is supposed that St. Paul may have employed this as a kind of argument ad hominem, against the Jewish teachers who opposed him.

"An allegory (says Dr. Macknight) is, when persons or events present, or near at hand, with their qualities and circumstances, are considered as types, or representations, of persons and events more remote, to which they have a resemblance. Of this kind were the histories of some persons and events recorded in the Old Testament. . . . For the qualities and circumstances of these persons were, it seems, so ordered by God, as to be apt representations of such future persons and events, as God intended should attract the attention of mankind." This allegory is thus explained:—

(Ver. 24.) Which things are an allegory: for these [women] are the two covenants; the one verily from mount Sinai, bringing forth [children] into bondage, which is Agar. (25.) For [the name] Hagar (or Agar) denotes mount Sinai in Arabia, and answereth to the present Jerusalem, and is in bondage with her children. (26.) But the Jerusalem above is the free [woman], who is the mother of us all." The apostle then quotes a passage from Isaiah, supposed to allude to the same subject, in which case the barren woman is Sarah, (who was long desolate and barren,) but whose children, meaning the children of the promise, shall be more numerous than those of Hagar. It is added, as Ishmael persecuted Isaac, so the carnal world persecutes the church. In applying the allegory, Compare 2 Cor. xi. 2.—But not well—i. e. not truly.—They would exclude you—Margm, U. S. So read both some MS. and printed copies, and it is thought to be the true reading by Doddridge, Macknight, and others.

Ver. 20. I desire—Doddridge, "I would wish"—to be present with you, and to change my voice—i. e. "to change the tone of my language toward you." See Macknight.—For I stand in doubt of you—Margm, "I am perplexed," i. e. what to think of you.

Ver. 21. Do ye not hear the law?—i. e. hear it read in your public assemblies.

Ver. 24. Which things are an allegory—Doddridge, "may be allegorized;" but Macknight prefers the common version. There is some difficulty, however, in the translation of this and the next verse. Doddridge, to avoid the absurdity of saying, (as our version does,) "This Sinai is Agar—for this Agar is Sinai," would render the illative particle (gar) as an expletive—"I say." Mr. Parkhurst (Lex. in Agar, 2d edit.) reads and points the passage thus:—"The one . . . which gendereth to bondage, which is Agar. (For this Agar means mount Sinai in Arabia,) and answereth." &c. He adds, from Busching, that Hagar is, in Arabic, a rock. N. B. Hazar and Agar are the same word, as pronounced with or without an aspirate.

Ver. 27. Than she which hath a husband—Doddridge, "than her who had," &c. This must be applied to Hagar if the other is to Sarah; but it can be only as an accommodation.

Ver. 29. He that persecutes you, &c.—i. e. the carnal world persecute the spiritual.

Ver. 30. Cast out the bondwoman—i. e. in the allegorical sense, the law as a covenant, &c. See Gen xxi. 10.

CHAPTER V.

He moveth them to stand in their liberty. 3 and not to observe circumcision: 13 but rather love, which is the sum of the law. 19 He reckoneth up the works of the flesh, 22 and the fruits of the Spirit, 25 and exhorteth to walk in the Spirit.

STAND ^a fast therefore in the ^b liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage.

2 Behold, I Paul say unto you, that if ye be circumcised, Christ shall profit you nothing.

3 For I testify again to every man that is circumcised, that he is a debtor to do the whole law.

4 Christ is become of no effect unto you, whosoever of you are justified by the law; ye are fallen ^d from grace.

5 For we through the Spirit wait ^e for the hope of righteousness ^f by faith.

6 For in Jesus Christ neither ^g circumcision availeth any thing, nor uncircumcision; but faith which ^h worketh by love.

7 Ye did run well; who did ⁱ hinder you that ye should not obey the truth?

8 This persuasion cometh not of him that calleth you.

9 A little ^j leaven leaveneth the whole lump.

10 I have confidence in you through the Lord, that ye will be none otherwise minded: but he that troubleth you shall bear ^k his judgment, whosoever he be.

11 And I, brethren, if I yet preach circumci-

A. M. cir.
4056.
A. D. cir.
52.

a Ep. 6.14.
b Jn. 8.32, 36.
c Rom. 6.18.
d Ac. 15.10.
e Ro. 9.31.
f He. 12.15.
g Ro. 8.25.
h 2 Th. 4.8.
i 1 Co. 7.19.
j 1 Th. 1.3.
k Ja. 2.18.
22.

l or, drive
you back.
m Mat. 13.33.
n 1 Co. 5.6.
o 2 Co. 10.6.

p 1 Co. 12.
q 1 Co. 12.3.
r 1 Co. 8.9.
s 1 Pe. 2.16.
t 1 Jn. 3.18.
u 1 Jn. 19.18.
v Mat. 22.
w Ja. 2.8.
x Ro. 8.1, 4.
y 13.
z or, fulfil
not.
aa Ro. 7.21.
ab 22.
ac Ro. 8.6, 7.
ad Ro. 7.15.
ae 19.
af Ro. 6.14.
ag 5.2.
ah Mat. 15.19.
ai Ep. 5.3, 6.
aj Col. 3.5, 6.
ak 22.15.

sion, why do I yet suffer ¹ persecution? then is the offence ^m of the cross ceased.

12 I would they were even cut off which trouble you.

13 For, brethren, ye have been called unto liberty: only ^{use} not ^a liberty for an occasion to the flesh, but by love ^b serve one another.

14 For all the law is fulfilled in one word, ^{even} in this; ^p Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.

15 But if ye bite and devour one another, take heed that ye be not consumed one of another.

16 This I say then, Walk ^q in the Spirit, and ^r ye shall not fulfil the lust of the flesh.

17 For ^s the flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh: and these are contrary ^t the one to the other: so that ^u ye cannot do the things that ye would.

18 But if ^v ye be led of the Spirit, ye are not under the law.

19 Now the works of the flesh ^w are manifest, which are these; Adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness,

20 Idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies,

21 Envyings, murders, drunkenness, revelings, and such like: of the which I tell you before, as I have also told ^{you} in time past, the advice is, "Cast out the bond-woman and her son;" that is, reject the law, and embrace the gospel!

CHAP. V. Ver. 1-26. The Galatians exhorted to maintain their Christian liberty inviolate.—"These Galatians, who were converted to the faith of Christ, had been closely beset," as Dr. Watts observes, "by some zealous Judaizing Christians, who would fain have had them circumcised, and engaged to keep the Jewish law." The apostle, who well understood the liberty of the gospel, would not suffer them to be thus imposed upon; and therefore he argues, he allures, he threatens, he denounces—he uses all the proper methods of an apostle, and a preacher of Christianity, to establish them in the liberty wherewith Christ had made them free; and to guard them against yielding a title of compliance with the Jewish ceremonies and bondage. He shows them in this [Epistle] that the promise was given to Abraham, the great believer, with all the blessings of salvation contained in it; and to all those who imitate his faith, by trusting in the gospel of Christ, for they are the [true] seed of Abraham. And the law curses and condemns sinners, but it does not, it cannot, save them.

... The question arises, (ver. 19,) To what end then serveth the law? The answer is, To show them their sins, and to keep alive a sense of sin among them [by continual sacrifices] till Christ should come, who was to remove sin. Then comes in the objection—Is not the law then against the promises? Is not the promise to Abraham contradicted by the law given to the Jews? No; by no means; for they were designed for different purposes. The law was given for special and peculiar reasons in this life, to the Jews: the promise was given to Abraham, and through him, to all Gentile as well as Jewish believers, for eternal life. Whereas, "if there had been a law given, which could have given life, (i. e. eternal life,) verily, righteousness should have been by the law: but the Scripture hath concluded all under sin, that the promise by faith of Jesus Christ might be given to them that believe."

Thus far we have a judicious abstract of the apostle's argument in the preceding chapters: he now tells them plainly and pointedly, that by conforming to the Jewish ceremonial law, which never was designed for them, they were guilty of apostasy, and renounced Christianity, no less than if they had returned to Paganism. "Behold, I Paul say unto you, that if ye be circumcised, Christ shall profit you nothing." How so, Paul? "Every man that is [now] circumcised becomes a debtor to do the whole law;" because he goes back from Christ, who has fulfilled the law for believers—renounces his atonement, and takes all the responsibility on himself. Christ becomes of "no effect" to those who turn their backs upon him, and seek to be justified and saved by the law of Moses. But to those who believe in Christ, whether Jews who have been circumcised, as born under the law of Moses; or Gentiles, from whom circumcision is not required, "faith which worketh by love" is the only ground of their acceptance—the only foundation of their hope.

On the 2d verse of this chapter ("Behold, I Paul," &c.) Martin Luther has this pointed remark:—"This place is, as it were, a touchstone, whereby we may most certainly and freely judge of all doctrines, works, religions, and ceremonies of all men. Whosoever teacheth that there is any thing necessary to salvation (whether they be Papists, Turks, Jews, or sectaries) besides faith in Christ; or shall devise any work or religion, or observe any rule, tradition, or ceremony whatsoever, with this opinion, that by such things they shall obtain forgiveness of sins, righteousness, and everlasting life; they shall hear in this place the sentence of the Holy Ghost pronounced against them by the apostle, that Christ profiteth them nothing. Seeing Paul durst give this sentence against the law and circumcision, which were ordained of God himself, what durst he not to do against the chaff and the dross of men's traditions?"

But while Paul deprecates the merit of works, he highly extols the excellency of true—not barren, unproductive—faith, but "faith which worketh by love," on which the same great Reformer just quoted thus descants:—"It is as much as to say, He that will be a true Christian . . . must be a true believer. Now he believeth not truly, if works of charity follow not his faith. So . . . as well on the right hand as the left, he shutteth hypocrites out of Christ's kingdom. On the left hand, he shutteth out the Jews . . . saying, In Christ neither circumcision—that is to say, No works, no service, no worship, no kind of life in the world; but faith, without any trust in works, or merits, availeth before God. On the right hand he shutteth out all slothful and idle persons, which say, If faith justify without works, then let us work nothing; but let us only believe, and do what we list. Not so, ye enemies of grace: Paul saith otherwise. And although it be true, that only faith justifyth, yet he here speaketh of faith in another respect; that is to say, that after it hath justified, it is not idle; but occupied and exercised in working through love. Paul therefore in this place setteth forth the whole life of a Christian man; namely, that inwardly it consisteth in faith towards God; and outwardly, in charity and good works towards our neighbour. So that a man is a perfect Christian inwardly

CHAP. V. Ver. 4. Christ is become of no effect.—Dr. P. Smith, "Ye are nullified from Christ; i. e. he is to you as if he had not existed; ye are totally separated from him."

Ver. 7. Who did hinder you.—The original expression, according to Doddridge, is Olympic, in reference to the races, and alludes to some one "coming across the course while a person is running," and so "stopping," or "driving him back," as the Margin is.

Ver. 8. Item that calleth you.—If this expression be referred to "effectual calling," which is the work of God, it must be ascribed to the Author of all good, as Rom. viii. 30. But if it be understood of the ministerial instrument, then it must refer to Paul only, as in chap. i. 6.

Ver. 9. A little leaven.—See note on 1 Cor. v. 7.

Ver. 10. Shall bear his judgment.—i. e. receive his just punishment. See verse 12.

Ver. 11. If I yet preach circumcision.—This is supposed to be an objection of one of his opponents, who perhaps had heard him assert the divine origin of circumcision, which he certainly did not deny: but if they thought him the advocate for circumcision, why persecute him?

Ver. 12. I would they were even cut off.—That is, from the church.

Ver. 13. For an occasion to the flesh.—That is, as an excuse for sin. See ver. 16; also 1 Peter ii. 16.

Ver. 14. All the law is fulfilled in one word.—See Mat. vii. 12.

Ver. 16. Ye shall not fulfil.—See Rom. viii. 5. But the Margin reads imperatively—"Fulfil ye not," which is to the same effect.

Ver. 17. The flesh lusteth.—&c.—Doddridge, "Hath desires contrary to."

&c. Compare Rom. vii. 14, &c.

Ver. 18. If ye be led of the Spirit.—Compare Rom. viii. 11.

Ver. 20. Witchcraft.—Blacknight. "Sorcery."—Heresies.—See Tit. iii. 10.

Ver. 21. Revelings.—(Gr. Komoi.) i. e. festive or convivial meetings, in honour of Comus.—I tell you before. &c.—Blacknight. "forewarn you," &c.

that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God.

22 But the fruit ^a of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith,

23 Meekness, temperance: against ^y such there is no law.

24 And they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the ^z affections and lusts.

25 If ^a we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit.

26 Let ^b us not be desirous of vain glory, provoking one another, envying one another.

CHAPTER VI.

1 He soweth them to deal faithfully with a brother that hath sinned, 2 and to bear one another's burden; 3 to be liberal to their teachers, 9 and not weary of well doing.

12 He sheweth what they must do that preach circumcision. 14 He glorieth in nothing, save in the cross of Christ.

15 He sheweth that they which are spiritual, restore ^b such a one in the spirit of meekness; considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted.

2 Bear ^c ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ.

3 For if a man think himself to be something, when he is nothing, he deceiveth himself.

4 But let every man prove ^d his own work, and then shall he have rejoicing in himself ^e alone, and not in another.

5 For every man shall bear his own burden.

6 Let ^f him that is taught in the word communicate unto him that teacheth in all good things.

7 Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap.

A M cir 40/52
A 11 cir 52
x Ju 15.5
Ep 5.9.
y 1 Ti 4.9
z or, peace-giving.
a Ro 4.5
b Phi 2.3.
a or, at-though.
b Ja 5.19,20
c Ro 15.1.
d 2 Co 13.5.
e Pr 14 11
f 1 Co 9.14
14

g 1 Jo 4.8
Pr 22.5
Ho 5.7
h Pr 11.18
Ja 3.18.
i 1 Co 15.58
j 1 Jo 4.26
Re 2.10
k Ec 9.10
l Mt 5.43
Tit 3.8
m 1 Jo 3.14
n Phi 3.7,7, 8
o or, whereby
p e 2.20
q e 5.6
r 2 Co 5.17
s Ps 125.5.
t Col 1.24.
u 2 Ti 1.22
Phil 25.

8 For he that soweth to his ^a flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the ^b Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting.

9 And let ^c us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, ^d if we faint not.

10 As we have therefore ^e opportunity, let us do good unto all ^f men, especially unto them ^g who are of the household of faith.

11 Ye see how large a letter I have written unto you with mine own hand.

12 As many as desire to make a fair show in the flesh, they constrain you to be circumcised; only lest they should suffer persecution for the cross of Christ.

13 For neither they themselves who are circumcised keep the law; but desire to have you circumcised, that they may glory in your flesh.

14 But ^h God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, ⁱ by whom the world is crucified ^j unto me, and I unto the world.

15 For ^k in Christ Jesus neither circumcision availeth ^l any thing, nor uncircumcision, but a ^m new creature.

16 And as many as walk according to this rule, peace ⁿ be on them, and mercy, and upon the Israel of God.

17 From henceforth let no man trouble me: for ^o I bear in my body the marks of the Lord Jesus.

18 Brethren, the ^p grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit. Amen.

¶ Unto the Galatians, written from Rome.

through faith before God, who hath no need of our works; and outwardly before men, whom our faith profiteth nothing; but our charity, or our works.²¹

To this clear and judicious statement we add a beautiful illustration, from one of the most eloquent writers of the present day:—"The faith (saith Robert Hall) to which the Scriptures attach such momentous consequences, and ascribe such glorious exploits, is a practical habit, which, like every other, is strengthened and increased by continual exercise. It is nourished by meditation, by prayer, and by the devout perusal of the Scriptures: and the light which it diffuses becomes stronger and clearer by an uninterrupted converse with its object, and a faithful compliance with its dictates; as, on the contrary, it is measured and obscured by whatever wounds the conscience, or impairs the purity and spirituality of the mind."²²

As the best proof that these Galatians (the more pious part of them, at least) possessed this practical and saving faith, the apostle now exhorts all who were quickened by the Holy Spirit, to endeavour to walk under his daily guidance, and so produce the fruits of the Spirit which are here enumerated—"Love, joy, peace," &c.; while, on the other hand, the works (or fruits) of the flesh, which also are enumerated, are solemnly deprecated; and all who practise them are warned, most solemnly warned, that "they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God."

CHAP. VI. VER. 1-18. Further admonitions, concluding with the apostolical benediction.—The preceding chapter concludes with recommending an humble and spiritual walk and conversation: this begins, with admitting that it was possible for the most careful, and most pious believer, to be overtaken in a fault, either from the depravity of human nature, or the sudden temptation of the enemy; even as a man, in the furthest weather, may sometimes be overtaken in a thunder storm:

Ver 25. If we live in the Spirit—i. e. "If we are spiritually alive." See ver 26

CHAP. VI. Ver. 1. Brethren—i. e. "Although." But Doddridge and Macknight adhere to the text.—Ye which are spiritual—Those who live and walk in the Spirit, as in verse 25 of the preceding chapter.—Restore such a one—The allusion, according to Doddridge, is to restoring to its right place a dislocated limb.

Ver 5. For every man shall bear his own burden.—That is, every one shall be answerable for his own conduct.—Doddridge and Macknight.

Ver. 7. Whatsoever a man soweth, &c.—See 2 Cor. ix. 6 in this case, however, he should by no means be abandoned to his fate; but the most spiritual of his brethren should endeavour to restore him to the church, even with the same care and tenderness as they would restore a dislocated limb; considering, at the same time, that they are all exposed to the same danger, and might one day stand in need of the same attentions. They should be candid to each other's failings, and kind to each other in affliction, according to the Saviour's great command, of love and unity and humility.

He cautions them against self-deception, to which persons of a vain-glorious disposition are most exposed: it therefore becomes such to be particularly watchful over their tempers and conduct. He encourages them to liberality, especially toward their faithful teachers; and never to be weary in well-doing, under the idea that they have done enough already. None is more worthy of reward than the faithful minister of the gospel; and no labour more entitled to remuneration than that which is exerted for the good of souls. "Nothing is more conformable to the dictates of reason and of justice, than that those who receive regular public instructions on the most important of all topics, should, according to their ability, compensate their instructors."

In the close of the Epistle, we find, as has before been intimated, that St. Paul was in the habit of employing an amanuensis—(see Rom. xvi. 22)—only himself adding the salutation, as we see in the close of his first Epistle to the Corinthians, and the second to the Thessalonians; but in this case he evidently wrote the whole, and meant this to be considered as a mark of his attention and respect for them. And here we should expect the letter to have closed, but his anxiety will not suffer him to end without a farther caution against their Judaizing teachers, who seemed to glory only in circumcision; whereas, he says, for his part, God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ!

Ver 11. Ye see how large a letter—Whitby, Doddridge, and others, render it, "With what large letters;" alluding to the size of the characters. But the sense of our authorized version is adopted and justified by Leica, Lardner, Paley, and Macknight; for his writing in large and legible characters could afford no proof of his affect on to them.

Ver 15. Neither circumcision, &c.—See 1 Cor. xii. 19. Gal. v. 6

Ver 17. The marks of the Lord Jesus—That is, the scars of the wounds which he had received in Christ's cause.

Subscription—It written from Rome—It is generally agreed that these words were not written by St. Paul. See Paley's Hor. Paul. ch. xv.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE EPISTLE TO THE GALATIANS.

GALATIA was situated between Phrygia on the south, Pamphylia and Bithynia on the north, and Pontus on the east.

St. Paul had heard, that since his departure from Galatia, corrupt opinions had got in amongst them about the necessary observations of the legal rites, induced by several impostors who had crept into that church, and who endeavoured to undermine the doctrine St. Paul had there established, by vilifying his person, slighting him as an apostle, and as not to be compared with Peter, James, and John, who had familiarly conversed with the Lord Jesus Christ.

in the days of his flesh, and been immediately deputed by Him. In this epistle, therefore, he reproves them with severity, that they had been so easily led out of the right way wherein he had instructed them, and had so easily suffered themselves to be imposed upon by the crafty artifices of impostors. He vindicates the honour of his apostolic office, and shows that he had received his commission immediately from Christ, and that he came not behind the very chief of those apostles—Cave, Antiq. Apos. 1676.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE EPHESIANS.

"ALTHOUGH" says Dr. Paley, "it does not appear to have been ever disputed, that the Epistle before us was written by St. Paul, yet it is well known that a doubt has long been entertained concerning the persons to whom it was addressed. The question is founded on some ambiguity in the external evidence. Marcion, a heretic of the second century, as quoted by Tertullian, a father in the beginning of the third, calls it the Epistle to the Laodiceans. From what we know of Marcion, his judgment is little to be relied on; nor is it perfectly clear that Marcion was rightly understood by Tertullian. . . . The name, in Ephesus, in the first verse, upon which word singly depends the proof that the Epistle was written to the Ephesians, is not read in all the manuscripts extant. I admit, however, that the external evidence preponderates with a manifest excess on the side of the received reading." The same learned writer then proceeds to argue, from internal evidence, that the Epistle could hardly be written to a people with whom the Apostle resided three years; there being no allusion or appeal, as in other epistles, to what had passed when he resided among them.—"It has been said," says MacKnight, "that if this Epistle was directed to the Ephesians, it is difficult to understand how the Apostle contented himself with giving them a general salutation, without mentioning any of his numerous friends and acquaintance, with whom he had been intimate during his long residence at Ephesus. But the answer is, . . . there are no particular salutations in the epistles to the Galatians, the Thimpuians, the Thessalonians, and to Titus, because to have sent particular salutations to individuals, in churches where the Apostle was so generally and intimately acquainted . . . might have offended those who were neglected, . . . and to have mentioned every person of note in those churches, would have taken up too much room. In writing to the Romans, the case was different. The Apostle was, probably, unknown to most of them . . . and therefore he could, . . . without offence to the rest, take particular notice of all his acquaintance." As, therefore, "the external evidence preponderates with a manifest excess in favour of the received reading," which is not contradicted by its internal evidence; and as Dr. Paley appears to be mistaken in supposing that the word Ephesus was wanting in any manuscript extant, (see Bishop Middleton on the Greek article, p. 510), we are fully justified in regarding this Epistle as written to the Ephesians. The gospel was first preached in the celebrated but heretion city of Ephesus by St. Paul, with the most abundant success; and such was the Apostle's concern for their spiritual welfare, that he did not leave them till three years after-wards; and on his return from Macedonia and Achaia to Jerusalem, he sent for the elders of the church to meet him at Miletus, where he took an affectionate leave of them, and delivered to them a most solemn charge. (Acts xviii. 19-21; xix; xx. 17-38.) Some years after, he wrote this Epistle from Rome, as stated in the subscription, during his first imprisonment in that city. (chap. iii. 1; iv. 1; v. 20.) and, from his not expressing any hopes of a speedy release, probably in the early part of it, about A. D. 61:—to establish them in the great doctrines of the Gospel, to guard them against errors, to excite them to a holy conversation, and to animate them in their Christian warfare. — Bagster. Grotius has remarked of this Epistle, that it expresses the grand matters of which it treats, in words more sublime than are to be found in any human tongue.

CHAPTER I.

1 After the salutation, 3 and 4 thanking for the Ephesians, 4 he treateth of our election, 6 and adoption by grace, 11 which is the true and proper fountain of man's salvation. 13 And because the height of this mystery cannot be easily attained unto, 16 he prayeth that they may come to the full knowledge, and 20 possession thereof in Christ.

PAUL, an apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God, to the ^a saints which are at ^b Ephesus, and to the faithful ^c in Christ Jesus:

2 Grace ^d be to you, and peace, from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

3 Blessed ^e be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly ^f places in Christ:

4 According as he hath chosen ^g us in him before the foundation of the world, that we should be ^h holy and without blame before him in love:

5 Having predestinated ⁱ us unto the adoption of ^j children by Jesus Christ to himself, according to the good ^k pleasure of his will,

6 To the praise ^l of the glory of his grace, wherein he hath made us accepted in ^m the beloved.

7 In whom ⁿ we have redemption through his

CHAP. I. Ver. 1-23. Paul implores upon the Ephesian church all the richest blessings of divine grace.—The first preaching of the gospel at Ephesus, the chief city of Proconular Asia, was by the ministry of St Paul, as we find it recorded in the 18th and 19th chapters of the Acts. There we learn, that at first he was kindly received, both by Jews and Gentiles, until the great adversary of souls raised an opposition against him, by means of Demetrius and his craftsmen. This obliged Paul to leave the city; not, however, before his doctrine had taken deep root, and a Christian church had been there established. Some time after this, in his way to Jerusalem, he sailed past Ephesus, through fear of being detained there by his kind friends; (Acts xx. 16;) but landing at Miletus, he sent for the elders of the Ephesian church, and delivered to them the very affectionate address; (Acts xx. 17-38;) and from which, as well as from the Epistle now before us, it appears that a strong attachment had been formed between them and our apostle.

"What an improbable union!" says the pious Mrs. More. "The late idolatrous worshippers of Diana, and the late per-

CHAP. I. Ver. 1. To the saints which are at Ephesus.—Of the authenticity of this Epistle there is no doubt; but, so early as the second century, Marcion, a well known heretic, asserted, that some copies for Ephesus, read Laodicea; and some such copies still exist, though the great majority, both of copies and of manuscripts, read Ephesus. This doubt has been revived, many times by Grotius and Mil, and the arguments on that side are collected and enforced by Paley. (Horræ Paul chap. vi. No. 1.) On the other hand, Lardner and MacKnight have no less ably defended the present reading. An abstract of the evidence on both sides may be seen in Horne's invaluable Introduction; where it is also remarked, that some ancient copies left a blank for the name, as if it had been a circular intended to be sent to different churches; and as Paul was in prison when he wrote this, it is not impossible that he might have a copy taken with a blank inscription, to be sent to Laodicea also. One thing strikes us forcibly, that though there is no allusion to the circumstances which occurred while he was at Ephesus, the affectionate language in which he speaks of the Ephesians well agrees with his known attachment to them, and with the true Christian character; whereas of that in Laodicea, we know little to its advantage. See Col. ii. 1; iv. 16. Rev. in. 14.—And to the faithful.—Some understand this as implying, that this Epistle was addressed, not to the church at Ephesus only, but to all believers, and favours the idea of copies having been sent to Laodicea, and perhaps other churches; and this also will account

A. M. cir. 4965.
A. D. cir. 61.

a Ro. 1, 7
b Ac. c. 19, 20
c Col. 1, 2 d Gal. 1, 3
e Tit. 1, 1
f 2 Co. 1, 3
g 1 Pe. 1, 3
h 1 Cor. 1, 3
i He. 9, 23
j 1 Pe. 1, 2
k 1 Cor. 1, 2
l 1 Cor. 1, 2
m 1 Cor. 1, 2
n 1 Cor. 1, 2
o 2 Th. 1, 9
p the heavenly q Ac. 20, 32
r or, hoped.
s Ro. 10, 17
t 2 Co. 1, 22
u 2 Co. 5, 5
v Ro. 8, 23
w Ac. 20, 38
x ver. 6, 12

blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of his grace;

8 Wherein he hath abounded toward us in all wisdom and prudence;

9 Having made known unto us the mystery of his will, according to his good pleasure which he hath ^o purposed in himself:

10 That in the dispensation of the fulness of times he might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in ^p heaven, and which are on earth; even in him:

11 In whom also we have obtained an ^q inheritance, being predestinated according to the purpose of him who worketh all things after the counsel of his own will:

12 That we should be to the praise of his glory, who first ^r trusted in Christ.

13 In whom ye also trusted, after that ye heard ^s the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation: in whom also after that ye believed, ye were sealed ^t with that holy Spirit of promise,

14 Which is the earnest ^u of our inheritance until the redemption ^v of the purchased ^w possession, unto the ^x praise of his glory.

secutor of the saints of Jesus, have now but one heart and one soul. These recent enemies to Christ, and to each other, now meet in one common point of attraction. With what holy triumph does he dilate on their mutual faith!—that love of God in Christ Jesus, which is their common centre, their indissoluble bond of union!"

At least five of St. Paul's Epistles were written from a prison, and this is one of them; in which, as the same excellent female remarks, "He speaks not as from a prison, but as from a region of light, and life, and glory. His thoughts are in heaven; his soul is with his Saviour; his heart is with his treasure. No wonder then that his language has a tincture of the idiom of immortality."

The leading doctrine of this Epistle is the union between Jews and Gentiles; not merely in themselves considered, but in Christ Jesus, their common Lord and Saviour, and the centre of all those blessings, which flow from the fountain of eternal light, and love, and blessedness. So the Epistle opens, "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly for the Epistle having no allusion in it to any circumstances peculiar to the Ephesians.

Ver. 2. In heavenly places.—Margin and Doddridge, "heavenly (things;)" but MacKnight preserves "places;" understanding thereby the Christian church, which our Lord repeatedly calls "the kingdom of heaven" (Mat. xii. 28, 29, 32, &c.). Beza understands it, however, of heaven itself, and the blessings there laid up, as in Col. 1, 5.

Ver. 3. The mystery of his will.—Seems to refer to the calling of the Gentiles—a mystery long kept secret, and, when revealed, but slowly understood. See Rom. xvi. 25; xvi. 25.

Ver. 10. In the dispensation of the fulness of times.—Namely, in the gospel. Gal. iv. 4.—In heaven (Gr. "the heavens") and on earth.—By this, Locke, and others, understand the Jews and Gentiles. (See Mat. xxi. 43.) Whitby, Doddridge, &c., "Angels and men." We understand the expression to mean, that all persons or things chosen in Christ, should be brought into actual union and communion with him. See Col. 1, 20.

Ver. 12. Who first trusted.—This is generally explained of the Jews, and we presume, justly. See Luke ii. 25, 38.

Ver. 13. Seated with that Holy Spirit.—See Rom. viii. 1-16, also 2 Co. i. 22.

Ver. 14. Redemption of the purchased possession.—The "purchased pos-

15 Wherefore I also, after I heard of your faith in the Lord Jesus, and love unto all the saints,

16 Cease not to give thanks for you, making mention of you in my prayers;

17 That the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory, may give unto you the spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of him;

18 The eyes of your understanding being enlightened; that ye may know what is the hope of his calling, and what the riches of the glory of his inheritance in the saints,

19 And what is the exceeding greatness of his power to us-ward who believe, according to the working of his mighty power,

20 Which he wrought in Christ, when he raised him from the dead, and set him at his own right hand in the heavenly places,

21 Far above all principality, and power, and might, and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come:

22 And hath put all things under his feet, and gave him to be the head over all things to the church,

A. M. 4065
A. D. 61

y. In 2017,
c. 143.9
a. or, for the acknowledgment
b. In 197
c. 14
d. c. 16
e. 15-110.3
f. the might of his power
g. A. 221, 33
h. Phil 2.9
Col 2.10
i. Ps 86
Mat 28.18

j. 1 Cor 12.12
Col 1.15, 24
a. In 521
Col 2.13
b. A. 19.25
c. c. 12
d. Col 3.6
e. 1 Pe 4.3
f. will
g. Ps 51.5
h. 1 Cor 5.6,8, 10
i. by force
j. Ro 3.21
k. Col 2.12

23 Which is his body, the fulness of him that filleth all in all.

CHAPTER II.

1 By comparing what we were by 3 nature, with what we are 5 by grace, 10 he declared that we are made for good works, and 13 how, brought near by Christ, should not live as 11 Gentiles, and 12 foreigners in time past, but as 19 citizens with the saints, and the family of God.

AND you ^a hath he quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins;

2 Wherein ^b in time past ye walked according to the course of this world, according to the prince ^c of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children ^d of disobedience:

3 Among whom also we ^e all had our conversation in times past in the lusts of our flesh, fulfilling the ^f desires of the flesh and of the mind; and were by ^g nature the children of wrath, even as others.

4 But God, who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us,

5 Even ^b when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ, (by ⁱ grace ye are saved;)

6 And hath raised ^k us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus; places (or things) in Christ."—The blessings here referred to, as Dr. Doddridge observes, must "manifestly take in every spiritual blessing, and principally must refer, not to extraordinary and miraculous gifts, but to the sanctifying and saving graces of the Spirit; such as effectual calling, justification by grace, the adoption of children, the illumination of the Spirit, and all the graces of the Christian life, which are common to all believers, and communicated to them in all their several branches. And these are blessings in heavenly things, as they are things that have a manifest relation and respect to heaven, and have a tendency to fit us for it."

These blessings, we have said, flow from the Fountain of all blessedness: "According (says the apostle) as he hath chosen us in him (that is, Christ) before the foundation of the world." We do not think it necessary here to enter into the doctrine of divine decrees; thus far appears to us obvious, both from the Scriptures and common sense: if God is that infinite, eternal, and unchangeable Being we are accustomed to believe, whatever he does in the course of infinite duration, he must always have intended to do; and if he constituted his only begotten Son to be the Head and Saviour of his people before the foundation of the world, he must also have then chosen and appointed them to be the members of his church, (or mystical body,) and the subjects of his kingdom. But it is important for us always to bear in mind the great end and object of this appointment; namely, that they should "be holy and without blame before him in love." It is, therefore, a contradiction in terms, as well as an error in fact, to pretend that the doctrine, that men are predestinated to holiness, has in itself a tendency to lead them to licentiousness.

We are not, however, warranted to say, that such was the happy lot of all the members of the Ephesian church, since undoubtedly there were hypocrites among them, as well as in other churches; but the apostles, as Dr. Doddridge remarks, "had reason, in the judgment of charity, to believe, that the greater part were" true believers.

There is a singular richness and evangelicalunction in the style of this epistle, which attributes every thing "to the praise of the glory of divine grace," and the mercy of that divine Being, who, perfectly independent of his creatures, "worketh all things after the counsel of his own will." In describing the operations of divine grace, they are compared to that almighty energy by which Christ was raised from the dead; and then St. Paul bursts into a rapture on contemplating the glories to which our Saviour is exalted, "far above all principality and power;" and the fulness of grace which he possesses, as "Head over all things to his church, which is his [mystical] body, the fulness of him that filleth all in all," that is, that filleth with light, and happiness, and glory, all the pure intelligent creation.

CHAP. II. Ver. 1-22. St. Paul describes what the Ephesians were by nature, and what they were made by grace.—By nature one is the church, Acts ix. 28; and the redemption here spoken of, that final one of "the redemption of the body." Rom. viii. 23.

Ver. 15. After I heard.—St. Paul not having been at Ephesus for five or six years, he made anxious inquiries after their welfare, and rejoiced in the reports which he received.

Ver. 18. The eyes of your understanding being enlightened.—Doddridge, (and that he would give you to have) "the eyes of your understanding enlightened."

Ver. 19. The exceeding greatness, &c.—Bishop Pearson notices the great beauty and emphasis of this passage.—Mighty power.—Doddridge, "Power of his might."

Ver. 23. That filleth all in all.—Doddridge, "all [persons] in all places." See Col. ii. 9. Chandler thinks here is an allusion to the famous statue of Minerva, who, according to St. Jerome, was considered as the nurse, supporter, and life of all living creatures.

ture the Ephesians, as, indeed, all mankind, were dead in trespasses and sins; buried in the pleasures of vice, and the absurdities of idolatry. But he who had raised our Lord, in a literal sense, from the dead, and exalted him to his own right hand in glory, had, by his Holy Spirit, raised them from their graves of ignorance and lust—had quickened them, through their union to him, and virtually exalted them to sit and reign with him in heaven; that is, he had begun in them a work of grace, which was to terminate "in glory everlasting." In this account, two or three circumstances demand our attention.

1. The depths of human guilt and misery, commonly comprised under the term Original Sin, which is defined, to be "the fault and corruption of the nature of every man, that naturally is engendered of the offspring of Adam, whereby man is very far gone from original righteousness, and is of his own nature inclined to evil, so that the flesh lusteth always contrary to the spirit." Original sin naturally leads to actual sins; for our spiritual death is not of that nature as to destroy moral action, or human responsibility. The active mind of man devoid of grace will only multiply transgression; and what the apostle elsewhere says of females, (1 Tim. v. 8.) "She that liveth in pleasure is dead while she liveth," is equally true of the other sex; and never was the trade of criminal pleasure earned to a greater excess than among the Ephesians. And not only were they sunk into sensuality, but also into infidelity and even atheism. "The Ephesians, in common with other Gentiles, (says Hall,) are described as being, previous to their conversion, without God in the world—that is, without any, just and solid acquaintance with his character, destitute of the knowledge of his will, the institutes of his worship, and the hopes of his favour; to the truth of which representation, whoever possesses the slightest acquaintance with Pagan antiquity, must assent; nor is it a fact less incontestable, that while pagan human philosophy, was never able to abolish idolatry in a single village, the promulgation of the gospel overthrew it in a great part (and that the most enlightened) of the world."

2. That regeneration, conversion, and sanctification, are peculiarly the work of God. "God, who is rich in mercy, for his great love, wherewith he loved us, even when we were dead in our sins, hath quickened us together with Christ. By grace are ye saved through faith, and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God. Not of works, lest any man should boast." And notwithstanding we have so repeatedly returned to this truth, and shown it to be the foundation doctrine of the church of Christ, we cannot refrain from quoting one other short but pointed passage from "The Homily of Salvation." "This faith the Holy Scripture teacheth us: this is the strong rock and foundation of the Christian religion; this doctrine all old and ancient authors of Christ's church do approve; this doctrine advanceth and setteth forth the true glory of Christ, and CHAP. II. Ver. 1. And you hath he quickened.—By the words, "hath he quickened," being put by our translators in Italics, we are warned that they are not in the original of this passage, but supplied from some other verse, which in this case may be from the preceding chapter, where, with no doubt, it is intimately connected; as from verse 20, "God raised Christ from the dead, and set him at his own right hand;" so also "hath he quickened you," who were spiritually dead—"dead in trespasses and sins;" and, upon the whole, we think with Doddridge, that this is the most natural supplement, corresponding, as it does, with verses 6 and 7 following. Chandler and Macknight, however, take the supplement from the verse immediately preceding; "And you hath he filled," namely, from the fulness of mercy seen, though we prefer the former. i. 14, 16. This also is a good and pertinent sense, though we prefer the former. Ver. 2. Grace of the power of the air.—Satan, who is a captive prince and reigns within his prison. See Jude 6.

Ver. 3. Desires.—Gr "Wills."

7 That in the ages to come he might show the exceeding riches of his grace in his kindness : toward us through Christ Jesus.

8 For by grace ^m are ye saved through ⁿ faith; and that not ^o of yourselves : it is the gift of God :

9 Not of works, lest any man should boast.

10 For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which ^p God hath before ^q ordained that we should walk in them.

11 Wherefore remember, that ye being in time past Gentiles in the flesh, who are called Uncircumcision by that which is called the Circumcision in the flesh made by hands;

12 That at that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world :

13 But now in Christ Jesus ye who sometimes were far off are made nigh by the blood ^r of Christ.

14 For he ^s is our peace, who hath made both ^t one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us ;

15 Having abolished ^u in his flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments contained in ordinances; for to make in himself of twain one new man, so making peace ;

16 And that he might reconcile ^v both unto God in one body by the cross, having slain the enmity ^w thereby :

beateth down the vain glory of man; this, whosoever deneth, is not to be accounted for a Christian man, nor for a setter forth of Christ's glory; but for an adversary to Christ and his gospel, and for a setter forth of men's vain glory."

3. Not only are regeneration and justification works of grace, but the whole process of human salvation; and no part more so than the great work of reconciliation and atonement, as thus expressed: "Ye who were afar off are made nigh by the blood of Christ." Here seems, as Dr. Doddridge remarks, to be an evident allusion to the privilege of those Israelites, who, having been under any ceremonial pollution, "were cleansed from their guilt by the blood of atonement, and so had free liberty of entering the temple and conversing with God, on which account they are called a people near him." (Ps. cxlviii. 14.) It is added, "He is our peace, who hath made both one;" that is, who hath reconciled both Jews and Gentiles to himself, and to each other; "and hath broken down the middle wall of partition;" alluding to the wall that separated the two courts of the Jews and Gentiles in the temple. "Having abolished in (or by) his flesh, the law of the commandments contained in (the Mosaic) ordinances; to make in himself of twain, one new man;" that is, to form by the union of Jews and Gentiles, one mystic body, even the Christian church. "And that he reconciles both unto God in one body by the cross, having slain the enmity thereby;" that is, the enmity of both to God, and to each other. Here we must always remember, that the first motion of reconciliation comes from God, who, though the offended party, provides the atonement necessary to satisfy his justice; and even condescends, by his word and ministers, to beseech sinners to be reconciled unto him. Even Christ himself, "who is our peace," came down and preached peace personally to the Jews; and ministerially, by his apostles to the Gentiles: and both being formed into one house, or household, and built on one foundation, "grow up," as it were, through the influences of the Holy Spirit, into a sacred temple, a habitation for the Most High himself.

4th, and lastly, (though not so placed in our chapter,) the scheme of redemption no less secures the interests of holiness

Ver. 8. And that not, &c.—The gift of God here spoken of is salvation. Ver. 10. God hath before ordained.—Margin and Doddridge, "prepared us." The former sense, if not here, is plainly expressed in verse 4 of chap. i.; and the latter is thus expressed in the 10th article of the Church of England: "We have no moral power to do good works, pleasant and acceptable to God, without the grace of God by Christ preventing [i. e. going before] us, that we may have a good will, and working with us when we have that good will." That want of ability to do right, which springs from a depraved will, or bad disposition, does not excuse men from their obligations to do right; because, the more disinclined men are to do their duty, the more culpable they are.

Ver. 12. Having no hope—i. e. no well-grounded hope.—Without God.—Gr. Atheists.

Ver. 19. Strangers and foreigners.—The strangers were probably proteges, who resided with them.

Ver. 20. Corner stone.—Builders tell us, this corner stone (akrogoniaion) was the key-stone of an arch. "It is a chief stone, and in the most conspicuous situation—the highest place. It is precious, or valuable; generally a picked piece, and richly sculptured. It is exactly in the centre of the arch; or, as the idea of the apostle expresses, the very point where the prophets and the apostles, the Old and New Dispensations, meet; and it is the foundation

A. M. cir. 4065.
A. D. cir. 61.

1 Tit. 3.1.
m 2 Ti. 1.9.

n Ro 4.16.

o Jn. 6.44.

65.

p c. 1.4.

q or, pre- pared.

r He. 9.12.

s Mt. 5.5.

t Jn. 10.16.

Gal 3.28.

u Col. 2.14.

v Col. 1.20.

22.

w or, in himself.

x Ac. 2.39.

y Jn. 14.6.

z Pe. 3.18.

He. 12.22.

23.

a c. 13.

b 1 Co 3.9.

10.

c Mat. 16.13.

Re. 21.14.

d Is. 28.16.

e 1 Co. 3.17.

2 Co. 6.16.

f 1 Pe. 2.4,5.

g Col. 1.25.

h Ro. 12.3.

i Gal. 1.12.

d or, a lit- tle before.

e c. 1.9.

f Mat. 13.17.

Ro. 15.25.

1 Pe. 1.10.

12.

17 And came and preached peace to you ^x which were afar off, and to them that were nigh.

18 For through ^y him we both have access by one Spirit unto the Father.

19 Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens ^z with the saints, and of the household ^a of God ;

20 And are built ^b upon the ^c foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief ^d corner stone ;

21 In whom all the building fitly framed together groweth unto a holy ^e temple in the Lord :

22 In whom ye also are builded ^f together for a habitation of God through the Spirit.

CHAPTER III.

5 The hidden mystery, 6 that the Gentiles should be saved, 3 was made known to Paul by revelation : 8 and to him was that grace given, that 9 he should preach it. 13 He desires them not to faint for his tribulation, 14 and prayeth 19 that they may perceive the great love of Christ toward them.

FOR this cause I Paul, the prisoner of Jesus Christ for you Gentiles,

2 If ye have heard of the dispensation ^a of the grace ^b of God which is given me to you-ward :

3 How that by revelation ^c he made known unto me the mystery; (as I wrote ^d afore in few words ;

4 Whereby, when ye read, ye may understand my knowledge in the ^e mystery of Christ)

5 Which in other ages was not ^f made known unto the sons of men, as it is now revealed unto the holy apostles and prophets by the Spirit ;

and good works, than it does the glory of God's free grace. "We are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them." Can any thing be more strongly expressed? "Ordained to good works," and new-created, expressly to enable us to perform them! Will any man after this say, that the doctrines of grace are unfriendly to good works?

CHAP. III. Ver. 1—21. The mystery of the conversion of the Gentiles opened and explained.—St. Paul recommends himself to the affections of the Ephesians, by informing, or rather reminding them, that he was now a prisoner, on account of his strong attachment to their cause, as Gentiles, and for the exercise of his ministry among them. This divine mystery, namely, that the Gentiles should be admitted to be fellow heirs, and partake on equal terms of all the blessings of Messiah's kingdom, had been revealed to him immediately by Jesus Christ himself; from whom he had received a special commission to publish it to the heathen world, and in the publication of which he was supported and succeeded by "the effectual working" of God's Holy Spirit. In the sequel of this chapter the apostle speaks, 1. Of himself, and of the high privilege bestowed upon him, in constituting him the apostle of the Gentiles; and, 2. Of the glory of the dispensation committed to his hands.

1. St. Paul speaks of himself as less than the least of all saints; to express which idea, he coins a word of peculiar modesty, in which there is no doubt but he refers, as in other cases when speaking of himself, to his former persecution of the saints, when he was, as he calls himself, "a blasphemer, a persecutor, and injurious." (1 Tim. i. 13.) On this circumstance we may remark, that good men, after their conversion, ought never to forget what they were before.

"How different (says the pious Dr. Watts) is our common behaviour from that of holy Paul! When we think of self, we are ready to raise our thoughts beyond all measure, and aggrandize our ideas to a vast and shameful degree, as though we stood as fair, and as large, and as high in the eyes of our fellow-worms, as we do in our own eyes. Vain imaginations! wretched self-flattery—and foolish pride! We take the least or security of the whole; or if for the key-stone were removed, the whole building would fall in ruins."

Ver. 21. Fittingly framed.—This may allude to Solomon's temple, of which all the stones were shaped and fitted before they were brought together. 1 Kings vi. 7. So all the stones of the heavenly temple are fitted by the Holy Spirit on earth, before they are raised to Heaven.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1. For you Gentiles.—There is no doubt but the persecuting spirit of the Jews, which led to all Paul's sufferings, was kept up chiefly by his zeal for the conversion of the Gentiles. See Acts xvi. 28.

Many commentators include verses 2 to 13 within a parenthesis, and read, "For this cause, &c. I bow my knees;" but we see no necessity for this, if with Doddridge and Macknight, we supply the verb am thus—"I Paul [am] the prisoner of Jesus Christ," &c.

Ver. 2. If—Doddridge, "since." Macknight, "seeing."

Ver. 3. By revelation.—See Acts ix. 15, 16; xxii. 21, &c.—"I wrote afore."—This, some think, refers to what Paul had said in the preceding parts of this epistle—"I have written afore," namely, chap. i. 9, 10; ii. 11, &c.

Ver. 5. Which in other ages was not, &c.—"It was known long before that the Gentiles should be added to the church; but it was not known that they should be 'heirs of the same inheritance,' &c. Doddridge.

3 That the Gentiles should be fellow-heirs, and of the same body, and partakers of his promise in Christ by the Gospel:

7 Whereof I was made a minister, according to the gift of the grace of God given unto me by the effectual working of his power.

8 Unto me, who am less than the least of all saints, is this grace given, that I should preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ:

9 And to make all men see what is the fellowship of the mystery, which from the beginning of the world hath been hid in God, who created all things by Jesus Christ.

10 To the intent that now unto the principalities and powers in heavenly places might be known by the church the manifold wisdom of God.

11 According to the eternal purpose which he purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord:

12 In whom we have boldness and access with confidence by the faith of him.

13 Wherefore I desire that ye faint not at my tribulations for you, which is your glory.

14 For this cause I bow my knees unto the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ,

15 Of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named,

16 That he would grant you, according to the riches of his glory, to be strengthened with might by his Spirit in the inner man;

17 That Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye, being rooted and grounded in love,

18 May be able to comprehend with all saints

A M. cor.
4053.
A 19. cor.
61.
g Is 43.14.
e i 19.
h i Co 15.9.
i Col 1.27.
j ver 1.5.
l Ti 3.16.
k Ps 33.6.
m i 3.
n Col 1.16.
o He 1.2.
p Ro 11.33.
q i Co 2.7.
r m c 1.9.
s He 4.16.
t o 2 Co 1.6.
u Phi 4.19.
v q e 6.19.
w i Co 1.11.
x r Ro 7.22.
y s Ju 11.23.
z c 2.22.
aa t i Co 2.7.
ab ———.
ac a Ju 1.16.
ad e Ro 16.25.
ae He 13.20.
af Jude 21.
ag a or, in.
ah b Col 1.10.
ai c Mat 11.29.
aj d Ro 12.3.
ak e Ps 68.13.
al f or, a multitude of captives.

what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height;

19 And to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fulness of God.

20 Now unto him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us.

21 Unto him be glory in the church by Christ Jesus throughout all ages, world without end. Amen.

CHAPTER IV.

1 He exhorted to unity, 7 and declared that God therefore giveth divers gifts unto men, that his church might be 13 edified, and 16 grown up in Christ. 18 He exhorteth them from the unity of the Gentiles, 21 to put on the new man, 25 to cast off lying, and 28 exhortation to communion.

1 THEREFORE, the prisoner of the Lord, I beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called,

2 With all lowliness and meekness, with long-suffering, forbearing one another in love;

3 Endeavouring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace.

4 There is one body, and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling;

5 One Lord, one faith, one baptism,

6 One God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all.

7 But unto every one of us is given grace according to the measure of the gift of Christ.

8 Wherefore he saith, When he ascended up on high, he led captivity captive, and gave gifts unto men.

9 (Now that he ascended, what is it but that he also descended first into the lower parts of the earth?

of syllables, the least of letters, [I] and swell and amplify it, (if I may so speak), to fill a page, or to spread over a whole leaf, and we scarcely leave a scanty margin for all other names to stand in."

But to return to our apostle: 2. We must briefly notice the end and object of his mission, which Dr. Chandler and other commentators think, is here spoken of in allusion to the temple and worship of Diana. There treasures were hidden of great value; and mysteries were practised, known only to the initiated and to the officiating priests; but in the gospel are mysteries and treasures infinitely more valuable, which, indeed, had long been hidden in the secret counsels of the Almighty, but were now to be publicly declared to all men; and not to men only, but to angels, who in the churches of Christ listen with pleasure, to learn the manifold wisdom of God—that is, the wisdom which is displayed in his gospel. (See 1 Pet. i. 12.)

St. Paul entreates his Ephesian friends not to be at all discouraged at hearing of his suffering affliction, or persecution, on their account; since he gloried in sufferings for Christ's sake, and wished them to do the same. For his part, he was neither anxious to avoid, or be delivered from them; but only that they might be instrumental to promote the glory of God, and the salvation of men: and, for the Ephesians, his prayer was, that they might be strengthened, comforted, and enlightened, by the Spirit of God; that being planted in Christ, and founded on him, they might be deeply rooted in love to God, and, as he elsewhere states it, grow up into a spiritual building—"a habitation of God through the Spirit;" that is, into a spiritual temple filled with the glory of God in all its beauty, and in all its communicable fulness, that their minds might be enlarged, so as, in great measure, to comprehend the love of Christ, which is indeed, in its utmost extent, incomprehensible; and to be filled with all the fulness of God, which is in finite and inconceivable.

"Now to the God, whose power can do more than our thoughts or wishes know, Be everlasting honours done, By all the church, through Christ his Son."—Watts.

CHAP. IV. 1—32. The simplicity and harmony of the Christian faith, on which are founded exhortations to peace and holiness.—As a farther inducement to the Ephesians to listen to his affectionate advice, St. Paul again reminds them, that he was now a prisoner for their sake; he beseeches them, therefore, to walk worthy their high and holy vocation, with all meekness and affection, endeavouring to "keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." There is (saith he) one mystical body, namely, the church of Christ; one holy Spirit, by which that body is animated; one Lord Jesus, to whom we all owe subjection and obedience; one system of faith and righteousness, which we all acknowledge; one baptism, by which we are all introduced into the church of Christ, and one God and Father of all—that supreme eternal Being, from whom all our blessings flow, and, "in whom we live, and move, and have our being." (Acts xvii. 28.)

He is the great fountain, both of our temporal and spiritual blessings, which are distributed to us through the medium of Christ our Mediator, and according to his pleasure—that is, as he is pleased to measure out to us from his fulness. (John i. 16.) Wherefore David saith, "When he [Christ] ascended up on high," after his resurrection, he received, as a part of his high reward, and that he might bestow them on his followers, a variety of spiritual gifts, which he accordingly distributed. In this there seems a double allusion to the military triumphs of

Ver. 6. That the Gentiles should be fellow-heirs, &c.—Macknight renders this more literally, "Joint heirs, and a joint body, and joint partakers." &c.—That is, the Gentiles are united with the Jews in all their privileges.

Ver. 8. Less than the least.—(Gr. Elachistos.) Dr. Goodwin thinks he might here have some reference to his Roman name, Paulus, which signifies little: as also to the smallness of his person.—Unsearchable riches.—Literally, untraceable.

Ver. 9. And to make all men see.—Literally, "to enlighten all men that they may see."—The fellowship of the mystery.—That is, of God's mercy to the Gentiles; and instead of revealing these doctrines to a select few only, as in the Pagan mysteries, they were to be revealed to all nations, and to all classes of mankind; even though hitherto kept secret, and hidden, as it were, in the bosom of the Almighty, from the foundation of the world; i. e. from eternity, for thus ancient are all the purposes of God, (see ver. 11.) even of him who created all things by Jesus Christ. Some critics, indeed, interpret this, out of the creation of our system, but of the regeneration of mankind by the gospel. But this agrees not with the context: for to say the mystery immediately referred to had been kept secret from the first promulgation of the gospel, is directly contrary both to the fact and the design of the apostle.

Ver. 10. The manifold wisdom.—The multifarious or greatly diversified wisdom of God.

Ver. 12. In—by, or through.—whom we have boldness.—Doddridge, "freedom of speech."—By the faith of him—i. e. by faith in Christ.

Ver. 14. Of our Lord Jesus Christ.—These words are wanting in some ancient MSS. and versions; but neither their insertion nor their omission at all affects the sense.

Ver. 15. Of which—i. e. of God the Father.—Is named.—Macknight, "denominated." The Jewish writers call heaven the upper, and earth the lower family of God.

Ver. 16. Riches of his glory, &c.—Riches of grace are called riches of glory in scripture. In this verse, mercy is intended by the phrase, riches of his glory, for it is that which God bestows and for which the apostle prays. Compare Rom. ix. 22, 23. In these verses the apostle speaks of God's making known the power of his wrath on the vessels of wrath, and of making known the riches of his glory on the vessels of mercy.

Ver. 17. Rooted and grounded.—Macknight, "Firmly rooted and founded." Ver. 19. Filled with all.—Hammond, "Unto all."—Suggesting, says a Pse Smith, "the sublime conception of an approximation to the supreme person, which is begun by religion now, and shall be ever growing in the holiness and bliss of the future state."

CHAP. IV. Ver. 5. One baptism.—It has been disputed whether this be intended of water baptism, or the baptism of the Spirit; but we see no reason to separate what our Lord Jesus has joined together. John i. 5. "Except a man be born of water and the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." Ver. 8. He led captivity captive.—It may mean, he led captive those who had carried others captive.—See Col n 15; and compare Judges v. 12.—Gave gifts.—The Psalm just quoted says, "received;" but they were received only to bestow.

Ver. 9. Lower parts of the earth—i. e. the grave. Ps. lxxiii. 8.

10 He that descended is the same also that ascended up far above all heavens, that he might ^g fill all things.)

11 And ^h he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers;

12 For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ:

13 Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect ^k man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ:

14 That we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive;

15 But ⁿ speaking the truth in love, may grow up into him in all things, which is the head, even Christ:

16 From ^q whom the whole body fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love.

17 This I say therefore, and testify in the Lord, that ye henceforth walk not as other Gentiles walk, in the vanity of their mind,

18 Having the understanding darkened, being alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them, because of the blindness of their heart:

19 Who being past feeling have given themselves over unto lasciviousness, to work all uncleanness with greediness.

20 But ye have not so learned Christ;

21 If so be that ye have heard him, and have been taught by him, as the truth is in Jesus:

22 That ye put ^o off concerning the former conversation the old ^v man, which is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts;

23 And be renewed ^w in the spirit of your mind;

24 And that ye put on the new man, which

A M. cir. 465.
A. D. cir. 61.

g or, fulfil.
h 1 Co 12:28

i or, into.
j Col 2:2

k 1 Co 14:20
l or, age.
m Ja 1:6.

n or, being sincere.
o 2 Co 4:2.

p Col 1:18, 19.
q Ju 15:5.

r Ac 28:18
s or, hardness.

t Ro 1:21, 28. u Col 3:5, 9

v Ro 6:6.
w Ro 12:2.

x Isa 6:15.
y or, holiness of truth.
z Zeo 5:16.

a Ro 12:5.
b Ec 7:9.

c Ja 4:7.
d Ac 20:35.

e or, distribute.
f Col 4:6.

g or, to edify profitably.
h Is 63:10.

i e 1:13, 14.
j Col 3:8.

k Tu 3:2.
l Ma 11:25, 26.

a Ju 13:24.
b Le 1:9.

c 1 Co 6:18.
d Th 4:3.

e ver 12.
f Ro 1:23.

g He 13:1.
h Re 22:15.

i Col 3:5.
j He 21:8, 9.

after God is created ^a in righteousness and ^v true holiness.

25 Wherefore putting away lying, speak every man truth ^z with his neighbour: for we ^a are members one of another.

26 Be ye angry, and sin not: let ^b not the sun go down upon your wrath:

27 Neither ^c give place to the devil.

28 Let him that stole steal no more: but rather let ^d him labour, working with ^{his} hands the thing which is good, that he may have to ^e give to him that needeth.

29 Let ^f no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth, but that which is good ^g to the use of edifying, that it may minister grace unto the hearers.

30 And grieve ^h not the holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed ⁱ unto the day of redemption.

31 Let all ^j bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamour, and ^k evil speaking, be put away from you, with all malice:

32 And be ye kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving ^l one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you.

CHAPTER V.

2 After general exhortations, to love, 3 to fear formation, 4 and all uncleanness, 7 not to converse with the wicked, 15 to walk warily, and to be 18 filled with the Spirit, 22 he descends to the particular duties, how wives ought to obey their husbands, 25 and husbands ought to love their wives, 32 even as Christ doth his church.

BE ye therefore followers of God, as dear children;

2 And walk in ^a love, as Christ also hath loved us, and hath given himself for us an offering and a sacrifice to God for a ^b sweet-smelling savour.

3 But ^c fornication, and all uncleanness, or covetousness, let it not be once ^d named among you, as becometh saints;

4 Neither filthiness, nor foolish talking, nor jesting, which ^e are not convenient; but rather giving of thanks.

5 For this ye know, that ^f no whoremonger, nor unclean person, nor covetous man, who ^g is an idolater, hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ and of God.

6 Let no man deceive ^h you with vain words:

the Romans; in which they had captive the chief of the princes and generals whom they had subdued, with their wives and families, and a number of inferior persons; and, at the same time, used to distribute liberal rewards among their own soldiers and dependants. The gifts which Christ received, and afterwards distributed again, were not for himself, but for the saints, and especially for the different classes of ministers, to furnish them for their respective duties. As, under the Old Testament, when the tabernacle was to be erected and furnished, the Lord gave suitable gifts to the different artisans; (see Exod. xxxi. 2.) so, under the New, the proper gifts were afforded to all the persons employed to build up the Christian church. Another metaphor is here introduced—"Till we all come . . . unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ," on which we shall only remark, that the perfection of the Christian character consists in its resemblance to that of Christ: and, as we learn from verse 16th, the perfection of the church, as a body, consists in the unity and harmony of all its members. (See note on chap. iii. 6.)—The remainder of this chapter is filled up with some excellent maxims of Christian morality, on which we shall offer only two or three brief remarks.

1. That the sins and vices which compose the heathen cha-

Ver. 10. Far above all heavens.—Not only the material heavens which we behold, but also above the celestial beings which reside in God's immediate presence. See chap. i. 20, 21. Phil. ii. 10.—That he might fill all things.—i. e. with his presence; as chap. i. 23.

Ver. 11. He gave some, apostles.—i. e. he gave gifts suited to all the different classes, as in ver. 8.

Ver. 12. For the perfecting.—i. e. for the furnishing, or fitting up of holy men for the work of the ministry. See Doddridge.

Ver. 13. Till we all come in.—Doddridge, "till we all arrive at"—the unity, &c. The perfection of the Christian character consists in its resemblance to that of Christ: and, as we learn from verse 16th, the perfection of the church, as a body, consists in the unity and harmony of all its members.

Ver. 14. By the sleight of men.—Doddridge thinks this refers to the dishonest practices of gamblers; or perhaps it may refer to the tricks of jugglers.

Ver. 16. Fittingly joined, &c.—See Col. ii. 19.

Ver. 18. Blindness.—Margin, "hardness;" because blindness is often occasioned by a hard skin growing over the sight of the eye.

acter, belong to "the old man," or our unrenewed nature; and the opposite graces of truth, meekness, honesty, &c. to "the new man," which, "after God, is created in righteousness and true holiness." (Compare Rom. vi. 4–6.) All that is bad is attributable to our corrupt nature; all that is good, to the renewing grace of God. 2. That our conversation with the world forms and demonstrates much of our moral character: wherefore, says the apostle, "Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth;" by which, in the next chapter, (ver. 4,) he explains himself to mean "filthiness," and "foolish talking," and "jesting," which are not convenient nor consistent with the Christian name; and should, therefore, by all means be avoided. 3. These things not only disgrace our character, and bring in question our sincerity, but they "grieve the Holy Spirit of God," and provoke him to withdraw, for a time at least, those enlightening and comfortable influences on which much of our happiness, and especially our dying consolations, must depend.

CHAP. V. Ver. 1–33. Exhortations to Christian virtues and domestic duties.—Doddridge joins to this chapter the two last verses of the preceding, and not without reason; for when the apostle exhorts the Ephesians to be followers, or imitators, of God as dear children, it has a peculiar reference to the

Ver. 21. If so be that.—Doddridge, "Fornasmuch as"—ye have heard him—Namely, Christ, in his word.

Ver. 26. Be ye angry, and sin not.—i. e. refrain from all sinful passions; be angry rather at the sin than at the sinner; and let not your anger be unduly protracted. Ward informs us, that "one of the apartments in the houses of some rich men (in India) is appropriated to a curious purpose, viz when any of the members of the family are angry, they shut themselves up in this room called the room of anger; . . . and the master of the family goes and persuades him to come out."

Ver. 32. As God for Christ's sake.—Gr. "As God in Christ hath freely for given," &c.

CHAP. V. Ver. 1. Followers.—Gr. "Imitators." So Doddridge.

Ver. 2. An offering and a sacrifice.—Bates thinks that these terms refer to the peace-offerings and sin offerings of the Jews.

Ver. 3. All uncleanness.—In the English idiom, "Every kind of uncleanness."—Or covetousness.—Doddridge, "insatiable desire;" which may include not only the avaricious, but the lustful.

for because of these things cometh the wrath of God upon the children of disobedience.

7 Be not ye therefore partakers with them.

8 For ye were sometimes darkness, but now are ye light in the Lord: walk as children of light;

9 (For the fruit of the Spirit is in all goodness and righteousness and truth;)

10 Proving what is acceptable unto the Lord.

11 And have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them.

12 For it is a shame even to speak of those things which are done of them in secret.

13 But all things that are reproved are made manifest by the light: for whatsoever doth make manifest is light.

14 Wherefore he saith, Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light.

15 See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, 16 Redeeming the time, because the days are evil.

17 Wherefore be ye not unwise, but understanding what the will of the Lord is.

18 And be not drunk with wine, wherein is excess; but be filled with the Spirit;

19 Speaking to yourselves in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody in your heart to the Lord;

20 Giving thanks always for all things unto God and the Father in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ;

21 Submitting yourselves one to another in the fear of God.

22 Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as unto the Lord.

23 For the husband is the head of the wife, divine virtue of forgiveness; in which we are called upon to imitate the gratuitous mercy of God in pardoning us, by freely forgiving one another, even without those compensations which the world are in the habit of expecting and exacting. And it is remarkable, that we are to take our example, not only from the freeness of the Father's mercy, but also from the infinite extent of the Saviour's love. "Walk in love, as Christ also hath loved us, and given himself for us." So the Apostle John: "Hereby perceive we the love of God, [i. e. of Christ,] because he laid down his life for us, and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren." (1 John iii. 16.)

The apostle then proceeds to warn the Ephesians against uniting with the heathen in any of the unfruitful works of darkness, among which he includes the profane mysteries, and riotous and lascivious indulgences of idolatry. From this state of spiritual sloth and darkness, he calls upon them to awake and to arise, that they might receive the beams of light from heaven—"Christ shall give thee light."

Among the precepts here enumerated, on two only shall we offer an observation. 1. On "Redeeming the time." An Italian philosopher chose a motto, importing that time was his estate; but alas! like other estates, time may be lost, and require redemption; but the redemption of it is precious, and it demands many sacrifices to redeem it; we must sacrifice our ease, our comfort, and our pleasure; and this, if not accomplished in the present life, is hopeless, and "ceaseth for ever." We have to redeem the time that has been lost in the vanity of childhood, in the follies of youth, and in the sins of ripen years.

2. We are to guard against a farther waste of time, by avoiding all those vain amusements and convivial indulgences which scandalize and debase the mind. Instead of the song of the drunkard and the debaucher, we are to cheer and animate each other by "Psalms, and hymns, and spiritual songs;" either those provided for us in the sacred Scriptures, or others composed on the same principles.

Ver. 8. Sometimes darkness—i. e. very dark.
Ver. 17. Unwise.—Literally, "insane." See Meeknight.
Ver. 18. Wherein is excess.—Not only of intoxication, but also riot. See 1 Peter iv.
Ver. 19. Psalms.—[Psalms from psalta, to praise, or play on a musical instrument, properly denotes such sacred songs or poems, as are sung to strummed instruments, and may here refer to those of David; hymns, from hodo, to sing, celebrate, praise, signifies songs in honour of God; and songs, from aeido, to sing, denotes any regular poetic composition adapted to singing, and is here restricted to those which are spiritual.]—Bingster.
Ver. 20. Unto God.—Doddridge, "Even"—the Father.

A. M. cir. 4065
A. D. cir. 61

1. or, unbelief

J. e. 2. 11, 32.

K. 1 Th. 5. 5.

1. Jn. 12. 36.

m. (4. 5. 22, &c.)

n. Ro. 12. 2.

o. 1 Co. 5. 9, 11.

p. 1 Th. 5. 20.

q. or, disconnected.

r. Jn. 3. 20, 21.

s. or, 31.

t. Is. 60. 1.

u. Co. 4. 4. 5.

v. Is. 37. 19.

w. Jn. 7. 17.

x. Lu. 21. 34.

y. Co. 3. 16.

z. Is. 1. 17. 7.

a. Ps. 37. 7, 8.

b. Is. 63. 7.

c. 1 Pe. 2. 1, &c.

d. Col. 3. 13, &c.

e. Tit. 3. 5.

f. Jude. 21.

g. Ca. 1. 7.

h. Co. 12. 17.

i. Ge. 2. 24.

j. 1 Co. 6. 16.

k. Ps. 23. 22.

l. Col. 3. 20, &c.

m. Ex. 20. 12.

even as Christ is the head of the church: and he is the saviour of the body.

21 Therefore as the church is subject unto Christ, so let the wives be to their own husbands in every thing.

25 Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it;

26 That he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word,

27 That he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish.

28 So ought men to love their wives as their own bodies. He that loveth his wife loveth himself.

29 For no man ever yet hated his own flesh; but nourisheth and cherisheth it, even as the Lord the church:

30 For we are members of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones.

31 For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and shall be joined unto his wife, and they two shall be one flesh.

32 This is a great mystery: but I speak concerning Christ and the church.

33 Nevertheless let every one of you in particular so love his wife even as himself; and the wife see that she reverence her husband.

CHAPTER VI.

1 The duty of children towards their parents. 6 of servants towards their masters. 10 Of life is a warfare. 12 not only against flesh and blood, but also spiritual enemies. 13 The complete armour of a Christian. 18 and how it ought to be used. 21 Tychostrus commended.

CHILDREN, obey your parents in the Lord: for this is right.

2 Honour thy father and mother; which is the first commandment with promise;

3 That it may be well with thee, and thou mayest live long on the earth.

4 And, ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath: but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord.

We do not mean to recommend the introduction of Psalmody into mixed and promiscuous meetings, either of business or friendship; yet we cannot but think, that "Hymns to Christ," such as Piling says the primitive Christians used to sing in their private meetings, would at any time better become Christians, than "Jolly Bacchus," or "Glorious Apollo."

The last verses of the chapter relate to the conjugal relation, and its domestic duties; and the apostle lays it down as an incontestable duty, that every Christian husband should love his wife, "even as Christ loved the church, and gave himself for it;" and wherever such a husband can be found, who loves his wife well enough to die for her, surely such a man must be revered, and there can be no hardship in submitting to him.

The relation between Christ and his church is in perfect analogy to that between JENOVAH and his people Israel: "Thy Maker is thy husband, the Lord of hosts is his name; and thy Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel." (Isa. liv. 5.) Hence the sin of apostasy, under both dispensations, is considered and punished as adultery.

CHAP. VI. Ver. 1—21. The duties of parents and children, masters and servants. The Christian soldier, his armour, and his conflicts.—All our social duties are reciprocal; parents who give their children a careful and religious education, have a right to expect a cheerful and uniform obedience. At the same time, authority should be always exercised with prudence and moderation. The evil passions should neither be indulged nor provoked; but parental discipline should be exercised in the fear of God. So masters should be sparing in their threatenings, and moderate in punishing, knowing that we all have "a Master in heaven," who is no respecter of persons; who will scrutinize the conduct of the sovereign and the slave with equal justice and impartiality. Christian servants, however, must take no advantage of the conscientious lenity of their Christian masters, but serve them with equal

Ver. 23. He is the saviour of the body.—This, we apprehend refers to the husband as well as to Christ. He is the head of the wife, and the saviour of the body; i. e. it is the duty of the husband not only to govern, but to protect the wife, even at the risk of his own life: and it is the duty of husbands to "lay down their lives for the brethren," as St. John says; surely it is the duty of the husband to lay down his life for his wife, in a similar case.

CHAP. VI. Ver. 2. The first commandment with promise.—i. e. with a special and peculiar promise.

Ver. 3. On the earth.—Or "land." See Exod. xx. 12.

Ver. 4. Nurture and admonition.—According to Doddridge, mean "Discipline and instruction," which should always go together.

5 ^a Servants, be obedient to them that are ^{your} masters according to the flesh, with fear and trembling, in singleness of your heart, as unto Christ;

6 Not with eye-service, as men-pleasers; but as the servants of Christ, doing the will of God from the heart;

7 With good will doing service, as to the Lord, and not to men:

8 Knowing that whatsoever good thing any man doeth, the same shall he receive of the Lord, whether he be bond or free.

9 And, ye masters, do the same things unto them, ^a forbearing threatening: knowing that ^a your Master also is in heaven; neither is there respect ^f of persons with him.

10 Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might.

11 Put on the whole armour ^g of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil.

12 For we wrestle not against ^b flesh and blood, but against ⁱ principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against ^j spiritual wickedness in ^k high places.

13 Wherefore take unto you the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having ^l done all, to stand.

14 Stand therefore, having your loins girt ^m about with truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness;

A. M. cir. 4965.
A. D. cir. 61.
c 1 Pe 2:13, &c.
d or, moderating.
e Some read, both your and their.
f Ro. 2:11.
g Ro 13:12, 2 Co 5:7.
h blood and flesh.
i Ro 9:38.
j or, wicked spirits.
k or, heavenly, i. e., c. 1, 3.
l or, overcome.
m Is 11:5.
n Ca 7:1.
o 1 Jo 5:4.
p 1s 59:17.
q He 4:12.
r La 18:1.
s Mat 26:41.
t 2 Th 3:1.
u or, a chain.
v or, thereof.
w Is 58:1.
x Ac 20:4.
y Col 4:7, 8.
z 1 Pe 5:14.
a or, in incorruption.

15 And your feet ^a shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace;

16 Above all, taking the shield of ^a faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked.

17 And take the helmet ^b of salvation, and the sword ^c of the Spirit, which is the word of God:

18 Praying ^d always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, and watching ^e thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all saints;

19 And for ^f me, that utterance may be given unto me, that I may open my mouth boldly, to make known the mystery of the gospel,

20 For which I am an ambassador in ^g bonds: that ^h therein I may speak boldly, as I ought ⁱ to speak.

21 But that ye also may know my affairs, and how I do, ^j Tychicus, a beloved brother and faithful minister in the Lord, shall make known to you all things:

22 Whom ^k I have sent unto you for the same purpose, that ye might know our affairs, and that he might comfort your hearts.

23 Peace ^l be to the brethren, and love with faith, from God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

24 Grace ^m be with all them that love our Lord Jesus Christ ⁿ in sincerity. Amen.

^o Written from Rome unto the Ephesians by Tychicus.

reverence, and promptitude, as others—"With good will doing service, as to the Lord, and not unto men."

We now come to consider the Christian soldier, his armour, and his conflicts. The life of man was by the ancients compared to a warfare; that of a Christian is eminently so: but then Christianity provides him with armour, both defensive and offensive; and not only so, but likewise with strength and fortitude for the engagement.

"Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might." Nor has the believer, however weak in himself, reason to fear the result, while thus supported by divine assistance, notwithstanding the number and magnitude of the hostile powers against him. These are divided into two classes, internal and external; domestic and foreign, if we may so speak; to both which he is continually exposed. Our internal enemies are flesh and blood: that carnal and corrupt nature so pathetically lamented by St. Paul himself, in his epistle to the Romans, (chap. vii. 24): "O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" This continually opposed his advancement in the divine life, and often threatened to cramp the energy of his exertions: but when he recollected the promised strength of his divine Master—the "grace sufficient" to support him under all circumstances; he then burst into the triumphant exclamation—"I thank God, through Jesus Christ our Lord!" But Paul had, as we also have, other enemies to contend with; namely, "principalities and powers, the rulers of the darkness of this world, and spiritual wickedness," or wicked spirits, who formerly occupied high situations in the upper world, but sinned, and were cast down therefrom; namely, Satan and his host. These wind themselves into the human mind like serpents, seeking whom they can seduce; or prowl about the earth like lions, seeking whom they might devour. It is possible, however, that the expression, "spiritual wickedness in high places," may have a different meaning, and allude to the advanced ground, or elevated stations, from which their fiery darts are aimed at us.

But let us now examine the panoply, or "whole armour of God," provided for us to resist such mighty enemies. The girdle of truth, is the first and most essential part of this armour; for without simplicity and godly sincerity, all our exertions are unquestionably in vain. The breastplate of righteousness, or internal sanctification, is equally necessary to guard the heart; and the shoes, or sandals of peace, are no less important to guard our feet in a path strewn, not with roses, but with thorns and briars—with broken flints, or with burning lava! Above, and over all these, we are commanded to take the shield of faith, which is able to resist and quench the fiery darts of Satan. The helmet of salvation, or the hope and confident expectation of eternal life, is the crowning and completing article of this defensive armour: but we now come to offensive armour, without which, however obstinately the Christian may resist, he can never gain the victory—we mean the sword of the Spirit, which we are told is "the word of God;" and the Spirit of supplication, and watchfulness, and perseverance, are no less necessary to engage upon our side "the power of his might," by which we alone can conquer.

The apostle here drops the allegory, and having spoken of prayer, urges them thereto with all earnestness; and begs an interest in their prayers on the behalf of all saints, and particularly for himself, that he might be enabled, though his body were enchained, freely and boldly to proclaim the mystery of the gospel to the Gentiles, to whom he was sent as an ambassador, with the proclamation of divine mercy.

"Soldiers of Christ, arise,
And put your armour on,
Strong in the strength which God supplies
Through his eternal Son,
Strong in the Lord of Hosts,
And in his mighty power;
Who in the strength of Jesus trusts,
Is more than conqueror."—C. Wesley.

Ver. 16. Above (or over) all, taking the shield of faith.—This seems to refer to those large shields which the ancients used to cover their whole bodies; and the fiery darts, to the fire-bearing darts and arrows described by Thucydides and Livy, the lower parts of which were surrounded with tow and other combustible matter, and which, when set on fire, were darted against the enemy.—See Orient. Customs, No. 544.—Of the wicked.—Doddridge, "wicked one."

Ver. 17. Sword of the Spirit.—Camp. Heb. iv. 12.
Ver. 18. With all prayer.—Social and private, studied and extemporary, supplicatory and deprecatory, &c. Bp. Wilkins, in his treatise of prayer, explains this of improving the gift of prayer by continual exercise, and gathering fit materials by reading, conversation, meditation, &c.

Ver. 20. Ambassador in bonds.—Gr. "In a chain."—See Acts xxvii. 20, by which it appears that Paul, as was not unusual, was suffered to dwell in his own hired house, under the charge of a Roman soldier, to whom he was fastened by a single chain. See Palmy's House Paul chap. vi. No. 5.

Ver. 21. Tychicus.—Was "one of Paul's friends and fellow-labourers, and had been his companion in the last interview he had with the elders of Ephesus." Acts xx. 4. See also 2 Tim. iv. 12. Titus iii. 12.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE EPISTLE TO THE EPHESIANS.

EPHESUS was the capital of Proconsular Asia; and the gospel was first preached in this celebrated but licentious city, by St. Paul, with the most abundant success: and such was the Apostle's concern for their spiritual welfare, 1308 that he did not leave them till three years afterwards. On his return from Macedonia and Achaia to Jerusalem, he sent for the elders of the church to meet him at Miletus, where he took an affectionate leave of them, and delivered a most solemn charge. (Acts xvii. 19—21; xix. 17—38.) Some years after, he wrote this epistle from Rome, as stated in the subscription, during his first imprisonment in that city. (ch. iii. 1; iv. 1; v. 20.) and from his not expressing any hopes of a speedy release, probably in the early part of it, about A. D. 61; to establish them in the great doctrines of the gospel, to guard them against errors, to excite them to a holy conversation, and to animate them in their Christian warfare.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE PHILIPPIANS.

[THE Church at Philippi in Macedonia was planted by the Apostle Paul about A. D. 55 (Acts xv. 9—19) and appears to have prospered there again. A. D. 60, though no particulars are recorded concerning that visit, (Acts xv. 6.) The Philippians were greatly attached to St. Paul, and testified their affection by sending him supplies, even when labouring for other churches; and when they heard that he was under confinement at Rome, they sent Epaphroditus, one of their pastors, to him with a present, lest he should want necessities during his imprisonment. The more immediate occasion of the Epistle was the return of Epaphroditus, by whom the Apostle sent it as a grateful acknowledgment of their kindness; which occurred towards the close of his first imprisonment, about the end of A. D. 62, or the commencement of 63, as is evident from the expectation he discovers of his being soon released and restored to them, as well as from intimations that he had been a considerable time at Rome.]—Bagster.

CHAPTER I.

3 He testified his thankfulness to God, and his love toward them, for the fruits of their faith, and fellowship in his sufferings, 9, 10, 11, praying to him for their increase in grace. 12 He sheweth what good the love of Christ had received by his friends at Rome. 21, and how ready he is to glorify Christ either by his life or death, 25, exhorting them to unity, 28, and to abide in persecution.

PAUL and Timothy, the servants of Jesus Christ, to all the saints in Christ Jesus which are at Philippi, with the bishops and deacons:

2 Grace be unto you, and peace, from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

3 I thank my God upon every remembrance of you.

4 Always in every prayer of mine for you all making request with joy,

5 For your fellowship in the gospel from the first day until now;

6 Being confident of this very thing, that he which hath begun a good work in you will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ:

7 Even as it is meet for me to think this of you all, because I have you in my heart; inasmuch as both in my bonds, and in the defence and confirmation of the gospel, ye all are partakers of my grace.

8 For God is my record, how greatly I long after you all in the bowels of Jesus Christ.

9 And this I pray, that your love may abound yet more and more in knowledge and in all judgment;

10 That ye may approve things that are excellent; that ye may be sincere and without offence till the day of Christ;

11 Being filled with the fruits of righteousness, which are by Jesus Christ, unto the glory and praise of God.

A. M. 66.
A. D. 62.

a Ac 16 12,
&c

b Ro 17

c or, men-

d Ep 1 14,
&c

e 1 Th 1 2

f 1 S 18 5

g Jo 8 29

h or, fresh

i 2 Pe 3 10

j or, ye

k ver 17

l or, with

m 1 Th 3 12

n or, serve

o Ro 2 18

p or, try

q or, differ

r Ep 5 47

s Lu 15 8

t or, for

u or, Ce-

v or, to all

w Ro 8 23

x 2 Co 1 11

y Ro 5 5

z Ep 6 19, 20

a Ro 14 7,8

b Ro 14 13

c 2 Co 5 8

d Ps 16 11

12 But I would ye should understand, brethren, that the things which happened unto me have fallen out rather unto the furtherance of the gospel;

13 So that my bonds in Christ are manifest in all the palace, and in all other places;

14 And many of the brethren in the Lord, waxing confident by my bonds, are much more bold to speak the word without fear.

15 Some indeed preach Christ even of envy and strife; and some also of good will:

16 The one preach Christ of contention, not sincerely, supposing to add affliction to my bonds:

17 But the other of love, knowing that I am set for the defence of the gospel.

18 What then? notwithstanding, every way, whether in pretence, or in truth, Christ is preached; and I therein do rejoice, yea, and will rejoice.

19 For I know that this shall turn to my salvation through your prayer, and the supply of the Spirit of Jesus Christ, 20 According to my earnest expectation and my hope, that in nothing I shall be ashamed, but that with all boldness, as always, so now also, Christ shall be magnified in my body, whether it be by life, or by death.

21 For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain.

22 But if I live in the flesh, this is the fruit of my labour: yet what I shall choose I wot not.

23 For I am in a strait betwixt two, having a desire to depart, and to be with Christ; which is far better:

CHAP. I. Ver. 1—20. Introduction: with an exposition of Paul's hopes and views.—Philippi was one of the first cities of Macedonia into which St. Paul carried the gospel, where it was successful in the conversion of Lydia and her household, with many others. There, in consequence, a Christian church was planted at an early period; Acts xvi. 9, &c.; and which the apostle repeatedly visited as he passed to and from Greece, and he was much respected and beloved by them. The brethren hearing of his imprisonment at Rome, sent Epaphroditus, one of their most highly esteemed pastors, to comfort and assist him, as in chap. iv. 18. This marked attention on their part, occasioned the epistle now before us, wherein he unites with his own name that of his beloved son Timothy. After the usual apostolic benediction, he assures them of the interest which he took in their spiritual welfare, and the pleasure which he felt in the assurance, that the God of all grace, who had thus "begun a good work" among them, would not leave them, either as a church, or as individual believers, till he had accomplished in them all the good pleasure of his will.

He then informs them, that his present situation, painful as it was, had contributed rather to the furtherance of the gospel than to check it, as its enemies designed. In particular, his imprisonment had excited great attention to the cause, and procured converts even in Cesar's household, (chap. iv. 22.) And other preachers, so far from being intimidated, had, on the contrary, been thereby emboldened; and even supposing that some might have been actuated by improper motives, he could not but rejoice, notwithstanding, to see the gospel spread around him, and become the power of God to men's salvation. As to himself, Paul's great desire was, that Christ might be

CHAP. I. Ver. 1. The bishops—[The word Bishop properly denotes an overseer; and, except its being once applied to Christ, (1 Pe. ii. 25.) is every where spoken of men who have the oversight of Christ's flock.]—Bagster.

Ver. 2. For your fellowship—[That is, the Christian communion which he had at different times enjoyed with them.]

Ver. 6. He which hath begun, &c. will perform.—This may be understood either of the church, or of individual believers. The objection, that confidence of success has a tendency to produce carelessness and indifference, is so contrary to the general experience of mankind, that we cannot but wonder when we see it mentioned. What so much animates and encourages any person in the progress of a great work, as the persuasion that he shall be enabled to complete it.—The day of Jesus Christ—i. e. of death and judgment.

Ver. 7. I have you in my heart—i. e. you have a deep interest in my affections. See Allyn. The phrase is equivocal, and no doubt but the regard was mutual.—Ye all are partakers of my grace—i. e. partakers of the same grace that I am.

Ver. 9. In knowledge—Rather, perhaps, with knowledge; meaning that their love might be guided by knowledge and discretion.—And in all judgment—Doddridge, "perception." MacKnight, "feeling," or "sensitivity."

Ver. 10. Things that are excellent—Paul intimates that a knowledge of men, and things, and a delicate sensibility, or "moral feeling," was necessary to guard the Philippians against being imposed upon. See ver. 15.—Sin- cere—[Gr. "eukhremos," from eite, the splendour of the sun, and krimo, I judge, discern, properly pure and unsullied to such a degree as to bear examination in the full splendour of the solar rays.]—Bagster.

Ver. 11. Not sincerely—i. e. as Doddridge explains it, not with a pure and simple aim for the salvation of souls. Have modern times produced no instances of preachers pretending to be highly evangelized, out of an envious desire to rival and supplant their brethren?

Ver. 18. I therein do rejoice—A good man should rejoice in the spread of the gospel, even though his own popularity, or even his congregation, should be diminished thereby.

Ver. 21. For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain—Some render this, "Christ is gain to me, being or dying;" but this is again a paraphrase (than a translation; and, as Doddridge remarks, destroys the beautiful antithesis between the members of the sentence.

Ver. 22. What I shall choose, &c.—Doddridge, "Which I should choose I know not."

Ver. 23. I am in a strait betwixt two—Doddridge, "I am borne two different ways." He adds, "the original seems to be an allusion to a ship driven at anchor, and at the same time likely to be forced to sea by the violence of the winds.—Which is far better" MacKnight, "By much the better." This, he adds, "is the highest superlative which it is possible to form in any language."

24 Nevertheless, to abide in the flesh is more needful for you.

25 And having this confidence, I know that I shall abide and continue with you all for your furtherance and joy of faith;

26 That your rejoicing may be more abundant in Jesus Christ for me by my coming to you again.

27 Only let your conversation be as it becometh the gospel of Christ: that whether I come and see you, or else be absent, I may hear of your affairs, that ye stand fast in one spirit, with one mind striving together for the faith of the gospel;

28 And in nothing terrified by your adversaries: which is to them an evident token of perdition, but to you of salvation, and that of God.

29 For unto you it is given in the behalf of Christ, not only to believe on him, but also to suffer for his sake;

30 Having the same conflict, which ye saw in me, and now hear to be in me.

honoured and magnified in him, either in his life and labours, or in his death and martyrdom. "For me," (says he,) to live is Christ;" that is, Christ's honour and his cause were the great objects for the promotion of which he was still content to live, though, at the same time, he contemplated in death an immense and eternal gain. This, indeed, somewhat straitened him in his present views and wishes; for though in life only could he expect to see the fruit of all his sufferings and labours; yet "to be with Christ" was "far much better;" not only than a prison, but even than a palace.

On 2 Cor. chap. v. 1-10, we have already adverted to the doctrine of a separate intermediate state, which receives an ample confirmation from the passage now before us, on which Dr. Macknight thus remarks:—"From what the apostle saith here, we may infer that he had no knowledge nor expectation of a middle state of insensibility between death and the resurrection. For if he had known of any such state, he would have thought it better to live, and promote the cause of Christ and religion, than, by dying, to fall into a state of absolute insensibility. Besides, how could he say that he had a desire to be with Christ, if he knew that he was not to be with him till after the resurrection?" It is clear that his object was not merely rest, but enjoyment—an enjoyment very far better than he could expect or hope on earth.

The chapter concludes with some excellent practical advice to the members of the Philippian church: "Only, (says he,) let your conversation be as becometh the gospel;" in the original of which passage there seems to be an allusion to their heavenly citizenship; as if he had said, "Remember, you are the citizens of no mean city, but of that Jerusalem which is above, and which is the mother of us all—(Gal. iv. 25, 26)—and let all your conduct and conversation be found becoming so high a privilege."

CHAP. II. Ver. 1-11. Exhortations to humility and condescension, after the divine pattern of our Saviour.—This very interesting chapter opens with the most earnest and affectionate exhortations to unanimity and mutual affection; exhorting the Ephesians not to attend only to their several private interests, but, (as Doddridge expresses it,) "each also to aim at promoting the interests of others;" denying themselves, and neglecting their own ease and comfort—consecrating to persons of low estate, and even submitting to labour and to sufferings, for those who had no claim, either of merit or obligation; and to enforce this, he sets before them an example, the most extraordinary that earth or heaven can furnish, and wholly without a parallel: "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus," &c.; a passage highly valuable, both as furnishing an unequivocal testimony to the proper divinity of our Lord and Saviour, and a practical lesson, equally

Ver. 25. I know, &c.—Most probably St Paul had received a divine intimation to that effect.

Ver. 27. Let your conversation.—Let suitably to the high honours and privileges which you sustain as citizens of the heavenly Jerusalem, and seek the honour of the gospel, and the welfare of the church in all your actions.—B.

CHAP. II. Ver. 1. Bowels and mercies.—Thus, in the Hebrew idiom, would be "bowels of mercies," as in Col. iii. 12.

Ver. 2. Like-minded—Doddridge, "unanimous."—"Of one accord, of one mind."—Doddridge, "Having your souls joined together in attending to the one (great) thing;" namely, practical holiness. Guise understands the first expression (like-minded) as a general term, and the following as particulars of it, "having the same love, the same desires, the same principles." Ver. 6. The form of God.—The term seems most naturally to mean, "existing in the glory and majesty of Deity," as in Heb. i. 3. Some light may be thrown on this passage, from a parallel expression of Clement, Bishop of Rome, in the close of the first century:—"The sceptre of the majesty of God, our Lord Jesus Christ, came not in the show of pride, though he could have done so, but with humility," &c. (Hake's Epis. ch. xv.) "Then the sceptre of God's majesty" seems to explain the "form of God;" and the opposition between the members of the sentence is very similar: Christ is also here proposed as a pattern of humility.—Thought it not robbery—Or injustice

A. M. cir. 406.
A. D. cir. 62.

E. p. 4. 1.
c. 3. 20.
f. 4. 1.
g. Jude 3.
h. Is. 51. 7, 12.
Mat. 10. 23.
i. 2 Th. 1. 5.
j. Ro. 8. 17.
k. Ac. 5. 41.
l. Ac. 16. 19.
1 Th. 2. 2.

a. Col. 3. 12.
b. Jn. 3. 24.
c. 2 Co. 13. 11.
1 Pe. 3. 8.
d. Ga. 5. 25.
Ja. 3. 14.
e. 1 Pe. 5. 5.
f. 1 Co. 13. 5.
g. Jn. 13. 14.
1 Pe. 2. 21.

h. Jn. 1. 1, 2.
Col. 1. 13.
i. Jn. 5. 18.
j. Ps. 22. 6.
k. Lu. 22. 27.
l. or, habit.

CHAPTER II.

1 He exhorted them to unity, and to all humbleness of mind, by the example of Christ's humility and exaltation. 12 to a careful proceeding in the way of salvation, that they be as lights to the wicked world, 16 and comforts to him their apostle, who is now ready to be offered up to God. 19 He exhorts to send Timothy to them, whom he greatly commended, 25 as Epaphroditus also, whom he presents as useful to them.

1 If there be therefore any consolation in Christ, if any comfort of love, if any fellowship of the Spirit, if any bowels and mercies,

2 Fulfil ye my joy, that ye be like-minded, having the same love, being of one accord, of one mind.

3 Let nothing be done through strife or vain glory; but in lowliness of mind let each esteem other better than themselves.

4 Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others.

5 Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus:

6 Who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

7 But made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men:

8 And being found in fashion as a man, he striking and important. And here we may remark, that the Scriptures do not classify theology under the heads doctrinal and practical, as we do; but they draw all their exhortations to duty from facts, which facts furnish both the most important doctrines and precepts of Christianity, of which we have an instance now before us.

Its practical bearing we have already stated; and we have said this passage also furnishes an unequivocal testimony to the proper divinity of our Lord, which we shall state in the words of the learned and pious Dr. Burgess:—"The language of St. Paul evidently expresses two very different states of being; one highly exalted, the other very humble. In one, Christ is represented as 'being in the form of God'; in the other, as 'made in the likeness of men'; and as having divested himself of one, to assume the other. . . . We have, then, in these words an exact counterpart of the language of St. John in his gospel, (see chap. i. 1 & 14,) in which he says, that in one state Christ 'was God,' in the other, he was 'made flesh.' . . . St. Paul, in his Epistle to the Hebrews, (chap. i. 3,) has the same contrast between Christ's pre-existent and human natures, but differently conducted, for his object was different. In [this] Epistle to the Philippians, he is recommending the example of Christ's humility, and therefore he dwells most on his low and despised condition on earth. In the Epistle to the Hebrews, his object is to display the infinite value of the sacrifice of Christ, and therefore he dwells most on the dignity of Christ's pre-existent state."

But to confine ourselves to the passage now before us, it is true that criticism has extorted a different meaning from this text, and some have been bold enough to make it speak on the other side—"He did not think of the robbery of being equal to God!" But, it is evident to common sense, that the passage can have no such meaning; for, 1. Christ is here set forth as an example of humility and condescension; but where is the humility of a creature in not assuming divine honours? or where is the condescension of a man in stooping to the ranks of humanity? 2. The text contains a striking antithesis, between the glory of Deity, and the frailty of humanity—between receiving divine honours, and suffering the deepest disgrace and misery; which antithesis is by this interpretation totally destroyed.

We now come to the reverse of this interesting scene. We have seen our Saviour "evidently set forth" as bending downward from the skies; and as then farther humbled to death and to the grave; but the grave could not detain him. We are now called upon to behold him rising to the highest seat in glory, in a manner no less admirable than his descent to earth and the grave was deeply affecting. His condescension had an object, and that object is accomplished. He came to

—to be, or represent himself as, EQUAL WITH GOD.—We have not room, nor would it be consistent with our plan, to introduce long verbal criticisms; but justice requires us to remark, that some very able scholars, and at the same time zealous defenders of the divinity of Christ, give a very different version of this expression. Waterland says, "I am persuaded that the words may very justly be translated, 'He did not very highly value—did not insist upon his equality with God.' " &c. Eye Smith also renders it—"Did not esteem it an object to be caught at, to be on a parity with God; but emptied himself," &c. Wardlaw, however, and other able critics, contend in favour of the common version.—Equal with God.—Some contend that the Greek (iso-) should be rendered "like;" but in the scriptures, the terms like and equal are often used as equivalent—"To whom will ye liken me, or shall I be equal?" saith the Holy Spirit, Isa. xl. 25; xlv. 5.

Ver. 7. But made himself of no reputation.—Gr. "emptied himself," &c. Doddridge; but Macknight, "divested himself;" i. e. of his honours and glory.—And took (Gr. ex-taking) upon him the form—the character, the station—of a servant—a bondman, or slave, as the word usually signifies, (so Macknight;) but this does not mean literally that he was in any servile capacity, but treated as such—counted, crucified, &c.—And was made. Gr. "being made;" in the likeness of men—Means, he became as a common or ordinary man. See Isa. liii. 2.

humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross.

9 Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name:

10 That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth:

11 And that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father.

12 Wherefore, my beloved, as ye have always obeyed, not as in my presence only, but now much more in my absence, work out your own salvation with fear and trembling.

13 For it is God which worketh in you both to will and to do of his good pleasure.

14 Do all things without murmurings and disputings:

15 That ye may be blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world;

16 Holding forth the word of life; that I may rejoice in the day of Christ, that I have not run in vain, neither laboured in vain.

17 Yea, and if I be offered upon the sacrifice and service of your faith, I joy, and rejoice with you all.

18 For the same cause also do ye joy, and rejoice with me.

19 But I trust in the Lord Jesus to send Timothy shortly unto you, that I also may be of good comfort, when I know your state.

20 For I have no man like-minded, who will naturally care for your state.

A. M. cir. 400.
A. D. cir. 62.
mHe 12:2.
n He 2:9.
Revel. 1:1.
o Je 45:23.
Ro 9:13.
p Ju 13:13.
Ro 14:9.
q Ro 10:15.
Jn 6:27.
29.
He 4:11.
2 Fe 1:5.
10.
r Ep 6:5.
a He 13:21.
1 Co 10:10.
n Ro 14:1.
v or, sincere.
w Mat 5:45.
Ep 5:1.
x De 32:5.
y or, shine ye.
z Mat 5:14, 16.
a 1 Co 9:25.
b poured forth.
c 2 Th 4:6.
d messenger.
e 1 Th 3:2.
f or, so dear unto me.
g 2 Th 5:2.
h c 1:23.
i c 4:15.
j Phil 2.
k or, honour such.
l Co 16:18.
l 1 Co 16:17.
a 1 Th 3:16.
h 2 Pe 1:12.
15.

21 For all seek their own, not the things which are Jesus Christ's.

22 But ye know the proof of him, that, as a son with the father, he hath served with me in the gospel.

23 Him therefore I hope to send presently, so soon as I shall see how it will go with me.

24 But I trust in the Lord that I also myself shall come shortly.

25 Yet I supposed it necessary to send to you Epaphroditus, my brother, and companion in labour, and fellow-soldier, but your messenger, and he that ministered to my wants.

26 For he longed after you all, and was full of heaviness, because that ye had heard that he had been sick.

27 For indeed he was sick nigh unto death: but God had mercy on him; and not on him only, but on me also, lest I should have sorrow upon sorrow.

28 I sent him therefore the more carefully, that, when ye see him again, ye may rejoice, and that I may be the less sorrowful.

29 Receive him therefore in the Lord with all gladness; and hold such in reputation:

30 Because for the work of Christ he was nigh unto death, not regarding his life, to supply your lack of service toward me.

CHAPTER III.

I have warned them to beware of the false teachers of the circumcision, showing that himself hath greater cause than they to trust in the righteousness of the law: 7. He hath indicated his long and painful conflict with the law, and his own Christ and his agonies, 12. He then acknowledging his own imperfection, 13. He exhorted them to be thus minded, 17. and to imitate him, 18. and to declare the ways of eternal Christians.

FINALLY, my brethren, rejoice in the Lord. To write the same things to you, to me indeed is not grievous, but for you it is safe.

redeem our ruined race, and had in the covenant of redemption a stipulated reward. He rises in the same nature in which he died, and bears with him to heaven the trophies of his victory. He has a name given him above every name, and receives an accumulation of honours from heaven and earth, and from the invisible world. But here our curiosity must be repressed. Let us join with all the intelligent creation in ascribing to him glory—assuredly believing, that there is no jealousy in the divine being; but whatever praise is rendered to the Son, redounds no less to the glory of the Father also: and however fearful some persons may appear to be, of paying excessive honours to the Son, himself hath told us, that "He that honoureth not the Son, honoureth not the Father." (John v. 23.) One thing may particularly merit our attention, that though it is the same person who thus ascended, that had previously descended, it was with a peculiar accession of honour and felicity. Not, indeed, that any thing could be added to his happiness as a divine person; but he had taken human nature into union with the divine: that nature had suffered and died; that nature is therefore exalted to the highest happiness, as well as glory, that a created nature is capable of enjoying. This was the reward of suffering love; "Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him!"

Ver. 12—30. The Philippians exhorted to "work out their salvation" with diligence and care. The praise of Epaphroditus.—The apostle having set before his beloved Philippians the example of Jesus Christ, and the glory to which he had been advanced, urges upon them the necessity of practical religion: "Work out your own salvation . . . for it is God which worketh in you," &c. M. Claude (an eminent French Protestant divine) treats this passage with great judgment. After a few expository remarks, he deduces from the words the following theological propositions:—1. God by his Holy Spirit illuminates the understandings of men; for working in us to will, must necessarily be by illuminating the understanding. 2. That operation of grace which illuminates the understanding is practical, and not barely speculative, but descends even to the heart. St. Paul says, God works in us to do. 3. The first dispositions to co-operation are effects of grace, as well as conversion itself: for St. Paul not only says, God worketh in us to do; but he adds, he worketh in us to will; now this will consists in dispositions to conversion. 4. Thus operation of grace does not consist in putting us in a state capable of converting ourselves, as the admirers of sufficient grace say; but it actually converts us; for the apostle says, "God worketh in us to will and to do." 5. The operation of this grace which converts us, is of victorious efficacy, and obtains its end in spite of all the resistances of nature; for St. Paul says, God "effectually worketh in us to will and to do;" which means, that when he displays this grace, nothing can [effectually] resist him. 6. When God converts us, whatever irresistibility there is in his grace, he displays it, nevertheless, to us in a way which neither destroys our nature, nor offers any violence to our will; for St. Paul says, "God worketh in us to will;" that is to say, he converts us by inspiring us with love for his gospel in gentle ways, suited to the faculties of our souls.

Dr. Doddridge says:—"The original (of this passage) is very emphatical, as Mr. Howe beautifully observes; for it asserts, on the one hand, that God is actually or continually operating, and, on the other, that thus to work in the heart for such noble purposes, is the prerogative of God, and an effect worthy his divine attributes and perfections." President Edwards says:—"I question if any word can be found in all the Greek language more expressive." When it is added, that we are to work out our salvation "with fear and trembling," the words imply a great degree of humility and reverence, and are in this sense applied by St. Chrysostom to the holy angels, as is observed by Dr. Hammond.

In the latter part of this chapter St. Paul intimates the probability of his being sacrificed on their account, and his blood being poured forth as a libation or drink-offering; but in the contemplation of this he triumphed in the true spirit of martyrdom.

Before this event, however, should take place, he hoped not only to send them his son Timothy, but even to be liberated, that he might himself visit them. Also to send back unto them their beloved messenger Epaphroditus, of whom he speaks in the most affectionate and endearing terms.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1—24. St. Paul warns the Philippians against false teachers, and exhorts them to place their whole confidence in Christ.—The apostle's first caution is expressed in very strong and unceremonious terms. Dr. Macknight

Ver. 8. Even the death of the cross—That is, the most degrading, execrating, and accursed, of all the forms of death.

Ver. 9. Given him—Macknight, "bestowed on him."

Ver. 10. At (Gr. "in") the name of Jesus—i. e. to him, as the Saviour of men—every knee should bow—i. e. all creatures should worship him. See Rev. v. 13, 14; and compare Rom. xiv. 11.

Ver. 13. Which worketh—Macknight, "Who inwardly worketh."

Ver. 15. Ye shine—Margin, "Shine ye." So Theophylact. Compare Mat. v. 14, 16. But Shawin explains this in reference to light-houses, and particularly the famous tower of Pharos, in which lights were always kept burning, as a guide to mariners.

Ver. 17. Offered upon—Margin, "poured forth;"—i. e. if my blood should be poured forth in martyrdom. Parkhurst well remarks, that the Apostle compares the faith of the Philippians to the sacrificial victim, and his own blood shed in martyrdom to the libation—i. e. the wine poured out, on occasion of the sacrifice.—Eagleser.

Ver. 19. Your state—i. e. the state of the church and of the cause.

Ver. 25. Messenger—Gr. "apostle." The pastors were the apostles' messengers, or angels of the churches. St. Paul and the eleven were apostles of Jesus Christ.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1. To write the same things—To repeat what he had said in the preceding chapter, verses 17, 18.

2 Beware of ^a dogs, beware of ^a evil workers, beware of the ^a concision.

3 For we ^a are the circumcision, which worship God in the spirit, and rejoice in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in the flesh.

4 Though I might also have confidence in the flesh. If any other man thinketh that he hath whereof he might trust in the flesh, I more:

5 Circumcised the eighth day, of the stock of Israel, of the tribe of Benjamin, a Hebrew of the Hebrews; as touching the law, a ^a Pharisee;

6 Concerning ^b zeal, persecuting the church; touching the righteousness which is in the law, blameless.

7 But what things were gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ.

8 Yea doubtless, and I count all things but loss for ^k the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ,

9 And be found in him, not having mine own ^m righteousness, which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness ⁿ which is of God by faith:

10 That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the ^o fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death;

11 If by any means I might ^p attain unto the resurrection of the dead.

A.M. cir.
4066.
A. 11. cir.
62.
e 1s. 56, 10, 11
d 1s. 22, 15, 16
f 1s. 119,
113
g 1s. 1, 3, 2a
h Ac. 23, 6, 11
i 1s. 1, 13, 14
j 1s. 1, 6,
3d, 23, 34
k 1s. 53, 11,
Je. 9, 23, 24
l 1s. 17, 3,
1 Co. 2, 2,
12 Co. 11,
25, 27
m Ro. 10, 3, 5
n Ro. 1, 17
o 1 Is. 4, 13,
p Ac. 26, 7.
q 1s. 12, 23,
r 1s. 45, 10,
He. 6, 1,
1 Co. 9, 24,
He. 12, 1,
t 1s. 3, 1,
u 1 Co. 2, 6,
v 1s. 1, 16,
w Ga. 5, 16,
x 1 Th. 1, 6
y 1 Is. 5, 3,
z Ga. 1, 7, 6, 12
a 2 Co. 11, 15
b 2 Ps. 2, 1,
c 1 Th. 6, 5,
d Ep. 2, 19
e He. 9, 28,
f 1 Co. 15,
1s. 4, 2,
1 Ju. 2, 2,
g Ep. 1, 19,
h 1 Co. 15,
26, 27.

12 Not as though I had already attained, either were already ^a perfect: but I follow after, if that I may apprehend that for which also I am apprehended of Christ Jesus.

13 Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, forgetting ^a those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before,

14 I press ^a toward the mark for the prize of the high ^a calling of God in Christ Jesus.

15 Let us therefore, as many as be ^a perfect, be thus ^a minded: and if in any thing ye be otherwise minded, God shall reveal even this unto you.

16 Nevertheless, whereto we have already attained, let us walk by the same ^w rule, let us mind the same thing.

17 Brethren, be followers ^a together of me, and mark them which walk so as ye have us ^y for an ensample.

18 (For many walk, of whom I have told you often, and now tell you even weeping, that they are the enemies ^z of the cross of Christ:

19 Whose ^a end is destruction, whose ^b God is their belly, and whose ^c glory is in their shame, who mind earthly things.)

20 For our ^a conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look ^e for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ:

21 Who shall change ^f our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body according to the working ^g whereby he is able even ^h to subdue all things unto himself.

observes—"The apostle calls the bigots among the unbelieving Jews, dogs, because they barked against the doctrines of the gospel and its faithful teachers, and were ready to devour all who opposed their errors. Our Lord used the word dogs in the same sense, when he commanded not to give that which is holy unto the dogs. (Matt. vi. 6.) Perhaps the unbelieving Jews are called dogs, likewise, to signify that, in the sight of God, they were now become as abominable for crucifying Christ, and persecuting his apostles, as the idolatrous heathens were in the eyes of the Jews, who, to express their abhorrence of them, called them dogs." The same persons are evidently intended by "evil workers," and "the concision," or "the excision," as the commentator just named renders it; a word formed by St. Paul, to designate those who contended for circumcision as necessary to salvation; in opposition to whom, the apostle describes himself and brethren as "the true circumcision;" those who looked to the spiritual intent and design of that ordinance—"who worshipped God in the spirit;" that is, spiritually and evangelically, and "put no confidence in the flesh," nor in any fleshly ordinances, farther than the word of God requires and justifies them in so doing; not but, as he says, if such a confidence were warrantable, no man could have a greater right to boast in external privileges and advantages than himself, being "a Hebrew of the Hebrews," &c. as he subjoins.

But what things soever he had formerly accounted gain, and valued himself upon, those he now "counted loss for Christ," and in deference to his gospel and his cause. "Yea, doubtless," adds he, bursting into a rapture of holy triumph—"Yea, doubtless, and I count all things (but) loss, for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord, for whom I have suffered the loss of all things;" namely, fortune, character, and fame—ease, comfort, and (that in which above all things I gloried) my own self-righteousness; "and do still count them all (but) dung, that I may win Christ, and be found (interested) in him; not having my own righteousness, which is of the law; but that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith;"—that righteousness which God imputes to penitent sinners believing in his Son. (See exposition, Rom. iii. 20—31.)

The apostle adds—"That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection," &c. as if he had said, That I may have an experimental acquaintance with his love—feel the attractive power of his resurrection, drawing up my heart and affections to heaven and heavenly things—obtain a fellowship in his sufferings and death; if by any means I might attain to the resurrection from the dead—meaning the first resurrection, or the resurrection of the just. St. Paul then returns to his favourite metaphor, comparing the course of a Christian life to the Olympic races—"Not as though I had already attained the prize, or completed my course, (see 1 Cor. ix. 24—26;) but I follow after (it,) if that I may [but] apprehend that, for which also I am apprehended of Christ Jesus." To apprehend, is literally to lay hold of; Christ had laid hold of the apostle, to introduce and to help him onward in the course, and his own anxiety was, that he also might reach the goal. For this purpose, forgetting the things that were behind, namely the attainments he had already made, he was still eagerly reaching forward, still pressing toward the goal, eager to "lay hold on eternal life," which is "the prize of (our) high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

"Let, therefore, as many as be perfect"—that is, all who have attained to any proficiency in the Christian life, "be thus minded"—thus earnest in persevering, thus eager to gain the prize.—"Nevertheless, (or however,) whereto we have already attained, let us walk by the same rule, (mark, or line,) till we complete our race, and seize the prize of immortality, the resurrection of the dead."

Before we close this chapter, there is one thing on which we beg leave to remark, that many Christians lose time, by stopping to survey the ground they have passed, instead of eagerly reaching forward to the end; we mean, (without a figure,) they trust too much to past experiences, instead of keeping the eye steadily looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of their faith, (Heb. xii. 2.) There is also another point of view in which this expression may be understood and imtherly to be made perfect; that is, to have gained their object.—Apprehended of Jesus Christ.—Some think this may refer to those who were taken by the hand, and introduced to the games by persons of repute and credit.

Ver. 13. Forgetting those things which are behind.—This is commonly understood as referring to the ground passed over in the course; but Hammond quotes from Horace a striking passage, which, speaking of a competitor in the chariot races, says—"He presses to overtake those horses which are before him, but contents and looks not back after any that he has left behind."—And reaching forth.—Macknight, "Exceedingly stretching myself forward."

Ver. 14. I press toward.—Macknight, "I follow along"—the mark—i. e. the white line chalked out to guide the course.

Ver. 19. Whose God is their belly.—Or "the belly;" for the pronoun is unnecessary. These were evidently gluttons and drunkards, and gloried in their vices, of which they ought to be ashamed.

Ver. 20. Our conversation, &c.—Doddrige, "We converse as citizens of heaven."

Ver. 21. Who shall change our vile body.—Literally, "Who shall transform the body of our humiliation."—Doddrige.

Ver. 2. Beware of dogs.—L'Enfant states, that the Romans used to chain their dogs at their house-doors, and write over a caution to strangers to beware of them; to which he thinks the apostle here alludes.—(Of the concision.—Macknight, "excision;" a term framed and used satirically for the bigoted advocates of circumcision.)

Ver. 5. A Hebrew of the Hebrews.—See Rom. xi. 1.

Ver. 7. I counted loss.—i. e. "I threw them away, as mariners (often) do their goods, lest they should endanger their lives." See Acts xxvii. 21.—Doddrige.

Ver. 8. The loss of all things.—Doddrige thinks it not improbable (we think it almost certain) that Paul had been laid, by his unbelieving brethren, under the great excommunication, which forfeited all his property.

Ver. 10. The power of his resurrection.—See Rom. vi. 4, 5. 2 Co. i. 5—7, &c.

Ver. 11. Resurrection of the dead.—Macknight, "from the dead;" i. e. the first resurrection, which is of believers only; 1 Co. xv. 23. 1 Thess. iv. 16.

Ver. 12. Already perfect.—Some think this may refer to the initiated in the neathen mysteries who were so called; others, with more probability, refer it to the public games here alluded to. Those who obtained a prize were said

CHAPTER IV.

1 From particular admonitions & the precepts of general exhortations, 10 showing how he rejoiced at their liberality towards him, lying in prison, not so much for the supply of his own wants, as for the grace of God in them. 19 And so he concludes with prayer and salutations.

1 THEREFORE, my brethren dearly beloved and longed for, my joy and crown, so stand fast in the Lord, my dearly beloved.

2 I beseech Euodias, and beseech Syntyche, that they be of the same mind in the Lord.

3 And I entreat thee also, true yoke-fellow, help those women which laboured with me in the gospel, with Clement also, and with other my fellow-labourers, whose names are in the book of life.

4 Rejoice ^a in the Lord alway: and again I say, Rejoice.

5 Let your moderation ^b be known unto all men. The Lord ^c is at hand.

6 Be careful ^d for nothing; but in every thing by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God.

7 And the peace ^e of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus.

8 Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are ^f true, whatsoever things are ^g honest, whatsoever things are ^h just, whatsoever things are ⁱ pure, whatsoever things are ^k lovely, whatsoever things are ^l of good report; if there be any ^m virtue, and if there be any ⁿ praise, think on these things.

9 Those things, which ye have both learned, and received, and heard, and seen in me, do: and the God ^o of peace shall be with you.

10 But I rejoiced in the Lord greatly, that now at the last your care of me ^p hath flourished again; wherein ye were also careful, but ye lacked ^q opportunity.

A. M. cir
406
A. D. cir
62.
a c 31
b 1 Co. 9:25
c Re 22:7, 30
d Mat. 6:25
1 Pe 5:7.
e 1e 26:3
Jn 14:27
f Ep. 4:23.
g or, vener-
able.
h 2 Co. 8:21.
i De 16:20.
Is 26:7
j Ja 3:17
1 Ju 3:3
k 1 Co. 13.
l Col. 3:5
He 11:2.
m 2 Pe 1:3,4.
n Ro 13:3.
o He 13:20.
p or, is received.
q 2 Co. 6:7.
r He 13:5.
s Ju 1:5
2 Co 12:9
t 2 Co. 11:8, 9 u or, have received
v He 13:16. w Ps 23:1
x Ep. 3:16
y Ro 16:27

11 Not that I speak in respect of want: for I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, there-with to be content.

12 I know both how to be abased, and I know how to abound: every where and in all things I am instructed both to be full and to be hungry, both to abound and to suffer need.

13 I can do all things through ^a Christ which strengtheneth me.

14 Notwithstanding ye have well done, that ye did communicate with my affliction.

15 Now, ye Philippians, know also, that in the beginning of the gospel, when I departed from Macedonia, no church communicated with me as concerning giving and receiving, but ye only.

16 For even in Thessalonica ye sent once and again unto my necessity.

17 Not because I desire a gift: but I desire fruit that may abound to your account.

18 But ^a I have all, and abound: I am full, having received of Epaphroditus the things which were sent from you, an odour of a sweet smell, a sacrifice ^b acceptable, well pleasing to God.

19 But my God shall supply ^c all your need according to his riches ^d in glory by Christ Jesus.

20 Now ^e unto God and our Father be glory for ever and ever. Amen.

21 Salute every saint in Christ Jesus. The brethren which are with me greet you.

22 All the saints salute you, chiefly they that are of Cesar's household.

23 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.

¶ It was written to the Philippians from Rome by Epaphroditus.

proved. The racers never stopped to look back after their competitors, whom they had distanced and left behind: so Christians, when they appear to have gained an advance, and get before their brethren, should not employ themselves in depreciating their slow advances, or in commending their own superior progress; but each should still keep pressing on, while there is but one before them.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1—23. General exhortations to perseverance—the apostle's thankfulness for the liberality of the Philippians, and to God on their behalf.—The first verse of this chapter contains a general inference from the preceding:—"Therefore, my brethren dearly beloved and longed for," seeing that such a hope of a glorious resurrection, and of everlasting life, is set before us, "Dearly beloved, my joy and crown, so stand fast in the Lord"—and be not shaken in the firmness of your principles, nor impeded in the ardour of your pursuit of heaven and endless glory. The apostle next names certain individuals, to whom he had been personally known, and from whom he had received assistance in the prosecution of his ministry; and then combining what he had to say to all, in one general address, exhorts them to "rejoice in the Lord"—to moderate their pursuits respecting the present life—to submit all their desires to the divine will—to cast all their cares, by prayer, upon the Lord, and to devote themselves to the practise of every moral virtue and Christian duty. "Whatsoever things are true and just, grave and respectable, pure and lovely, or of good report among mankind—If (says he) "there be any virtue" in them—any praise resulting from them—"think of these things"—meditate on their nature and excellency, and reduce them into practise.

St. Paul then delicately introduces an acknowledgment of his own personal obligations to them, at the same time stating his independence of the world—having "learned, in whatsoever state" he might be placed, "therewith to be content" and thankful. He knew how to bear abasement, and to enjoy abundance: in short, he could "do all things through Christ strengthening" him. Notwithstanding which, he gratefully acknowledges their kindness, and assures them that God would richly reward them, by supplying all their need, "according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus."

We conclude with noticing the happy consequences of being able to commit all our concerns to God, both temporal and spiritual, which is, a "peace which passeth all understanding," and is able to keep the heart from all anxiety and alarm. It is "the peace of God—the God of peace?" and "if he give peace, who can make trouble?" (Job xxxiv. 29.)

CHAP. IV. Ver. 2. I beseech Euodias, and beseech Syntyche, that they be of the same mind.—These appear to have been two Christian females (perhaps deaconesses) who seem to have had some difference between them, and whom Paul wished by all means to reconcile.

Ver. 3. True yoke-fellow.—Doddridge, "Associate." We apply the term exclusively to the conjugal relation, but Paul, we are to recollect, was not married, and the word is masculine. —With Clement also.—The same Clement, possibly, whose Epistle to the Romans we have referred to in the second chapter of this Epistle. —Whose names are in the book of life.—It is hardly to be supposed that Paul meant to reveal the decree of God respecting these individuals by name; Doddridge therefore solves the expression: "Whose names (as I have reason in charity to hope) are written," &c. See Matt. in 16. Rev. in 5. But And Father gives a somewhat different explanation in his discourses on the Apocryphal. "The blessed God (says he) is represented as keeping a register of his servants, not as elect, or as redeemed, or as called, but as his professed followers. When any turn back, their names are blotted out. Hence, at the last judgment, it is made the rule of condemnation: "Whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire" (Rev. xxi 15). Some were never there, never having professed to be the followers of Jesus; while others, who had been there, were blotted out in other cases, their names would not be found there. Hence also chap. xxi 27 it is the rule of admission into the New Jerusalem."

Ver. 5. The Lord is at hand.—See 2 Thess. ii. 2.
Ver. 6. Be careful.—Doddridge and Macknight, "anxious"—for nothing.
Ver. 7. The peace of God.—Is that of which he alone is the author, and which he alone can give. —John xiv 27.

Ver. 8. Honest.—Doddridge and Macknight, "venerable," or "grave." The true id is seems to be expressed by Lârdner: "Without levity in word, action, habit, and behaviour;" which levity often renders persons deprecable.

Ver. 1. Hath flourished again.—"In this figurative expression (says Mack-night) the apostle likened the Philippians' care of him to a plant, which withers and dies in winter, but grows again in the following year; or to trees, which, after their leaves drop in autumn, put them forth again next spring. Last, however, the Philippians might think this expression insinuated a complaint that they had been negligent lately, the apostle immediately added, that they had always been careful to supply his wants, but had not had an opportunity till now."

Ver. 12. I am instructed.—The word commonly used for those who were initiated into the ancient mysteries, and perhaps intimating that these practical instructions are the best initiation into the Christian mysteries, as they teach both humility and exaltation.

Ver. 13. I can do.—Macknight, "I am able to bear." Doddridge, "I am sufficient for"—all things.

Ver. 15. When I departed from Macedonia.—Doddridge, "was departing." He must have received these sums before he left Macedonia, and the last, perhaps, just as he was departing; about twelve years before this Epistle was written.

Ver. 16. Even in Thessalonica.—A famous city in Macedonia. See Acts xvii. 1. &c.

Ver. 22. Cesar's household.—[The cruel, worthless, and diabolical Nero, was at this time emperor of Rome; but it is not remarkable that the empress Poppæa was favourably inclined to Christianity, as Josephus relates that "she was a worshipper of the true God." Jewish Antiquities, (in Paganum) that St. Paul had converted many in Cesar's family. For being by the emperor cast into prison he became more known to his family, and turned the house of Cesar's persecutor into a church.]—Epaphroditus.

The subscription of this Epistle "from Rome, by Epaphroditus," seems correct. Compare chap. in 25. We have before mentioned that none of these are of any divine authority, being added by some transcriber, and chiefly upon conjecture. Patey particularly rejects those appended to the first Epistle to the Corinthians, the Galatians, the first to the Thessalonians, &c.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE COLOSSIANS.

[Colosse was a large and populous city of Phrygia Paeniana, in Asia Minor, seated on an eminence to the south of the river Meander, near to the place, says Herodotus, (i. vi. c. 30.) where the river Lycus enters the earth, which course it continues for five furlongs, before it emerges and falls into the Meander. It was situated, according to ancient authorities, between Laodicea and Hierapolis, nearly equidistant from each; all which cities, according to Eusebius, were destroyed by an earthquake, in the tenth year of the emperor Nero, and about a year after the writing of this Epistle. Colosse, however, doubtless rose again, like her sister cities, from her ruins; and Constantine Porphyrogenetus states that it was called in his time Chonæ. Colosse is supposed to have occupied a site now covered with ruins, near the village of Konous, or Khonas, about three hours from Laodicea, but on the other side of the river which is supposed to be the Lycus, and about twenty miles N. W. of Denderli. By whom, or at what time, the church at Colosse was founded is wholly uncertain; but it would appear from the Apostle's declaration, ch. i. 1, that he was not the honoured instrument. It appears from the tenor of this Epistle to have been, upon the whole, in a very flourishing state; but some difficulties having arisen among them, they sent Epaphras to Rome, where the Apostle was now imprisoned, (ch. iv. 3.) to acquaint him with the state of their affairs. This was the immediate occasion of the Epistle; to which we may add the letter sent him by the Laodiceans, (ch. iv. 16.) concerning certain false teachers. This Epistle appears to have been written about the same time with that to the Philippians, (compare chap. i. 1. with Phil. ii. 19.) that is, towards the end of A. D. 62, and in the ninth of the emperor Nero.]—B.

CHAPTER I.

1 After salvation he thanketh God for their faith, 2 commendeth the doctrine of Epaphras, 3 prayeth further for their increase in grace, 14 describeth the true Christ, 21 encourageth them to receive Jesus Christ, and commendeth his own ministry.

PAUL, "an apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God, and Timotheus our brother, 2 To the saints ^b and faithful brethren in Christ which are at Colosse: ^c Grace be unto you, and peace, from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ. 3 We ^d give thanks to God and the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, praying always for you. 4 Since we heard of your faith in Christ Jesus, and of the love which ye have to all the saints,

5 For the hope which is laid up ^e for you in heaven, whereof ye heard before in the word of the truth of the gospel; 6 Which is come unto you, as it is in all ^f the world; and bringeth ^g forth fruit, as it doth also in you, since the day ye heard ^h of it, and knew the ⁱ grace of God in ^j truth: 7 As ye also learned of ^k Epaphras our dear fellow-servant, who is for you a faithful minister of Christ:

8 Who also declared unto us your love ^l in the Spirit. 9 For this cause we also, since the day we heard ^m it, do not cease to pray for you, and to desire that ye might be filled with the knowledge of his ⁿ will in all ^o wisdom and spiritual ^p understanding;

10 That ye might walk ^q worthy of the Lord unto all ^r pleasing, ^s being fruitful in every good work, and increasing ^t in the knowledge of God; 11 Strengthened ^u with all might, according to his glorious power, unto all ^v patience and long-suffering with ^w joyfulness; 12 Giving thanks unto the Father, which hath made us meet ^x to be partakers of the inheritance ^y of the saints in light: 13 Who hath delivered us from the power of ^z darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of ^a his dear Son:

14 In ^b whom we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins: 15 Who is the image ^c of the invisible God, the first-born of every creature:

A. M. cir. 4066.
A. D. cir. 62.

a 1 Ti 1.1.
b Ps 16.3.
c Gal 1.3.
d Ep 1.15.
e 16.
f 2 Ti 4.8.
g 1 Ps 14.
h ver. 23.
i Jn 15.16.
j Ro 10.17.
k Tit 2.11.
l Jn 4.23.
m Phil 2.1.

j Ro 15.30.
m Ro 12.2.
n Ep 5.10.
o 12.
p Ps 119.99.
q 1 Jn 5.20.
r Phil 1.27.
s 1 Ti 1.1.
t Jn 15.16.
u 2 Pe 3.15.
v 1.45.24.
w Ja 1.4.
x Ro 5.3.
y Re 22.14.
z Ac 20.32.
a 1 Pe 2.9.
b 2 Th 1.10.
c Ep 1.7.
d He 1.3.

8 Who also declared unto us your love ^l in the Spirit.

9 For this cause we also, since the day we heard ^m it, do not cease to pray for you, and to desire that ye might be filled with the knowledge of his ⁿ will in all ^o wisdom and spiritual ^p understanding;

10 That ye might walk ^q worthy of the Lord unto all ^r pleasing, ^s being fruitful in every good work, and increasing ^t in the knowledge of God;

11 Strengthened ^u with all might, according to his glorious power, unto all ^v patience and long-suffering with ^w joyfulness;

12 Giving thanks unto the Father, which hath made us meet ^x to be partakers of the inheritance ^y of the saints in light:

13 Who hath delivered us from the power of ^z darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of ^a his dear Son:

14 In ^b whom we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins:

15 Who is the image ^c of the invisible God, the first-born of every creature:

CHAP. I. Ver. 1-14. Paul's apostolical benediction to the Colossians—his prayers and thanksgivings on their behalf.—Colosse was a populous city of Phrygia, in Asia Minor, not far from Laodicea. Drs. Lardner and Macknight, Bishop Tomline, and others, are of opinion, that St. Paul preached the gospel in this city, as he passed twice through Phrygia, wherein it lay: others think it more probable, that some of the Colossians might have heard him in his tour through the neighbouring parts, and been converted by his ministry, though unknown to him; and that they carried the first tidings of salvation to that city, which (as is inferred from chap. ii. 1) he had not yet visited. Epaphras, their minister, whom Paul calls his fellow-labourer, and a faithful minister of Christ, might be one of those: however that were, he appears to have been an active agent in forming and arranging their church, probably in communication with, and under the direction of, the apostle. The occasion of this epistle seems to have been the attempt of certain Judaizing teachers, to introduce some new and crude opinions, relative to the worshipping of angels, by which Christ was probably degraded and confounded with them, who was indeed their head and Lord, as the apostle here shows.

These epistles were evidently written during Paul's first imprisonment in Rome, as may be seen by comparing Ephes. iii. 1, with Coloss. i. 24; in both which he speaks of himself as a prisoner on their behalf, suffering for his attachment to the Gentiles, as we have already remarked in a note upon the former text. The many coincidences between them, both of matter and phrase, are very rationally accounted for by Dr. Paley, on the supposition of their being written at the same time, or very nearly so.

CHAP. I. Ver. 2 Saints.—[The term saint, properly denotes a holy person, separated from sin, and consecrated to God, probably from ages, a thing sacred, purity; and such the gospel requires every man to be, and such every true believer is.] To restrict it here to those who adhered to the purity of the Christian faith in opposition to the Judaizing Christians, greatly impoverishes and debases the sense, as Doddridge well remarks.—Baxter.

Ver. 3 God and the Father.—Doddridge and Macknight, "The God and Father."

Ver. 4 Since we heard of your faith.—It by no means follows from this, that Paul knew of their conversion by hearsay only: it is very consistent with this to suppose, that Paul might have preached to them, in the first instance, though his stay was too short to see much of the fruit of his labour, but after which he would very naturally inquire of Epaphras, their stated minister.

Ver. 5. In all the world.—i. e. the Roman empire, which then comprehended nearly all the civilized world.

Ver. 7. Epaphras.—From this and Col iv 12, and Phil. ii. 25, it appears, that this Epaphras, pastor of Colosse, was come to Rome to visit Paul when he was in prison.

Ver. 8. Your love in the Spirit.—"In the bonds of that one Spirit who unites all our hearts"—Doddridge.

Ver. 9. Knowledge—wisdom—understanding.—It is not easy, perhaps, to affix distinct and determinate ideas to each of these words. St. Paul, in his

The epistle before us is remarkably rich in evangelical truth and unktion; and the two great points of which it chiefly treats are, the personal dignity of the Son of God, and the efficacy of his atonement; both which are introduced in the present chapter, and, as always in the New Testament, with a strong bearing in favour of practical religion.

After the usual apostolical benediction, St. Paul commences his epistle with informing the Colossians of the pleasure he received in hearing of their conversion, and of the honourable manner in which they had hitherto maintained their Christian profession; being actuated by a lively faith in Christ, an ardent affection for the saints, and a hope full of immortality. He prays for them, that they might be enlightened with all wisdom, made fruitful in every good work, and "strengthened unto all patience and long-suffering with joyfulness," under the persecution which they might be called to suffer for the cause of God. He then unites with them in thankfully acknowledging the mercy of God in their conversion.—"Who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son; in whom (saith he) we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins;" which verse contains not only the same sentiment, but is expressed in the same words, as he addressed to the Ephesians, chap. i. 7. The very mention of Christ, and of his dying love, instantly makes him break out into admiration of the person and character of the Saviour.

Ver. 15-29. The person and character of Christ described.—With respect to the divine character of Christ, he is introduced not only as the Son of God, but as his first-born, both in respect of date and rank. "I will make him my first-born, usual rapid style, accumulates words on words to express the fulness of his ideas.

Ver. 10 Unto all pleasing.—Macknight, "so as to please him in all things;" which is undoubtedly the sense, though the expression is elliptical.

Ver. 11 Strengthened &c.—"That is, in all the graces of the new nature, with an energy suited to their utmost need; according to 'the glorious power of God, by which he converted, upheld, and comforted believers,' to the praise of his glory;" that so they might be enabled to bear all tribulations and persecutions with patient submission, persevering constancy, meekness of long-suffering, and joy in the Lord.—Scott.

Ver. 12 To be partakers of the inheritance.—i. e. the heavenly Canaan, Heb. xi. 16, which is allotted to them by divine grace, as the land of promise to the Israelites.

Ver. 15 The image of the invisible God.—Compare Heb. i. 3—"The first-born of every creature."—Doddridge and Macknight, "Of the whole creation."—"According to the Arians, (says Macknight) the first-born of the whole creation is the first made creature; but the reason advanced to prove the Son the first-born of the whole creation, overturns that sense of this passage. For surely the Son's creating all things does not prove him to be the first made creature." Burgess says, it should be "born before every creature;" and quotes the Pastor of Hermas, and Schmilus, as authorities. Gill says, "The sense either is, that he was begotten of the Father, . . . before any creatures were in being (as above stated); or that he is the first Parent."

16 For by ^a him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers: all things were created by ^a him, and for him:

17 And he is before ^a all things, and by him all things consist.

18 And he is the head ^f of the body, the church: who is the beginning, ^e the first-born from the dead; that ^b in all things he might have the pre-eminence.

19 For it pleased ^f the Father that in him ⁱ should all fulness dwell;

20 And, ^j having made ^k peace through the blood of his cross, by him to reconcile all things unto himself, by him, I say, whether they be things in earth, or things in heaven.

21 And you, that were sometime alienated and enemies ^l in your mind ^m by wicked works, yet now hath he reconciled

22 In the body of his flesh through death, to present ⁿ you holy and unblameable and unreprouvable in his sight:

23 If ye continue ^o in the faith grounded and settled, and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel, which ye have heard, and which was preached to every ^p creature which is under heaven; whereof I Paul am made a minister;

A. M. cir. 4066
A. D. cir. 62
c. Jo. 1. 3
d. Ro. 11. 36.
e. Jo. 1. 1.
f. Ep. 5. 23.
g. 1 Co. 15. 20
h. among all.
i. Jo. 1. 16.
j. or, making.
k. Ep. 2. 14.
l. or, by.
m. or, in.
n. Jude 24.
o. He. 10. 23.
p. Mat. 24. 14.
Ma. 16. 15.

q. Phi. 3. 10.
r. or, fully to preach.
s. Ep. 3. 9.
t. 2 Ti. 1. 10.
u. or, among.
v. 1 Ti. 1. 1.
w. Ac. 20. 28.
x. 2 Ti. 2. 21.
y. 2 Co. 11. 2.
z. 1 Co. 15. 10.
a. or, fear, or, care.
b. Re. 3. 14.
&c.

24 Who now rejoice in my sufferings for you, and fill up that which is behind of the afflictions ^q of Christ in my flesh for his body's sake, which is the church:

25 Whereof I am made a minister, according to the dispensation of God which is given to me for you, ^r to fulfil the word of God;

26 Even the mystery ^s which hath been hid from ages and from generations, but now ^t is made manifest to his saints:

27 To whom God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles; which is Christ ^u in you, the ^v hope of glory:

28 Whom we preach, warning ^w every man, and teaching ^x every man in all wisdom; that ^y we may present every man perfect in Christ Jesus:

29 Whereunto ^z I also labour, striving according to his working, which worketh in me mightily.

CHAPTER II.

I. He still exhorteth them to be constant in Christ, & to beware of philosophy, and vain traditions, & worshiping of angels, & all legal ceremonies, which are ended in Christ.

FOR I would that ye knew what great ^a conflict I have for you, and for them that in ^b Laodicea, and for as many as have not seen my face in the flesh;

2 That their hearts might be comforted, being higher than the kings of the earth." (Ps. lxxxix. 25.) Yea, higher than the angels in heaven—the first-born, the heir, the Lord of the whole creation; for "by him were all things created, both in heaven and earth, and by him they still subsist, and are kept in being to display his glory—"Upholding all things by the word of his power," as we read in Hebrews i. 3.

Not is he less pre-eminent in the church than in the world. "He is the head of the body," for whom, though he died, he still lives, "the beginning, the first-born from the dead;" being not only the first "raised to die no more," but for the express purpose "that he might be Lord both of the dead and of the living," (Rom. xiv. 9;) and "that in all things he might have the pre-eminence."

Not only is the Son of God thus exalted above all blessing and praise in himself, but he is made (as it were) the depository of all divine fulness. In the next chapter (verse 9) this fulness is explained of the divine nature; but here it seems to refer to that fulness which is deposited in him for our benefit; and not for ours only, but, as many think, for the benefit of angels also. It has pleased God the Father to constitute his Son, as it were, the treasurer, or rather treasury, of all heavenly blessings, and, through him, to communicate all the streams of mercy to mankind, and of benevolence to angels; and this honour is conferred upon him in consequence of his mediatorial office, and the atonement which he offered on the cross. But what interest, it may naturally be inquired, have angels in this atonement? How can Christ have reconciled to God the inhabitants of heaven who never sinned?

This leads us to look into the meaning of the expression, "things on earth and things in heaven?" and three interpretations here present themselves.—1. Dr. Hammond and others, by the "things in heaven," understand the Jews; and by the "things in earth," the Gentiles; but for this, we confess, we can find no authority in Scripture usage; or example.—2. Calvin, and the great body of expositors, by these terms understand the inhabitants of heaven and earth—angels and men. But good angels have never been at variance with God, and consequently require not reconciliation; and evil angels do not reside in heaven, nor are they ever mentioned as the subjects of reconciliation.—3. There are, however, innumerable beings in heaven that have been reconciled, namely, the departed saints; and there are also many nations upon the earth to whom the word of reconciliation is still sent: these beings, then, both in heaven and earth, are reconciled by the death of Christ, and the apostle distinctly enumerates among them the Colossian church—"You that were sometimes alienated . . . hath he reconciled." We wish to speak with modesty on a question where the ablest divines and commentators are so much divided; but we confess ourselves strongly inclined to the latter interpretation, as least exceptionable; unless we could be satisfied with a suggestion of Dr. Macknight, that the term rendered "reconciled," means only "united," of which he has produced no direct proof. We read, indeed, of elect (or chosen) angels and have no objection to the idea which has been suggested by some divines, that they have been fixed in permanent and eternal happiness, as a reward for their fidelity to the Son of God, when Satan and his angels ^{by} transgression fell.

Dr. John Edwards seems to have been nearly of the same opinion with Dr. Macknight, that men and angels were united, or brought to meet in Christ as their common centre; for which he cites, as parallel passages, Ephes. i. 10; ii. 14—16.

But not to dwell any longer here, in the close of this chapter the apostle exhorts his beloved Colossians to a steady adherence to the gospel, which was now no longer confined to the Jewish nation, but ordered to be preached to "every creature" under heaven; and which Paul, as the minister of the Gentiles, was commissioned to preach among them.

CHAP. II. Ver. 1—23. Believers exhorted to constancy, and warned against vain philosophy.—The apostle begins this chapter with stating his great anxiety and regard for the Colossians and others, with whom he held communion in spirit, though he was debarred by his present situation from visiting them in person. He writes, however, to comfort and encourage them, by directing their faith to the great mysteries of the gospel, and to the glorified person of the Saviour, in whom were not only hidden "all the treasures of divine wisdom and knowledge;" but in whom also dwelt "the fulness of the Godhead bodily;" that is, in his human nature, as the sublime temple of the Deity. He therefore directs them to make Christ the root and foundation of their faith, that they might not be "spoiled through philosophy and vain deceit."

We are not to infer hence, that Christianity is an enemy to science and true philosophy; but they have different depart-

Bringers forth of every creature into being, as the word (he says) will bear to be rendered," by changing the place of the accent; and to this Burges seems to incline; but this is merely a conjectural alteration, and will not agree with the use of the same word in verse 18.

On these considerations, Doddridge and Macknight understand the expression in the sense of "Heir and Lord of all things," as the term implies, and as it is applied to our Lord in Heb. i. 3, which we consider as a parallel text. So Pye Smith understands it to mean "the Lord and Chief of all the creation." John Brown has also well justified this sense of the expression, and refers for examples of this use of the term "first-born" for the Lord and Chief, to Jer. xxxi. 9; Job xvi. 14; Isa. xiv. 30; Ps. lxxix. 28; Rom. viii. 29; Rev. i. 5; James i. 18.

Ver. 16. Thrones, or dominions, &c.—This seems to indicate different ranks and orders in those heavenly bodies, though it would be presuming in us to attempt to distinguish and arrange them systematically. But see chap. ii. 15.

Ver. 17. He is before all things—Both in time and rank. Compare Rev. iii. 14.

Ver. 18. The first-born from the dead—Not only the first that was raised "to die no more," Rev. vi. 9; but also the chief, the "Lord, both of the dead and of the living," Rom. xiv. 9. Compare Rev. i. 5.

Ver. 19. For it pleased the Father that in him should all fulness dwell.—

Macknight, "all the fulness"—namely, of the Godhead. See chap. ii. 9. But here we think, with Pye Smith, it rather intends "the rich abundance, the perfection of all those blessings which the context represents as bestowed by Christ upon those who believe in him."

Ver. 20. By him—(Christ)—"I hath pleased the Father—to reconcile all things unto himself." Ephraim (Christ) whither, &c. "Though I have translated the word apokatastasis to reconcile, which is its ordinary meaning, I am clearly of opinion that it signifies here, to unite all things to Christ, as their head and governor." See Ephes. i. 10. But though I think this the apostle's meaning, I have not ventured to alter the translation.—Macknight, Compare Ephes. i. 10; ii. 14—16.

Ver. 21. In your mind by wicked works—Darwent, "By a mind intent on wicked works."

Ver. 22. In my sufferings—"The sufferings of the apostle came upon him, chiefly by preaching to the Gentiles, but the blessed effects of his ministry among them, and that of those who concurred with him in it, caused him to rejoice in all that he endured for their sakes; for he thus 'filled up that which was behind of the afflictions of Christ.'"

Ver. 23. Striving, &c.—Macknight, "Striving vigorously, according to the effectual working of him who worketh effectually in me with power."

CHAP. II. Ver. 1. What great conflict—Doddridge, "contention;" and knit together in love, and unto all riches of the full assurance of understanding, to the acknowledgment of the mystery of God, and of the Father, and of Christ;

3 In whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge.

4 And this I say, lest any man should beguile you with enticing words.

5 For though I be absent in the flesh, yet am I with you in the spirit, joying and beholding your order, and the steadfastness of your faith in Christ.

6 As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk in him:

7 Rooted and built up in him, and established in the faith, as ye have been taught, abounding therein with thanksgiving.

8 Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ.

9 For in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily.

10 And ye are complete in him, which is the head of all principality and power:

11 In whom also ye are circumcised with the circumcision made without hands, in putting off the body of the sins of the flesh by the circumcision of Christ:

12 Buried with him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead.

13 And you, being dead in your sins and the uncircumcision of your flesh, hath he quickened together with him, having forgiven you all trespasses;

ments. Christianity is purely a revealed religion. True philosophy is founded upon experiment, and false upon speculation: the truths and the facts of Christianity depend on neither, but on the word of God. The philosophy here referred to, is thought to be that of Essenes, a Jewish sect of high antiquity, practising great austerities in their manner of living, which was retired and mortified to an extreme degree: denying themselves not only the luxuries, but the comforts of human life; to the extent of refraining from all animal food—"Touch not; taste not; handle not!"—merely on human authority, and for no valuable end; for it has often been found, that persons who practise these voluntary austerities, indulge at the same time in secret crimes. This the apostle calls will-worship, and voluntary humility; neither commanded by, nor acceptable to God.

But the most singular and objectionable part of their principles related to their doctrine and worship of angels, whose names all their disciples were solemnly bound, as Josephus says, to preserve with great care and reverence. This, introducing a species of idolatry, (since copied in the Christian church,) justly provoked the censure of our apostle, as every thing must do, which exalted the creature and depreciated the Saviour. And though we cannot now penetrate all the mysteries of this sect, from the tenor of this epistle, (in which the great object of the writer evidently was to exalt the Saviour, as the Head and Lord of all principalities and powers,) it is most reasonable to conclude, that these Christian Essenes confounded Christ with angels, and worshipped him as one only of the number.

As to the use of animal food, which is here alluded to, since so the word is rendered, 1 Thes. ii. 2. "The Greek implies a kind of agony, which the apostle suffered from hearing of their circumstances, without being able to visit them himself.—And for as many as have not seen my face in the flesh—That is, he had a like anxiety to visit all who embraced and adorned the gospel, as did these Colossians."

Ver. 2. Full assurance of understanding.—The fullest conviction of the mind. Doddridge says the phrase is Hebrew, and very emphatical.—Of God, and of the Father.—Even of the Father.

Ver. 3. In whom.—Margin, "wherein;" but we think Christ himself particularly referred to, as in verse 9. So Christosuton.

Ver. 4. Lest any man should beguile you.—See Ephes. iv. 14; v. 6.

Ver. 7. Lit up in him.—See Ephes. ii. 19—22.

Ver. 11. Circumcision made without hands.—See Ephes. ii. 11.

Ver. 13. Hath he quickened.—See Ephes. ii. 1, 5.

Ver. 14. Blotting out.—This refers to the most ancient method of cancelling obligations, and is frequently alluded to in the Old Testament. See Ps. li. 1. Isa. xlii. 25; xlii. 22. The Jewish ritual law is here referred to, which was not only obliterated by Christ, but nailed in triumph to his cross, when he said, "It is finished." The types, when they were fulfilled expired. When the apostle speaks of Christ's blotting out the handwriting, taking it away, and nailing it to his cross, he alludes, by a beautiful gradation, to the various ways of cancelling a debt-bond; one of which was striking a nail through it on a post, to a public place.

A. M. cir.
4965.
A. D. cir.
63.

c. c. 3. 14.
d. Is. 32. 17.
He. 6. 11.
e. 1 Ju. 5. 7.
f. or, where-
in.
g. Ma. 13. 22.
h. 1 Ju. 2. 6.
i. Ep. 3. 17.
j. Ju. 15. 4. 8.
k. Ro. 16. 17.
l. Ep. 5. 6.
m. He. 13. 9.
n. or, in-mens.
mc. 1. 19.
o. He. 5. 9.
p. 1 Pe. 3. 22.
q. Je. 4. 4.
r. Ro. 8. 4. 5.
s. Ep. 1. 10.
t. Ep. 2. 15.
u. Ph. 2. 13.
v. Is. 53. 12.
w. Is. 10. 18.
x. 11. 22.
y. Ju. 12. 31.
z. or, himself.
aa. Ro. 14. 10.
ab. 15.
ac. or, for eating and drinking.
ad. or, part.
ae. He. 5. 8.
af. Je. 3. 11.
ag. or, judge against
you.
ah. c. beng a voluntary in humility.
ai. De. 29. 29.
aj. Job. 38. 2.
ak. Ep. 4. 15.
al. 16.
am. f. or, de-
ments.
an. gor, punishing, or.
ao. sparing.
ap. c. 2. 12.
aq. Ro. 8. 34.

14 Blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross;

15 And having spoiled principalities and powers, he made a show of them openly, triumphing over them in it.

16 Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of a holy day, or of the new moon, or of the sabbath days:

17 Which are a shadow of things to come; but the body is of Christ.

18 Let no man beguile you of your reward in a voluntary humility and worshipping of angels, intruding into those things which he hath not seen, vainly puffed up by his fleshly mind,

19 And not holding the Head, from which all the body by joints and bands having nourishment ministered, and knit together, increaseth with the increase of God.

20 Wherefore if ye be dead with Christ from the rudiments of the world, why, as though living in the world, are ye subject to ordinances,

21 (Touch not; taste not; handle not;

22 Which all are to perish with the using;) after the commandments and doctrines of men?

23 Which things have indeed a show of wisdom in will-worship, and humility, and neglecting of the body; not in any honour to the satisfying of the flesh.

CHAPTER III.

1 He sheweth where we should seek Christ. 5 He exhorteth to mortification, 10 to put off the old man, and to put on Christ, 12 exhorting to charity, humility, and other several duties.

IF ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God.

it was expressly allowed by God to Noah, and practised by our Saviour, we regard no reproach which can possibly be attached to it; nevertheless, we believe that many indulge themselves in far too much of it; and if there be any persons (as there may be) to whom all animal food is injurious, they doubtless do well in refraining from its use. At the same time, the modern philosophy sufficiently proves, that we can neither drink nor breathe without the swallowing of living creatures with the air: a fact which has been strongly illustrated by an incident of recent date, related in Forbes's Oriental Memoirs. A learned Brahmin, who prided himself on never having swallowed animal food, received from Europe a valuable microscope, which convinced him that he had been in the habit of swallowing insects and animalculæ with all his fruit and vegetables; and he was rendered thereby so unhappy, that he totally destroyed the instrument, that it might not have the same effect on others.

On the question of animal food, we are satisfied that there is no sin in receiving whatever God bestows; but there is much sin in refusing his benefits, and in attempting to be "wise above what is written."

CHAP. III. Ver. 1—25. The Colossians exhorted to set their affection upon Christ and things above—to mortify their carnal appetites, and to practise every Christian virtue.—In the preceding chapter, the Colossians had been reminded that, by their baptism and public profession of Christianity, they had followed the Lord Jesus through his sufferings and death,—had been by the power of his Spirit quickened from a death of trespasses and sins,—and been virtually raised with him to heaven, in whom all the treasures of grace and glory were de-

Ver. 15. Having spoiled principalities, &c.—Compare Ephes. iv. 8; vi. 12.—Triumphing over them in it.—Doddridge, "by it;" i. e. by the cross.

Ver. 16. Or in respect of (or to) a holy day.—MacKnight, "a festival."

Ver. 17. The body is of Christ.—MacKnight, "is Christ's." The sense appears to us to be, that all the types were but shadows of Christ, and of the gospel.

Ver. 18. Let no man beguile you.—Margin, "Judge against you." This is another reference to the Grecian games, in which illegal methods were sometimes taken to deprive the successful candidates of their prize. Origen. Lit. No. 1198.—In a voluntary humility.—Doddridge, "By an affected humility;" which we conceive to be the true sense.—And worshipping of angels.—It evidently appears, from several passages in Philo, to have been the opinion of that learned Jew, that angels were messengers who presented our prayers to God, as well as brought down his favours to us. He represents this view of the matter as most humble and reverential, and there is no doubt but it prevailed among other Jews. Compare Tobit x. 11; xii. 15.

Ver. 19. Not holding the Head, from which, &c.—Compare Ephes. iv. 15, 16.

Ver. 20. If ye be dead with Christ.—See above, verse 12.

Ver. 22. Which all are to perish with the using.—Doddridge, "All which things tend to corruption." MacKnight, "Whatever things tend to destruction," which Dr. M. applied to the Pythagorean prohibition of animal food.

Ver. 23. Neglecting.—Margin, "punishing," or not sparing—which last is literal.

2 Set your ^a affection on things above, not ^a on things on the earth.

3 For ^a ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God.

4 When ^a Christ, who is ^a our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory.

5 Mortify ^b therefore your members which are upon the earth; fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection, evil concupiscence, and covetousness, which is idolatry:

6 For which things' sake the wrath of God cometh on the children of disobedience:

7 In ^c the which ye also walked some time, when ye lived in them.

8 But now ye also put off all these; anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy, filthy communication out of your mouth.

9 Lie not one to another, seeing that ye have put off the old man with his deeds;

10 And have put on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created him:

11 Where ^a there is neither Greek nor Jew, circumcision nor uncircumcision, Barbarian, Scythian, bond nor free: but Christ is all, and in all.

12 Put on therefore, as the elect of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, long-suffering;

13 Forbearing ^c one another, and forgiving ^c one another, if any man have a ^a quarrel against any: even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye.

14 And above all these things put on ^a charity, which is ^a the bond of perfectness.

15 And let the peace ^a of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body; and be ye thankful.

posed, and whither their hopes and best affections would naturally aspire. "If ye then (says he) be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God. Set your affection," fix your mind and heart, "on things above," where Christ is, and where your [eternal] life is hidden with "him, in the bosom of God," beyond the reach of fear or danger. But fix not your heart on things below, where you "have no continuing city," and from whence you are liable to be summoned without an hour's notice. But mortify all your earthly pleasures, and indulge not in any of those things ^a for which the wrath of God cometh on the children of disobedience."

He then reminds them, that though they were by nature Gentiles, that would by no means lessen their interest in Christ; for there are no nationalities in the Christian religion, but "Christ is all and in all." He is every thing to the believer, and to every believer he is the same. He then exhorts them to imitate the mercy of God, and the compassion of Christ; forgiving one another as freely and gratuitously as Christ had forgiven them; and to "let the peace of God preside" in all their internal deliberations, and in all their social meetings. So, instead of seeking to the vain and sinful pleasures of the world for amusements or diversions, to let "the word of Christ," that is, his heavenly doctrine, (and perhaps some parts of Matthew's Gospel were now getting into circulation,) dwell in them richly; to be frequent in recollecting his divine sayings, and in rehearsing them to one another. And if you wish to exultate and animate your minds, or each others, teach and admonish "one another in psalms, and hymns, and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord."

This passage appears to refer to such meetings for devotion and mutual instruction as the apostle had mentioned in his first epistle to the Corinthians, (chap. xiv. 26,) when each member produced a devotional psalm, a doctrinal discourse, a

CHAP. III. Ver. 5. Mortify—That is, "kill." Macknight, "put to death." Not the members of the animal body, but the body of sin and death. See Rom. vii. 24.—Members which are upon the earth—and earthly, as fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection.—Macknight, "unnatural lust."

Ver. 10. Put on the new man.—Compare Ephes. ii. 15.

Ver. 14. Put on charity (or love).—Which, as a capacious robe, "covers a multitude of faults," or sins. James iv. 20.

Ver. 15. Let the peace of God rule.—Doddridge, "preside." He thinks it alludes to the Master who presided at the Olympic games.

Ver. 16. In psalms and hymns and spiritual songs.—So in Ephes. v. 19. As David's sacred compositions are differently inscribed, psalms, hymns trihim, and (shushim), sacred odes or songs, Celtin, and others of our old divines, think none but the inspired compositions of the Old Testament can be here referred to. But Doddridge, Macknight, and our modern divines in general, extend the latter terms to those extemporaneous (and often inspired)

A M cir
4066
A P cir
62
c or, mixed.
d 1 Ja 2:15
e Ro. 6:2
f 1 Jo 3:2
g Ju II 25 14:6
h Ro 8:13
Ga. 5:24
Eph 5:3-6
i Th 3:3
j Eph 4:23, 24
k Ro 10:12
l Ma II 25
Pp 4:2, 32
m Mat. 6:14, 15
n or, complacent.
o 1 Pe 4:5
p 1 Co 13:2,
e, 13
q Ph 4:7.
—
r Ps 119:11.
s Eph 5:19.
t 1 Co 10:31
u Eph. 5:22,
&c.
Tit 2:4, 5.
1 Pe 3:1,
&c.
v Eph 6:1,
&c.
w 1 Pe 2:18.
x Eph 6:9,
&c. b Lu. 18:1
c Ma. 13:33
d 2 Th 3:1

16 Let the word ^a of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another in ^a psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord.

17 And whatsoever ^a ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him.

18 ^a Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as it is fit in the Lord.

19 Husbands, love your wives, and be not bitter against them.

20 ^a Children, obey your parents in all things: for this is well pleasing unto the Lord.

21 Fathers, provoke not your children to anger, lest they be discouraged.

22 ^a Servants, obey in all things your masters according to the flesh: not with eye-service, as men-pleasers; but in singleness of heart, fearing God:

23 And whatsoever ye do, do it heartily, as to the Lord, and not unto men;

24 Knowing that of the Lord ye shall receive the reward of the inheritance: for ye serve the Lord Christ.

25 But he that doeth wrong shall receive for the wrong which he hath done: and there is no respect of persons.

CHAPTER IV.

I ^a exhorteth them to be fervent in prayer, to walk wisely toward them that are not yet come to the true knowledge of Christ. He exhorteth them, and wisheth them all prosperity.

MASTERS, ^a give unto your servants that which is just and equal; knowing that ye also have a Master in heaven.

2 Continue ^b in prayer, and watch ^c in the same with thanksgiving;

3 Withal praying also for us, that God would open ^d unto us a door of utterance, to speak the mystery of Christ, for which I am also in bonds:

prophecy, or the interpretation of a prophecy. This seems to be what the apostle elsewhere calls speaking to themselves, or to one another, "in psalms, and hymns, and spiritual songs;" each being anxious to contribute something to the general edification, and to advance the divine glory. Only he cautions them to admit no secular or profane mixtures in their religious meetings—no worldly business—no political discussion—no secular odes, much less wanton or profane songs. But, "whatsoever ye do, in word or deed, (says he,) do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God, even the Father, by him."

The concluding verses, exhorting to Christian and moral duties, are so similar to those in the last chapter of the Epistle to the Ephesians, that we shall only refer to our exposition of that chapter.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1—18. Exhortations to prayer and Christian conduct; with notice of several esteemed fellow-labourers.—Prayer is certainly one of the most important of Christian duties, and one of the most estimable of Christian privileges. It opens a communication between earth and heaven; drawing up the soul to God, and drawing down the blessings of his grace. It is a duty of universal interest; for even an apostle, (and, for labours and talents, the chief of them,) was earnest in requesting an interest in the prayers of his brethren of Colosse. Until we get within the veil, we shall never know the efficacy of those odours (which are the prayers of saints) presented by the twenty-four elders to the Lamb, (Rev. v. 8,) and which doubtless owe their acceptability to their being presented through his hands, and from the incense which he offers with them.

The next exhortation is, to "walk in wisdom towards them that are without;" that is, without the pale of the church, meaning their Pagan neighbours and acquaintances; a most important precept in the observance of which, two extremes are to be avoided. 1. We must not obtrude our religion un-compositions common among the first Christians; who according to a well-known passage in Pliny, used to "meet before daylight, and sing hymns to Christ as to a God." Nor does this absolutely require us, since Burrey (the musical historian) mentions it as a common practice among the gondoliers (or barge-men of Venice) to address and challenge one another in extemporaneous stanzas.

Ver. 17. To God and the Father.—Doddridge, "Even the Father."

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1. Masters, give &c.—I Edwards justly remarks, that this verse should have been attached to the preceding chapter.

Ver. 3. A door of utterance.—See 1 Cor. xvi. 9, and the references there.—[The term door is used metaphorically for an entrance to any business, or occasion, or opportunity of doing any thing; and consequently, "a door of utterance" is an opportunity of preaching the gospel successfully. So Cicero "the doors of friendship are opened;" there is now an opportunity of reconciliation.]—Bagster.

4 That I may make it manifest, as I ought to speak.

5 Walk in wisdom toward them that are without, redeeming the time.

6 Let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt, that ye may know how ye ought to answer every man.

7 All my state shall Tychicus declare unto you, who is a beloved brother, and a faithful minister and fellow-servant in the Lord :

8 Whom I have sent unto you for the same purpose, that he might know your estate, and comfort your hearts ;

9 With Onesimus, a faithful and beloved brother, who is one of you. They shall make known unto you all things which are done here.

10 Aristarchus my fellow-prisoner saluteth you, and Marcus, sister's son to Barnabas, (touching whom ye received commandments: if he come unto you, receive him ;)

11 And Jesus, which is called Justus, who are of the circumcision. These only are my fellow-workers unto the kingdom of God, which have been a comfort unto me.

A. M. cir.
4065.
A. D. cir.
62.
e Ps. 90. 12.
Ep. 5. 15.
16.
f Ma. 9. 50.
g Ep. 6. 21.
22.
h Phil. 10.
i Ac. 27. 2.
j Ac. 15. 37.
2 Ti. 4. 11.
—
k or, striking.
l Ja. 5. 16.
m Mat. 5. 48.
He. 6. 1.
n or, filled.
o 2 Ti. 4. 10.
11.
p Ro. 16. 5.
1 Co. 16. 19.
q 1 Th. 5. 27.
r Phil. 2.
s 1 Ti. 4. 14.
t 2 Th. 3. 17.
u He. 13. 3.
23.

12 Epaphras, who is one of you, a servant of Christ, saluteth you, always labouring fervently for you in prayers, that ye may stand perfect and complete in all the will of God.

13 For I bear him record, that he hath a great zeal for you, and them that are in Laodicea, and them in Hierapolis.

14 Luke, the beloved physician, and Demas, greet you.

15 Salute the brethren which are in Laodicea, and Nymphas, and the church which is in his house.

16 And when this epistle is read among you, cause that it be read also in the church of the Laodiceans; and that ye likewise read the epistle from Laodicea.

17 And say to Archippus, Take heed to the ministry which thou hast received in the Lord, that thou fulfil it.

18 The salutation by the hand of me Paul. Remember my bonds. Grace be with you. Amen.

¶ Written from Rome to the Colossians by Tychicus and Onesimus.

seasonably upon them—"We must not cast our pearls before swine." (Matt. vii. 6.) Religion is not adapted for hours of gaiety, amusement, or conviviality. On the contrary, we must not disguise or conceal our religion, as if we were ashamed of it. We are intended to be lights to the world, and our light should so shine, that men may "see our good works," and knowing the principle from which they spring, "glorify our Father who is in heaven." Our speech also should be always with grace, "seasoned with salt," by which the heathen meant wit; but our speech is to be seasoned with wisdom, prudence, and theunction of the Saviour's name; for "his name is as ointment poured forth." Thus may Christians put to silence the ignorance and reproaches of the world.

Of the brethren here mentioned, several have been named before; as Tychicus, in the close of the last Epistle. Of Onesimus, we shall have a full account in the Epistle to Philemon. Aristarchus was a Macedonian of Thessalonica, who accompanied Paul into Greece, into Asia, and to Rome, and who is said to have been beleaguered by Nero, at the same time with Paul. (Acts xix. 29; xx. 4; xxvii. 2.) Marcus, or Mark, here mentioned, should be distinguished from Mark the Evangelist; but Jesus, called Justus, is believed to be the same as Joseph Barsabas, one of the seventy disciples, and whom Peter proposed as a candidate for the vacant apostleship after the death of Judas, (Acts i. 23.) The name Justus was doubtless added, in respect to the remarkable uprightness of his character. These were all "of the circumcision," that is, Jews; but the following are considered as Gentiles:—Of Luke, see the introduction to that Evangelist, where we have considered him as a physician of Antioch. Of Epaphras, who was a minister of their own, Paul speaks most affectionately, both here and in the opening of the Epistle; but of Nymphas we know nothing, as he is only here named. The hint to Archippus seems to imply, that he needed such an admonition: but Demas has a black mark upon his character, in 2 Tim. iv. 10.

Whether or not Paul wrote any distinct Epistle to the Laodiceans, or from Laodicea, as our present text reads, (ver. 16,) we may draw from this passage the following fact—that it was customary, even from the beginning, to read the apostolical Epistles in the churches, and that the churches who received such Epistles were in the habit of handing them for perusal to their sister churches; which shows the high esteem in which they were then held as inspired writings, since it is an honour allowed, as we believe, to no private writings, except some few of the apostolical fathers. (See 1 Thess. v. 27.)

wall being strewn with pedestals and fragments, the ruins of an amphitheatre, a magnificent odium, and other public buildings, attest its former splendour and magnificence. But, when visited by Chandler, all was silence and solitude; and a fox, first discovered by his ears peeping over a brow, was the only inhabitant of Laodicea. Hierapolis, now Pamboke-Kalesi, was situated, according to the Itinerary, six miles N. of Laodicea; and its ruins are now about a mile and a half in circumference.]—Baker.

Ver. 16. From Laodicea.—Those who contend that Paul wrote to the Laodiceans, understand this of that Epistle, to be received from them, which seems an unnatural construction: J. Edwards therefore suggests, that it was the first Epistle to Timothy to which the apostle refers, and which, by the superscription, appears to have been written from that city. Thus we consider as much the most easy and natural solution of the difficulty.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE EPISTLE TO THE COLOSSIANS.

[THE Epistle to the Colossians, and the two preceding Epistles, which were written during the imprisonment of St. Paul, and about the same time, are remarkable for a peculiar pathos and ardour, or rapture, as some have termed it, which is generally ascribed to the extraordinary consolations enjoyed by the Apostle during his sufferings for the sake of Christ. Critics have justly remarked, that the style of the Epistle to the Ephesians is exceedingly elevated, and corresponds with the state of the Apostle's mind at the time of writing. Overjoyed with the account which their messenger brought him of the steadfastness of their faith, and the ardency of their love to all the saints, and transported with the consideration of the unsearchable wisdom of God displayed in the work of man's redemption, and of his amazing love towards the Gentiles, in introducing them, as fellow heirs with the Jews, into the kingdom of Christ, he soared into the most exalted contemplation of these sublime topics, and gives utterance to his thoughts in language at once rich and varied. Grotius affirms, that "it expresses the most sublime matters contained in it, in terms more sublime than are to be found in any human language." This character, adds Blacknight, "is so just, that no real Christian can read the doctrinal part of the Epistle to the Ephesians, without being impressed and roused by it, as by the sound of a trumpet." The style of the Epistle to the Philippians is very animated, pleasing, and easy; every where bearing evidence of that contented state of mind in which the Apostle then was, and of his great affection for the people. It has been observed as remarkable, that the Epistle to the Church and Philippi is the only one, of all St. Paul's letters to the churches, in which not one censure is expressed or implied against any of its members; but, on the contrary, sentiments of unequalled commendation and confidence pervade every part of this Epistle. The language of the Epistle to the Colossians is bold and energetic; the sentiments grand; and the conceptions vigorous and majestic. Whoever says Michaelis, would understand the Epistles to the Ephesians and Colossians must read them together. The one is in most places a commentary on the other; the meaning of single passages in one epistle, which, if considered alone, might be variously interpreted, being determined by the parallel passages in the other Epistles. Yet, though there is a great similarity, the Epistle to the Colossians contains many things which are not to be found in that to the Ephesians.]—Bagster.

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE THESSALONIANS.

THE Gospel was first preached at Thessalonica by St. Paul, accompanied by Silas and Timothy, with such success, that it excited the envy and indignation of the unbelieving Jews, who having stirred up a violent persecution against them, they were forced to flee to Berea, and thence to Athens, (ch. xvi. 2—15,) from which city he proceeded to Corinth. Having thus been prevented from again visiting the Thessalonians as he had intended, (ch. ii. 17, 18, 19.)

he sent Silas and Timothy to Thessalonica in his stead, (ch. iii. 6;) who having, on their return to him at Corinth, given such a favourable account of their state as filled him with joy and gratitude, (Ac. xvi. 14, 15; xviii. 5,) he wrote this Epistle to them from that city, (and not from Athens, as stated in the spurious postscript.) A. D. 52, to confirm them in their faith, and to exhort them to a holy conversation becoming the dignity of their high and holy calling.]—B.

CHAPTER I.

1 The Thessalonians are given to understand both how mindful of them Saint Paul was at all times in his praying, and how well he was persuaded of the truth and sincerity of their faith, and conversion to God.

PAUL, and ^a Silvanus, and Timotheus, unto the church of the ^b Thessalonians which is in God the Father and in the Lord Jesus Christ: Grace ^c be unto you, and peace, from God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ.

2 We give thanks to God always for you all, making mention of you in our prayers;

3 Remembering without ceasing your work ^d of faith, and labour ^e of love, and patience ^f of hope in our Lord Jesus Christ, in the sight of God and our Father;

4 Knowing, brethren ^g beloved, your election of God.

5 For our gospel came ^h not unto you in word only, but also in ⁱ power, and in the ^j Holy Ghost, and in much ^k assurance; as ye know what manner of men we were among you for your sake.

6 And ye became ^l followers of us, and of the Lord, having received the word in much affliction, with joy ^m of the Holy Ghost:

7 So that ye were ensamples to all that believe in Macedonia and Achaia.

8 For from you sounded ⁿ out the word of the Lord not only in Macedonia and Achaia, but also in every place ^o your faith to God-

A. M. cir.
4956
A. D. cir.
52.

n 1 Pe. 5. 12.

k Ac. 17. 1.

c Ep. 1. 2.

d 1a. 6. 29.

e 2 Th. 1. 11.

f He. 6. 10.

g Ro. 12. 12.

g or, beloved of God,

your election

h Is. 53. 11.

Ma. 16. 20.

1 Co. 2. 1.

j 2 Co. 6. 6.

k He. 2. 3.

l 2 Co. 8. 5.

m Ac. 13. 52.

n Ro. 10. 18.

o 2 Th. 1. 4.

p 1 Co. 12. 2.

q Ga. 1. 5.

r Ph. 3. 20.

s Ma. 2. 7.

t Ro. 5. 9.

a Ac. 16. 12.

b &c.

c An. 17. 23.

d Jude. 3.

e 2 Pe. 1. 15.

f 1 Th. 1. 11.

g 2 Co. 2. 17.

h 1a. 5. 41.

i 44.

q Ga. 1. 10.

ward is spread abroad; so that we need not to speak any thing.

9 For they themselves show of us what manner of entering in we had unto you, and how ye turned to God ^p from idols to serve the living and true God;

10 And to wait ^q for his Son from heaven, whom he raised from the dead, even Jesus, which delivered us from the wrath ^r to come.

CHAPTER II.

1 In what manner the gospel was brought at J preached to the Thessalonians, and in what sort also they received it. 18 A reason is rendered, both why Saint Paul was so long absent from them, and also why he was so desirous to see them.

FOR yourselves, brethren, know our entrance in unto you, that it was not in vain:

2 But even after that we had suffered before, and were shamefully entreated, as ye know, at ^a Philippi, we were ^b bold in our God to speak unto you the gospel of God with much ^c contention.

3 For our exhortation was not of ^d deceit, nor of uncleanness, nor in guile:

4 But as we were allowed of God to be put in trust ^e with the gospel, even so we speak; not as pleasing men, but God, which trieth our hearts.

5 For neither ^f at any time used we flattering words, as ye know, nor a cloak of covetousness; God is witness:

6 Nor of men ^g sought we glory, neither of CHAP. I. Ver. 1.—10. Paul's prayers and thanksgiving for the Thessalonians.—The Epistles to this church, though placed so late by our translators, are generally allowed to have been the first written, and not later than A. D. 52, or, at the latest, 54, which is about ten years earlier than most of the preceding. "Silas and Timothy, with St. Paul, had preached the gospel to the Jews at Thessalonica," a considerable seaport town, and the metropolis of Macedonia, (Acts xvii. 1.) But they were interrupted in this work, and compelled to leave the city, by the persecution there raised against them: they then proceeded to Berea, whither they were followed by the same unbelieving Jews. St. Paul then went to Athens; but Silas and Timothy remained at Berea, till they received orders from Paul to follow him to that city, (Acts xvii. 15.) Timothy, we learn, (1 Thes. i. 2.) was then immediately despatched to Thessalonica, and it is most probable (that) Silas accompanied him. . . . It is not, however, expressly stated how Silas was employed at this time: they both rejoined Paul at Corinth, and it is natural to suppose they there gave him a full account of their labours and their sufferings, (Acts xvii. 5.)

That this Epistle "was written from Corinth in the year 51, or soon after, may be considered as almost the unanimous opinion of commentators, although the particular occasion is disputed. The general object of the Epistle is certainly to confirm the Thessalonians in their faith, by enforcing the evidences of the Christian religion, while Paul opposes some opinions held by the heathen." (Preb. Townsend's New Testament, Arranged.)

This first chapter is thought to have particular reference to the evidence of miracles which St. Paul wrought amongst them; we cannot, however, conceive that his expression, "Our gospel came unto you, not in word only, but in power," refers merely to miraculous powers, though they certainly must be included. The influence of the Holy Ghost was apparent, not only in the miracles which Paul wrought, but also, as Doddridge expresses it, in "the very deep and powerful impressions" it made upon their hearts, and in that "full assurance" with which it was attended; being received "in much affliction" by the persecution of the Jews, and with that spiritual joy, with which the Holy Ghost supported them, and rendered them triumphant over all the malice of their enemies. So that they became in these respects examples to all in Macedonia and Achaia, through which they rapidly spread abroad the good tidings of salvation; and these were rendered the more efficacious, from the evidence which the Thessalonians gave of its power and efficacy in their own lives and conversations; being turned from the worshipping of dumb idols, "to serve the living and true God;" and waiting for the return from heaven of his Son Jesus, who delivereth from the wrath to come.

"We see here, (says the excellent Doddridge,) a commendable view of the Christian character. It is to turn from idols, from every thing which we have loved and esteemed, pursued, and trusted, in an irregular degree, to serve the living and true God, under a real sense of his infinite perfections and glories. It is turning also to Jesus, his Son, as saving us 'from the wrath to come;' from a deep conviction of our being justly exposed to wrath, by our transgressions against God, to seek rescue and refuge in Christ, as delivering us from it by his atonement and grace, and completing that deliverance by almighty power in the day of his final triumph. . . .

"If this be the effect of our receiving the gospel, it will evidently prove that it is 'come to us, not in word only, but in power, and in the Holy Ghost; and it may give us abundant assurance of our interest in God, and cause us, by the happiest tokens, to know our election in him.'"

CHAP. II. Ver. 1.—20. Paul recapitulates his labours among the Thessalonians, and blesses God for his success.—In this recapitulation, St. Paul adverts to the shameful treatment he had received at Philippi, merely for curing a female slave, of whom her owners had made a gain by fortune-telling, as endowed with a spirit of Python. (See on Acts xvi. 1—24.) He then appeals to them for the upright, tender, and disinterested conduct, which he and his brethren had shown toward them; and, at the same time, commends them for the cordial manner in which they received the message of salvation; "not (indeed) as the word of men, but (as it is in truth) the word of God," which "effectually worketh in (all) that believe." He next commends them for becoming followers (or imitators) of the other churches, who had believed before them, and had ornamented their profession by a consistent conversation.

St. Paul then adverts to the cruel and outrageous conduct of the Jews, his own nation, who having "both killed the Lord Jesus, and their own prophets," now hunted the preachers of the gospel as if they were wild beasts, from city to city, and from one country to another; as we have seen in the Book of the Acts of the Apostles. In this conduct, while they pleased not God, who had repeatedly reprobated their conduct, they rendered themselves odious to all reasonable men, and particularly to the Gentiles. "The hatred which the Jews bare to all the heathen, without exception, (says Dr. Macknight,) was taken notice of by Tacitus and Juvenal, and even by Josephus. This hatred was directly contrary to the law of Moses, which enjoined humanity to strangers." (Exod. xxii. 21.) This aversion certainly increased after the captivity, and probably arose, in great degree, from the treatment of their oppressors; but was not justifiable upon the principles, either of Moses, or of Christ.

This malevolence particularly discovered itself in their conduct with respect to the gospel, which, in some instances, they seem willing to have received, if so be that the Gentiles had been excluded from it; but the admission of other nations to the same privileges with themselves, seemed to them the most exceptionable feature of Christianity. (See Acts xiii. 5.)

CHAP. I. Ver. 1. Silvanus—[Silas, or Silvanus, and Timothy, did not come to the Apostle, when driven from Thessalonica and Berea, till after his arrival at Athens, nor did they continue with him in that city, hence sent speedily back to Thessalonica, (see on 1 Ac. xv. 10—15,) which shows that this Epistle could not have been written from Athens, but from Corinth, where they afterwards rejoined him. Ac. xvii. 1—6.]—Baister.

Ver. 3. Your work of faith, &c.—All these are plainly Hebrews for active faith, laborious love, and patient hope. Doddridge.

Ver. 8. In Macedonia and Achaia.—These were the parts he travelled through in his way to Corinth.

Ver. 9. What manner of entering in.—Doddridge, "What kind of entrance."

CHAP. II. Ver. 1. Not in vain.—"Not without important consequences and effects."—Doddridge.

Ver. 2. With much contention.—Macknight, "An arduous a great combat." See note on Colossians ii. 1.

you, nor yet of others, when we might have been burdensome, as the apostles of Christ. 7 But we were gentle among you, even as a nurse cherisheth her children:

8 So being affectionately desirous of you, we were willing to have imparted unto you, not the gospel of God only, but also our own souls, because ye were dear unto us.

9 For ye remember, brethren, our labour and travail: for labouring night and day, because we would not be chargeable unto any of you, we preached unto you the gospel of God.

10 Ye are witnesses, and God also, how holily and justly and unblameably we behaved ourselves among you that believe:

11 As ye know how we exhorted and comforted and charged every one of you, as a father doth his children, 12 That ye would walk worthy of God, who hath called you unto his kingdom and glory.

13 For this cause also thank we God without ceasing, because, when ye received the word of God which ye heard of us, ye received it not as the word of men, but as it is in truth, the word of God, which effectually worketh also in you that believe.

14 For ye, brethren, became followers of the churches of God which in Judea are in Christ Jesus: for ye also have suffered like things of your own countrymen, even as they have of the Jews:

15 Who both killed the Lord Jesus, and their own prophets, and have persecuted us; and they please not God, and are contrary to all men:

16 Forbidding us to speak to the Gentiles that they might be saved, to fill up their sins alway: for the wrath is come upon them to the uttermost.

17 But we, brethren, being taken from you for a short time in presence, not in heart, endeavoured the more abundantly to see your face with great desire.

18 Wherefore we would have come unto you, even I Paul, once and again; but Satan hindered us.

19 For what is our hope, or joy, or crown of

A. M. cir. 456.
A. D. cir. 52.

h or, used authority

i 2 Co. 12. 13.

j Ro. 1. 11.

k Ac. 20. 34, 35.

l Ep. 4. 1.

m 1 Co. 1. 9.

n Mat. 10. 40.

o Ja. 1. 18.

p Ac. 7. 52.

q or, chased us out

r Ac. 17. 5, 13.

s Ge. 15. 16.

t Re. 22. 32.

u or, glorying.

v 2 Co. 1. 14.

w Jude 21.

x Re. 1. 7.

y Ac. 17. 15.

z Ep. 3. 13.

a Ja. 16. 2.

b 1 Co. 4. 9.

c 2 Ti. 3. 12.

d 1 Pe. 2. 21.

e 2 Co. 11. 2, 3.

f Ga. 4. 11.

g Phil. 1. 8.

h 2 Co. 7. 6, 7.

i Ep. 6. 13, 14.

j 2 Co. 13. 9, 11.

k or, guide.

l 1 Jn. 4. 7, 12.

m 2 Th. 2. 17.

n 1 Jn. 20, 21.

o Jude 14.

rejoicing? Are not even ye in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at his coming? 20 For ye are our glory and joy.

CHAPTER III.

1 Saint Paul testifieth his great love to the Thessalonians, partly by sending Timothy unto them to strengthen and comfort them: partly by rejoicing in their well doing: 10 and partly by praying for them, and desiring a safe coming unto them.

WHEREFORE when we could no longer forbear, we thought it good to be left at Athens alone;

2 And sent a Timothy; our brother, and minister of God, and our fellow-labourer in the gospel of Christ, to establish you, and to comfort you concerning your faith:

3 That no man should be moved by these afflictions: for yourselves know that we are appointed thereunto.

4 For verily, when we were with you, we told you before that we should suffer tribulation; even as it came to pass, and ye know.

5 For this cause, when I could no longer forbear, I sent to know your faith, lest by some means the tempter have tempted you, and our labour be in vain.

6 But now when Timothy came from you unto us, and brought us good tidings of your faith and charity, and that ye have good remembrance of us always, desiring greatly to see us, as we also to see you:

7 Therefore, brethren, we were comforted over you in all our affliction and distress by your faith:

8 For now we live, if ye stand fast in the Lord.

9 For what thanks can we render to God again for you, for all the joy wherewith we joy for your sakes before our God;

10 Night and day praying exceedingly that we might see your face, and might perfect that which is lacking in your faith?

11 Now God himself and our Father, and our Lord Jesus Christ, direct our way unto you.

12 And the Lord make you to increase and abound in love one toward another, and toward all men, even as we do toward you:

13 To the end he may establish your hearts unblameable in holiness before God, even our Father, at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ with all his saints.

But to forbid the apostles "to speak to the Gentiles, that they might be saved"—this is not only inhuman, but also diabolical: it is attempting to subvert the designs of God, as well as the happiness of men! Would that none but Jews were chargeable with this! but that Christians should be guilty of such an offence, is indeed truly horrible, and would seem impossible; but what was the meaning of the opposition made, but a few years ago, to sending the gospel to India? It was literally forbidding any to speak to the Gentiles of India, that they should be saved! And is there nothing like this nearer home? Are there none who oppose, and endeavour to prevent, persons from preaching the gospel to the Gentiles in our own country? Alas! that such men should pretend to the name of Christians! What would Paul have said in such a case? Just what he said in the case before us—"Satan hindered us."

CHAP. III. Ver. 1—13. Paul refreshed by the intelligence he received by Timothy from the Thessalonians, the more desires to visit them.—In the close of the preceding chapter, Paul had expressed his regret at not having been able to visit them: and so great was his anxiety to hear of their welfare, Ver. 6 We might have been burdensome.—The Apostle evidently refers to the right he might have maintained at their charge. See verse 9, and compare 1 Co. ix. throughout.

Ver. 13 Which effectually worketh.—See Phil. ii. 12, 13.

Ver. 15 And have persecuted us—Marin, "Chased us out;" hunting the preachers of the gospel, like wild beasts. See Mat. xxiii. 34, Acts vii. 52.

Ver. 16 That they might—Macknight, ("so that they might," &c.—Fill up their sins.—See Mat. xxiii. 32.—For the wrath is come.—Doddridge, "But wrath is coming," &c.—Compare Mat. xxiii. 32—36.

Ver. 17 Being taken.—Doddridge, "separated from you for a very little season;" literally, "the time of an hour."

Ver. 18 Satan hindered us.—[By raising such a storm of persecution against him at Berea and other places, that it was deemed prudent to delay his visit till the storm was somewhat allayed. Some, apparently with less propriety, suppose Satan may mean some adversary or powerful opponent, as the word denotes; others refer it to wicked men, who are the instruments of Satan;]

that, sooner than continue in suspense, he agreed to remain alone in Athens, and to send Timothy to visit them; to inquire into their welfare, and their progress in the Christian course, and, at the same time, to encourage and animate them therein. And when he returned, the account which he brought with him was so gratifying, that he became still more desirous to visit them; and prayed, therefore, that all impediments might be removed, and his way directed towards them.

In the mean time, however, he feels some apprehension, lest, hearing of his troubles and afflictions, they should be discouraged and distressed on his account; he reminds them that troubles are inseparable from the present life; and that "through much tribulation we must enter into the kingdom of God." (Acts xiv. 22.)

The short prayer which concludes this chapter, exhibits a happy specimen of pure and undefiled religion. St. Paul prays that they might "increase and abound;" or, (as Macknight expresses it,) "overflow with love, one towards another, and towards all men, even (says the apostle) as we do toward you;" after expressing towards them an attachment the most ardent and sincere.

and others, by a very usual figure which substitutes the concrete for the abstract, understand wickedness, i. e. the wickedness of his enemies and persecutors.]—Bagster.

Ver. 19 For what, &c.—[Macknight connects this verse with the preceding, by adding, "These things ye may believe; for what," &c. The fervour of affection, and the animation with which it is expressed, in this chapter, are incomparable.]—Bagster.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1. To be left at Athens alone—That is, having no other fellow-labourer in whom he could so well confide; for it appears Silas was also absent, and, as it should seem from Acts xviii. 5, that he went, or at least returned, with Timothy.

Ver. 8 Now we live.—To live indeed, is to be useful and happy.

Ver. 9 For all the joy—That is, "For the exceeding great joy." See Ja. i. 2.

Ver. 11 Now God himself and—Doddridge, "even," &c.—Direct—Doddridge, "Clear." Macknight, "Make straight." See Isaiah xl. 3, 4.

Ver. 13 With all his saints—Or "holy ones." See chap. iv. 14.

CHAPTER IV.

He exhorted them to go on forward in all manner of godliness, 6 to live holily and justly, 9 to love one another, 11 and quietly to follow their own business: 13 and last of all to sorrow moderately for the dead. 15 And unto this last exhortation he annexed a brief description of the resurrection, and second coming of Christ to judgment.

FURTHERMORE then we beseech you, brethren, and exhort you by the Lord Jesus, that as ye have received of us how ye ought to walk and to please God, so ye would abound more and more.

2 For ye know what commandments we gave you by the Lord Jesus.

3 For this is the will of God, even your sanctification, that ye should abstain from fornication:

4 That every one of you should know how to possess his vessel in sanctification and honour;

5 Not in the lust of concupiscence, even as the Gentiles which know not God:

6 That no man go beyond and defraud his brother in any matter: because that the Lord is the avenger of all such, as we also have forewarned you and testified.

7 For God hath not called us unto uncleanness, but unto holiness.

8 He therefore that despiseth despiseth not man, but God, who hath also given unto us his holy Spirit.

9 But as touching brotherly love ye need not that I write unto you: for ye yourselves are taught of God to love one another.

10 And indeed ye do it toward all the brethren which are in all Macedonia: but we beseech you, brethren, that ye increase more and more;

11 And that ye study to be quiet, and to do your own business, and to work with your own hands, as we commanded you;

12 That ye may walk honestly toward them that are without, and that ye may have lack of nothing.

13 But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope.

14 For if we believe that Jesus died and rose

A M. cir. 4036
A D. cir. 52.
a or, re-quest.
b or, beseech.
c Col. 11 10.
d 1 Co. 15 58.
e 1 Co. 6 15, 18.
f Ep. 4 17, 18.
g or, oppress, or, overreach.
h or, in the.
i Le. 11 44.
j Pe. 1 14.
k 16.
l or, reject-eth.
m 3 Jo. 15 12, 17.
n 1 Pe. 4 15.
o Ro. 13 13.
p or, no man.
q 1 Co. 15 20.
r &c.
s Mat. 21 30, 31.
t 1 Th. 1 7.
u Re. 20 5, 6.
v Re. 11 12.
w Jo. 14 3.
x or, exhort.
y 1 Th. 12 30, 40.
z 2 Pe. 3 19.
aa Re. 16 5.
ab Jo. 13 21.
ac Ep. 5 8.
ad 1 Th. 2 8.
ae Mat. 25 5.
af Ro. 13 12, 13.
ag 1 Pe. 5 8.
ah Is. 59 17.
ai Ro. 9 22.
aj 1 Pe. 2 8.
ak Ro. 14 8, 9.
al 2 Co. 5 15. am or, exhort.

again, even so they also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him.

15 For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent them which are asleep.

16 For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first:

17 Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord.

18 Wherefore comfort one another with these words.

CHAPTER V.

I have proceeded in the former description of Christ's coming to judgment, 16 and given divers precepts, 23 and so conclude the epistle.

BUT of the times and the seasons, brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you.

2 For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night.

3 For when they shall say, Peace and safety; then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child; and they shall not escape.

4 But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief.

5 Ye are all the children of light, and the children of the day: we are not of the night, nor of darkness.

6 Therefore let us not sleep, as do others; but let us watch and be sober.

7 For they that sleep sleep in the night; and they that be drunken are drunken in the night.

8 But let us, who are of the day, be sober, putting on the breast-plate of faith and love; and for a helmet, the hope of salvation.

9 For God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ.

10 Who died for us, that, whether we wake or sleep, we should live together with him.

11 Wherefore comfort yourselves together, and edify one another, even as also ye do.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1—18. Exhortations to holiness—consolation to the bereaved.—Practical exhortations have, of course, a general similitude; so many of these are levelled against lewdness, that we may safely infer it was the reigning sin of the Thessalonians, and of the Pagan world in general. It may, indeed, be doubted whether this sin was ever carried to greater excess than in some Christian cities, (so called;) but the fact is, Christianity has thrown a veil over vice, and driven its votaries from the idol temples, where they used publicly to perpetrate the most shameful crimes, under the mask of religion and the forms of devotion, into holes and corners, where the public eye but seldom follows them; and those who are not ashamed to commit fornication and adultery, are at least ashamed of being seen to do it. But the eye of God enters every chamber of iniquity, and his "Book of remembrance" records every secret crime, and will one day be opened in the presence of assembled worlds. St. Paul, however, not only strongly guards his Thessalonian converts against their former crimes; but urges them to the opposite virtues, and to that course of industry, which has a powerful tendency, by usefully filling up their time, to preserve them from temptation. The apostle then meets an objection, which seems to have troubled the weaker brethren, who indulged excessive grief, like the heathen, for some of their deceased friends. Death must be terrible indeed to those who have no hope beyond the grave. Well might they wail and howl over their departed friends. But with the disciples of Jesus the case is far otherwise. Those who die in Jesus, do but sleep; and when he returns in glory, he will bring his departed saints with him. For he shall descend from heaven in great and awful glory, and a voice no less powerful than that which said, "Let there be light, and light was," shall command the dead to rise.

But the dead in Christ (we are told) shall rise first, and then those who believe in him on earth shall be changed, and their rarefied bodies (so to speak) shall be "caught up," to meet their descending Saviour; and so shall they be "for ever with the Lord." Well is it added, "Comfort one another with these words."

"Yes: Faith shall triumph o'er the grave,
And trample on the tomb;
My Jesus, my Redeemer lives;
My God, my Saviour comes!"—Watts.

CHAP. V. Ver. 1—23. Warnings to prepare for the great day of the resurrection and final judgment, with other practical admonitions.—The suddenness of this great event, and the alarm which it will create, are well represented by comparing it (as our Lord had before done) to the coming of a thief in the night; and to the sudden attacks of pain upon a woman in CHAP. IV. Ver. 4. Possess his vessel.—(Gr. "his own vessel.") i. e. his body. The woman being elsewhere called the "weaker vessel," implies that the man is a vessel also. (1 Peter iii. 7.) And our apostle himself speaks of him- self and brethren as "earthen vessels." 2 Cor. iv. 7.

Ver. 6. In any matter. Macknight, "In this matter."
Ver. 8. Despiseth.—Namely, the testimony of the apostles. A strong asser- tion of their inspiration.—Doddridge.
Ver. 11. Study to be quiet.—Doddridge, "Make it your ambition to live quietly."
Ver. 12. Walk honestly.—Doddridge and Macknight, "Decently," or or- dely.—Lack of nothing.—i. e. have need of no man's assistance.
Ver. 14. Will God bring with him.—Compare chap. iii. 13.
Ver. 16. With a shout.—(Kaleusina.) The word is used in profane authors for the shout of soldiers in attacking of towers, and of charioteers. Elsner and Wiesten. Also, for "the word of command in battle." Smith's Mess.

—The trump of God.—See 1 Cor. xv. 52.—Shall rise first.—See note on 1 Cor. xv. 23.
Ver. 17. We which are alive.—That is, "we Christians"—the members of Christ's mystical body. Compare Gen. i. 25. Ps. lxxvi. 6. Hosea vi. 4. 1 Cor. xv. 51. These passages are sufficient to show, that Paul's manner of speak- ing does not imply that he expected to be living at the arrival of the great day. But for a full answer to this objection, see Friday's Vind. of the Sac. Books, in reply to Voltaire; also Pres. Edwards' Misc. Observ.
CHAP. V. Ver. 2. And thief in the night.—See Mat. xxiv. 43, 44.
Ver. 3. When they say.—That is, the men of this world. See Mat. xxiv. 38, 39.
Ver. 5. Children of light.—See Ephes. v. 8.—Not of the night.—i. e. not children of the night.
Ver. 8. Breast-plate of faith, &c.—See Ephes. vi. 14, 17.
Ver. 10. Whether we wake or sleep.—i. e. are alive, or in the grave. Dodd- ridge and Macknight.

12 And we beseech you, brethren, to know them which labour among you, and are over you in the Lord, and admonish you;

13 And to esteem them very highly in love for their works' sake. And be at peace among yourselves.

14 Now we exhort you, brethren, warn them that are unruly, comfort the feeble-minded, support the weak, be patient toward all men.

15 See that none render evil for evil unto any man; but ever follow that which is good, both among yourselves, and to all men.

16 Rejoice evermore.

17 Pray without ceasing.

18 In every thing give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you.

19 Quench not the Spirit.

A. M. cir.
496.
A. D. cir.
52.
1 He. 13. 7, 17
k Mat. 9. 50.
l 1 Cor. 12. 28.
m 1 Cor. 12. 28.
n 1 Cor. 12. 28.
o Ro. 15. 1.
p Ep. 4. 2.
q 1 Pet. 2. 22.
r 1 Pet. 2. 22.
s Mat. 5. 39.
t 1 Pet. 3. 9.
u 1 Pet. 3. 9.
v 1 Pet. 3. 9.
w 1 Pet. 3. 9.
x 1 Pet. 3. 9.
y 1 Pet. 3. 9.
z 1 Pet. 3. 9.
a 1 Pet. 3. 9.
b 1 Pet. 3. 9.
c 1 Pet. 3. 9.

20 Despise not prophesyings.

21 Prove all things; hold fast that which is good.

22 Abstain from all appearance of evil.

23 And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ.

24 Faithful is he that calleth you, who also will do it.

25 Brethren, pray for us.

26 Greet all the brethren with a holy kiss.

27 I charge you by the Lord that this epistle be read unto all the holy brethren.

28 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you. Amen.

¶ The first epistle unto the Thessalonians was written from Athens.

the hour of travail. "A thief comes upon people, (observes Mr. Blackwall,) when they are bound in sleep, and they awake in amazement and confusion—unarmed, and in a helpless posture: pangs come upon a woman when, perhaps, she is eating, drinking, or laughing, and thinking of nothing less than that hour. And here it is said, not that the day of the Lord will come thus, but that it is actually coming, which increases the awfulness of the representation." The exhortation, therefore, is, "Let us not sleep as do others," namely, the heathen world around us; but let us watch and be sober, "for we are children, not of the night, but of the day;" and God hath not appointed us to darkness and to wrath, but unto light and salvation by Jesus Christ. "Wherefore," the apostle repeats, "Comfort yourselves together, and edify one another, even as also (I believe) ye do." St. Paul then subjoins a series of practical maxims, similar to those in the close of several other Epistles, of which this forms the top of the climax—"Abstain," not only from actual evil; but "from all appearance of evil;" that no shadow of reproach may pass upon our holy religion; and he concludes with imploring upon them this very extensive blessing—"May the God of peace himself sanctify you wholly; and may your whole (person) spirit, and soul, and body, be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ!"

Ver. 12. To know them.—That is, take notice of them; treat them with affection and respect, as in the next verse.—And are over you.—i. e. preside over you.

Ver. 14. Unruly.—Doddridge says this is a military term, applied to soldiers who do not keep their proper ranks, &c.—Be patient.—Doddridge, "long suffering."

Ver. 19. Quench not the Spirit.—i. e. Resist not, nor neglect his influences. The expression refers to the Holy Spirit having visibly appeared in the form of flames. Acts ii. 3.

Ver. 20. Despise not prophesyings.—Though this may primarily refer to miraculous gifts, (as in 1 Cor. xiv. 3.) Macknight says, "This precept, in a more general sense, is designed for those who neglect the public worship of God, on pretence that they are so wise, and so well instructed, that they can receive little or no benefit from it."

Ver. 23. And the very God of peace.—Doddridge, "May the God of peace himself"—Sanctify you wholly, &c.—Doddridge, "Sanctify your whole (constitution) spirit, and soul, and body." Macknight, still better—"Your whole (person) spirit," &c.—It is (says Doddridge) very evident, that the apostle refers to a class which prevailed among the Ephesians, as well as the philosophers, (Pythagoreans, Platonists, and Stoics,) that the person of man was constituted of three distinct instances, the rational spirit, the animal soul, and the visible body." See Heb. iv. 12.

Ver. 24. Who also will do it.—Doddridge, "Do (this)" that is, "sanctify you wholly."

Ver. 27. I charge you.—Doddridge and Macknight, "I adjure you."—"That this Epistle be read, &c."—This being a command to the presidents and pastors of the Thessalonian church, it is evident that this Epistle must have been first delivered unto them, by his order, although it was inscribed to the Thessalonians in general. The same course, no doubt, he followed with all his other inspired Epistles. They were sent to the elders of the churches, for whose use they were designed, with a direction that they should be read publicly, by some of their number, to the brethren in their assemblies for worship; and that, not once or twice, but frequently, that all might have the benefit of the instructions contained in them. If this method had not been followed, such as were unlearned would have derived no advantage from the apostolical writings. . . . The practice, therefore, of the Romish clergy, who do not read the Scriptures to the common people in their religious assemblies, or who read them in an unknown tongue, is directly contrary to the apostolical injunction and to the primitive practice.—"Macknight in loc.

The subscription to this (as well as to the following Epistle) is judged to be erroneous. Paley remarks, that though dated from Athens, it speaks of "the coming of Timotheus from Thessalonica" (Ch. ii. 6.) And the history informs us, Acts xviii. 5, that "Timotheus came out of Macedonia to Paul at Corinth." The same learned writer also rejects the dating at Athens the second Epistle; remarking, that "the history does not allow us to suppose that Paul, after he had reached Corinth, went back to Athens." But the subscriptions to the Epistles generally are considered of so little authority, that they are altogether omitted by Doddridge, Macknight, and others.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE FIRST EPISTLE TO THE THESSALONIANS.

[The first Epistle to the Thessalonians, it is generally agreed, was the earliest written of all St. Paul's epistles; whence we see the reason and propriety of his anxiety that it should be read in all the Christian churches of Macedonia.—"I charge you by the Lord, that this Epistle be read unto all the holy brethren." (Ch. v. 27.) "The existence of this clause," observes Paley, "is an evidence of its authenticity; because, to produce a letter, purporting to have been publicly read in the church at Thessalonica, when no such letter had been read or heard of in that church, would be to produce an impure destructive of itself. . . . Either the Epistle was publicly read in the church of Thessalonica, during St. Paul's lifetime, or it was not. If it was, no publication could be more authentic, no species of notoriety more unquestionable, no method of preserving the integrity of the copy more secure. . . . If it was not, the clause would remain a standing condemnation of the forgery, and one would suppose, an invincible impediment to its success." Its genuineness, however, has never been disputed; and it has been universally received in the Christian church, as the inspired production of St. Paul, from the earliest period to the present day. The circumstance of this injunction being given, in the first epistle which the Apostle wrote, also implies a strong and avowed claim to the character of an inspired writer; as in fact it placed his writings on the same ground with those of Moses and the ancient prophets. It was evidently the chief design of the apostle, in writing to the Thessalonians, to confirm them in the faith, to animate them to a courageous profession of the gospel, and to the practice of all the duties of Christianity; but to suppose, with Macknight, that he intended to prove the divine authority of Christianity by a chain of regular arguments, in which he answered the several objections which the heathen philosophers are supposed to have advanced, seems quite foreign to the nature of the epistle, and to be grounded on a mistaken notion, that the philosophers deigned at so early a period to enter on a regular disputation with the Christians, when in fact they derided them as enthusiasts, and branded their doctrines as "foolishness." In pursuance of his grand object, "it is remarkable," says Doddridge, "with how much address he improves all the influence, which his zeal and fidelity in their service must naturally give him, to inculcate upon them the precepts of the gospel, and persuade them to act agreeably to their sacred character. This was the grand point he always kept in view, and to which every thing else was made subservient. Nothing appears, in any part of his writings, like a design to establish his own reputation, or to make use of his ascendancy over his Christian friends to answer any secular purposes of his own. On the contrary, in this and in his other epistles, he discovers a most generous, disinterested regard for their welfare, expressly disclaiming any authority over their consciences, and appealing to them, that he had chosen to maintain himself by the labour of his own hands, rather than prove burdensome to the churches, or give the least colour of suspicion, that, under zeal for the gospel, and concern for their improvement, he was carrying on any private sinister view." The discovery of so excellent a temper must be allowed to carry with it a strong presumptive argument in favour of the doctrines he taught. . . . And, indeed, whoever reads St. Paul's epistles with attention, and enters into the spirit with which they were written, will discern such intrinsic characters of their genuineness, and the divine authority of the doctrines they contain, as will, perhaps, produce in him a stronger conviction, than all the external evidence with which they are attended." These remarks are exceedingly well grounded and highly important; and to no other Epistle can they apply with greater force than the present most excellent production of the inspired Apostle. The last two chapters, in particular, as Dr. A. Clarke justly observes, "are certainly among the most important, and the most sublime in the New Testament. The general judgment, the resurrection of the body, and the states of the quick and the dead, the unrighteous and the just, are described, concisely indeed, but they are exhibited in the most striking and affecting points of view."—Bagster.

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE THESSALONIANS.

[The second Epistle to the Thessalonians appears, from Silvanus and Timothy being sent with St. Paul, (ch. i. 1.) to have been written soon after the first. A. D. 52, and from the place, Corinth, and not from Athens, according to the apostolical subscription. It seems that the persons who conveyed the first Epistle to the Thessalonians speedily returned to Corinth, and gave the Apostle a particular account of the state of the Church; and, among other things, informed him that many were in expectation of the near approach of the advent of Christ, and of the day of judgment, which induced them to neglect their secular affairs, as inconsistent with a due preparation for that important and awful event. This erroneous expectation they grounded partly on a misconstruction of some expressions in his former Epistle, and of what he had spoken when with them; but it was supported also by some persons, making a claim to inspiration, and claiming to have a revelation upon the subject. . . . It is some suppose, also by a forged Epistle, as soon as this state of the Thessalonians was made known to St. Paul, he wrote this second Epistle to correct such a misapprehension, and rescue them from an error, which, if appearing to rest on the authority of an Apostle, must have a very insidious tendency, and be ultimately ruinous to the cause of Christianity.]—B

CHAPTER I.

1 Paul certifyeth them of the good opinion which he had of their faith, love, and patience. 11 And their virtuous and sober reasons for the comforting of them in persecutions, whereby the church is taken from the righteous judgment of God.

PAUL, and Silvanus, and Timothy, unto the church of the Thessalonians in God
our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ:

2 Grace ^{unto} you, and peace, from God
our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

3 We are bound to thank God always for you, brethren, as it is meet, because that your faith groweth exceedingly, and the charity of every one of you all toward each other aboundeth;

4 So that we ourselves glory ⁱⁿ you in the churches of God for your patience and faith in all your persecutions and tribulations that ye ^{do} endure:

5 Which ^{is} a manifest token of the righteous judgment of God, that ye may be counted worthy of the kingdom of God, for which ye also ^{suffer}:

6 Seeing ^{it is} a righteous thing with God to recompense tribulation to them that trouble
you;

7 And to you who are troubled ^{rest} with us, when the Lord Jesus ^{shall} be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels,

8 In ^{flaming} fire ^{taking} vengeance on them that ^{know} not God, and ^{that} obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ:

9 Who shall be punished with everlasting destruction ^{from} the presence of the Lord,
and from the glory ^{of} his power;

10 When he shall come to be ^{glorified} in his saints, and to be admired ⁱⁿ all them that believe (because our testimony among you was believed) in that day.

A M. or 406.
A D. or 52.
a 1 Th 1.1,
&c
b 1 Co 13
c 1 Th 2.19, 20.
d Ja 5.11.
e Phil 1.28
f 1 Th 2.14
He 10.32,
33.
g Re 5.10.
h Re 14.3.
i 1 Th 4.16.
Jude 14
j the angels
of his power.
k He 10.37
2 Pe 3.7.
l or, golding
m He 32.41,
43.
n Ps 79.6.
Zep 1.6
o Ro 2.4
p Phil 3.19.
2 Pe 3.7.
q 1 Jo 2.19
r Mat 25.31
s Ps 65.35.
t or, four-
safe.
u Col 1.12.
Re 3.4
v 1 Pe 1.7
a Mat 24.4
6.
b 1 Th 4.1.
c Do 7.25.
d Jo 17.12.
e Is 14.13.
Re 13.6
f or, hold-
eth
g 1 Jo 1.3.
h Do 7.10.
i Is 11.1
j Is 19.15, 21
k He 10.37.

11 Wherefore also we pray always for you, that our God would ^{count} you worthy ^{of} this calling, and fulfil all the good pleasure of his goodness, and the work of faith with power.

12 That ^{the} name of our Lord Jesus Christ may be glorified in you, and ye in him, according to the grace of our God and the Lord Jesus Christ.

CHAPTER II.

1 He willeth them to continue steadfast in the truth received: 3 sheweth that there shall be a departure from the truth, 9 and a discovery of such, before the day of the Lord come. 15 And thereupon repeateth his former exhortation, and prayeth for them.

NOW we beseech you, brethren, by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and by our gathering together unto him,

2 That ye be not soon shaken in mind, or be troubled, neither by spirit, nor by word, nor by letter as from us, as ^{that} the day of Christ is at hand.

3 Let no man deceive you by any means.
for ^{that} day ^{shall} not come, except ^{there} be come a falling away first, and that man of sin ^{be} revealed, the ^{son} of perdition;

4 Who opposeth and exalteth ^{himself} above all that is called God, or that is worshipped;
so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God.

5 Remember ye not, that, when I was yet with you, I told you these things?

6 And now ye know what ^{he} withholdeth that he might be revealed in his time.

7 For the mystery of iniquity doth already ^{work}: only he who now letteth ^{will} let, until he be taken out of the way.

8 And then shall that Wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall ^{consume} with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy ^{with} the brightness of his coming:

CHAP. I. Ver. 1-12. Paul thanks God for the conversion of the Thessalonians, and comforts them under persecution.
—“This Epistle,” says Prebendary Townsend, “is generally supposed to have been written by St. Paul, a few months after the former. It is [or rather ought to be] dated from the same place, Corinth: and Silvanus and Timothy are both mentioned in the Introduction, [as in that of the former.] It was most probably written a little before, or a little after, the insurrection of the Jews at Corinth, when St. Paul was dragged before Gallio, (Acts xviii. 12;) as the apostle [chap.
iii. 2, of this Epistle] seems to anticipate this violence, . . . or else prays to be delivered from these unreasonable and unbelieving persecutors. . . .

“St. Paul having been informed that some expressions in his first Epistle had been either perverted or misunderstood by the Thessalonians, (see 1 Thess. iv. 15-17; v. 4, 6,) who supposed the end of the world and the coming of Christ to be at hand, immediately addresses them, for the purpose of refuting this error; which, while resting on apostolical authority, would be alike injurious to the Christian converts, and to the continued propagation of the gospel.” (New Test. Arr.)

The apostle opens this Epistle, as he had done the former, by thanking God on their behalf, and rejoicing in their consistent ^{an} ornamental profession of the gospel; and, at the same time, denouncing the awful judgments of God against their infidel and relentless persecutors. For “when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels,” then shall he take vengeance—not on them who never heard the gospel; but on those who, having heard it, refuse either to believe or to obey it; who “put from them the words of eternal life,” and reject the “only name given under heaven among men, whereby we can be saved.” (See Acts xiii. 46; iv. 12.)

Our apostle then prays for the Thessalonians, that they might be counted “worthy of this calling;” namely, of being reckoned among the saints; and that “the Lord would in them fulfil the good pleasure of his goodness,”—an expression which the ingenious Mr. Blackwall has noted as “the most charming representation any where to be found, of that infinite goodness which surpasses all expression; but was never so happily and properly expressed as here.” To this quotation, Dr. Doddridge adds, “that the [Greek] word seems at once to express that it is (God’s) sovereign pleasure; and also that he feels a sacred complacency in the display of it.”

CHAP. II. Ver. 1-17. The apostle guards the Thessalonians against any mistake as to the near approach of the end of the world, and warns them of the grand apostacy.—“There is reason to believe, from this and many other passages of the New Testament, (says the late And. Fuller,) that the sacred writers considered themselves as having passed the meridian of time; and, as it were, entered into the afternoon of the world.” (See 1 Cor. x. 11. Heb. i. 2; ix. 20. James v. 8.
Rev. xxii. 20.)

“Every thing, with respect to degrees, is what it is by comparison. Taking into consideration the whole of time, the coming of Christ was ‘at hand.’ (Phil. iv. 5.) But taking into consideration only a single generation, the day of Christ was not ‘at hand.’ The Thessalonians, though a very amiable people, were by some means led into a mistake on this subject,

CHAP. I. Ver. 3. Your faith groweth exceedingly.—“This teaches us not to satisfy ourselves with a general belief that the gospel is from God, nor with a superficial view of its doctrines and precepts. Our persuasion of [its] divine origin ought to become more clear and extensive.”—Macknight. [The word operantibus signifies, as Dr. Clarke remarks, to grow in and out, as a good and healthy tree in a good soil; and, if a fruit tree, bearing an abundant of fruit to compensate the labour of the husbandman. Faith is one of the seeds of the kingdom: thus the Apostle had sowed and reaped, and God gave an abundant increase. Their faith was multiplied, and their love abounded; and this was not the case with some distinguished characters only; it was the case with every one of them. For thus the apostle felt himself bound to give continual thanks to God on their behalf, as it was “meet” and right.]—B Ver. 5. A manifest token.—Doddridge, “Display.”

Ver. 7. His mighty angels.—Greek, “Angels of his power.”
Ver. 8. Taking vengeance.—Macknight, “inflicting punishment.”

Ver. 9. With everlasting destruction.—It seems impossible to reconcile this with the doctrine of Universal Restoration.—From the presence.—B Hopkins explains this as implying, not only banishment, but positive punishment, as it were, by the lightning of his eye. We think, with Macknight, that it is an allusion to the glory of the Shechinah, from which a flame came out and destroyed Nadab and Abihu, and afterwards 250 of Korah’s company.
Levit x. 1. Numb xvi. 35.

Ver. 11. Count.—That is, graciously consider you as worthy for this high and holy calling, and “fulfil” in you all the good pleasure of his goodness.” &c.

CHAP. II. Ver. 1. By the coming, &c.—Ep Newton, Cradock, Doddridge, Macknight, &c. render it, “Concerning the coming,” which is far preferable.
—And by our gathering together.—See 1 Thess. iv. 17. Jude 14.

Ver. 3. Let no man deceive you.—This is supposed to refer to the impositions practised in the first age of Christianity by false prophets, forged epistles, &c. as well as by a misconstruction of Paul’s former Epistle. See Macknight.—A falling away.—Doddridge, “an apostasy.” Macknight, “The apostasy.”—The son of perdition.—See Jo xiii. 12. For a full exposition of this passage, see Ep Newton, vol. ii. Dissert. 22; and Benson on the Epistles, Diss. 2.

Ver. 4. Above all that is called God.—Macknight, “a God;” the omission of the Greek article, he thinks, requires the insertion of the indefinite article in English. But the man of sin personated the true God, and not an idol
We, therefore, with Doddridge, prefer the common translation.

Ver. 7. He who now letteth.—Doddridge, “Only there is one that hinder-eth till he be taken out of the way.” Dr. Chandler translates the verse thus:
“For the mystery of iniquity already worketh, only till he who restrains it be taken out of the way.” In the same purpose, Macknight. The obsolete word let, in the sense of “hinder.”

Ver. 8. That wicked.—Macknight, “lawless one.” (Gr anomia)—When the Lord shall consume with the Spirit.—(Doddridge, “with”)—of his mouth.—Which issues Doddridge, “shall kindly and ban a consuming flame.” See note on chap. i. 9. Some parts of Daniel’s prophecy are very similar to several verses in this chapter.

9 Even him, whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders,

10 And with all deceivableness of *unrighteousness in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved.

11 And for this cause God shall send them strong *delusion, that they should believe a lie:

12 That *they all might be damned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness.

13 But we *are bound to give thanks alway to God for you, brethren beloved of the Lord, because God hath from the beginning chosen you to salvation through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth:

so as to expect that the end of the world would take place in their lifetime, or within a very few years. To correct this error, which might have been productive of very serious evils, was a principal design of [this] Epistle."

The mistake here referred to probably originated in a misunderstanding of St. Paul's words, in his first Epistle, wherein he speaks of some Christians being alive at that period, (1 Thess. iv. 15-17,) which they misunderstood as speaking of himself and brethren of that generation.

We come now to a most interesting and important prophecy relative to the grand apostacy, and to the reign of "the Man of Sin," and here arise three or four inquiries which demand a brief attention.

1. What is the grand apostacy here referred to? This apostacy, or "falling away," is agreed to be, not of a political, but of a religious nature; and Protestant writers and commentators almost universally refer it to the apostacy of the church of Rome, from the doctrine of Scripture and of the apostles. This prediction, as Dr. Pye Smith observes, "describes a great and extensive apostacy, which was to arise in the very bosom of the Christian church. The description purports, that this falling away should not be a renunciation of the Christian name, but should have its seat in 'the temple of God,' in the interior of the church, or great body of Christians; that its principles were already in operation, but that a temporary restraint would be imposed upon them; that, on the removal of this restraint, it would rapidly and powerfully develop itself; that its character would be wicked, its means of action extremely artful, deceptive, and iniquitous, and its tendency most destructive; that it should usurp a proud dominion, and claim even divine prerogatives; and that it should, at last, be annihilated by the pure doctrine and invincible power of the Lord Jesus."

2. Who is "the Man of Sin, the Son of Perdition?" The same class of writers who explain this apostacy of the corruptions of Popery, of course explain this Man of Sin as meaning the Pope of Rome; not any individual Pope, nor the Pope merely as a religious character; but as the head of that system of ecclesiastical usurpation and tyranny, which we commonly comprehend under the term Popery. Let us compare it with the original. His being "the Son of Perdition," implies apostacy and treachery. Popery, like Judas, not only deserted, but betrayed Christ and his cause—not, indeed, for thirty pieces of silver; but tempted by the immense wealth which accrues from purgatory and pardons, and masses for the dead, as well as from the church's secular usurpations. It took its seat in the church, which is God's temple, and there claimed supreme authority in dictating the sense of Scripture—in imposing laws—and in prescribing implicit faith and obedience, which certainly implies a supreme and divine authority; for what is more peculiar to Deity than to prescribe how we are to believe and live? Nor are there wanting instances of the arrogant assumption even of divine names and worship.

Our 3d inquiry regards the impeding power here referred to, which almost all commentators, Catholic as well as Protestant, refer to the Pagan Roman empire, which, while it remained, prevented the rising to his full authority of this "Man of Sin" and "Son of Perdition"—generally called Antichrist, from its direct opposition to the doctrine and authority of Christ. But we must not enlarge here, as the subject will come again under our notice in the next Epistle, and more at large in the writings of St. John.

4. We must consider the means of success which attended the rise of this wicked, or, more literally, lawless one; who, while he prescribed laws to all Christendom, himself, of course,

14 Whereunto *he called you by our gospel, to the obtaining of the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ.

15 Therefore, brethren, stand fast, and hold the traditions which ye have been taught, whether by word, or our epistle.

16 Now our Lord Jesus Christ himself, and God, even our Father, which *hath loved us, and hath given us everlasting consolation and good hope through grace, 17 Comfort your hearts, and establish you in every good word and work.

CHAPTER III.

1 He craveth their prayers for himself, 3 testifieth what confidence he hath in them, 5 maketh request to God in their behalf, 6 giveth them divers precepts, especially to shun idleness, and all company, 16 and last of all concludeth with prayer and salutation.

FINALLY, brethren, pray for us, that the word of the Lord may *have free course, and be glorified, even as it is with you:

acknowledged no superior, but assumed the title of Christ's Vicar upon earth, which he still retains. Not to quote the blasphemy of the Canonists, who, in one instance, at least, flattered the Bp. of Rome with the impious title of "Our Lord God the Pope;" Mosheim informs us that, in the eleventh century, the Bishops of Rome "carried their pretensions so far as to give themselves out for lords of the universe, arbiters of the fate of kingdoms and empires, and supreme rulers over the kings and princes of the earth." Accordingly, the Pope is no sooner elected than he is enthroned upon the altar, and the Cardinals, who elected him, kiss his feet, which ceremony is very properly called—Adoration. (Bp. Newton on the Prophecies.)

But, to go no farther back than the 15th century, the Council of Trent requires every clergyman, on taking orders, to subscribe the following declaration:—"I acknowledge the holy Catholic and apostolical church of Rome, the mother and mistress of all churches; and to the Pope of Rome, the successor of Peter the Prince of the Apostles, and the Vicar of Jesus Christ, I promise and swear true obedience." (Creed of Pope Pius IX.)

Now this wicked, lawless power, is said to come "after (or according to) the energetic working of Satan, with all power, and signs, and lying wonders;" that is, as the candid Doddridge explains it, "by a variety of fictitious miracles, so artfully contrived, and so strongly supported by an abundance of false testimonies, that many shall be entangled, deceived, and undone by them;" and because "they received not the love of the truth that they might be saved," they are "given up to these awful delusions that they might be condemned." God forbid, however, that we should maintain that all Roman Catholics will be lost. This is said in reference to those only who believed not the truth, because "they had pleasure in unrighteousness;" and this is the true and general cause of men's rejection of the gospel.

But we come, lastly, to consider the end of this extraordinary character, "whom the Lord shall destroy by the breath of his mouth," which is his word, "and by the brightness of his coming," which may allude to the diffusion of truth wherever that word is spread; or, as Doddridge explains it, the breath of his [Christ's] mouth, shall kindle all around him a consuming flame, in which all his [Antichrist's] pomp and pride shall vanish. (See Rev. ii. 16; xix. 15.)

CHAP. III. Ver. 1-18. Paul entreats the prayers of the Thessalonians, and gives them his apostolical advice.—The apostle having, in the close of the preceding chapter, prayed earnestly for the Thessalonians, now, in return, entreats their prayers for him, that he might be delivered out of the hands of "unreasonable and wicked men," by whom he is supposed to mean his persecutors; and that his labours might be abundantly blessed in the propagation of the gospel.

St. Paul then expresses his confidence in the Thessalonians, that they would follow his directions and advice, and again prays for them that their hearts might be directed into the love of God, and the patience of Christ; and thus, in most of his Epistles, he mingles prayers and instructions, in the true spirit of an apostle, his heart being filled with zeal for God, and love to the souls of men.

He then exhorts them to the maintenance of proper discipline in the church, withdrawing themselves from communion with any one, though, in the judgment of charity, a Christian brother, who should be found to walk disorderly and bring disgrace upon his profession. He adverts particularly to any that should prove idle—a vice not sufficiently reprobated among Christians; and who, instead of providing, by their

Ver. 9. Whose coming is after the working.—Doddridge, "energy."—Signs and lying wonders.—Macknight, "Miracles of falsehood; i. e. according to the Hebrew idiom, false miracles, for which the church of Rome has been famous, from the commencement of her apostacy down to the present time."

Ver. 11. Strong delusion.—Doddridge, "The energy of deceit"—that they should believe a lie—Doddridge, "so that they shall believe the lie;" namely, which themselves have taught.

Ver. 12. That they all might be damned.—Doddridge and Macknight, "Condemned."

Ver. 13. Chosen you to salvation.—Compare Ephes. i. 4

Ver. 15. Hold the traditions.—Doddridge, "Retain the instructions." "In the apostle's writings, traditions are those doctrines and precepts which persons divinely inspired taught." . . . whether by word of mouth, or by writing, as in chap. vi. 6.—Macknight, "Compare note on 1 Cor. xi. 2."

CHAP. III. Ver. 1. May have free course, and be glorified.—John Edwards thinks this is another allusion to the Olympic races, in which the runner who gained the prize was said to be glorified; i. e. highly applauded. So the apostle desires that the gospel might run its uninterrupted course, with great success.

2 And that we may be delivered from ^b unreasonable and wicked men: for all men have not faith.

3 But the Lord ^c is faithful, who shall establish you, and keep ^d you from evil.

4 And we have confidence ^e in the Lord touching you, that ye both do and will do the things which we command you.

5 And the Lord direct ^f your hearts into the love of God, and ^g into the patient waiting for Christ.

6 Now we command you, brethren, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye ^h withdraw yourselves from every brother ⁱ that walketh disorderly, and not after the tradition which he received of us.

7 For yourselves know how ye ought to follow us: for we behaved not ourselves disorderly among you;

8 Neither did we eat any man's bread for nought: but wrought ^j with labour and travail night and day, that we might not be chargeable to any of you:

9 Not because we have not ^k power, but to make ourselves an ensample unto you to follow us.

A M. cir. 406
A 11^o cir. 52
b absurd.
c 1 Co 13
d 2 Ju 17 15
e 2 Co 7 16
f 1 Ti 2 18
g or, patience of Christ.
h 1 Ti 6 5
i 1 Co 5 11
j 13
k Ac 18 3, 20 34
l 1 Co 9 6
m 3
n 1 Co 3 19
o 1 Ti 5 13
p 1 Pe 1 15
q Ep 4 28
r or, faint not
s 1 Co 15 58
t or, signify that man by his epistle u Mt 14 17 ver 6
v 12 19 17
w 1 Ro 16 26
x 1 Co 16 1
y Ro 16 21

10 For even when we were with you, this we commanded you, that ^l if any would not work, neither should he eat.

11 For we hear that there are some which walk among you disorderly, working not at all, but are ^m busy-bodies.

12 Now them that are such we command and exhort by our Lord Jesus Christ, that with quietness ye ⁿ work, and eat their own bread.

13 But ye, brethren, ^o be not ^p weary in well doing.

14 And if any man obey not our word ^q by this epistle, note that man, and have ^r no company with him, that he may be ashamed.

15 Yet count him not as an enemy, but admonish him as a ^s brother.

16 Now the Lord ^t of peace himself give you peace always by ^u all means. The Lord be with you all.

17 The salutation ^v of Paul with mine own hand, which is the token in every epistle: so I write.

18 The ^w grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.

¶ The second epistle to the Thessalonians was written from Athens.

own labour, "things honest in the sight of all men," became busy-bodies, and went about talking from house to house, whereby they might justly acquire the character of religious gossips: these he severely reproves, pronouncing on them this emphatic sentence,— "that if any would not work, neither should he eat;" and referring to the example of himself and brethren, who had worked night and day, when necessary, rather than eat the bread of idleness: and even as to those whose circumstances did not require them to live by daily labour, there was so great a call in the church for active and benevolent exertion, that it was criminal to be idle: and though they had long been thus employed, they were still to persevere, and not to be "weary in well-doing."

Paul would not, however, recommend any measures unnecessarily severe: he would not treat even a disorderly brother as an enemy, but admonish, and endeavour to restore him. And "may the Lord of peace himself, (says he,) give you peace always by all means. The Lord be with you all!"

Ver 3. From evil.—Dodridge, "The evil one." See note on Mat vi 13. Ver. 17. The salutation of Paul.—Paul commonly employed one to write, or at least to make a fair copy of his letters, especially if they were of any length, and to prevent forgery, "wrote the salutation in all his letters with his own hand."—MacKnight, in loc. See 1 Cor xvi 21 Col iv 18, chap ii 2, above.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE SECOND EPISTLE TO THE THESSALONIANS.

BESIDES those marks of genuineness and authority which this Epistle possesses in common with the others, it bears the highest evidence of its divine inspiration, in the representation which it contains of the papal power, under the characters of the "Man of sin," and the "Mystery of iniquity." The true Christian worship is, the worship of the one only God, through the one only Mediator, the man Christ Jesus; and from this worship the church of Rome has most notoriously departed, by substituting other mediators, invoking and adorning saints and angels, worshipping images, adorning the host, &c. It follows, therefore, that "the man of sin," is the Pope; not only on account of the diabolical lives of many of them, but by means of their scandalous doctrines and principles; dispensing with the most necessary duties, selling pardons and indulgences for the most abominable crimes, and perverting the worship of God to the grossest superstition and idolatry. He also, like the false apostle Judas, is "the son of perdition;" whether actively, as being the cause of destruction to others, or passively, as being devoted to destruction himself. "He opposeth;" he is the great adversary of God and man; persecuting and destroying, by crusades, inquisitions, and massacres, those Christians who prefer the word of God to the authority of men. "He exalteth himself above all that is called God, or is worshipped;" not only above inferior magistrates, but also above bishops and primates, kings and emperors; nay, not only above kings and emperors, but also above Christ, and God himself;

"making even the word of God of none effect by his traditions;" falsifying what God has commanded, as marriage, the use of the sacraments, &c.; and commanding, or allowing, what God has forbidden, as idolatry, to ascend, &c. "So that he, as God, sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God." His "sitting in the temple of God," implies plainly his having a seat in the Christian church; and he sitteth there "as God," especially at his inauguration, when he sits upon the high altar in St. Peter's church, and makes the table of the Lord his foot-stool, and in that position receives adoration. At all times he exercises divine authority in the church, "showing himself that he is God;" affecting divine titles, and asserting that his decrees are of the same, or greater authority, than the word of God. "The foundation of papery was laid in the Apostles' days; but several ages passed before the building was completed, and 'the man of sin revealed,' in full perfection," when that "which hindered," the Roman empire, was dissolved. "His coming is after the energy of Satan, with all power and signs, and lying wonders, &c.; and doeth require any particular proof, that the pretensions of the Pope, and the corruptions of the church of Rome, are all supported and authorized by forged visions and miracles, by pious frauds, and impositions of every kind? But, how much soever 'the man of sin' may be exalted, and how late soever he may reign, yet, at last, 'the Lord shall consume him with the Spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy him with the brightness of his coming.'"—Bagster

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO TIMOTHY.

TIMOTHY, to whom this Epistle is addressed, was a native of Lystra, a city of Lyconia, in Asia Minor. His father was a Gentile, but his mother Eunice, and his grandmother Lois, were Jewesses, by whom he was brought up in the fear of God, and only instructed in the knowledge of the Holy Scriptures. (Acts xvi 1. 2 Tim iv 15.) It is probable that he was converted to the Christian faith during the first visit made by Paul and Barnabas to Lystra, (Acts xv 2) and when the Apostle came from Antioch in Syria to Lystra the second time, he found him a member of the church, and so highly respected and warmly recommended by the church in that place, that he chose him to be the companion of his travels, having previously encouraged him, (Acts xvi 1-3) and solemnly ordained him by imposition of hands, (1 Ti. iv 11. 2 Ti. i. 6.) though at that time he was probably not more than twenty years of age, (1 Ti. iv 12.) Being thus prepared to be the Apostle's fellow-labourer in the gospel, he accompanied him and Silas in their various journeys, assisting him in preaching the gospel, and in conveying instructions to the churches. (Acts xvi 10, 11, &c.; xvii 13, 14; xviii 5; xix 22; xx 1.) An ecclesiastical tradition states that he suffered martyrdom at Ephesus, being shut with stones and clubs, A. D. 97, while preaching against idolatry in the vicinity of the temple of Diana; and his supposed relics were transported to Constantinople with great pomp, A. D. 356, in the reign of Constantine.

It is evident that this Epistle was written by the Apostle when on a journey from Ephesus to Macedonia, having left Timothy at Ephesus, in care of the church, (ch. 3.) This is supposed by many, both ancient and modern, to have been when St. Paul quitted Ephesus on account of the disturbance raised by Demetrius, and went into Macedonia, (Acts xv. 1.) about A. D. 56, 57, or 58;—Bagster.

CHAPTER I.

1 Timothy is put in mind of the charge which was given unto him by Paul at his going to Macedonia. 3 Of the right use and end of the law. 11 Of Saint Paul's calling to be an apostle, 20 and of Hymeneus and Alexander.

PAUL, an apostle of Jesus Christ ^a by the commandment of God our Saviour, and Lord Jesus Christ, which is our ^b hope;

2 Unto ^c Timothy, my own son ^d in the faith;

A. M. cir. 389
A 11^o cir. 65
a Ac 9 15
b Gal 1 7
c Ac 16 1
d 1 Ti 1 4
e Gal 1 3
f 1 Ti 2 2
g Ac 20 13
h c 5 3, 20

* Grace, mercy, and peace, from God our Father and Jesus Christ our Lord.

3 As I besought thee to abide still at Ephesus, when I went ^e into Macedonia, that thou mightest charge some that they teach no other doctrine,

4 Neither give heed ^f to fables and endless

CHAP. I. Ver. 1-20. Timothy reminded of the charge before given him by Paul, especially called to be an apostle.—

CHAP. I. Ver. 1. Which is—Rather, "who is;" namely, Christ. Ver. 2. My own son.—Dodridge, My genuine son—in the faith.—MacKnight understands it of his having been converted by Paul's ministry.

This and the three following Epistles differ from the preceding, which were all addressed to Christian churches; these to Ver 4. Neither give heed to fables.—Both Jews and Gentiles abounded with fabulous tales connected with their several superstitions.—And endless renascences.—Most commentators refer these to those family genealogies 1935 genealogies, which minister questions, rather than godly edifying which is in faith: so do.

5 Now the end ^h of the commandment is charity out of a pure ⁱ heart, and ^j of a good conscience, and ^k of faith unfeigned:

6 From which some ^l having ^m swerved have turned aside unto vain jangling;

7 Desiring to be teachers of the law; understanding ⁿ neither what they say, nor whereof they affirm.

8 But we know that the law ^o is ^p good, if a man use it lawfully;

9 Knowing this, that ^q the law is not made for a righteous man, but for the lawless and disobedient, for the ungodly and for sinners, for unholy and profane, for murderers of fathers and murderers of mothers, for manslayers,

10 For whoremongers, ^r for them that defile themselves with mankind, for men-stealers, for liars, for perjured persons, and if there be any other thing that is contrary to sound ^s doctrine;

11 According to the ^t glorious gospel of the blessed ^u God, which ^v was committed to my trust.

12 And I thank Christ Jesus our Lord, who hath ^w enabled me, for that he counted me ^x faithful, putting ^y me ^z into the ministry;

13 Who was before ^a a blasphemer, and a persecutor, and injurious; but I obtained mercy, because I did ^b it ignorantly ^c in unbelief.

14 And the grace of our Lord was exceeding abundant with faith and love which is in Christ Jesus.

individual ministers, and the two first of them to Paul's beloved son—not in the flesh, but "in the faith,"—his son Timothy, of whose conversion and character, Dr. Macknight gives the following account:—

"Paul and Barnabas, in the course of their first apostolical journey among the Gentiles, having come to Lystra, a city of Lycania in the Lesser Asia, (Acts xiv. 6,) preached there some time, and converted a pious Jewish woman named Lois, with her daughter Eunice, whose husband, it is thought, was then dead, (2 Tim. i. 5.) Soon after this, Timothy, Eunice's son, who had been brought up by his mother and grandmother in the Jewish religion, and in the knowledge of the Scriptures, (2 Tim. iii. 15,) being greatly affected by the apostle's discourses, believed. From the time of his conversion, Timothy made such proficiency in the knowledge of the gospel, and was so remarkable for the sanctity of his manners, as well as for his zeal in the cause of Christ, that he attracted the esteem of all the brethren in those parts. Accordingly, when the apostle came from Antioch, in Syria, to Lystra the second time, they so praised Timothy, that him would Paul have to go forth with him, (Acts xv. 2, 3.) Timothy was (also) pointed out as a fit person to be ordained an evangelist. . . . Timothy, though a Jew, [by his mother's side,] not having been circumcised, by reason that his father was a Greek, it was proper he should bear that mark of his descent; because, without it, the Jews would have looked on him as a Gentile, and have despised his instructions. This, and not any opinion that circumcision was necessary to salvation, determined the apostle to propose, and Timothy to receive, the rite by which the Jews, from the earliest times, had been distinguished from the rest of mankind."

Timothy was set apart to the office of an evangelist by the Presbytery, or elders of the church, and either at the same time, or soon afterwards, received the bestowment of miraculous gifts by the hands of the apostle, to whom he became travelling companion and fellow-labourer, in several of his journeys, till he left him in Ephesus to go into Macedonia, and while they were separated sent him this Epistle. Considerable difference prevails among critics as to the date of this Epistle.

of which the Jews were remarkably fond; but a learned German critic (Eusebius) refers to the fragments of the Phrygian school; the disciples of which, he tells us, "took great pains to arrange virtues, as well as faculties, and other abstract notions, in genealogical order, to show how one virtue, or one abstract idea, was generated by another."—Journal L^x No. 1592.—In faith—Doddridge, "In the faith." Ver. affirms, that all the ancient MSS. without exception, read here—rather than the dispensation of God, which is by faith.—Macknight.

Ver. 5. The end of the commandment.—See Rom. xiii. 8, 10.
Ver. 9. The law is not made for a righteous man.—Doddridge, "a law;" meaning, that laws, in general, are not made to control the righteous, but the wicked.—For murderers—Not in the sense which our law uses the term, but in the worst sense. Doddridge, "assassins."

Ver. 10. For men-stealers.—See the law Exod. xxi. 16; and let every man implicated in the slave trade tremble!—To sound doctrine—That is, to sound evangelical principles.

A. M. cir.
4069
A. D. cir.
65.

h Ro. 13. 8, 10.

i Ga. 5. 14.

j 2 Ti. 2. 22.

k 1 Cor. 13. 8.

l 2 Ti. 4. 10.

m Ro. 7. 12.

n Ga. 5. 22.

o 2 Ti. 1. 3.

p 1 Cor. 13. 8.

q 1 Cor. 13. 10.

r 1 Cor. 13. 10.

s 1 Cor. 13. 10.

t Col. 1. 25.

u Ac. 8. 3.

v Lu. 23. 34.

w 2 Ti. 2. 11.

x Ti. 3. 8.

y Mat. 9. 13.

z Lu. 10. 10.

a Ps. 10. 16.

b Ac. 6. 15, 16.

c Lu. 1. 13.

d Ro. 16. 27.

e 1 Ch. 29. 11.

f 1 Cor. 13. 8.

g 1 Cor. 5. 5.

a or, desire.

b Ro. 13. 1.

c or, em-
ment: place d 1u. 2. 15.

e 1u. 2. 15.

f 2 Pe. 3. 9.

15 This is a faithful ^a saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came ^b into the world to save sinners; of whom I am chief.

16 Howbeit for this cause I obtained mercy, that in me first Jesus Christ might show forth all long-suffering, for a pattern ^c to them which should hereafter believe on him to life everlasting.

17 Now unto the King ^d eternal, ^e immortal, ^f invisible, the only wise ^g God, ^h be ⁱ honour and glory for ever and ever. Amen.

18 This charge I commit unto thee, son Timothy, according ^j to the prophecies which went before on thee, that thou by them mightest war a good warfare;

19 Holding ^k faith, and a good conscience; which some having put away concerning faith have made shipwreck;

20 Of whom is Hymeneus and Alexander; whom I have delivered ^l unto Satan, that they may learn not to blaspheme.

CHAPTER II.

1 That it is meet to pray and give thanks for all men, and the reason why. 9 How women should be attired. 12 They are not permitted to teach. 15 They shall be saved, notwithstanding the testimonies of God's wrath, in childbirth, if they continue in faith.

I ^a EXHORT therefore, that, first of all, supplications, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks, be made for all men;

2 For ^b kings, and ^c for all that are in ^d authority; that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty.

3 For this ^e is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Saviour;

4 Who ^f will have all men to be saved, and to come unto the knowledge of the truth.

Many place it as early as A. D. 50 or 53; but we have followed Mr. Horne in placing it in 64, which is a year sooner than our translators; but the exact date is of little importance, as there is no question of its authenticity or inspiration.

The apostle having introduced this epistle, in his usual manner, with an apostolical blessing, reminds Timothy of the charge he had given him, to caution all the teachers of Christianity against the fables, as well of the Jewish Rabbies as of the Pagan theology; and particularly against their endless genealogies, which could lead to no valuable end, and answer no pious purpose; but on the contrary, being subject to great uncertainty, ministered to many idle questions, and encouraged a spirit of idle disputation: whereas, the end and object of all the precepts of the gospel is holy obedience to God, affection to the brethren, and universal benevolence. The teachers here reproved, it appears, affected to be teachers of the law of Moses, and especially of its moral precepts, without well understanding either its nature or design. Truly, "the law is good if a man use it lawfully;" and it is lawfully used when employed, (as in the following verses,) for the conviction of sin, as a direction in the path of duty, or as a glass wherein to view the glory of the divine perfections; but it is used unlawfully, when considered as a covenant of works and a means of justification, as this apostle has at large shown in his Epistles to the Romans and Galatians. (See Omicron's Letters, No. 30.)

The apostle then adverts to his favourite subject, his obligations to sovereign grace; and he declares himself as "the chief of sinners," to be set forth for a pattern of divine mercy and long-suffering, which refection draws from him a pious doxology to "the King eternal, immortal and invisible." The chapter concludes with a melancholy intimation respecting two fallen professors, who had made shipwreck of their faith, and whom he had, by a temporary separation from the church, delivered into the hands of the tempter, not for their destruction, but that they might learn, by what they suffered from him, to blaspheme no more.

CHAP. II. Ver. 1—15. Prayer to be made for all men, and why.—Modesty enjoined on women, both in their dress and deportment.—When the apostle enjoins prayer to be made for

Ver. 13. Because I did it ignorantly.—This implies, that had he done this knowingly, his would have been the unpardonable sin.

Ver. 17. Now unto the King eternal, &c.—When repeating over this passage, Pres. Edwards experienced that lurch of which the Saviour speaks, John iv. 3.

Ver. 18. According to the prophecies which went before on thee.—By this it is evident, that some inspired person had predicted the excellency of his character.—By them—i. e. encouraged by those predictions.

Ver. 19. Concerning faith have made shipwreck.—This, is, have lost their principles and character. Of these men, see 2 Tim. ii. 17; iv. 14.

CHAP. II. Ver. 2. In all godliness and honesty.—Doddridge, "In all piety and gravity." See note on Phil. iv. 8.

Ver. 4. Who will have all men to be saved.—Doddridge, "Who wills that all men should be saved." The meaning seems to be, "says, that excellent expositor, "that God has made sufficient provision for the salvation of all." Macknight, "Who commendeth all men to be saved;" parallel to Acts xvii. 30.

5 For there is one God, and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus; 6 Who gave himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time.

7 Whereunto I am ordained a preacher, and an apostle, (I speak the truth in Christ, and lie not;) a teacher of the Gentiles in faith and verity.

8 I will therefore that men pray every where, lifting up holy hands, without wrath and doubting.

9 In like manner also, that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety; not with broidered hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array;

10 But (which becometh women professing godliness) with good works.

11 Let the woman learn in silence with all subjection.

12 But I suffer not a woman to teach, nor to usurp authority over the man, but to be in silence.

13 For Adam was first formed, then Eve.

A M. cur. 4069
A D. cur. 65
e Ro 3.30.
f He 9.15
g Mat 20.28
h or, a testimony
i Ju 1.21
j Ro 10.22
k or, plaited
l Pe 3.3.
m 1 Co 14.34
n Phil 4.1.
o Tit 1.6, &c.
p or, modest
q or, not ready to quarrel and offer wrong, as one in wine
r 2 Ti 1.24
s Ps 101.2

14 And Adam was not deceived, but the woman being deceived was in the transgression.

15 Notwithstanding she shall be saved in childbearing, if they continue in faith and charity and holiness with sobriety.

CHAPTER III.

THIS is a true saying, If a man desire the office of a bishop, he desireth a good work.

2 A bishop then must be blameless, the husband of one wife, vigilant, sober, of good behaviour, given to hospitality, apt to teach;

3 Not given to wine, no striker, not greedy of filthy lucre; but patient, not a brawler, not covetous;

4 One that ruleth well his own house, having his children in subjection with all gravity;

5 (For if a man know not how to rule his own house, how shall he take care of the church of God?)

all men, we think the plain and obvious meaning is, for men of all ranks and classes, and particularly for our superiors—"kings, and all that are in authority." And here, says M. Claude, "It is very natural to remark the time [when this injunction was given]. It was when the church and the apostles were every where persecuted; when the faithful were the objects of the hatred and calumny of all mankind, and in particular, of the cruelty of these tyrants; yet none of this rough treatment could stop the course of Christian charity. St. Paul not only requires every believer to pray for all men, but he would have it done in public, that all the world might know the maxims of Christianity, always kind, patient, and benevolent. Believers consider themselves as bound in duty to all men, though men do nothing to oblige them to it. He was aware malicious slanderers would call this worldly policy and human prudence; and would say, Christians only meant to flatter the great, and to court their favour; yet even this calumny does not prevent St. Paul: he orders them to pray publicly, and first, for civil governors."—These remarks, we may observe, were written by a French Protestant divine, in the prospect of that horrid persecution, which soon after drove him into banishment in a foreign country, by the revocation of the Edict of Nantz, which was the French law of toleration.

The argument used by our apostle to justify and enforce this precept, of praying for all, is, that "God our Saviour will have all men to be saved, and to come to the knowledge of the truth;" which we consider as referring, not so much to the design or decree of the Almighty, as to his command, and revealed will. So Dr. Macknight renders it—"Who commandeth all men to be saved, and to come to the knowledge of the truth;" which is language parallel to that which our apostle addressed to the Athenians, (Acts xvii. 30:) God "now commandeth all men every where to repent." Farther, as the ground of this commandment, we read, that our Saviour "gave himself a ransom for all;" by which expression we understand, that all ranks, all orders, and all nations of mankind, are equally interested in his atonement, and equally enjoined to receive and rest upon it; with no exceptions from its benefits, but what are made by their own infidelity and perverseness.

Another argument, and that a very powerful one, to induce us to pray for our governors, is, the great advantage to be expected therefrom, both to ourselves and to the church; namely, that we may lead quiet and peaceable lives, under their administration, which cannot be expected while they act in rebellion against God, and are persecutors of his people.

What follows in this chapter relates to the female sex, their dress, and conduct. It has always been considered as a delicate and a dangerous thing for preachers to interfere with the dress of women; but Paul was an apostle, and, as such, armed with an authority, to which Christian women cannot object: and the purport of his injunction, as we understand it, is, not to degrade them, but rather to increase their respectability; for he does not forbid their wearing apparel suited to their rank and circumstances, (which is, indeed, desirable, that it may employ the poor;) but those showy and splendid ornaments, calculated, indeed, to attract the notice of the other sex, and therefore inconsistent with Christian modesty. From the same principle, he forbids the rendering themselves conspicuous in the assemblies for public worship, by exercising their gifts before the men.

But we have freely expressed our opinion on this point, on the latter part of chap. xiv. of Paul's first Epistle to the Corinthians. The reasons which the apostle gives for female subjection are two:—

1. That Adam was first formed, and then Eve, to be his help-met and companion.

2. That it was through her being deceived that Adam fell, and, by falling, brought on his posterity death and all its painful accompaniments of woe.

The last verse of this chapter is peculiarly difficult. Some of our best commentators, considering that our salvation is wholly dependent on "the Seed of woman," think that the expression here used has a reference to the incarnation, as if Paul had said, "Woman, having been the instrument of our salvation, shall also be herself saved through that event;" and though woman must suffer much in consequence of that divine sentence, "In sorrow shalt thou bring forth children;" yet even in that perilous hour shall she be saved, if she continue to act worthily her Christian profession.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1—16. How bishops, deacons, and their wives, should be qualified—the ground of these directions.—We purposely avoid inquiry into the particular nature and rank of these officers in the Christian church; but however their rank and office may be considered—whether bishops be understood as prelates, presidents, or pastors—most certainly moral character is to either, and to all, of the first importance. Their office is not a sinecure—it is a work, a good work, and requires a blameless character. One qualification is remarkable—he must be "the husband of one wife;" that is, of one wife only: "Neither guilty of polygamy, nor of divorce, or the taking of a second wife before the death of the first; evils too common in those days, both with Jews and Gentiles; and, however borne with before the establishment of Christianity, they were nevertheless sins against the divine institution of marriage; and therefore eminently culpable and scandalous, in a person who claimed so sacred and exemplary a character as that of a Bishop, or President of a Christian church." (Rev. Dr. Turner's Social Relig. p. 63, note.)

Among other qualifications of a bishop, it is particularly enjoined that he should not be a novice—that is, a new convert; but a man of some standing and experience in the Christian church, so as not likely to be elated with his situation, or to "fall into the condemnation of the devil," which appears to have been spiritual, or rather intellectual, pride.

The like purity of character is required in deacons as in pastors; and in performing well their office, they are said to "purchase to themselves a good degree"—namely, of respectability in the Christian church; and, as Dr. Hammond expresses it, may be "assumed into holy orders;" or, as Dr. Doddridge explains it, "they who have discharged the office of a deacon well, procure to themselves not only a fair report in the general, but very often a good degree of farther advancement in a higher office"—namely, as pastors or teachers. And not only ministers and deacons, but their wives also, ought to be persons of grave, sober, and prudent conduct. Much of the respectability and usefulness of a minister, or

Ver. 6. To be testified.—To have public witness borne of it, by the preaching of the gospel.

Ver. 7. I speak the truth.—See Rom. ix. 1, and note.

Ver. 9. In modest apparel.—See Doddridge, "In decent apparel, without decency and sobriety."—Array—Doddridge, "garments."

Ver. 13. Adam was first formed.—See 1 Co. ix. 8, and note.

Ver. 14. Adam was not deceived.—Namely, by the serpent, with whom he appears to have held no converse; but probably partook of the forbidden fruit to gratify his wife, and to share her fate. See Parad. Lost, bk. ix. 852, &c.—

Some, however, supply the word, first, from the preceding verse—"Adam was not (first) deceived;" but we doubt the propriety of this supplement.

Ver. 15. She shall be saved.—Macknight refers this to the woman in the preceding verse, viz. Eve, who was herself saved through the promise a seed which eventually sprang from her.

CHAP. III. Ver. 2. The husband of one wife.—i. e. of one only; to polygamy.—Apt—Doddridge, "fit"—to teach.

Ver. 3. Not greedy of filthy lucre.—Or sordid gain.—Not a brawler—i. e. not contentious.

6 Not a novice, lest being lifted up with pride ^h he fall into the condemnation of the ⁱ devil.

7 Moreover he must have a good report of them ^j that are without; lest he fall into reproach and the snare ^k of the devil.

8 Likewise must the deacons ^l be grave, not double-tongued, not ^m given to much wine, not greedy of filthy lucre;

9 Holding ⁿ the mystery ^o of the faith in a pure conscience.

10 And let these also first be proved; then let them use the office of a deacon, being found blameless.

11 Even so must their wives ^p be grave, not slanderers, sober, faithful in all things.

12 Let the deacons be the husbands of one wife, ruling ^q their children and their own houses well.

13 For they that have ^r used the office of a deacon ^s well, purchase to themselves a good degree, and great boldness in the faith ^t which is in Christ Jesus.

14 These things write I unto thee, hoping to come unto thee shortly:

15 But if I tarry long, that thou mayest know how thou oughtest to behave thyself in the house ^u of God, which is the church of the living God, the pillar and ^v ground of the truth.

16 And without controversy great is the mys-

A. M. cir. 4069.
A. D. cir. 65.

g or, one nearly come to the th.

h Ps. 138.
i Jude 5.
j Ac. 22.
k 1 Pt. 1. 12.

l 2 Th. 2. 26.
m Ac. 6. 3.
n ver. 3.
o Ec. 41. 21.

p Ep. 1. 9.
q ver. 23.
r ver. 4.
s or, ministrated.

t Mat. 25. 21.
u 2 Th. 1. 1.
v or, stay.

w 1 Co. 2. 7.
x manifested.

y 1 Jo. 1. 4.
z Mat. 3. 16.
A. D. 16. 8. 9.

1 Pt. 3. 18.
a Mat. 1. 11.
b 1 Pt. 1. 12.

c Col. 1. 6.
d 1 Jo. 25. 51.
e 1 Jo. 11. 35.

f 2 Pt. 2. 1.
g He. 10. 14.
h Ec. 5. 18.
i Je. 15. 16.

j 1 Pt. 2. 2.
k 1 Jo. 1. 14.
l or, for a little time.

tery ^w of godliness: God was ^x manifest in ^y the flesh, justified in the ^z Spirit, seen of ^a angels, preached unto the ^b Gentiles, believed on ^c in the world, received up ^d into glory..

CHAPTER IV.

1 He foretold that in the latter times there shall be a departure from the faith. 6 And the apostle Timothy might not fail in doing his duty, he furnished him with divines precepts belonging thereto.

NOW the Spirit speaketh expressly, that ^a in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing ^b spirits, and doctrines of devils;

2 Speaking lies in hypocrisy; having their conscience seared with a hot iron;

3 Forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from meats, which God hath created to be received ^c with thanksgiving of them which believe and know the truth.

4 For every creature of God is good, and nothing to be refused, if it be received with thanksgiving:

5 For it is sanctified by the word of God and prayer.

6 If thou put the brethren in remembrance of these things, thou shalt be a good minister of Jesus Christ, nourished up ^d in the words of faith and of good doctrine, whereunto thou hast attained.

7 But refuse profane and old wives' ^e fables, and exercise thyself rather unto godliness.

8 For bodily exercise profiteth ^f little: but pastor, depends upon the Christian character and conduct of his wife.

In the close of this chapter, we are introduced to the temple of truth, which is the Christian church, in which the apostles and evangelists, (of which last Timothy was one,) are to be considered as pillars, and Christ as the foundation. So Dr. Lightfoot tells us, that the members of the great Sanhedrim were called pillars of the truth; and St. Paul himself applies the term pillars to James, Cephas, and John, as pillars of the Christian church, (Gal. ii. 9.) but in Rev. iii. 12, every Christian conqueror is promised to be made a pillar in the temple above. The apostle's design may then be, to admonish Timothy of the importance of his being steadfast in the doctrines and duties of Christianity, since he was himself to be a pillar in the church of God, which church itself was to be the great support of truth, since without a visible church, it could not be maintained on earth.

The concluding verse gives an abstract of the principal points which compose the great mystery of Christianity, so called in opposition to, and in distinction from, the mysteries of Paganism, which were neither sublime in themselves, nor pious in their practical tendency and effect. This mystery comprehends, 1. The incarnation of Christ—God manifested in the flesh.—2. The resurrection of Christ, which we consider to be the import of the expression, justified in the Spirit; for he was "declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the Spirit of Holiness, (or Holy Spirit,) by his resurrection from the dead." (Rom. i. 4.) This was a complete justification of his character and pretensions, as the Son of God; and, at the same time, as his resurrection implies his previous death,

Ver. 6. Not a novice—Macknight, "Not a new convert."—The condemnation of the devil—That is, pride.

Ver. 8. Not double-tongued—That is, says D. Turner, "not deceitful, saying and unsaying."

Ver. 10. Then let them use, &c.—Doddridge, "If they be found blameless, let them use the office of a deacon."

Ver. 11. Even so must their wives be grave—So the passage is generally understood: Macknight, however, renders it after the Vulgate: "The women in like manner must be grave"—referring it to the deaconesses, or female presbyters, who were employed in visiting and instructing their own sex, and to be told as it was understood by Chrysostom and other Greek, as well as Latin fathers; and it is certain the same Greek word is used indifferently for both "wives" and "women."

Ver. 13. 16. But and ground—Marginal, "stay"—of the truth—The passage is difficult, and has been variously rendered. We shall give two or three, which appear to be the most probable interpretations. 1. As by our translators, and many others. 2. Henderson would render the passage—"The pillar and establishment of the truth, and incontrovertibly great is the mystery of godliness: God manifested himself in the flesh," &c.; and thus he says, has the sanction of the principal dignitaries of the Greek church in Russia (Travels in Russia, p. 123.) 3. A third interpretation is that of Pope South, (partly borrowed from Dr. Cramer, of Kild.) "These precepts I write unto thee, hoping to come to thee very soon, but if I should be longer than I expect, that thou mayest know how thou oughtest to conduct thyself in the house of God, which is the church of the living God (—the pillar and foundation of the truth, and confessedly great is this mystery of religion)—who was manifested in human nature, &c." (See Smith's answer to Taylor's Misquito, p. 59.)

Ver. 16. And without controversy... God was manifest (Marginal, manifested) in the flesh, &c.—There is confessedly a doubt as to the original reading, whether it should be, "God was manifested in the flesh;" or, "who (or which) was manifested;" the difference being small in the original, and unimportant, since the title God (or Theos) (though in this text omitted by Greene) is in various other passages applied to Christ, as John i. 1, &c.

it includes the doctrine of his atonement.—3. He was seen of angels—seems to refer to his intercourse with spirits, both evil and good; with the former of whom he had mysterious conflicts, in the various scenes of his temptation, passion, and resurrection; and by the latter of whom he was assisted and consoled.—4. Preached unto the Gentiles—the mystery which St. Paul speaks of as "hidden in God from the beginning of the world." (Ephes. iii. 9.) 5. Believed on in the world—yea, in almost all parts of the then known world. (Rom. x. 18.) 6th and lastly, Received up into glory, and exalted to the right hand of God, (Acts ii. 24, 30, 33.) These events compose a great part (though not the whole) of the mysteries of Christianity. That they are not regularly arranged, is not to be wondered at in St. Paul, whose rapid pen records events, not always according to the order of their occurrence, but in the order in which they presented themselves to his vivid imagination.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1—16. The great apostacy foretold.—Apostolical advice to Timothy.—"By calling the Christian church, in the end of the preceding chapter, the pillar and support of the truth, (says Dr. Macknight,) the apostle teaches us, that one of the important purposes for which that great spiritual building was reared, was to preserve the knowledge and practice of true religion in the world. Nevertheless, knowing that in aftertimes great corruptions, both in doctrine and practice, would take place in the church itself; and that the general reception of these corruptions by professed Christians, would be urged as a proof of their being the truths and precepts of God, on pretence that the church is the pillar and support of the truth, the apostle... judged it necessary, in this 4th chapter,

The Unitarian version reads, "He who was manifested in the flesh;" and without a masculine pronoun it seems difficult to make any sense of the passage; a mystery might be "manifested," but the term would by no means answer to the other particulars—it could not be "received up into glory."

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1. Now the Spirit speaketh expressly—Macknight, Or "saith in so many words"—"That in the latter times,"—Doddridge, "the last times." Macknight, "in aftertimes." Doddridge thinks, that under this term may be included the whole of the gospel's dispensation, or any part of it, as in Heb. i. 2. 1 Peter i. 20. Mede explains this expression, of the last times of the Roman Empire, Daniel's fourth Monarchy—Depart from the faith—Doddridge and Macknight, "Apostasy." Compare 2 Thess. ii. 3. "Doctrines of devils or demons."—Mede (says Mede) that demons were the authors of them, (though that be true,) but doctrines concerning demons, meaning, that the Gentile idolatrous theology of worshipping demons should be revived in the adoration of saints and angels, as thus stated in the Creed of Pope Pius IV.—"I believe, that the saints who reign with Christ are to be worshipped and prayed to." Macknight adopts this explanation; but Granville Sharp contends in favour of the common version; to which Doddridge also adheres. See Sharp on the case of Saul.

Ver. 1—3. Now the Spirit speaketh, &c.—[This important prediction might be more correctly rendered, "Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to erroneous spirits, and doctrines concerning demons, through the hypocrisy of Jews, having their consciences seared with a hot iron, forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from meats," &c.] How applicable these particulars are to the corruptions of the church of Rome need scarcely be insisted on. The worship of saints and angels in that church is essentially the same with the worship of demons among the heathen; which has been established in the world by books forged in the name of the Apostles and saints by lying legends of their lives, by false miracles ascribed to their relics, and by fabulous dreams and relations; while coldness was enquired and practised under pretence of chastity, and abstinence under pretence of devotion. None but the Spirit of God could foresee and foretell these remarkable events. —Bagster.

Ver. 3. Forbidding to marry, (and commanding) to abstain from meats godliness ^a is profitable unto all things, having promise ^b of the life that now is, and of that which is to come.

⁹ This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptance.

¹⁰ For therefore we both labour and suffer reproach, because we trust in the living God, who is the Saviour of all men, specially of those that believe.

¹¹ These things command and teach.

¹² Let ^c no man despise thy youth; but be thou an example of the believers, in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity.

¹³ Till I come, give attendance to reading, to exhortation, to doctrine.

¹⁴ Neglect ^d not the gift that is in thee, which was given thee by ^e prophecy, with the laying on ^f of the hands of the presbytery.

¹⁵ Meditate upon these things: give thyself wholly to them; that thy profiting may appear ^g to all.

¹⁶ Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine; continue in them: for in doing this thou shalt both save ^h thyself, and them that hear thee.

A. M. cr.

A. D. cr.

63.

g e 6.6

h Ps. 54. 11.

i 2 Ti. 2, 15.

j 2 Ti. 1. 6.

k e. 1. 15.

l Ac. 13. 3.

m or, in all things.

n Ja. 5. 20.

—

a ver. 3, 16.

b or, knowledge.

c or, diligently.

d Re. 3. 1.

e Is. 58. 7.

f or, knowledge.

g or, chosen.

CHAPTER V.

1 Rules to be observed in reproof. 2 Of widows. 3 Of elders. 23 A proof for Timothy's health. 24 Some men's sins go before unto judgment, and some meet for do follow after.

REBUKE not an elder, but entreat him as a father; and the younger men as brethren; 2 The elder women as mothers; the younger as sisters, with all purity.

3 Honour widows that are widows ^a indeed.

4 But if any widow have children or nephews, let them learn first to show ^b piety at home, and to requite their parents: for that is good and acceptable before God.

5 Now she that is a widow indeed, and desolate, trusteth in God, and continueth in supplications and prayers night and day.

6 But she that liveth ^c in pleasure is dead ^d while she liveth.

7 And these things give in charge, that they may be blameless.

8 But if any provide not for his own, and specially ^e for those of his own ^f house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel.

9 Let not a widow be ^g taken into the number under threescore years old, having been the wife of one man, to foretell the introduction of these corruptions, under the idea of an apostasy from the faith."

This passage is considered as speaking of the same apostasy that is predicted in the 2d Epistle to the Thessalonians, (chap. ii. 3, 4.) This apostasy, which followed the days of apostolic purity, spread beyond the reach of the Roman church, and Antichrist appeared in a variety of forms: or, as St. John says, there were "many Antichrists," (1 John ii. 18:) so that this great defection must not be confined to Popery, but may be fairly construed as comprehending other heresies, which at the same time sprang up and flourished; many of which, on the one hand, possessed the same secular character; or, on the other, affected the like austerities, "forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from meats," on which the gospel dispensation lays no restraints. "This false morality," (says Dr. Macknight,) was very early introduced into the church, being taught first by the Eucratites and Marcionites, and afterwards by the Manicheans, who said marriage was the invention of the evil god, and considered it as sinful. . . . In process of time, the monks embraced celibacy, and represented it as the highest pitch of sanctity. At length, celibacy was recommended by the priests, and by the orthodox themselves; more especially by the Bishops of Rome, the great patrons of the worship of angels and saints. Thus the worship of demons, and the prohibition of marriage, though naturally unconnected, have gone hand in hand in the church, as the Spirit here foretold."

Bishop Newton also remarks, that "there is no necessary connexion between the worship of the dead . . . and commanding to abstain from meats; and yet it is certain, that the great advocates of this worship have, by their pretended purity and mortification, procured the greater reverence to their persons, and the readier reception to their doctrines. But this idle, popish, monkish abstinence, is as unworthy of a Christian, as it is unnatural to a man. It is perverting the purpose of nature, and 'commanding to abstain from meats, which God hath created to be received with thanksgiving by believers, and by them who know the truth.' The apostle, therefore, approves and sanctifies the religious custom of blessing God at our meals; as our Saviour, when he was to distribute the loaves and fishes, (Matt. xiv. 19; xv. 26,) 'looked up to heaven, and brake;' and what then can be said of those who have their tables spread with the most plentiful gifts of God, and yet constantly sit down and rise up again, without suffering so much as one thought of the Giver to intrude upon them? . . . can they be reputed either to believe or know the truth? Man is free to partake of all the good creatures of God, but thanksgiving is the necessary condition." (Dissert. 23.)

In enjoining these things upon Timothy, St. Paul assumes him, that if he would prove himself a good minister of Jesus Christ, it must be by attention to sound and scriptural doctrines, and not by listening to Rabbinical traditions, or heathen fancies, both which may be included under the denomination of "profane, and old wives' fables." "Bodily exercise," also, by which he seems to refer to the voluntary mortifications he had just reprobated, Paul considers of but little value; but he exhorts his son Timothy to exercise himself in those duties of practical religion, which are profitable for our present advancement in religion and happiness, and have attached to them, when performed in a proper spirit, the promise of eternal life. Upon this passage, Mr. Robert Hall remarks, that, "The happiness which religion confers in the present life, consists of the blessings which it scatters by the way, in its march to immortality."

Some difference has arisen among commentators as to the sense in which God—"The living God, is the Saviour of all men, specially of them that believe." "God," (says Dr. Macknight,) preserves both man and beast by the care of his providence; but saves believers from eternal death." (See Job vii. 20. Ps. xxxvi. 6.) Drs. Doddridge and Gill explain to the same effect.

When the apostle adds, "Give attendance to reading, to exhortation, to doctrine," &c. we infer two things—1. That even divine inspiration did not supersede the necessity of human means. They are enthusiasts only who pretend to any divine influences, which may set aside the use of learning; for Timothy, though an evangelist, was to give attendance to reading, and (ver. 15,) to meditate on what he read, for this purpose especially, that his profiting might "appear to all."—2. That both the private studies and public labours of ministers should be directed to the same end; "for in doing this, (says the apostle,) thou shalt both save thyself, and them that hear thee." The salvation of his own soul, is to every man the first and most important object; but the circle of duty enlarges with our connexions. A family binds upon us a multiplied responsibility; but oh! the awful account that numbers of large congregations will have to render, for those who perish through their neglect!

CHAP. V. Ver. 1—25. Timothy advised in his conduct towards elders, and especially females.—As nothing is more difficult to administer than reproof, the young evangelist is advised on this head, to act with the utmost caution and judgment, especially as it respects aged Christians of either sex, treating them as parents, and the younger Christians as brothers and sisters; and all intercourse with the latter is to be conducted with the utmost purity and prudence, the neglect of which has often seriously affected the characters both of ministers and hearers.

With respect to widows, those who have children, or grandchildren, in sufficient circumstances, ought to be maintained by them; but for those who were aged and destitute, the church ought, if possible, to make provision; employing them as deaconesses, to lead the devotions of their own sex in their separate meetings—to visit the sick—and to instruct the young

"In the original of this passage (says Macknight) is the boldest ellipsis found in the New Testament." Doddridge renders it, "Requiring abstinence from marriage, and from (various kinds of) meat."

Ver. 10. Saviour of all men—The meaning is, Christ is offered as the Saviour of all—of all classes of men, Gentiles as well as Jews; but he is actually the Saviour of those only who believe and obey his Gospel. This passage is of the same import with that in John ii. 16.

Ver. 12. In Spirit—This word is wanting in several ancient manuscripts and versions.—Macknight.

Ver. 14. The hands of the presbytery—Who appear to have laid on the hands with Paul; 2 Ti. 1. 6. Compare Acts viii. 17, 19.

CHAP. V. Ver. 1. Rebuke not—Doddridge and Macknight, "Rebuke not severely," not sharply.—An elder.—This is often used as a term of office; but here, as opposed to younger men, it must be taken literally, with respect to age.

Ver. 5. Widows indeed—That is, says Macknight, "desolate"—unable to maintain themselves, and having no relations to maintain them.—Nephews—Doddridge and Macknight, "Grand children."

Ver. 5. Night and day—i. e. continually. See Luke i. 87.

Ver. 6. Liveth in pleasure—Doddridge, "luxuriously." Whitby says, the original term has a particular reference to the drinking of strong and costly liquors.

Ver. 9. The wife of one man—That is, having conformed herself with strict fidelity to her lawful husband, and was not divorced to marry another. So Doddridge and Macknight. It appears, however, that the Pagan Romans paid particular respect to those who refused to marry again, and on some of 10 Well reported of for good works; if she have brought up children, if she have lodged ^h strangers, if she have washed the saints' feet, if she have relieved the afflicted, if she have diligently followed every good work.

11 But the younger widows refuse: for when they have begun to wax wanton against Christ, they will marry;

12 Having damnation, because they have cast off their first faith.

13 And withal they learn to be idle, wandering about from house to house; and ⁱ not only idle, but tattlers also and busy-bodies, speaking things which they ought not.

14 I will therefore that the younger women marry, bear children, guide the house, give none occasion to the adversary ^j to speak reproachfully.

15 For some are already turned aside after Satan.

16 If any man or woman that believeth have widows, let them relieve them, and let not the church be charged; that it may relieve them that are widows indeed.

17 Let ^k the elders that rule well be counted worthy of double honour, especially they who labour in the word and doctrine.

18 For the scripture saith, ^l Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn. And, ^m The labourer is worthy of his reward.

19 Against an elder receive not an accusation, but ⁿ before ^o two or three witnesses.

20 Them that sin rebuke ^p before all, that ^q others also may fear.

21 I charge ^r thee before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, and the elect ^s angels, that thou observe these things ^t without preferring one ^u before another, doing nothing by partiality.

22 Lay hands ^v suddenly on no man, neither be partaker ^w of other men's sins: keep thyself pure.

23 Drink no longer water, but use a little wine ^x for thy stomach's sake and thine often infirmities.

24 Some men's sins are open ^y beforehand, going before to judgment; and some ^z men they follow after.

25 Likewise also the good works of ^a some are manifest beforehand; and they that are otherwise cannot be hid.

CHAPTER VI.

1 Of the duty of servants. 3 Not to have fellowship with new-fangled teachers. 6 Godliness is great gain, 10 and love of money the root of all evil. 11 What Timothy is to flee, and what to follow, 17 and when of to admonish the rich. 20 To keep the purity of true doctrine, and to avoid profane janglings.

LET ^a as many servants ^b as are under the yoke count their own masters worthy of all honour, that the name of God and ^c his doctrine be not blasphemed.

2 And they that have believing masters, let them not despise ^d them, because they are brethren; but rather do ^e them service, because they are ^f faithful and beloved, partakers of the benefit. These things teach and exhort.

3 If any man teach otherwise, and consent not to wholesome ^g words, ^h even the words of our Lord Jesus Christ, and to the doctrine which is according ⁱ to godliness;

4 He is ^j proud, knowing ^k nothing, but ^l boasting about questions and strifes of words, whereof cometh envy, strife, railings, evil surmising,

5 ^m Perverse disputings of men of corrupt minds and destitute of the truth, supposing that gain is godliness: from such ⁿ withdraw thyself.

6 But godliness ^o with contentment is great gain.

7 For we brought nothing into ^p this world, and it is certain ^q we can carry nothing out.

8 And having food and raiment let us be therewith ^r content.

9 But they that will ^s be rich fall into temptation and a snare, and ^t into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition.

10 For ^u the love of money is the root of all females. As to those who lived in pleasure, we do not understand this of pleasures criminal and licentious, but rather of a life of ease and indulgence, which unfitted them for devotion or benevolent exertions: they were, therefore, so far dead while they lived, being useful neither to the church nor to the world.

As to the other sex, if any man refused to provide for his aged and distressed relatives, and especially those of his own household, such a one thereby denied the faith, and was worse than an infidel; that is, worse than if he had never professed Christianity; because it is a practical renunciation of its first and fundamental principle of love.

As to the younger widows, it became the elders to be cautious how they received them as pensioners on the church, lest, after a while, they should not bear the restraints of Christianity, but marry Pagan husbands, and be enticed to desert the Christian faith, and thereby bring condemnation on themselves, and disgrace upon the cause.

The account here given of idle, gossiping females, may suit others besides the women of the apostolical age; and should be a warning to the sex against incurring such a severe reproof. In general we may remark, that great talkers on religion, as well as on other subjects, are seldom persons of much sense or piety. It is the shallow brook that rattles over the pebbles; the full stream flows in silent majesty.

their tombs, inserted these words. Unti vira nuptia—she had only one husband. But that 21 Paul did not consider second marriages unlawful to women, is clear, from his advising them. See Ver 14.

Ver 10. Usque hanc washed the saints' feet.—See Lu. vi. 38–41, and notes.

Ver 11. The younger widows refuse.—That is, to receive them on the pension list, as widows to be supported by the church.—To wax wanton against Christ.—MacKnight. When they caught and endure Christ's rem. He says the original term is a metaphor, taken from high bred animals, who cannot bear the reins. Glossins and Le Clerc translate it, "Who do not obey the reins."

Ver 12. Having damnation.—Doddridge. "Exposing themselves to condemnation." MacKnight. "Incurring condemnation."—Cast off their first faith.—That is, their fidelity to Christ, phrased when they assumed the office of Christian teachers; so MacKnight. But, perhaps, to cast off their first faith, was only to "leave their first love," and lose their zeal. Compare Rev. ii. 4.

Ver 13. Speaking things which they ought not.—That is, revealing family secrets.

Ver 14. The younger women.—Instead of women, which word is not in the original, Doddridge and MacKnight adopt widows, from ver. 11, which therefore warrants, in such cases, second marriages on the female side.—To speak reproachfully.—i. e. concerning Christ or Christianity.

Ver 17. The elders that rule well.—Doddridge and MacKnight, "preside well;" especially they who labour in the word and doctrine—i. e. who are

The duty of children to provide for their necessitous and infirm parents, is here strongly inculcated; as is that also of churches to provide a liberal and honourable support for their pastors.

The two last verses mark the opposite characters of mankind, in respect to their natural dispositions. Some are so naturally frank and open, that whether they incline to good or evil, their characters are easily discern'd. If they are vicious and profane, they are openly so, and they proclaim their own shame and condemnation; while the sins of others are more secret and reserved, and are only manifest in the event. So, on the other hand, some men's good works are equally open to public observation, and cast a kind of glory round their characters; while those of a more modest and reserved turn, "do good by stealth, and blush to find it fame."

They cannot, however, eventually be concealed; what they now do in secret, shall in the last day be openly acknowledged and rewarded.

CHAP. VI. Ver. 1–21. Exhortation to servants.—Directions to Timothy. Cautions against covetousness and worldly-mindedness.—The exhortation to slaves and other servants, is very similar to that given to those among the Colossians (chap. iii. 22) with this additional charge, not to take any advantage of their masters, as being fellow Christians, so as to active and infamous preachers.—Worthy of double honour.—That is, a proportionate income.

Ver. 19. Put before.—Margis, "under;" i. e. under the testimony of, &c. Ver. 20. Them that sin.—That is, that sin scandalously, so as to bring reproach on the cause, let them be publicly rebuked, to warn others. Ver. 21. The first angels.—Those who having kept their stations when Satan and his adherents fell, are now fixed in permanent felicity by the divine decree. So Doddridge.

Ver. 22. Lay hands suddenly on no man.—That is, according to Doddridge and MacKnight, "Onlay no one to a sacred office hastily, or without due inquiry and examination."

Ver. 23. Drink no longer water.—That is, water alone; but mix wine with it. The Greeks often mingled their wine with water in different proportions.

CHAP. VI. Ver. 1. Under the yoke.—i. e. of bondage, or in actual slavery. Ver. 2. Because they are faithful.—i. e. fellow Christians.—Partakers of the benefit.—i. e. of Christianity.

Ver. 3. The words of our Lord Jesus.—All the precepts which the apostle delivered by inspiration being the precepts of Christ, there is no occasion to suppose that he here referred to some precepts which he delivered while on earth.

Ver. 4. Dotings.—MacKnight, "distempered." Doddridge, "raving."

Ver. 7. We brought nothing into this world, &c.—See Eccles. v. 15.

evil which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows.

11 But thou, O man of God, flee these things; and follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, meekness.

12 Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life, whereunto thou art also called, and hast professed a good profession before many witnesses.

13 I give thee charge in the sight of God, who quickeneth all things, and before Christ Jesus, who before Pontius Pilate witnessed a good confession;

14 That thou keep this commandment without spot, unrebukable, until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ:

15 Which in his times he shall show, who is the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords;

16 Who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto;

A M. 1068.
A D. 65.
O r. r. bren
P. 18, 36.
g 2 Th 17.
f He 13 23.
e 6 21.
J. 18, 36.
u or, profession.
y Ph 2 15.
w 1 Th 5 23.
x c 1 17.
y He 17 14.
z Re 1 16.
a Ex 33 20.
b Job 25 5.
c Re 1 6.
d Ps 62 10.
e The uncertainty of.
f Ec 5 18.
g or, socia-
lity.
h Ph 3 14.
i Th 1 11.
j 2 Th 2 18.

whom no man hath seen, nor can see; to whom be honour and power everlasting. Amen.

17 Charge them that are rich in this world, that they be not high-minded, nor trust in uncertain riches, but in the living God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy;

18 That they do good, that they be rich in good works, ready to distribute, willing to communicate;

19 Laying up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come, that they may lay hold on eternal life.

20 O Timothy, keep that which is committed to thy trust, avoiding profane and vain babblings, and oppositions of science falsely so called:

21 Which some professing have erred concerning the faith. Grace be with thee. Amen.

¶ The first to Timothy was written from Laodicea, which is the chiefest city of Phrygia Pacatiana.

treat them with less respect or attention, because they were the more kind and lenient.

St. Paul then charges Timothy to urge upon his hearers the great and important interests of practical religion, and, in particular, to adhere strictly to "the doctrine which is according to godliness;" from an assurance, that all doctrines which have not a decided bearing in favour of Christian practice, are no part of Christianity. On the contrary, they have a tendency to engender strife and perverse disputings, which gratify men of corrupt and worldly dispositions, whose religion is to get money, and to whom "gain is godliness;" whereas the contrary is the fact, namely, that "Godliness, especially when linked with contentment, is great and certain gain." And why should we be discontented? "For we brought nothing into this world, (with us,) and it is certain we can carry nothing out;" and well it is we cannot; for if mankind could carry their wealth with them, this would be a poor world indeed! "Having (then) food and raiment, let us be therewith content;" and this content, which makes us happy here, together with vital godliness, which ensures to us "another and a better world," may well be reckoned great, accumulated, and eternal gain!

But as to those who are determined to be rich at all adventures, what do they eventually gain thereby? "They fall into many foolish and hurtful lusts." Indeed, there is no crime into which the love of money does not lead—no misery into which it does not, at one time or other, involve those afflicted with this dangerous mania; in short, "The love of money is the root of all evil."

"Money (says the pious Mrs. More) is the most efficient tool with which ambition works; it is the engine of political mischief, and of domestic oppression; the instrument of individual tyranny, and of universal corruption. Money is the elemental principle of pleasure; it is the magnet which, to the lover of flattery, attracts parasites; which the vain man loves for the circle it describes about him, and the train which it draws after him, even more than for the actual enjoyments which it procures him. It is the grand spring and fountain of pride and self-sufficiency, more especially to those who have nothing better to value themselves upon."—(Mrs. More's St. Paul, ch. xiv.)

Beautiful and animated is the apostrophe that follows:—"But thou, O man of God, flee these things"—pride, strife, covetousness, and the other evils he had enumerated—"Fight the good fight of faith;" and then, having thereby conquered, "lay hold of eternal life," as the gracious reward promised by the Almighty Judge.

This chapter, and the Epistle, concludes with a solemn charge to Timothy, in the sight of God, and of our Lord Jesus Christ, not to flinch from his duty as a faithful minister of the gospel; but to charge the "rich in this world," that they be not proud, nor high-minded, nor trust in uncertain riches, which often "make to themselves wings and fly away." To prevent this, the rich are admonished to distribute their wealth liberally while they have it at command; and thereby to "lay up for themselves," as our Lord expresses it, "treasures in heaven," that when all earthly blessings fail them, they may "lay hold on eternal life!"

Ver 10. They have erred.—Dodgridge, "wandered."
Ver 12. Professed a good profession.—Dodgridge, "Confessed a good confession."
Ver 13. A good confession.—The word is the same as in the verse preceding. See John xviii 37.
Ver 15. Which in his times he shall show.—Dodgridge, "manifest." See Acts 1 7.
Ver 16. Light which no man can approach unto.—Dodgridge and Macknight, "light inaccessible."
Ver 18. Willing to communicate.—i. e. communicative; but the context evidently confines the word to charitable communications.
Ver 19. Laying up in store.—Dodgridge, "treasuring up."—That they may lay hold.—The expression here, as in ver 12, is evidently agonistic, and refers to grasping the prize which was the reward of victory.

Ver 20. That which is committed to thy trust.—Namely, the gospel.—Science falsely so called.—The word here rendered science, (gnusces.) in the following century gave rise to a sect famous (or rather infamous) in Ecclesiastical history, called Gnostics, or knowing ones, because they pretended to know more than any other Christians; and it has been surmised, from this text, that the sect was now rising to public notice.
Ver 21. Have erred concerning the faith.—It was the desire of being wiser than man was designed to be, that seduced our first mother, Eve, and misled mankind (Gen in 6.) And the same principle has led our sons into dangerous errors, in every successive generation. The sect, or rather sects, of the Gnostics, (for they were much divided,) led them into speculations concerning the divines, (or gods.) whom they took for a kind of intelligences emanating from the Deity, which notion was the parent of a thousand foolish fancies.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE FIRST EPISTLE TO TIMOTHY.

[THIS Epistle bears the impress of its genuineness and authenticity, which are corroborated by the most decisive external evidence; and its divine inspiration is attested by the exact accomplishment of the prediction which it contains respecting the apostasy in the latter days. This prophecy is similar in the general subject to that in the second Epistle to the Thessalonians, though it differs in the particular circumstances; and exactly corresponds with that of the prophet Daniel on the same subject: Dan. vi 38]—Bagster.

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO TIMOTHY.

[THAT this Epistle was written by St. Paul when a prisoner is sufficiently evident from chap. i 8, 12, 16; ii 9; and that it was while he was imprisoned at Rome, is universally admitted. That it was not written during his first confinement, is evinced in Acts xxviii, as Hammond, Lightfoot, and Layard suppose, but during a second imprisonment there, and not long before he suffered martyrdom, as Renshaw, Macknight, Paley, and Clarke, Bishop Tomline, Michaelis, Rosenmüller, and Hoine, contend, is amply proved by the following considerations:—in his last imprisonment "he dwelt two whole years in his own hired house, and received all that came to him, preaching the kingdom of God, and teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus with all confidence, no man forbidding him;" but at the time he wrote this Epistle, he was closely imprisoned as one guilty of a capital crime, so that Onesiphorus, on his arrival at Rome, had considerable difficulty in finding him out, and his situation at this time was extremely dangerous. At his first confinement at Rome, Timothy was with St. Paul, and is joined with him in writing to the Colossians, Philippians, and Philemon; but the present Epistle implies that he was absent. At the former period, Demas was with him; but now he had forsaken him, having loved this present world, and gone to Thessalonica. St. Mark was also then with him; but in the present Epistle Timothy is ordered to bring him with him. In the former Epistles, the Apostle confidently looked forward to his liberation, and speedy departure from Rome. (Philem. ii 24. Philem. 22.) but in the Epistle before us he holds extremely different language. "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand." I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day." From these observations, to which others might, and have been added, we may conclude, that this Epistle was written while St. Paul was in imprisonment the second time at Rome, and but a short time before his martyrdom; and, as it is generally agreed that this took place on the 29th of June, A. D. 65, and as the Apostle requests Timothy to come to him before winter, it is probable that it was written in the summer of A. D. 65. It is generally supposed, that Timothy resided at Ephesus when St. Paul wrote this Epistle to him; which appears very probable, though not certain.]—Bagster.

CHAPTER I.

Paul's love to Timothy, and the undigned faith which was in Timothy himself, his mother, and grandmother. 6 He is exhorted to stir up the gift of God which was in him, to be stedfast, and patient in persecution, 13 and to persist in the form and truth of that doctrine which he had learned of him. 15 Phygellus and Hermogenes, and such like, are noted, and Onesiphorus is highly commended.

PAUL, an apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God, according to the promise of life which is in Christ Jesus,

2 To Timothy, my dearly beloved son: Grace, mercy, and peace, from God the Father and Christ Jesus our Lord.

3 I thank God, whom I serve from my forefathers with pure conscience, that without ceasing I have remembrance of thee in my prayers night and day;

4 Greatly desiring to see thee, being mindful of thy tears, that I may be filled with joy;

5 When I call to remembrance the unfeigned faith that is in thee, which dwelt first in thy grandmother Lois, and thy mother Eunice; and I am persuaded that in thee also.

6 Wherefore I put thee in remembrance that thou stir up the gift of God, which is in thee by the putting on of my hands.

7 For God hath not given us the spirit of fear; but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind.

8 Be not thou therefore ashamed of the testimony of our Lord, nor of me his prisoner: but be thou partaker of the afflictions of the gospel according to the power of God;

9 Who hath saved us, and called us with a holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began;

A. M. cir.
4093
A. D. cir.
65

a Ep 3.6.

b 1 Ti 1.6.

c Ac 23.1.

d He 13.18.

e c 9.21.

f 1 Ti 1.6.

g Ac 16.1.

h 1 Ti 4.11.

i Ro 8.15.

j 1 Jo 4.17.

k Lu 21.49.

l Col 1.21.

m 1 Ma 1.21.

n Ro 8.23.

o 2 Ti 3.5.

p He 7.7.

q 1 Ti 4.11.

r Ep 1.4.

s 1 Pe 1.20.

t 1 Co 15.51.

u 2 Jo 5.24.

v Ro 1.16.

w or, trust.

x 1 Pe 4.19.

y Re 2.25.

z 1 Jo 6.17.

a 1 Ti 6.3.

b 1 Ti 6.20.

c Ac 19.10.

d c 14.16.

e c 4.19.

f Ac 24.20.

g Mat 25.24.

h 40.

i He 6.10.

j Jos 1.7.

k Ep 1.10.

10 But is now made manifest by the appearing of our Saviour Jesus Christ, who hath abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel:

11 Whereunto I am appointed a preacher, and an apostle, and a teacher of the Gentiles.

12 For the which cause I also suffer these things; nevertheless I am not ashamed: for I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day.

13 Hold fast the form of sound words, which thou hast heard of me, in faith and love which is in Christ Jesus.

14 That good thing which was committed unto thee keep by the Holy Ghost which dwelleth in us.

15 This thou knowest, that all they which are in Asia be turned away from me; of whom are Phygellus and Hermogenes.

16 The Lord give mercy unto the house of Onesiphorus; for he oft refreshed me, and was not ashamed of my chain:

17 But, when he was in Rome, he sought me out very diligently, and found me.

18 The Lord grant unto him that he may find mercy of the Lord in that day: and in how many things he ministered unto me at Ephesus, thou knowest very well.

CHAPTER II.

1 He is exhorted again to constancy in perseverance, and to do the duty of a faithful servant of the Lord in dwelling the word aright, and shewing private and vain holdings. 17 Of Hymeneus and Phileas. 18 The foundation of the Lord's sure. 22 He is taught whereof to beware, and what to follow after, and in what sort the servant of the Lord ought to behave himself.

THOU therefore, my son, be strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus.

CHAP. I. Ver. 1-18. Timothy's education in the principles of the gospel, in which he is exhorted to persevere.—In our Table of Paul's Epistles, we have followed Horne, and other respectable authorities, in placing this the last, and only just before his martyrdom, in A. D. 65, as himself intimates, (chap. iv. 6.) It was, therefore, written during his last imprisonment at Rome, with many other Christians, under the presence of their setting fire to the city, though Nero well enough knew, as all the world have long since known, that he was himself the criminal.

In the opening of the former Epistle, we have noticed the origin of Timothy, with the conversion of his mother and grandmother; and we here learn the pious education which he had received under their instruction, which had been sanctified to promote his growth in knowledge and in grace. Timothy, however, it should seem, was naturally meek and timid, and perhaps rather backward in exposing himself to danger; the apostle therefore animates and encourages him by several important considerations:—1. Jesus Christ has "witnessed a good confession," when he stood at the bar of Pilate on our account, and shall we be ashamed to bear testimony to him, or to confirm and ratify his word? 2. Consider the love of God, "who hath saved us, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace in Christ Jesus, before the world began;" shall we not value and return love and grace thus ancient and distinguishing? 3. Recollect what our Saviour Jesus Christ has done for us; he has encountered all the powers of hell on our behalf; he "hath (virtually) abolished death, and brought life and immortality to light." 4. Remember, also, I Paul am a prisoner, ready to fill up "whatever is behind of the sufferings of Christ;" ready to be offered up in sacrifice on the altar of martyrdom; and wilt thou, my son Timothy, be partaker with me in my afflictions? Thou knowest I am suffering, though wrongfully, as a criminal; but I am not ashamed, for I know in whom I have believed, and am persuaded that Christ is able to keep that which I have committed to him against that day—namely, ly, when he shall appear the second time to judgment. But what is it which the apostle had committed into the hands of Christ? "I think, (says Dr. Watts.) there is no need to limit or confine the trust; all that belongs to poor sinful man, which God the Father had appointed Christ to take care of, may be included in this depositum, this important trust. I have committed my whole person, soul and body, with all my spiritual concerns in this world, and all my everlasting interests in the world to come, into the hands of Christ; my soul, and the affairs of my eternity; and this the apostle seems to have chiefly in his eye, because he was now ready to leave the body, and this present life." So Christ, on the cross, commits his soul into the hands of his Father, (Luke xxiii. 46;) and so Stephen, the first martyr, (Acts vii. 59. Watts Evan. Disc. ix.) Some, however, think the apostle alludes rather to the gospel—to that sacred deposit which had been committed into his hands, and which he was now ready to transfer into the hands of Christ; and this may certainly be included.

The apostle then exhorts Timothy to "hold fast the form of sound words"—the system of divine truth, which he had received from him, and to cherish those extraordinary gifts of the Holy Spirit which had also been received by his means. He then lauds that the brethren of Asia had deserted him, in a cowardly manner, in his extremity, (two of them in particular;) but affectionately acknowledges the kindness of Onesiphorus, who, when he came to Rome, diligently inquired him out, visited him in prison, and was not ashamed of his chain.

Of Onesiphorus we know nothing but what is here mentioned; that, out of attachment to St. Paul and to his cause, he carefully sought him out, while others were afraid to own him, and was not ashamed either of his poverty or his chain, but ministered to him with great kindness, both in Ephesus and in Rome. In return for this, the apostle implored mercy for him, and a blessing upon his family, who were probably numerous and kind also.

CHAP. II. Ver. 1-26. Timothy exhorted to perseverance and fidelity.—This is done in allusion to three laborious pro-

the gospel throws the full beams of the Sun of righteousness on this doctrine, and renders it resplendent and illustrious. Some, however, translate the Greek word, apophthegma, not immortality, but instruction—(see Parkhurst)—and refer it to the doctrine of a Resurrection, at which, indeed, the heathen were wholly ignorant, and which was rejected by many of the Jews; but it was clearly revealed in the gospel, and an example of it exhibited in the person of Jesus Christ.

Ver. 13. The form of sound words.—The word properly signifies (as Macler explains) the first sketch of an artist; and Archbishop Tillotson explains it of the profession of faith then usually made at baptism; but we should rather consider it as referring to the great and essential principles of the gospel.

Ver. 15. All they which are in Asia.—That is, in the district round Ephesus where Timothy now resided. The Asiatics, who were proverbially covetous, some of them had probably attended upon Paul at Rome, but had left him at finding themselves in danger with him.—Phygellus and Hermogenes.—Of these men we know nothing more than what is here recorded; but they were, perhaps, well known to Timothy.

CHAP. I. Ver. 3. From my forefathers.—Paul was always an upright, conscientious man, even when a persecutor.

Ver. 6. Stir up.—The expression is metaphorical, and may allude to the priests stirring up the embers on the sacred altar. Lord Barnington explains it of bringing the embers to life.—By the putting on of my hands.—See 1 Tim. iv. 11.

Ver. 7. The spirit of fear.—See Doddridge, "Not a spirit of cowardice, but of courage."

Ver. 9. Who hath saved us.—See Rom. viii. 98-30.

Ver. 10. Who hath abolished death.—Death was virtually abolished by bringing life and immortality to light. So the rising sun dispels the darkness, not all at once, but as it increases in strength and glory; for, as to its final abolition, "the last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." 1 Cor. xv. 26.

—And brought life and immortality to light.—"Life and immortality," as Thibaut remarks, "is a Hebrewism for 'eternal life.'" It cannot be found that not only the Jews, but many of the heathen also, had antiently a future state; but they were comparatively defective and obscure; and the latter, at least, may be compared to moonshine—faint and cold; but

2 And the things that thou hast heard of me among many witnesses, the same commit thou to faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also.

3 Thou therefore endure hardness, as a good soldier of Jesus Christ.

4 No man that warreth entanglieth himself with the affairs of this life; that he may please him who hath chosen him to be a soldier.

5 And if a man also strive for masteries, yet is he not crowned, except he strive lawfully.

6 The husbandman that laboureth must be first partaker of the fruits.

7 Consider what I say; and the Lord give thee understanding in all things.

8 Remember that Jesus Christ, of the seed of David, was raised from the dead according to my gospel:

9 Wherein I suffer trouble, as an evil-doer, even unto bonds; but the word of God is not bound.

10 Therefore I endure all things for the elect's sake, that they may also obtain the salvation which is in Christ Jesus with eternal glory.

11 It is a faithful saying: For if we be dead with him, we shall also live with him:

12 If we suffer, we shall also reign with him: if we deny him, he also will deny us:

13 If we believe not, yet he abideth faithful: he cannot deny himself.

14 Of these things put them in remembrance, charging them before the Lord that they strive not about words to no profit, but to the subverting of the hearers.

A. M. 4068
D. C. 65
h. cor. 14
e. 1 Ti 1:13
d. 1 Ti 1:13
e. 4:13
f. 1 Ti 2:25
26
g. Ingearing for Christ
he partakes
h. 1 Ti 4:15
i. 1 Ti 2:6
j. 1 Ti 1:3, 4
k. 2 Ti 2:24
l. 2 Ti 1:6
m. Ro 8:5, 8
n. Mat. 10:33
o. Ro 3:3
p. Na 2:19
q. 2 Ti 1:13
r. 2 Ti 3:10
s. 2 Ti 1:10
t. Mat 13:32
u. 1 Ti 2:25
v. 1 Ti 2:21
w. 1 Ti 4:14
x. 1 Ti 2:25
y. or, deny
z. Na 1:7
aa. 1 Ti 1:3
ab. 1 Ti 1:3
ac. 1 Ti 2:10
ad. Ro 9:1
ae. 1 Ti 1:10
af. 1 Ti 2:21
ag. 1 Ti 4:14
ah. 1 Ti 2:25
ai. or, deny
aj. 1 Ti 1:3
ak. 1 Ti 1:3
al. 1 Ti 2:10
am. 1 Ti 1:3
an. 1 Ti 1:3
ao. 1 Ti 2:10
ap. 1 Ti 1:3
aq. 1 Ti 1:3
ar. 1 Ti 2:10
as. 1 Ti 1:3
at. 1 Ti 1:3
au. 1 Ti 2:10
av. 1 Ti 1:3
aw. 1 Ti 1:3
ax. 1 Ti 2:10
ay. 1 Ti 1:3
az. 1 Ti 1:3
ba. 1 Ti 2:10
bb. 1 Ti 1:3
bc. 1 Ti 1:3
bd. 1 Ti 2:10
be. 1 Ti 1:3
bf. 1 Ti 1:3
bg. 1 Ti 2:10
bh. 1 Ti 1:3
bi. 1 Ti 1:3
bj. 1 Ti 2:10
bk. 1 Ti 1:3
bl. 1 Ti 1:3
bm. 1 Ti 2:10
bn. 1 Ti 1:3
bo. 1 Ti 1:3
bp. 1 Ti 2:10
bq. 1 Ti 1:3
br. 1 Ti 1:3
bs. 1 Ti 2:10
bt. 1 Ti 1:3
bu. 1 Ti 1:3
bv. 1 Ti 2:10
bw. 1 Ti 1:3
bx. 1 Ti 1:3
by. 1 Ti 2:10
bz. 1 Ti 1:3
ca. 1 Ti 1:3
cb. 1 Ti 2:10
cc. 1 Ti 1:3
cd. 1 Ti 1:3
ce. 1 Ti 2:10
cf. 1 Ti 1:3
cg. 1 Ti 1:3
ch. 1 Ti 2:10
ci. 1 Ti 1:3
cj. 1 Ti 1:3
ck. 1 Ti 2:10
cl. 1 Ti 1:3
cm. 1 Ti 1:3
cn. 1 Ti 2:10
co. 1 Ti 1:3
cp. 1 Ti 1:3
cq. 1 Ti 2:10
cr. 1 Ti 1:3
cs. 1 Ti 1:3
ct. 1 Ti 2:10
cu. 1 Ti 1:3
cv. 1 Ti 1:3
cw. 1 Ti 2:10
cx. 1 Ti 1:3
cy. 1 Ti 1:3
cz. 1 Ti 2:10
da. 1 Ti 1:3
db. 1 Ti 1:3
dc. 1 Ti 2:10
dd. 1 Ti 1:3
de. 1 Ti 1:3
df. 1 Ti 2:10
dg. 1 Ti 1:3
dh. 1 Ti 1:3
di. 1 Ti 2:10
dj. 1 Ti 1:3
dk. 1 Ti 1:3
dl. 1 Ti 2:10
dm. 1 Ti 1:3
dn. 1 Ti 1:3
do. 1 Ti 2:10
dp. 1 Ti 1:3
dq. 1 Ti 1:3
dr. 1 Ti 2:10
ds. 1 Ti 1:3
dt. 1 Ti 1:3
du. 1 Ti 2:10
dv. 1 Ti 1:3
dw. 1 Ti 1:3
dx. 1 Ti 2:10
dy. 1 Ti 1:3
dz. 1 Ti 1:3
ea. 1 Ti 2:10
eb. 1 Ti 1:3
ec. 1 Ti 1:3
ed. 1 Ti 2:10
ee. 1 Ti 1:3
ef. 1 Ti 1:3
eg. 1 Ti 2:10
eh. 1 Ti 1:3
ei. 1 Ti 1:3
ej. 1 Ti 2:10
ek. 1 Ti 1:3
el. 1 Ti 1:3
em. 1 Ti 2:10
en. 1 Ti 1:3
eo. 1 Ti 1:3
ep. 1 Ti 2:10
eq. 1 Ti 1:3
er. 1 Ti 1:3
es. 1 Ti 2:10
et. 1 Ti 1:3
eu. 1 Ti 1:3
ev. 1 Ti 2:10
ew. 1 Ti 1:3
ex. 1 Ti 1:3
ey. 1 Ti 2:10
ez. 1 Ti 1:3
fa. 1 Ti 1:3
fb. 1 Ti 2:10
fc. 1 Ti 1:3
fd. 1 Ti 1:3
fe. 1 Ti 2:10
ff. 1 Ti 1:3
fg. 1 Ti 1:3
fh. 1 Ti 2:10
fi. 1 Ti 1:3
fj. 1 Ti 1:3
fk. 1 Ti 2:10
fl. 1 Ti 1:3
fm. 1 Ti 1:3
fn. 1 Ti 2:10
fo. 1 Ti 1:3
fp. 1 Ti 1:3
fq. 1 Ti 2:10
fr. 1 Ti 1:3
fs. 1 Ti 1:3
ft. 1 Ti 2:10
fu. 1 Ti 1:3
fv. 1 Ti 1:3
fw. 1 Ti 2:10
fx. 1 Ti 1:3
fy. 1 Ti 1:3
fz. 1 Ti 2:10
ga. 1 Ti 1:3
gb. 1 Ti 2:10
gc. 1 Ti 1:3
gd. 1 Ti 1:3
ge. 1 Ti 2:10
gf. 1 Ti 1:3
gg. 1 Ti 1:3
gh. 1 Ti 2:10
gi. 1 Ti 1:3
gj. 1 Ti 1:3
gk. 1 Ti 2:10
gl. 1 Ti 1:3
gm. 1 Ti 1:3
gn. 1 Ti 2:10
go. 1 Ti 1:3
gp. 1 Ti 1:3
gq. 1 Ti 2:10
gr. 1 Ti 1:3
gs. 1 Ti 1:3
gt. 1 Ti 2:10
gu. 1 Ti 1:3
gv. 1 Ti 1:3
gw. 1 Ti 2:10
gx. 1 Ti 1:3
gy. 1 Ti 1:3
gz. 1 Ti 2:10
ha. 1 Ti 1:3
hb. 1 Ti 2:10
hc. 1 Ti 1:3
hd. 1 Ti 1:3
he. 1 Ti 2:10
hf. 1 Ti 1:3
hg. 1 Ti 1:3
hh. 1 Ti 2:10
hi. 1 Ti 1:3
hj. 1 Ti 1:3
hk. 1 Ti 2:10
hl. 1 Ti 1:3
hm. 1 Ti 1:3
hn. 1 Ti 2:10
ho. 1 Ti 1:3
hp. 1 Ti 1:3
hq. 1 Ti 2:10
hr. 1 Ti 1:3
hs. 1 Ti 1:3
ht. 1 Ti 2:10
hu. 1 Ti 1:3
hv. 1 Ti 1:3
hw. 1 Ti 2:10
hx. 1 Ti 1:3
hy. 1 Ti 1:3
hz. 1 Ti 2:10
ia. 1 Ti 1:3
ib. 1 Ti 2:10
ic. 1 Ti 1:3
id. 1 Ti 1:3
ie. 1 Ti 2:10
if. 1 Ti 1:3
ig. 1 Ti 1:3
ih. 1 Ti 2:10
ii. 1 Ti 1:3
ij. 1 Ti 1:3
ik. 1 Ti 2:10
il. 1 Ti 1:3
im. 1 Ti 1:3
in. 1 Ti 2:10
io. 1 Ti 1:3
ip. 1 Ti 1:3
iq. 1 Ti 2:10
ir. 1 Ti 1:3
is. 1 Ti 1:3
it. 1 Ti 2:10
iu. 1 Ti 1:3
iv. 1 Ti 1:3
iw. 1 Ti 2:10
ix. 1 Ti 1:3
iy. 1 Ti 1:3
iz. 1 Ti 2:10
ja. 1 Ti 1:3
jb. 1 Ti 2:10
jc. 1 Ti 1:3
jd. 1 Ti 1:3
je. 1 Ti 2:10
jf. 1 Ti 1:3
jg. 1 Ti 1:3
jh. 1 Ti 2:10
ji. 1 Ti 1:3
jj. 1 Ti 1:3
jk. 1 Ti 2:10
jl. 1 Ti 1:3
jm. 1 Ti 1:3
jn. 1 Ti 2:10
jo. 1 Ti 1:3
jp. 1 Ti 1:3
jq. 1 Ti 2:10
jr. 1 Ti 1:3
js. 1 Ti 1:3
jt. 1 Ti 2:10
ju. 1 Ti 1:3
jv. 1 Ti 1:3
jw. 1 Ti 2:10
jx. 1 Ti 1:3
jy. 1 Ti 1:3
jz. 1 Ti 2:10
ka. 1 Ti 1:3
kb. 1 Ti 2:10
kc. 1 Ti 1:3
kd. 1 Ti 1:3
ke. 1 Ti 2:10
kf. 1 Ti 1:3
kg. 1 Ti 1:3
kh. 1 Ti 2:10
ki. 1 Ti 1:3
kj. 1 Ti 1:3
kk. 1 Ti 2:10
kl. 1 Ti 1:3
km. 1 Ti 1:3
kn. 1 Ti 2:10
ko. 1 Ti 1:3
kp. 1 Ti 1:3
kq. 1 Ti 2:10
kr. 1 Ti 1:3
ks. 1 Ti 1:3
kt. 1 Ti 2:10
ku. 1 Ti 1:3
kv. 1 Ti 1:3
kw. 1 Ti 2:10
kx. 1 Ti 1:3
ky. 1 Ti 1:3
kz. 1 Ti 2:10
la. 1 Ti 1:3
lb. 1 Ti 2:10
lc. 1 Ti 1:3
ld. 1 Ti 1:3
le. 1 Ti 2:10
lf. 1 Ti 1:3
lg. 1 Ti 1:3
lh. 1 Ti 2:10
li. 1 Ti 1:3
lj. 1 Ti 1:3
lk. 1 Ti 2:10
ll. 1 Ti 1:3
lm. 1 Ti 1:3
ln. 1 Ti 2:10
lo. 1 Ti 1:3
lp. 1 Ti 1:3
lq. 1 Ti 2:10
lr. 1 Ti 1:3
ls. 1 Ti 1:3
lt. 1 Ti 2:10
lu. 1 Ti 1:3
lv. 1 Ti 1:3
lw. 1 Ti 2:10
lx. 1 Ti 1:3
ly. 1 Ti 1:3
lz. 1 Ti 2:10
ma. 1 Ti 1:3
mb. 1 Ti 2:10
mc. 1 Ti 1:3
md. 1 Ti 1:3
me. 1 Ti 2:10
mf. 1 Ti 1:3
mg. 1 Ti 1:3
mh. 1 Ti 2:10
mi. 1 Ti 1:3
mj. 1 Ti 1:3
mk. 1 Ti 2:10
ml. 1 Ti 1:3
mm. 1 Ti 1:3
mn. 1 Ti 2:10
mo. 1 Ti 1:3
mp. 1 Ti 1:3
mq. 1 Ti 2:10
mr. 1 Ti 1:3
ms. 1 Ti 1:3
mt. 1 Ti 2:10
mu. 1 Ti 1:3
mv. 1 Ti 1:3
mw. 1 Ti 2:10
mx. 1 Ti 1:3
my. 1 Ti 1:3
mz. 1 Ti 2:10
na. 1 Ti 1:3
nb. 1 Ti 2:10
nc. 1 Ti 1:3
nd. 1 Ti 1:3
ne. 1 Ti 2:10
nf. 1 Ti 1:3
ng. 1 Ti 1:3
nh. 1 Ti 2:10
ni. 1 Ti 1:3
nj. 1 Ti 1:3
nk. 1 Ti 2:10
nl. 1 Ti 1:3
nm. 1 Ti 1:3
nn. 1 Ti 2:10
no. 1 Ti 1:3
np. 1 Ti 1:3
nq. 1 Ti 2:10
nr. 1 Ti 1:3
ns. 1 Ti 1:3
nt. 1 Ti 2:10
nu. 1 Ti 1:3
nv. 1 Ti 1:3
nw. 1 Ti 2:10
nx. 1 Ti 1:3
ny. 1 Ti 1:3
nz. 1 Ti 2:10
oa. 1 Ti 1:3
ob. 1 Ti 2:10
oc. 1 Ti 1:3
od. 1 Ti 1:3
oe. 1 Ti 2:10
of. 1 Ti 1:3
og. 1 Ti 1:3
oh. 1 Ti 2:10
oi. 1 Ti 1:3
oj. 1 Ti 1:3
ok. 1 Ti 2:10
ol. 1 Ti 1:3
om. 1 Ti 1:3
on. 1 Ti 2:10
oo. 1 Ti 1:3
op. 1 Ti 1:3
oq. 1 Ti 2:10
or. 1 Ti 1:3
os. 1 Ti 1:3
ot. 1 Ti 2:10
ou. 1 Ti 1:3
ov. 1 Ti 1:3
ow. 1 Ti 2:10
ox. 1 Ti 1:3
oy. 1 Ti 1:3
oz. 1 Ti 2:10
pa. 1 Ti 1:3
pb. 1 Ti 2:10
pc. 1 Ti 1:3
pd. 1 Ti 1:3
pe. 1 Ti 2:10
pf. 1 Ti 1:3
pg. 1 Ti 1:3
ph. 1 Ti 2:10
pi. 1 Ti 1:3
pj. 1 Ti 1:3
pk. 1 Ti 2:10
pl. 1 Ti 1:3
pm. 1 Ti 1:3
pn. 1 Ti 2:10
po. 1 Ti 1:3
pp. 1 Ti 1:3
pq. 1 Ti 2:10
pr. 1 Ti 1:3
ps. 1 Ti 1:3
pt. 1 Ti 2:10
pu. 1 Ti 1:3
pv. 1 Ti 1:3
pw. 1 Ti 2:10
px. 1 Ti 1:3
py. 1 Ti 1:3
pz. 1 Ti 2:10
qa. 1 Ti 1:3
qb. 1 Ti 2:10
qc. 1 Ti 1:3
qd. 1 Ti 1:3
qe. 1 Ti 2:10
qf. 1 Ti 1:3
qg. 1 Ti 1:3
qh. 1 Ti 2:10
qi. 1 Ti 1:3
qj. 1 Ti 1:3
qk. 1 Ti 2:10
ql. 1 Ti 1:3
qm. 1 Ti 1:3
qn. 1 Ti 2:10
qo. 1 Ti 1:3
qp. 1 Ti 1:3
qq. 1 Ti 2:10
qr. 1 Ti 1:3
qs. 1 Ti 1:3
qt. 1 Ti 2:10
qu. 1 Ti 1:3
qv. 1 Ti 1:3
qw. 1 Ti 2:10
qx. 1 Ti 1:3
qy. 1 Ti 1:3
qz. 1 Ti 2:10
ra. 1 Ti 1:3
rb. 1 Ti 2:10
rc. 1 Ti 1:3
rd. 1 Ti 1:3
re. 1 Ti 2:10
rf. 1 Ti 1:3
rg. 1 Ti 1:3
rh. 1 Ti 2:10
ri. 1 Ti 1:3
rj. 1 Ti 1:3
rk. 1 Ti 2:10
rl. 1 Ti 1:3
rm. 1 Ti 1:3
rn. 1 Ti 2:10
ro. 1 Ti 1:3
rp. 1 Ti 1:3
rq. 1 Ti 2:10
rr. 1 Ti 1:3
rs. 1 Ti 1:3
rt. 1 Ti 2:10
ru. 1 Ti 1:3
rv. 1 Ti 1:3
rw. 1 Ti 2:10
rx. 1 Ti 1:3
ry. 1 Ti 1:3
rz. 1 Ti 2:10
sa. 1 Ti 1:3
sb. 1 Ti 2:10
sc. 1 Ti 1:3
sd. 1 Ti 1:3
se. 1 Ti 2:10
sf. 1 Ti 1:3
sg. 1 Ti 1:3
sh. 1 Ti 2:10
si. 1 Ti 1:3
sj. 1 Ti 1:3
sk. 1 Ti 2:10
sl. 1 Ti 1:3
sm. 1 Ti 1:3
sn. 1 Ti 2:10
so. 1 Ti 1:3
sp. 1 Ti 1:3
sq. 1 Ti 2:10
sr. 1 Ti 1:3
ss. 1 Ti 1:3
st. 1 Ti 2:10
su. 1 Ti 1:3
sv. 1 Ti 1:3
sw. 1 Ti 2:10
sx. 1 Ti 1:3
sy. 1 Ti 1:3
sz. 1 Ti 2:10
ta. 1 Ti 1:3
tb. 1 Ti 2:10
tc. 1 Ti 1:3
td. 1 Ti 1:3
te. 1 Ti 2:10
tf. 1 Ti 1:3
tg. 1 Ti 1:3
th. 1 Ti 2:10
ti. 1 Ti 1:3
tj. 1 Ti 1:3
tk. 1 Ti 2:10
tl. 1 Ti 1:3
tm. 1 Ti 1:3
tn. 1 Ti 2:10
to. 1 Ti 1:3
tp. 1 Ti 1:3 tq. 1 Ti 2:10
tr. 1 Ti 1:3
ts. 1 Ti 1:3
tt. 1 Ti 2:10
tu. 1 Ti 1:3
tv. 1 Ti 1:3
tw. 1 Ti 2:10
tx. 1 Ti 1:3
ty. 1 Ti 1:3
tz. 1 Ti 2:10
ua. 1 Ti 1:3
ub. 1 Ti 2:10
uc. 1 Ti 1:3
ud. 1 Ti 1:3
ue. 1 Ti 2:10
uf. 1 Ti 1:3
ug. 1 Ti 1:3
uh. 1 Ti 2:10
ui. 1 Ti 1:3
uj. 1 Ti 1:3
uk. 1 Ti 2:10
ul. 1 Ti 1:3
um. 1 Ti 1:3
un. 1 Ti 2:10
uo. 1 Ti 1:3
up. 1 Ti 1:3
uq. 1 Ti 2:10
ur. 1 Ti 1:3
us. 1 Ti 1:3
ut. 1 Ti 2:10
uu. 1 Ti 1:3
uv. 1 Ti 1:3
uw. 1 Ti 2:10
ux. 1 Ti 1:3
uy. 1 Ti 1:3
uz. 1 Ti 2:10
va. 1 Ti 1:3
vb. 1 Ti 2:10
vc. 1 Ti 1:3
vd. 1 Ti 1:3
ve. 1 Ti 2:10
vf. 1 Ti 1:3
vg. 1 Ti 1:3
vh. 1 Ti 2:10
vi. 1 Ti 1:3
vj. 1 Ti 1:3
vk. 1 Ti 2:10
vl. 1 Ti 1:3
vm. 1 Ti 1:3
vn. 1 Ti 2:10
vo. 1 Ti 1:3
vp. 1 Ti 1:3
vq. 1 Ti 2:10
vr. 1 Ti 1:3
vs. 1 Ti 1:3
vt. 1 Ti 2:10
vu. 1 Ti 1:3
vv. 1 Ti 1:3
vw. 1 Ti 2:10
vx. 1 Ti 1:3
vy. 1 Ti 1:3
vz. 1 Ti 2:10
wa. 1 Ti 1:3
wb. 1 Ti 2:10
wc. 1 Ti 1:3
wd. 1 Ti 1:3
we. 1 Ti 2:10
wf. 1 Ti 1:3
wg. 1 Ti 1:3
wh. 1 Ti 2:10
wi. 1 Ti 1:3
wj. 1 Ti 1:3
wk. 1 Ti 2:10
wl. 1 Ti 1:3
wm. 1 Ti 1:3
wn. 1 Ti 2:10
wo. 1 Ti 1:3
wp. 1 Ti 1:3
wq. 1 Ti 2:10
wr. 1 Ti 1:3
ws. 1 Ti 1:3
wt. 1 Ti 2:10
wu. 1 Ti 1:3
wv. 1 Ti 1:3
ww. 1 Ti 2:10
wx. 1 Ti 1:3
wy. 1 Ti 1:3
wz. 1 Ti 2:10
xa. 1 Ti 1:3
xb. 1 Ti 2:10
xc. 1 Ti 1:3
xd. 1 Ti 1:3
xe. 1 Ti 2:10
xf. 1 Ti 1:3
xg. 1 Ti 1:3
xh. 1 Ti 2:10
xi. 1 Ti 1:3
xj. 1 Ti 1:3
xk. 1 Ti 2:10
xl. 1 Ti 1:3
xm. 1 Ti 1:3
xn. 1 Ti 2:10
xo. 1 Ti 1:3
xp. 1 Ti 1:3
xq. 1 Ti 2:10
xr. 1 Ti 1:3
xs. 1 Ti 1:3
xt. 1 Ti 2:10
xu. 1 Ti 1:3
xv. 1 Ti 1:3
xw. 1 Ti 2:10
xx. 1 Ti 1:3
xy. 1 Ti 1:3
xz. 1 Ti 2:10
ya. 1 Ti 1:3
yb. 1 Ti 2:10
yc. 1 Ti 1:3
yd. 1 Ti 1:3
ye. 1 Ti 2:10
yf. 1 Ti 1:3
yg. 1 Ti 1:3
yh. 1 Ti 2:10
yi. 1 Ti 1:3
yj. 1 Ti 1:3
yk. 1 Ti 2:10
yl. 1 Ti 1:3
ym. 1 Ti 1:3
yn. 1 Ti 2:10
yo. 1 Ti 1:3
yp. 1 Ti 1:3
yq. 1 Ti 2:10
yr. 1 Ti 1:3
ys. 1 Ti 1:3
yt. 1 Ti 2:10
yu. 1 Ti 1:3
yv. 1 Ti 1:3
yw. 1 Ti 2:10
yx. 1 Ti 1:3
yy. 1 Ti 1:3
yz. 1 Ti 2:10
za. 1 Ti 1:3
zb. 1 Ti 2:10
zc. 1 Ti 1:3
zd. 1 Ti 1:3
ze. 1 Ti 2:10
zf. 1 Ti 1:3
zg. 1 Ti 1:3
zh. 1 Ti 2:10
zi. 1 Ti 1:3
zj. 1 Ti 1:3
zk. 1 Ti 2:10
zl. 1 Ti 1:3
zm. 1 Ti 1:3
zn. 1 Ti 2:10
zo. 1 Ti 1:3
zp. 1 Ti 1:3
zq. 1 Ti 2:10
zr. 1 Ti 1:3
zs. 1 Ti 1:3
zt. 1 Ti 2:10
zu. 1 Ti 1:3
zv. 1 Ti 1:3
zw. 1 Ti 2:10
zx. 1 Ti 1:3
zy. 1 Ti 1:3
zz. 1 Ti 2:10

lessons, to each of which the Christian, and especially the Christian minister, may be assimilated. 1. He is a soldier, and is bound by oath to follow and to obey the Captain of his salvation. Every soldier must keep to his post, and is not allowed to engage in any other business; nor has he time for the Roman soldier, (who is here alluded to,) when neither fighting nor encamping, was always exercising. The foot soldiers, besides their armour, which was cumbersome and heavy, were obliged to carry three days' provision; so that they had much labour and hardship constantly to endure. 2. He is compared to one striving for mastery in the Olympic games, where all the laws of the contest must be strictly observed, in order to secure the prize; for a man "is not crowned except he strive lawfully." 3. He is likened to the husbandman, who must first labour to cultivate his ground, to sow, and plant, and water, and weed, &c. before he can expect to be a partaker of the fruits of the earth.

Paul having exhorted Timothy to endure hardships, reminds him of what himself endured—"I suffer trouble as an evil-doer," or malefactor, even "unto bonds; I endure all things for the elect's sakes, that they may also obtain the salvation which is in Christ Jesus." This he did in the expectation, that those who suffer—who are crucified, and dead with Christ,—shall also be raised and reign with him. Timothy is then exhorted and encouraged to pursue his studies and labours wisely and zealously; discouraging all strife about words, and "all profane and vain babblings," in which the erroneous and worldly-minded teachers took delight; and studying so to divide the word of truth, like a faithful steward, as to give to each hearer his proper share and portion.

Our apostle next refers to some false and injudicious teachers,

CHAP. II. Ver 3. Endure hardness—Doddridge, "Atheists," MacKnight, "evil-doers," of the hardships which the Roman soldiers had to endure, see Josephus in the Jewish War, book iii. chap. 5.

Ver 6. The husbandman that laboureth, &c.—Doddridge, "The husbandman must first labour, (and then) partake of the fruits." MacKnight translates it in the same effect.

Ver 8. According to my gospel—i. e. the gospel which he preached.

Ver 9. An evil-doer—MacKnight and Doddridge, "A malefactor."—The word of God is not bound—On the contrary, persecution often contributes to its propagation. See Philip i. 12, 13.

Ver 11. It is a faithful saying—Compare Rom vi. 5, 8.

Ver 13. Rightly dividing the word of truth—Some think this refers to the duty of the pastors in dividing the sacrifices; others, to the husbandman dividing the furrows with his plough; but we should rather refer it to the office of a steward, part of which, in those times, was to give each of the household his portion of meat in the season. See Luke xii. 41.

Ver 17. Hymeneus and Philetus—The latter is mentioned nowhere else in Scripture; but of Hymeneus, see 1 Tim i. 20.

Ver 18. The resurrection is past already—These appear to have been oral teachers, who explained the resurrection figuratively of baptism, or pictures of regeneration, which is the resurrection of the soul; an error afterwards ascribed by Euphrasius to the Gnostics and the Manichees, and which MacKnight thinks they founded on a misinterpretation of John v. 25.

Ver 19. Havine this seed, The Lord knoweth, &c.—This is thought to be an allusion to Nam xvi. 5, "Even to-morrow the Lord will show 'who are his,'

15 Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth.

16 But shun profane and vain babblings; for they will increase unto more ungodliness.

17 And their word will eat as doth a cancer: of whom is Hymeneus and Philetus.

18 Who concerning the truth have erred, saying that the resurrection is past already; and overthrow the faith of some.

19 Nevertheless the foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal, The Lord knoweth them that are his. And, Let every one that nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquity.

20 But in a great house there are not only vessels of gold and of silver, but also of wood and of earth; and some to honour, and some to dishonour.

21 If a man therefore purge himself from these, he shall be a vessel unto honour, sanctified, and meet for the master's use, and prepared unto every good work.

22 Flee also youthful lusts; but follow righteousness, faith, charity, peace, with them that call on the Lord out of a pure heart.

23 But foolish and unlearned questions avoid, knowing that they do gender strifes.

24 And the servant of the Lord must not strive; but be gentle unto all men, apt to teach, patient;

25 In meekness instructing those that oppose themselves; if God peradventure will give them repentance to the acknowledging of the truth;

26 And that they may recover themselves out of the snare of the devil, who are taken captive by him at his will.

who, by allegorizing away the doctrine of the resurrection, "overthrew the faith of some." Notwithstanding this, however, he assures them that the foundation of God remained sure, having this double inscription for its seal—"The Lord knoweth them that are his;" and, "Let every one that nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquity." The one motto pointing to the great source of our salvation on the part of God; the other, the great practical end of our religion; and it is remarkable how often St. Paul thus connects election on the part of God, and obedience on the part of man, notwithstanding many persons consider them as inconsistent and contradictory.

The following verse (20) connects, as we conceive, not with that immediately preceding, but with the 17th verse. The faithful ministers of Christ are vessels of gold and silver; erroneous teachers, vessels of wood and clay; but, as in a great house, vessels of all these kinds are necessary, so in the church of God, there are false teachers, as well as true; and there is a "needs be that offences come." Timothy is, however, advised to keep himself at a distance from false and erroneous teachers, and, at the same time, to guard against those youthful passions to which his age (being only a few years over thirty) might naturally expose him; meaning, by youthful lusts or passions, "not sensual lusts only (as MacKnight expresses it), but ambition, pride, love of power, rashness, and obstinacy; vices which some teachers, who are free from sensual lusts, are at little pains to avoid." These he was not only to avoid, but to flee from; and, at the same time, in fleeing from them he would pursue after righteousness, faith, charity, (or love,) peace, which he would find in the opposite direction—"with them that call on the Lord out of a pure heart." And as to and who is his; and will cause him to escape him into him, even him whom he hath chosen." The passage refers to the vessels under the law, and it is an allusion to them, that true Christians are called "a chosen generation, a holy and royal priesthood." 1 Peter ii. 9. Doddridge says—"the expression is here used . . . in allusion to the custom of engraving upon some stones laid in the foundation of buildings the name of the persons by whom, and the purposes for which the structure is raised." We have no direct proof to offer; but we strongly suspect this was sometimes done by our fathers, and we presume the seal of a church was of that authority, that no schism dare invade a stone thus sealed. The late Mr. Taylor, in his fragments to 1 Tim ii. No. xlvii. 5, has given a copy of a Persian seal, containing not only the name of the king, but three sentences, one of which is, "God is my sufficiency;" another, "He that is not for Ali (Mahomet's son in law) is no friend of mine."

Ver 20. Flee also youthful lusts—An earlier writer, "The vessels of gold & silver, and the vessels of wood & of earth," are the different sorts of teachers in the Christian church—some are apostles and evangelists, gold and silver; false teachers, wood and earth & water.

Ver 21. If a man therefore purge himself from these—That is, keep him self aloof from the false teachers and their errors. "He shall be a vessel unto honour," or an honourable vessel, like those of gold or silver.

Ver 23. Foolish questions—MacKnight, "unlearned questions;" i. e. questions having no foundation in the Scriptures, and not there resolved, but curious, idle, and unimportant.

Ver 26. Recover themselves—Greek, "awake." Esner remarks, the original means, to awake from a deep sleep—such as may be the consequence of

CHAPTER III.

1 He adverteth him of the times to come, 6 describeth the enemies of the truth, 10 promitteth unto him his own example 15 and commendeth the holy scriptures.

THIS know also, that ^a in the last days perilous times shall come.

2 For ^b men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy,

3 Without natural affection, truce-breakers, ^c false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good,

4 ^d Traitors, heady, high-minded, ^e lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God;

5 Having ^f a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof: from such turn away.

6 For of this sort are they ^g which creep into houses, and lead captive silly women, laden with sins, led away with divers lusts,

7 Ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth.

8 Now as Jannes and ^h Jambres withstood Moses, so do these also resist the truth: men ⁱ of corrupt minds, ^j reprobate concerning the faith.

9 But they shall proceed no farther: for their folly shall be manifest unto all ^k men, as theirs also was.

10 But thou hast ^l fully known my doctrine, manner of life, purpose, faith, long-suffering, charity, patience,

A. M. cir. 400.
A. D. cir. 65.

a 1 Ti. 4.1
2 Pe. 3.3.
1 Ju. 2.18.
Jude 17.18
b Ro. 1.29.
31.

c or, make-bates.
d 2 Pe. 2.10.
e 1 Ti. 3.3.
f Tit. 1.16.
g Tit. 1.11.
h Ex. 7.11.
i 1 Th. 6.5.

j or, of no judgment.
k or, been a diligent follower of—
l 1 Th. 3.13.

m Ac. 13.45, 50.
n Ac. 14.5.
6.19
o Ps. 34.19.
p 2 Ti. 2.11.
q Ju. 5.39
r 2 Pe. 1.21.

s Ro. 15.4.
t Ps. 119.93.
u 1 Ti. 4.10.

u or, perfected.
v 1 Th. 5.21.
6.13.
b Ro. 20.12.
13.

11 Persecutions, afflictions, which came unto me at ^a Antioch, at ^b Iconium, at ^c Lystra; what persecutions I endured: but out of ^d them all ^e the Lord delivered me.

12 Yea, and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution.

13 But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and ^f being deceived.

14 But continue ^g thou in the things which thou hast learned and hast been assured of, knowing of whom thou hast learned ^h them;

15 And that from a child thou hast known the holy scriptures, which ⁱ are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus.

16 All ^j scripture is given by inspiration of God, and ^k is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness:

17 That the man of God may be ^l perfect ^m thoroughly furnished unto all good works.

CHAPTER IV.

1 He exhorteth him to do his duty with all care and diligence, 6 certifieth him of the nearness of his death, 9 willeth him to come speedily unto him, and to bring Marcus with him, and certain other things which he wrote for, 14 willeth him to leave of Alexander the smith, 16 informeth him what had befallen him at his first answering, 19 and soon after he concludeth.

I CHARGE ^a thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge ^b the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom;

those who had gone into serious errors, Timothy is exhorted to treat them with all meekness, in hope that they might be enabled to recover themselves from the snare of Satan.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1—17. Paul admonishes Timothy of the great degeneracy to be expected in the times of the grand apostasy.—It is not necessary to enter into a minute inquiry as to all the vices here enumerated—a few general observations may suffice.

1. We are not disposed to confine these vices, any more than the grand apostasy itself, to the popish clergy: they may be all expected, wherever the form of godliness subsists without the power. 2. We may remark, how many vices and vicious tempers may co-exist with the mere form of godliness? 3. "It is observable, (says Dr. Macknight,) that this description begins with extreme selfishness as the root, and concludes with the excessive love of sensual pleasure as the end, of all [these] corruptions."—"Lovers of pleasures more [or rather] than lovers of God." This applies particularly to those professors who, with little or no hesitation, enter into all the enjoyments of the world, and frequent its places of fashionable amusements, without appearing to suspect that they renounce Christ by preferring these before him. "There has been (says Wilberforce) much argument concerning the lawfulness of theatrical amusements. Let it be sufficient to remark, that the controversy would be short indeed, if the question were to be tried by this criterion of love to the Supreme Being. If there were any thing of that sensibility for the honour of God, and of that zeal in his service, which we show in behalf of our earthly friends, or of our political connexions, should we seek our pleasure in that place which the debaucher, inflamed with wine, or bent on the gratification of other licentious appetites, finds most congenial to his state and temper of mind? In that place, from the neighbourhood of which (how justly termed a school of morals might hence alone be inferred) decorum, and modesty, and regularity retire, while riot and lewdness are invited to the spot, and invariably select it for their chosen residence! where the sacred name of God is often profaned! where sentiments are often heard with delight, and motions and gestures often applauded, which would not be tolerated in private company! where, when moral principles are inculcated, they are not such as a Christian ought to cherish in his bosom, but such as it must be his daily endeavour to extirpate: not those which scripture warrants, but those which it condemns as false and spurious; being founded in pride and ambition, and the overvaluation of human favour! where, surely, if a Christian should trust himself at all, it would be requisite for him to prepare himself with a double portion of watchfulness and seriousness of mind, instead of selecting it as the place in which he may throw off his guard, and unbend without danger!"

intoxication; and thinks it refers to an artifice of fowlers, who scatter seeds steeped in intoxicating drugs, intended to stupefy the birds. Such a fowler is Satan.—Snare of the devil (diabolos)—taken captive—Greek, "taken alive." CHAP. III. Ver. 1. In the last days.—See 1 Tim. iv. 1. Ver. 3. False accusers.—Margin, "Make hates!" according to Minshew, a make-hate, is a make-strife; or, a mischievous, contentious person. The devil himself has his name (Diabolos) from this word, because he is an "accuser of the brethren." Ver. 8. Jannes and Jambres.—These are the principal Magicians who withstood Moses. Their names are preserved in Jonathan's Chaldee Paraphrase, in Eusebius, in Pliny, and in an old Pythagorean Philosopher. Ver. 11. Persecutions at Antioch, at Iconium, at Lystra.—See Acts xii. 19; xiv. 2, 5, 19. Ver. 16. All Scripture.—i. e. Holy Scripture, as in the preceding verse.—

What is here said of theatrical amusements may apply to most other fashionable diversions, the leading object of which is, to divert the mind from every thing serious and devout; and which, consequently, is utterly inconsistent with the love of God our Saviour. It is not strange, therefore, that such should be denounced by our apostle as enemies to the truth, and reproaches concerning the faith: but it is an awful and alarming circumstance that men of this character should be found among the professed teachers of Christianity; and it is much to be lamented that, among professing females, there should be any silly enough to be led captive by them.

As a striking contrast to the preceding characters, we may here contemplate those of Paul and his son Timothy; the latter having not only "fully known," but copied the virtues of the former. Hence we may see the utility of scripture biography, and other Christian memoirs, because, "Herein we see how grace operates in men like ourselves; having the same passions, frailties, and imperfections with ourselves; and placed in similar circumstances of duty, labour, difficulty, trial, and temptation." Timothy faithfully followed the same course of doctrine, manner of life, and virtues of his venerable father in Christ, St. Paul; and, in so doing, became exposed to the same trials and persecutions as he had suffered. He also derived his knowledge from the same source—the sacred Scriptures, in which he had been initiated in his infancy—had subsequently made them the chief subject of his study and attention—and they had made him "wise unto salvation."

Here the apostle lays down two important propositions, which demand our particular attention. 1. All Scripture is given by inspiration; and, 2. Is profitable for instruction, &c.

1. When we read "All Scripture" is given by inspiration, we must recollect that but little of the New Testament was yet written, and still less got into circulation: consequently, when a child, Timothy could have known nothing of it: yet, when brought into circulation, none but a Jew would place it in authority inferior to the Old.

2. The Holy Scriptures are here commended as able to make us wise unto salvation, and more particularly as profitable for doctrine, reproof, &c. that is, furnishing every thing necessary to "complete the man of God," or the perfect Christian—so far as perfection is attainable in the present life. From this we may infer the folly and wickedness of keeping back the Scriptures from the common people—all of whom equally need them with ourselves: on the other hand, it is a distinguishing mark of a true minister of Christ, that he studies them himself, and recommends them to his hearers.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1—22. Paul, ready to receive the crown of martyrdom, entreats a visit from Timothy.—Timothy being fully qualified as an Evangelist, by the grace of God and a Grotius, Dr. Geddes, and the Unitarian Version, render this "All Scripture given by inspiration of God (is) profitable." &c. changing the place of the verb supplied; and this, it appears, has the sanction of the old Syriac, the Vulgate, and most ancient versions. The question, what writings are inspired, must be decided by internal and historical evidence. The sense much depends on the copulative (and Greek kai) which is wanting in the ancient versions generally, but if retained, justifies our authorized translation; to which agree Doddridge, Macknight, and most English commentators; and for a full defence of which, in answer to Dr. Geddes, see an Essay "On the Divine Inspiration of the Jewish Scriptures, by Dr. Pindley, of Glasgow." Ver. 17. That the man of God may be perfect.—Margin, "perfected." i. e. completely and thoroughly furnished for every good work.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1. The quick and the dead—i. e. those who are alive, as well as those in their graves. See 1 Cor. xv. 51. &c.

2 Preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long-suffering and doctrine.

3 For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves Teachers, having itching ears;

4 And they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables.

5 But watch thou in all things, endure afflictions, do the work of an evangelist, make full proof of thy ministry.

6 For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand.

7 I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith:

8 Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them who also love his appearing.

9 Do thy diligence to come shortly unto me;

10 For Demas hath forsaken me, having loved

A M. cir.
A D. cir.
b3

c Tit. 2. 15.

d 1 Th. 1. 4.

e e. 2. 2.

f cor. full.

g 1 Th. 4. 12, 15.

h 1 Th. 1. 23.

i 2 Pe. 3. 14.

j 1 Th. 6. 12.

k Ac. 20. 24.

l Pr. 23. 23.

m 3 Jo. 3. 10.

n 1 Cor. 9. 25.

o 1 Jo. 5. 4.

p 1 Th. 2. 10.

q 1 Cor. 2. 9.

r 1 Jo. 2. 15.

s Tit. 3. 12.

t Ps. 28. 1.

u 1 Cor. 2. 9.

v 1 Cor. 2. 9.

this present world, and is departed unto Thessalonica; Crescens to Galatia, Titus unto Dalmatia.

11 Only Luke is with me. Take Mark, and bring him with thee: for he is profitable to me for the ministry.

12 And Tychicus have I sent to Ephesus.

13 The cloak that I left at Troas with Carpus, when thou comest, bring with thee, and the books, but especially the parchments.

14 Alexander the coppersmith did me much evil: the Lord reward him according to his works:

15 Of whom be thou ware also; for he hath greatly withstood our words.

16 At my first answer no man stood with me, but all men forsook me: I pray God that it may not be laid to their charge.

17 Notwithstanding the Lord stood with me, and strengthened me; that by me the preaching might be fully known, and that all the Gentiles might hear: and I was delivered out of the mouth of the lion.

long acquaintance with the holy Scriptures, is solemnly charged to a zealous and faithful exercise of his ministerial talents:

Show thyself "a man of God, thoroughly furnished unto every good work." And St. Paul the more strongly urges this, from the consideration that he foresaw the time was coming, in which many would not hear to hear the truth. As to himself, the great apostle saw his end approaching, and was prepared to offer up his life as a sacrifice in the cause of God, that he might receive the crown of martyrdom. "I am now ready to be offered," (says he) "and the time of my departure is at hand." Here, according to the learned Blackwall, "is an allusion to that universal custom [both among Jews and Gentiles] of pouring wine or oil on the head of the victim, immediately before it was slain: the apostle's emphatic word signifies, 'Wine is just now pouring on my head; I am just going to be sacrificed to Pagan rage and superstition.'"

The apostle proceeds, (ver. 7.)—"I have fought a good fight; I have finished my course; I have kept the faith." These terms are evidently agonistic—that is, they allude to the Olympic games; the former alluding to the boxing or wrestling combats, and the latter to the races. He had completed both: his battle was fought—his race was run; he had also kept the sacred deposit of the faith intrusted to him, and he was going to receive his crown—a crown of righteousness and glory, reserved for him against the second coming of his Lord, his Saviour, and his Judge. And he rejoiced to know, that the crown was not for him only. It was not the reward of a few only, (though indeed comparatively few,) but of all those who looked and longed for the second coming of their Lord—to all who should love his appearing, and had him as their almighty Saviour.

The latter part of the chapter contains a variety of miscellaneous information and remarks. In the first place, the apostle requests Timothy to come and visit him as soon as possible; apparently anticipating, that if he delayed he might be too late to see him; for the time of his departure was at hand.

Of Demas, Paul complains, he "hath forsaken me, having loved the present world." From the cautious manner in which Paul speaks of this man in Coloss. iv. 14, it has been inferred that he considered him as a doubtful character, but this is not certain; nor is there any proof that Demas apostatized from Christianity: perhaps his secular interests might induce him to go to Thessalonica, or fear might deter him from staying with the apostle.

The cloak, the books, and the parchments, have occasioned a great variety of conjectures. The first article was probably to guard against the cold and rain. From the mention of books and parchments, Bishop Bull derives a useful argument in favour of ministerial studies, though it is utterly useless to guess at the contents of either the books or parchments.

Alexander is so common a name, that there is no certainty that this Alexander was either of those who had been before mentioned, though what is said of him agrees with 1 Tim. i. 20. Both evidently opposed Paul's preaching: but the most painful fact here mentioned is, that upon Paul's first hearing, he was deserted, like his divine Master—"All forsook him and fled." Even this, however, was overruled for good, as he was so strengthened and supported, that he was enabled to preach the gospel before his Gentile adversaries with good effect, and was, for the present, delivered from the mouth of the lion—by whom many think Nero was intended; but this is by no means certain. It is generally agreed, however, that soon after the date of this Epistle, Paul fell a martyr to the rage of that execrable tyrant, who, as is well known, after setting fire to the imperial city, laid the fault upon the Christians.

So Tychicus, after speaking of Nero's charging the Christians with setting fire to Rome, which he did himself, (A. D. 64,) says, "To suppress, if possible, this common rumour, Nero procured others to be accused, and punished with exquisite tortures a race of men detested for their evil practices, who were commonly known by the name of Christians. The author of that sect (or name) was Christus, who, in the reign of Tiberius, was punished with death as a criminal, by the Procurator Pontius Pilate. But this resolute superstition, though checked for a while, broke out afresh, not only in Judea, where the evil first originated, but even in the city of Rome; the common sink into which every thing filthy and abominable flows from all quarters of the world. At first, those only were apprehended who confessed themselves of that sect; afterwards, a vast multitude discovered by them, all of whom were condemned, not so much for the crime of burning the city, as for their enmity to mankind. Their executions were so contrived, as to expose them to derision and contempt. Some were covered over with the skins of wild beasts, that they might be torn to pieces by dogs; some were crucified; while others, having been drenched over with combustible materials, were set up as lights in the night-time, and thus burnt to death."

The death of Paul is commonly placed in A. D. 65 or 66; and his being a Roman citizen, procured him the honour of decapitation instead of crucifixion. Other cities from Chrysostom a tradition, that his preaching had converted a cupbearer and concubine of the Emperor; though Bishop Pearson, and some other learned men, are of opinion that he was not put to death by Nero, but by one of his deputies, while he was himself gone to head the army in Greece. There is no doubt, however, of his martyrdom, which the Calendar places on the 29th of June. We shall close this Epistle, which was probably the last St. Paul wrote, with the following judicious reflections of Dr. Macknight upon this apostle's epistolary correspondence, and the evidence which it affords of the truth of Christianity:—

"These strong asseverations of the truth of the things which Paul had all along preached; these earnest charges to Timothy, to preach the same things openly and plainly to the world; these high expressions of joy in the sufferings which he had endured for preaching them, and these confident expectations which he expressed, of receiving a full reward in

Ver. 2. In season, out of season—i. e. embrace every possible opportunity; "whether seasonable or unseasonable to thyself." See Macknight.

Ver. 3. Preaching, having itching ears—Macknight translates the words thus—"Having itching ears, they [that is, the people] will heap to themselves teachers," calculated to tickle them with new and curious matter; namely, fables and allegories, such as those of the Rabbins and Pagan philosophers.

Ver. 5. Make full proof—Doddridge, "Accomplish"—Thy ministry—To a person who regarded to Dr. Johnson, that he had not been a clergyman, because he considered the life of a clergyman an easy and comfortable one, the doctor made the memorable reply—"The life of a conscientious clergyman is not easy. I have always considered a clergyman as the father of a larger family than he is able to maintain. No, sir, I do not envy a clergyman's life as an easy life, nor do I envy the clergyman who makes it an easy life."

Ver. 6. I am now ready to be offered—See Doddridge; but Macknight renders it, "I am already poured out;" and others "I am poured upon," all uding to pouring wine, &c. upon the head of the victim, before it was sacrificed. The sense of both is the same as our version.

Ver. 7. I have fought a good fight, &c.—Macknight, "I have combated the good combat; I have finished the race. I have preserved the faith." Dr. Adam Clarke cites, from Euclyides, a case in which a wife died to redeem the life of her husband when his parents had refused, and he preaches them in these expressive words—"Thou wouldst have fought a good fight, hadst thou died for thy son."

Ver. 8. A crown of righteousness—i. e. a reward of righteousness. See 1 Cor. ix. 25, and note.

Ver. 11. Take Mark—i. e. John Mark. See Acts xv. 25. Paul and Mark had evidently now been reconciled. See Acts xv. 39.

Ver. 13. The cloak—Macknight, "Bag," and others, portmanteau. The word is variously used.

Ver. 17. Fully known—Macknight, "Fully (and boldly) declared." The word literally signifies, "might be carried with a full sail."

18 And the Lord ^{will} shall deliver me from every evil work, and will preserve me unto his heavenly kingdom: to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.

19 Salute Prisca and Aquila, and the household of Onesiphorus.

20 Erastus abode at Corinth: but Trophimus have I left at Miletum sick.

21 Do thy diligence to come before winter.

A. M. cir.
4069.
A. D. cir.
65.
† Ps. 121. 7.

w Nero, or, the Emperor Nero.

Eubulus greeteth thee, and Pudens, and Linus, and Claudia, and all the brethren.

22 The Lord Jesus Christ be with thy spirit. Grace be with you. Amen.

¶ The second epistle unto Timotheus, ordained the first bishop of the church of the Ephesians, was written from Rome, when Paul was brought before ^w Nero the second time.

the life to come for all his labours and sufferings, being the apostle's dying words to his intimate friend and companion of the ministry of the gospel, conveyed in a private letter, no person who is a judge of human nature and human actions, can read them without being impressed with the strongest conviction of the apostle's own thorough persuasion of the things which, from the time of his conversion, he constantly preached, without the least variation. And seeing the most important of these things were matters of fact, of which his own senses and experience had informed him: . . . I say,

Ver 19. Salute Prisca—Or "Priscilla." Acts xvii. 2.—The household of Onesiphorus—from Onesiphorus himself not being here mentioned, it may be reasonably supposed that he was with St. Paul at Rome.
Ver 20. Erastus—As Timothy accompanied the apostle from Corinth to Jerusalem, through Macedonia, and probably to Miletus, before his first imprisonment at Rome, it would have been wholly superfluous to have informed him of Erastus, if he had spoken of that voyage; and Trophimus accompanied the apostle to Jerusalem. Acts xx. 4—16; xxi. 29.—Bagster.

Ver 21. Claudia—De Henry, in his Eccles. Hist., supposes this to be the lady celebrated in two of Martial's Epigrams; but Macknight thinks this inconsistent with her age. Tradition states, that she first brought the gospel into Britain.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE SECOND EPISTLE TO TIMOTHY.

[THIS epistle was written to St. Paul's most intimate friend, under the miseries of a jail, and with the near prospect of an ignominious death, which he suffered under the cruel and relentless Nero; and it is peculiarly valuable to the Christian church as exhibiting the best possible evidence of the truth and reality of our holy religion, and affording a striking contrast between the persecuted, but confident and happy Christian, and the ferocious, abandoned, and profligate Roman. The detestable Nero having set fire to Rome, on the 10th of July, A. D. 64, endeavored to remove the odium of that nefarious action, which was generally and justly imputed to him, by charging it upon the Christians, who had become the objects of popular hatred on account of their religion; and in order to give a more plausible colour to this calumny, he caused them to be sought out, as if they had been the incendiaries, and put great numbers to death in the most barbarous and cruel manner. "Some," says Tacitus, "were covered over with the skins of wild beasts, that they might be torn to pieces by dogs; some were crucified; while others, having been daubed over with combustible materials, were set up as lights in the night time, and thus burnt to death. For these spectacles, Nero gave his own gardens, and, at the same time, exhibited there the diversions of the circus; sometimes standing in the crowd as a spectator, in the habit of a charioteer, and at other times driving a chariot himself." (See also Suetonius, in Vit. Nero c. 16.) To these dreadful scenes Juvenal thus alludes: "Describe a great villain, such as Tigellus, (a corrupt minister under Nero,) and you shall suffer the same punishment with those who stand burning in their own flame and smoke, their head being held up by a stake fixed to a chain, till they make a long stream (of blood and sulphur) on the ground." So also Martial in an epigram concerning the famous C. Marcus Scaevola, who lost the use of his right hand by burning it in the presence of Porsetina, king of Etruria, whom he had attempted to assassinate: "You have, perhaps, lately seen acted on the theatre, Mucius, who thrust his hand into the fire: if you think such a person patient, valiant, and stout, you are a senseless doltard. For it is a much greater thing, when threatened with the troublesome coat, to say, I do not sacrifice, than to obey the command, Burn the hand." This troublesome coat, or shirt, was made like a sack, of paper or coarse linen cloth, either besmeared with pitch, wax, or sulphur, and similar combustible materials, or dipped in them; which was then put on the Christians, who, in order to be kept upright, the better to resemble a flaming torch, had their chains severally fastened to stakes fixed in the ground. At the same period, many of the most illustrious senators of Rome were executed for the conspiracy of Lucan, Seneca, and Piso; many of whom met death with courage and severity, though unblest with any certain hope of futurity. With the Christian alone was united purity of manners amidst public licentiousness, and purity of heart amidst universal relaxation of people; and with him only were found love and good will to all mankind, and a patience, and cheerfulness, and triumph in the hour of death, as infinitely superior to the stoical calmness of a Pagan, as the Christian martyr himself to the hero and the soldier. After such scenes as these was this Epistle written, probably, the last which St. Paul ever wrote; and, standing on the verge of eternity, full of God, and strongly anticipating an eternal weight of glory, the venerable Apostle expressed the sublimest language of hope and exultation—"I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but to all them also that love his appearing." (Chapter iv. 6-8.) Surely every rational being will be ready to exclaim, "Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my latter end be like his!"—Bagster.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO TITUS.

[OF Titus, to whom this Epistle is addressed, and of whom St. Paul speaks in terms of the highest approbation and most cordial affection in his Epistles, we know nothing more with certainty, than that he was a Greek by birth, and one of the Apostle's early converts, who frequently attended him in his journeys. We have also no certain information when, or by whom, the Gospel was first preached in Crete, though it is probable that it was made known there at an early period, as there were Cretans present on the day of Pentecost, who, on their return home, might be the means of introducing it among their countrymen. Nor have we any account concerning St. Paul's labours in that island, except the bare fact which may be inferred from this Epistle, though St. Luke mentions that he touched at the Fair Havens and Laxia in his voyage to Rome. It is therefore inferred, that this event took place, and consequently this Epistle was written, subsequent to his first imprisonment at Rome, and previously to his second, about A. D. 64; which is considerably strengthened by the verbal harmony subsisting between this Epistle and the first Epistle to Timothy. The Apostle seems to have had very great success in his ministry in that island; but, by some means, to have been hurried thence, before he could order the state of the churches in a regular manner. He therefore left Titus there to settle the churches in the several cities of the island, according to the apostolical plan. Titus lived there till he was 94 years of age, and died, and was buried in that island. It was upon the occasion of Titus being thus left at Crete, that St. Paul wrote this Epistle, to direct him in the proper discharge of his various and important duties.—Bagster.

CHAPTER I.

1 For what end? Titus was left in Crete. 6 How they that are to be chosen ministers ought to be qualified. 11 The mis-uses of evil teachers to be stopped: 12 and what number of men they be.

PAUL, a servant of God, and an apostle of Jesus Christ, according to the faith of God's elect, and the ^aacknowledging of the truth which ^b is after godliness;

2 ^cIn hope of eternal life, which God, that

^d cannot lie, promised before the ^e world began;

3 But ^f hath in due times manifested his word through ^g preaching, which is committed unto

A. M. cir.
4069.
A. D. cir.
65.

a 2 Ti. 2. 25.
b 1 Pe. 1. 3.
c 1 Sa. 15. 9.
d Mat. 23. 34.
e 2 Ti. 10.
f Ro. 10. 13.
g 1 Ti. 1. 2.
h 1 Co. 1. 34.
i or, left undying.
k Ac. 14. 23.
l 2 Ti. 3. 2.
m 1 Ti. 3. 2.
n &c.

me according to the commandment of God our Saviour;

4 To Titus, mine own son ^a after the common faith: Grace, mercy, and peace, from God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ our Saviour.

5 For this cause left I thee in Crete, that thou shouldst ^b set in order ^c the things that are wanting, and ordain ^d elders in every city, as I had appointed thee:

6 If any be ^e blameless, the husband of one

CHAP. I. Ver. 1-16. Paul's affection to Titus: directions for his conduct: the character of the Cretans.—Titus appears to have been a convert from Gentilism by the ministry of St. Paul, who here calls him his own son in the common faith; and frequently mentions him, in his second epistle to the Corinthians, with great affection. He often employed him either as his messenger to the churches, or his travelling companion. He was with Paul and Barnabas, at Jerusalem, when some of the Judaizing teachers urged it upon him to be circumcised; but Paul would not allow it, (Gal. ii. 3, 4,) though he circumcised Timothy, his mother being a Jewess.

Before writing this Epistle, the apostle had been in Crete, (now called Candia,) with Titus and Apollos, whom he left there; and is said, at his writing of this Epistle, to have been at Nicopolis, in Macedonia, at or near which city he designed to winter. Such is the statement in the subscription, which

CHAP. I. Ver. 2. Promised before the world began.—Compare 2 Tim. i. 9. Ver. 4. Titus, mine own son.—So he calls Timothy, 1 Tim. i. 2. Of the 1336 respect with which he elsewhere speaks of Titus, see 2 Cor. ii. 13, vii. 6, 13, 11 &c.

wife, having faithful children, not accused of riot, or unruly.

7 For a bishop must be blameless, as the steward of God; not self-willed, not soon angry, not given to wine, no striker, not given to filthy lucre;

8 But a lover of hospitality, a lover of good men, sober, just, holy, temperate;

9 Holding fast the faithful word as he hath been taught, that he may be able by sound doctrine both to exhort and to convince the gainsayers.

10 For there are many unruly and vain talkers and deceivers, specially they of the circumcision:

11 Whose mouths must be stopped, who subvert whole houses, teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucre's sake.

12 One of themselves, even a prophet of their own, said, The Cretians are always liars, evil beasts, slow bellies.

13 This witness is true. Wherefore rebuke them sharply, that they may be sound in the faith:

14 Not giving heed to Jewish fables, and commandments of men, that turn from the truth.

15 Unto the pure all things are pure: but unto them that are defiled and unbelieving is nothing pure; but even their mind and conscience is defiled.

16 They profess that they know God; but in works they deny him, being abominable,

A. M. 4009
A. D. 65

anot, things

2 Th 2 13.

o or, in teaching.

p Ja 1 26.

q Mat 2 14

r Ac 17 23

s 2 Ti 4 2.

t 1 Ti 1 14.

u Ro 14 11.

v 2 Ti 3 5, 7.

w or, end of judgment.

x Pr 16 31.

y or, negligent.

z or, holy women.

a or, make-believe.

b 1 Cor 11 14.

c or, worse.

d or, created.

e 1 Ti 4 12

f 1 Ti 6 3.

g Pr 6 3.

h or, common.

and disobedient, and unto every good work w reprobate.

CHAPTER II.

1 Directions given unto Titus, both for his doctrine and life. 2 Of the duty of all Christians.

BUT speak thou the things which become a sound doctrine:

2 That the aged men be b sober, grave, temperate, sound in faith, in charity, in patience.

3 The aged women likewise, that they be in behaviour as becometh c holiness, not d false accusers, not given to much wine, teachers of good things;

4 That they may teach the e young women to be f sober, to love their husbands, to love their children,

5 To be discreet, chaste, keepers at home, good, obedient to their own husbands, that the word of God be not blasphemed.

6 Young men likewise exhort to be g sober-minded.

7 In all things showing thysell h a pattern of good works: in doctrine showing incorruptness, gravity, sincerity.

8 Sound i speech, that cannot be condemned; that he that is of the contrary part may be ashamed, having no evil thing to say of you.

9 Exhort servants j to be obedient unto their own masters, and to please them well in all things; not k answering again;

10 Not purloining, but showing all good fide both Macknight and Paley admit to be the probable fact; and from the similarity between the doctrine and phraseology, this epistle seems to have been written about the same time with the first epistle to Timothy.

In this, as in most of his epistles, Paul connects, (as we have already remarked,) "the faith of God's elect" with "the truth which is after (or according to) godliness;" and we may depend upon it, that those preachers who do not preserve this connexion inviolate, deserve not to be ranked as preachers of the gospel. When he adds, that "God had promised eternal life before the world began," we think, with Dr. Doddridge, that it is much the most natural to interpret this of the Father's promise to his Son, when he said, as in the second Psalm, "Ask of me, and I will give thee the heathen (or thine inheritance)," &c. (Ps. ii. 8.) and not (as some do) of his promise to Adam after the fall, but before the Jewish age or dispensation.

When Paul left Titus in Crete, (or Candia,) it was for the purpose of arranging such ecclesiastical affairs as himself had not had time to attend to; and especially to ordain ministers in every town in the island, where there might be occasion and opportunity. On this subject he repeats nearly the same sentiments which he had expressed to Timothy on the like occasion, respecting the qualifications of pastors and teachers, as may be seen in our notes below. He contrasts such as he recommends with the preachers of the circumcision, some of whom, it appears, were natives, and partook of the national character of the Cretians, who, according to one of their own poets, (Epimenides,) were addicted to lying, rapaciousness, luxury, and idleness. What a mixture of unhappy qualities!

"This witness," the apostle adds, speaking generally, "is true." Therefore (as if he had said) "when you discover any of these unhappy qualities munging in their conduct and conversation, rebuke them sharply," that they may be sound in the faith; on the same principle that a skilful surgeon will cauterize a wound to save the life of his patient, or remove a gangrene to effect a sound and perfect cure.

The evils of which the apostle seems apprehensive, were the apparently opposite ones of superstition and immorality, which, strange as it may seem, often operate upon each other, as we see in the lower classes of Roman Catholics. A superstitious attention to outward forms quiets their consciences in the neglect of Christian morals; and the commission of immoralties leads them to fly to saints and angels for their intercession, when they dare not approach the Son of God himself, whose "eyes are as a flame of fire."

CHAP. II. Ver. 1—15. Directions to Titus, how to exhort the different classes of society.—By "sound doctrine" we understand, not only orthodox principles, but those principles taught in a manner calculated to promote the health and activity of the soul, and adapted to the various classes of hearers and members of the Christian church.

1. He begins with the aged men, whose discriminative character should be gravity, temperance, and love; for vital Christianity has a most benevolent aspect, and a powerful tendency to promote both the present and future happiness of mankind. While it moderates and usefully directs the ardour of the young, it warms the heart of the aged, and cheers them in their passage to the tomb; but levity, either in conduct or conversation, ill becomes the gravity of gray hairs.

2. Of aged women, and particularly of such as are employed in the church, a correspondent excellence of character is required, founded upon holiness: they must act as becometh saints; and, as persons employed in the service of God, studiously avoid those vices into which women, uninfluenced by Christianity, too often fall. The female sex is the bond of union to society. The various relations it successively fills—as of daughter, wife, and mother—are of vast importance, and capable of the greatest advantages to mankind, especially as the means of forming the human character in early life.

3. Young men must be exhorted to be sober-minded and discreet; to whom Titus, as a young man and a teacher of religion, is exhorted to show himself as a pattern of good works and religious conversation.

4. Christian servants are required to be obedient in all things, neither purloining nor gainsaying, that they also, in their humble sphere, may adore the doctrine of God their Saviour.

After these exhortations, we have (ver. 11 to 14) a striking display of the nature, object, and end of the gospel dispensation, on which Dr. Doddridge excellently remarks; "Hardly does the word of God afford a more instructive and comprehensive summary of the gospel than that before us; it gives us a view of the nature of the dispensation as a doctrine of grace, and, at the same time, a doctrine according to godliness."

Ver. 7. A bishop must be blameless, &c.—Compare 1 Tim. ii. 2, 3

Ver. 8. A lover of hospitality.—Doddridge and Macknight, "hospitable"

Ver. 10. Of the circumcision—i. e. those Judaizing teachers who taught the necessity of circumcision to all men.

Ver. 11. Whose mouths must be stopped.—"Neither by persecution nor force, says Macknight, but by clear and strong reasoning."

Ver. 12. A prophet of their own.—That is, a poet; for their poets were supposed to be inspired by the Muses, if not by the gods. The verse here cited is from Epimenides, and is thus poetically rendered—

"False Cretans, savage beasts, with bellies slow."

Macknight remarks, that the words prophet and poet were used as synonymous, both by the Greeks and Romans.—Evil beasts—i. e. wild beasts.—Slow bellies—Lazy gluttons.

Ver. 13. Rebuke them sharply.—Literally, "entirely."

Ver. 14. Jewish fables.—See 1 Tim. i. 4, and note.

Ver. 15. Unto the pure all things are pure, &c.—See Mat. xv. 11. Acts

xv. 14. Rom. xiv. 20—23.

CHAP. II. Ver. 2. In charity—Greek, "have."

Ver. 3. Holiness.—Doddridge, "saints." Macknight, "sacred persons."

False accusers.—Magnin, "make lites." See note on 2 Tim. ii. 3.

Ver. 5. Keepers at home.—That is, domestic, not seeking their pleasures abroad.

Ver. 8. Sound speech.—This term is so used in this Epistle, and in the two to Timothy.—Of the contrary part—Macknight, "On the opposite side;" i. e. an infidel, or unbeliever.

Ver. 10. Not purloining.—To purloin is to defraud any one, or to keep back his property.

lity; that they may adorn the doctrine of God our Saviour in all things.

11 For the grace ^m of God that bringeth salvation ⁿ hath appeared to all men,

12 Teaching us that, denying ^o ungodliness and worldly ^p lusts, we ^q should live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world;

13 Looking ^r for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing ^s of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ;

14 Who gave ^t himself for us, that he might redeem us from all ^u iniquity, and purify ^v unto himself a peculiar ^w people, zealous ^x of good works.

15 These things speak, and exhort, and rebuke with all authority. Let ^y no man despise thee.

CHAPTER III.

1 Titus is yet further directed by Paul, both concerning the things he should teach, and not teach: 10 He is willed also to reject obstinate heretics: 12 which done, he appointeth him both time and place, wherein he should come unto him, and so conclude.

PUT them in mind to be subject ^a to principalities and powers, to obey magistrates, to be ready to every good work,

2 To speak evil of no man, to be no brawlers, but gentle, showing all ^b meekness unto all men.

3 For we ^c ourselves also were sometimes foolish, disobedient, deceived, serving divers lusts and pleasures, living in malice and envy, hateful, and hating one another.

4 But after that the kindness and ^d love of God our Saviour toward man appeared,

5 Not ^e by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he

It hath appeared to all men, and it bringeth them salvation, by inculcating the most salutary lessons that man can receive. It teaches us to deny ungodliness and worldly lusts, how pressing soever their solicitations may be. It instructs us in all the branches of our duty to God, to ourselves, and to our fellow Christians. As we are "slow of heart" to attend to such instructions, it enforces them with motives the most generous and the most animating. It represents to us, as it were in prophetic vision, the glorious appearance of the great God and our Saviour, Jesus Christ; when he shall come with everlasting blessings in his hands to reward all his faithful people, and with terrors of divine vengeance, to be poured forth on all that have rejected the authority of his gospel. And, that the most powerful considerations of gratitude may join with those of the highest interest, it directs our eyes to this divine triumphant Saviour, as having once given himself to torture and to death for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify us unto himself, a peculiar people, devoted to God, and zealous of good works."

CHAP. III. Ver. 1-15. Titus instructed what to teach and what to reject, and how he should act towards heretics. "Some wise teachers, it should seem, had insinuated that Christians were not bound, under the gospel dispensation, to obey Pagan governors; a principle which St. Paul combats in several of his epistles, for dominion (or civil power) is not "founded in grace," as some weak and wicked enthusiasts have pretended. St. Paul particularly guards against the disrespectful treatment of magistrates, as such, however ignorant or violent; for, says he, ye Christians, (that is, many of us were formerly Pagans and idolaters, and therefore ought to treat others now in the same state with candour, gentleness, and meekness. Not only so, but we should exercise towards them benevolence and compassion, even as "God our Saviour" hath done towards us. For, indeed, it is "not by works of righteousness which we have done," that we are saved, but according to his

Ver. 11. Hath appeared to all men.—Margin, "That bringeth salvation to all men, hath appeared." Doddridge and Macknight adhere to the text. The word "appeared" is applied to the shining of the sun and stars, Acts xviii. 20.

Ver. 12. The great God and our Saviour.—Dr. Burgess remarks, that the whole of this title is referred to Christ "by the unanimous judgment of the Greek Fathers, and of all the Latins but one." Smith quotes Wanderworth and Bishop Maitland, on the same side. Doddridge quotes Fleming, as remarking, that we never read in Scripture of the Father's appearing. But see Mat. xvi. 27. Luke iv. 26.

Ver. 14. A peculiar people.—See Exod. xix. 5. Deut. vii. 6.

Ver. 15. Speak—exhort—rebuke.—I. e. inculcate the doctrines—enforce the duties—and rebuke the vices, above enumerated.—With all authority.—I. e. as a divinely appointed and divinely instructed teacher.—Let no man despise thee.—Two things are necessary to avoid contempt: to assert nothing without proof, and not to contradict by actions what is taught in words. Compare 1 Tim. iv. 12.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1. Principalities.—Macknight, "Governments." 1338

A. M. cir. 409.
A. D. cir. 63.

1 Mat. 5. 16.

m Ro. 5. 15.

n or, to all men, hath appeared

o Ro. 8. 13.

p 1 Pe. 2. 11.

q Lu. 1. 73.

r 2 Pe. 3. 12.

s Re. 1. 7.

t Ep. 5. 2.

u Ps. 130. 8.

v He. 9. 14.

w De. 7. 6.

x 1 Pe. 2. 9.

y Ep. 2. 10.

z 1 Ti. 4. 12.

a Ro. 13. 1.

b Ep. 4. 2.

c 1 Co. 6. 11.

d 1 Pe. 4. 3.

e or, pity.

f Ep. 2. 4, 9.

g or, richly.

h Ro. 3. 24.

i ver. 14.

j 2 Ti. 2. 23.

k Mat. 18. 17.

l or, profess himself.

m ver. 8.

saved us, by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost;

6 Which he shed on us ^f abundantly through Jesus Christ our Saviour;

7 That being justified ^g by his grace, we should be made heirs according to the hope of eternal life.

8 This is a faithful saying, and these things I will that thou affirm constantly, that they which have believed in God might be careful ^h to maintain good works. These things are good and profitable unto men.

9 But ⁱ avoid foolish questions, and genealogies, and contentions, and strivings about the law; for they are unprofitable and vain.

10 A man that is a heretic after the first and second admonition ^j reject;

11 Knowing that he that is such is subverted, and sinneth, being condemned of himself.

12 When I shall send Artemas unto thee, or Tychicus, be diligent to come unto me to Nicopolis: for I have determined there to winter.

13 Bring Zenas the lawyer and Apollos on their journey diligently, that nothing be wanting unto them.

14 And let ours also learn to ^k maintain good works for necessary uses, that they be not unfruitful.

15 All that are with me salute thee. Greet them that love us in the faith. Grace be with you all. Amen.

¶ It was written to Titus, ordained the first bishop of the church of the Cretians, from Nicopolis of Macedonia.

sovereign mercy, and by the agency of his Holy Spirit, which he hath shed on us abundantly through Jesus Christ; the effects of which we should be careful to exhibit in our lives and conversations, for it is not only natural, but even just and proper, to judge of religious principles by their effect on the life and conduct of those who maintain them; and the principles of the gospel have the exclusive honour of being efficacious to the production and progress of universal holiness. "I will that thou affirm constantly, (says the apostle,) that they which have believed in God be careful to maintain good works." But as to "foolish questions, and genealogies, and contentions, and strivings about the law—avoid them; for they are unprofitable and vain." Still worse; they often lead to heresy; and "a man that is a heretic (says he,) after the first and second admonition, reject." Here arise two questions of great difficulty and importance—Who are heretics? and, How should they be treated?

1. Who are heretics? The term "heretic" is used only in this place throughout the New Testament, though the word "heresy" is used frequently in the book of Acts, as (equivalent to sect. (See Acts v. 17; xv. 5; xxiv. 5, 14; xxvi. 5; xxviii. 22.)) "Prior to Christianity, the word was used indifferently for any sect or party, religious or philosophical; but after the erection of the Christian church, it was used for such separations only as were made on the ground of doctrine or principle; and other separations, grounded on difference of religious rites, or the preference of certain preachers, were denominated schisms. (1 Corinthians i. 10-12.) What, then, constituted the notion of a heretic in the first ages of the church? 1. He was supposed to be in an error. 2. That error was thought pernicious. "Heresy, (says Dr. Waterland,) lies in espousing pernicious doctrines." 3. That error was of sufficient importance to break communion, and so violate the unity of the church.

That the faith of such a man may be subverted, is easily un-

Ver. 4. God our Saviour.—This expression occurs only here and in the 2d Epistle to Timothy.

Ver. 8. A faithful saying.—This phrase also occurs only here, and in Paul's Epistles to Timothy.

Ver. 9. Foolish questions, &c.—See 1 Tim. i. 4, and note.

Ver. 11. Subverted.—Doddridge and Macknight, "perverted," or turned aside.

Ver. 12. Artemas is only here mentioned.—Tychicus.—See Ephes. vi. 21.—Nicopolis.—There are several cities of this name, and it is doubtful which is here intended; some referring it to Nicopolis, a city of Epirus; others to a city of the same name in Thrace, on the borders of Macedonia, as in the subscription to the Epistle. (This was probably Nicopolis, a city of Epirus, on the gulf of Ambacria, in the Adriatic sea, near Actium, which Augustus built in commemoration of his victory there over Mark Antony.)—Beggar.

Ver. 13. Zenas the lawyer.—Probably a professor of the civil, or Roman law.

Ver. 14. Maintain good works.—Macknight, "For necessary uses." Doddridge, "purposes"; that is, to support themselves, and to assist others.

Ver. 15. Them that love us, in the faith.—I. e. our Christian friends.

derstood; but how he is self-condemned, is not so clear. Some have thought it implies, that they did not themselves believe the doctrines which they taught. We can scarcely think that any Christian teachers would propagate opinions, knowing them to be false; yet finding certain opinions led to popularity, it is possible they might be too easily satisfied with them; especially if they had the ambition to raise a party, in order to be at the head of it. Still farther, if their practice agreed not with their doctrine, (as too often has been the case,) then would they plainly be self-condemned.

2. But how should such heretics be treated? Here is not a word about burning them; no fines, nor imprisonments, nor even curses, "with bell, book, and candle;" but only admonish them again and again, and if they remain incorrigible, reject them—first as teachers, and, finally, from the communion of the church.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE EPISTLE TO TITUS.

[THE striking affinity which subsists between the Epistle to Titus and the first Epistle to Timothy has been pointed out by several able writers. Both Epistles are addressed to persons left to preside in, and regulate their respective churches during the Apostle's absence. Both are principally occupied in describing the qualifications of those who should be appointed to ecclesiastical offices; and the reprimands in this description are nearly the same in both Epistles. Timothy and Titus are both cautioned against the same prevalent corruptions; the phrases and expressions in both letters are nearly the same; and the writer accords his two disciples with the same salutations; and passes on to the business of the Epistle with the same transition. The most natural mode of accounting for these resemblances and verbal coincidences, is by supposing, as we have already had reason to conclude, that the two Epistles were written about the same time, and while the same ideas and phrases still dwelt in the writer's mind. "Nevertheless," as Marknight justly observes, "the repetition of these precepts and charges is not without its use to the church still, as it makes us more deeply sensible of their great importance; and to mention, that in the Epistle to Titus there are things peculiar to itself, which enhance its value. In short, the Epistles to Timothy and Titus, taken together, containing a full account of the qualifications and duties of the ministers of the gospel, may be considered as a complete body of divinely inspired ecclesiastical canons, to be observed by the Christian clergy, of all communions, to the end of the world." The island of Crete, now Candia, where Titus was a resident, was renowned in ancient times for the sobriety of its climate. For the richness and fertility of its soil, for its bounded cities, for the excellence of its laws, given by its king Minos; for Mount Ida, where Jupiter was said to have been preserved from the jealousy of his father Saturn; for the sepulchre of Jupiter; and in fact, for being the cradle of the gods, most of the absurdities that have been embodied into the heathen mythology having there had their origin. The Cretans, though at an early period celebrated for their great advances in civilization, and for an admirable system of laws, were notorious for covetousness, piracy, luxury, and especially for lying; insomuch that Kretes, to act like a Cretan, became a proverb for deceiving and debauching; and a Cretan he signified one that was remarkable for its magnitude and its pudence. They were one of the nations against which the Grecian proverb, "beware of the three K's," (in English C.) was directed, i. e. Kappadocia, Kilicia, and Krete; and Poliphus (i. e. c. 855, &c.) represents them as disgraced by piracy, robbery, and almost every crime; and the only people in the world who found nothing good in money, however acquired. With this agrees their character given by Eusebius, one of their own poets, as quoted by St. Paul, (ch. 12. 13.) from a work of his no longer extant, entitled Concerning Oracles, and which the Apostle declares constituted their true character:

The Cretans are always liars, destructive wild beasts, gluttons and idlers. Over this mass of idleness and corruption, however, the gospel triumphed, producing by its benign and heavenly influences, purity, honesty, truth, and every moral and Christian virtue; nor has the successive subjugation of the people by the Saracens and Turks been ever able wholly to extinguish, though it has obscured, the light of Christianity which once shone upon them with such splendour. The island is divided into twelve bishoprics, under the patriarch of Constantinople, but the exorable Turks, though they profess to allow the Christians the free exercise of their religion, will not permit them to repair their churches, many of which they have converted into mosques; and it is only by the influence of large sums of gold, paid to the pashas, that they can keep their religious houses from total dilapidation. — Bugster.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO PHILEMON.

PHILEMON appears to have been a person of some consideration at Colosse, and in the church at that place, who had been converted by the ministry of St. Paul, probably during his abode at Ephesus; Onesimus, a slave of Philemon, having, as it is generally thought, been guilty of some dishonesty, fled from his master and came to Rome, where the Apostle was at that time, under confinement the first time, as appears by his expectation of being shortly released, about A. D. 62. Having, by some means, attended the preaching of the Apostle, "in his own hired house," it pleased God to bless it to his conversion. After he had given satisfactory evidence of a real change, and manifested an excellent and amiable disposition, which greatly endeared him to St. Paul, he was sent back to his master by the Apostle, who wrote this Epistle to reconcile Philemon to his once unfaithful servant. — Bugster.

4 He rejoiceth to hear of the faith and love of Philemon, 9 whom he desirably to forgive his servant Onesimus, and lovingly to receive him again.

PAUL, a prisoner ^a of Jesus Christ, and Timothy ^b our brother, unto Philemon our dearly beloved, and ^c fellow labourer,

2 And to our beloved Apphia, and Archippus ^c our fellow soldier, and to the church ^d in thy house:

3 Grace ^e to you, and peace, from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

4 I thank ^f my God, making mention of thee always in my prayers,

5 Hearing of thy love and faith, which thou hast toward the Lord Jesus, and toward all saints;

6 That ^g the communication of thy faith may become effectual ^h by the acknowledging of

A. M. 456
A. D. 62

a Ep. 1
b Phil. 2:25
c Col. 4:17
d Ro. 16:5
e Ep. 1:2
f Phil. 1:16
g Phil. 1:9, 11
h Ja. 2:14, 17

i Phil. 4:8
j 2 Cor. 7:14
k 1 Th. 2:6
l Col. 4:19
m 1 Co. 4:15
n 1 Pe. 2:10

every ⁱ good thing which is in you in Christ Jesus.

7 For we have great joy and consolation in thy love, because the bowels of the saints are refreshed ^j by thee, brother.

8 Wherefore, though ^k I might be much bold in Christ to enjoin thee that which is convenient,

9 Yet for love's sake I rather beseech thee, being such a one as Paul the aged, and now also a prisoner of Jesus Christ.

10 I beseech thee for my son ^l Onesimus, whom I have begotten ^m in my bonds;

11 Which ⁿ in time past was to thee unprofitable, but now profitable to thee and to me;

12 Whom I have sent again: thou therefore receive him, that is, mine own bowels;

Ver. 1—25. Paul intercedes with Philemon on the behalf of his slave Onesimus.—Philemon appears to have been a converted Gentile, living at Colosse, who became a member, and perhaps a minister, of the Christian church there, of which a branch, at least, met in his house. Onesimus was one of his slaves, who, having taken disgust (as is supposed) from some unknown cause, ran away from his master, and fled to Rome, where St. Paul was then a prisoner. Being providentially brought under his ministry, he was thereby converted to Christianity, and in consequence became known to Paul, with whom he seems to have remained a short time, till he was fully satisfied of his conversion. He then sent him back with this conciliatory epistle to his master, in which he affectionately entreats Philemon to receive him as his (Paul's) own son.

In introducing his request to Philemon, the apostle significantly calls himself the prisoner of Jesus Christ, exciting thereby all his sympathetic feelings towards him, both as a prisoner and a martyr; uniting with his own name that of the amiable young Timothy, as it were to second his request. He then addresses the "beloved Apphia," probably Philemon's consort, and "Archippus," whom he calls "our fellow-soldier," as engaged also in the Christian warfare, and perhaps, (as Dr. Lightfoot suggests) Philemon's son; Paul thereby wishing to unite their mediation with his own, on the behalf of the unhappy fugitive, who was bearer of the epistle.

The apostle then mentions the interest he had taken in Philemon's welfare, making mention of him continually in his prayers to God, and rejoicing, at the same time, in what he heard of his friend's benevolence and compassion. All these circumstances are ingeniously wrought into the introduction to his request; yet he gives him to understand, that he might have spoken in stronger language—that, as an apostle, he might have enjoined on him what he now only solicited. And who was the petitioner? "Paul the aged, a prisoner of Jesus Christ." And for whom did he petition? His "son Onesimus"—his "own bowels," as he afterwards expresses it. And what had he done? He had absconded, and doubtless with some of his master's property, for else he could hardly have reached Rome. And how does Paul meet this charge? "If he (Onesimus) have wronged thee, or owe thee ought, put that on mine account: I Paul have written it with mine own hand; I will repay it."

Ver. 1. Paul, a prisoner.—Marknight, (more literally,) "confined with a chain." See Acts xxviii. 20. [The Apostle in this Epistle indulges in some fine paronomasies on the proper names. Thus Philemon, affectionate, or beloved, is, "our dearly beloved;" Apphia, is, "the beloved sister;" as several MSS. Vulgate, and others correctly read; Archippus, (the ruler of the horse, for manning of which heroes were anciently famous,) is, "our fellow soldier;" and Onesimus, (useful or profitable,) once unprofitable, is now profitable.] — Bugster.

Ver. 6. That the communication of thy faith may become effectual.—Doddridge, "That thy communion in the faith may be efficacious" in inducing others also to believe in Christ.

Ver. 7. The bowels of the saints are refreshed by thee.—i. e. by Paul's mercies charities to the poor saints.

Ver. 8. Might be much bold.—Rather, "more," or "very bold."

Ver. 9. Paul the aged.—Marknight calculates, that at this time he was sixty years old, and perhaps, through his many sufferings, appeared much older. And now also a prisoner—see note on ver. 1.

Ver. 10. Onesimus, whom, &c.—Marknight translates this more literally, "My son, whom I begot in my bonds, even Onesimus," and remarks, that placing Onesimus' name in the end of this sentence has in the original, a fine effect, by keeping the reader in suspense.

Ver. 12. Sent again.—i. e. sent back again. — Mine own bowels.—i. e. the 13 Whom I would have retained with me, that ^a in thy stead he might have ministered unto me in the bonds of the gospel :

14 But without thy mind would I do nothing; that thy benefit should not be as it were of necessity, but ^b willingly.

15 For ^a perhaps he therefore departed for a season, that thou shouldest receive him for ever :

16 Not now as a servant, but above a servant, a brother ^c beloved, specially to me, but how much more unto thee, both in the ^a flesh, and in the Lord ?

17 If thou count me therefore a ^c partner, receive him as myself.

18 If he hath wronged thee, or oweth ^c thee ought, put that on mine account;

19 I Paul have written ^c it with mine own hand, I will repay ^c it: albeit I do not say to thee how thou owest unto me even thine own self besides.

20 Yea, brother, let me have joy of thee in the Lord: refresh ^a my bowels in the Lord.

21 Having confidence ^a in thy obedience I wrote unto thee, knowing that thou wilt also do more than I say.

22 But withal prepare me also a lodging: for I ^a trust that through ^a your prayers I shall be given unto you.

23 There salute thee ^c Epaphras, my fellow prisoner in Christ Jesus;

24 ^a Marcus, ^a Aristarchus, ^b Demas, Lucas, my fellow labourers.

25 The ^c grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit. Amen.

¶ Written from Rome to Philemon, by Onesimus a servant.

"In this beautiful passage, (says Dr. Macknight,) there is a group of the most affecting arguments closely crowded together. On the one hand, we have Philemon's own reputation for goodness; his friendship to the apostle; his respect for his character; reverence for his age; compassion for his bonds; and, at the same time, an insinuation of that obedience which Philemon owed to him as an apostle. On the other hand, we have Onesimus's repentance and return to virtue; his profession of the Christian religion, notwithstanding the evils to which it exposed him; and his being the object of his spiritual father's tender affection. In short, every word contains an argument."

Finally, the apostle delicately hints, that as he had been the honoured instrument of the conversion of Philemon, as well as of his slave Onesimus, he had some claim upon him on the score of gratitude; for it certainly becomes us to love and respect those whom God honours by making them the medium of his benefits, though all must, ultimately, be referred to him. It is on this principle the apostle adds, "Howbeit I do not say, how thou owest me also thine own self besides." As our patient of his body; speaking of him as his own son—Compare Isa. XLvi. 19, xlvii. 1.

Ver. 13. That thy benefit.—(Greek, Agathon.) "good deed," or benevolence.

Ver. 15. For a season.—[This is a most delicate and masterly stroke; and indeed the whole Epistle, as Doddridge justly remarks, considered in no other point of view than as a more liberal composition, must be allowed to be a masterpiece of its kind. If compared with the Epistle of the younger Pliny, to which we may add another of Horace, written on a similar occasion, that Epistle, though composed by one who excelled in the epistolary style, and renewed his unexceptionable claims upon our gratitude as the instruments of our first birth, so ministers, who have been employed by Providence as the means of our new birth, or regeneration, have doubtless large demands upon us of respect and love.

In the close of this epistle the apostle intimates a confident persuasion of being released, and being enabled to visit Colosse, which shows that it must have been written before his second epistle to Timothy, when he was waiting for death and martyrdom. It is generally dated in A. D. 63, about a year before his first to Timothy, and two years before his martyrdom.

This epistle has been much admired as a specimen of friendly correspondence. Comparing it to one of Pliny's, on an occasion somewhat similar, (Lib. ix. epis. 21.) Dr. Doddridge says, "though penned by one who was reckoned to excel in the epistolary style, and though it has many beauties, it will be found, by persons of taste, much inferior to this animated composition of the apostle Paul;" the chief excellency, however, of this (as of all Paul's Epistles) lies in the vein of Christian sympathy and piety which runs throughout the whole.

though undoubtedly it has many beauties, will be found by persons of taste much inferior to this animated composition of the Apostle Paul.]—Bagster.—For ever.—Not only in this world, but also in the next.

Ver. 20. Refresh my bowels.—Paul's bowels yearned over Onesimus: he was greatly concerned for him: Philemon's kindness would relieve his anxiety, and comfort him. Compare ver. 7.

Ver. 21. More than I say.—Not only pardon him, but give him his liberty, that he might devote himself to the ministry of the gospel—which doubtless was the event.

Ver. 21. Marcus, &c.—See Col. iv. 10, 12, 14.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE EPISTLE TO PHILEMON.

Paley expresses his admiration of the tenderness and delicacy of this epistle. There is certainly something very melting and persuasive in every part. It is a warm, affectionate, authoritative teacher, ardently interceding with an absent friend for a beloved convert in a state of slavery, in a manner full of kindly affection, according with the sensibility of his mind.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE HEBREWS.

[THE HEBREWS were the Jews in Judæa, who spoke a dialect of the Hebrew, and were so called to distinguish them from those who resided among the Greeks, and spoke their language, and were called Hellenists, or Greeks. (Acts i. 13, 19, 22; xi. 20.) To such of the Hebrews as professed Christianity this Epistle was addressed, according to the opinion of the ancient Christian writers, and the best modern critics; and this opinion is corroborated by the internal evidence of the Epistle itself, which contains many things peculiarly suitable to the Hebrews in Judæa. Though Hebrew was commonly spoken by the persons to whom this Epistle was sent, there is no necessity to suppose, with Origen, Jerome, and others, that it was originally written in that language, and afterwards translated into Greek by Luke, Bernardus, or Chrysostom; for the latter language was then universally understood, and much facilitated by the imitations of Hebrew, and the apostolical Epistles being intended for the use of the whole Christian world, as well as for the persons to whom they were sent, it was more proper that they should be written in Greek, than in any provincial dialect. In fact, the circumstance of there being no authentic report or tradition respecting any copy of the Hebrew Epistle; the style of the epistle throughout, which has all the air of an original; the occurrence of numerous personisms on Greek words; the interpretation of Hebrew names, such as Melchizedek by King of Righteousness, and Satan by reacher, in a manner by no means like the additions of a translator; and the quotations from the Old Testament being generally taken from the Septuagint, even where that version in some degree varies from the Hebrew; all these facts furnish positive and conclusive evidence that it was originally written in the Greek language, in which it is now extant. Though St. Paul's name is not affixed to this Epistle, (which he probably omitted because he was obnoxious to the enemies of Christianity in Judæa,) yet the general testimony of antiquity, the current tradition of the church, the supercription, "The Epistle of Paul the Apostle to the Hebrews," being found in all our manuscripts, except one, and the agreement of the style, or phrases, allusions, and exhortations, with those in the acknowledged Epistles of St. Paul, determine it to be the genuine production of that eminent Apostle; to which conclusion Carpenter, Whitby, Lardner, Macknight, Hales, Rosenmüller, Bengel, Bishop Tindale, Horne, Townsend, and almost every other modern commentator and critic, after weighing the mass of evidence, both external and internal, are constrained to arrive. If, then, it was written by the author of this Epistle, the time when, and the place where, it was written, may be easily ascertained; for the subjection from the saints in Italy, (ch. xii. 24,) and his promise of seeing the Hebrews shortly, (ver. 23,) plainly intimate that his first imprisonment at Rome was then terminated, or on the point of being so. Consequently it was written from Italy, perhaps from Rome, soon after the Epistles to the Colossians, Philippians, and Philemon, either at the end of A. D. 62, or more probably in the beginning of the year 63. The grand design of the Apostle, in writing this Epistle, was, to guard the Jews in Palestine, who were then in a state of poverty, affliction, and persecution, against apostasy from the faith; by proving the truth of the grand doctrines of Christianity, and by showing that it was the completion and perfection of the Mosaic dispensation, the rites and ceremonies of which were but types of the New Testament dispensation.]—Bagster.

CHAPTER I.

1 Christ in these last times coming to us from the Father, is preferred above the angels, both in person and office.

GOD, who ^a at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets,

CHAP. I. VER. 1—14. Christ coming in these last times, is preferred before the angels.—The greater part of this epistle CHAP. I. VER. 1. At sundry times.—Macknight, "in sundry parts." Su-Peice explains it "God discovered his will anciently in several parts, or

A. M. 4066.
A. D. 63.

a Nu 19, 6, 5
b De 18, 15
c Ps 8
d Job 1, 7
e Job 1, 14

2 Hath in these last days ^b spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir ^c of all things, by whom ^d also he made the worlds;

3 Who ^e being the brightness of his glory and the express image of his person, and up-consists in a comparison and contrast between the law and the gospel, and it begins with comparing the manner of their purity; so that one part was to be learned from one prophet, and another from another"—And in divers manners.—Macknight remarks, "This holding all things by the word of His power, when ¹ he had by himself purged our sins, sat down ² on the right hand of the Majesty on high;

4 Being made so much better than the angels, as he hath by inheritance obtained a more excellent name than they.

5 For unto which of the angels said he at any time, "Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee?" And again, "I will be to him a Father, and he shall be to me a Son?"

6 And again, when he bringeth in the first-begotten into the world, he saith, And ⁸ let all the angels of God worship him.

7 And ¹ of the angels he saith, "Who maketh his angels spirits, and his ministers a flame of fire."

8 But unto the Son he saith, "Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever: a sceptre of ⁹ righteousness is the sceptre of thy kingdom."

9 Thou hast loved righteousness, and hated iniquity; therefore God, even thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows.

10 And, "Thou, Lord, in the beginning hast laid the foundation of the earth; and the heavens are the works of thy hands:"

11 They shall perish; but thou remainest; and they all shall wax old as doth a garment;

12 And as a vesture shalt thou fold them up, and they shall be changed: but thou art the same, and thy years shall not fail.

13 But to which of the angels said he at any time, "Sit on my right hand, until I make thine enemies thy footstool?"

14 Are they not all ministering ¹ spirits, sent forth ² to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation?

CHAPTER II.

¹ We ought to be obedient to Christ Jesus, 5, and that because he vouchsafed to take our nature upon him, 14, as it was necessary.

THEREFORE we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have delivery to mankind: the former, that is, the Old Testament revelation, was parcell'd out at different times, (so the original signifies,) in the course of 2000 years; the latter was revealed as it were, all at once, for it was not more than ten years from the baptism of Christ to the mission of St. Paul. Again, the former revelation was given in a great variety of ways, and by a succession of prophets, through many generations; the latter by the ministry of Jesus, and his apostles, within the space of a few years.

Another circumstance, far more striking and important, was the different ranks and importance of the messengers—God "hath in these last days spoken to us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things," &c., and whose rank and dignity now demand our special consideration.

1. He is the Son—so called in distinction from all the adopted sons of God; and he is here elsewhere called God's own, and only begotten Son. (Rom. viii. 3; and John i. 14, 18.) As such he is declared to be "heir of all things," and "Lord of all" creatures, by whom also he made the worlds, as is stated by St. John, (chap. i. 3.) He is also asserted to be the "brightness," effulgence, and beaming forth of the Father's glory, and the express character of his person; so that whatever perfections exist in the nature of the eternal Father, have an exact counterpart in the person of the Son; just as every mark or character of a seal is imprinted on the melted wax to which it is applied; language which certainly can be applied to no mere creature without confounding opposites in nature.

When it is said, "upholding all things by the word of his power," it has been questioned whether the pronoun [his] should be referred to the Father or the Son; but so mixed, so completely the same, are the divine perfections of the sacred Three, that it is in vain to attempt to distinguish them; if they are one in nature, so must they be in every divine perfection. It is added, "when he had by himself purged our sins;" that is, when, by the sacrifice which he offered on the cross, he had atoned for our sins, he then took his place at the right hand of the Majesty on high; and here we may remark a striking difference of expression. Before his incarnation, the Son was in the bosom of the Father; after his ascension, he took his place at his right hand—his person, his character, his achievements for our redemption were acknowledged, and gloriously rewarded.

"Being made, or having become, so much better than the angels, as he hath by right of inheritance, as the Son of God, obtained a more excellent and honourable name than they."

change does not refer to the different manners in which God revealed himself to the prophets, such as dreams, visions, voices, &c., but it refers to the different ways in which the prophets communicated the different revelations which they received, to fit fitness—in types and figures, significant actions, and dark sayings, as well as in plain language.

Ver. 2. Hath in these last days—Namely, of the gospel dispensation. See note on "Thou art my Son"—By his Son—Doddridge. "The Son," the pronoun here being an unnecessary supplement.—Heir—That is, Lord or proprietor of all things.—So Paul teaches us, Gal. iii. 1. The heir is "Lord of all," which title Peter also ascribes to Christ, (Acts x. 36.) Pope Smith remarks, that the Greek word heir is by no means restricted to its primary meaning of possessor, or by descent and refers to Benefactor and Seigneur, as authorities.—By whom a by whom is used in chap. vi. 2.

Ver. 3. Who being the brightness of his glory—i. e. of the Father's glory.—And the express image—or character?—that is, says the learned Leitz, "Answering to the divine perfections, as the impression of wax bears to the engraving of the seal." Doddridge adds, "It is observable, that Philo calls the Logos, the character of the image of God."—Of his person—i. e. of the substance.—Compare Col. i. 15. And so the word hypostasis is rendered, essence—i. e. "The substance of things hoped for." Pope Smith quotes Rossini as saying, "It denotes God himself." The Son is called the absolutely perfect image of the Father, because he is like him in power, wisdom, goodness, &c.; since, by a Son, we understand one of the same nature as the Father. Schreier exclaims, "The express resemblance of the essence or nature of God, and of his unchangeable majesty."—And upholding all things—The word properly signifies upholding, bearing, or sustaining.—M. Lenn. Compare Col. i. 16.

Ver. 4. Being made, &c.—MacKnight. "He is so much better than the angels, superior to the angels by how much he hath inherited," &c. Our ever could; for though angels are, in an inferior sense, the sons of God, (Job xxxviii. 7.) He (the Father) never addressed any one of them thus emphatically—"Thou art my Son!" much less exalted any other being as an object of worship to the heavenly hosts, saying, "Let all the angels of God worship him!"

And here we may remark how much the sacred writers (and Paul especially) delight in heaping honours upon our Saviour. Speak of him as a man, and he is "rarer than (all) the sons of men" beside. Speak of him as a king, and he exceeds both in the equity and dignity of his throne; he is "King of kings, and Lord of lords." Thus he is anointed with the oil of gladness and of grace, above all with whom he may be reckoned or associated. "In all things he hath the pre-eminence." (Col. i. 18.)

What is said, verse 7, concerning the angels, is generally understood as a comparison between those celestial beings, and the material agents of air and fire, as we have explained it, in the exposition of Ps. civ. 4, from whence these words are quoted; and Doddridge here paraphrases the passage thus: "He who rules the winds and the lightnings, has his angels under equal command; and employs them with the strength of winds, and the rapidity of lightnings, in his service." With respect to the doctrine of angels, we know that they are all ministering spirits, employed by Christ in the government of the world and of the church. Sometimes they direct the tempest or the pestilence, and at others, they wait upon the church or its ministers. (see 2 Kings xix. 35; 1 Kings xix. 5, &c.) but we never read of their being seated upon thrones, or authorized to receive the homage of their fellow creatures, which, indeed, when offered, they have conscientiously refused. (Rev. xxii. 8, 9.)

When it is said, "They are all ministering spirits," the word all "is here emphatical, denoting (says Dr. MacKnight) that even the highest orders of angels bow the knee to Jesus; ministering in the affairs of the world according to his direction. But though the Scriptures speak of all the angels as thus ministering, this does not imply that every angel is thus actually employed, in ministering for the heirs of salvation, but that every one of them is subject to be so employed." And these angels are ministers who belong to Christ, not to men, though employed for their benefit; nor will this passage prove that every heir of salvation has a guardian angel individually assigned to him, as some have supposed.

CHAP. II. Ver. 1-18. We must take heed to the gospel of equivalent translation, "by inheritance obtained," seems to imply the death of the Father, from whom such inheritance descended; but it is not so in the East, as we have observed in the parable of the prodigal son, where the father "threw his living," or property, between his sons. Doddridge, MacKnight, and M. Lenn, read simply, "He hath inherited," and completed on Ver. 2 re- marks, that the original may denote the attainment of property by any kind of title.

Ver. 5. Patris unigeniti, &c.—That is, none of the angels have been thus honoured.—I will be to him a Father, &c.—2 Sam. vii. 14, when it is spoken of Solomon, who was a peccator Christ.

Ver. 6. And again, when he bringeth, &c.—So Doddridge, MacKnight, and M. Lenn, &c. The first begotten—MacKnight and M. Lenn, "first born." Compare Rom. i. 4, Col. i. 18. Rev. i. 5.

Ver. 7. And of—Doddridge, "concerning"—the angels.—And let all the angels of God worship him—This appears taken from Psalm xxviii. 7, which is thus read in the LXX.—"Worship him all ye his angels." Abrahams, in Isa. li. 12, expresses that the ancient Hebrews explained this piece of the Messiah, who was to be called above Abraham, above Moses, and above the angels. See Hemmendorff in Heb. i. 4.

Ver. 9. More thy fellows—Doddridge, "associates," by which many understand the angels, but we think unjustly.

Ver. 12. As a vesture shalt thou fold them up—Compare Isa. xxxiv. 4; Rev. vi. 16. also 2 Peter, iv. 1-7.

Ver. 13. To minister for them—Doddridge, "to attend on those who shall inherit salvation."

CHAP. II. Ver. 1. Therefore ought to give the more earnest heed—MacKnight. "On this account we ought to attend the more earnestly."—Let them slip—Margm. "Run out, as leaking vessels;" or, perhaps, as "withered through a sieve."

heard, lest at any time we should * let them slip.

2 For if the word spoken by ^b angels was steadfast, and ^c every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward;

3 How ^d shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation; which ^e at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him;

4 God ^f also bearing them witness, both with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles, and ^g gifts of the Holy Ghost, according to his own will?

5 For unto the angels hath he not put in subjection the world to come, whereof we speak.

6 But one in a certain place testified, saying, ^h What is man, that thou art mindful of him? or the son of man, that thou visitest him?

7 Thou madest him ⁱ a little lower than the angels; thou crownedst him with glory and honour, and didst set him over the works of thy hands:

8 Thou hast put all things in subjection under his feet. For in that he put all in subjection under him, he left nothing ^j that is not put under him. But ^k now we see not yet all things put under him.

9 But we see Jesus, who ^l was made a little lower than the angels ^m for the suffering of death, crowned ⁿ with glory and honour; that he ^o by the grace of God should taste death for every man.

A. M. cir. 4067
A. D. cir. 63.

a run out as leaning vessels.
b Ac. 7.53.
c Nu. 15.31
d e. 4.141.
e M. 1.14
f Ac. 11.3.
g or, distributions.
h Ps. 4.
i &c.

j or, a little shade inferior to.
k l. 15.24
l Ph. 2.8,9
m or, by.
n Ac. 2.33.
o Jn. 3.16.

p Lu. 24.26, 46.
q Ro. 11.36.
r Lu. 13.32
s Jn. 16.21.
t Ps. 2.22.
u Ps. 18.2
v Is. 12.2
w Is. 18.
x Jn. 17.6.
y 12.
z Jn. 1.14
1 Co. 15.54
2 Lu. 1.74.

a he taketh not hold of angels, but of the seed of Abraham.
b Is. 18.2.
c Jn. 17.6.
d 12.
e Jn. 1.14
f 1 Co. 15.54
g Lu. 1.74.

a he taketh not hold of angels, but of the seed of Abraham.
b Is. 18.2.
c Jn. 17.6.
d 12.
e Jn. 1.14
f 1 Co. 15.54
g Lu. 1.74.

a he taketh not hold of angels, but of the seed of Abraham.
b Is. 18.2.
c Jn. 17.6.
d 12.
e Jn. 1.14
f 1 Co. 15.54
g Lu. 1.74.

a he taketh not hold of angels, but of the seed of Abraham.
b Is. 18.2.
c Jn. 17.6.
d 12.
e Jn. 1.14
f 1 Co. 15.54
g Lu. 1.74.

a he taketh not hold of angels, but of the seed of Abraham.
b Is. 18.2.
c Jn. 17.6.
d 12.
e Jn. 1.14
f 1 Co. 15.54
g Lu. 1.74.

10 For it became ^a him, for ^b whom ^c are all things, and by whom ^d are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the captain ^e of their salvation ^f perfect through sufferings.

11 For both he that sanctifieth and they who are sanctified ^g are all ^h of one: for which cause he is not ashamed to call them brethren,

12 Saying, ⁱ I will declare thy name unto my brethren, in the midst of the church will I sing praise unto thee.

13 And again, ^j "I will put my trust in him." And again, ^k "Behold I and the children which ^l God hath given me.

14 Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he ^m also himself likewise took part of the same; that through death ⁿ he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil;

15 And deliver them who ^o through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage.

16 For verily ^p he took not on ^q him the nature of angels; but he took on ^r him the seed of Abraham.

17 Wherefore in all things it behooved him to be made like unto ^s his brethren, that he might be a ^t merciful and faithful high priest in things ^u pertaining to God, to make reconciliation for the sins of the people.

18 For in that he himself ^v hath suffered being tempted, he is able to succour them that are tempted.

Christ Jesus, who became man, and suffered for our salvation. It is the manner of St. Paul to associate himself with the persons to whom he wrote as one of them; and therefore, though he had himself received the gospel immediately from the Lord Jesus, he speaks of himself as if he had only heard it preached in the same way as others, in order to press upon them the more effectually, the necessity and importance of attending to its momentous doctrines.

The present chapter connects itself with the former by a "therefore;" deriving from the dignity of Christ's person a forcible argument for attending to the message of his grace; "for if the word spoken by angels was steadfast," &c. But what was the word spoken by angels? Unquestionably the Mosaic dispensation, and especially the moral law. This, St. Stephen informs us, was "given by the disposition of angels," (Acts vii. 38.); and St. Paul says, "It was ordained by angels in the hands of a mediator," (namely, Moses,) (Gal. iii. 19.) How far the agency of angels may be employed, it is alike useless and impertinent to inquire; but the gospel being delivered by the mouth of the Son of God himself, acquires thereby a weight superior to the law, which, though from the voice of God, was delivered by the medium of his servants. So the apostle had argued in the beginning of this epistle: "God, who in time past spoke by the prophets, hath now spoken by his Son." Well might he, therefore, add, "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?" A salvation truly great in every point of view in which it can be considered; whether in reference to the ruin from which it saves, or the happiness to which it exalts; whether we consider the price it cost, or the grace it exhibits. And great also is the evidence with which its promulgation is attended—"signs and wonders, with divers miracles and gifts of the Holy Ghost."

By "the world to come," (ver. 5,) we understand the gospel dispensation, or kingdom of Messiah, (as in chap. vi. 5,) which was so called, as is well known, by the ancient Rabbies; but what is the meaning of this not being subjected to the angels?

Ver. 4. And gifts.—Margin, "distributions;" that is, of the various gifts of the Spirit. Compare 1 Co. xii. 1.

Ver. 5. For unto the angels hath he not put in subjection—i. e. under their government or direction, as the animal world was placed under subjection to Adam, as is stated in ver. 8 following, and in Gen. i. 28.—The world to come—Thus, as we learn from Maandules, was a common phrase to designate the kingdom of Messiah, called also the age to come, or the future age.—Whereof we speak—Or treat; and that he was speaking of this kingdom of the Messiah, is evident from the context, ver. 3, 4.

Ver. 7. A little lower—Margin, "A little while inferior to;" meaning the Son of Man when upon earth.

Ver. 9. But we see Jesus, &c.—In our translation, it should seem as if the death of Christ was subsequent to his exaltation, which is exactly the reverse of the fact; MacKnight therefore transposes the passage thus: "But we see Jesus, who for a little while was made less than angels, that by the grace of God he might taste of death on account of every one, for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honour." The Doctor admits that the original text is in the order of our translation; but he adds, "Thus inverted, the Greek language admits, by reason of its peculiar structure; but in translating such passages into a language which, like the English, sparingly admits an inverted position of the words, they must be arranged according to

1. It implies that the old dispensation was so subjected, as we have seen in the preceding chapter; for "the law was given by the disposition of angels;" but, 2d, Not so the gospel; that was committed to men like ourselves—even to sinners, that they might know how to act toward their fellow sinners. Angels are appointed neither to govern, nor to instruct the church; on the contrary, when they enter the church, it is to learn "the manifold wisdom of God, as displayed in the mysteries of the gospel, which things the angels desire to look into." (See Ephes. iii. 10. 1 Peter i. 12.)

In the passage here quoted from the 8th Psalm, it is evident that the apostle considered Christ as "the second Adam," (as in 1 Cor. xv. 45–47,) sent to "restore the ruins of the first;" and to realize that government which the other forfeited by sin. And "we see Jesus (the Lord from heaven) made a little (while) lower than the angels," that he might be capable of dying for our sins; and, as a reward for such humiliation and sufferings, raised again to glory and honour, and placed at the head of all creation, all things being in a train of subjugation to him; the final accomplishment of which will close the mediatorial system, as we have already seen in 1 Cor. xv. 26–28, to which we must refer, to avoid repetition. While, however, there remains any enemy unsubdued, that is, till the general resurrection, (for "the last enemy that shall be destroyed is death," his kingdom will be progressing in the world; for "he must reign till all things are put under him.")

When God is said to make the Prince, or "Captain of our salvation," perfect, it does not imply that any imperfection was attached to his character; but only that it was necessary for him to suffer trials and temptations, that he might be fully prepared to succour such of his people as were tried and tempted; and in order thus to suffer, it was necessary that he should take upon him all the sinless infirmities of human nature. Farther, that he might dethrone, depose, and destroy the assumed tyranny of death, not only over the bodies, but also over the minds of men, it was necessary that he should their natural order, as is done in the new translation." Compare with this passage Phil. ii. 9–11.—For every man—MacKnight, as above, renders the Greek (hyper) "on account of;" but Doddridge retains the common version, "For every man." "Every one," in MacKnight, is somewhat more literal, and he restrains the term (as Gill does) to "every one of the sons who is to be brought to glory;" though he admits the death of Christ to be a benefit to all men.

Ver. 10. It became him, &c.—See Rom. xi. 36.—To make the captain—Doddridge, "Leader," or Prince. The word is rendered Prince in Acts iii. 15; v. 31.

Ver. 11. All of one—i. e. of one family; or, according to McLean, of one Father.

Ver. 12. In the midst of the church—"The church of Christ is a congregation of faithful men," &c.

Ver. 14. Destroy him, &c.—Doddridge, "depose him who had the empire of death." Pur Smith, "Holdeth the dominion;" but the word does not imply a right to such dominion.

Ver. 16. Took not on him the nature of angels—Margin, "He taketh no hold of angels;" but of the seed of Abraham he taketh hold. Chrysostom explains this to mean, that when mankind died—fed far from him, Christ pursued, and caught hold of them. See Hammond.

CHAPTER III.

1 Christ is more worthy than Moses, 7 therefore if we believe not in him, we shall be more worthy punishment than hard-hearted Israel.

WHEREFORE, holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling, consider the Apostle and High Priest of our profession, Christ Jesus;

2 Who was faithful to him that appointed him, as also Moses was faithful in all his house.

3 For this man was counted worthy of more glory than Moses, inasmuch as he who hath builded the house hath more honour than the house.

4 For every house is builded by some man; but he that buildeth all things is God.

5 And Moses verily was faithful in all his house, as a servant, for a testimony of those things which were to be spoken after;

6 But Christ as a Son over his own house; whose house are we, if we hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end.

7 Wherefore (as the Holy Ghost saith, To-day if ye will hear his voice,

8 Harden not your hearts, as in the provocation, in the day of temptation in the wilderness;

9 When your fathers tempted me, proved me, and saw my works forty years.

10 Wherefore I was grieved with that generation, and said, They do always err in their heart; and they have not known my ways.

11 So I swore in my wrath, They shall not enter into my rest.)

A M. or 467
A D. or 68
a c 114
b made.
c No 127.
d Zec 6 12, 14
e Nu 127
f Jos 12
g De 18 15-19
h Ps 27 12
i 1 Pe 2 5
j Mal 40 22
k Ps 95 7
l if they shall enter
m Ma 7 24
n Je 2 13
o c 10 24
p ver 6
q ver 7
r Nu 14 2, 23
s Nu 26 61, 63
t De 1 34, 35
u c 16.
v c 12 15.
w of her.
x of her, cause they were not united by faith to.

12 Take heed, brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief, in departing from the living God.

13 But exhort one another daily, while it is called To-day; lest any of you be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin.

14 For we are made partakers of Christ, if we hold the beginning of our confidence steadfast unto the end;

15 While it is said, To-day if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts, as in the provocation.

16 For some, when they had heard, did provoke; howbeit not all that came out of Egypt by Moses.

17 But with whom was he grieved forty years? was it not with them that had sinned, whose carcases fell in the wilderness?

18 And to whom swore he that they should not enter into his rest, but to them that believed not?

19 So we see that they could not enter in because of unbelief.

CHAPTER IV.

1 The rest of Christians is attained by faith. 12 The power of God's word. 14 By our high priest Jesus the Son of God, subject to infirmities, but not sin, 16 we must not grow weary of the throne of grace.

LET US therefore fear, lest a promise being left us of entering into his rest, any of you should seem to come short of it.

2 For unto us was the gospel preached, as well as unto them: but the word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it.

die; that he might grapple with Satan in his own dominions, and deliver those whom he held in miserable captivity, even through the fear of being enslaved by him.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1-19. Christ more worthy than Moses, and disobedience to him more criminal than under the old dispensation.—St. Paul having shown at large the superiority of Christ to angels, though for a time he had humbled himself beneath them, for the purpose of making atonement for human transgression, now proceeds to recommend him to the Hebrews, as the Apostle and High Priest of the Christian religion.

“Considering him [Christ] as the Apostle, or founder of our religion, he compares him with Moses, that eminent prophet and ministerial founder of the Jewish religion. The Hebrews had justly a very high opinion of Moses, their great prophet and lawgiver; but as they did not clearly perceive the design of the Mosaic economy, which was to prefigure and give testimony to the gospel revelation, in which it was to terminate, they were still strongly attached to it, as of perpetual obligation. This, with the discouragements they met with from the opposition of their unbelieving countrymen, tended to keep their minds in a wavering state with regard to the Christian faith; so that they were in danger of reverting from Christ to Moses. Nothing, therefore, could better suit the apostle’s design of establishing the Hebrews in the Christian profession, than to compare together the respective founders of the Old and New dispensations. He [consequently] observes, (Ver. 1-4,) that both Christ and Moses were faithful to God in the discharge of their offices, but that Christ was counted worthy of more glory than Moses, inasmuch as the founder and ruler of the house, or church, hath more honour than the house, or any eminent servant in it, such as Moses was. For he that hath founded the church, and ordered all things relative to it, is God. [He adds, ver. 5, 6.] That Moses, indeed, was faithful in all things relative to God’s house, the Jewish church; but it was as a servant, and in a typical economy, designed for a testimony of the things which were afterwards to be revealed: but that Christ was faithful as a Son over his house, the gospel church; of whose house we who believe are members, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, if we hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the [Christian] hope firm unto the end.

“The apostle then proceeds to caution the Hebrews against

apostasy from the faith of the gospel, by renouncing them of the awful punishment inflicted upon their ancestors in the wilderness, who, on account of their unbelief and rebellion against God, were excluded from his rest in the land of Canaan; intimating that, if they should apostatize from Christ, they would be excluded from a more glorious rest in the heavenly country, of which the former was only a type.” (M’Lean.)

To the above extracts from a judicious commentator on this Epistle, we add two other observations:—1. We may remark, that the term house is here used equivocally, for both a family and a residence, and that both of God and man. Moses was faithful in all his house, as was witnessed of him, (Num. xii. 7.) That is, he was a faithful steward in building the tabernacle, and regulating its worship, exactly according to the orders he received. So Christ in building up the Christian church, and managing all its concerns, acts in perfect harmony with the will of his heavenly Father. But in what sense are we to take the word when applied (ver. 4) to God himself? “Every house is builded by some one, but who hath built all things is God.” This, we think with Doddridge, applies most naturally to the works of creation at large. (See chap. xi. 3.) But it is equally true of the families of mankind:—“Have we not all one Father? Hath not one God created us?” (Mal. ii. 10.)

2. We may note the great importance of a present attention to religion, and the extreme danger of delay. “To-day, while it is called to-day,” the sceptre of mercy is held out to invite us; but if we neglect the call, as Israel did, to-morrow it may be too late for ever.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1-16. A rest remaineth for the people of God—attainable by faith in Christ.—This chapter opens with an inference from the preceding. Since Israel of old lost their earthly Canaan through unbelief, let us also fear, lest, by the same means, we should lose the heavenly country now promised to us.

To understand the reasoning of the apostle in this chapter, “the reader ought to know,” says MacKnight, “that in the covenant with Abraham, God promised him two kinds of seed—the one by nature, I descend, and the other by faith; and that the promise, to give to him and to his seed the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession, being made to both, it was to be fulfilled, not only to his natural progeny, by giving them the possession of the earthly Canaan; but also to his seed CHAP. III. Ver. 1. Of our profession.—MacKnight and M’Lean, “confession,” i. e. of our faith.

Ver. 3. He who hath builded the house—The Greek term (oikos) is equally equivocal with our word house, and is used either in the sense of family or residence; and, under the latter, may be the residence of either God or man.

Ver. 5. For a testimony of those things which were to be spoken after— Doddridge, “A testimony of things afterwards to be mentioned;” namely, by Christ and his apostles.

Ver. 11. They shall not enter.—Margin, “If they shall enter.” This is the form of an oath in Hebrew.

Ver. 16. Not all that came out of Egypt—“Their little ones (i. e. all under twenty years of age) were expressly excepted in the oath, (Num. xiv. 31.) for the oath only excluded all who were numbered in the beginning of the second year after they came out of Egypt, from twenty years old and upward, being fit for war;—and not the Levites. (Num. i. 43-47.)

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1. Lest a promise being left us—The promise us being marked with italics in our version, intimates its being supplementary, and it is, in our opinion, both unnecessary and improper. The rest was left indefinitely for all who should seek it.—Let us (apostles and hearers) therefore middle an intermediate exhortation, lest any of you to whom we preach, should see, by neglecting, evidently, your share of it. See note on 1 Cor.
vii. 40.—Age of man—some copies read of us, to which Doddridge inclines; but, with MacKnight, we prefer the common reading, which is supported by both the Syriac and the Vulgate.

Ver. 2. For unto us was the gospel preached, &c.—Doddridge, “For we are made partakers of the good tidings.” Greek, “Have been evangelized.”

3 For we which have believed do enter into rest, as he said, ¹ As I have sworn in my wrath, if they shall enter into my rest: although the works were finished from the foundation of the world.

4 For he spake in a certain place of the seventh day on this wise, ² And God did rest the seventh day from all his works.

5 And in this place again, If they shall enter into my rest.

6 Seeing therefore it remaineth that some must enter therein, and they ³ to whom ⁴ it was first preached entered not in because of unbelief:

7 (Again, he limiteth a certain day, saying in David, To-day, after so long a time; as it is said, ⁵ To-day if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts.

8 For if ⁶ Jesus had given them rest, then would he not afterward have spoken of another day.

9 There remaineth therefore a ⁷ rest to the people of God.

10 For he that is entered into his rest, he also hath ceased from his own works, as God did from his.)

11 Let ⁸ us labour therefore to enter into that rest, lest any man fall after the same example of ⁹ unbelief.

A. M. corr.
A. D. corr.
65.

d Ps. 95:11.
e Ge. 2:2.
f c. 3:19.

g or, the gospel.
h Ps. 95:7.

i That is,
Joshua.

j or, keeping of a sabbath.

k 2 Pe. 1:10.
l or, disobedience.

m Is. 19:2.
n Re. 1:16.

o Ps. 138:2.
p Pr. 15:11.

q c. 9:12, 21.
r c. 10:23.

s Ho. 11:8.
t 1 Pe. 2:22.
u Ju. 3:2.

v c. 13:12.
w c. 19:1.
x c. 2.

y c. 3:3.
z or, reasonably bare with

12 For the word ^m of God is quick, and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged ⁿ sword piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discernor ^o of the thoughts and intents of the heart.

13 Neither is there any creature that is not manifest in his sight: but all things are naked ^p and opened unto the eyes of him with whom we have to do.

14 Seeing then that we have a great high priest, that is passed ^q into the heavens, Jesus the Son of God, let us ^r hold fast our profession.

15 For we have not a high priest which cannot be touched ^s with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without ^t sin.

16 Let us therefore come boldly ^u unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need.

CHAPTER V.

1 The authority and honour of our Saviour's priesthood. 11 Negligence in the knowledge thereof is reprobated.

FOR every high priest taken from among men is ordained ^a for men in things pertain- ing to God, that he may offer both gifts and sacrifices for sins:

2 Who ^b can have compassion on the ignorant, and on them that are out of the way; for by faith, by giving them the possession of the heavenly country, of which Canaan was the emblem and the pledge.

Upon these principles, the apostle affirms, that notwithstanding Abraham's natural seed have obtained the possession of Canaan, there is still left to his seed by faith, consisting of believers in all ages, whether be Jews or Gentiles, a promise of entering into God's rest; for which reason he exhorted the Hebrews, in his own time, to be afraid lest any of them should fall short of that rest, as their fathers in the wilderness fell short of the rest in Canaan. (ver. 1.) His affirmation, that, in the covenant, there is still left to Abraham's seed by faith, a promise of entering into God's rest, the apostle establishes by observing, that the promise of the everlasting possession of Canaan being made to Abraham's seed by faith, as well as to his natural seed, his seed by faith have received the good tidings of a rest in the heavenly country, typified by Canaan, as really as his natural seed have received the good tidings of a rest in Canaan. Only these good tidings did not profit the natural seed in the wilderness, because they did not believe them. (ver. 2.) More particularly, to show that all Abraham's seed by faith shall enter into God's rest in the country typified by Canaan, the apostle appealed to the words of God's oath, by which he excluded the unbelieving Israelites in the wilderness from his rest: for seeing this oath was sworn, notwithstanding the works of God were finished at the formation of the world, and the seventh-day rest was then instituted, (ver. 3;) also, seeing that rest was called God's rest, in the passage of Scripture where Moses had said concerning the seventh day, "And God rested on the seventh day from all his works," (ver. 4.) it follows, that the rest into which God swore that the Israelites in the wilderness should not enter, was not the seventh-day rest, in regard they were in possession of that rest when the oath was sworn." (Exod. xvi. 23; xx. 8.)

The substance of the apostle's argument is then summed up in ver. 9: "There remaineth therefore a rest—a sabbatism—for the people of God. For he that is entered into his rest—that is, into the rest which God has provided for us—hath ceased from his own works, even as God did from his." From the account given in this verse of the rest which remaineth to the people of God, namely, that they do not enter into it till their works of trial and suffering are finished, it is evident that it must intend "the rest of heaven, of which the seventh-day even as they;" that is, according to M. Lean, "We Christians have been favoured with the good news of a rest in the heavenly country, even as Israel were with the good news of a rest in the land of Canaan.—But the word preached—Gr. 'The word of heaven'—did not profit them; not being mixed with faith in them that heard [it]. The word is medicinal, and alludes to our food being mixed with the morsel of the stomach, in order to its digestion. The margin reads, "because they were not united by faith;" and so many of the ancients; but Doddridge, MacKnight, M. Lean, and most of the moderns, prefer the common translation, which is also sanctioned by the Vulgate and the Syriac.

Ver. 3. If they shall enter.—See note on chap. ii. 11.—Although the works were finished from the foundation.—MacKnight, "from the formation of the world." The word here evidently refers to the completion, not the commencement, of creation, as in the verse following.

Ver. 6. To whom it is.—i. e. the gospel, or good tidings.

Ver. 8. For if Jesus.—Margin, "Joshua;" which is the Hebrew name corresponding to the Greek, Jesus.

Ver. 9. A rest.—The word here used is not the same as in the preceding verses.

Ver. 12. Quick and powerful.—Literally, "living and energetic."—Sharper than any two-edged sword.—MacKnight quotes from a Pagan writer, that "reason penetrates into a man deeper than a sword;" but we apprehend it is rest was only an emblem." (So Doddridge, MacKnight, and M. Lean.) But, as an emblem, it pointed out not only a rest from labours and from sufferings, but also a state of purity and devotion—a state of positive happiness, made up of communion with God, and saints, and holy angels.

The apostle hence urges the believing Hebrews, (ver. 11.) "Let us, therefore, labour to enter into that rest, lest any man fall after the same example of unbelief." The example referred to (says M. Lean) is that of Israel in the wilderness, who, though they had by a train of miracles been redeemed from Egyptian bondage, taken into covenant with God, and had the promise of the earthly rest in Canaan—yet, after all, forfeited that promise, and fell in the wilderness through unbelief. By this awful example, the apostle enforces his exhortation to the Hebrews, that they should labour to enter into the heavenly rest, of which a promise was left them, lest they should come short of it through unbelief, as Israel did of the earthly rest."

To urge the converted Hebrews (as, indeed, all professing Christians) thus to labour to secure their interest in this eternal rest, the apostle reminds them, that the word of God, which had been preached to them, (ver. 12.) was "quick (or living) and powerful; sharper than a two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit," &c.—that is, figuratively speaking, piercing the conscience and dissecting the heart; and it, [the word,] as here follows, "is a discernor (or judge) of the thoughts and intents of the heart;" or, as we should say, (in the English idiom,) penetrates the deepest recesses of the mind.

The term Logos, however, often so applied by the apostle John, may here intend, the substantial or essential Word, of whom it may be more strictly asserted, "all things are laid naked and bare to him with whom we have to do;" or, as MacKnight renders it, "to whom we must give an account."

In the close of this chapter, Christ is again introduced as the great High Priest of our profession, (Christianity;) and who, on account of his compassion and sympathy towards us, we are encouraged to approach with a holy boldness, and to commit our whole interest into his hands. (Compare chap. i. 17, 18; iii. 1.)

CHAP. V. Ver. 1—14. Christ our High Priest, after the order of Melchisedec.—In the last verses of the preceding the power of God's word upon the conscience, that is here alluded to.—To the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow.—That is, of things the most intimately and inseparably connected. See our note on 1 Thes. ii. 15. Here we have distinguished the rational soul from the animal; but whether the latter (which is common to brutes) be matter, or an inferior kind of spirit, or a middle substance between both, we presume not to decide. Most certain it is, that many animals are intelligent, as well as sentient; that they feel, that they recollect, and that they dream; and, therefore, that they think.

Ver. 13. Naked and opened.—Doddridge, "laid bare." This is an allusion to the state in which the burnt-offerings were laid on the altar: they were stripped of their skins, their breasts ripped open, their back-bone cleft, and were head thrown back, so as to be easily inspected by the officiating priest.—With whom we have to do.—Doddridge and MacKnight, "To whom we must give an account;" so the Greek phrase is rendered, chap. xiii. 17; also Rom. xiv. 12 and elsewhere.

Ver. 14. Our profession.—Or confession; see chap. iii. 1.

Ver. 15. Which cannot be touched.—MacKnight, "who cannot sympathize."—Like as we are—i. e. in the same points.

CHAP. V. Ver. 2. The ignorant, and on them that are out of the way.—i. e. wandering, and in error.

that he ^c himself also is compassed with infirmity.

3 And by reason hereof he ought, as for the people, so ^d also for himself, to offer for sins.

4 And ^e no man taketh this honour unto himself, but he that is called of God, as was ^f Aaron.

5 So also Christ ^g glorified not himself to be made a high priest; but he that said unto him, ^h Thou art my Son, to-day have I begotten thee.

6 As he saith also in another place, Thou ⁱ art a priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec.

7 Who in the days of his flesh, when he had offered up ^j prayers and supplications with strong crying and tears unto him that was able ^k to save him from death, and was heard ^l in that he feared;

8 Though he were a Son, yet learned he obedience ^m by the things which he suffered;

9 And ⁿ being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him;

10 Called of God a high priest ^o after the order of Melchisedec.

11 Of whom we have many things to say, and hard to be uttered, seeing ye are dull of hearing.

12 For when for the time ye ought to be

A. M. cir.
3007
A. D. cir.
63

c 7 25
d 9 7
e 26 18
f Ex 24 1
g Nu 16 30
h Ps 2 7
i Ps 110 4
j Mat 26 39
k Mat 26 53
l 1st cor.
his pray.
m Phil 2 8
n c 12 10
o ver 6

p 1 Co 3 1.
q hath no experience
r perfect
s ut, a habitation, perfection
t Phil 3 12
u or, the mind of the beginning of Christ
v c 9 14
w c 11 6
x Ac 19 4, 5
y Ac 5 17
z Ac 17 31
aa 26 8
b Ja 4 15
c Mat 5 13
d 12 31, 32
e Ju 13 6
f c 10 26
g Ps 2 20
h 1 Ju 5 16
i b 1 28

teachers, ye have need that one teach you again which be the first principles of the oracles of God; and are become such as have ^a need of ^b milk, and not of strong meat.

13 For every one that useth milk ^c is unskilful in the word of righteousness: for he is a babe.

14 But strong meat belongeth to them that are ^d of full age, even those who by reason of ^e use have their senses exercised to discern both good and evil.

CHAPTER VI.

1 He exhorteth not to fall back from the faith, 11 but to be steadfast, 12 diligent, and patient to wait upon God, 13 because God is most sure in his promise.

THEREFORE ^a leaving ^b the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on unto perfection; not laying again the foundation of repentance from ^c dead works, and of faith ^d toward God.

2 Of the doctrine of ^e baptisms, and of laying on ^f of hands, and of ^g resurrection of the dead, and of eternal judgment.

3 And this will we do, if ^h God permit.

4 For it is impossible ⁱ for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost,

5 And have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come,

6 If ^j they shall fall away, to renew them

chapter, the Son of God is introduced to us as the great Apostle and High Priest of our profession, who, though he is entered into the highest heavens, hath neither forsaken nor forgotten the weakest or the poorest of his followers; but still sympathizes with them in all their trials and temptations: to him, therefore, we are encouraged to approach with boldness, and with freedom to address our supplications through him to the Father, who is seated upon a throne of grace to receive them.

The apostle then proceeds to show by what authority, and in what manner, our Lord Jesus exercises this gracious office on our behalf. Every person exercising this office among men, is chosen and called thereto, and provided with gifts and sacrifices to offer; and is, moreover, required to be tender and compassionate to those for whom he acts—to the ignorant and the erroneous.

In all these respects, our great High Priest more or less resembles those of the Mosaic institution. 1. "He glorified not himself to be made a High Priest." He was not self-appointed; but he who, in the second Psalm, said, (ver. 6.) "Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee," referring to his regal office, said also in another Psalm, "Thou art a Priest for ever, after [or according to] the order of Melchisedec." (Ps. ex. 4.) the peculiarities of which order we shall see in a subsequent chapter. 2. Inasmuch as other priests were furnished with gifts and sacrifices for sin, to offer, the work of this High Priest was of that extraordinary nature, that the blood of bulls and of goats could be of no avail; he therefore "offered up himself (the just for the unjust) to reconcile us unto God." But here a difference occurs of great importance, for whereas other priests had to offer first for their own sins, and then for the transgressions of the people: "He, being ^{holy}, harmless, and undefiled," could transfer to them all the merit of his atonement. (See chap. vii. 26—28.) 3. Whereas other priests were required to be sympathizing and compassionate, our great High Priest infinitely exceeds them in both respects: for, in respect of his own sufferings, "the strong cries and tears" which he poured out in the wilderness of temptation, and in the garden of Gethsemane, and especially upon the cross, indicated sufferings far exceeding, not only what we can be called to endure, but all that we can possibly conceive. 4. By these sufferings he (as man) learned, that is, he acquired, a perfect resignation to the divine will, and an unexampled degree of sympathy to the afflicted and distressed; and being thus perfected through sufferings, (chap. vii. 28.) "he became the author of eternal salvation" unto all them that "believe in and obey him."

Here are two inquiries that demand some attention. 1. From what was it that Christ was delivered in consequence of his prayers and tears? It was not from dying, for that was the end of his incarnation; nor was it from suffering, without which his death would have been no atonement; that is, he prayed not for either of these exemptions absolutely, but conditionally—"If it be possible!" and thus hath he left us an example, to pray for nothing absolutely, but what we know to be agreeable to the divine will—namely, our salvation. (1 Thess. iv. 3.) And though he had not, and knew he could not have, exemption from pain and dying; yet he had, subsequently, deliverance from the power of death and the grave, and from all the principalities and powers of hell, over whom he triumphed. (Compare our exposition of Matt. xxvi. 31—36.)

A second inquiry here offers itself—How could our Lord learn obedience, who was never disobedient? We reply, that as he "grew in wisdom, and in stature, and in strength," (Luke ii. 40 and 52.) so might, and so did, he grow (speaking of him as a man) in every virtue, human and divine; and of course, in a cheerful resignation to the divine decrees.

The close of this chapter (as was the case with the last) anticipates the subject of the following; distinguishing between the first and more matured principles of Christianity, comparing the former to milk, and the latter to meat; and considering these Hebrews as children, or babes in Christ, who were capable of digesting the former only; though, from the time they had heard the gospel, they ought to have been matured Christians, capable of instructing others.

CHAP. VI. Ver. 1—20. Exhortations to persevere, with cautions against apostasy.—The Christian's life is progressive, and never stationary: for if we move not forward, we are certainly sliding backward. It is so as respects both our principles and practice: the apostle therefore exhorts the Hebrews not to stop at first principles only, or at the beginning of the Christian course, which commences with faith and repentance—with baptism, and the laying on of hands, and with the avowal of those foundation truths, the resurrection of the dead, and eternal judgment: Let us not stop here, (as if he had said,) but go on unto perfection—that is, proceed from truth to that is, the elements, or rudiments; or, as Doddridge explains the words, "first principles." By leaving these, is not meant their abandonment, but pushing on in the heavenly course, as the racer flies from the starting post to the goal.

Ver. 4. For it is impossible—This seems to refer to those apostates who had committed "the sin unto death." See 1 John v. 16.

Ver. 5. And have tasted—To taste, is to experience; and in this case, to experience the power of the gospel preached, which may afford much gratification, and produce a degree of moral reform, even when it does not either deeply or permanently affect the heart—Powers of the world to come—The "world of forces" to come—certainly designates the gospel dispensation. (See note on chap. ii. 5.) and the promises of that world, certainly designate the miraculous powers attending the first propagation of the gospel. Mat. vii. 22, 23.

Ver. 6. If they shall fall away—Macknight, "And (yet) have fallen away." So M'Leau—Crucify to themselves—Macknight, "in themselves."—Seeing they crucify to themselves—That is, according to M'Leau, "they approve of, and consent to the treatment he received from his murderers, by renouncing and blaspheming him, as one justly put to death as an impostor."

Ver. 5. Glorified not himself—i. e. did not assume to himself that honour.

Ver. 7. Who in the days of his flesh—Nothing can more clearly express the doctrine of the incarnation—"The word was made flesh, and dwelt among us."

Ver. 8. With prayers (Gr. deprecations) and supplications—The word for supplications signifies branches of olive-trees covered with wool, which such as supplicated for peace carried in their hands, hence it came to signify supplications for peace. Gill—In that he feared—Doddridge, "In being delivered from that which he particularly feared."

Ver. 9. Being made perfect—i. e. a complete High Priest by consecration. See Exod. xxix. 33, 34. Compare chap. ii. 10—The author—i. e. the meritorious and efficient cause—of eternal salvation. So M'Leau.

Ver. 11. Hard to be explained—Doddridge, "Hard to be understood."

Macknight, "difficult to be explained."

Ver. 13. Is unskilful—Greek, "Hath no experience." Compare 1 Peter ii. 2.

Ver. 14. Of full age—Greek, "perfect." Macknight, "full-grown"—By reason of use—Macknight remarks, that the original term alludes to the athletic exercises of the ancients, in which, by a kind of mock-fighting, they were prepared for actual combat.

CHAP. VI. Ver. 1. The principles—Margin, "The word of the beginning;"

again unto repentance; seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame.

7 For the earth which drinketh in the rain that cometh oft upon it, and bringeth forth herbs meet for them * by whom it is dressed, receiveth blessing ¹ from God:

8 But that which beareth ^m thorns and briers is rejected, and is high unto cursing; whose end is to be burned.

9 But, beloved, we are persuaded better things of you, and things that accompany salvation, though we thus speak.

10 For ⁿ God is not unrighteous to forget your work and labour of love, which ye have showed toward his name, in that ye have ministered to the saints, and do minister.

11 And we desire that every one of you do show the same diligence to the ^o full assurance of hope unto the end:

12 That ye be not ^p slothful, but followers of them who through faith and patience inherit the promises.

13 For when God made promise to Abraham, because he could swear by no greater, he swore by himself,

14 Saying, ^q Surely blessing I will bless thee, and multiplying I will multiply thee.

A. M. cir. 4067.
A. D. cir. 63.
k or, for.
l Ps. 65. 10.
m Is. 5. 6.
n Mat. 25. 40.
o c. 3. 6, 14.
p Pr. 15. 19.
2 Pe. 1. 10.
q Ge. 22. 16, 17.
r Ex. 22. 11.
s Ro. 8. 17.
c. 11. 9.
t Ro. 11. 29.
n interposed himself.
u Tit. 1. 2.
v 1 Ti. 6. 12.
x Le. 16. 15.
y c. 4. 14.
z c. 7. 17.
a Ge. 14. 15, &c.

15 And so, after he had patiently endured, he obtained the promise.

16 For men verily swear by the greater: and an oath ^r for confirmation is to them an end of all strife.

17 Wherein God, willing more abundantly to show unto the heirs ^s of promise the immutability ^t of his counsel, ^u confirmed it by an oath:

18 That by two immutable things, in which it was impossible for God to ^v lie, we might have a strong consolation, who have fled for refuge to lay hold ^w upon the hope set before us:

19 Which hope we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast, and which entereth into that within ^x the veil;

20 Whither ^y the forerunner is for us entered, even Jesus, made a high priest for ever after the order of ^z Melchisedec.

CHAPTER VII.

FOR this ¹ Melchisedec, king of Salem, priest of the most high God, who met Abraham returning from the slaughter of the kings, and blessed him;

2 To whom also Abraham gave a tenth part of all; first being by interpretation King of

It is observable, that in the account of the unhappy persons spoken of, nothing is said that necessarily implies any thing more than speculative knowledge, and external profession of Christianity—nothing of regeneration, conversion, believing through grace, or a change of heart: on the contrary, their profession is described as utterly barren, or as bearing nothing but "thorns and briers;" and their persons as "high unto cursing," and to burning.

truth, and from virtue to virtue; "and this will we do," adds he, "if God permit." But in order to this, it is necessary to guard against retrogression; for it is possible for persons to be enlightened—to taste of the heavenly gift, and be made partakers of the Holy Ghost—to taste the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come;—it is possible, very possible, that such may fall away, not merely by a partial declension, like those of Laodicea, (Rev. iv. 14, &c.) but by a total renunciation of the name, as well as the principles of Christianity. But let us see how far the particulars of this awful character will carry us; that is, how far the persons here described had gone in the profession of religion.

1. They were enlightened, that is, instructed in the elementary principles of Christianity; and, by hearing and reading, obtained a good knowledge of its evidences and doctrines, and, by a moral reformation, "escaped the pollutions of the world"—through idolatry and uncleanness. 2. They tasted, that is, participated "of the heavenly gift;" by which many understand, a sense of pardon through Christ; but we rather conceive all these expressions refer to the powerful effects of the word preached, especially as connected with the personal ministry of Jesus, or with the miraculous gifts of the Holy Spirit. With respect to the former, our Lord himself thus describes the case of apostates in the parable of the Sower, where he says, "He that received the word in stony places, the same is he that heareth the word, and anon with joy receiveth it; yet hath he not root in himself, but dureth for a while: for when tribulation or persecution ariseth because of the word, by and by he is offended." (Matt. xiii. 20, 21.) In reference to the miraculous powers of the apostolic age, we read, (Acts viii. 5, &c.) that when Philip went down to the city of Samaria, preaching and working miracles, "there was great joy in that city;" and when Simon Magus (or the great one) heard the preaching, and saw the miracles, "Simon himself believed also, and was baptized;" yet he soon discovered his hypocrisy, and the barren nature of his faith; for when the apostles Peter and John came to that city, he offered them money, if they would give him power to confer the Holy Ghost in like manner as they did; on which Peter assures him, that, notwithstanding his profession, his "heart was not right in the sight of God; but, on the contrary, he was yet "in the gall of bitterness, and the bond of iniquity." And ecclesiastical history informs us, that he proved one of the most awful instances of apostasy on record. (See exposition of Acts viii. 1—25.)

Ver. 7. For the earth, &c.—That is, that earth is blessed which, by drinking in the rain, becomes fruitful: but that sandy soil which, though it may drink in the rain, produces no useful vegetation, is accursed. Compare Jer. xvi. 6.

Ver. 9. Things that accompany.—Macknight, "which are connected with."

Ver. 10. God is not unrighteous.—Though we have no claim on the divine bounty, yet God having promised and covenanted to reward our unworthy services, his justice and fidelity bind him to his promise.

Ver. 11. Full assurance of hope.—That is, the most assured hope.

Ver. 12. Followers.—Gr. "imitators."—Patience.—Gr. "long-suffering."

—Inheriting.—Gr. "are inheriting;" meaning the Patriarchs, &c. now in heaven.

Ver. 16. Of all strife.—Macknight, "contradiction."

Ver. 18. Fled for refuge.—"The words" for refuge, though not in italics, are merely supplementary, our translators supposing such to be the allusion; but others think it an allusion to the Grecian games, and to the prize exhibited to the racers. We decidedly suppose the reference is to the cities of refuge, of which there were three on each side of Jordan. They were easy of access, having smooth and good roads 50 feet wide, and bridges over streams. Where the roads crossed or diverged, guide boards were placed, with "Refuge" on them, so large and plain that a man might read whilst running. See Num. xxxv. 11, &c.

Ver. 20. Whether the forerunner.—Macknight, says, "A forerunner is one who goes before to do some service for another." Here (he thinks) the allusion is to one sent from a ship to fix its anchor in the place to which it is to be drawn." But Mr. Lean doubts if the word was ever so used; and so do we; we should rather refer to John xiv. 3.

CHAP. VII. Ver. 1. This Melchisedec.—Or Melchisedek, as it is spelled in Gen. xiv. 18, &c.—King of Salem.—So his capital, and probably his whole territory, was called in Abraham's time; in the time of Joshua and the Judges, it was also called by the name of Jebus. (Josh. xviii. 28. Judges xix. 10.) Salem, it is well known, signifies peace; and Jerusalem, as the learned Granville Sharp has shown, signifies Holy (or sacred) Salem; or, by interpretation, "Holy Peace." See Mr. Sharp's two tracts, on Jerusalem and on Melchisedec.

righteousness, and after that also King of Salem, which is, King of peace;

3 Without father, without mother, without descent, having neither beginning of days, nor end of life; but made like unto the Son of God; abideth a priest continually.

4 Now consider how great this man was, unto whom even the patriarch Abraham gave the tenth of the spoils.

5 And verily they that are of the sons of Levi, who receive the office of the priesthood, have a commandment to take tithes of the people according to the law, that is, of their brethren, though they come out of the loins of Abraham:

6 But he whose descent is not counted from them received tithes of Abraham and blessed him that had the promises.

7 And without all contradiction the less is blessed of the better.

8 And here men that die receive tithes; but there he receiveth them, of whom it is witnessed that he liveth.

9 And as I may so say, Levi also, who receiveth tithes, payed tithes in Abraham.

10 For he was yet in the loins of his father, when Melchisedec met him.

11 If^h therefore perfection were by the Levitical priesthood, (for under it the people received the law,) what farther need was there that another priest should rise after the order of Melchisedec, and not be called after the order of Aaron?

12 For the priesthood being changed, there is made of necessity a change also of the law.

13 For he of whom these things are spoken pertaineth to another tribe, of which no man gave attendance at the altar.

14 For it is evident that our Lord sprang

A M. cir.

1067

A. D. cir.

63.

b pedigree.

c No 18 21

26.

d pedigree

e Ge 14 20.

f Ro 9 4

g c 5 6

Re 1 18

h Ga 2 21

v 18 19.

c 5 7

i Lu 1 1

Mat 1 3

Ro 5 5

j Ps 110 4

k Ac 13 39

l Ro 2 29

m or, but it was.

n Ro 5 2

o or, separation

of an oath.

p Ps 110 1

q c 8 6

r or, which passeth

not from one to another

s 1 Sa 2 35.

t Jude 24

u or, evermore

v Ro 9 31

1 Ju 2 1

we 4 15

1 Pe 2 22

x Le 9 7

out of Juda; of which tribe Moses spake nothing concerning priesthood.

15 And it is yet far more evident: for that after the similitude of Melchisedec there ariseth another priest, 16 Who is made, not after the law of a carnal commandment, but after the power of an endless life.

17 For he testifieth, Thou art a priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec.

18 For there is verily a disannulling of the commandment going before for the weakness and unprofitableness thereof.

19 For the law made nothing perfect, but the bringing in of a better hope did; by the which we draw nigh unto God.

20 And inasmuch as not without an oath he was made priest:

21 (For those priests were made without an oath; but this with an oath by him that said unto him, The Lord sware and will not repent, Thou art a priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec:)

22 By so much was Jesus made a surety of a better testament.

23 And they truly were many priests, because they were not suffered to continue by reason of death:

24 But this man, because he continueth ever hath an unchangeable priesthood.

25 Wherefore he is able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them.

26 For such a high priest became us, who is holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners, and made higher than the heavens;

27 Who needeth not daily, as those high priests, to offer up sacrifice, first for his own

His name is here interpreted as meaning "King of righteousness," and his regal title as implying that he was "King of Peace." He was, however, a real character, and possessed a real domain—he was King of Salem, including the site of that city which was afterwards the metropolis of Judea, namely Jerusalem, or the Holy Salem. In both these respects he strikingly typified him who was at once the Son of David and the King of Israel. But Melchisedec was also a priest of the most high God; and in that respect also typified Christ, as being, like him, of an order peculiar to himself, and not of the Levitical priesthood, nor of the house of Aaron. It was in this respect that he was without parentage and without pedigree, though perhaps the expression may only mean, that his descent is unrecorded and unknown.

After stating the pre-eminent character of Melchisedec, St. Paul calls upon the Hebrews to reflect how great this man must have been, to whom Abraham gave the tenth of his spoils, undoubtedly thereby acknowledging him as his superior, and, consequently, as superior to all the priests who descended from him. But who was this Melchisedec of whom the apostle speaks so highly, and that undoubtedly with a view to magnify that Jesus whom he typified? According to an ancient Jewish tradition, he was the patriarch Shem. This seems the most general opinion among expositors, and was defended with great ability by Mr. Granville Sharpe, above referred to, though this opinion is by no means essential to the apostle's argument.

On comparing our great High Priest with the sons of Aaron, the apostle remarks, "That the sons of Aaron were made priests without an oath, and so their priesthood was liable to be changed or repealed; whereas Jesus was made a priest with a solemn and irrevocable oath, by him that said unto him, 'The Lord sware, and will not repent, Thou art a priest for ever,' &c.—which was a declaration that his priesthood was to be unchangeable; and by so much was he made the surety of a better covenant than that of which the Aaronical high priests were sureties. That the sons of Aaron were made priests according to the law of a carnal commandment, accommodated to weak mortal men, whereby that office went by descent and succession from father to son; [and] hence there were many priests (in succession), because they were not suffered to continue by reason of death." But Jesus being raised from the dead, was, by the oath, made a priest in his own person for ever, according to the power of an endless life; and because he continueth for ever, he hath an unsuccessive priesthood, and so is able to save for ever them that come to God through him, as he is always living to make intercession for them. That in respect of character and qualifications, he is such a High Priest as is perfectly suited to our exigencies, being holy, harmless, undefiled, separated from sinners, and stationed not on earth, but made higher than the heavens. That he needed not, from time to time, like Aaronical high priests, to offer up sacrifice, first for his own sins (for he had none) and then for the sins of the people; for this he did effectually at once, when he offered up himself. For the law constitutes men high priests who have sinful infirmity, and therefore needed to offer for their own sins; but the word of the oath, which was since the law was given, constitutes the Son a High Priest who is consecrated for ever more."—ALLEN.

To these observations we add a general remark from Dr. John Owen:—"The design of the apostle, in this chapter, is not to declare the nature or the exercise of the priesthood of Christ. To the nature of it, he had spoken, chap. v.; and of

Ver. 3. Without father.—[That is, as the Syriac renders, "Whose father and mother are not inserted among the genealogies; and therefore it was not known who he was."—BAGSTER.] Elmer (as Doddridge remarks) hath some remarkable quotations, to prove that it was usual among the Greeks to call any one (patēr, mater) without father, without mother, when his parents were unknown. —Without descent.—Gr. genealogy.—Having neither beginning of days, nor end of life.—The time of service of the Aaronic priests was limited between the ages of 30 and 50, which were the terms of their official life; though some think those expressions mean only, that his birth and death are unrecorded.—But made like unto the Son of God; abideth a priest continually.—MacKnight, who applies the latter clause as well as the former, to Melchisedec, renders it "all his life;" and remarks that the same phrase is applied to the perpetual dictatorship of Sylla. But Doddridge and ALLEN suppose an ellipsis (as is not uncommon) of the pronoun who, and render the clause, "but [was] made like unto [or type of] the Son of God, [who] abideth a priest continually."

Ver. 5. Have a commandment to take tithes.—See Numb. xviii. 21, 26.

Ver. 9. Of whom it is witnessed that he liveth.—Doddridge, "Of whom it is [only] testified that he liveth;" that is, of whose death we have no account. Some render it, "that he liveth;" MacKnight, "That he lived a priest all his life." Compare ver. 3.

Ver. 9. As I may so say.—Doddridge and MacKnight, "As one may say."

Ver. 11. Perfection.—Completion, or fulfilment, of the plan and purpose of God.—And not be called.—Doddridge, "not be reckoned."

Ver. 16. But after the power of an endless life.—i. e. for ever.

Ver. 18. Disannulling.—Doddridge, "Abolition."

Ver. 19. Made nothing perfect.—[Completed nothing; it was the introduction, but not the completion.]—BAGSTER.—But the bringing in, &c.

Ver. 20. The hope of the gospel.

Ver. 22. A better testament.—Rather "covenant."—So Doddridge, MacKnight, &c. The Greek commentators explain the term surety, by that of Mediator.—MacKnight.

Ver. 24. This man.—[That is, Christ, because "he continueth ever," hath "a priesthood which passeth not away" from him.—Unchangeable.—A priesthood which passeth not from one to another.]—BAGSTER.

sins and then for the people's: for this he did once, when he offered up himself.

28 For the law maketh men high priests which have infirmity; but the word of the oath, which was since the law, maketh the Son, who is ⁷ consecrated for evermore.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 By the eternal priesthood of Christ, the Levitical priesthood of Aaron is abolished. 7 And the temporal covenant with the fathers, by the eternal covenant of the gospel.

NOW of the things which we have spoken this is the sum: We have such a high priest, who ^a is set on the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in the heavens;

2 A minister of ^b the ^c sanctuary, and of the true tabernacle, which the Lord pitched, and not man.

3 For every high priest is ordained to offer gifts and sacrifices: wherefore it is of necessity that this man have somewhat also to ^d offer.

4 For if he were on earth, he should not be a priest, seeing that ^e there are priests that offer gifts according to the law:

5 Who serve unto the example and shadow ^f of heavenly things, as Moses was admonished of God when he was about to make the tabernacle: for, See, ^g saith he, that thou make all things according to the pattern showed to thee in the mount.

6 But now hath he obtained a more excellent ^h ministry, by how much also he is the mediator of a better ⁱ covenant, which was established upon better promises.

7 For if ^j that first covenant had been faultless, he treats at large in chap. ix. But it is of its excellency and dignity he here treats, and that not absolutely neither, but in comparison with the Levitical priesthood. This was conducive to his main end with the Hebrews; and this he proves upon principles received by themselves, the faith and principles of the ancient church of Israel.

CHAP. VIII. Ver. 1—13. The Levitical priesthood superseded by that of Christ; and the Old Covenant by the New.—The apostle here pursues his comparison between Christ, who is our great High Priest, and the priests of the house of Aaron; in all things giving due pre-eminence to him, whom all the inspired writers "delight to honour."

1. Speaking of Christ as our High Priest, we are told he "is set (down) on the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in heaven;" a very different situation from that of the Jewish high priest, who stood and bowed before the divine presence. —2. He is called "a minister of the sanctuary," or of the Holies; that is, of the "Holy of holies," or "holiest of all," as it is called in chap. ix. 3; so Drs. Owen and Guisse; and "of the true tabernacle," meaning, as it is generally understood, heaven itself; a tabernacle "which the Lord pitched, and not man;" which in the next chapter (vi.) is called "a greater and more perfect tabernacle, not made with hands" as was the Mosaic tabernacle; but "which the Lord hath pitched (or erected) and not man." —3. Since every high priest among men is ordained "to offer gifts and sacrifices," it was necessary that our great High Priest should also have somewhat to offer; and what so precious as his own blood? What so acceptable as his transcendent merits? As, therefore, the Jewish high priest went once a year into the most holy place with the blood of sacrifices slain, so Christ, upon his ascension, once for all, presented the merits of his righteousness and atonement before God, and ever lives to intercede on the behalf of those for whom he died. —4. Another circumstance of pre-eminence enjoyed by our Lord, is, that "he is the Mediator of a better covenant" than that of Sinai, to which the Levitical priesthood was attached.

This being a better covenant, argues defect in the former. "Although the Sinai covenant (says Dr. Macknight) was well calculated to preserve the Jews from idolatry, and to give them the knowledge of their duty, it was faulty or imperfect in the following respects:—1. The rites of worship it enjoined, sanctified only, to 'the purifying of the flesh'; but not the less, then should no place have been sought for the second.

8 For finding fault with them, ^k he saith, Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah:

9 Not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day when I took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt; because they continued not in my covenant, and I regarded them not, saith the Lord.

10 For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith the Lord; I will ^l put my laws into their mind, and write them ^m in their hearts: and ⁿ I will be to them a God, and they shall be to me a people:

11 And they shall not teach every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord: for all ^o shall know me, from the least to the greatest.

12 For I will be merciful to their unrighteousness, and their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more.

13 In that he saith, A new ^p covenant, he hath made the first old. Now that which decayeth and waxeth old is ready to vanish away.

CHAPTER IX.

1 The description of the rites and bloody sacrifices of the law, 11 far inferior to the dignity and perfection of the blood and sacrifice of Christ.

THEN verily the first covenant had also ^a ordinances of divine service, and a worldly ^b sanctuary.

conscience of the worshippers.—2. These rites could be performed no where but in the tabernacle, or in the temple; consequently they could not be the religion of mankind. 3. This covenant had no real sacrifice for sin; therefore it could grant no pardon to any sinner.—4. Its promises were all of a temporal kind.—5. It required an unsinning obedience, which, in our present state, no one can give, and threatened death for every offence."

It has been doubted, whether the finding fault, mentioned in verse 8, refers to the covenant there spoken of, or to the people there addressed. (See our note.) "Both, I think, (says Mr. W'Lean), are intended in the context. In the foregoing verse, the old covenant is not supposed to be faultless, but the contrary, because it left room for another, and this verse comes in as a proof of it. In the next verse, the people are also blamed, because they continued not in God's covenant; but then, it must be observed, that the people are so blamed, as to insinuate that the covenant itself was defective; for the Lord promises to set it aside, and make a new one, which should better suit their need."

To this New Covenant we have had repeated occasions to advert in the writings of the prophets, and the passage, verses 8 to 13, will be found literally copied from Jer. xxxi. 31—34, with only one remarkable variation, mentioned in our note on verses 8 and 9. In our exposition of the above passage, we have intimated our opinion (which we believe is a general one) of the promise having a reference to the future calling of the Jews to a more extensive reception of the gospel dispensation, which we consider as the new covenant here referred to: not that there is anything new with reference to God, for all his counsels are from everlasting; but he is continually making new discoveries of his grace and mercy to mankind.

One other remark shall close what we have to offer on this chapter. When it is said, "They shall not teach every man his neighbour, saying, Know the Lord: for all shall know me, (saith the Lord,) from the least to the greatest;" we must take it with some latitude, for while children are born into the world, they will need instruction, and, as sinners, the means of conversion: yet, possibly, the time may come, when missions and missionaries shall be no more needed; but when "the knowledge of the Lord shall cover the earth, even as the waters do the sea."

CHAP. IX. Ver. 1—28. The superiority of Christ's sacrifice

Ver. 8. For finding fault with them—That is, according to Doddridge, with the Jews. But Grotius, Hammond, and many others, render it, "finding fault, he saith unto them."

Ver. 9. And I regarded them not—Doddridge, "I disregarded them." Macknight, "I neglected them." This is the Septuagint translation of Jer. xxxi. 32, which in our translation reads, "Although I was a husband unto them," certainly a widely different translation, and differently accounted for. Some suppose a false letter in the Hebrew copy used by the LXX., which makes all the difference. But, then, how shall we account for St. Paul's following them? Dr. Pococke thinks the original will bear both senses.

CHAP. IX. Ver. 1. The first covenant—It seems evident, that the Greek copy used by our translators omitted the substantive in this place, as do many others; and that they supplied the word "covenant" from the preceding chapter. On the other hand there are many Greek copies, both MS. and printed.

CHAP. VIII. Ver. 1 This is the sum.—Doddridge, Macknight, &c., "the chief," principal point. So Chrysostom and Theophylact, the Syriac and Vulgate

Ver. 2. A minister of the sanctuary.—Macknight reads, "holy places." Ver. 3. That this man.—The word "man" is a supplement; and, instead of it, both Macknight and W'Lean supply the term High Priest, from the preceding clause.

Ver. 4. That there are priests.—Namely, in the temple at Jerusalem.—Offer gifts.—Gifts, or offerings, comprehended propitiatory sacrifices as well as free-will offerings.—Bagster.

Ver. 6. A better covenant.—Margm, "Testament." The original term (diatheke) signifies both; but the former is certainly here preferable. Ver. 7. If that first covenant had been faultless.—The fault or defect of the first covenant was, that it made nothing perfect. See chap. vii. 19.

2 For there was a tabernacle ^a made; and the first, wherein was the candlestick, and the ^b table, and the ^c shew-bread; which is called ^d the sanctuary.

3 And after the second ^e veil, the tabernacle which is called the Holie. ^f of all^g;

4 Which had the golden ^h censer, and the ark ⁱ of the covenant overlaid round about with gold, wherein was the golden ^j pot that had manna, and Aaron's ^k rod that budded, and the ^l tables of the covenant;

5 And over it the cherubims ^m of glory shadowing the mercy-seat; of which we cannot now speak particularly.

6 Now when these things were thus ordained, the priests ⁿ went always into the first tabernacle, accomplishing the service of God.

7 But into the second went the high priest alone ^o once every year, not without blood, which he offered for ^p himself, and for the errors of the people:

8 The Holy Ghost thus signifying, that the way ^q into the holiest of all was not yet made manifest, while as the first tabernacle was yet standing:

9 Which was a figure for the time then present, in which were offered both gifts and sacrifices, that could not ^r make him that did the service perfect, as pertaining to the ^s conscience;

10 Which stood only in ^t meats and drinks,

A. M. cur
4087.
A. D. c. c.
63.
c. Ex. 29.1.
35.
d. Ex. 40.4.
e. Ex. 26.36.
f. et. holy.
g. Ex. 26.34.
h. Ex. 16.12.
i. Ex. 25.10.
j. Ex. 16.33.
k. Nu. 17.10.
l. Ex. 24.23.
m. Ex. 10.2, 5.
n. Ex. 25.14.
o. Nu. 28.2.
p. Ex. 16.6.
q. Ex. 16.2.
r. Ex. 5.3.
s. Ex. 10.14, 20.
t. Ps. 40.6, 7.
u. Ex. 12.11.
v. Ex. 31.16.
w. Ex. 19.19.
x. Nu. 19.7.
y. Ex. 12.1.
z. Ex. 10.14.
a. Ex. 20.28.
b. Ex. 1.18.
c. Ex. 10.19.
d. Nu. 19.2.
e. Ex. 17.
f. Ex. 3.13.
g. et. fault.
h. Ex. 10.22.
i. or, be brought in
j. or, purged

and divers ^w washings, and carnal ^x ordinances, imposed on them until the time of reformation.

11 But Christ being come a ^y high priest ^z of good ^a things to come, by a ^b greater and more perfect tabernacle, not made with hands, that is to say, not of this building;

12 Neither by the blood of ^c goats and calves, but by his own ^d blood he entered in once into the holy ^e place, having obtained eternal redemption ^f for us.

13 For if the blood of bulls and of goats, and the ashes ^g of a heifer sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh:

14 How much more shall the blood of Christ, who ^h through the eternal Spirit offered himself without ⁱ spot to God, purge ^j your conscience from dead works to serve ^k the living God?

15 And for this cause he is the mediator of the new testament, that by means of death, for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first testament, they which are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance.

16 For where a testament is, there must also of necessity ^l be the death of the testator.

17 For a testament is of force after men are dead; otherwise it is of no strength at all while the testator liveth.

18 Whereupon neither the first testament was dedicated without blood.

to all others.—The first verse of this chapter presents us with a considerable difficulty, as respects the reading of the original: many Greek copies read, "The first tabernacle;" while more perhaps read with the copy used by our translators, and omit the noun altogether; but supply the word "covenant" from the close of the preceding chapter. So the judicious M. Lean, who thinks it "more natural, and [that it] suits the apostle's argument at least equally well, to understand by the first here, the Sinaitic covenant, which is twice termed the first in the foregoing chapter, verses 7 and 13; and also twice expressly mentioned in verse 9."

Connected with this covenant were a variety of ceremonial "ordinances," and "a worldly sanctuary," tabernacle, or holy place, built by Moses, and devoted to the service of the God of Israel, in the first division of which were the sacred candlestick, or rather lamp, and the table of shew-bread; and in the second, or interior department, the ark, the cherubim, the various utensils of worship, and the historical memorials here named. The tabernacle itself, and most of the articles of its furniture, were always considered as having a mystical design, though expositors have differed widely in their interpretations. "Abraham relates, that the [several] parts of the tabernacle represented the sea, dry land, and heaven." Rab. Bechai makes it a representation of the universe. The Holy of Holies, [according to him,] signified the world of angels; the middle, (wherein were the table of shew-bread and candlestick,) the heavenly orbs; and the outer court, this lower world; the elements being represented by the brazen sea, sacred fire, &c. Philo and Josephus [also] explain it mystically: the latter calls the parts of the tabernacle resemblances of the universe; the two first, of the earth and sea, common to all; the third, of heaven, where God dwells." (Ep. Kidder's Messiah.)

But these interpretations, however ingenious, are rather philosophical than evangelical; and do not comport with the apostolical method of interpretation, which refers all the types and mysteries of the Old Testament to Christ, his work and sufferings, and subsequent glory; or other objects of a spiritual and evangelical nature. Thus the candlestick and the shew-bread point to Christ, who is the true light, and the bread that came down from heaven, both which are to be found in the church below; but the Holy of Holies directs to heaven itself—not the heaven of philosophers, but that heaven into which Christ himself has entered with his atoning blood, and where he pleads its merits before the eternal throne.

The import of the cherubim has, indeed, been matter of great, and even bitter, controversy. We have satisfied ourselves with the ancient hypothesis, which considers them as figuring to us the angels of the divine presence, who bend before the throne which read (stene) "tabernacle;" which reading is supported by Whitby, Doddridge, and other respectable commentators, who seem surprised that it is not universally adopted. But it is also true, that the word "tabernacle" is omitted in many MSS., and editions, ancient as well as modern; and that translators generally supply the word "covenant" in preference to "tabernacle," which they suppose to be the gloss of some unjudicious covinist. This reading is supported by those ancient versions, the Syriac and Vulgate, by Chrysostom, and other Greek Fathers. So among the commentators, it is preferred by Beza and Grotius; by Queen, and the Assembly's Annotators; by Hammond, MacKnight, Garise, M. Lean, &c.—Also ordinances—i. e. rites or forms of worship.

Ver. 2. A tabernacle made.—Doddridge, "prepared." MacKnight, "set in order," i. e. for public worship.—The first, wherein—i. e. within the first or outer apartment of which was the candlestick, and the table of shew-bread, &c. of which see Exod. xi. 22–25.—Which is called the sanctuary—MacKnight transposes the words thus:—"For the first (or outward) tabernacle, which is called Holy, was set in order, in which was both the candlestick, and the table, and the shew bread."

Ver. 3. And after the second veil.—A first veil is here implied, which closed the entrance of the tabernacle. Exod. xxxv. 37. After this—the tabernacle which is called the Holiest of all—or, as the Hebrew literally is, "the Holy of Holies."

Ver. 4. Which had the golden censer.—Of the use of this instrument, which was a small pan for burning incense, see Levit. xvi. 12, 13. But as the high priest might not enter the Most Holy without it, a question arises, how he could come at it for use if it was kept there? To this it is answered, that it might be kept just within the veil, and within the reach of his hand, so that he could take it thence without entering himself.—M. Lean—And the ark of the covenant.—See Exod. xxviii. 1, 2.—Wherein was—i. e. perhaps in the Most Holy; not the ark.—The golden pot.—See Exod. xxv. 33, 34.

Ver. 5. The cherubims of glory—i. e. the glorious cherubim; and so called for two reasons—1. Because they were themselves glorious, as being covered with gold; and 2. Because they represented, as we conceive, a glorious order of angelic beings, who wait before the throne of God. Ezek. i. 4, &c. Rev. iv. 6, &c.

Ver. 6. The priest went always into the first tabernacle.—Or rather, as M. Lean explains it, into the first or outer apartment of the tabernacle, where the common priests had a daily service to perform.

Ver. 7. But into the second—compartment of the tabernacle, namely, "The Holy of Holies"—went the high priest alone once (i. e. on one day in) every year.—See Exod. xxx. 10. Levit. xvi. 2, &c.

Ver. 9. Which was a figure.—Gr. Parable.—See chap. vi. 19. "Ordinances concerning the flesh."

Ver. 11. Not made with hands, &c.—Many judicious divines (as Cabrin, Queen, &c.) refer this to the body of Christ, (as they do also chap. viii. 2.) but we rather think, with M. Lean, that "heaven itself" is intended, and so it is expressed ver. 24.

Ver. 12. Through the eternal Spirit.—The Vulgate, and many Greek MSS., read, "The Holy Spirit;" and to him we are inclined to ascribe it. By Trinitarian is meant, Christ's being concerned, proclaimed, anointed, dying, and rising, by the aid of God's Holy Spirit. See 1 Pe. iii. 18. Satan, Queen, &c.

Ver. 13. Mediator.—See note on Gal. iii. 20. "The Mediator of a Testament," says Doddridge, "is a very improper expression" he therefore translates the word (diathekē) Covenant, as in almost all other places. So MacKnight, and most other modern commentators. But Queen, Witsius, and Campbell, retain the term Testament.

Ver. 16, 17. For where a testament is, &c.—Doddridge, agreeing to the preceding remarks, renders this verse, "For where a covenant (i. e.) it necessarily imports the death of that by which the covenant is confirmed," alluding to the general custom of offering sacrifices on these occasions.—"For a testament is of force after men are dead, &c."—Doddridge. "A covenant (i. e.) confirmed over the dead, so that it doth not avail, while he by whom it is confirmed liveth." MacKnight translates the passage thus:—"For where a covenant (i. e.) there is a necessity that the death of the appointed (sacrifice) be brought in." (Compare margin.) "For a covenant is firm over dead sacrifices, seems it never built force while the appointed sacrifice liveth."

Our readers will perceive, that all these alterations are rendered necessary by a rigid adherence to the word covenant. Into the ground and reasons of them, or on the other hand, the objections against them, we cannot here enter particularly. The former may be found in Doddridge, MacKnight, and M. Lean; the latter in Queen, Campbell's Prelim. Dissertations, and Fraser's curious and elaborate notes on his late Translation of Witsius on the Creed.

Ver. 18. Dedicated.—Chap. x. 20 the same word is rendered "consecrated." The word "testament" being in italics, is supplementary. Perhaps it might be here better to advert again to the more frequent sense of the original term, namely, "covenant;" and so it seems used in verse 20. Compare note on verse 1.

19 For ^a when Moses had spoken every precept to all the people according to the law, he took the blood of calves and of goats, with water, and ^b scarlet wool, and hyssop, and sprinkled both the book, and all the people, 20 Saying, 'This is the blood ^c of the testament which God hath enjoined unto you.

21 Moreover ^d he sprinkled likewise with blood both the tabernacle, and all the vessels of the ministry.

22 And almost all things are by the law purged with blood; and without shedding of blood ^e is no remission.

23 It was therefore necessary that the patterns of things in the heavens should be purified with these; but the heavenly things themselves with better sacrifices than these.

24 For Christ is not entered into the holy places made with hands, which are the figures of the true; but into heaven itself, now to appear ^f in the presence of God for us:

25 Nor yet that he should offer himself often, as the high priest entereth into the holy place every year with blood of others;

26 For then must he often have suffered since the foundation of the world: but now once in the end of the world hath he appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself.

27 And as it is appointed ^g unto men once to die, but after this ^h the judgment:

28 So Christ ⁱ was once offered to bear the sins

A. M. cir.
4/67.
A. D. cir.
63.

k Ex. 24.6,
&c.
Le. c. 14 &
16.

l or, purple

m Mat. 26.28

n Ex. 29.12, 36.

o Le. 17.11.

p Ro. 8.34.

q Ge. 3.19

r Ec. 12.14.

s 1 Pt. 2.21.
3.18.
1 Ju. 3.5.

t Is. 53.12.
Mat. 26.28

u Tit. 2.13.
2 Pe. 3.12.

v Ac. 1.11.
Re. 1.7.

w Is. 25.9

a Col. 2.17.

b or, they should have.

c Le. 16.31.

d Mk. 6.8.

e Ps. 40.6.8.

f or, thou shouldst fitted of many; and unto them that look ^a for him shall he appear ^b the second time without sin unto ^c salvation.

CHAPTER X.

1 The weakness of the law sacrifices. 16 The sacrifice of Christ's body once offered, 14 for ever hath taken away sins. 19 An exhortation to hold fast the faith, with patience and thanksgiving.

FOR the law having a shadow ^a of good things to come, and not the very image of the things, can never with those sacrifices which they offered year by year continually make the comers thereunto perfect.

2 For then ^b would they not have ceased to be offered? because that the worshippers once purged should have had no more conscience of sins.

3 But in those sacrifices there is ^c a remembrance again made of sins every ^d year.

4 For it is not possible that the blood of bulls and of goats should take away ^e sins.

5 Wherefore when he cometh into the world, he saith, ^f Sacrifice and offering thou wouldst not, but a body ^g hast thou prepared me:

6 In burnt-offerings and sacrifices for sin thou hast had no pleasure.

7 Then said I, Lo, I come (in the volume of the book it is written of me,) to do thy will, O God.

8 Above when he said, Sacrifice and offering and burnt-offerings and offering for sin thou wouldst not, neither hadst pleasure therein, which are offered by the law;

9 Then said he, Lo, I come to do thy will, O of God in heaven, or visit the churches of God on earth, desiring to look into the mysteries of human redemption.

The entrance of the high priest into the most holy place only once a year, and that not without the sprinkling of blood, and other mystic ceremonies, we are here taught, (ver. 24,) prefigured our Lord Jesus Christ entering "into heaven itself, to appear in the presence of God for us." In the mean time, that is, before the death of Christ, the continuance of the veil which separated the most holy from the outer part, signified that the way into the former "was not yet made manifest"—was not thrown open—"while as yet the first tabernacle, with all its rites and ceremonies, remained standing;" but when, at the death of Christ, that veil was rent in twain, it was thereby signified that, through him, the way was opened, and that sinners of all nations, Gentiles as well as Jews, might now draw nigh to God.

"To show (says Mr. M'Lean) that it was necessary that the new covenant should be ratified by the death of Christ, he [Paul] compares it in this respect to a testament, which is of no force or validity till ratified by the death of the testator. (ver. 16, 17.) Accordingly, God's covenants with sinful men have, ever since the fall, been made and ratified by the death and blood of sacrifices: and this, he particularly observes, was the case with the first or Sinaitic covenant, which was solemnly ratified and dedicated by slaying sacrifices, and sprinkling the blood on the book and people—the tabernacle and all the vessels of the sanctuary." These things, indeed, as they referred to the types themselves, were necessary to be repeated; but not so the antitype, or Christ must have often suffered; but now once "in the end of the world," that is, in these last ages, the times of the Messiah, "hath he appeared, finally and effectually to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself."

But it may be asked, whence arises a necessity that the heavens themselves should be purified, where no sin can enter? To this we answer, with Mr. M'Lean, "That though the typical representations of heavenly things had no moral impurity in themselves, and though neither person nor thing ceremonially unclean was permitted to enter into the outer, far less into the inner tabernacle, to defile it; yet we have seen that it was necessary that they should be purified with blood, on account of the uncleanness of the people, and that they might thus be opened and fitted for their admission to, and acceptance with God, in his worship. Now, as to the heavenly things, it may be observed, that though Christ had no sin of his own, yet, as the substitute of sinners, he sanctified and devoted himself to be a sacrifice for their sins, (John xvii. 19.) and . . . was thus 'made perfect,' or consecrated, through his sufferings. 2. By his entering into heaven by the blood of his own sacrifice, he hath dedicated and opened for all believers, a new and living way of access into the holiest, by which they may draw near . . . to God. 3. He hath gone into heaven, to prepare a place there for the everlasting habitation of the saints, and will come again to receive them to himself."

CHAP. X. VER. 1.—18. The superiority of Christ's sacrifice further argued from the prophecies of the Old Testament.—The apostle commences this chapter with stating, that the Mosaic ritual was merely a shadow—a dark adumbration—which formed only a sketch or outline of the mysterious truths of the gospel, and of the person and character of our Redeemer; and not the very image, exhibiting the full form and colour of the several objects; and this representation being so imperfect, ought by no means to be put in the place of the objects which it represented; nor ought it to be considered as itself perfecting those who were its most diligent observers. It, in fact, could do nothing, but only direct them to Him who was able to do all things which they required, and who doth "all things well." Thus, he proceeds to show them, was pointed out in the prophecies of the Old Testament, and particularly in the book of Psalms, several passages from which the apostle here quotes and expounds.

That it was not possible for the blood of bulls and goats to satisfy the demands of divine justice, or propitiate the anger of God against sinners, is in itself most evident; and is rendered the more so from the requirement of their perpetual repetitions: for if human transgression could be thus atoned for, those sacrifices need not annually and daily be repeated: but this constant repetition was a sufficient intimation that some further and better sacrifice would be required. David therefore represents Messiah himself as thus addressing the Divine Being: "Sacrifice and offering thou wouldst not" he satisfied with; "in burnt-offerings and" other sacrifices "for sin," in themselves considered, "thou hast no pleasure: "but a body hast thou prepared (or fitted) for me" to become incarnate: "Lo, I come (therefore) to do thy will, O God." Here "he taketh away the efficacy of the" legal sacrifices first mentioned, that he may establish the second—the merit and efficacy of his own

Ver. 19. When Moses, &c.—See Exod. xiv. 3–8. But some things are golden and there are no gold, for which he had no doubt good authority.—Secret word—See note on Mark xv. 17.

Ver. 20. This is the blood, &c.—Compare Mat. xvi. 28. [Rather, covenant. Ver. 16, 17, may be better rendered, "For where a covenant is, there must necessarily be the death of that by which it is confirmed: for a covenant is confirmed over and over again, and does not avail while that by which it is confirmed liveth." See on the xxix. 12. Jos. ix. 6.—Brainerd.]

Ver. 23. The heavenly things.—Compare Ephes. i. 20. Also this Epistle, chap. viii. 2; ix. 11, 24.

Ver. 26. But now once, &c.—Compare ver. 12.
Ver. 27. After this.—Though the day of judgment must be at a great distance from the decease of many individuals, it is the general idea, that upon our entrance into another world, an individual decision will take place, and fix the final state of each, for happiness or misery. See Eccles. xii. 7. Luke xvi. 22, 23.

God. He taketh away the first, that he may establish the second.

10 By the which will we are ^a sanctified through the offering ^b of the body of Jesus Christ once for all.

11 And every priest standeth ^c daily ministering and offering oftentimes the same sacrifices, which can never ^d take away sins:

12 But this man, after he had offered one sacrifice for sins, for ever sat ^e down on the right hand of God;

13 From henceforth expecting till his enemies ^f be made his footstool.

14 For by one offering he hath ^g perfected for ever them that are sanctified.

15 Whereof the Holy Ghost also is a witness to us: for after that he had said before,

16 This ^h is the covenant that I will make with them after those days, saith the Lord, I will put my laws into their hearts, and in their minds will I write them;

17 ⁱ And their sins and iniquities will I remember no more.

18 Now where remission ^j of these is, there is no more offering for sin.

19 Having therefore, brethren, ^k boldness to enter into the holiest ^l by the blood of Jesus,

20 By a new and living way, ^m which he hath ⁿ consecrated for us, through the veil, that is to say, his flesh;

21 And having a high priest ^o over the house of God;

22 Let us draw near with a true heart in ^p full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled

A. M. cir.
4067.
A. D. c. r.
63.

g Ju 17.19.
h c 9.12.

i Nu 23.3.
j Ps 50.8.
13.

k Gal 3.1.
l Ps 110.1.

m ver 1.
n Je 31.33.
21.

o Some copies have, Then he stood, And then.

P or, liberty.

q c 9.8, 12.
r Ju 14.6.

s or, new mode.

t c 14.16.
u Ep 3.12.

v Eze 36.25.
w 1 Th 5.21.

x Ro 13.11.

y Nu 15.30.
c 6.4, &c.

z Zep 1.13.
3.8.

a He 17.2.
13.

b c 2.3.
c Mat. 12.
31, 32.

d Ju 32.35.
36.

e Ps 135.14.

^v from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water.

23 Let us hold fast the profession of ^{our} faith without wavering; (for he ^w is faithful that promised:)

24 And let us consider one another to provoke unto love and to good works:

25 Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some ^{is}; but exhorting ^{one another}: and so much the more, as ^x ye see the day approaching.

26 For if ^y we sin wilfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins,

27 But a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery ^z indignation, which shall devour the adversaries.

28 He ^a that despised Moses' law died without mercy under two or three witnesses:

29 Of ^b how much sorer punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, and hath counted the blood of the covenant, wherewith he was sanctified, an unholy thing, and hath done despite unto the Spirit ^c of grace?

30 For we know him that hath said, Vengeance ^d belongeth unto me, I will recompense, saith the Lord. And ^e again, The Lord shall judge his people.

31 It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God.

32 But call to remembrance the former days, in which, after ye were illuminated, ye endured a great fight of afflictions; infinite and unparalleled sacrifice, which alone hath the true nature of an atonement.

It has repeatedly been asked, But why could not God have accepted the blood of bulls and goats, without having required a human sacrifice, and especially that of his own Son?

To this it has very properly been replied, 1. That these sacrifices were only types and shadows of the true sacrifice, and shall God be satisfied with shadows only? 2. Had this been possible, how then shall we account for the fact, that God made the soul of his own Son a sacrifice for sin? Surely this circumstance fully proves, that the divine honour could have accepted no inferior sacrifice. The contrary supposition, however well intended, seems to us to represent the divine perfections in a very unworthy light. 3. Reason evidently requires, that satisfaction for sin should be made in the nature which had offended; and that the blood of no inferior animal could be accepted in our stead. Thus it was impossible that the blood of bulls and goats could take away sin. And when it is considered, that the death of Christ was not merely the death of one man for another, but the death of one for millions, the same line of reasoning seems to require, that his life must not only be free from personal guilt, but must be at least of equal value with the whole; and this seems impossible, but on the supposition that he must be of far superior rank—as was Jesus Christ, who, though a partaker of real humanity, was no less intimately related to the divine Being—God as well as man.

From the indispensable and perpetual use of blood, under the law, as the means of purification and of pardon, Dr. Macknight infers two facts of great importance—1. "That from the fall of Adam to the end of the world, no man will be pardoned but through Christ's having offered himself to God as and slaves, that they might claim them as their own, and therefore rendered the original, "My body hast thou prepared?" meaning, marked, according to their custom. See Gal. vi 17. Rev. xii. 16, 17.

Ver. 10. Once for all—i. e. once only.
Ver. 12. For ever sat down—Namely, as a priest upon his throne. Zech. vi. 13.

Ver. 20. He hath consecrated—Gr. "hath new made;" i. e. applied to a new use or purpose. This new way was made, not for Christ himself, but for us.

Ver. 23. The profession of our faith—The English translators, on the authority of one MS. only, read faith, instead of hope—the true reading, according to Mill, who is followed by Doddridge, Macknight, M'Lean, &c.—The apostle, in this exhortation, refers to the confession of their hope of salvation through Christ, which the primitive Christians made at baptism—"Macknight."

Ver. 25. Ye see the day—i. e. "That day," with the article. Macknight applies this to the destruction of Jerusalem; but as that day was usually spoken of in connexion with the day of judgment, (and often, perhaps, confounded with it,) that also may probably be referred to.

Ver. 26. If we sin wilfully—To sin wilfully, is to sin deliberately and knowingly, and neither through ignorance nor fear.—There remaineth no more sacrifice—That is, the Jewish sacrifices being abolished, and that of Christ rejected, of course there remains no other—"I was lately," observed Mr. Gimm, "called to attend the deathbed of a young man at Hoxton. I found him in the greatest horror of mind. I pointed him to Jesus, the sinner's only friend, and to the glorious promises of the Gospel; when, with an agonizing a sacrifice for sin.—2. That although Christ offered himself only once, and that at the conclusion of the Mosaic dispensation, that one offering is in itself so meritorious, that its influence reacheth backwards to the beginning of the world, and forwards to the end of time."

The author of this epistle seldom speaks of the sufferings of Christ, or of his people, but he connects them with the glory that was to follow. When Christ had completed the work of atonement, he sat down, waiting and expecting till all his enemies should be made his footstool; in order to which the Holy Spirit continued, and still continues, his work of grace in the hearts of his redeemed.

Ver. 19—39. A practical improvement of the preceding statements.—St. Paul having, in the preceding part of this epistle, shown the defect of the Jewish sacrifices, and the infinite superiority of that of Christ, encourages the believing Hebrews to draw near, with a holy freedom and boldness, by the blood of Jesus, as "a new and living way" of access to God. In illustration of this expression, "a new and living way," Dr. Owen observes, that the blood of the sacrificed animals was to be used immediately on its being shed; for if it was left till cold and congealed, it could neither be offered nor sprinkled; but "the blood of Christ is (as it were) always warm, having the same spirit of life and sanctification moving in it." What is said of the veil of his flesh, may also have an allusion to the veil of the temple being rent in twain in the moment of his death, as figuratively representing the opening of this "new and living way," by the piercing of his body on the cross, whence flowed a double stream of blood and water, to sprinkle our consciences with the former, and purify our conduct by the latter.

look of despair, he replied, 'Ah! sir, but I have rejected the Gospel.' Some were sure, I found Paine's Age of Reason, if suited my corrupt taste. I numbered its pamphlets, after this, wherever I went, I did all that lay in my power to hold up the Scriptures to contempt, by this means I led others into the fatal snare, and made proselytes to infidelity. Thus I rejected God, and now he rejects me. I suffered to pray for him, but he refused. 'Oh, no—it is all in vain to pray for me.' Then, with a dismal groan, he cried out, 'Paine's Age of Reason has ruined my soul,' and instantly expired." Ver. 28. He that despised—Doddridge, "who set at naught the law of Moses." See Num. xv. 30, 31.

Ver. 29. If we sin wilfully—This may either be referred to Christ, or to the apostle, here described. To sinfully is to set apart to a holy or sacred purpose. So Christ said—"I sanctify myself." (John xvii. 19.) and thus we converse, we drink, as high priests, before he entered within the veil with his own blood, called in canon, xvi. 12, 29, "the blood of the everlasting covenant," and "the blood whereby he sanctified the people." So Gill and others. But applying the term "sanctified" to the apostle, since the Scripture frequently speaks of men according to their profession, it may mean only a professed devotedness of himself to Christ; and as Bishop Hoadly suggests, reviewing the Sacramental cup. See 1 Co. x. 29; 2 Pet. i. 1. An unholy thing—Doddridge, "common," or "unholy." See Acts x. 15. And hath done despite—Macknight, "misused."

Ver. 30. Vengeance belongeth unto me, &c. Dent xxvii. 35, 36.

Ver. 31. It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God—Doddridge, "a dreadful"—thing.

Ver. 32. A great fight—Macknight, "Combat," alluding, doubtless, to the public combats in the theatres of that age.

33 Partly, whilst ye were made a gazing-stock both by reproaches and afflictions; and partly, whilst ye became ¹ companions of them that were so used.

34 For ye had compassion of me in my bonds, and took joyfully the spoiling of your goods, knowing ^a in yourselves that ye have in heaven ^b a better and an enduring substance.

35 Cast not away therefore your confidence, which hath great recompense of reward.

36 For ye have need of patience, that, after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise.

37 For ^u yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry.

38 Now the just shall live by faith: but if any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him.

Having entered this way by faith and repentance—having avowed ourselves the disciples of the Lord Jesus, let us, saith the apostle, hold fast our profession without wavering. Let us stimulate each other to love and to good works—using all the means of social worship, as well as of private devotion; especially guarding against pride and presumption, the great sources of apostasy from God. It is true, that in times of persecution many may fall away through weakness; and of these, many will also be glad to return to our merciful Saviour, in an interval of the church's peace; but the most awful apostasy is that which originates in pride of intellect and of heart. Such men spurn at the humbling truths of Revelation, trample on the dignity of the Son of God, count his blood like that of a common man, and speak contemptuously of the work of the Holy Spirit; and all this, not through ignorance of these truths, but from pride, presumption, and contempt for the simplicity of the gospel, and the humble instruments employed in its propagation.

For such it must be indeed "a dreadful thing to fall" into his hands, who hath said, "Vengeance belongeth unto me!" And, to guard his brethren the more carefully against apostasy, St. Paul calls upon them to recollect what they had formerly suffered in the cause of Christ, and what they had already endured for his sake; and for them who had stood firm against such trials, to be led away by the pride of reason and of learning, and of philosophy, (falsely so called!) would be truly melancholy and lamentable. He therefore recommends the believing Hebrews to "live by faith," and to trust the word of God, in preference both to their own reason, and the pretensions of those who attempted to seduce them.

We cannot help remarking here the great importance of public and social worship: for though we do not estimate the piety of persons from the number of sermons they attend, we have a very low idea of their religion who do not attend on public worship. For persons to excuse themselves on the principle that they cannot expect to learn, not only discovers great vanity, but great ignorance; since the object of our devotional assemblies is not only personal instruction, but also communion with God and with our fellow Christians; and, as stated in this instance, to encourage one another, in the prospect of alarming or afflictive dispensations; "and so much the more as ye see the day approaching."

In farther prosecution of his subject, the apostle proceeds, in the next chapter, to give them a narrative of the fruits and effects of faith, through the several ages of the patriarchs, the Mosaic dispensation, and the latter history of Israel, down to their own times.

CHAP. XI. Ver. 1-7. The nature of faith—the creation—and the patriarchs before Abraham.—The inspired writer of this Epistle brings the present very interesting chapter with defining the principles of faith, the nature and effects of which he illustrates by a variety of examples. The definition of faith (ver. 1) is thus rendered by our translators:—"Faith is the ii 3. — He that shall come will come.—Christians were taught to look for a second coming of Christ, as earnestly as for his incarnation; and one of their descriptive characters is, that they wait for his appearing 1 Thess. i. 10. 2 Thess. iii. 5.

² Thiers, in 5.
He draw back." The Hebrew of Halaquak, just returned to reads, (ver. 4.)
H., "and which is lifted up." Puerco contends, that the same Hebrew word signifies to faint, and so to fall; and he thinks it probable, that the author of the Septuagint intended to give it the sense of to shrink or to tremble, and hence, to draw back. He observes, that the word is used in the Septuagint in the luse, turkey, &c.; who, while they proudly raise their heads, seldom draw them low by fear, as we do. He also observes, that the word is used by Isaias, as by pride and presumption. (ver. 29.) They left the ranks of Christianity, not so much from fear, as from contempt and scorn. The Hobrew word (gnaphet) is rendered presumed, Nuhā. xiv. 44.

 CHAP. XC. Ver. 1 The substance.—The Greek term, hypostasis, is well known in the Trinitarian controversy, as differently used for essence and for person, but "in the New Testament (as remarked by Meander) it is used only five times, and that only by our apostle; in three of which it is translated confidence, viz. 2 Co. ix. 4; xi. 1; and in two of which it is translated evidence, viz. 2 Tim. ii. 16, and in the last of which it is translated reproof."—The original term here used, in the New Testament occurs only twice: namely, in 2 Tim. ix. 16, where it is translated reproof; but, according to the judicious commentator just cited

A. M. cir.
4067.
A. D. cir.
63.

f 1 Th. 2. 14.
g or, that ye have in yourselves; or,
for yourselves.
h 1n. 12. 33.
i Mat. 5. 12.
j 1n. 21. 19
k Hab. 2. 3, 4

l ver. 26.
a or,
ground,
or, confidence.
b Ro 8. 24,
25
c Ge. 1. 1.
Ps 33 6
d Ge. 1 4, 5.
e or, is yet spoken of
f Ge. 5 22, 23

39 But we are not of them who draw back unto perdition; but of them that believe to the saving of the soul.

CHAPTER XI.

1 What faith is. 6 Without faith we cannot please God. 7 The worthy fruits thereof in the fathers of old time.

NOW faith is the ^a substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things ^b not seen.

2 For by it the elders obtained a good report.

3 Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear.

4 By faith Abel ^d offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, by which he obtained witness that he was righteous, God testifying of his gifts: and by it he being dead ^e yet speaketh.

5 By faith Enoch ^f was translated that he substance of things hoped for, and the evidence of things unseen;" meaning, doubtless, that it is the nature of faith to realize those objects, whereof the evidence is presented to our minds, which is certainly true; but for reasons subjoined in our notes, we prefer the rendering of Mr. McLean; namely, "Faith is the confidence of things hoped for, and the conviction of things unseen;" which corresponds in sense with that of Dr. Doddridge. It is added, "For by it," that is, by faith, "the elders obtained a good report," or testimony, on the part of God, that they pleased him, and were accepted of him, as follows in the subsequent verses. But how does this report or testimony, thus obtained of God, prove or illustrate the nature of faith as here defined? It was by confidence in the word and promises of God, particularly with reference to a future state, that they were enabled to resist temptation, to sustain affliction, and to endure persecution.

Before we come, however, to individual instances, we meet with this general proposition, "Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God." Thus Moses informs us in the first of Genesis, and such is the concurrent testimony of the sacred writers. But the sense of the next clause is not quite so evident. It runs thus: "So that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear;" that is, says Doddridge, "It is certain no visible cause could produce those things, [to suppose] which would be, in effect, to suppose them to have produced themselves; we therefore, by faith, refer them to a divine, invisible original." Macknight renders it, "The things which are seen were not made of things which did appear." Chrysostom thus expresses it—"The things which exist were made of things not existing"—that is, made out of nothing. So Bishop Pearson, and most other divines.

Other ancients. The ancient philosophers indulged themselves in a variety of speculations respecting the origin of the material world; but its creation from non-entity, or nothing, by the one great Supreme, is a pure doctrine of Revelation: for, however reason may approve, it certainly did not discover it; nor is it to be found among either the poets or the sages of the Pagan world, who generally leaned to the absurd notion of an eternal succession of causes and effects. Overwhelming as are the modern discoveries respecting the all-but-infinite extent of creation, the scriptural doctrine of a first supreme cause, is still more so; and taken together, they sink proud man to his proper level with the worms.

Had we room to enlarge, all the natural perfections of God might be adduced from the simple fact of the creation; particularly his wisdom and power—his eternity and immutability—his justice and his goodness: but though we cannot now examine, let us not neglect to admire and to adore. This is the song of Moses and of the Lamb—"Great and marvellous are thy works, Lord God Almighty: just and true are thy ways, thou King of saints!" (Rev. xv. 3.)

The long list of patriarchal worthies here enumerated, com-

Ver. 2. The elders.—Macknight, "The ancients;" namely, the patriarchs

Ver. 3. The worlds were framed.—Literally, "the ages." The material world acquired this name from the perpetual changes to which it is subject, and some modern writers would confine its import to the arrangement and government of the world; but that the material frame itself must be included, is evident from the phrase, "things which are seen;" also from chap. 1. 2, and many other passages.

Ver 4. A more excellent sacrifice.—"It is observed by critics, that [Greek: ἀγαθὴν] signifies more in number, rather than in value. Cain offered the fruit of the ground, which was only the mincha, or meat-offering; but Abel offered the first-born of his flock, which was a sacrifice, and not a proper sacrifice for sin. Gen. iv. 3."—W. Lean. The late Dr. Kennicott further argued from these circumstances, particularly from the word [pleiona] "more," that Abel offered not only a sacrifice, but also a mincha; that is, a meat (or rather bread) offering; so that he by the one acknowledged God's providential goodness, and by the other his redeeming mercy. See Kennicott's Dissertation on "Cain and Abel."—By the being dead, yet speaketh.—By what? it may be asked. By his offering, by his faith, by his example. John Edwards says, "He claims it of his blood, which God said, 'Crie thou unto me from the beginning of thy distress.'" Gen. iv. 10. But MacKnight opposes the latter interpretation as ungrammatical. The margin, however, reads in the passive, "Is yet spoken of" alluding to the "good report" which he "through faith received," as in ver. 2.

as in ver 2

should not see death; and was not found, because God had translated him: for before his translation he had this testimony, that he pleased God.

6 But without faith it is impossible to please him: for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him.

7 By faith ^hNoah, being warned of God of things not seen as yet, ⁱ moved with fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house; by the which he condemned the world, and became heir of the righteousness which is by faith.

8 By faith ^jAbraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed; and he went out, not knowing whither he went.

9 By faith he sojourned in the land of promise, as in a strange country, ^k dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise:

10 For he looked for a city ^l which hath foundations, whose ^m builder and maker is God.

11 Through faith also Sara ⁿ herself received strength to conceive seed, and was delivered menches with ^oAbel, the son of Adam and Eve, who is here commended as having offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain; but wherein was that sacrifice more excellent? Some have supposed its superior excellency to have consisted in its being an animal sacrifice, and thus a more proper type of the atonement of our Saviour; and others in its being the choicest of its kind—"of the firstlings of his flock, and of the fat thereof;" as stated in Gen. iv. 4. But, as we have formerly stated, we think the grand difference lay in the characters of the offerers—the one was a believer and the other not. The offering of one was made in faith, and with an ultimate view to the atonement of the Redeemer; that of the other in a principle of self-righteousness, and with regard to no merits but his own. (See expos. of Gen. iv. 1—7.)

The next in the list is ^pEnoch, the seventh from Adam, who, on account of the eminence of his faith and holiness, was translated to heaven without seeing death, having first obtained this testimony, "that he pleased God;" a testimony that clearly implied his also being a believer, for, "without faith, it is impossible to please God;" and that for this reason, "he who cometh to God must believe" not only "that he is," but "that he is a rewarder of them who diligently seek him." This did Enoch, and was therefore honoured (as was Elijah, the prophet, in after times) with a removal to heaven, and probably in a like open manner; and the expression "was not found," seems to imply that, like the Jewish prophet, he was sought after. (See 2 Kings ii. 16.)

The expression that "he (God) is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him," being spoken of as the faith of the first patriarchs, evidently implies their belief in the rewards of a future state: for the scriptures of the Old Testament also speak of the unequal distributions of good and evil in the present life, while at the same time they as positively assure us of the divine equity; and these facts can only be reconciled by the doctrine of a future judgment. (Compare Ps. xli. 8; xlvii. 13. Eccl. viii. 14, with Gen. xviii. 25. Ps. ix. 7; xcvii. 11; cxix. 137. See also our exposition of Gen. v. 21—32.)

The third name in this list is that of ^qNoah, a patriarch of two worlds—before and after the flood. His faith was evident in the zeal and perseverance with which he laboured, for 120 years together, in building an ark for the saving of his house, whereby, that is, by his example and preaching, "he condemned the world, and became heir of the righteousness, which is by faith." It is said, however, that he was "moved with fear," a circumstance which proves that the reverential fear of God is perfectly consistent with faith in him, and confidence in his mercy. That fear which is ejected by perfect love, is the fear not of children but of slaves. (See 1 John iv. 18.)

Ver. 5 Was not found.—Namely, not on earth, being removed in his whole person, soul and body, to the skies. He had this testimony.—This refers to Gen. v. 24, where we read, "Enoch walked with God," which the LXX having translated that he "pleased God," is so quoted by the apostle; and hence we infer, that walking with God, implies a state of favour and friendship with him.

Ver. 7 Of things not seen as yet.—Namely, the flood.—Moved with fear.—Mocknight.—"A religious fear."—Heir of the righteousness which is by faith.—See Rom. vi. 22, iv. 13. Phil. iii. 9.

Ver. 9 In tabernacles.—i. e. tents.—With Isaac and Jacob.—Doddridge observes, that Jacob was born 15 years before Abraham died.

Ver. 10 Builder and maker.—(Gr. demonstrans.) Doddridge, "Former Mocknight." Ruler.

Ver. 12 As good as dead.—Gr. "dead as to these things," i. e. as to having children.—As the stars of the sky in multitude.—"To be able to enumerate the stars, the Psalmist speaks of as the peculiar prerogative of God." Ps. cxlviii. 4.

Ver. 14 Died in faith.—Gr. "according to faith."—And were persuaded of a child when she was past age, because she judged him faithful ^r who had promised.

12 Therefore sprang there even of one, and him as good as dead, ^s so many as the stars of the sky in multitude, and as the sand which is by the sea shore innumerable.

13 These all died ^t in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off, and were persuaded of ^u them, and embraced ^v them, and ^w confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth.

14 For they that say such things declare plainly that they seek a country.

15 And truly, if they had been mindful of that ^x country from whence they came out, they might have had opportunity to have returned.

16 But now they desire a better ^y country, that is, a heavenly: wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their ^z God: for he hath prepared for them a ^a city.

17 By faith Abraham, when ^b he was tried, offered up Isaac: and he that had received the promises offered up his only begotten ^c son,

18 ^d Of whom it was said, ^e That in Isaac shall thy seed be called:

19 Accounting that God ^f was able to raise him

Ver. 12—19. The history of Abraham's faith.—The next character to which we come was so eminent for his faith, that he is, by way of distinction, called "The Father of the faithful," or of "believers." (Rom. ix. 11—16.) On his life and character, therefore, the apostle enlarges with peculiar propriety, as the most illustrious example of that distinguishing grace. "The first instance given of his extraordinary faith is, that he became a pilgrim, and a stranger; and that not in consequence of any plan which he had formed, or of a wandering disposition; but it was in consequence of his being called of God, as we are informed by Stephen, Acts vii. 2, 3, and being so called he went forth, "not knowing whither he went." In doing this, he of course renounced the idols of his family and his country, his native land and his paternal possessions, with all his temporal hopes and prospects; and though he had the promise of the land of Canaan for his posterity, it was for them only, for he had of it no possession. At the same time, and during all this period, both he and his believing descendants were seeking for a better country and city, which God, their God, had provided for them, that is, "a heavenly" one:—for he (Abraham) and his believing posterity, "looked for a city which had foundations, whose builder and maker is God."

Sarah is next introduced as a partaker of the same faith, and co-heir of the same promise with her husband, notwithstanding that, as her history informs us, at the first she laughed at the idea of having children at her time of life, though announced by an angel. (Gen. xviii. 20.) Afterwards, however, there is no doubt of her change of mind, for "she judged him faithful who had promised," and lived to see, so far as respected herself, the fulfilment of his promise.

"These all died in faith,"—namely, the holy patriarchs; particularly, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, neither of whom received the blessings promised in this life, but looked to the possession of a heavenly Canaan even before their children took possession of the earthly. It was faith that supported them under all the trials of life, and when Death approached, and fully convinced them that there was no hope of their entering the Canaan below, Faith showed them another Canaan above—a new Jerusalem, "a city," not consisting of tents and temporary erections—but "a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God." But we cannot, among those who died in faith, include all Abraham's natural posterity, numerous as the stars or as the sands; for the far greater part of them, alas! deserted "the faith of their father Abraham." But to return to him:

The most celebrated instance of Abraham's faith was the offering up of his son Isaac; of whom it was said, "In Isaac shall thy seed be called." But as we have already considered of them—These words are omitted in many MSS., and in all the ancient versions and commentaries.—Embraced him.—This is supposed to be an allusion to persons on a voyage, who when they desery at a distance their wished-for port, bid it with the most joyful shout:

Lat' Italy appens, Achates cures.—And Italy ^g with shouts the crowd replies.—Pitt's Virgil.
Ver. 14 They seek a country.—The original word, (patrida), as Doddridge remarks, "is very emphatical it signifies, as it were, a native country in which their father dwelt, as opposed to that in which they were pilgrims and strangers."

Ver. 15 Opportunity to have returned.—It is calculated that there were full 200 years between the call of Abraham and the death of Isaac, during which there were, doubtless, many opportunities of return.

Ver. 17 Offered up.—Though Isaac was not slain, Abraham stretched forth his hand, and took the knife to slay him, as he certainly would have done, if he had not been restrained, and, as we conceive, in the full persuasion of his being raised immediately from the dead.

Ver. 18 Of—Doddridge, "concerning"—them.

up, even from the dead; from whence also he received him in a figure.

20 By faith Isaac ^a blessed Jacob and Esau concerning things to come.

21 By faith Jacob, when he was a dying, blessed ^a both the sons of Joseph; and worshipped, leaning ^z upon the top of his staff.

22 By faith ^a Joseph, when he died, ^b made mention of the departing of the children of Israel; and gave commandment concerning his bones.

23 By faith Moses, when he was born, was hid ^c three months of his parents, because they saw he was a proper child; and they were not afraid of the king's ^d commandment.

24 By faith ^a Moses, when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter;

25 Choosing ⁱ rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season;

26 Esteeming the reproach ^e of ^h Christ great-

A. M. cir.
A. D. c. 63.
x Ge. 27:27.
y Ge. 48:5.
z Ge. 47:31.
a Ge. 50:24.
b or, remembered.
c Ex. 2:2.
d Ex. 1:16.
e Ex. 2:10.
f Ps. 84:10.
g or, for.
h c. 13.
i c. 10:25.
j Ex. 10:25.
k 1 Ti. 1:17.
l Ex. 12:21.
m Ex. 14:22.
n Jos. 6:12.
o Jos. 6:23.
p or, were sordident.
q Jos. 2:1.
u Jos. 11:32, &c.
v 1 Sa. 17:45, &c.
w 1 Sa. 2:9, &c.

er riches than the treasures in Egypt: for he had respect unto the recompense ⁱ of the reward.

27 By faith he forsook Egypt, not fearing ⁱ the wrath of the king: for he endured, as seeing him ^k who is invisible.

28 Through faith he kept the ^t passover, and the sprinkling of blood, lest he that destroyed the first-born should touch them.

29 By faith they passed ^m through the Red sea as by dry land: which the Egyptians assaying to do were drowned.

30 By faith the walls of Jericho ^a fell down, after they were compassed about seven days.

31 By faith the harlot Rahab ^a perished not with them that ^p believed not, when she had received the spies ^q with peace.

32 And what shall I more say? for the time would fail me to tell of ^r Gedeon, and of ^s Barak, and of ^t Samson, and of ^u Jephthae; of ^v David also, and ^w Samuel, and of the prophets:

this extraordinary instance of piety and devotedness to God in our exposition of Genesis, chap. xxiii., we shall here merely recapitulate, and that very briefly.

1. We have there remarked, that Abraham had been long trained to implicit obedience; and had found that, to whatever trials he might be called in Providence, he was by faith supported under them, and safely carried through them; and, though a pilgrim and a stranger all his lifetime, he neither attempted nor contemplated the returning to his native country and his idol gods.

2. In this remarkable narrative, we have not only a proof of Abraham's confidence in God, but an enigmatical display of God's method of saving sinners, under every dispensation of his grace; namely, by the sufferings and death of his own and only beloved Son, who, after dying for our sins, rose again for our justification, both which events are here plainly typified.

In speaking of the nature and extent of Abraham's trial, the pious Mr. Henry pithily observes, that he was called—"As a father, to cut off his own family—as a believer, to cancel the divine promises—as a type, to frustrate Christ's advent—as a minister, to cut off the church at a blow—and, as a philanthropist, to destroy all mankind. Such, however, were the appearances which must have presented themselves to his imagination."

The blessing of Jacob and Esau by Isaac, and of Joseph's sons by Jacob, have been already considered pretty fully in the 27th and 48th chapters of Genesis, to which, therefore, we refer our readers. What Joseph said, when dying, concerning his bones, (Gen. i. 24, 25,) was undoubtedly a prediction and pledge of the return of his brethren and their posterity to Canaan, (whence they had been for a time driven by famine into the land of Egypt,) and must not be considered in a superstitious point of view, as if he wished his bones to be honoured as relics; but it was to his brethren a demonstration of his belief in their return to possess the land promised to their fathers. These, therefore, "all died in faith."

Ver. 20–20. The history of Moses and of the persecuted Israelites.—Next to Abraham, Moses is the most distinguished character in the history of the Old Testament. He was, under God, the deliverer and legislator of Israel, and founder of the Jewish economy. His first introduction to the world, however, promised no such distinction. An exposed infant, discovered, as it were, by accident; adopted, out of charity, by a young princess, who was providentially led to its own mother as its nurse, and, by this unexpected patronage, introduced into Pharaoh's court. The beauty of his person was probably a principal mean, both of his preservation and his being adopted by Pharaoh's daughter as her own son, and, as such, trained up in all the wisdom of Egypt; but when he came of age, and was to have been in that character introduced among the Egyptian nobles, he refused to renounce his country and his kindred, which was probably necessary to taking rank as an Egyptian, or as the son of Pharaoh's daughter. Thus "choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God," the persecuted Israelites, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin and of idolatry for a season. From what is here said of the reproach of Christ, it seems evident, 1. That the pious Hebrews had been taught to look for a deliverer, "the seed of the woman, and of Abraham," who should one day appear for their salvation, and bring with him a great reward; and, 2. That the Egyptians were wont to reproach the poor oppressed Israelites with these expectations, which they considered as chimerical and ridiculous; and to ask, probably, "Where is the promise of his coming?" 3. That Moses and a few others (though probably but few) esteemed this reproach to them "greater riches," and far more permanent, than all the treasures and honours which Egypt could afford them.

It was probably about this time, that is, when he was forty years of age, that Moses found it necessary, on account of an act of homicide committed by him in the rescue of an Israelite, to flee into the land of Midian, (Exod. ii. 11, 12,) where he abode the next forty years; for he was not sent to deliver Israel till he was fourscore years of age. Then he returned to be their deliverer; and after a train of most astonishing miracles, by which his own faith, and that of his brethren, was established, "by faith he forsook (or left) Egypt; not fearing the wrath of the king," whom he boldly and resolutely withstood, "as seeing him who is invisible," (Exod. x. 28, 29.) "By faith also he kept the passover," wherein, by "the sprinkling of blood," he fully expressed his dependence on that atonement, which, in the fulness of time, Messiah was to offer for the salvation of mankind. By faith, also, in God's protecting providence, and in obedience to his word, "they passed through the Red Sea as on dry land;" which the Egyptians assaying (or attempting) to do, in pursuit of them, were therein drowned.

And when, after they had passed forty years in the wilderness, and had crossed the Jordan under the direction of Joshua, the successor of Moses, and besieged Jericho, "by faith" in the promise of God, though they used no weapons more formidable than rams' horns, the walls fell down before them. And the harlot Rahab, who lived just within, or upon the wall, perished not with the rest, because she also believed on the God of Israel. So she told the spies—"I know that the Lord hath given you the land. . . . We have heard how the Lord hath dried up the water of the Red Sea for you, when ye came out of Egypt. . . . for the Lord your God, he is God in heaven above, and in earth beneath." Thus, from "Abel, the righteous," to "Rahab, the (converted) harlot," faith always prevailed to the salvation of the soul, and often to the effect of temporal, and even of miraculous deliverance.

Ver. 31–40. Various other instances of faith enumerated. The apostle here finding examples to multiply upon him, makes a sudden stop, and asks, "And what shall I say more? for the time would fail" to review them all. He, therefore, rapidly enumerates a variety of other instances he might have added—naming some, and alluding to others in a most impressive strain of eloquence, of which we can only add a brief paraphrase, which may illustrate the subject, though it must is expressly mentioned by Josephus, who introduces Pharaoh's daughter calling him "a child divine in form." Philo also says, that, "at his birth, he had a more elegant and beautiful appearance, than denoted an ordinary person;" and it appears from Justin, that the fame of his beauty had spread among the heathen. —Baxter.—Not afraid—i. e. not so intimidated as to drown the child, as commended. Exod. i. 22.

Ver. 34. Come to years—i. e. to a mature age. The original literally reads, "grown great." It appears from Acts xii. 23, that Moses was now forty years of age.

Ver. 26. Reproach of Christ—That is, on account of their expectation of a Messiah.—For he had respect, &c.—Doddridge. "For he directed his regards to the recompense of reward." That reward could not be temporal, and must therefore be the everlasting reward. See ver. 10, 14, 16.

Ver. 27. By faith he forsook—Doddridge, "left."
Ver. 31. The harlot Rahab—Our opinion of this woman's character may be seen in our exposition of Joshua i.

Ver. 19. In a figure.—Gr. a parable. On this circumstance, Prob. Townsend remarks—"The sacrifice of Isaac by his father was so evidently typical of the sacrifice of Christ, that there can be no doubt of the design to be answered by this otherwise mysterious event. On the very spot where Christ was afterwards crucified, Abraham is commanded to slay his son. It is needless to recapitulate the coincidences between the sacrifice of Isaac and of Christ, they are to be found in every commentary. That the meaning of the whole of the circumstances of this mystical sacrifice of his son, was revealed to Abraham—that he learned from them, that the promised Messiah should in like manner bear the wood of the cross, and die for mankind; and that Abraham, in obeying the divine command, rejoined to see the day of Christ, and that he then saw it, and was glad, is well argued by Bp. Warburton."

—Townsend's 4th. Test. Arr.
Ver. 22. Joseph, when he died.—Doddridge, "When dying." Macknight, "When ending," namely, his life.

Ver. 23. A proper child.—Macknight, "beautiful." [The beauty of Moses

33 Who through faith subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained * promises, stopped the mouths of [†] lions,

34 Quenched the violence of [‡] fire, escaped [§] the edge of the sword, out of weakness were made strong, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of the aliens.

35 Women ^b received their dead raised to life again; and others were tortured, not accepting ^c deliverance; that they might obtain a better resurrection:

36 And others had trial of cruel mockings and scourgings, yea, moreover of ^d bonds and ^e imprisonment:

37 They were ^f stoned, they were sawn asunder, were tempted, were slain with the sword: they wandered about in sheepskins and goatskins; being destitute, afflicted, tormented:

38 (Of whom the world was not worthy;) they wandered in deserts, and in mountains, and in dens and caves of the earth.

39 And these all, having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise:

40 God having ^g provided some better thing for us, that they without ^h us should not be made perfect.

CHAPTER XII.

[†] An exhortation to constant faith, patience, and godliness. [‡] A commendation of the new testament above the old.

WHEREFORE seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside ^a every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us,

2 Looking unto Jesus the ^b author and finisher of our faith; who for the ^c joy that was set weaken the force of his language, as paraphrases always do:—The time would fail me to tell of Gideon, who, with a small band of men, defeated many thousand Midianites, (Judges vi.—viii.)—of Barak, who routed Sisera, and delivered Israel from the hand of Jabin, (Judges v. 6.)—of Sampson, who wrought many extraordinary achievements among the Philistines, (Judges xiii.—xvi.)—of Jephthah, and his victory over the Ammonites, (Judges xi. xii.)—of David, also, and his conquest over Goliath, and many other enemies—of Samuel, and others of the prophets.

These, with many more, proceeds the inspired writer, through faith subdued kingdoms, as did Joshua and others, just referred to;—wrought righteousness, not only personally, but executed the righteous judgments of God against offenders, as did Phineas, Joshua, David, &c.;—obtained promises, and their fulfilment, as did Abraham and Sarah, Caleb and Joshua, &c.;—stopped the mouths of lions, as in the case of Daniel;—quenched the violence of fire, as in the instances of his friends Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego;—escaped the edge of the sword—out of weakness were made strong—waxed valiant in fight—turned to flight the armies of the aliens, their pagan enemies. Even women received their dead to life again, as in the case of the widow of Zarephath, and the Shunammite; and others were tortured, not accepting deliverance, as in the heroic instance of the mother and her seven sons, as related in the second book of the Maccabees, (chap. vii.) when one of her sons thus addressed the tyrant Antiochus:—"Thou, like a fury, takest us out of the present life; but the King of the world shall raise us up, who have died for his laws, to everlasting life." Another son said, "It is good, being put to death by men, to look for hope from God, to be raised up again by him." All these died, not accepting deliverance, the mother herself encouraging her sons, one after the other, in the same hope of a joyful resurrection.

And others had trial of cruel mockings and scourgings; yea, moreover, of bonds and imprisonment. They were, in many cases, stoned; in one instance, at least, as Isaiah, sawn asunder—were tempted, being subject to "the fiery darts before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God.

3 For consider him that endured such contradiction of sinners against himself, lest ye be wearied and faint in your minds.

4 Ye have not yet resisted unto blood, striving against sin.

5 And ye have forgotten the exhortation ^d which speaketh unto you as unto children, My son, despise not thou the chastening of the Lord, nor faint when thou art rebuked of him.

6 For ^e whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth.

7 If ye endure chastening, God dealeth with you as with sons; for ^f what son is he whom the father chasteneth not?

8 But if ye be without chastisement, whereof all are partakers, then are ye bastards, and not sons.

9 Furthermore we have had fathers of our flesh which corrected us, and we gave them reverence: shall we not much rather be in subjection unto the ^g Father of spirits, and live?

10 For they verily for a few days chastened us ^h after their own pleasure; but he for our profit, that we might be partakers of his holiness.

11 Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous; nevertheless afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruit ⁱ of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby.

12 Wherefore lift ^j up the hands which hang down, and the feeble knees;

of Satan," as well as to the insidious arts of men—were slain with the sword, by decapitation; and, in short, by all the varieties of torture which malice or cruelty could invent. And these all, having obtained a good report through faith, yet received not the fulfilment of the great promise of Messiah; God having provided some better thing for us, that they, (Old Testament saints,) without us, (New Testament believers,) should not be made perfect. "The better thing provided for us than for them, (says Mr. M'Lean,) is the accomplishment of the promise, [of Messiah,] which they received not in this world; and their not being made perfect without us, is, their not fully enjoying the good thing promised, separate from, or before us."

"There was one promise (says Mr. Fuller) of greater importance than all the rest; namely, the coming of the Messiah. In the faith of this, the fathers lived and died; but they saw not its accomplishment. This was reserved for another generation. Hence the words of our Saviour, 'Blessed are your eyes, for they see (those things) that many prophets and righteous men have desired to see, and have not seen them,' &c. (Matt. xiii. 16, 17.) It is thus (adds this judicious writer) that God has wisely balanced the advantages of different ages. The fathers obtained much, but not all. Respecting the blessings of Messiah's kingdom, they sowed, and we reap; they laboured, and we enter into their labour. Thus it is ordered, that they without us should not be made perfect. The fulfilments of our times must come in to answer the faith, and complete the hopes of those who have gone before us." (Fuller's Harm., &c. p. 42, 43.)

CHAP. XII. Ver. 1—13. An animated exhortation to zeal and perseverance in the Christian race. The opening of this chapter has an evident allusion to the Olympic games, wherein, by racing, wrestling, and combat, the greatest exertions were made for mastery; the victors being crowned with honour by the judge who presided in the games, and hailed by the applause of a vast concourse of spectators. To these circumstances our apostle evidently alludes. The Christian life is a race, a combat, and a wrestling; not, indeed, with with patience—Macknight, "with perseverance;" which is doubtless the true meaning, if not an exact translation.

Ver. 2. The author—Doddridge, "leader." Macknight, "Captain and perfecter of the faith." How it has relation to a race, and may therefore be well explained of Christ, as our example, having gone before.—And finisher—Or completer. This is thought by some critics to refer to the judge who presided over the games, and distributed the rewards.—For the joy that was set before him—See Phil. ii. 8, 9.

Ver. 3. Consider—Macknight, "attentively consider." Ver. 4. Rebuked unto blood.—An allusion to those purists who practised in a sort of gloves. They had not endured martyrdom.

Ver. 5. Which speaketh unto you—Macknight, "which reasoneth with you."—My son, &c.—See Prov. iii. 11, 12.

Ver. 12. Lift up the hands, &c.—The exhortation (Dr. Green remarks) is Ver. 35. Others were tortured—Macknight, "beaten." The term probably refers to the cruel practice of the bastinado, still practised in the East.—A better resurrection—i. e. a resurrection to a better life.

Ver. 37. They wandered about in sheepskins, &c.—Clement of Rome, in his first Epistle to the Corinthians, § 17, alludes to the same circumstance. "Let us be imitators of those who went about in goatskins and sheepskins, preaching the coming of Christ. We mean Elias, Elisha, and Ezekiel, the prophets." See 2 Kings i. 8. Zechar. xiii. 4.

CHAP. XII. Ver. 1. Wherefore, seeing we also—Doddridge, "Being therefore encouraged."—A cloud of witnesses.—The application of this metaphor to a multitude of persons, may be seen in Isa. lx. 8.—So easily beset us.—Literally, says Macknight, "which stands conveniently around us"—the sin adapted to our circumstances and situation, or, as others explain it, our constitutional sin, that to which our corrupt nature is most prone.—Rude 13 And make ^k straight ^l paths for your feet, lest that which is lame be turned out of the way; but ^m let it rather be healed.

14 Follow peace ⁿ with all men, and holiness, without ^o which no man shall see the Lord:

15 Looking diligently ^p lest any man ^q fail of the grace of God; lest any ^r root of bitterness springing up trouble you, and thereby many be defiled;

16 Lest there be any ^s fornicator, or profane person, as Esau, who ^t for one morsel of meat sold his birthright.

17 For ye know how that afterward, when ^u he would have inherited the blessing, he was rejected: for he found no ^v place of repentance, though he sought it carefully with tears.

18 For ye are not come unto ^w the mount that might be touched, and that burned with fire, nor unto blackness, and darkness, and tempest,

19 And the sound of a trumpet, and the voice of words; which ^x voice they that heard entreated that the word should not be spoken to them any more:

20 (For they could not endure that ^y which flesh and blood, but with spiritual enemies of higher rank and superior powers. (Ephes. vi. 12.)

In the preceding chapter, St. Paul presents us with a long list of spiritual combatants; that is, patriarchs, prophets, and other holy men, who, under the old dispensation, had ran, and fought, and conquered, and obtained the reward of everlasting life. These he represents as having taken their seats in glory, and as looking down with a holy anxiety on the progress of their successors under the New Testament dispensation. These he calls a great cloud of witnesses, alluding, as we conceive, to the immense multitude of spectators which sometimes assembled in their theatres to behold their favourite divisions. Christian professors he considers as racers, and as racers were not to encumber themselves with heavy clothing, or an unnecessary burden, which was calculated to impede their progress; so Christians should not load themselves with the riches or honours of the world; but must especially avoid those sinful indulgences, which, if they do not absolutely arrest their course, must necessarily impede it, like the long garments of the ancients, which were always laid aside on these occasions. And as the racers in these contests never stopped to look about them, or to admire the surrounding spectacle, but used to keep their eye steady on the goal; so Christians are exhorted to look constantly to Jesus, as their great exemplar and support—the author, and completer, and rewarder of their faith; he who shrunk from no difficulty, and evaded no duty, but “endured the cross, and despised the shame;” and, having obtained a complete victory, is now set down at the right hand of the throne above. He views with tenderness and affection the progress of his followers, affording them every needful support under all their trials; and they are here reminded that their trials were vastly inferior to his; for they were only like those combatants who, as it were, “beat the air,” and had as yet engaged in no serious contest—they had “not resisted unto blood.”

The apostle now drops the imagery of the preceding verses, and reasons with the Hebrews on a proper submission to the afflictive dispensations of divine Providence, admonishing them to consider these, not as misfortunes, as the world calls them; but as fatherly chastisements, designed ultimately for their advantage, and adapted to promote their spiritual improvement; that they might be partakers of God’s holiness, and bring forth the peaceful fruits of righteousness.

Of the advantages of affliction to the mind, the following anecdote affords a fine illustration:—The late Rev. Mr. Cecil, when at college, was much tried with the ridicule and reproaches of some profane and profligate young men. Thus exercised, he was one day walking in the physic-garden, where he observed a very fine pomegranate tree, cut almost through the stem, near the root. On asking the gardener the reason of this, “Sir,” said he, “this tree used to shoot so applied to such parts of the body as were employed in athletic exercises.” Under fatigue, the hands would hang down, and the knees tremble.

Ver. 14. Follow peace.—See 1 Pet. iii. 11.

Ver. 15. Root of bitterness.—Doddrige says, “The Hebrew word properly signifies an infectious plant, which taints other vegetables that grow near it.”

Compare Acts vi. 23.

Ver. 16. As Esau.—Esau is called a profane person because he slighted the birth right, as not considering its relation to the Messiah, nor, indeed, believing in the promise. See Gen. xxv. 29.—One morsel of meat.—Doddrige and Macknight, “One meal.”

Ver. 17. No place for repentance.—Marein, “No way to change his mind.” I. e. Isaac’s.—Though he sought it carefully.—Macknight, “Though he earnestly sought the blessing.”—With tears.

Ver. 18. That might be touched.—Doddrige, “That was the object of touch.” Macknight, “a tangible (i. e. a material) mountain.” Compare ver. 20.

Ver. 20. Or thrust through with a dart.—These words are wanting in many

A. M. cir.
4067.
A. D. cir.
63.

k or, eurn

l Pe 4. 26, 27

m Gal 6. 1

n Ps 34. 14.

o Mat 5. 8.

p Ep 5. 5.

q 2 Pe 1. 10.

r 1 Cor 11. 10.

s 1 Cor 6. 13.

t Gen 25. 33.

u Gen 27. 34.

v Gen 27. 34.

w Ex 19. 12.

x Ex 30. 18.

y Ex 19. 13.

z Re 3. 12.

a Ps 65. 17.

b Re 11. 4.

c 1 Cor 10. 20.

d 1 Cor 15. 23.

e 1 Cor 15. 23.

f 1 Cor 15. 23.

g 1 Cor 15. 23.

h or, testam.

i Ex 24. 8.

j 1 Cor 15. 23.

k Hag 2. 16.

was commanded. And ^y if so much as a beast touch the mountain, it shall be stoned, or thrust through with a dart:

21 And so terrible was the sight, that Moses said, I exceedingly fear and quake.)

22 But ye are come unto mount Sion, and unto the city ^z of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of ^a angels,

23 To the general assembly and church of the ^b first-born, which are ^c written ^d in heaven, and to God the ^e Judge of all, and to the spirits of just men ^f made perfect,

24 And to Jesus the mediator ^g of the new ^h covenant, and to the blood ⁱ of sprinkling, that speaketh better things than that of ^j Abel.

25 See that ye refuse not him that speaketh. For if they escaped not who refused him that spake on earth, much more shall not we escape, if we turn away from him that speaketh from heaven:

26 Whose voice then shook the earth: but now he hath promised, saying, ^k Yet once more I shake not the earth only, but also heaven.

27 And this word, Yet once more, signifieth strong, that it bore nothing but leaves. I was therefore obliged to cut it in this manner; and when it was almost cut through, then it began to bear plenty of fruit.”

Ver. 14.—29. Cautions against apostasy.—Contrast between Mount Sinai and Mount Zion.—The apostle, after having encouraged the believing Hebrews under their afflictions, and advised them to pursue “the even tenor of their way,” with all tenderness toward their weak and dejected brethren, now advises them as to their conduct towards the world, and particularly towards professors.—“Follow peace with all men.” It is (at least in part) from the tendency of the gospel to promote peace on earth, that it is called “the gospel of peace;” and most certainly, in itself considered, there is nothing in it to promote strife and discord, which can only arise from the contrary tempers and dispositions of mankind. The passage before us, however, admonishes us, that we are not to sacrifice the interests of truth and holiness to those of peace; either by surrendering them to procure it, or by conniving at vice or error to promote it; since “without holiness” of heart and life, “no man shall see the Lord” in glory. No rites and ceremonies, nor even morality itself, can be admitted as a substitute for a renewed heart.

With this zeal for holiness, is to be connected a zealous oversight of the conduct and spirit of the brethren, “looking diligently, lest any man fail of the grace of God.” The word rendered fail, is used either for falling short of an object, or deserting from it. Thus, chap. iv. 1, these Hebrews are exhorted to a cautionary fear, lest any should come short of that eternal rest promised in the gospel; and such may be the object in view here. Or, if we read with the margin, if any man “fall from” it, it may be taken as a caution against apostasy; and there are many such cautions in the writings of St. Paul, zealous as he was in maintaining the fidelity and consistency of the divine character. It is not by a presumptuous indifference to dangers that we can expect to escape them, but by a cautious guarding against them on every side. Mr. McLean thinks the apostle here returns to his allusion to the Olympic games, and that the caution is, not “to fall behind in the race, lest they should come short of the prize.” By “the grace of God,” Dr. Owen here understands, “acceptance through Christ, as it is proposed in the gospel.”

What is here said of Esau, has been already noticed in our exposition of Genesis, and is referred to in our notes: but one passage which here occurs, as it has much distressed many serious minds, seems to demand a more distinct notice; namely, “He found no place for repentance, though he sought it carefully, with tears.” We perfectly agree with Doddrige, that “The meaning of this undoubtedly is not, that he would have repented and could not; but that there was no room for his repentance—it could not be regarded; or, in other words, that his father’s mind could not be changed.” The account of ancient MSS. and versions; and are therefore rejected by Mill, Weiststein, and Griesbach. They are taken from Exod. xix. 13.

Ver. 21. Moses said, I exceedingly fear, &c.—These words are not on record except here; but McLean thinks they may be alluded to, in Exod. xix. 19. They might be handed down by tradition to the time of Paul, or communicated to him by inspiration.

Ver. 22. Mount Zion.—This formed part of Jerusalem, whereon was built the city and tower of David.

Ver. 23. To the general assembly.—This term was used by the Greeks, generally, in reference to some grand festival occasion, such as the Olympic games. See Doddrige.

Ver. 24. New covenant.—See chap. viii. 6; ix. 13.—That of Abel.—This is by many referred to the blood of Abel’s sacrifice; but by others (as Doddrige) to his own blood, as shed by Cain. See Gen. iv. 10.

Ver. 25. See ye refuse not, &c.—Compare chap. i. 1—3.—Him that spake.—Doddrige, “that delivered oracles”—on earth—namely, Moses.

the removing of those things that are shaken, as of things that are made, that those things which cannot be shaken may remain.

28 Wherefore we receiving a kingdom which cannot be moved, let us have grace, whereby we may serve God acceptably with reverence and godly fear:

29 For our God is a consuming fire.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 Divers admonitions, as his charity, 4 to honest life, 5 to avoid covetousness, 7 to regard God's preachers, 9 to take heed of strange doctrines, 10 to confess Christ, 16 to give alms, 17 to obey governors, 18 to pray for the apostle. 20 The conclusion.

LET brotherly love continue.

2 Be not forgetful to entertain strangers: for thereby some have entertained angels unawares.

3 Remember them that are in bonds, as bound with them; and them which suffer adversity, as being yourselves also in the body.

4 Marriage is honourable in all, and the bed undefiled: but whoremongers and adulterers God will judge.

5 Let your conversation be without covetous-

4 M. cir. 3067.
A. D. cir. 88.
1 or, may be.
m hold fast.
a De 141.
a 1 Pe 1, 22.
1 Jo 4, 7.
30.
b Ge 18, 3.
19, 2.
c Mt 25, 38.
d Pr 5, 15.
23.
e 1 Co 6, 9.
Re 22, 15.
f Ma 6, 25.
31.
g Ge 28, 15.
14, 31, 6, 8.
1 Co 25, 30.
h Ps 27, 1.
i or, are the guides.
j Ge 12.
k Ge 1, 1.
l 1 Jo 4, 1.
m Le 16, 27.

ness; and be content with such things as ye have; for he hath said, I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee.

6 So that we may boldly say, The Lord is my helper, and I will not fear what man shall do unto me.

7 Remember them which have the rule over you, who have spoken unto you the word of God: whose faith follow, considering the end of their conversation:

8 Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, and to-day, and for ever.

9 Be not carried about with divers and strange doctrines. For it is a good thing that the heart be established with grace; not with meats, which have not profited them that have been occupied therein.

10 We have an altar, whereof they have no right to eat which serve the tabernacle.

11 For the bodies of those beasts, whose blood is brought into the sanctuary by the high priest for sin, are burned without the camp.

Moses fully justifies this interpretation. Esau entreated Isaac—“Bless me, even me also, O my father! and he lift up his voice and wept.” (Gen. xxv. 38; compare verse 34.)

To enforce the preceding exhortation, and to engage the Hebrew Christians to constancy in the faith, the apostle sets before his readers the privileges of the gospel dispensation, as compared with the Mosaic economy; and contrasts the smoke and thunders of Mount Sinai, with the peaceful glories of Mount Zion, in a manner somewhat similar to that in which he had compared Sinai and Jerusalem, in his Epistle to the Galatians, (chap. iv. 24–31) the object both of this and of that being, to wean them from the covenant of works, and to attach them to that of grace; in order to which he presents them with a beautiful picture of the New Jerusalem church, as made up of an innumerable host of angels; the general assembly and church of the first-born, whose names are enrolled in heaven; the spirits of just men made perfect; Jesus, the mediator of the new covenant, and God, the judge of all. This glorious church we shall have farther occasion to contemplate when we come to the Revelation of St. John; at present, we may remark the strong intimation here given of an intermediate state. “The spirits of just men made perfect,” can intend only their separate spirits, and those in a glorified state; for on earth there is no absolute perfection—there is “no man that doeth good, and sinneth not.”

This passage intimates, also, a mysterious inter-communication between earth and heaven—“We are come to (this) Mount Zion;” there is a communion between us, and angels, and departed spirits; but this subject is shrouded with mystery, and death only can withdraw the veil.

The concluding verse of this chapter is awfully sublime. We are exhorted to serve our God with awe and reverence, because he is “a consuming fire” to all who approach him, except in the way and manner of his own appointment. This alludes evidently to the appearance on Mount Sinai; there he was to be approached only through Moses, the mediator of that covenant; now he reigns in Zion, and is to be approached only, and that “with reverence and godly fear,” through Jesus, the Mediator of the New and better Covenant.

CHAP. XIII. Ver. 1–14. Practical admonitions, to conclude the Epistle.—At the head of practical duties of the second table, St. Paul places “the love of the brethren” that new commandment which our Lord gave to his disciples but just before his death; “This is my commandment, that ye love one another.” (John xv. 12, 17, &c.) And this love should display itself particularly toward two classes of the brethren—strangers, and the afflicted. Under the former class we include visitors, or messengers from other churches, and under the latter, all who are in adversity, and particularly those who are in bonds for the sake of the gospel.

The next maxim is levelled against heathen professors. “Marriage is honourable in all”—that is, in all classes of society, the clergy as well as laity; “but whoremongers and adulterers God will judge;” and will punish. Such, therefore, should not be tolerated in Christian churches or societies.

Christian contentment is the next duty intimated, and that upon the ground of the divine promise here recited, which in the Greek is very emphatical, and thus literally rendered by

Dr. Doddridge:—“I will not—I will not leave thee; I will never, never, never forsake thee.” A promise originally given to Joshua on the death of Moses, and here applied to all the servants of the true God. An application (by the way) which may justify us in the appropriation of such promises to ourselves, when we can justify our characters and circumstances, as corresponding with those to whom they were originally given.

The following precept enjoins a grateful recollection of deceased pastors or rulers in the church: “Remember them who have presided (or had the rule) over you.” So Dr. Doddridge; and Theodoret, in a note on this text, specifies the two apostles of the name of James, one of whom is generally considered as the first bishop of Jerusalem, and president in all the apostolic councils.

But in what light are these deceased rulers to be considered? Certainly not with any superstitious veneration, much less as the objects of devotion; but as examples—“Whose faith follow, considering the end of their conversation;” or, as Dr. Macknight and M. Lean render the passage, “Of whose conversation attentively considering the ending, (or close,) imitate their faith;” the object of which immediately follows as here stated—“Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, to-day, and for ever.” This is a strong argument (says M. Lean) to imitate their faith; that though they were dead and gone, yet Jesus Christ, in whom these holy men believed, continues still the same to-day as he was then; and shall for ever continue the same all-sufficient Saviour, to the end of time; he being able to save unto the last, all them that come unto God by him. Seeing, therefore, the object of faith continued unchangeably the same, and (that he) was as able, faithful, and merciful, to succour, deliver, and reward them, as he was their faithful pastors who had gone before them, they ought to hold fast the same faith which they had set before them, both by their doctrine and example.

The immutability of Jesus Christ is thus used as an argument against vacillation (or wavering) in opinion. So Dr. P. Smith—“With our divine Saviour there is no changeableness; his perfections are always the same, infinite in their glory; therefore let your submission to his authority, and your adherence to his truth, be firm and un wavering.” (See note on verse 8.) The apostle adds, “Be not carried (or tossed) about with divers and strange doctrines,” foreign to the Scriptures; “for it is a good thing that the heart be established with grace.” That the heart be established (says M. Lean) is a Jewish phrase for comforting, strengthening, or refreshing the heart, which is ascribed to food, (Judg. xix. 7, 8. Ps. civ. 15;) and as the Hebrews had a strong attachment to the distinction of meats, and the Jewish festivals and eucharistical oblations, (or thank-offerings,) he opposes this, by telling them, that it was “a good thing that the heart be established with grace;” that is, the free love of God revealed in the gospel through the sacrifice of Christ; . . . and not with meats and drinks, which . . . did not profit in a spiritual sense, those who had not been occupied therein.

To understand the following verses, it is necessary to recollect that this Epistle was written before the destruction of Jerusalem, while the temple was yet standing, and while the

Ver. 27 Things that are shaken.—The things that were shaken, according to both Owen and Doddridge, intend the Mosaic economy; the things that cannot be shaken, the Christian dispensation.

CHAP. XIII. Ver. 2. Be not forgetful to entertain strangers.—Lardner, “Be not unkind of hospitality.”

Ver. 3 Yourselves also in the body.—i. e. liable to the same adversity.

Ver. 4 Marriage is honourable.—&c.—Macknight, “Let marriage (be) honourable among all, and the bed undefiled.”—For fornicators, &c.—See Vulgate, and two ancient MSS.

Ver. 5 Without covetousness.—Macknight, “without the love of money.” See 1 Tim. vi. 9, 10.—I will never leave thee, &c.—M. Lean remarks, that this sentence contains no less than five negatives; but not so the original passage, Joshua i. 5.

Ver. 8 Jesus Christ, the same.—Dr. P. Smith says, “There is nothing then, in the person of Christ, and in the philosophy there is a reason, which is, I think, of weight sufficient to be decisive. This is the adoption of the same phrase which, at the commencement of the Epistle, had been employed to express the absolute unchangeableness of God: ‘Thou art the same,’ &c. Heb. i. 12.” Dr. J. Owen (in loc.) considers the phrase, ‘yesterday, to-day, and for ever,’ as analogous to Rev. i. 4—“He who is, and was, and is to come.”

12 Wherefore Jesus also, that he might sanctify the people with his own blood, suffered without the gate.

13 Let us go forth therefore unto him without the camp, bearing his reproach.

14 For here have we no continuing city, but we seek one to come.

15 By him therefore let us offer the sacrifice of praise to God continually, that is, the fruit of our lips, giving thanks to his name.

16 But to do good and to communicate forget not: for with such sacrifices God is well pleased.

17 Obey them that have the rule over you, and submit yourselves: for they watch for your souls, as they that must give account, that they may do it with joy, and not with grief: for that is unprofitable for you.

18 Pray for us: for we trust we have a good conscience, in all things willing to live honestly.

priests were still offering sacrifices daily, notwithstanding Christ had superseded them by his own infinitely meritorious sacrifice. To this he plainly alludes, when he says, "We have an altar, whereof they have no right to eat who serve the tabernacle."—"Altar is here put for the sacrifice offered upon it, a figure of speech (says M'Lean) very common in Scripture." The meaning is, that Christians have a sacrifice whereon to feast, namely, that of Christ; and of this sacrifice those have no right to partake, who still adhere to the sacrifices of the Old Testament, and look to them for justification before God. "Christ (indeed) will profit them nothing." (Gal. v. 4.) This may be inferred from the sin-offerings, on the great day of atonement, being wholly burnt without the camp, (as directed in Levit. xvi. 27.) Nothing was to be eaten of these propitiatory sacrifices, whose blood was carried within the veil; but all the flesh and skin and offal of the atoning animals, was to be burnt without the camp. "Hereby Paul offers a most convincing proof to the Jews, (says Mr. Pirie), that they must abandon their old ritual, and adopt a system that has changed the law of the priesthood, before they can have any claim to eat of our altar or sacrifice." It is, therefore, as if he had said—"If you would have any claim to participate with us of the peculiar privileges of the gospel, all resulting from the sufferings of Jesus, you must leave the old Jerusalem; you must go forth unto him without the camp, bearing his reproach. Without the camp he suffered, and without the camp he must be enjoyed."

"For here (adds our apostle) we have no continuing city; we are merely pilgrims and strangers, dwelling in tents and tabernacles; but still seeking 'a city which hath foundations' in the heavens, and which God hath provided for all those who truly seek it. (Compare chap. xi. ver. 10—16.) While, however, we remain on earth, and worship at this awful distance, the utmost reverence and godly fear becomes us, considering that our God is, to all who treat him with neglect or with contempt, 'a consuming fire.'"

Ver. 15—25. Concluding admonitions, prayer, and salutation.—Being delivered from all typical sacrifices and ceremonial rites, and placing our whole confidence in the one great atonement of Christ Jesus upon the cross, let us, through him, offer to God "the fruit of our lips," which is "the sacrifice of praise," as a continual thank-offering of gratitude, for all the mercies which we derive through his atonement: and not "the fruit of our lips" only, but also the offerings of our hands. "To do good and to communicate, forget not, for with such sacrifices God is well pleased."

The next duty enjoined, is submission to superiors in the church: "Obey those who have the rule (or guide, or preside) over you," in the church; meaning their present rulers, as the precept above (ver. 7) referred to those who were deceased. These rulers, presidents, or guides, are elsewhere called shepherds, elders, and overseers. The subjection enjoined may be judged of by the nature of their office; they "watch for our souls as those that must give account." This responsibility is so weighty, that Chrysostom confesses, he never read the words without trembling, though he was certainly an active and zealous pastor, often preaching several times a day. And

Ver. 12. Without the gate.—Calvary was certainly without the walls in our Lord's time, though it has been long since included, unless there be a mistake as to its situation, which some travellers suspect.

Ver. 15. The fruit of our lips.—Erasmus thinks that our praises may be justly called the fruit of our lips, even as the good works of a virtuous woman are called the fruit of her hands. Prov. xxxi. 31.

Ver. 17. That have the rule—Doddridge, "who preside."

Ver. 18. We trust—Doddridge and MacKnight, "We are confident that"—we have a good conscience, in all things willing to live honestly.—Doddridge, "Determined in all things to behave honourably." Greek, "well."

See 2 Cor. i. 12.

Ver. 19. Restored to you the sooner.—Doddridge, "quickly."

Ver. 21. Make you perfect.—"The same word is translated prepared, chap. x. 5; framed, chap. xi. 3; fitted, Rom. ix. 22; restored, Gal. vi. 1; perfectly joined, 1 Cor. i. 10. It signifies to set things to rights, and reduce

A. M. cir. 3067.
A. D. cir. 63.
u Ju 19:17, 15.
o Ac 5:41.
p Mt. 2:10.
q Ep. 5:20.
r Ho 14:2.
s confessions.
t Ro 12:13.
u Ph. 4:13.
v 1 Th 5:12, 13.
w or, guide
x Eze. 3:17
y Ac 21:16

z 1 Th 5:23.
a 1 Pe 1:21.
b Eze. 34:23.
c Zec. 9:11.
d or, testament.
e 1 Te. 5:10
f or, doing
g Ph. 2:13.

19 But I beseech you the rather to do this, that I may be restored to you the sooner.

20 Now the God of peace, that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great Shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant,

21 Make you perfect in every good work to do his will, working in you that which is well-pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ; to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.

22 And I beseech you, brethren, suffer the word of exhortation: for I have written a letter unto you in few words.

23 Know ye that our brother Timothy is set at liberty; with whom, if he come shortly, I will see you.

24 Salute all them that have the rule over you, and all the saints. They of Italy salute you.

25 Grace be with you all. Amen.

¶ Written to the Hebrews from Italy by Timothy.

if such "watch over our souls" with tenderness and fidelity, the utmost care is due from us, not to occasion them grief or vexation on our account: and a great grief to such it certainly must be, when their people act inconsistently with their profession, or discover a refractory, discordant, or volatile disposition. Christians should, however, never degenerate to a blind submission to whatever a Christian teacher may advance, without authority from the Scriptures. We have, in all cases, an appeal "to the law and to the testimony." If they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." (Isa. viii. 20.)

The prayer and benediction which here follow are particularly interesting, in the character in which Paul speaks of God the Father, as "the God of peace;" and in the tender relation in which he represents "our Lord Jesus," as "the great Shepherd of the sheep," &c. of his church. Messiah had been predicted as the Shepherd of Israel by several prophets, particularly by David, by Isaiah, and by Ezekiel; and he applies to himself those predictions, when he calls himself "The good Shepherd." (John x. 14, &c.)

There is much doubt among commentators, whether the words "through the blood of the everlasting covenant," should be connected with the preceding clause, as implying that it was through the blood of the covenant that Christ became our shepherd; or that, through the merit of that blood, he was raised from the dead, it being impossible that he should be "holden of death any longer;" (see Acts ii. 24;) or, 3dly, whether it was through his atoning blood, that the apostle imported for the believing Hebrews the blessings following, ver. 21; all which senses are admissible and true. But M'Lean says, "I take it, that this whole verse is just a periphrasis for God the Father as 'the God of peace;' including the way, in which he has manifested himself to be so, viz. in raising our Lord Jesus from the dead, through, in, or by the blood of the everlasting covenant; i. e. through the worth or merit of it." Christ's blood is termed "the blood of the everlasting covenant," in distinction from the blood of slain beasts, which ratified and established the Old Covenant made at Sinai. These sacrifices could not procure remission of sins and eternal life; but the atonement of Christ hath obtained both; for God hath brought him again from the dead through that blood. The covenant itself is called everlasting, because it shall never wear out, like the Sinaitic covenant" (Chap. viii. 13.) Having thus characterized God as "the God of peace," our apostle next proceeds to the subject-matter of his prayer, which was, that through the divine grace they might be prepared, assisted, and completed in every work, good and well-pleasing in the sight of God.

"It is plain, from this and other passages of Scripture, (says M'Lean), that God worketh in his people every good work that is well pleasing in his sight; and that, not only in the conversion of a sinner, but in all the growth and improvement of a Christian in the spiritual life. It is he that enlightens the eyes of their understanding, (Ephes. i. 17, 18;) that enlarges their views of the love of Christ, (Ephes. iii. 16—19;) that worketh in them both to will and to do. (Phil. ii. 13.) The holy tempers and spiritual affections of the soul are the fruits of the Spirit (Gal. v. 22, 23.) But then, 2dly, He works in us, as rational them to their proper state."—M'Lean.—To whom be glory.—Compare 2 Pe. iii. 18. Rev. x. 12, 13.

Ver. 22. In few words—MacKnight, "briefly." This must be understood in reference to the great variety of matter, for it is far from being one of the shortest of his Epistles. But this Epistle, as Origen expresses it, "A brief compendium of the doctrine of the law and the gospel."

Ver. 23. With whom.—Timothy was Paul's perpetual companion in all his travels, except when he sent him on any special work for the church.—Origen.

Postscript.—Written to the Hebrews from Italy, by Timothy—Dr. J. Owen says, "This is partly untrue—as that it was sent by Timothy; being expressly contrary to what the apostle speaks concerning him immediately before, (ver. 23.) But these subscriptions have been sufficiently proved, by many, to be spurious; being the additions of some unskilful transcribers in after ages." See also P. 8, at the end of 1 Corinthians.

creatures, by means of the revelation he hath given us, enlightening our judgments—strengthening our faith—moving our wills by its motives, and so influencing our obedience. The Spirit, therefore, does not work upon us abstract from the word; but in and by it, making it to produce its effects. 3dly, God's working in us that which is well pleasing in his sight, does not supersede our activity: make us passive; on the contrary, it is an exciting of us both to will and to do. 4thly, That as God works in his people that which is well pleasing in his sight, so we should apply to him for his Spirit, depend upon his assistance in every thing he requires, and give him all the glory — Not I, but the grace of God which was with me. Lastly, We should look for acceptance only through the merits and mediation of Christ, even in such things as we do agreeable to his will; for they are well-pleasing in his sight only through Jesus Christ: to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE EPISTLE TO THE HEBREWS.

[THE Epistle to the Hebrews, observes Dr. Hales, is a masterly supplement to the Epistles to the Romans and Galatians, and also a luminous commentary on them, showing that all the legal dispensation was originally designed to be superseded by the new and better covenant of the Christian dispensation, in a complete chain of argument, evincing the profoundest knowledge of both. The intended excellency of this epistle, as connecting the Old Testament and the New in the most convincing and instructive manner, and elucidating both more fully than any other Epistle, or perhaps than all of them, places its divine inspiration beyond all doubt. We here find the great doctrines which are set forth in other parts of the New Testament, stated, proved, and applied to practical purposes, in the most masterly manner. Hence this Epistle, as Dr. A. Clarke remarks, is by far the most important and useful of all the apostolic writings: and the doctrines of the Gospel are, in it, embodied, illustrated, and enforced in a manner the most lucid, by references and examples the most striking and abstruse, and by arguments the most cogent and convincing. It is an epitome of the dispensations of God to man, from the foundation of the world to the advent of Christ. It is not only the sum of the Gospel, but the sum and completion of the Law, of which it is also a most beautiful and luminous commentary. Without this, the law of Moses had never been fully understood, nor God's design in giving it clearly apprehended. With this, it is clear and plain, and the ways of God with man rendered consistent and harmonious. The Apostle appears to have taken a portion of one of his own Epistles for his text. Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to them that believe, and has most amply and impressively demonstrated his proposition. All the precepts, ceremonies, and sacrifices of the Mosaic institution, are shown to have had Christ for their object and end, and to have had neither intention nor meaning but in reference to Him, even as a system to be without substance, as a law to be without reason, and its enactments to be both impossible and absurd, if taken out of this reference and connexion. Never were promises more clearly stated, never was an argument handled in a more masterly manner, and never was a conclusion more legitimately and satisfactorily brought forth. The matter is every where the most interesting, the manner is throughout the most engaging; and the language is most beautifully adapted to the whole, every where appropriate, always nervous and energetic, enriched as is the subject, with an elegant use of the most accomplished tropes, orators, and harmonious and diversified as the music of the spheres. So many are the beauties, so great the excellency, so instructive the matter, so pleasing the manner, and so exceedingly interesting the whole, that it may be read a hundred times over without tiring any thing of its sweetness, and with new and increased illumination at each reading. This letter is an exhortation which belongs to the whole revelation of God; but to no part of it in such a peculiar and superlative manner, as to the Epistle to the Hebrews. That it was written to Jews, naturally such, the whole structure of the Epistle proves. Had it been written to the Gentiles, not one in ten thousand of them would have comprehended the argument, because unacquainted with the Jewish system, the knowledge of which the writer every where supposes. He who is well acquainted with the Mosaic law, sits down to the study of this Epistle with double advantage; and he who knows the traditions of the Elders, and the Talmudic illustrations of the written and pretended oral law of the Jews, is still more likely to enter into, and comprehend, the Apostle's meaning. No man has adopted a more likely way of explaining its phraseology than Schoetgen, who has traced its peculiar diction to Jewish sources, and, according to him the proposition of the whole Epistle is this: JESUS OF NAZARETH IS THE TRUE GOD. And, in order to convince the Jews of the truth of this proposition, the Apostle uses but three arguments—1. Christ is superior to the angels. 2. He is superior to Moses. 3. He is superior to Aaron. These arguments would appear more distinctly, were it not for the improper division of the chapters, in consequence of which, that one excellency of the Apostle's is not noticed—his application of every argument, and the strong, short, plain foundation of each. Schoetgen has very properly remarked, that commentators have greatly misunderstood the Apostle's meaning through their acquaintance with the Jewish writings, and their peculiar phraseology, to which the Apostle is continually referring, and of which he makes incessant use. He also supposes, allowing for the immediate and direct instruction of the Apostle, that he had in view this remarkable saying of the Rabbins on Leviticus 11:—Behold my servant shall dwell probably, he shall be exalted and exalted, and be very high." Rabbi Tarsham, quoting Yalkut Samson, p. 63, 583, says, "This is the king Messiah, who shall be greatly exalted, not elevated. He shall be elevated above Abraham; shall be more eminent than Moses, and be more exalted than the ministering angels. Or, as it is expressed in Yalkut Kadush, (vol. 144), "The Messiah is greater than the patriarchs, than Moses, and than the ministering angels." These sayings the Apostle shows to have been fulfilled in our Messiah; and as he dwells on the superiority of our Lord to all these illustrious persons, because they were at the very top of all comparisons among the Jews; He, according to their opinion, who was greater than all these, must be greater than all created beings. This is the point which the Apostle undertakes to prove, in order to show the Godhead of Christ, and therefore, if we find him proving that Jesus was greater than the patriarchs, greater than Aaron, greater than Moses, and greater than the angels, he must be understood to mean, according to the Jewish phraseology, that Jesus is an uncreated being, infinitely greater than all others. Who the earthly or heavenly? For, as they allowed the greatest name next to God, to be Jesus, and the Apostle continues, "First He is greater than the angels is truly God, but Christ is greater than the angels, therefore Christ is truly God." Nothing can be clearer than that this is the Apostle's grand argument; and the proofs and illustrations of it meet the reader in almost every verse.—Baynes.]

THE GENERAL EPISTLE OF JAMES.

JAMES, the son of Alphaeus, the brother of Jacob, and the near relation of our Lord, called also James the Less, probably because he was of low stature, or vengeful, than the other James, the son of Zebedee, is generally allowed to be the writer of this Epistle; and the few that have doubted this have assigned very slight reasons for their dissent, and advanced very weak arguments on the other side. It is recorded in ecclesiastical history, and the book of the Acts of the Apostles confirms the fact, that he generally resided at Jerusalem, superintending the churches in that city, and in the neighbouring parts, to the end of his life; and is celebrated by his name in the whole revelation of God; but to no part of it in such a peculiar and superlative manner, as to the Epistle to the Hebrews. That it was written to Jews, naturally such, the whole structure of the Epistle proves. Had it been written to the death; and it is probable that the sharp rebukes and awful warnings given in it, had of necessity been directed to the Jews, who were the persecuting race, which it reprimanded his life. It is styled epistola generalis, because it was not addressed to any particular church, but to the Jewish nation throughout their dispersions. Though its genuineness was doubted for a considerable time, yet its origin in the ancient Syrian version, which was executed at the close of the first, or the beginning of the second century, and the citation of it, as authentic, by Jerome, Athanasius, and most of the subsequent ecclesiastical writers, as well as its internal evidence, are amply sufficient to prove the point.—Baynes.]

CHAPTER I.

1 We are to rejoice under the cross, 5 to ask wisdom of God, 13 and in our trials not to impute our weakness, or sins, much as, 19 to suffer in freedom to the word, 22 to be true to religion.

JAMES, a servant * of God and of the Lord Jesus Christ, to the twelve ^b tribes which are scattered ^c abroad, greeting.

2 My brethren, count it all joy ^d when ye fall into divers temptations;

3 Knowing ^e this, that the trying of your faith worketh ^f patience.

4 But let patience have ^g her ^h perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing.

5 If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that ⁱ giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and ^j it shall be given him.

CHAP. I. Ver. 1-8. We must rejoice in tribulation—seek wisdom of God—regard attentively his word—and pray for divine direction.—James, in the address of this Epistle, simply describes himself as "a servant of God and of the Lord Jesus Christ," which he seems to consider as the highest of all honours. This term is in itself nearly synonymous with apostle, which simply means a messenger; but in its New Testament use, a special messenger from the Lord Jesus Christ to sinners of mankind, and one of his own immediate attendants when on earth. The omission of the latter term (apostle) was, however, in the early ages, made an objection to its divine authority.

This Epistle is then addressed to the "twelve tribes [of Israel] scattered ^d abroad," which is (as almost every thing may be) differently interpreted. Some including the whole Jewish nation, wherever found: while others confine the expression to Jews scattered in all the surrounding countries, of which there were certainly great numbers, as we find by the history of the day of Pentecost, (Acts ii. 5, 9-11.) Of the former opinion are Beza, Lardner, Macknight, Doddridge, &c.; and we should say, with Macknight, that if "the apostle's letter was chiefly intended for the Jews in foreign countries," yet does it not exclude the Jews in Judea, who were the writer's peculiar charge, and to whom some things in the Epistle more especially belong.

The salutation here following is not "grace and peace," as in most of Paul's Epistles, but health. It is remarkable, however, that the same term is used in the original, in the apostolical decree, (Acts xv. 23) "The apostles, &c. send greeting," or health, "to the brethren which are of the Gentiles."

The great object of the inspired author of this Epistle appears to be, to encourage and support the believing Hebrews under the various trials to which their Christian profession was likely to expose them; the word temptations must, therefore, be here taken in its most extensive sense, as including every kind of trials. Philosophy may attempt to reconcile us to these, under CHAP. I. Ver. 1. Twelve tribes.—It is evident that Josephus believed all the tribes to be yet in being, when he relates, that six persons of each tribe were selected to form the Septuagint translation. See Acts xvii. 6.—Scattered abroad.—Doddridge, "in dispersion." Dr. Whitby quotes passages from Josephus Philo, and even Cicero, stating that Jews were to be found in great multitudes, in almost all parts of the world.—Greeting.—(Greek chairein.) Luke i. 28, the same word is rendered Hail; and is used by our Lord himself in the plural, Mat. xxviii. 9, "All hail!" The same word is also used 2 John, ver. 10 and 11, which see.

Ver. 2. Divers temptations.—The word temptations is here used in the most extensive sense for all kinds of trials. So Deut. iv. 33. Luke xxii. 28. Acts ix. 19.

6 But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering. For he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea driven with the wind and tossed.

7 For let not that man think that he shall receive any thing of the Lord.

8 A double-minded man is unstable in all his ways.

9 Let the brother of low degree rejoice in that he is exalted:

10 But the rich, in that he is made low: because as the flower of the grass he shall pass away.

11 For the sun is no sooner risen with a burning heat, but it withereth the grass, and the flower thereof falleth, and the grace of the fashion of it perisheth: so also shall the rich man fade away in his ways.

12 Blessed is the man that endureth temptation: for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him.

13 Let no man say when he is tempted, I am tempted of God: for God cannot be tempted with evil, neither tempteth he any man:

14 But every man is tempted, when he is drawn away of his own lust, and enticed.

15 Then when lust hath conceived, it bringeth forth sin: and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death.

16 Do not err, my beloved brethren.

17 Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning.

18 Of his own will begat he us with the word of truth, that we should be a kind of first-fruits of his creatures.

19 Wherefore, my beloved brethren, let every man be swift to hear, slow to speak, slow to wrath:

20 For the wrath of man worketh not the righteousness of God.

21 Wherefore lay apart all filthiness and superfluity of naughtiness, and receive with meekness the engrafted word, which is able to save your souls.

22 But be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves.

23 For if any be a hearer of the word, and not a doer, he is like unto a man beholding his natural face in a glass:

24 For he beholdeth himself, and goeth his

the idea of their being the universal and unavoidable lot of man: but Christianity alone can teach us to rejoice in them, as "working together for our good." Faith can derive the honey-eyed sweetness of present profit, and the valuable prospects of future benefit, out of sickness and poverty, pains and woes, disappointments and bereavements. It can sanctify sorrows, and cause us to "rejoice in tribulation;" yea, to count it all joy, full, unabated, overflowing advantage to our best and higher interests, when we fall into many and diversified temptations.

In contemplating these afflictions, we should particularly consider their tendency to produce patience, a grace of the highest importance to the Christian life, and which, if not impeded, will have the happiest effect in raising and perfecting the Christian character. So St. Paul teaches us, (Rom. v. 3-5) that "tribulation worketh patience, patience experience, and experience hope"—even "hope that maketh not ashamed."

The next subject for our consideration is the importance of true wisdom, and the source from which it can be alone obtained. "If any of you lack (or need) wisdom, let him ask it of God, who giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not." Hence we may learn that God is the only source of true wisdom—that he bestows this, as he does all his favours, unmerited and unconstrained; and, when we penitently return to him, reproaches us not for former ingratitude or misimprovement. He is the source of wisdom, as the sun is of light: and communicates spiritual and intellectual blessings, as the sun does his rays to men of every clime and country. But then we are commanded to "ask in faith, nothing wavering." One presenting a petition to Augustus in a timorous and trembling manner, the emperor expressed himself displeased, as it implied a doubt of his generosity. Let not that man who doubts the benevolence of God, expect to prove it in his own experience.

The following anecdote well illustrates the propriety of applying to God for wisdom, as here enjoined, and we would particularly recommend it to the sceptics of the present day:—

A gentleman once called on Dr. James Foster, a popular preacher of the last century, to request the solution of some sceptical objections, with which his mind was much harassed. The Doctor stopped him short with this question—"Have you asked a solution of your difficulties from God this morning? have you prayed to the fountain of all light for information?" Upon receiving an answer in the negative, he rejoined, "Sir, you must excuse my gratifying your curiosity on the subject of Revelation, while you neglect one of the first duties of natural religion."—(Buck's Pract. Expos. Sept. 16.)

Ver. 9. A double-minded man.—MacKnight, "A man of two minds."

Ver. 11. The grace of the fashion of it.—Doddridge, "The beauty of its form."

Ver. 13. God cannot be tempted with evil.—Doddridge and MacKnight, "God is incapable of being tempted by evils," or evil things.—Neither tempteth he any man.—The term tempt is evidently two meanings: 1. To try, prove; so "God did tempt Abraham." 2. To seduce to evil: in this sense he tempts no man.

Ver. 14. Drawn away, &c.—Doddridge, "allured and ensnared." MacKnight, "The allusion here is to the drawing of fish out of a river with a baited hook."

Ver. 15. Bringeth forth death.—Compare Rom. vii. 5-11.

Ver. 17. Every good gift and every perfect gift.—The apostle here uses two different nouns, the former signifying simply a gift; the latter, a free gift with the former he connects the adjective good, with the latter, perfect, or complete.—From the Father of lights.—This undoubtedly refers literally to the sun; and the other terms, variableness (or parallax) and turning, (troupe), are also astronomical terms, though not used in exactly the same sense as by modern philosophers. The first seems to denote the continually mutable and different situations in the heavens which the sun every day apparently observes. The second refers to the progress of the sun in his annual course, vi

But to return to our apostle.—"The double-minded man (or man of two minds) is unstable in all his ways." He is compared, therefore, to the waves of the sea, incessantly rising and falling, and driven by every breath of wind that blows: continually changing his mind, and not knowing his own wants or wishes, how can he expect to receive a grant of them from the Lord? To feel our wants is the first thing necessary in prayer; and he who knows not his deficiency in grace or wisdom, can have little reason to expect supplies.

Ver. 9-27. Address to the different classes of society, the rich and poor, upon their respective spiritual necessities.—Christianity has, in one respect, a levelling tendency. It elevates the humble, and brings down the lofty, and both have reason to rejoice in these effects. "The brother of low degree," the servant and the slave, will naturally rejoice in the liberty of the gospel, and in being raised to the rank of a child of God: but why should the rich rejoice in that he is made low? Plainly, because that without being humbled he cannot be saved. Even his prosperity will wither him, and in a time of trial and persecution he will fade away, like a tender plant before the burning sun. O how hard it is for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of heaven! But blessed is the man that endureth trials and temptations, whereby his mind becomes humbled under the mighty hand of God, and his heart schooled in obedience to Jesus Christ; and when his trials are over, he shall receive that crown of everlasting life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him.

We have hinted at the extensive sense in which the word temptation is sometimes used, as applicable to every species of trial, and if we so understand it here, the sense of verse 12 harmonizes with that of verse 2. But, from verse 13, it here seems to have a particular reference to temptations to sin, which some were disposed to charge upon their Maker, for which the apostle severely reproves them. There are two classes of persons prone to do this: the one through speculative notions of necessity and fate, and the other from the predominance of their passions, which being derived from God, men are too apt to indulge, and then to say, "And why doth he yet find fault?" (Rom. ix. 19.)

The origin of evil, either in itself or in us, is a subject which perhaps no human intellect can satisfactorily explain; two things alone seem certain: 1. That no evil, natural or moral, can arise unknown to God, and without his permission: and, 2. That though natural evil may be inflicted by him as the punishment of moral, moral evil itself, as it implies perversity of disposition, cannot originate with the divine Being, who is silly turning back, (as the word tropic imports,) when it comes to the longest or the shortest day. The term shadow refers to the different manner in which the sun casts its shadow in different climates. God is subject to no such changes. See Orient. Lit. No. 1528.

Ver. 18. A kind of first-fruits.—The Jews were the first converts to Christianity.

Ver. 20. The wrath of man worketh not, &c.—The Jews were a very irritable people, and often kindled an angry spirit with their zeal, against which they are here guarded.

Ver. 21. Wherefore lay apart, &c.—The allusion seems to be to decayed and filthy garments, fit only to be thrown away.—Superfluity of naughtiness.—Doddridge, "overflowing of unholiness."—The engrafted word.—The word of God, which is sometimes represented as seed sown, (1 Peter i. 23. 1 John ii. 9.) is here represented as a graft inserted. Compare John xv. 2, &c.

Ver. 23. His natural face.—The Greek means, literally, the face he was born with—unwashed and unadorned.—In a glass—i. e. a mirror, whether of metal or of glass: or perhaps rather a natural mirror—a limpid stream. It is well known, that the ancients not only washed, but painted their faces, (or at least their eyes;) but this verse seems to refer to a careless person, who looked cursorily at his face in a mirror, whether natural or artificial, but took no pains to mark its blemishes or defects.

way, and straightway forgetteth what manner of man he was.

25 But whoso ^a looketh into the perfect law of ^a liberty, and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work, this man ^b shall be blessed in his ^c deed.

26 If any man among you seem to be religious, and bridlcth not his ^d tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion is vain.

27 Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit ^e the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted ^f from the world.

CHAPTER II.

It is not agreeable to Christian profession to neglect the rich, and to despise the poor. Brethren, 13 rather we are to be loving and merciful: 14 and not to boast of faith where no deeds are, 17 which is but a dead faith, 19 the faith of devils, 21 not of Abraham, 23 and Ishmael.

MY brethren, have not the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Lord of glory, with respect ^g of persons.

2 For if there come unto your ^h assembly a man with a gold ring, in goodly apparel, and there come in also a poor man in vile raiment;

3 And ye have respect to him that weareth the gay clothing, and say unto him, Sit thou here ⁱ in a good place; and say to the poor, Stand thou there, or sit here under my footstool:

4 Are ye not then partial in yourselves, and are become judges of evil thoughts?

here, and throughout the sacred Scriptures, represented as the fountain of wisdom and of goodness. There is indeed a malevolent being, commonly called the Tempter; and he, as we well know, "walketh about seeking whom he may devour," (1 Pet. v. 8.) But much, we doubt not, is laid upon him of which he is not guilty; for, in innumerable instances, man is ensnared by his own lusts, and becomes the victim of his depraved passions. Lust engendereth sin, and sin produceth death.

On the contrary, "all that comes from God is good and perfect." As the sun, his fairest created image, is the fountain of material light to us, so is God himself the fountain of wisdom, or intellectual light, to all the universe: and not of light only, but of purity and benevolence also; for "every good and perfect gift cometh down from him." But whereas the material sun is subject to perpetual changes in his course, the Sun of Righteousness is subject to no variableness, "neither shadow of turning."

The apostle proceeds to warn the Christian Hebrews, regenerated by grace through the instrumentality of the divine word, against the indulgence of evil passions, wrath and bitterness, all filthiness and obscenity; and exhorts them to "be doers of the word, and not hearers only," the latter being the way awfully to deceive their own souls. He illustrates this, by alluding to a man taking a transient glance at himself in a mirror, which makes no abiding impression on his mind; whereas, the man who hears with proper attention, and practises what he hears—the man who governs his passions, and bridle his tongue—who visits the fatherless and the widows in their affliction, and keeps himself unspotted from the world—"That man is blessed;" and his "religion is pure and undefiled."

CHAP. II. Ver. 1—16. We must not despise nor neglect the poor.—The first question arising in this chapter is, Of what nature was the assembly here referred to? The original word is synagogue; and though that term may be used for any public assembly, yet we know that, in the Scriptures of both Testaments, a synagogue usually means a place of public worship. Because, however, the Jews often held judicatures in their synagogues, for the trial of petty causes amongst themselves,

Ver. 25. But whoso looketh.—Macknight, "looketh narrowly." The word properly signifies to stoop down to examine an object attentively, (as in 1 Pet. i. 10)—into the perfect law of liberty—i. e. the gospel; into which, whoever looks attentively must see his blemishes and defects.

Ver. 27. Pure religion and undefiled.—Archbishop Tillotson (whom Doddridge follows) considers these terms as alluding to the qualities of a precious stone, "clear and without flaw, or cloud," as the beloved term is.

CHAP. II. Ver. 1. The faith of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Lord of glory.—Macknight, "The faith of the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ;" i. e. of his divine rank and character; or it may be a Hebraism for "the glorious faith," &c. Compare 2 Cor. in 7—9.

Ver. 2. With a gold ring.—Macknight, "With golden rings on his fingers."

Ver. 3. In a good place.—Macknight, "honourably."

Ver. 4. Are become judges of evil thoughts?—Macknight, "Judges possessed of evil thoughts;" that is, as judges, they indulged evil thoughts against the poor. But Benson, who understands this, as we do, of worshipping as soulless, thinks the apostle meant to reprove the Jews, as showing more regard to the souls of the rich than of the poor. Doddridge, however, renders this verse thus, (omitting the interrogation) "And distinguish not in yourselves; you even become judges who reason ill." But we prefer the more simple version of Wesley—"Ye distinguish not in yourselves, but are become evil-reasoning judges;" i. e. you judge erroneously.

Ver. 5. Rich in faith.—i. e. to be rich in faith—a common ellipsis with the sacred writers. The apostle's reasoning here seems to amount to this—"Your

A Mic
30,5
D Mic
31
22
20
3 18
Ps 119 45
Ps 119 47
&c or, doing
d Ps 34 13
e Ps 116, 17
f Mic 6, 7
f Ro 12 2
a Ps 24 21
Jude 16
b synagogue
c or, well, or, openly
d 1 Co 11 26
e Ro 2 9
f or, that
g Mat 5 3
Jas 12 32
22 29
h Ps 111 9
i Le 19 8
j ver 1
k De 27 26
l or, that which
and
m Ex 20 13, 14
n e 125
o Mat 21 13
Mt 6 15
7 12
p or, gloriously
q Ps 83 10
r Mat 7 26

5 Harken, my beloved brethren, ^d Hath not God chosen the poor of this world rich ^e in faith, and heirs of ^f the kingdom ^g which he hath promised to them that love him?

6 But ye have despised the poor. Do not rich men oppress you, and draw you before the judgment seats?

7 Do not they blaspheme that ^h worthy name by the which ye are called?

8 If ye fulfil the royal law according to the scripture, ⁱ Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself, ye do well:

9 But if ye have respect ^j to persons, ye commit sin, and are convinced of the law as transgressors.

10 For whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one ^k point, he ^l is guilty of all.

11 For ^m he that said, ⁿ Do not commit adultery, said also, Do not kill. Now if thou commit no adultery, yet if thou kill, thou art become a transgressor of the law.

12 So speak ye, and so do, as they that shall be judged by the law ^o of liberty.

13 For ^p he shall have judgment without mercy, that hath showed no mercy; and mercy ^q rejoiceth ^r against judgment.

14 What ^s doth it profit, my brethren, though a man say he hath faith, and have not works? can faith save him?

it has been doubted which kind of assembly is here referred to. Hammond and Whitby, with many others, think the reference is to civil meetings. Here, Dr. Macknight says, "your synagogue does not mean a Jewish synagogue, but the house or room in which Christians assembled for worship. And as the Jews held courts of judicature in their synagogues, and there also punished offenders by scourging, (Matt. x. 17.) it is probable that the first Christians, after their example, held courts for determining civil causes in the places where they assembled for public worship." As, however, the Doctor brings no proof of this, we venture to doubt the fact; and if the fact were proved, we should still doubt whether such were the meetings here intended. We think it much more probable, if not indeed certain, that the worshipping assemblies of these Jewish Christians are referred to by St. James; who appears to have been grieved and offended at witnessing the partiality shown, even on these solemn occasions, to the wealthy and the gay, however reprobate, and inimical to the principles of the gospel. If we might venture to suggest an apology for this partiality, which seems to have been carried to a great extreme, one would hope it might be done with a view to conciliate their enemies; but it certainly ought not to have been accompanied by marks of contempt toward their poor brethren.

Whether any hint might be borrowed from this admonition of St. James, for the better arrangement of seats in our churches and chapels, we presume not to say. If seats are to be sold or let, it seems perfectly equitable, that those who pay the most should have the best; yet we cannot but think it would much grieve an apostle, if such there were in the present day, to see the oldest, and confessedly the most pious persons in a Christian congregation, seated on benches in the aisles, while all the best accommodations are reserved for persons of light and dubious, if not of profane character. This is not loving all our neighbours as ourselves. This is not according to the royal law of our divine Master, who always dealt out his blessings to the poor; and his reproofs and censures, with the utmost impartiality, to the rich and proud.

It should seem that these Jewish believers themselves were not altogether insensible to the inappropriety of their conduct;

friends, and your Master's friends, are chiefly among the poor; and your bitterest enemies among the richer classes."

Ver. 7. That worthy—Greek, "good." Macknight, "excellent"—name—viz. the name of Jesus. Phil. ii. 9, 10.

Ver. 8. The royal law.—The reprobate Greeks used to call the laws of the Persians royal, because ordained by king; "This refers to that law of Christ our King, which he calls eternally his." John xii. 34; xv. 12.

Ver. 9. Are convinced.—Doddridge, "convicted." See note on Heb. xi. 1.

Ver. 10. For whosoever.—While the Jews taught, that "He who transgresses all the precepts of the law, has broken the yoke, dissolved the covenant, and exposed the law to contempt; and so has he done who has broken one precept," they also taught, "That he who observed any principal command was equal to him who kept the whole law," and gave for an example the forsaking of idolatry. To correct this false doctrine was the object St. James had in view.]—Bæster—Is guilty of all—i. e. he hath broken the law as a whole, and insulted the authority of the divine Legislator—God.

Ver. 12. The law of liberty—i. e. the gospel, in which sense James has already used the term repeatedly. See chap. i. 25; ii. 12. It is so called because it freed the Jews from the yoke of Moses, and it frees Christians from the slavery of sin.

Ver. 13. Against—or triumphs over—judgment—in favour of those who have showed mercy. The expression is clearly elliptical, and should in some such way be supplied.

Ver. 14. Can faith save him?—i. e. such a faith as produces no good works? Doddridge—Macknight, "Can (this) faith save him?"

15 If a brother or sister be naked, and destitute of daily food,

16 And one of you say unto them, Depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled; notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the body; what ^a doth it profit?

17 Even so faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being ^a alone.

18 Yea, a man may say, Thou hast faith, and I have works: show me thy faith ^a without thy works, and I ^v will show thee my faith by my works.

19 Thou believest that there is one God; thou doest well: the devils ^a also believe, and tremble.

20 But wilt thou know, O vain man, that faith without works is dead?

21 Was not Abraham our father justified by works when ^a he had offered Isaac his son upon the altar?

22 ^v Seest thou how faith ^a wrought with his works, and by works was faith made perfect?

23 And the scripture was fulfilled which saith, ^a Abraham believed God, and it was imputed unto him for righteousness: and he was called ^b the Friend of God.

24 Ye see then how that by works ^a a man is justified, and not by faith only.

A M. cor.
A 11. cor.
61
1 Jn 3:18
c by itself.
a Some cod.
p. 1001.
by.
v c 3:13
w Ma. 1:21.
5:7
c Ge. 22:9.
12
y or, Thou
seest.
z He 11:17.
a Ge. 15:6.
b 2 Ch. 20:7.
Is. 41:8.
c Ro. 20:12.
d Jos. 2:1.
4c.
He 11:31.
e Ma. 23:31.
f or, breath.
a Ma. 22:8.
14.
1 Pe. 5:3.
b or, judgement.
c 1 K. 5:16.
1 Pr. 29:9.
1 Jo. 1:8.
d Pr. 13:3.
e Ps. 32:9.
f Pr. 12:15.
g Ps. 12:3.
h or, word.
i Pr. 16:27.
j Mat. 15:11.
50.

25 Likewise also was not ^a Rahab the ^a harlot justified by works, when she had received the messengers, and had sent them out another way?

26 For as the body without the ^a spirit is dead, so faith without works is dead also.

CHAPTER III.

1 We are not rashly ^a and ungenerally to reprove others. 5 but rather to build the tongue, a little member, but a powerful instrument of much good, and great harm. 10 To They who be truly wise be kind, and peaceable, without envying and strife.

MY brethren, be not many ^a masters, knowing that we shall receive the greater ^a condemnation.

2 For ^a in many things we offend all. If any man offend not in ^a word, the same ^a is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body.

3 Behold, we put bits ^a in the horses' mouths, that they may obey us; and we turn about their whole body.

4 Behold also the ships, which though they be so great, and are driven of fierce winds, yet are they turned about with a very small helm, whithersoever the governor listeth.

5 Even so the tongue ^a is a little member, and boasteth ^a great things. Behold, how great ^a a matter a little fire kindleth!

6 And the tongue is a ^a fire, a world of iniquity: so is the tongue among our members, that it defileth the whole body, and setteth yet, while they kept clear of the great transgressions: while they neither committed murder nor adultery, nor any of the great crimes reprobated by the Mosaic law—they seem to have thought but little of minor acts of partiality and injustice. They are exhorted, however, to look into the "law of liberty," that is, the gospel, by which they must one day be judged; and there they would find, that justice to the poor, and mercy to the afflicted, are among the first and most prominent precepts of their royal Master. And mercy must not be evinced in a few kind words only, as "Be ye warmed," or "Be ye clothed;" but in substantial acts of kindness—commonly and properly called good works, which he considers quite as necessary to salvation as even faith itself, though in a different way; for though works cannot justify of themselves before God, neither can an unproductive faith do this; for "faith without works is dead."

Ver. 17—26. How far, and in what respect, good works are necessary to our salvation—In the whole of this work, and especially on the New Testament, it has been the writer's aim implicitly to follow the inspired writers, and not to impose on them any union which they have not avowed. On the epistle to the Romans, (chap. iii. and iv.) and on that to the Galatians, (chap. ii. and iii.) he has endeavoured to explain the doctrine of St. Paul on justification by faith, and to support his exposition by the unequivocal sanction of our English reformers; and, next to the Scriptures themselves, he humbly conceives, he cannot refer to better authority in explaining the doctrine of St. James, on justification by works; as he here says, "Ye see how that by works a man is justified, and not by faith only," (ver. 24.)

In reviewing this subject, however, we must inquire what that faith was which this apostle speaks of as utterly unable to save us. "Thou believest there is one God," (says he,) "and thou doest well," for this is the primary article of the Jewish creed—"Hear, O Israel; the Lord thy God is one Lord," (Deut. vi. 4.) But can a speculative faith like this save us? Behold, "the devils believe (this) and tremble." Abraham also believed this; but it was not merely by this that Abraham was justified. He believed in the promise of God, that through his loins should come the Messiah, the Saviour of the world, and under this conviction he "offered Isaac his son upon the altar." This is a most eminent act of faith, and as such was imputed to him; and by faith in that Messiah and his atonement, was he justified before God. And not only so, but his works justified his faith. The case was similar with the harlot

Rahab, who believing in the promise, justified the sincerity of her faith by risking her own life to save that of the Hebrew spies.

Upon this subject, the 12th article of the church of England saith, "Albeit that good works, which are the fruits of faith, and follow after justification, cannot put away our sins, and endure the severity of God's judgment; yet are they pleasing and acceptable to God in Christ, and do spring out necessarily of a true and lively faith; inasmuch that by them a lively faith may be as evidently known, as a tree discerned by the fruit." To the same effect is the 4th "Homily, of a true, lively, and Christian faith."—There is one faith which in Scripture is called a dead faith, which bringeth forth no good works; but is idle, barren, and unfruitful. And this faith, by the holy apostle St. James, is compared to the faith of devils, which believe God to be true and just, and tremble for fear; yet they do nothing well, but all evil. . . . Let us, therefore, good Christian people, try and examine our faith what it is: Christ himself speaketh of this matter, and saith, The tree is known by the fruit. Therefore let us do good works; . . . so shall we show indeed that we have the very lively Christian faith, and may so both certify our conscience the better that we be in the right faith, and also by these means confirm other men. If these fruits do not follow, we do but mock with God, deceive ourselves, and also other men: . . . for the true faith doth ever bring forth good works, as St. James saith, Show me thy faith by thy deeds (or works). Thy deeds and works must be an open testimonial of thy faith; otherwise thy faith, being without good works, is but the devil's faith, the faith of the wicked, a fantasy of faith, and not a true Christian faith."

But to conclude this subject, and to reconcile St. James and St. Paul, who certainly do not differ, we shall cite the brief but lucid exposition of the late excellent Mr. Fuller:—"Paul treats of the justification of the uncondemned, or the way in which sinners are accepted of God, and made heirs of eternal life. James speaks of the justification of the godly, or, in what way it becomes evident that a man is approved of God. The former is by the righteousness of Christ; the latter is by works. The former of these is that which justifies; the latter is that by which it appears that we are justified. The term justification, in the first of these passages, is taken in a primary sense—in the latter, it is taken in a secondary sense only, as in Matt. xi. 19, and other places."

CHAP. III. Ver. 1—18. Cautions against dogmatizing bitterness, and slander, with admonitions to prudence, peace, wish to be teachers who have more need to learn, and aspire to the office of teacher, without a proper call or suitable qualifications. — Leggier.

Ver. 2. Offend all—Doddridge, "all offend." He adds, "The word properly signifies to trip; and Barrow has justly observed, that as the general course of life is called a way, and particular actions, steps; so going on in a regular course of right action, is walking uprightly; and acting amiss, tripping, or stumbling."

Ver. 3. Kits—Doddridge, "bridles."

Ver. 4. The governor—i. e. of the ship. Doddridge, "the steersman."

Ver. 5. How great a water.—Meaning fagots, or waste wood.

Ver. 6. A world of iniquity; so, "The Alexandrian and another MS., as also the Vulgate, omit (omit) so;" and the Syriac version reads, "The tongue is a fire, and the wicked world is a wood;" but we see no occasion to reject the common reading—It defileth.—Literally, "spotteth;" so MacKnight. But we conceive the allusion is not to spots of dirt, but of offense, or perversity. See Jude ver. 23—The perverse—Doddridge, "circle;" MacKnight, "fram"—of nature.—Literally "the wheel of nature" or generation; by which some understand the whole circle of human affairs; others, the course of man's life; and others the successive generations of men; in all which senses

Ver. 17. Being alone—i. e. absolutely without any vital principle. See ver. 28.

Ver. 18. Without thy works.—T. e. Margin says, "Some copies read, By thy works." So, Doddridge says, this and best comes read, and therefore adopts it, as Dr. Mill had done before. But, on the other hand, our textual translation has the authority of the Alexandrian and other MSS.—the Syriac, Arabic, and Vulgate Versions; and is preferred by Barrow, MacKnight, and others; and, as we think, more in the style of St. James, which is inclined to irony, (as in ver. 16.) It is a challenge to do what he knew impossible—to prove the existence of true faith without good works.

Ver. 19. The devils—(Greek, demons)—also believe, and tremble.—See Matt. viii. 29.

Ver. 23. Likewise also.—It is remarkable, that James quotes the same passages in proof of Abraham's good works, that Paul had quoted in illustration of his faith, Heb. xi. 17, 31. Does not this prove faith and good works inseparable?

Ver. 26. Without the spirit.—Margin, "breath." The same word, as is well known, means both.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1. Be not many masters.—Greek, (didaskaloi) teachers. Compare 1 Tim. i. 7. (Rather, "Be not many of you teachers") for many on the * course of nature ; and it is set on fire of hell.

7 For every kind of beasts, and of birds, and of serpents, and of things in the sea, is tamed, and hath been tamed of ^m mankind :

8 But the tongue can no man tame ; it is an unruly evil, full of deadly ⁿ poison.

9 Therewith bless we God, even the Father ; and therewith curse we men, which are made after the similitude of God.

10 Out of the same mouth proceedeth blessing and cursing. My brethren, these things ought not so to be.

11 Both a fountain send forth at the same ^o place sweet water and bitter ?

12 Can the ^p fig tree, my brethren, bear olive berries ? either a vine, figs ? so ^q can no fountain both yield salt water and fresh.

13 Who ^r is a wise man and endued with knowledge among you ? let him show out of a good conversation ^s his works with meekness of wisdom.

14 But if ye have bitter envying and strife in your hearts, glory not, and lie not against the truth.

15 This ^t wisdom descendeth not from above, but is earthly, ^u sensual, devilish.

16 For where envying and strife is, there is ^v confusion and every evil work.

and harmony.—It is well known how ambitious the Jews were to be called Rabbi, and to enjoy the uppermost seats in their synagogues ; and grace, though it changes the heart, and controls the natural disposition, does not eradicate our tempers ; the sanguine, the hasty, and the petulant, will often find it hard work to submit to the peaceable, meek, and gentle precepts of the gospel. It is not improbable, therefore, that the apostle perceived among his converted countrymen, some aspiring and ambitious spirits, that wished to decate to his Christian brethren from the chair of authority. He therefore checks this spirit of ambition, as his Master had before done :—"Be ye not called Rabbi," says he, "for one is your master, even Christ ; and all ye are brethren." So says St. James—"My brethren, be not many masters," teachers or Rabbies, "knowing" the weight of our responsibility, and that if we sin under that character, "the greater," the heavier "will be our condemnation."

This is evidently not meant to discourage faithful and zealous labourers from entering into the vineyard of the gospel, but to check the forwardness of those who are anxious to assume the chair of instruction, (of which we fear there are still instances,) on account of the consequence it may give them in the world and in the church. Such are particularly cautioned against a style of conduct and of preaching unbecoming the meekness of the Christian teacher—against kindling unnecessary or sectarian controversies—against vague and uncharitable declamations—against slanderous and reproachful language—against all cursing and bitterness, which, it is too probable, was introduced first into the Christian church, by means of Jewish teachers and pretended prophets ; whereby a flame was enkindled in it, which even seventeen centuries have not extinguished.

But we must not confine these admonitions to any particular class of Christians. The government of the tongue is a duty of universal obligation ; and the fair sex, to whom God has in general given an extra portion of conversability, to qualify them for nurses, have particular occasion to be guarded against the improper use of this important member. At least, that the apostle Paul thought so, is fully evident from his counsel respecting widows, of some of whom he complains, that they were "idle, wandering about from house to house ; and not only idle, but tattlers also, and busy bodies, speaking things which they ought not." (1 Tim. v. 13.)

The language of St. James, in the chapter before us, is, indeed, highly poetical ; yet it doubtless has a foundation in truth, and in fact ; for it is obvious to all, that "a world of iniquity" and of mischief has arisen out of the chaos of exaggeration, misrepresentation, and slander, here alluded to ! But our apostle chiefly insists upon the inconsistency (and an important consideration certainly it is) of Christian professors

A M. cur
145.
A D. cit
61

k achet

l nature

m nature of n Po 100.3

o Ko 5.13

p or, hole

q Mat 5.16

r Ps 107.43

s Plu 1.27

t Co 5.3

u or, natural

v tumult, or, cong airiness

w Co 2.67

x Plu 1.5

y He 12.14

z Isa 5.2

aa or, enrag-

ab He 12.11

ac or, b. nat

ad or, phar-

ae isre

af He 2.11

ag or, eny

ah 1 Ju 2.15

ai or, en-

aj or, ly

ak He 4.4

al Ps 29.23

am 1 Ts 5.9

17 But the wisdom ^a that is from above is first ^b pure, then, ^c peaceable, ^d gentle, and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without ^e partiality, and without hypocrisy.

18 And the fruit of ^f righteousness is sown in peace of them that make peace

CHAPTER IV.

1 We are to strive against covetousness, 4 intemperance, 5 pride, 11 detraction, and rash judgment others, 13 and not to be content in the good sense of worldly business, but mindful ever of the uncertainty of this life, to continue ourselves and all our affairs to God's providence.

FROM whence come wars and ^a fightings among you ? come they not hence, even of your ^b lusts that war ^c in your members ?

2 Ye lust, and have not ; ye ^d kill, and desire to have, and cannot obtain ; ye fight and war, yet ye have not, because ye ask not.

3 Ye ask, and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye may consume it upon your lusts.

4 Ye adulterers and adulteresses, know ye not that the friendship ^e of the world is enmity with God ? whosoever therefore will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God.

5 Do ye think that the scripture saith in vain, The spirit that dwelleth in us lusteth ^f to ^g envy ?

6 But he giveth more grace. Wherefore he saith, ^h God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace unto the humble.

7 Submit yourselves therefore to God. Resist the devil, and he will flee from you.

indulging in such vices, and employing that member of our bodies, so eminently, and, indeed, exclusively adapted to "bless God," in cursing and reviling men, originally "made after the similitude of God.—My brethren, these things ought not so to be !"

The apostle proceeds to the subject of prudence, or practical wisdom ; and exhorts those who possessed this talent, not to display it in all the wiles of controversy, with bitter envying and strife ; glorying in their acuteness, and contradicting and corrupting the simple truths of revelation ; which, indeed, seems to have been the besetting sin of the Jewish converts,—"Glory not," enjoins he, "and lie not against the truth." To glory against the truth, is to boast in error ; to "lie against the truth," may be either to contradict or to falsify the sacred records—a crime often attempted, and sometimes too successfully, before printing was invented. This display of cunning and ingenuity may assume the name of wisdom ; but it is not "The wisdom which descendeth from above ; but is earthly, sensual, diabolical," which Dr. Bates refers to the three great classes of sin—avarice, lust, and pride, or ambition.

On the contrary, "the wisdom which is from above, is first pure" from error, "then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated ; full of mercy and good fruits," &c. &c. Alas ! if polemical writers, and particularly those who have distinguished themselves by their keenness and penetration in ecclesiastical disputes, were to be judged by this rule, alas ! how few could be acquitted !

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1—17. The evils of war, of private malice, and of rash conduct.—This chapter is equally pointed against national and personal hostilities. On the former subject we shall enrich our pages with a few lines from a truly Christian orator of the present day. The Rev. Rob. Hall remarks—"The contests of nation are both the offspring and the parent of injustice. The world of God ascribes the existence of war to the disorderly passions of men. Hence come wars and fightings among you ? saith the Apostle James ; Come ye not from your lusts, that war in your members ? It is certain two nations cannot engage in hostilities, but one party must be guilty of injustice ; and if the magnitude of crimes is to be estimated by a regard to their consequences, it is difficult to conceive an action of equal guilt with the wanton violation of peace. Though something must generally be allowed for the complexity and intricacy of national claims, and the consequent liability to deception, yet where the guilt of an unjust war is clear and manifest, it sinks every other crime into insignificance. If the existence of war always implies injustice in one at least of the parties concerned, it is also the fruitful parent of crimes. It reverses, with respect to its objects, all the rules of morality. It is nothing less than a temporary repeal of the principles of virtue. It is a system out of the Apostle's sentiment is true. Some think he alludes to the penal wheel of the Greeks, homely which fire was placed ; and others, that he refers to the circulation of the blood. Eve, 1. 13, 16.—Bazster—Is set on fire of hell.—Not Hades, but Gehenna—the place of future punishment.

Ver. 7 Every kind is tamed.—Doddridge and Macknight, "subdued." The apostle does not refer to the domestication of wild animals, but the subduing and taming them under the control of man.

Ver. 11 At the same place.—Doddridge, "opening."—Sweet water and bitter.—Doddridge, "backlash."

Ver. 15 Sensual.—Macknight, "animal."—Devilish.—Macknight, "demunical."—Doddridge, "diabolical."

CHAP. IV. Ver. 5 To envy.—But where did the Scripture say this ? certainly no where in express terms. Worthy, Doddridge, Macknight, &c. divide this into two questions : "Do you think that the Scripture speaks in vain ?" or to no purpose ? 1. in warning us against the friendship of the world. Dr. "Does the spirit that dwells in us to the Holy Spirit lust to envy ?" Many, however, take this passage for a quotation, though they are not agreed from whence. Bishop Patrick refers to Numb. vi. 29 ; and Dr. Hammond, to Gen. vi. 3. Hezekiah to Gen. vii. 24 ; Macknight suggests Rom. vii. 7, but confesses the passage to be very difficult. Dr. John Edwards thinks this refers to the general sense of Scripture.

Ver. 7. Submit yourselves, &c.—Dr. John Edwards remarks, that there are 8 Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you. Cleanse ^k your hands, ye sinners; and purify ^l your hearts, ye double-minded.

9 Be afflicted, and mourn, and weep. let your laughter be turned to mourning, and your joy to heaviness.

10 Humble ^m yourselves in the sight of the Lord, and he shall lift you up.

11 Speak ⁿ not evil one of another, brethren. He that speaketh evil of ^o his brother, and judgeth his brother, speaketh evil of the law, and judgeth the law: but if thou judge the law, thou art not a doer of the law, but a judge.

12 There is one lawgiver, who ^p is able to save and to destroy: who art thou that judgest another?

13 Go to now, ye that say, To-day or to-morrow we will go into such a city, and continue there a year, and buy and sell, and get gain:

14 Whereas ye know not what shall be on the morrow. For what is your life? ^q It is even a vapour, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away.

15 For that ye ought to say, If the Lord will, we shall live, and do this, or that.

which almost all the virtues are excluded, and in which nearly all the vices are incorporated. Whatever renders human nature amiable or respectable, whatever engages love or confidence, is sacrificed at its shrine. In instructing us to consider a portion of our fellow-creatures as the proper objects of enmity, it removes, as far as they are concerned, the basis of all society, of all civilization and virtue; for the basis of this is the good-will due to every individual of the species, as being a part of ourselves. From this principle all the rules of social virtue emanate." (Seaton on War.)

Many of these remarks will apply to individual hostilities. "Ye lust and have not: ye kill, and desire to have, and cannot obtain." This passage cannot, perhaps, be better illustrated, than in reference to the well known history of Ahab, who lusted for the vineyard of Naboth. "He killed," that is, he procured the death of Naboth, and entered the vineyard to enjoy it: but, alas, for him! Elijah followed with a message from JEHOVAH—"Hast thou killed, and also taken possession?" Yes; but how did he enjoy it? "He rent his cloths, and put sackcloth upon his flesh, and fasted, and lay in sackcloth, and went softly" during the short remainder of his days, with the curse of God, and the prediction of an untimely end, hanging over his head; of which we may read the fulfilment in the chapter following. (See 1 Kings, ch. xxi. xxii.)

Thus did Ahab "lust and have not." This did he kill, to gain possession; yet gained nothing but a short, miserable existence, and an untimely end! And this is no uncommon case. How often do men sacrifice peace of conscience, and indeed all the peace of their lives, to procure a forbidden object, which they are never suffered to enjoy? St. James, however recommends to the Hebrews, to whom he wrote, a far more excellent way, namely, to submit their wishes to the will of God, and to implore his blessing with the objects they desired. But even on this subject we may err. Some "have not, because they ask not;" and others "receive not," because they "ask amiss;"—they ask the blessings of Providence "to consume them on their lusts."

Such he addresses in this severe language—"Ye adulterers and adulteresses;" which, perhaps, should not be literally understood, since we know that, as in the Jewish church all the children of Abraham were considered as married to JEHOVAH by the covenant of circumcision; so, under the New Testament, all the disciples of Christ are considered as married to him by their profession. And farther, as all Jews apostatizing to idolatry were considered as guilty of spiritual adultery, so all professed Christians, departing from the spirit of the gospel, and seeking their happiness in the world, are no less considered as spiritual adulterers, and by their attachment to the world showed themselves to be enemies to God. (See 2 Cor. xi. 2; Rev. ii. 20—22.) It is not unlikely, however, that among these three military terms in this verse: 1. Submit, I.e. be subject to your commander. 2. Resist, engage the enemy; and 3. He will fly, or be put to flight.

Ver. 8. Ye double-minded—See chap. i. 8.

Ver. 12. One lawgiver—According to Doddridge, God the sovereign; according to Hammond and Macknight, Christ, the sole lawgiver of his church.

Ver. 13. Go to now—Doddridge, "Come now."

Ver. 14. A vapour—Macknight, "smoke." The LXX use it for the cloud of incense.

Ver. 15. If the Lord—A style of this kind, referring all to the wisdom and providence of God, had been long in use among the pious Jews, and may be traced back to the days of Ruth and Boaz. Ruth ii. 4. It is observable, too, that the Gentiles acknowledged their dependence upon God. The Greeks used to say (san. Theo.) "with the help of God;" and the Latins, Deo valente, "God willing"—terms very usual with our ancestors, but now almost obsolete.

A. M. cir. 4065.
A. D. cir. 61.

J 2 Ch 15 2

k Is 1 16.

l Mat 23 12

m Ep 4 31.

1 Pe 2 1.

n Mat 10 24

o ut. For

ut. For

p Job 7 7

q Job 12 47

a Pr 11 28.

Lu 6 21

b Je 17 11.

c Job 13 24

d Ro 2 5.

e Je 22 13.

Mal 3 5.

f Ex 22 27

g Lu 16 19.

25.

h Mat 5 39.

i or. Be long patient; or,

long

patient

or, long

patient

16 But now ye rejoice in your boastings: all such rejoicing is evil.

17 Therefore ^r to him that knoweth to do good, and doeth ^s it not, to him it is sin.

CHAPTER V.

1 Wicked rich men are to fear God's vengeance. 2 Ye ought to be patient in affliction, mourning, and weeping, and Job; 12 in fasting or fasting, 13 to pray in adversity, to seek no prosperity; 14 to acknowledge mutually our several faults, to pray one for another, 15 and to receive a praying brother to the truth.

GO to now, ye rich ^t men, weep and howl for ^u your miseries that shall come upon you.

2 Your riches ^v are corrupted, and your garments are ^w moth-eaten.

3 Your gold and silver is cankered; and the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh as it were fire. Ye have heaped ^x treasure together for the last days.

4 Behold, the hire ^y of the labourers who have reaped down your fields, which is of you kept back by fraud, crieth: and the cries of them which have reaped are entered ^z into the ears of the Lord of sabaoth.

5 Ye have lived in pleasure ^a on the earth, and been wanton; ye have nourished your hearts, as in a day of slaughter.

6 Ye have condemned ^b and killed the just; and he doth not resist ^c you.

7 Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the same professors there may have been many who were literally devoted to their lusts. These awful characters are, however, called upon to "humble themselves in the sight of God, who resisteth the proud, but giveth grace to the humble."

In the latter part of this chapter, the apostle again warns his Jewish brethren against sins of the tongue; that is, against speaking evil one of another; which some expositors think has a particular reference to censuring their brethren for things neither forbidden nor required by Christ; in which he suggests that such conduct is a reflection upon the law, and an invasion of the prerogative of the divine lawgiver. (Compare Rom. xiv. 3, 4.)

The concluding verses censure the conduct of bold and presumptuous speculators, who calculate upon their own resources, without any reference to, or dependence upon, the providence of God. "To-day, or to-morrow," say they, "we will go into such a city, and continue there a year, and buy and sell, and get gain." But, alas! what uncertainties are here! for "Who can tell what a day may bring forth?" "To-day," they may be disappointed; and "to-morrow," they may never see. "We will go into such a city," but there they never may arrive; or if they do, and even are permitted to buy and sell, how uncertain are their gains? Trade may fail, and their gains be turned into losses; or if their gain should prove considerable, some artful swindler, or daring robber, may deprive them of the whole. Or, if none of these circumstances happen, how uncertain is the vapour—the smoke—of human life! "Peradventure this night thy soul may be required of thee." Instead of this boasting language, it would much better become such frail and dependent creatures as we are to say, "If the Lord will we shall live, and do this or that."

CHAP. V. Ver. 1—20. The rich and wicked Jews warned of approaching judgments, and the pious exhorted to prayer and patience under them. Though this Epistle seems addressed immediately to Jews who had assumed the Christian name, there are some passages which could be addressed only to persons who had no title even to the name of Christians—some rich and covetous Jews, who had come among them from the unworthy motive of deriving advantage from their pecuniary necessities; for men who could deprive their labourers of their hire, must be capable of every thing that was mean and cruel. And would to God there were none such who bear the name of Christians among ourselves—no haughty, overbearing characters, who render, perhaps, some assistance to the cause of religion, for the sake of getting power into their own hands, and making a profit of the necessities.

Against such, the most awful denunciations are here pronounced. They had hoarded up their property in a manner perfectly useless to mankind, and eminently injurious to themselves. Their stores were full of putrefaction, their garments

Ver. 17. Therefore—Doddridge, "For." Macknight, "Wherefore."

CHAP. V. Ver. 1. Go to now—Doddridge, "come now;" as in the chapter preceding it, ver. 13. The difficulty with these rich men was, that they hoarded their wealth—did not use it for the honour of God—did not regard themselves as stewards. The moth-eaten garments—the rust upon their wealth—are the witnesses that their treasures were kept idle, or not properly used. Well may the rich man howl, who has lived to himself in such a world as this.

Ver. 3. For the last days—See note on 1 Tim. iv. 1.

Ver. 4. Lord of sabaoth—i. e. of hosts

Ver. 5. A day of slaughter—Was also a day of fasting; for the Jewish festivals were generally preceded by sacrifices, on many of which the officers themselves fasted. See Isa. xxiv. 6.

Ver. 6. The just—Macknight, "The Just ONE, who did not resist you." See Acts vi. 52. Bishop Jebb, "He is not arrayed against you." Bishop Middleton explains it thus; "The Saviour opposes not your perverseness, but leaves you a prey to its delusion."—Jebb's Soc. Lit.

coming of the Lord. Behold, the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early and latter rain.

8 Be ye also patient; establish your hearts:
for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh.

Grudge not one against another, brethren, lest ye be condemned: behold, the judge standeth before the door.

10 Take my brethren, the prophets, who have spoken in the name of the Lord, for an example of suffering " affliction, and of patience,

U Behold, we count them "happy which endure." Ye have heard of the patience of Job, and have seen the end of the Lord; that the Lord is very pitiful, and of tender mercy.

12 But above all things, my brethren, swear not, neither by heaven, neither by the earth, neither by any other oath : but let your yea be yea ; and your nay, nay ; lest ye fall into condemnation.

13 Is any among you afflicted ? * let him pray.
Is any merry ? let him sing psalms.

moth-eaten, and even their gold and silver, metals which nothing else can corrupt, are cankered by injustice and oppression; they are directed, therefore, to weep and howl for the miseries about to come on them—miseries which, according to the Jewish historian Josephus, had no parallel in the history of human woes. (See exposition of Matt. xxiv.)

From the oppressors, the apostle turns his discourse to the oppressed, and exhorts them to unwearied patience, and a believing hope in the promises of God. To sustain their patience, he assures them that "the Judge standeth before the door, and is ready to take his seat of judgment." At the same time, he sets before them the examples of the holy prophets, and especially of Job, as a proof of the pity and tender mercy of God to the afflicted.

Our apostle then cautions his brethren against unnecessary and profane oaths; even the former having a tendency to sink the dignity of our Christian character, which should give that weight to our assertions, as to render oaths unnecessary; and which, when used in a light and profane manner, are highly criminal. It was well said by Prince Henry, (son of King James I.) when urged to swear in his divisions, as others did, that he did not think all the pleasure in the world was worth an oath.

We now come to notice a passage of very considerable difficulty, relative to the treatment of the sick. After recommending to the afflicted prayer, and to others praise, the apostle particularly applies himself to the case of those afflicted with sickness. "Is any sick among you? Let him call for the elders of the church, and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord." But wherefore the anointing with oil? The best account of this we have met with, is subjoined from the Lectures of the Rev. Jos. Fletcher, M. A. who says—"Anointing with oil, was an ordinary medicinal application to the sick, at the time of this injunction, and the practice of anointing on various occasions obtained among the Jews. The custom, which was in itself indifferent, was observed by the primitive Christians, in case of sickness. 'Oil,' says an ancient Father, 'relieves lassitude, and is the source of light and cleanness.' If such was conceived to be its physical virtue, we can be surprised at the observance of the practice. It

Ver. 9. Be ye also patient - The same word as is twice used in the verse preceding — For the coming of the Lord draweth nigh. This is supposed to have a particular reference to the destruction of Jerusalem, how long after the

Ver. 13 Is any merry?—D. Aldridge, 'Cherished' Let him see palms
 Rev. Ephes. 5:19 Col. iii:16

Nor is 1 Timothy 2:14 himself at all—There are two ways in which this may be understood, either first, as a medical application, still practiced in the East during the last seasons, and even so to be of some effect, according to the Pharmacopoeia of the British Dispensary, or secondly, as a spiritual one, No. 543. But, still, either consider this as a symbolical action, expressive of the trials, or rather, gracious influences of the Holy Spirit. The application of the oil, in the latter sense, is not only a spiritual, but a medicinal one, and is certainly ridiculous, since the ends proposed are diametrically opposite. This, according to being for the express purpose of curing, the other seldom or never being for the purpose of curing, and, above all, designed to introduce the healing power of the world.

A 11 car
4065

) Dec 11 14
 k Re 22 30

(c) $\text{K} = 0.6$
 (d) $\text{K} = 0.7$
 (e) $\text{K} = 0.8$
 (f) $\text{K} = 0.9$

15
 16 17 18 19
 20 21 22 23
 24 25 26 27
 28 29 30 31
 32 33 34 35
 36 37 38 39
 40 41 42 43
 44 45 46 47
 48 49 50 51
 52 53 54 55
 56 57 58 59
 60 61 62 63
 64 65 66 67
 68 69 70 71
 72 73 74 75
 76 77 78 79
 80 81 82 83
 84 85 86 87
 88 89 90 91
 92 93 94 95
 96 97 98 99
 100 101 102 103
 104 105 106 107
 108 109 110 111
 112 113 114 115
 116 117 118 119
 120 121 122 123
 124 125 126 127
 128 129 130 131
 132 133 134 135
 136 137 138 139
 140 141 142 143
 144 145 146 147
 148 149 150 151
 152 153 154 155
 156 157 158 159
 160 161 162 163
 164 165 166 167
 168 169 170 171
 172 173 174 175
 176 177 178 179
 180 181 182 183
 184 185 186 187
 188 189 190 191
 192 193 194 195
 196 197 198 199
 200 201 202 203
 204 205 206 207
 208 209 210 211
 212 213 214 215
 216 217 218 219
 220 221 222 223
 224 225 226 227
 228 229 230 231
 232 233 234 235
 236 237 238 239
 240 241 242 243
 244 245 246 247
 248 249 250 251
 252 253 254 255
 256 257 258 259
 260 261 262 263
 264 265 266 267
 268 269 270 271
 272 273 274 275
 276 277 278 279
 280 281 282 283
 284 285 286 287
 288 289 290 291
 292 293 294 295
 296 297 298 299
 300 301 302 303
 304 305 306 307
 308 309 310 311
 312 313 314 315
 316 317 318 319
 320 321 322 323
 324 325 326 327
 328 329 330 331
 332 333 334 335
 336 337 338 339
 340 341 342 343
 344 345 346 347
 348 349 350 351
 352 353 354 355
 356 357 358 359
 360 361 362 363
 364 365 366 367
 368 369 370 371
 372 373 374 375
 376 377 378 379
 380 381 382 383
 384 385 386 387
 388 389 390 391
 392 393 394 395
 396 397 398 399
 400 401 402 403
 404 405 406 407
 408 409 410 411
 412 413 414 415
 416 417 418 419
 420 421 422 423
 424 425 426 427
 428 429 430 431
 432 433 434 435
 436 437 438 439
 440 441 442 443
 444 445 446 447
 448 449 450 451
 452 453 454 455
 456 457 458 459
 460 461 462 463
 464 465 466 467
 468 469 470 471
 472 473 474 475
 476 477 478 479
 480 481 482 483
 484 485 486 487
 488 489 490 491
 492 493 494 495
 496 497 498 499
 500 501 502 503
 504 505 506 507
 508 509 510 511
 512 513 514 515
 516 517 518 519
 520 521 522 523
 524 525 526 527
 528 529 530 531
 532 533 534 535
 536 537 538 539
 540 541 542 543
 544 545 546 547
 548 549 550 551
 552 553 554 555
 556 557 558 559
 560 561 562 563
 564 565 566 567
 568 569 570 571
 572 573 574 575
 576 577 578 579
 580 581 582 583
 584 585 586 587
 588 589 590 591
 592 593 594 595
 596 597 598 599
 600 601 602 603
 604 605 606 607
 608 609 610 611
 612 613 614 615
 616 617 618 619
 620 621 622 623
 624 625 626 627
 628 629 630 631
 632 633 634 635
 636 637 638 639
 640 641 642 643
 644 645 646 647
 648 649 650 651
 652 653 654 655
 656 657 658 659
 660 661 662 663
 664 665 666 667
 668 669 670 671
 672 673 674 675
 676 677 678 679
 680 681 682 683
 684 685 686 687
 688 689 690 691
 692 693 694 695
 696 697 698 699
 700 701 702 703
 704 705 706 707
 708 709 710 711
 712 713 714 715
 716 717 718 719
 720 721 722 723
 724 725 726 727
 728 729 730 731
 732 733 734 735
 736 737 738 739
 740 741 742 743
 744 745 746 747
 748 749 750 751
 752 753 754 755
 756 757 758 759
 760 761 762 763
 764 765 766 767
 768 769 770 771
 772 773 774 775
 776 777 778 779
 780 781 782 783
 784 785 786 787
 788 789 790 791
 792 793 794 795
 796 797 798 799
 800 801 802 803
 804 805 806 807
 808 809 810 811
 812 813 814 815
 816 817 818 819
 820 821 822 823
 824 825 826 827
 828 829 830 831
 832 833 834 835
 836 837 838 839
 840 841 842 843
 844 845 846 847
 848 849

Δc
 1) Jun-42 10
 Δc
 2) May-53 4

$$A = \begin{pmatrix} 1 & 2 & 1 \\ 0 & 1 & 1 \\ 0 & 0 & 1 \end{pmatrix} \in GL_3(\mathbb{R})$$

u. M. 1615

v 1: 3321
w Ar 1918
x P 11519

y 1 K 17 1
z 10, 10
p 10, 10
a 10, 10

d. Mat 18:1

Case	Year	Source
1	1998	...
2	1999	...
3	2000	...
4	2001	...
5	2002	...
6	2003	...
7	2004	...
8	2005	...
9	2006	...
10	2007	...
11	2008	...
12	2009	...
13	2010	...
14	2011	...
15	2012	...
16	2013	...
17	2014	...
18	2015	...
19	2016	...
20	2017	...
21	2018	...
22	2019	...
23	2020	...
24	2021	...
25	2022	...
26	2023	...
27	2024	...
28	2025	...
29	2026	...
30	2027	...
31	2028	...
32	2029	...
33	2030	...
34	2031	...
35	2032	...
36	2033	...
37	2034	...
38	2035	...
39	2036	...
40	2037	...
41	2038	...
42	2039	...
43	2040	...
44	2041	...
45	2042	...
46	2043	...
47	2044	...
48	2045	...
49	2046	...
50	2047	...
51	2048	...
52	2049	...
53	2050	...
54	2051	...
55	2052	...
56	2053	...
57	2054	...
58	2055	...
59	2056	...
60	2057	...
61	2058	...
62	2059	...
63	2060	...
64	2061	...
65	2062	...
66	2063	...
67	2064	...
68	2065	...
69	2066	...
70	2067	...
71	2068	...
72	2069	...
73	2070	...
74	2071	...
75	2072	...
76	2073	...
77	2074	...
78	2075	...
79	2076	...
80	2077	...
81	2078	...
82	2079	...
83	2080	...
84	2081	...
85	2082	...
86	2083	...
87	2084	...
88	2085	...
89	2086	...
90	2087	...
91	2088	...
92	2089	...
93	2090	...
94	2091	...
95	2092	...
96	2093	...
97	2094	...
98	2095	...
99	2096	...
100	2097	...
101	2098	...
102	2099	...
103	2100	...
104	2101	...
105	2102	...
106	2103	...
107	2104	...
108	2105	...
109	2106	...
110	2107	...
111	2108	...
112	2109	...
113	2110	...
114	2111	...
115	2112	...
116	2113	...
117	2114	...
118	2115	...
119	2116	...
120	2117	...
121	2118	...
122	2119	...
123	2120	...
124	2121	...
125	2122	...
126	2123	...
127	2124	...
128	2125	...
129	2126	...
130	2127	...

14 Is any sick ^a among you? let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord;

15 And the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if ^v he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him.

16 Confess ^{to} your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed. The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth ^a much.

17 Elias was a man subject to like passions as we are, and he ³ prayed ² earnestly that it might not rain: and it rained not on the earth by the space of three years and six months.

18 And he prayed again, and the heaven gave rain, and the earth brought forth her fruit.

19 Brethren, if any of you do err from the truth, and one ^b convert him;

20 Let him know, that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins.

seems, however, that the Jews frequently blended with the medical or stoma a variety of charms and incantations, of supposed magical efficacy in cases of disease. In opposition to all these prohibited observances, the apostle exhorts the sick to send for 'the elders of the church,' who, while they retained the lawful and beneficial use of oil, were to connect with it the exercises of faith and prayer. It was the conservation of a local usage obtaining at that period, to the purposes of charity and religion. On the same principle, we can account for the occasional practice of anointing, in the performance of miraculous cures. St. Mark informs us, (chap. vi. 13.) that the disciples, . . . during the ministry of our Lord, cast out devils, and anointed with oil many that were sick, and healed them."

"So in this place," "The prayer of truth shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he have committed sins"—that is, any particular sins which may have brought this sickness on him—"they shall be forgiven him." In connection with this subject, St. James goes on to advise his brethren to confess their faults one to another, and to pray for one another, with the observation, that "the fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much;" which he instances of Elijah the prophet, who, by his earnest and importunate prayers, closed the heavens, that it rained not for more than three years, to punish a guilty nation for its idolatries; and opened them again by his prayers, on their repentance.

Lastly, he reminds his brethren of the great importance of the conversion of "a sinner from the error of his way," and the rich reward of the instrument in such a work; he is the means of recovering a sinner, and of procuring his forgiveness from God through Christ.

The very abrupt conclusion of this Firstle, has led Dr. Benson, and others, to suspect that it was never finished; but that the inspired author was led forth to martyrdom, before he had the opportunity to complete it. If it were written by the elder James, he, we know, was beheaded by Herod, and probably with as little notice as he gave John the Baptist. (Compare Acts x. 2; and Matt. xiv. 10.) If this were written by the younger James, he also is believed to have suffered martyrdom, and probably in a popular tumult, and without any previous intimation.

Ver. 15. If he have committed sins—Wherby he may have brought this affliction on hims. If. See I Cor. vi. 9.

Ver. 16. Confess your faults one to another—This has no reference to Auricular confession which is made merely in the ears of a priest; nor is this confession made with a view to absolution but to entreat the prayers of our fellow Christians.

Ver 17. Subj. 2 to like persons—Baldridge and Macknight, "To like intimates."—Prayed earnestly—Marem, "Prayed in his prayer," which is a Hebrew form for earnest prayer.—Two years and six months.—But this was the whole time of the drought.—Luke ix. 25.

Ver 18. He prayed again—That is, after Baal's priests had been destroyed and idolatry suppressed. See 1 Kings xviii. 38, &c.

Act 20. Small bed = Marknigh, "cover" a multitude of sins (4000 sins? Doubtless in our view of the converted sinner so Marknigh Compare 1 Peter 1.8. To cover sin, under the Old Testament implied its pardon. He that is instrumental in the conversion of a sinner, is instrumental also in procuring his pardon.

THE FIRST PRINCIPLE GENERAL OF PREFERENCE

THAT SIMON PETER, or Cephas, the son of Jonas, and the Apostle of our Lord, was the author of this Epistle, has never been doubted; and its genuineness and canonical authority are amply confirmed by its being quoted or referred to by Pelagius, p. trinit. at Rome; the martyrs of Lyons; Diognetus bishop of Antioch; Pamph. Jerom. Clement of Alexandria; and Tertullian. We have already seen the history of this Apostle as detailed in the Gospel; and the Acts of his Apostles; and we have seen how he was persecuted, and how he was brought to Rome, in the reign of Nero, where he suffered martyrdom, being crucified with his head downwards, at or near the same time when St.

land as a Lombard was beheaded. St. Jerome adds that "he was born at Rome, in the Vatican, near the triumphal way, and in veneration of his memory a church was raised there, and he is called the apostle over all the world". He wrote this Epistle, as is generally allowed, some little time before his death, probably about A. D. 416 to the Christians, doubtless both Jewish and Gentile converts, in the dull, but earnest, Latin of a man, and most probably a monk, who had been called Basilian, viz. 43, and 44, and who, like many of our other fathers, Isidorus, Whitty, Markknight, Isidorus, Hays, H. de Tournai, and all the learned of the Romish church, suppose that the Epistola ad Romanos is the work of the apostle Paul, and which is strongly corroborated by the general testimony of antiquity: 1-2

CHAPTER I.

1 He blesteth God for his manifold spiritual graces: 10 showing that the salvation in Christ is no new, but a thing promised of old: 13 and exhorteth them accordingly to a good conversation, inasmuch as they are now born anew by the word of God.

PETER, an apostle of Jesus Christ, to the strangers scattered ^a throughout Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia,

2 Elect ^b according to the fore-knowledge ^c of God the Father, through sanctification ^d of the Spirit, unto ^e obedience and sprinkling ^f of the blood of Jesus Christ: Grace unto you, and peace, be ^g multiplied.

3 Blessed ^h be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his ⁱ abundant ^j mercy, hath begotten us again ^k unto a lively hope by the resurrection ^l of Jesus Christ from the dead,

4 To an inheritance ^m incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeeth ⁿ not away, reserved ^o in heaven ^p for you,

5 Who are kept ^q by the power of God through faith ^r unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time.

6 Wherein ye greatly rejoice, though now for a season, if need ^s be, ye are in heaviness through manifold temptations:

7 That the trial ^t of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with ^u fire, might be found unto praise and ^v honour and glory at the appearing ^w of Jesus Christ:

A M. cir.
1068
A. D. cir.
61.

a Ac 8:4
b Ep 1:4
c Ro 8:29
d 2 Th 2:13
e Ro 16:26
f 1 Th 5:22
g 1 Th 5:22
h 2 Co 1:3
i 1 Co 1:3
j 1 Co 1:3
k 1 Co 1:3
l 1 Co 1:3
m 1 Co 1:3
n 1 Co 1:3
o 1 Co 1:3
p 1 Co 1:3
q 1 Co 1:3
r 1 Co 1:3
s 1 Co 1:3
t 1 Co 1:3
u 1 Co 1:3
v 1 Co 1:3
w 1 Co 1:3

x 1 Th 1:20
y 1 Th 1:20
z 1 Th 1:20
a 2 Pe 1:21
b 1 Th 1:20
c 2 Co 1:32
d Ep 3:10
e 1 Th 1:20
f 1 Th 1:20
g 1 Th 1:20
h 1 Th 1:20
i 1 Th 1:20
j 1 Th 1:20
k 1 Th 1:20
l 1 Th 1:20
m 1 Th 1:20
n 1 Th 1:20
o 1 Th 1:20
p 1 Th 1:20
q 1 Th 1:20
r 1 Th 1:20
s 1 Th 1:20
t 1 Th 1:20
u 1 Th 1:20
v 1 Th 1:20
w 1 Th 1:20

x 1 Th 1:20
y 1 Th 1:20
z 1 Th 1:20
a 2 Pe 1:21
b 1 Th 1:20
c 2 Co 1:32
d Ep 3:10
e 1 Th 1:20
f 1 Th 1:20
g 1 Th 1:20
h 1 Th 1:20
i 1 Th 1:20
j 1 Th 1:20
k 1 Th 1:20
l 1 Th 1:20
m 1 Th 1:20
n 1 Th 1:20
o 1 Th 1:20
p 1 Th 1:20
q 1 Th 1:20
r 1 Th 1:20
s 1 Th 1:20
t 1 Th 1:20
u 1 Th 1:20
v 1 Th 1:20
w 1 Th 1:20

x 1 Th 1:20
y 1 Th 1:20
z 1 Th 1:20
a 2 Pe 1:21
b 1 Th 1:20
c 2 Co 1:32
d Ep 3:10
e 1 Th 1:20
f 1 Th 1:20
g 1 Th 1:20
h 1 Th 1:20
i 1 Th 1:20
j 1 Th 1:20
k 1 Th 1:20
l 1 Th 1:20
m 1 Th 1:20
n 1 Th 1:20
o 1 Th 1:20
p 1 Th 1:20
q 1 Th 1:20
r 1 Th 1:20
s 1 Th 1:20
t 1 Th 1:20
u 1 Th 1:20
v 1 Th 1:20
w 1 Th 1:20

x 1 Th 1:20
y 1 Th 1:20
z 1 Th 1:20
a 2 Pe 1:21
b 1 Th 1:20
c 2 Co 1:32
d Ep 3:10
e 1 Th 1:20
f 1 Th 1:20
g 1 Th 1:20
h 1 Th 1:20
i 1 Th 1:20
j 1 Th 1:20
k 1 Th 1:20
l 1 Th 1:20
m 1 Th 1:20
n 1 Th 1:20
o 1 Th 1:20
p 1 Th 1:20
q 1 Th 1:20
r 1 Th 1:20
s 1 Th 1:20
t 1 Th 1:20
u 1 Th 1:20
v 1 Th 1:20
w 1 Th 1:20

x 1 Th 1:20
y 1 Th 1:20
z 1 Th 1:20
a 2 Pe 1:21
b 1 Th 1:20
c 2 Co 1:32
d Ep 3:10
e 1 Th 1:20
f 1 Th 1:20
g 1 Th 1:20
h 1 Th 1:20
i 1 Th 1:20
j 1 Th 1:20
k 1 Th 1:20
l 1 Th 1:20
m 1 Th 1:20
n 1 Th 1:20
o 1 Th 1:20
p 1 Th 1:20
q 1 Th 1:20
r 1 Th 1:20
s 1 Th 1:20
t 1 Th 1:20
u 1 Th 1:20
v 1 Th 1:20
w 1 Th 1:20

x 1 Th 1:20
y 1 Th 1:20
z 1 Th 1:20
a 2 Pe 1:21
b 1 Th 1:20
c 2 Co 1:32
d Ep 3:10
e 1 Th 1:20
f 1 Th 1:20
g 1 Th 1:20
h 1 Th 1:20
i 1 Th 1:20
j 1 Th 1:20
k 1 Th 1:20
l 1 Th 1:20
m 1 Th 1:20
n 1 Th 1:20
o 1 Th 1:20
p 1 Th 1:20
q 1 Th 1:20
r 1 Th 1:20
s 1 Th 1:20
t 1 Th 1:20
u 1 Th 1:20
v 1 Th 1:20
w 1 Th 1:20

x 1 Th 1:20
y 1 Th 1:20
z 1 Th 1:20
a 2 Pe 1:21
b 1 Th 1:20
c 2 Co 1:32
d Ep 3:10
e 1 Th 1:20
f 1 Th 1:20
g 1 Th 1:20
h 1 Th 1:20
i 1 Th 1:20
j 1 Th 1:20
k 1 Th 1:20
l 1 Th 1:20
m 1 Th 1:20
n 1 Th 1:20
o 1 Th 1:20
p 1 Th 1:20
q 1 Th 1:20
r 1 Th 1:20
s 1 Th 1:20
t 1 Th 1:20
u 1 Th 1:20
v 1 Th 1:20
w 1 Th 1:20

x 1 Th 1:20
y 1 Th 1:20
z 1 Th 1:20
a 2 Pe 1:21
b 1 Th 1:20
c 2 Co 1:32
d Ep 3:10
e 1 Th 1:20
f 1 Th 1:20
g 1 Th 1:20
h 1 Th 1:20
i 1 Th 1:20
j 1 Th 1:20
k 1 Th 1:20
l 1 Th 1:20
m 1 Th 1:20
n 1 Th 1:20
o 1 Th 1:20
p 1 Th 1:20
q 1 Th 1:20
r 1 Th 1:20
s 1 Th 1:20
t 1 Th 1:20
u 1 Th 1:20
v 1 Th 1:20
w 1 Th 1:20

x 1 Th 1:20
y 1 Th 1:20
z 1 Th 1:20
a 2 Pe 1:21
b 1 Th 1:20
c 2 Co 1:32
d Ep 3:10
e 1 Th 1:20
f 1 Th 1:20
g 1 Th 1:20
h 1 Th 1:20
i 1 Th 1:20
j 1 Th 1:20
k 1 Th 1:20
l 1 Th 1:20
m 1 Th 1:20
n 1 Th 1:20
o 1 Th 1:20
p 1 Th 1:20
q 1 Th 1:20
r 1 Th 1:20
s 1 Th 1:20
t 1 Th 1:20
u 1 Th 1:20
v 1 Th 1:20
w 1 Th 1:20

x 1 Th 1:20
y 1 Th 1:20
z 1 Th 1:20
a 2 Pe 1:21
b 1 Th 1:20
c 2 Co 1:32
d Ep 3:10
e 1 Th 1:20
f 1 Th 1:20
g 1 Th 1:20
h 1 Th 1:20
i 1 Th 1:20
j 1 Th 1:20
k 1 Th 1:20
l 1 Th 1:20
m 1 Th 1:20
n 1 Th 1:20
o 1 Th 1:20
p 1 Th 1:20
q 1 Th 1:20
r 1 Th 1:20
s 1 Th 1:20
t 1 Th 1:20
u 1 Th 1:20
v 1 Th 1:20
w 1 Th 1:20

x 1 Th 1:20
y 1 Th 1:20
z 1 Th 1:20
a 2 Pe 1:21
b 1 Th 1:20
c 2 Co 1:32
d Ep 3:10
e 1 Th 1:20
f 1 Th 1:20
g 1 Th 1:20
h 1 Th 1:20
i 1 Th 1:20
j 1 Th 1:20
k 1 Th 1:20
l 1 Th 1:20
m 1 Th 1:20
n 1 Th 1:20
o 1 Th 1:20
p 1 Th 1:20
q 1 Th 1:20
r 1 Th 1:20
s 1 Th 1:20
t 1 Th 1:20
u 1 Th 1:20
v 1 Th 1:20
w 1 Th 1:20

x 1 Th 1:20
y 1 Th 1:20
z 1 Th 1:20
a 2 Pe 1:21
b 1 Th 1:20
c 2 Co 1:32
d Ep 3:10
e 1 Th 1:20
f 1 Th 1:20
g 1 Th 1:20
h 1 Th 1:20
i 1 Th 1:20
j 1 Th 1:20
k 1 Th 1:20
l 1 Th 1:20
m 1 Th 1:20
n 1 Th 1:20
o 1 Th 1:20
p 1 Th 1:20
q 1 Th 1:20
r 1 Th 1:20
s 1 Th 1:20
t 1 Th 1:20
u 1 Th 1:20
v 1 Th 1:20
w 1 Th 1:20

x 1 Th 1:20
y 1 Th 1:20
z 1 Th 1:20
a 2 Pe 1:21
b 1 Th 1:20
c 2 Co 1:32
d Ep 3:10
e 1 Th 1:20
f 1 Th 1:20
g 1 Th 1:20
h 1 Th 1:20
i 1 Th 1:20
j 1 Th 1:20
k 1 Th 1:20
l 1 Th 1:20
m 1 Th 1:20
n 1 Th 1:20
o 1 Th 1:20
p 1 Th 1:20
q 1 Th 1:20
r 1 Th 1:20
s 1 Th 1:20
t 1 Th 1:20
u 1 Th 1:20
v 1 Th 1:20
w 1 Th 1:20

x 1 Th 1:20
y 1 Th 1:20
z 1 Th 1:20
a 2 Pe 1:21
b 1 Th 1:20
c 2 Co 1:32
d Ep 3:10
e 1 Th 1:20
f 1 Th 1:20
g 1 Th 1:20
h 1 Th 1:20
i 1 Th 1:20
j 1 Th 1:20
k 1 Th 1:20
l 1 Th 1:20
m 1 Th 1:20
n 1 Th 1:20
o 1 Th 1:20
p 1 Th 1:20
q 1 Th 1:20
r 1 Th 1:20
s 1 Th 1:20
t 1 Th 1:20
u 1 Th 1:20
v 1 Th 1:20
w 1 Th 1:20

x 1 Th 1:20
y 1 Th 1:20
z 1 Th 1:20
a 2 Pe 1:21
b 1 Th 1:20
c 2 Co 1:32
d Ep 3:10
e 1 Th 1:20
f 1 Th 1:20
g 1 Th 1:20
h 1 Th 1:20
i 1 Th 1:20
j 1 Th 1:20
k 1 Th 1:20
l 1 Th 1:20
m 1 Th 1:20
n 1 Th 1:20
o 1 Th 1:20
p 1 Th 1:20
q 1 Th 1:20
r 1 Th 1:20
s 1 Th 1:20
t 1 Th 1:20
u 1 Th 1:20
v 1 Th 1:20
w 1 Th 1:20

CHAP. I. Ver. 1—25. Introduction—object of the prophecies—and the invaluable price of our redemption.—Of this Epistle, the excellent Archbishop Leighton, to whose commentary on this book we shall repeatedly advert, judiciously observes, that it is "A brief, and yet very clear, summary, both of the consolations and instructions needful for the encouragement and direction of a Christian in his journey to heaven; elevating his thoughts and desires to that happiness, and strengthening him against all opposition in the way, both that of corruption within, and temptations and afflictions from without."

"The heads of doctrine contained in it are many; but the main, that are most insisted on, are these three—faith, obedience, and patience: to establish them in believing, to direct them in doing, and to comfort them in suffering. And because the first is the ground-work and support of the other two, this first chapter is much occupied with persuading them of the truth of the mystery which they had received and did believe, viz.—their redemption and salvation by Christ Jesus, that inheritance of immortality bought by his blood for them, and the evidence and stability of their right and title to it. And then he uses this belief, this assurance of the glory to come, as the great persuasive, . . . both to holy obedience and constant patience, since nothing can be too much either . . . to do or to suffer, for the attainment of that blessed state."

This Epistle is addressed to the elect strangers (as Doddridge translates it) "scattered throughout Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia [Minor,] and Bithynia"—that is, throughout the north-east parts of Asia. Jews, or proselytes, from all these countries, or nearly so, appear to have been present at Jerusalem on the day of Pentecost, and were addressed by St. Peter; and as he would be recollecting by them, to them, probably, this Epistle might be addressed: and not to them only, but to the Gentile converts also resident among them, since Peter had long since learned not to call any whom God had cleansed, common or unclean. We, therefore, think, with Doddridge and many others, that though the Jews of the dispersion were most properly called strangers in those countries, there is no reason for excluding converted Gentiles; since all Christians, as well as the ancient patriarchs, profess to be "pilgrims and strangers on the earth." (See chap. ii. v. 11.)

Now these are said to be elect (or chosen) by God the Father, sanctified by the Holy Spirit, and justified by the atoning blood of Christ, which is evidently the meaning of being sprinkled by his blood: in which we may observe a perfect harmony with the doctrine of Paul in his Epistle to the Romans. (Chap. viii. 29, 30.)

The Apostle then breaks out into a song of grateful adoration for the blessings of redemption and salvation, and for the almighty care and protection of God to his people, in their passing through this vale of tears and sufferings, until they

8 Whom having not ^x seen, ye love; in whom, though now ye see him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with joy ^y unspeakable and full of glory: 9 Receiving the end of your faith, even the salvation of your souls.

10 Of which salvation the prophets have inquired and searched ^z diligently, who prophesied of the grace that should come unto you:

11 Searching what, or what manner of time the Spirit ^a of Christ which was in them did signify, when it testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow.

12 Unto whom it was revealed, that not ^b unto themselves, but unto us they did minister the things, which are now reported unto you by them that have preached the gospel unto you with the Holy Ghost ^c sent down from heaven; which things the angels ^d desire to look into.

13 Wherefore gird ^e up the loins of your mind, be ^f sober, and hope ^g to the end ^h for the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ;

14 As obedient children, not fashioning ⁱ yourselves according to the former lusts in your ignorance:

15 But as he which hath called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation;

16 Because it is written, ^j Be ye holy; for I am holy.

17 And if ye call on the Father, who without shall appear before the great object of their love and adoration, and receive the end of their faith, even the salvation of their souls.

Here Peter takes occasion to advert to the inquiries of the ancient prophets, unto whom were revealed "the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow:" and, at the same time that they predicted these events, they were fully apprized that they were not to occur in their own times, but in a future age—the latter days—the last time—the times of the Messiah.

On this passage we may remark the gradual development of gospel truth, during a long succession of inspired writers, even from Enoch unto Malachi—the obscurity which attended these prophecies, from their being clothed in figurative language and typical allusions—which obscurity, however, gradually diminished as the predicted events approached; one circumstance after another was disclosed, till the whole person and character of the Redeemer was revealed—all the interesting events of his life, and all the painful circumstances of his death: still, however, much remained, and still remains, worthy of inquiry; and the prophets of the New Testament, as well as of the Old, searched into the mystery of their own predictions: yea, even the angels stoop down from their stary thrones, to look into these sacred mysteries; and "principalities and powers," who reside in heaven, gladly visit our churches, that they may there learn "the manifold wisdom of God in our redemption."

"It is no wonder," says the pious Leighton, that "the angels admire these things, and desire to look into them; but it is strange that we do not so. They view them steadfastly, and we neglect them; either we consider them not at all, or give them but a transient look. . . . That which was the great business of the prophets and apostles, both for their own times, and to convey them to us, we regard not, and turn our eyes to foolish, wandering thoughts, which angels are ashamed at. . . . We bow down to the earth and study, and . . . rake into the very bowels of it, and content ourselves with the outside of the unspeakable riches of Christ, and look not within it; but they, having no will nor desire but for the glory of God, being pure flames of fire burning only in love to him, are no less delighted than amazed with the bottomless wonders of his wisdom and goodness, shining in the work of our redemption."

The remainder of this chapter contains a practical improvement of the preceding, in which St. Peter considers the nature of sanctification, and urges the believing strangers to holiness of heart and life, from the especial consideration of the immense price at which we are redeemed, namely, "the precious blood of Christ."

"It is impossible," says the excellent writer above quoted, "for a Christian to give himself to conform to the world's ungodliness, unless first he forgets who he is, and by what means

CHAP. I. Ver. 1. Asia—i. e. Asia Minor, a very small part of what we now call Asia.

Ver. 3. Begotten us again—Doddridge, "Regenerated us."—A lively hope—i. e. the hope of eternal life.

Ver. 5. Who are kept.—The original word is very emphatical, and properly signifies being kept as in an impregnable garrison.—Blackwell.

Ver. 6. Temptations—Or "trials." So Meeknight.

Ver. 7. Unto praise, &c.—i. e. the praise and glory of Christ.

respect of persons judgeth according to every man's work, pass the time of your sojourning here in ⁸ fear:

18 Forasmuch as ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, from your vain conversation received by tradition from your fathers;

19 But with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot;

20 Who verily was fore-ordained before ²¹ the foundation of the world, but was manifest in these last times for you.

21 Who by him do believe in God, that raised him up from the dead, and ²² gave him glory: that your faith and hope might be in God.

22 Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth ²³ through the Spirit into unfeigned love ²⁴ of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently:

23 Being born ²⁴ again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word ²⁵ of God, which liveth and abideth for ever.

24 ²⁵ For all flesh is as grass, and all the glory of man as the flower of grass. The grass withereth, and the flower thereof falleth away;

25 But the word of the Lord endureth for ever. And this ²⁶ is the word which by the gospel is preached unto you.

CHAPTER II.

WHEREFORE laying aside ¹ all malice, and all guile, and hypocrisies, and envies, and all evil speakings,

2 As new born ³ babes, desire the sincere milk ⁴ of the word, that ye may grow thereby;

3 If so be ye have tasted ⁴ that the Lord is gracious.

4 To whom coming, as unto a living stone, disallowed ⁵ of men, but chosen of God, and precious,

5 Ye also, as lively stones, ⁶ are built up a spiritual ⁷ house, a holy ⁸ priesthood, to offer up spiritual ⁹ sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ.

6 Wherefore also it is contained in the scripture, ⁷ Behold, I lay in Zion a chief corner stone, elect, precious: and he that believeth on him shall not be confounded.

7 Unto you therefore which believe he is precious: but unto them which he disobedi- ent, the ⁸ stone which the builders disallowed, the same is made the head of the corner,

8 And a stone of stumbling, and a rock of offence, even to them which stumble at the word, being disobedient: ⁹ wherunto also they were appointed.

9 But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a ¹⁰ peculiar ¹¹ people; that ye should show forth the ¹² praises of him who hath called you out of darkness ¹³ into his marvellous light:

10 Which ¹¹ in time past were not a people, but are now the people of God; which had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy.

11 Dearly beloved, I beseech you as ¹² stran- gers and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly ¹³ lusts, which war ¹⁴ against the soul;

12 Having your conversation honest among the Gentiles: that, ¹⁵ whereas they speak against you as evil-doers, they may by your good ¹⁶ works, which they shall behold, glorify God in the day of visitation.

13 Submit ¹⁴ yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake: whether it be to the king, as supreme;

14 Or unto governors, as unto them that are sent by him for the punishment of evil-doers, and for the praise of them that do well.

15 For so is the will of God, that ¹⁶ ye with well doing ye may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men:

A M. cir. 400.
A. 14. cir. 64.
k. Plu. 2. 12.
l. Jo. 1. 28. 29.
Re 7. 14.
m. Re 19. 8.
n. Mat. 28. 15.
29. 2. 9.
o. Jo. 17. 17, 19.
p. 1. Jo. 3. 14, 15.
q. Jo. 1. 13.
r. Jo. 1. 18.
s. or, that.
t. Jo. 4. 19. 8.
u. Jo. 1. 14. 9.
v. Ep. 4. 22, 31.
w. 1. M. 1. 3.
x. 1. Co. 3. 2.
y. Ps. 9. 8.
z. Ps. 118. 2.
1. or, he ye.
2. Re 3. 6.
3. Jo. 1. 6.
4. Re 1. 6.
5. M. 1. 11.
6. Jo. 28. 16.
7. or, on.
8. from.
9. Mat. 21. 42.
10. Jo. 1. 4.
11. or, per- fect.
12. Jo. 4. 20.
13. or, of.
14. Jo. 28. 18.
15. Re 9. 5.
16. Jo. 1. 19. 49.
17. or, 5. 16.
18. Jo. 8. 14.
19. Jo. 1. 11.
20. or, where.
21. w. Mat. 1. 15.
22. s. Mat. 22. 24.
23. Re 13. 1.
24. y. Tu. 2. 5.

¹ He delivered them from the burden of charity. ² Showing that Christ is the founda- tion whereon they are built. ³ He beseecheth them, also to abstain from filthy lusts, 11 to be able to ingenerate, 18 and teacheth servants to obey their masters, 24 patiently suffering for well doing, after the example of Christ.

WHEREFORE laying aside ¹ all malice, and all guile, and hypocrisies, and envies, and all evil speakings,

2 As new born ³ babes, desire the sincere milk ⁴ of the word, that ye may grow thereby;

3 If so be ye have tasted ⁴ that the Lord is gracious.

4 To whom coming, as unto a living stone, disallowed ⁵ of men, but chosen of God, and precious,

5 Ye also, as lively stones, ⁶ are built up a spiritual ⁷ house, a holy ⁸ priesthood, to offer up spiritual ⁹ sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ.

6 Wherefore also it is contained in the scripture, ⁷ Behold, I lay in Zion a chief corner stone, elect, precious: and he that believeth on him shall not be confounded.

7 Unto you therefore which believe he is precious: but unto them which he disobedi- ent, the ⁸ stone which the builders disallowed, the same is made the head of the corner,

8 And a stone of stumbling, and a rock of offence, even to them which stumble at the word, being disobedient: ⁹ wherunto also they were appointed.

9 But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a ¹⁰ peculiar ¹¹ people; that ye should show forth the ¹² praises of him who hath called you out of darkness ¹³ into his marvellous light:

10 Which ¹¹ in time past were not a people, but are now the people of God; which had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy.

11 Dearly beloved, I beseech you as ¹² stran- gers and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly ¹³ lusts, which war ¹⁴ against the soul;

12 Having your conversation honest among the Gentiles: that, ¹⁵ whereas they speak against you as evil-doers, they may by your good ¹⁶ works, which they shall behold, glorify God in the day of visitation.

13 Submit ¹⁴ yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake: whether it be to the king, as supreme;

14 Or unto governors, as unto them that are sent by him for the punishment of evil-doers, and for the praise of them that do well.

15 For so is the will of God, that ¹⁶ ye with well doing ye may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men:

16 Which ¹⁷ in time past were not a people, but are now the people of God; which had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy.

17 Dearly beloved, I beseech you as ¹⁸ stran- gers and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly ¹⁹ lusts, which war ²⁰ against the soul;

18 Having your conversation honest among the Gentiles: that, ²¹ whereas they speak against you as evil-doers, they may by your good ²² works, which they shall behold, glorify God in the day of visitation.

19 Submit ²⁰ yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake: whether it be to the king, as supreme;

20 Or unto governors, as unto them that are sent by him for the punishment of evil-doers, and for the praise of them that do well.

21 For so is the will of God, that ²² ye with well doing ye may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men:

king, in the close of the preceding chapter, spoken of regenera- tion by means of the immortal word of God, here gives us a sketch of the evidences of this change in the temper and dispo- sitions of the subjects of it—namely, meekness, simplicity, and attachment to the word of God; comparing young con- verts to "new-born babes," whose first appetite is for their "mothers' milk, pure and unadulterated." So true believers thirst for the pure word of God. For as milk, when adulterated, contains less nutriment than in its natural state, so the word of God, when mingled with vain philosophy or human inventions, contains proportionably less of divine instruction and consolation, and our growth in grace is thereby checked, if not wholly stopped. "If any man speak, let him speak as the oracles of God," Chap. iv. 11.

Our apostle adds—"If so be," or rather, "since ye have tasted that the Lord is gracious;" alluding to the case of infants, who, when they have tasted of their mothers' milk, abhor and spurn all other kinds of food; so it is with many simple and pious Christians, who, though they have little or no systema- tical or critical knowledge in divinity, in a manner instinctively reject error, and especially those errors which have an evi- dent tendency to deprecate the grace of God, and degrade the character of the Saviour. This Saviour is here, as in many parts of the Scriptures, represented as the only foundation of his church, both Jews and Gentiles: the former, "a holy nation," a peculiar people; the latter, not so formerly, but now turned from darkness unto light, and united with the former in being built upon the same foundation, joined in the same privileges, and cemented by the same grace.

The latter part of the chapter contains chiefly moral pre- cepts, especially with regard to submission to existing govern- ments, of whatever nature they may be; for the apostles and first Christians were particularly careful not to disturb the order of political society, nor to give any occasion for reproach on that pretence. I put in this and on almost every topic, the Ver 3. The word of God.—Some explain this of Christ the Logos, but ver 25 excludes it, explaining it of the preached gospel. Campbell renders this, "By the word of the living God, which abideth for ever."

Chap. II. Ver. 2. in.—Doubtless, "unmingled." Meeknight, "undis- created."

Ver. 3. As so be.—Doubtless.—"Since ye have." Meeknight, "Because ye have." &c.

Ver. 4. A living stone, &c.—See Isa. xxviii. 16; and compare Ezech. ii. 29. Ver. 7. Precious.—Greek, "preciousness" itself—that is, invaluable. Com- pare chap. i. 19.

16 As ^a free, and not ^a using your liberty for a cloak of maliciousness, but as the servants of God.

17 ^b Honour all ^c men. Love the ^d brotherhood. Fear ^e God. Honour the ^f king.

18 ^g Servants, be subject to your masters with all fear; not only to the good and gentle, but also to the froward.

19 For this is ^h thankworthy, if a man for conscience toward God endure grief, suffering wrongfully.

20 For what glory is it, if, when ye be buffeted for your faults, ye shall take it patiently? but if, when ye do well, and suffer for it, ye take it patiently, this is ⁱ acceptable with God.

21 For even hereunto ^j were ye called: because Christ also suffered ^k for us, leaving us an example, that ye should ^l follow his steps:

22 Who ^m did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth:

23 Who, when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, he threatened not; but committed ⁿ himself to him that ^o judgeth righteously:

24 Who his own self bare ^p our sins in his own body ^q on the tree, that we, being dead to sins, should live ^r unto righteousness: by ^s whose stripes ye were healed.

25 For ye were as sheep going ^t astray; but are now returned unto the ^u Shepherd and Bishop of your souls.

CHAPTER III.

1 He teacheth the duty of wives and husbands to each other. 8 exhorting all men to unity and love, 11 and to suffer persecution. 19 He declareth also the benefits of Christ toward the old world.

LIKEWISE, ye ^a wives, be in subjection to your own husbands; that, if any obey not the word, they also may without the word be won by the conversation of the wives;

2 While they behold your chaste conversation coupled with fear.

3 Whose ^b adorning let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting the hair, and of wearing of gold, or of putting on of apparel;

inspired writers of the New Testament frequently advert to the example of Christ, which on every subject was pertinent and complete; and in no point more so than on his meek submission to insults and to injuries: with his example also our apostle connects his atonement (doctrine and practice being inseparable with him,) who himself "bare our sins in his own body on the tree;" by whose stripes we are healed, and by whose death we live.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1—22. Domestic duties, and the advantages of domestic piety.—The greater part of this chapter is devoted to moral duties, and especially those of social and domestic life. Wives are directed to be in subjection to their husbands, after the example of Sarah, Abraham's wife; and that not merely on the principle of moral duty, but with the special view, in case their husbands should not be already pious, of winning them over to the truth, by the meekness, modesty, and gravity of their deportment: not recommending themselves to public notice by the splendour and gayety of their clothing, but exhibiting "the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price."

On the other hand, as all moral duties are reciprocal, so husbands are required to live with their wives "according to knowledge," that is, as knowing and observing their duty towards them; particularly honouring them as the weaker vessels, affording them every comfort and convenience which circumstances may admit, and considering them as "joint heirs of the grace of (everlasting) life;" and this particularly, that their mutual "prayers might not be hindered." The being

Ver. 16. A cloak.—Doddridge, "a veil"

Ver. 19. This is thank-worthy.—Doddridge, "graceful." Macknight, "an acceptable thing"

CHAP. III. Ver. 1. Ye wives be in subjection.—Compare Ephes. v. 22.

Ver. 3. Plaiting the hair.—The Editor of "The Ruins of Palmyra" discovered in the Palmyrene sepulchres, mummies embalmed in the ancient Egyptian manner: from their fragments which he carried off with him, was the hair of a female, plaited à la mode (still) used by the Arabian women.—And of wearing of gold.—Gill says, the Jewish women used to wear crowns (or coronets) on their heads, in the form of the city of Jerusalem, which they called a golden city. The Assyrians, in general, we know, are peculiarly fond of golden ornaments; and the Roman ladies evinced them to a degree of great extravagance. But Plutarch quotes from Crates a passage very similar to this, and worth preserving. He says, that "Neither gold, nor emeralds, nor pearls, give grace and ornament to a woman; but those things which clearly express and set off their gravity, regularity, and modesty."

A. M. cir. 4008.
A. D. cir. 64.

z Gal. 5. 1, 13.
a having.

b or, ex-tem.
c Ro 12. 10.
Phil. 2. 3.

d Ju 13. 35.
e Ps 111. 10.
f Pr 24. 21.

g Ep 6. 5.
h or, thank.

i Mat. 5. 10.
j Mat. 16. 24.

k Some read, for you.
l 1 Ju 3. 16.
Ro 12. 11.

m Is 53. 9.
n or, his.

o Lu 23. 46.
p 1. 53. 4.
q or, to.

r Ro 6. 11.
s Is 53. 6.
t Ps 119. 175.

u Eze 34. 23.
v Ju 10. 11.

a 1 Pt 2. 5.
b Tit 2. 5. 6.
c 1 Pt 2. 9, 10.

d Ps 45. 13.
e Ro 2. 29.

f 1 Pt 2. 9.
g Mat 5. 5.
h 1 Pt 12. 12.

i or, living to me.
j 1 Ju 3. 15.
k Mat 5. 44.

l Ep 4. 32.
m 1 Pt 3. 12.
n or, yoke.

o 1 Pt 1. 7.
p Ro 8. 24.
q Is 53. 12.

r Ps 119. 46.
s or, yoke.
t or, yoke.

4 But let it be the hidden man of the heart, in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a ^a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price.

5 For after this manner in the old time the holy women also, who trusted in God, adorned themselves, being in subjection unto their own husbands:

6 Even as Sara obeyed Abraham, calling him ^b lord: whose ^c daughters ye are, as long as ye do well, and are not afraid with any amazement.

7 Likewise, ye ^d husbands, dwell with them according to knowledge, giving honour unto the wife, as unto the weaker vessel, and as being heirs together of the grace of life; that your prayers be not hindered.

8 Finally, be ye all of one ^e mind, having compassion one of another, ^f love ^g as brethren, be pitiful, be courteous:

9 Not ^h rendering evil for evil, or railing for railing; but contrariwise blessing; knowing that ye are thereunto called, that ye should inherit a blessing.

10 For ⁱ he that will love life, and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil, and his lips that they speak no guile:

11 Let him eschew evil, and do good; let him seek peace, and ensue it.

12 For the eyes of the Lord are over the righteous, and his ears are open unto their prayers: but the face of the Lord ^j is against them that do evil.

13 And ^k who ^l is he that will harm you, if ye be followers of that which is good?

14 But and if ye suffer for righteousness' sake, happy are ye: and ^m be not afraid of their terror, neither be troubled;

15 But sanctify the Lord God in your hearts: and ⁿ be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and ^o fear:

16 Having a good conscience; that, whereas

"heirs together," or joint heirs, "of the grace of life," says Archbishop Leighton, "is that which most strongly binds all these duties on the hearts of husbands and wives, and most strongly indeed binds their hearts together, and makes them one." But "the breach of conjugal love, the jars and contentions of husband and wife, do, out of doubt, so weaken and embitter their spirits, that they are exceedingly unfit for prayer." And those who pray together should not only have hearts in tune within themselves in their own frame, but tuned together, especially husband and wife.

On the other hand, it is most certain that nothing contributes more to the peace of families, and especially between the heads of those families themselves, than the observance of mutual and family prayer. Their hearts must be better indeed, that can indulge resentment against those with whom they are in the habit of daily uniting at the throne of grace.

Our apostle therefore strongly urges the "pilgrims and strangers" to whom he wrote, in all cases to "seek peace and pursue it"—to chase it, as if it were the most important game—to seek it, as it were gold and jewels. But if peace prove utterly unattainable, and Christians are called to suffer for conscience' sake, then let them sanctify the Lord God in their hearts, and rejoice in a conscience void of offence both toward God and man; remembering, that it is better to suffer for well doing than for evil; in which Christ is our example, "who suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us unto God." One sentence particularly merits our attention, as it reproves equally a forward talkativeness, and a foolish backwardness in speak-

Ver. 6. Not afraid with any amazement.—Thus appears to us, as to Doddridge, to have a plain reference to the case of Sarah, but in a way which, we confess, we do not understand. Sarah was evidently confounded, and told a falsehood, which we can ascribe only to her "amazement" and alarm, on finding her secret thoughts discovered. But Macknight renders the passage, "whose daughters ye have become by doing well, and not being frightened with any terror."

Ver. 11. Eschew—i. e. avoid, or, as in the Psalm here quoted, "Depart from."—Ense—i. e. pursue it.

Ver. 12. Be not afraid of their terror, &c.—See Isa. vii. 12; which Lathrop renders, "Fear not the object of their fear, meaning their idols."

Ver. 15. Sanctify the Lord God.—The most ancient MSS. read, "The Lord Christ." So the Alexandrian, Vatican, and Codex Ephraim, and three junior MSS. Likewise the Vulgate, Syriac, Coptic, and Armenian Versions, and some of the early Fathers: yet it is rejected by Griesbach, as not in the far greater majority of MSS.

they speak evil of you, as of evil-doers, they may be ashamed that falsely accuse your good conversation in Christ.

17 For it is better, if the will of God be so, that ye suffer for well doing, than for evil doing.

18 For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit:

19 By which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison;

20 Which sometime were disobedient, when once the long-suffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing, wherein few, that is, eight souls were saved by water.

21 The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us (not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God,) by the resurrection of Jesus Christ:

22 Who is gone into heaven, and is on the right hand of God; angels and authorities and powers being made subject unto him.

CHAPTER IV.

1 He exhorts them to cease from sin by the example of Christ, and the consideration of the general end that now approaches: 12 and comforts them against persecution.

FORASMUCH then as Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh, arm yourselves likewise with the same mind: for he that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin:

2 That he no longer should live the rest of ing on religious subjects: we are at all times to be "ready to give to every one that asks, a reason of the hope that is in us;" while, at the same time, instead of obtruding our opinions or experience upon others inprudently or unseasonably, we must act with meekness toward them, and reverence before God.

This brings us to a passage of peculiar difficulty, and which admits of various interpretations, whereof we shall name but two. It is here said, (ver. 14.) that Christ by his Spirit "went and preached unto the spirits in prison;" but the questions are—When, and where?

1. It was by some an early opinion, that when Christ died, he descended into the place of punishment, and preached to the infidel inhabitants of the old world there imprisoned; in consequence of which some, or (as others think) all of them, were converted and delivered. (But neither this, nor any other text that we are aware of, speaks of conversion after death; but the Scriptures universally represent the dead as waiting the event of the final advent, when all must "appear before the judgment seat of Christ;" nor does there seem either reason, or scriptural authority, for believing, that a whole generation of sinners, of the most abandoned character, should be privileged with a second opportunity of mercy—another day of grace. "To-day, if ye will hear his voice!—Now is the accepted time!—How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation!"

2. The general current of protestant expositors, among whom are Doddridge and Macknight, are therefore of opinion, that the preaching here referred to, took place in the days of Noah, by the instrumentality of himself and some of his family, who were inspired teachers. The following is the substance of their interpretation:—"For Christ also once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, (that he might bring us to God,) being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit [of God.] By which [Spirit] also he [formerly] went and preached unto the spirits [now] in prison; which were disobedient, when once the long-suffering of God waited in the days of Noah [120 years]

Ver. 18. Quickened by the Spirit—Many able critics, as Vatablus, Schenck, &c., understand this of the divine nature of Christ; and Bishop Huet, of the human Spirit, in a separate state, but the resurrection of our Lord is elsewhere attributed to the Holy Spirit—(see Rom. 1. 4, and note; Rom. viii. 11.) sometimes to Christ himself, but then by a power delegated from the Father, John x. 18. See also our note on Heb. ix. 14.

Ver. 19. To the spirits in prison—The state of these human spirits in prison appears equivalent to that of the fallen angels, "reserved in everlasting chains," Jude, ver. 6. Rom. viii. 19. "where waters indeed, he find a purgation, which we can find nowhere in the Bible." But 1. Purgatory is, according to their own doctrine, for venial offences only, and these were evidently guilty of mortal sin, and must then have been consigned to hell, from whence they had no delayance. 2. These were so far from being delivered, that the apostle describes them as in prison when he wrote, "Christ, as God, had gone by his Spirit, insuring his servant Noah, to denounce the approaching deluge, and preach repentance, to the merciless and ungodly persons, who perished in their sins, and whose 'swords' were in 'the prison' of hell, when the Apostle wrote, being confined there till the judgment of the great day." This appears to be the genuine sense of the passage, as it is perfectly agreeable to the whole of the context.—(Barnes.)

Ver. 20. Which sometime—Macknight, "formerly."—Were saved by water—Doddridge, "safely carried through the water;" and he adds, that Raphaelus abundantly justifies this sense of the particle (dia) when used with a genitive case.

A M. cr.
A D. cr.
64

r. c. 221

s. 2C. 6. 5

t. R. 4. 25

u. It. 12. 7

v. Ge. c. 6. 5.

w. Ep. 5. 26

x. Ac. 5. 37

y. Ro. 10. 10

z. Ep. 1. 23

a. 19. 2. 5

b. Ro. 6. 7

c. 2. 10. 515

d. 1. C. 6. 11

e. Ac. 13. 45

f. M. c. 24. 9

g. R. 14. 13

h. Ju. 5. 9

i. Lu. 21. 36

j. 1 Co. 13. 7

k. or, int.

l. He. 12. 19

m. R. 12. 6

n. Lu. 12. 42

o. 1 Co. 10. 31

p. Re. 16. 1

his time in the flesh to the lusts of men, but to the will of God.

3 For the time past of our life may suffice us to have wrought the will of the Gentiles, when we walked in lasciviousness, lusts, excess of wine, revellings, banquetings and abominable idolatries:

4 Wherein they think it strange that ye run not with them to the same excess of riot, speaking evil of you:

5 Who shall give account to him that is ready to judge the quick and the dead.

6 For for this cause was the gospel preached also to them that are dead, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit.

7 But the end of all things is at hand: be ye therefore sober, and watch unto prayer.

8 And above all things have fervent charity among yourselves: for charity shall cover the multitude of sins.

9 Use hospitality one to another without grudging.

10 As every man hath received the gift, even so minister the same one to another as good stewards of the manifold grace of God.

11 If any man speak, let him speak as the oracles of God; if any man minister, let him do it as of the ability which God giveth: that God in all things may be glorified through Jesus Christ, to whom be praise and dominion for ever and ever. Amen.

while the ark was preparing, wherein few, that is, eight souls, were saved by, or through, the water." In the latter clause, we confess that we give preference to the common version, notwithstanding the critical authorities by which the other may be justified. For, 1. It was by the water probably that Noah and his family were, in the first instance, saved from the rage of that maddened, depraved, and persecuting generation. 2. It is more certain, that by the rising waters they were saved from the overwhelming effects of the deluge from above; from which, on land, it would have required a more signal miracle to defend them, when even the highest mountains were overflowed. And, 3. This sense of being saved by water, best agrees with the verse following, "The like figure," or "The antitype to which (even) baptism doth now save us;" for baptism was unquestionably the ordinance by which the first Christians were separated from the world, even as Noah and his family from their infidel neighbours.

Once more: On Baptism itself we remark, that the most essential thing is, not the washing or purifying of the flesh, but "the answer of a good conscience," which the best expositors suppose to refer to the questions publicly proposed to the candidates for this ordinance in the Christian church, and in their answers to which, they only renounced the world, the flesh, and the devil, with all their works.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1-19. Christians exhorted to patience in suffering, and to cease and fidelity in the improvement of their talents.—It was the doctrine of Paul, repeatedly and earnestly inculcated, that believers being "crucified with Christ," have "crucified the flesh, with the lusts thereof;" which is also the doctrine inculcated in the opening of this chapter: "Christ having suffered for us in the flesh, arm yourselves (says St. Peter) with the same mind, for he that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from [the practise of] sin." And here it appears that he is addressing himself to Gentiles, for he says, "the time past of our life may suffice us, to have wrought the will of the Gen-

Ver. 21. The like figure whereunto—Doddridge, "The antitype to which," meaning THE ARK. But Macknight says, "The native (which) being in the Greek neuter, it cannot denote the ark, which is feminine, but (times) 'water,' which is neuter."

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1. He that hath suffered in the flesh—That is, as St. Paul expresses it, "hath crucified the flesh." See Gal. ii. 20. v. 24. v. 25. v. 26. v. 27. v. 28. v. 29. v. 30. v. 31. v. 32. v. 33. v. 34. v. 35. v. 36. v. 37. v. 38. v. 39. v. 40. v. 41. v. 42. v. 43. v. 44. v. 45. v. 46. v. 47. v. 48. v. 49. v. 50. v. 51. v. 52. v. 53. v. 54. v. 55. v. 56. v. 57. v. 58. v. 59. v. 60. v. 61. v. 62. v. 63. v. 64. v. 65. v. 66. v. 67. v. 68. v. 69. v. 70. v. 71. v. 72. v. 73. v. 74. v. 75. v. 76. v. 77. v. 78. v. 79. v. 80. v. 81. v. 82. v. 83. v. 84. v. 85. v. 86. v. 87. v. 88. v. 89. v. 90. v. 91. v. 92. v. 93. v. 94. v. 95. v. 96. v. 97. v. 98. v. 99. v. 100.

Ver. 2. Arm yourselves—The adjective here used is not his what is both unadvised and deplorable; and is applied by Josephus to the unnatural lusts indulged in the Pagan world. See Parkhurst's Lex. in Abominatio.

Ver. 3. For for this cause was the gospel preached also to them that are dead—Doddridge, Macknight, and others, explain this figuratively in reference to the Gentiles, who are said, Ephe. ii. 1, to be dead in trespasses and sins.

Ver. 4. Above all things have fervent charity—(Greek, agape) i. e. love, intense love.—Multitude of sins—Salomon Prov. x. 12. says, "all sins" evidently meaning the sins, or faults of those we love, for it is put in opposition to "Hatred (which) strengthneth strife."

Ver. 10. As every man hath received the gift—i. e. a spiritual gift, as of teaching, translating, healing, &c.

Ver. 11. The oracles of God—The Greeks used this term in reference to the responses received from their deities, or rather from their priests in their names. Stephen applies this term to the laws given to Moses, calling them lively, or living oracles, because delivered by the voice of God. Acts vii. 38.

12 Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you:

13 But rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings; that, when his glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy.

14 If ye be reproached for the name of Christ, happy are ye; for the spirit of glory and of God resteth upon you: on their part he is evil spoken of, but on your part he is glorified.

15 But let none of you suffer as a murderer, or as a thief, or as an evil-doer, or as a busy-body in other men's matters.

16 Yet if any man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed; but let him glorify God on this behalf.

17 For the time is come that judgment must begin at the house of God: and if it first begin at us, what shall the end be of them that obey not the gospel of God?

18 And if the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear?

files, when we walked in lasciviousness," &c.; "wherein they think it strange that ye [still] run not with them into the same excess of riot" as formerly. The apostle here couples himself with these once licentious Gentiles; yet, as we know that he was not a Gentile, so we have no reason to believe that he ever joined in such excesses; but he joins himself with them, as is not uncommon, in order that he might reprove them without offence.

The first object of the gospel ministry is the conversion of sinners; for this end was it preached to the generations now literally dead, as it is also now preached to us. So Archbishop Leighton understands it; and, we think, justly; and, he adds, to be judged according to men in the flesh, is to die to sin, or that sin die to us; (as in verses 1 and 2;) and to "live according to God in the Spirit," is to live to his glory: "Not unto themselves, (as Paul expresses it,) but unto him who died for them, and rose again." (2 Cor. v. 15.) And to enforce this upon those to whom he wrote, he adds, "the end of all things is at hand," which, though it may have a reference to the destruction of Jerusalem, has also a farther reference to a greater event with which that is generally connected, namely, the second coming of our Lord. This, indeed, may be still at a distance; but our time to appear before his presence, "who is ready to judge the quick and the dead," to some cannot be far distant, and may not be to any of us.

But this event is here mentioned with a practical design: a three-fold duty is here recommended.—Sobriety, watchfulness, and prayer; and, of the three, the last is evidently the chief, and is here so meant.

"Prayer," says the prelate above referred to, "is not a smooth expression, or a well-contrived force of words; not the product of a ready memory, or of a rich invention, exerting itself in the performance. These may draw a neat picture of it, but still the life is wanting. The motion of the heart (of love, of holy and divine affection, makes prayer real, and lively, and acceptable to the living God, to whom it is presented; the pouring out of the heart to Him that made it, and therefore hears and understands what it speaks, and how it is moved and affected in calling on him. . . . All other excellence in prayer is but the outside and fashion of it: this is the life of it."

Peter now proceeds to the moral virtues, at the head of which, like Paul, (1 Cor. xiii. 1,) he places charity, or love; "for charity," (says he,) shall (or will) cover a multitude of sins." How it does this, Archbishop Leighton thus explains:—1. It is skillful in putting the fairest construction on things doubtful. 2. Where the thing is plainly a sin, then will love consider what may lessen it most; whether it was by surprise, through ignorance, or human frailty. 3. All reproof will be sweetened by that compassion which flows from love. 4. What is wrong

A M. cir. 406
A D. cir. 64

q 1 Co. 3.13.

r Ja 1.2.

s 2 Ti. 2.12.

t Mat. 5.11

u 1. 30.12

v Je. 23.19

w Ps. 27.5.

x Ro. 8.17.

y Jo. 4.15.

z Ac. 29.28.

a vi. as

b 1 Co. 9.17.

c 1 Th. 3.3.

d or, over-

e 1 Th. 4.12

f He. 13.39

g 2 Ti. 1.8.

h Ep. 5.21

i Ja. 16.

19 Wherefore let them that suffer according to the will of God commit the keeping of their souls to him in well doing, as unto a faithful Creator.

CHAPTER V.

1 He exhorteth the elders to feed their flocks, 5 the younger to obey, 8 and all to be sober, watchful, and constant in the faith: 9 to resist the cruel adversary the devil.

THE elders which are among you I exhort, who am also an elder, and a witness of the sufferings of Christ, and also a partaker of the glory that shall be revealed:

2 Feed the flock of God which is among you, taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint, but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind;

3 Neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being ensamples to the flock.

4 And when the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away.

5 Likewise, ye younger, submit yourselves unto the elder. Yea, all of you be subject one to another, and be clothed with humility: for God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble.

will be forgiven. "Those are grossly mistaken, who think it greatness of spirit to resent wrongs, and baseness to forgive them: on the contrary, it is the only excellent spirit, scarcely to feel a wrong; or, feeling, straightly to forgive it."—With Christian love, Peter, as his brother Paul had before done, (Rom. xii. 13,) associates hospitality; a virtue always excellent, but of peculiar importance in some countries, and in times of persecution.

The venerable apostle next proceeds to enforce the faithful exercise of all those talents, with which they were intrusted, and for which, as stewards, they must give account. If any man speak as a public teacher, he is required to speak in consistency with the well known and authentic oracles of God: or if any man minister in the church in an inferior capacity, let him do it of the ability which God giveth; all having in view one object, "that God in all things may be glorified through Jesus Christ," to whom Peter (as Paul had often done) offers a doxology, expressive of faith in his supreme divinity.

Peter now warns his brethren of "the fiery trial"—of the dreadful scenes of persecution—which they must expect; but which he guards them against considering as strange and unprecedented, since all that they could suffer was, at most, partaking of only a small portion of the sufferings of Jesus Christ; which, at his appearing, would be rewarded with a rich participation of his glory and felicity. "But," says he, "let none of you suffer as a murderer, or a thief, a malefactor, or a factious or seditious person."

In warning Christians (both Jewish and Gentile) of these terrible calamities, our apostle states, that judgment is about to "begin at the house of God," that is, with his own people; as it is said, Ezek. ix. 6, "Begin at my sanctuary;" and the meaning seems to be, that the divine judgments should first visit the Christians, for the purification of the church, and then fall with a weight of terrible destruction on the unbelieving Jews. And "if the righteous scarcely (or with difficulty) be saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear?" This, according to the venerable Leighton, "imports not any uncertainty or hazard in the thing itself, as to the end, in respect of the purpose and performance of God; but only the great difficulties and hard encounters in the way, that they go through so many temptations and tribulations, so many fights without, and tears within. . . . And yet through all these they are brought safely home. There is another strength that tears, which bears them up and brings them through. But the saints argue the difficulty of their course, and that it is not so easy a thing to come to heaven as most imagine."

CHAP. V. Ver. 1—14. The elders exhorted to feed the church—the younger to obey—and all to be sober, watchful, and to resist the devil.—The opening of this chapter particularly merits our

Ver. 12. The fiery trial.—Namely, of affliction, or rather persecution; alluding to the trial of gold in a furnace. See chap. i. 7.

Ver. 13. Un a his glory shall be revealed.—Namely, at the last day.

Ver. 14. Spirit of glory and of God.—Alluding to Is. xi. 2.

Ver. 15. Avoidable.—Doddridge and Macknight, "a multiplier"—"thoroughly"—An inspector of another; meddling with other people's concerns. Leitchner, Doddridge, and others, have remarked, that this character, from its being associated with the worst criminals, must here intend some thing more than a "bitter." It properly means one that pries into affairs, with which he has, in fact, no concern; and must here refer to public or state affairs, and, as we come to, properly describes a political busy-body—a factious or seditious person.—The Jews were remarkable for this crime.

Ver. 16. Suffer as a Christian.—The only passages in which this term "Christian" occurs are this verse, and Acts xi. 26; xxvi. 28.—Let him glorify God on this behalf—i. e. as suffering for Christ's sake.

Ver. 18. Scarcely be saved.—Doddridge and Macknight. Be saved with difficulty. This appears to be quoted from the LXX. of Prov. xi. 31. The original term rendered scarcely, signifies with difficulty, as in Acts xiv. 18; xxvii. 7, 8, 16.

Ver. 19. A faithful Creator.—Who will preserve their separate spirits, and restore to them their bodies, at the resurrection.

CHAP. V. Ver. 1. Who am also an elder.—Hammond, "a fellow elder."

Ver. 2. Taking the oversight thereof.—Hammond, "governing it." Doddridge, "discharge the episcopal office." Macknight, "The Bishop's office."

Ver. 3. Neither as being lords.—Macknight, as "lording it." The word strictly means to tyrannize, or domineer. See Macknight, and compare Mat. xx. 25.

Ver. 4. The chief Shepherd.—In Spain, it seems, the flocks often contain 10,000 sheep, divided into ten trunks, with 50 under shepherds, and as many dogs. See Orient. Cust. No. 577.—Fideth not away.—As was the case with those gardeners which were bestowed as rewards in the public games.

Ver. 5. Be clothed with humility.—Watby and others explain this of a frock which was worn by slaves and working men over their meaner dress; and the expression implies, that humility should be conspicuous above all other virtues.

6 Humble yourselves therefore under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time:

7 Casting all your care upon him; for he careth for you.

8 Be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour:

9 Whom resist steadfast in the faith, knowing that the same afflictions are accomplished in your brethren that are in the world.

10 But the God of all grace, who hath called us unto his eternal glory by Christ Jesus, after that ye have suffered a while, make

A M. 10
A 10 or 64

(1 K. 5:1)
10 N. 5:22
6 R. 12:12
6 13:17
P. 15: 4, 16

—
q. 14: 13, 21
r. 2 16: 3, 4
s. 20: 10, 6
12

1 18: 38, 7, 8
u. 13: 11
v. 12: 1, 19, 19
w. 15: 15, 1
x. 16: 16, 16
y. 17: 16, 23

you perfect, & establish, & strengthen, & settle you.

11 To him be glory and dominion for ever and ever. Amen.

12 By Silvanus, a faithful brother unto you, as I suppose, I have written briefly, exhorting, and testifying that this is the true grace of God wherein ye stand.

13 The church that is at Babylon, elected together with you, saluteth you; and so doth Marcus my son.

14 Greet ye one another with a kiss of charity. Peace be with you all that are in Christ Jesus. Amen.

observation. "The elders among you I exhort," says the apostle Peter, "who am also an elder," or fellow-elder. "Elders here, as in other places, (says Archbishop Leighton) is a name, not of age, but of office; yet the office is named by that age, which is, or ought to be, most suitably qualified for it; importing that men, though not aged, yet if called to that office, should be noted for such wisdom and gravity of mind and carriage as may give that authority, and command that respect, which is requisite for persons in their calling: not nobles, as Paul speaks, (1 Tim. iii. 6) but such as young Timothy himself was in humility and diligence, (Phil. iii. 20). The name of Elders sometimes denotes civil rulers, sometimes pastors of the church. Here it appears that pastors are meant, as the exhortation of feeding the flock evinces; . . . and then the title given to Christ, in the encouragement that is added, confirms this interpretation—The chief Shepherd."

2. The person exhorting styles himself a co-presbyter, or fellow-elder, with them. "The duty of mutual exhortation lies on Christians at large, though it be little known among the greatest part; but, truly, pastors should be, as in other duties, so particularly in this, eminent and exemplary in their intercourse and converse; saying often one to another, 'Oh! let us remember to what we are called; to how high and hence a charge; to what holiness and diligence; how great is the hazard of our miscarriage, and how great the reward of our fidelity!'"

It was the privilege of Peter, as of several other of the apostles, to be a witness of the sufferings of Christ; and he was one of those to whom he promised a participation of his glory: much of this he had already witnessed, in the transfiguration and ascension of his Lord; and he was one of those to whom it was assured, that they should "sit on twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel." (Mat. xix. 28.)

Ver. 8. Whom he resist—Doddridge and Macknight, "Swallow up." Ver. 12. By Silvanus—Probably that Silvanus, the same who was Paul's companion, 2 Cor. i. 19, &c.—as I suppose—Rather, "as I reckon;" or conclude, as Rota. in 28; in. 18. "The phrase does not imply doubt."—Doddridge.

Ver. 13. The church that is at Babylon—Literally, "She at Babylon" which some explain of Peter's wife. The word church is, however, supplied in the Syriac, Vulgate, and other ancient versions; and by Companion in the Babylonian—There were two Babylons; one in Egypt, the other in Syria. But Lardner says, there is no mention of either church or bishop at the former place, by any of the writers of the four last centuries. Many commentators, therefore, (among whom are Beca, Lightfoot, and Benedict) refer to the great Babylon of Assyria: Lardner, however, objects, that this city was "almost

But to return to this apostolical charge. These elders are enjoined to feed the flock of God. "Every step of the way of our salvation hath on it the print of infinite majesty, wisdom, and goodness, and this among the rest—that men, sinful, weak men, are made subservient in that great work of bringing Christ and souls to meet; that by the foolishness of preaching, (or what appears so to carnal wisdom,) the chosen of God are called, and come unto Jesus, and are made rise unto salvation; and that the life which is conveyed to them by the word of life in the hands of poor men, is by the same means preserved and advanced. . . . Jesus Christ descended to purchase a church, and ascended to provide and furnish it, to send down his spirit. He ascended and gave gifts, particularly for the work of the ministry; and the great use of them is this—to feed the flock of God."—(Archbishop Leighton.)

In the discharge of this high office, however, they are cautioned against constrainedness, covetousness, and usurpation; not for filthy lucre, neither as being lords over God's heritage, but examples to the flock. And now comes the reward. "When the Chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown—a crown of glory—a crown that fadeth not away;" that is, an immortal crown. Thus does our venerable and inspired apostle exhort and animate to duty his brethren in the ministry. The rest of the chapter is miscellaneous, addressed to the younger Christians generally, exhorting them to humility and submission under the mighty hand of God, casting all their care upon him, and at the same time cautioning them against the active malice of their great enemy, the devil; against whom we can never be too much upon our guard.

"Now let the fields all be strong,
And make Jehovah's arm their song,
His shield is spread o'er every saint;
And thus protected—who shall faint?"—Doddridge deserted in the apostles' days," and farther argues from chap. x. 13, 17, that Peter wrote from some part of the Roman Empire, which at that time did not include Babylon, then not the dominion of the Parthians. These difficulties have led to a third opinion, which, indeed we have adopted from Mr. Horne, in our table of Catholic Epistles. This is, that by Babylon, Peter meant Rome; as it is evident John did in the Apocalypse, on account of its being the metropolis of industry. This opinion has the general testimony of antiquity. Eusebius, who adopts the authorities of Clement of Alexandria, and Papias, Bishop of Jerusalem, both of the second century. It was adopted by Jerome, by all writers of the church of Rome; and, among Protestants, by Gertrius, Whitby, Hammond, Lardner, Macknight, and many others—Morice—Probably the Evangelist. See Introduction to his Gospel.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE FIRST EPISTLE OF PETER.

[As the design of this Epistle is excellent, remarks Macknight, so is its execution, in the judgment of the best critics, does not fall short of its design. Osborn says of the first Epistle of Peter, "It is one of the finest books of the New Testament;" and of the second, "that it is a most excellent Epistle, and is written with great strength and majesty." Erasmus pronounces the first Epistle to be "worthy the praise of the Apostles, and full of apostolical dignity and authority;" and adds, "It is sparing in words, but full of sense."—25] Peter's style, as Dr. Backwell justly observes, "expresses the noble vigour and exaltation of his spirit, the full knowledge he had of Christianity, and the strong assurance he had of the truth and certainty of his doctrine," and he writes with the authority of the first man in the college of the Apostles. He writes with that quickness and rapidity of style, with that noble simplicity of some of the funeral oratorians, and majestic of Cicero, still preserving its true reason, and natural analogy, which are always marks of a sublime genius that you can scarcely conceive the pulses of his discourse, and estimation of his periods. The great Joseph Seelye calls Peter's first Epistle impetuous; and I think he was more judicious than to exclude the second, though he did not name it. A noble majesty and becoming freedom are what distinguish it; for a devout and indignant person cannot find him without a keen attention and a full concern. The configuration of the world, and the punishment of angels and men, in the third chapter of the second Epistle, is described in such strong and terrible terms, such awful circumstances, that in the deeper part we see the planetary heavens and this our earth wrapped up with devouring flames; hear the groans of an expiring world, and the crashes of nature falling into universal ruin. And what a solemn and moving Eriphonoma, or primum doloris, is that! "Since, therefore, all these things must be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in holy conversation and godliness—in all parts of holy and Christian life—in all instances of justice and charity?" The meek soul, and lowest imagination, says an ancient man, "cannot think of that time, and the awful descriptions we meet with of it in this place, and several others of Holy Writ, without the greatest emotion and deepest impressions." "As the true Church of Christ," says Dr. Clarke, "has generally been in a state of suffering, the Epistles of St. Peter have ever been most highly prized by all believers." That which we have just finished is an admirable letter, containing some of the most important maxims and consolations for the church in the wilderness. No Christian can read it without deriving from it both life and life. Ministers, especially, should study it well, that they may know how to comfort their flocks when in persecution or adversity. He never speaks to good in any spiritual case who is not furnished out of the Divine treasury. God's words invite, solace, and commandment; on them a man may confidently rely. The words of man may be true, but they are not infallible. This is the character of God's word alone."

To these valuable remarks on the varied excellences and uses of this noble Epistle, it may be only necessary to add, that it is not only important in these respects, but is a rich treasury of Christian doctrines and duties, from which the mind may be enriched, and the heart improved, with the most exalting sentiments.—Beagster.

THE SECOND EPISTLE GENERAL OF PETER.

[The writer of this Epistle calls himself "Simon Peter," (ch. i. 1. Ac. xv. 14. G.) an apostle of Jesus Christ; alludes to circumstances and facts which agree with what Peter, (ch. i. 13—16. John xxi. 19.) calls it his second Epistle, (ch. i. 1.) and speaks of his "beloved brother Paul," (ch. i. 15.) It must, therefore, either be the work of the Apostle Peter, or of one who personated him; but this latter supposition, that of forging the name of an apostle, and personating him, is wholly inconsistent with the remarkable energy with which the writer promulgates holiness, and the solemn yet affectionate manner, in which he testifies against the decisions of those by whom it was dictated. Some doubts, however, of its genuineness and divine authority were entertained in the primitive church, which Jerome ascribes to the supposed dissimilarity of style between it and the first Epistle. But, being written only a short time before the Apostle's martyrdom, (ch. i. 14.) though apparently but a short time after the first, (ch. i. 13, 15.) it did not have time so publicly exposed by him, and chiefly known to be his, during his lifetime, the scrupulous caution of the church, hesitated about admitting it into the sacred canon, till internal evidence fully convinced the most competent judges that it was entitled to that high distinction.—Beagster.

CHAPTER I.

Confirming them in hope of the increase of God's grace, 5 he exhorts them, by faith, and good works, to make their calling sure. 12 Whereof he is careful to remind them, knowing that his death is at hand: 16 and warns them to be constant in the faith of Christ, who is the true Son of God, by the eye-witness of the apostles, by holding his majesty, and by the testimony of the Father, and the prophets.

SIMON Peter, a servant and an apostle of Jesus Christ, to them that have obtained like precious faith with us through the righteousness of God and our Saviour Jesus Christ:

2 Grace and peace be multiplied unto you through the knowledge of God, and of Jesus our Lord,

3 According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue:

4 Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises: that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust.

5 And besides this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge;

6 And to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness;

7 And to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity.

8 For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ.

9 But he that lacketh these things is blind, and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins.

10 Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election

A. M. cir. 4069
A. D. cir. 65
a or, Symeon.
b Ep 4.3
c our God and Saviour.
d Da. 1.1 6.25
e Ps 34. 11 1 Th 4.5
f or, by.
g 2 Ti 1.9
h 2 Co 7.1
i He 12.10
j 2 Th 2.13
k Ph 4.8
l Ph 1.9
m 1 Co 9.25
n Ja 1.4
o 1 Ti 4.7
p Ja 13.31, 33
q 1 Co 13.1
r alle.
s Jr 15.2 6
t Ja 2.9
u 2.17
v 1 Ju 3.19, Re 22.14
w 2.1
x 1 Jo 2.18, 19
y 2 Co 4.2
z Jo 17.1
a Ps 119. 105
b Pr 6.23
c 2.16
d 1 Jo 1.7

sue; for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall:

11 For so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

12 Wherefore I will not be negligent to put you always in remembrance of these things, though ye know them, and be established in the present truth.

13 Yea, I think it meet, as long as I am in this tabernacle, to stir you up by putting you in remembrance;

14 Knowing that shortly I must put off this my tabernacle, even as our Lord Jesus Christ hath showed me.

15 Moreover I will endeavour that ye may be able after my decease to have these things always in remembrance.

16 For we have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eye-witnesses of his majesty.

17 For he received from God the Father honour and glory, when there came such a voice to him from the excellent glory, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.

18 And this voice which came from heaven we heard, when we were with him in the holy mount.

19 We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arise in your hearts:

20 Knowing this first, that no prophecy of the scripture is of any private interpretation.

21 For the prophecy came not in old time

CHAP. I. Ver. 1—21. The writer, after his apostolical salutation, congratulates all true believers on their privileges, and exhorts to universal obedience.—The Epistle opens with an avowal of some of the most important and consolatory truths of the New Testament. Not only does it contain an express testimony to the divinity of our Saviour, but it attributes our salvation solely to the merits of his righteousness, and the agency of his Spirit, through the instrumentality of faith:—faith, which is rendered precious by its object and its effects; bringing us into a saving acquaintance with “exceeding great and precious promises,” and animating us to the observance of every Christian virtue. And in these Peter urges us to the utmost diligence and energy, in order that our calling and election may thereby be certified to our own minds, and demonstrated to others; and that finally, we may obtain an abundant—that is, a certain and triumphant admission into the heavenly and everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ; and thus not only be conquerors, but “more than conquerors”—not only gain a victory, but a triumph also; and be received with the plaudits of our Lord and Master:—“Well come, thou good and faithful servant! enter thou into the joy of thy Lord!” (Mat. xxv. 21.)

The apostle Peter now enters into his own circumstances and feelings. He was at this time, we suppose, at Rome, with his “beloved brother Paul,” as he calls him, (chap. iii. 15.) “ready to be offered” as a sacrifice for the truth, and waiting for the summons to “put off his fleshly tabernacle,” and put on robes of celestial glory. And the object of the present

CHAP. I. Ver. 1. Simon Peter.—Symeon seems to have been the Hebrew word of promulgating this name, being used by the Apostle James in Acts xv. 14. This Epistle was not generally received in the Christian church before the fourth century. There are, however, several published abridgements to it in the Apostolical Fathers; and, from the fourth century, it seems to have been generally received, and read among the other Scriptures; and though its inspiration was at first doubted by some, it was not reckoned among the spurious Scriptures, then too common. The Epistle is however, so excellent, and (except chap. ii.) so similar in style and spirit to the first Epistle that we believe it is now almost universally admitted into the sacred canon.—The righteousness of God and our Saviour.—Margin, “of our God and Saviour.” [This is certainly the literal and proper rendering of the original, and should have been retained in the text: it is an absolute proof that St. Peter calls Jesus God, in the most proper sense of the term.]—Eye-witness.—So to our Rev. Dr. Wordsworth, Middleton, and Pusey Smith.

Ver. 3. To—Margn.—By “glory and virtue”—if we take the textual rendering, it means that we are called to prize the one, and enjoy the other: if the margin, it may import, that by a display of these in the gospel, we are called to embrace it.

Ver. 4. The divine nature.—Doddridge, “A divine nature;” i. e. the new nature conferred in regeneration.

Ver. 5. Add to your faith virtue.—Doddridge, and many others, take “virtue” here in the sense of courage, or fortitude.—“Add to, or associate with, your faith, courage to profess it, and knowledge to defend it,” &c.

Ver. 7. Charity.—See note on 1 Peter iv. 8.

Epistle avowedly was, to leave behind him a memorial of his principles and experience, that the church might always “have them in remembrance.” At the same time, he takes the opportunity to assure them of the truth and certainty of the important facts on which his faith and principles were built. For whereas he had but named them of the power and glory which should attend the second coming of the Lord Jesus from heaven, he had himself received a demonstration of it, when he witnessed his transfiguration on the mount, and heard from heaven that important testimony, “This is my well-beloved Son, in whom I am well-pleased.”

This to him was fully satisfactory, but to them he recommends “a more sure word of prophecy”—meaning the evidence arising from the fulfilment of the sacred Scriptures; particularly in reference to Christ’s incarnation and sufferings, death and resurrection; the fulfilment of which was an assured earnest of his second coming, and future glory.

In this interesting passage, three things particularly present themselves to our attention:—

1. The nature of prophetic evidence. It was a light (or lamp) shining in a dark (or obscure) place; and dark indeed would the world have been, but for the lamp of divine revelation. We see this in the state of the heathen world, which was like the darkness of Egypt—“darkness that might be (and must have been) felt.” Even in the Jewish world, it was like a midnight sky, illuminated only by the twinkling of the stars, until at length the Mosiac dispensation was established, with its system of types and emblems, which made the Jewish church

Ver. 9. Is Paul.—i. e. partially so.—Cannot see afar off.—Doddridge, “short-sighted.” But B. Chart explains the word here used, (anopauon), as meaning to wink the eyes against the light—not being able to endure it. He is followed by Marknight.

Ver. 10. Make your calling and election sure.—Marknight, “firm.” That is, by a holy life demonstrate your calling and election.

Ver. 11. An entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly.—i. e. a free admission and a hearty welcome.

Ver. 12. In the present truth.—i. e. in that of which he was now treating: namely, that diligence in religion was the way to perseverance.

Ver. 13. I think it meet.—&c.—This is supposed by some to be a sort of apology for writing so soon after his first exile: i. e. probably within a year.

Ver. 14. Put off this my tabernacle.—Compare 2 Cor. v. 1—5.

Ver. 15. Moreover.—Doddridge, “But.” (Gr. de.)

Ver. 19. A more sure word of prophecy.—Gr. prophetic word. Some critics think the comparative degree is here used for the superlative, and render it, “a most sure word.” &c. See Doddridge, &c.—A light.—(Gr. phos)—“In a dark place.”—Some have supposed this an allusion to the lamp (or candlestick) which was burnt in the holy place; but the word (anekphos) strictly means a filthy, as well as dark place—a dark hole—a cellar.” Such is this w. dark without divine revelation. The day star.—(Gr. Phosphoros) 1 By this name, the Greeks meant the planet Venus, or the morning star—a name which our Lord appropriates to himself, Rev. xxii. 16.

Ver. 20. Private interpretation.—Owen and Doddridge, “impulse.” Marknight, “invention.” Hammond thinks this has a reference to the word

9 The Lord knoweth how to deliver the 10 soul out of temptation, and to preserve it the $e^{-2T_1/346}$

Ac. 20 29,
30
1 Pt 4 1
c or, la-ri-
mous as bony co-ries real
d Jude 1 7
e Ge 7 1,

g Dr 29 23.
h G. 19 16.
—
i P. 34 15.
18

Some
read, against themselves

9 an adulteress
1 Nu 22.5,

Ep 414

day | mo
effa

sure over-con-the length, rt or

tion;
on,
mean ts to ation ured sent from rinity urist, eams

hats,
-The sev hats an false tio mis- in most an most wh ught fac ed in the esies tio

on ac- V stou

earned	V
	V

He-Dony-potes)
with ed to ule 4

Whose
the

as "a lesiod ants.)
er. 6

con-
Noah which logy ;

17 These are wells without water, clouds that are carried with a tempest; to whom the mist of darkness is reserved for ever.

We are now called upon to contemplate "the goodness and severity of God," his righteous severity in the doom of "fallen angels"; in the drowning of the old world, and in the destruction of the cities of the plain; his free and unmerited goodness in providing for the salvation of man, and in rescuing Noah and Lot, with both their families, from the dreadful ruin in which the sinners around them were involved. From these facts our apostle draws this obvious practical inference—"that the Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptations"; that is, out of all the trials in which their own sins,

Ver. 17. The mist of darkness—Doddridge and McKnight, "Blackness of darkness." See ver. 4, and compare Jude 13.

18 For when they speak ^a great swelling words of vanity, they allure through the lusts of the flesh, through much wantonness, those that were ^a clean escaped from them who live in error.

19 While they promise them liberty, they themselves are the servants of corruption: for ^a of whom a man is overcome, of the same is he brought in bondage.

20 For if after they have escaped the pollutions of the world through the knowledge of the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, they are again ^a entangled therein, and overcome, the latter end is worse with them than the beginning.

21 For it had been better ^a for them not to have known the way ^a of righteousness, than, after they have known it, to turn from the holy commandment delivered unto them.

22 But it is happened unto them according to the true proverb, ^a The dog is turned to his own vomit again; and the sow that was washed to her wallowing in the mire.

CHAPTER III.

1 He assevereth them of the certainty of Christ's coming to judgment, against those scorers who dispute against it: 3 warning the godly, for the long patience of God, to hasten their repentance. 10 He describeth also the manner how the world shall be destroyed: 11 exhorting them, from the expectation thereof, to all holiness of life: 15 and again, to think the patience of God to lead to their salvation, as Paul wrote to them in his epistles.

THIS second epistle, beloved, I now write unto you; in both which I stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance:

2 That ^a ye may be mindful of the words or the sins of others, may involve them; an inference peculiarly consolatory in the then present situation of the world, when one of the heaviest judgments which ever visited it, was about to be poured out upon the nation of the Jews.

Dreadful is the character now drawn of these false and wicked teachers, against whom our apostle had already warned his brethren, and now again warns them. They are not only detestably licentious in their personal conduct, but presumptuous and self-willed; despising all civil government, and grossly reviling all governors: whereas angels, though far greater in power and higher in rank, bring no such accusations:—except, indeed, that fallen spirit, who, on this account, has been branded with that odious name, “the accuser of the brethren.” (Rev. xii. 10.) As natural brute beasts—wild and savage animals—created (as it should seem) only for rapine and destruction, these men are governed only by their passions; and, when offended or displeased, they scruple not to reproach and revile conduct, which they have neither ability to judge of, nor temper duly to weigh. With eyes full of adultery, and hearts filled with covetousness, they make a sport of sin, and even riot in the open day!

The ruling motive in these men's minds is again stated to be covetousness, or “the love of money,” which, as Paul tells us, is “the root of all evil.” (1 Tim. vi. 10.) And if there is any class of society to whom it is more especially injurious, it is to preachers or to prophets. Thus it was to these false teachers, “following the way of Balaam.” He loved the wages of unrighteousness, but was rebuked for his iniquity by the most senseless of all animals—“the dumb ass,” miraculously endowed with a human voice, “rebuking the madness of the prophet:” madness indeed it must have been, to incur the curse of God and everlasting misery, for the temporal rewards of an idolatrous prince. (See expos. of Num. xxii. 21–41.) To show the emptiness and unsteadiness of such characters, he compares them to wells without water, and clouds driven by a tempest. Yet by sensual temptations they allure back to the world many who appear to have escaped it: and while they hold out the promise of liberty, they bring them into the yoke which were spoken before ^a by the holy prophets, and of the commandment of us the apostles of the Lord and Saviour:

3 Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days ^a scoffers, walking after their own lusts,

4 And saying, Where ^a is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation.

5 For this they willingly are ignorant of, that ^a by the word of God the heavens were of old, and the earth ^a standing out of the ^a water and in the water:

6 Whereby the world that then was, being overflowed with ^a water, perished:

7 But the heavens and the earth, which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire ^a against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men.

8 But, beloved, be not ignorant of this one thing, that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day.

9 The Lord is not slack ^a concerning his promise, as some men count slackness; but is long-suffering ^a to us-ward, not willing ^a that any should perish, but that all should ^a come to repentance.

10 But the day of the Lord will come as a thief ^a in the night; in the which the heavens ^a shall pass away with a great noise, and the

of sin, and reduce them to a state worse than that which they had escaped. The great bait held out by the advocates of licentiousness is comprised in the sacred name of liberty; whereas no men are more deeply enslaved to their prejudices and their passions, the full indulgence of which, uncontrolled by reason or religion, is what they mean by liberty! But, alas! when they have drawn heedless professors into their snare, they find it the liberty of wearing chains—the chains of error and of sin. Such men, according to the saying of Solomon, return, like the dog and the sow, to their original filth—an image, in those countries, much stronger than appears to us, since dogs, in general, are there no more domesticated than are the swine.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1–15. The certainty of Christ coming to judgment, and the effect it ought to have upon us.—Having spoken in strong language of false teachers, who pretended to be Christians, he now warns us against infidels and scoffers, who derided the very name of Christianity, and from the long delay of threatened judgment, became so hardened as to laugh at the idea. This, like every other plea of ancient infidelity, has been adopted by the modern sceptics, and is thus stated and answered by that able advocate for revealed truth—the Rev. Robert Hall, in his Sermon on Modern Infidelity.

“Why, it will be said, may we not suppose the world has always continued as it is; that is, that there has been a constant succession of finite beings, appearing and disappearing on the earth from all eternity? I answer, (says Mr. Hall,) whatever is supposed to have occasioned this constant succession, exclusive of an intelligent cause, will never account for the undeniable marks of design visible in all finite beings; nor is the absurdity of supposing a contrivance without a contriver diminished by this imaginary succession, but rather increased by being repeated at every step of the series.

“Besides, an eternal succession of finite beings involves in it a contradiction, and is, therefore, plainly impossible. As the supposition is made to get quit of the idea of any one being having existed from eternity, each of the beings in the succession must have begun in time; but the succession itself is

Ver. 18. Those that were clean escaped.—Doddridge, “quite escaped.” CHAP. III. Ver. 1. For since—Grotius, “except that;” so Hammond and Groce. But Doddridge and M. Knight prefer the common rendering.

Ver. 5. By the word of God, &c.—[Kypke renders, “The heavens were of old, and the earth, which is framed, by the word of God, from the waters, and between the waters.” It was the opinion of the remotest antiquity, that the earth was formed out of water, or primitive moisture, which they termed yle, first matter; and Thales taught, “all things derive their existence from water.” This also appears to be the doctrine of Moses, (Gen. i. 1, 2,) and that the earth was at first in a fluid state is evident from its form; for it has been demonstrated by measuring some degrees near the pole, that the earth is not round, but an oblate spheroid, a figure nearly resembling an orange, and one which any soft or elastic body would assume if whirled rapidly round a centre, as the earth is round its axis. When the waters retired into one place, and when “God divided the waters which were under the firmament from the waters which were above the firmament,” then the earth was placed “between the waters.”—Bagster. —“The earth standing out of the water and in the water”—i. e. part rising above the water, and part submerged; or, in flaps, above the waters “under the earth,” and beneath those “treasured in the clouds, by the revoiting of which in the deluge,” the world that then was” being overthrown, was drowned. See Gen. i. 6–10; vii. 11–20.

Ver. 7. Reserved unto fire.—See ver. 10, 11. —Perdition of ungodly men.—To obviate the direct bearings of this passage, Universalist writers say, that this earth is to be the hell of wicked men; and that as the burning of it will not be eternal, so the perdition of the ungodly will be but temporary. There are, however, three serious difficulties to this gloss. 1. The Scriptures speak of a hell already existing, wherein the angels who kept not their first estate are reserved in everlasting chains unto darkness, unto the judgment of the great day; and in which the departed spirits of wicked men now lift up their eyes, being in torment. 2. The Scriptures declare that this hell now existing will be the hell for all ungodly men; for they are doomed to depart into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels. 3. If the earth, as being dissolved by fire, is to be the hell of ungodly men, then punishment must precede the day of judgment; for the conflagration is uniformly represented as prior to that event. See 2 Thes. i. 7–10. See also notes on Mat. xxv. 46.

Ver. 8. One day, &c.—This is said to be a Jewish proverb, but it is evidently taken from Ps. xc. 4.

Ver. 9. Is not slack—Doddridge, “slow &c.—Count slackness—Doddridge, “slowness.”—Not willing—Macknight, “not desiring.” Compare Rom. ii. 4. 1 Tim. ii. 4.

Ver. 10. As a thief in the night.—See Mat. xxiv. 42–44.

elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up.

11 Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness,

12 Looking for ^a and ^b hastening into the coming of the day of God, wherein the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt ^c with fervent heat?

13 Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness.

14 Wherefore, beloved, seeing that ye look for such things, be diligent that ye may be found of him in peace, without spot, and blameless.

A M. c. 4072
A 19. c. 68
q Tit 2:13
r or, hastening the coming
s Is 33:14
Me 1:4
t Re 21:1, 27
u 1 Co 15:58
1 Th 5:23
v Ro 2:1
w Ro 8:19
1 Jo 1:5
1 Th 1:5, 3
2 Th 1:1
10
x Col 1:10
y 2 Th 1:18.

15 And account that the long-suffering of our Lord is ^a salvation; even as our beloved brother Paul also according to the wisdom given unto him hath written unto you;

16 As also in all his epistles, ^a speaking in them of these things; in which are some things hard to be understood, which they that are unlearned and unstable wrest, as they do also the other scriptures, unto their own destruction.

17 Ye therefore, beloved, seeing ye know these things before, beware lest ye also, being led away with the error of the wicked, fall from your own steadfastness.

18 But ^a grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. To him ^b be glory both now and for ever. Amen.

eternal. We have, then, a succession of beings infinitely earlier than any being in the succession, which is absurd."

So much for the logic of infidelity, which consists of "great swelling words," but is empty of argument or divine authority. Such persons, says our apostle, are wilfully ignorant of all the great truths of revealed religion. They consider not that God made the world—that he once destroyed all the inhabitants of it for sin—that he has threatened a still more terrible destruction to impenitent sinners at the last day; but why, say they, is this threatening so long delayed? and we, even yet, see no prospect of its fulfilment. "Where is the promise of his coming?"

Two things should be here considered: 1. That man not having an hour to command, should not delay an hour in securing his best interests.—2. That God, having eternity at his command, can have no possible occasion for haste—"One day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day." "That is," says the eloquent Saurin, "a thousand years, and one day, are such inconsiderable measures of duration, that whatever disproportion they may have to each other, they appear to have none when compared to the duration of eternity. There is a great difference between the light of a taper and that of a flambeau; but expose both to the light of the sun, and their difference will be imperceptible. The light of a taper before the sun is as the light of a flambeau, and the light of a flambeau as the light of a taper. In this sense, a thousand years are but as one day, and one day as a thousand years." (Sermon on the Eternity of God.)

But though the Almighty is under no obligation in any case to give a reason for his conduct, yet an obvious one here presents itself. He is "long-suffering to us-wards," that is, to mankind; "not desiring that any should perish, but [willing that] all should come to repentance." This, however, should not lull us into security, for "the day of the Lord will come," and when it does, it will come as unexpectedly "as a thief in the night." It becomes us, therefore, to be prepared. "Seeing, then, all these things shall be dissolved"—these lower heavens, being rolled up as a scroll, shall pass away, with sounds of bursting thunder—the elements of nature shall be melted into a lake of fire, and all the works of nature or of art, that adorn this earth, shall be destroyed—O "what manner of persons ought we to be in all holy conversation and godliness!" "Nevertheless we" ought not to sink into despondency—sure, according to the divine promise, "we look for new heavens and new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness"—and that for ever.

Ver 13. According to his promise.—See Isaiah 41:17. Compare Rev. xvi. 1, &c.

Ver 16. Of these things.—Namely, the patience of God, and the day of judgment, with its solemn consequences—in which—These words, as they stand in our common copies, refer to the things here spoken of, which, indeed, from their mysterious and sublime nature, are necessarily hard to be understood; but some MSS., reading the relative pronoun "which" in the feminine, instead of neuter, necessarily refer to the Epistles; and the writer freely confesses that, in going through Paul's Epistles, he has in most of them found things hard to be understood, but especially in those to the Romans and the Hebrews—which then that are unlearned—or rather (as Doddridge and Macknight render it)—unstable—and wresting—as they do so the other scriptures—plainly ranking St. Paul's writings as a part of the sacred book. Of the unstable, see James i. 8. The term wrest, signifies to torture, as on a rack—Macknight.

Ver 17. Beware—Macknight, "Be on your guard." He adds, that this is a military term, alluding to the duty of soldiers in a fortress.

Ver 18. But grow and for ever—Macknight, "Unto the day of eternity;" so he remarks the original literally signifies—a day never followed by night. See Rev. xvi. 25.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE SECOND EPISTLE OF PETER.

[Dr. MacKnight justly observes, that "the matters contained in this Epistle are highly worthy of an inspired Apostle; for, besides a variety of important doctrines, all tending to display the perfections of God and the glory of Christ, we find in it exhortations to virtue, and condemnations of vice, delivered with an earnestness of feeling, which shows the author to have been unacquainted with a forced writing upon the world; and that his sole design in this Epistle was to promote the interests of truth and virtue." With regard to the objection against the genuineness of this Epistle drawn from the difference of style between this and the former Epistle, it has been correctly said, that an author's style is regulated, in a great measure, by the nature of his subject, different subjects naturally suggesting different styles; and that this diversity is confined to the second chapter of this Epistle, where the subject is different from the rest of St. Peter's writings, and where the style is as different from that of the other two chapters, as it is from the language of the first Epistle. But the fact is, that the style of both Epistles is essentially the same. "I cannot," says Dr. Backlund, "with some critics, find any great difference between the style of the first and second Epistles; it is to me no more than we find in the style of the same persons at different times. There is much the same energy and clear beauty, the same rapid run of language, and the same commanding majesty in them both. Take them together, and they are admirable for significant epithets and strong compound words, for beautiful and sprightly figures, adurable and sublime doctrines, pure and heavenly morals, expressed in an elastic, lively, and graceful style."—Bagster.

THE FIRST EPISTLE GENERAL OF JOHN.

[THOUGH the name of St. John is not affixed to this Epistle, yet it has been received without hesitation as the genuine production of that Apostle from the earliest period of the Christian church, and the sincerity of sentiment and expression between it and his Gospel, is a full confirmation of the truth of this opinion.]

With respect to the date of this Epistle, there is a considerable diversity of opinion; some placing it, with Beason and Hales, in A D 68; others, with Bishop Toulmin, in A D 69; others, with Dr. Lardner, in A D 90, or a few later; others, with Mill and Le Clerc, in A D 91 or 92, and others, with Basnage and Baranovius, in A D 98 or 99. The most probable of these opinions, however, seems to be that which assigns it an early date; for it would appear from certain expressions, that it was written before the destruction of Jerusalem, (ch. ii. vs 1) and while the generation which had seen our Lord in the flesh had not yet passed away, (ch. ii. vs 13, 14). It appears, as Lardner, MacKnight, and others suppose, to have been addressed to no particular church, but to have been intended as a general address for the use of Christians of every denomination and country, in strict accordance with its title of Catholic or General.—Bagster.

CHAPTER I.

1 He describeth the person of Christ, in whom we have eternal life, by a communion with God; 5 to which we must add the holiness of life, to testify the truth of that our communion; and 1 profession of faith, as also to assure us of the forgiveness of our sins by Christ's death.

THAT which was from the ^a beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen ^b with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have ^c handled, of the Word of life;

A M. c. 4072
A 19. c. 68
a Ju 1:1
b 2 Pe 1:16
c 1 Jo 1:1, 2, 3
d Ju 1:7, 3
e Ju 1:7, 21

CHAP. I. Ver. 1.—10. The character of Christ, and the nature of our communion with him.—Though this Epistle begins like that to the Hebrews, without any intimation of the author, the style and sentiments so strongly resemble those of CHAP. I. Ver. 1. Looked upon.—Macknight, "contemplated."

Ver. 2. For the life was manifested—in c. Christ himself.

with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ.

4 And these things write we unto you, that your joy may be full.

5 This then is the message which we have heard of him, and declare unto you, that God is light, and in him is no darkness at all.

6 If we say that we have fellowship with him, and walk in darkness, we lie, and do not the truth:

7 But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin.

8 If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us.

9 If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.

10 If we say that we have not sinned, we make him a liar, and his word is not in us.

CHAPTER II.

1 He comforteth them against the sins of infirmity. 2 Reluctant to know God is to keep his commandments, 9 to love our brethren, 13 and not to love the world. 15 We must beware of seducers: 20 from whose deceits the gaily are safe, preserved by perseverance in faith, and holiness of life.

MY little children, these things write I unto you, that ye sin not. And if any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous.

2 And he is the propitiation for our sins: and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world.

3 And hereby we do know that we know him, if we keep his commandments.

4 He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him.

5 But whoso keepeth his word, in him verily is the love of God perfected: hereby know we that we are in him.

6 He that saith he abideth in him ought himself also so to walk, even as he walked.

7 Brethren, I write no new commandment unto you, but an old commandment which ye had from the beginning. The old commandment is the word which ye have heard from the beginning.

8 Again, a new commandment I write unto you, which thing is true in him and in you, because the darkness is past, and the true light now shineth.

9 He that saith he is in the light, and hateth his brother, is in darkness even until now.

10 He that loveth his brother abideth in the light, and there is none occasion of stumbling in him.

11 But he that hateth his brother is in darkness, and walketh in darkness, and knoweth not whither he goeth, because that darkness hath blinded his eyes.

12 I write unto you, little children, because your sins are forgiven you for his name's sake.

13 I write unto you, fathers, because ye have known him that is from the beginning. I write unto you, young men, because ye have overcome the wicked one. I write unto you, little children, because ye have known the Father.

14 I have written unto you, fathers, because ye have known him that is from the beginning. I have written unto you, young men, because ye are strong, and the word of God abideth in you, and ye have overcome the wicked one.

the author of John's Gospel, as to afford the best internal evidence that they were written by the same apostle: nor is there any defect as to external evidence, the authority of very few of the Epistles having been less questioned. It appears to have been written when the apostle was far advanced in life, and in the prospect of an eternal world. We have followed Horne, and other able critics, in placing it just before the destruction of Jerusalem; but some place it after, even subsequent to the Apocalypse, as Prebendary Townsend: the date is, however, in our view, unimportant, and impossible to be ascertained with certainty.

In the opening of this Epistle, the beloved apostle introduces his divine Master in nearly the same terms as in the opening of his Gospel, calling him "the Word of life," or living Word, whom he and his fellow apostles had seen with their own eyes, had heard with their own ears, and handled with their own hands: for "God was manifested in the flesh," and they saw his glory, and spake of him with joy and gratitude. And here we may remark, that the happiness of Christians is mainly derived from communion with God, and nothing contributes so much to advance their joy, as to know that others share it with them. On this ground, there was doubtless a mutual joy between the apostle and those to whom he wrote.

"God is light, and in him is no darkness." The Supreme Being is here, as elsewhere, (James i. 17,) compared to the sun, as the fountain of light and life. God is the source of wisdom, purity, and happiness; and in him is no darkness, neither natural nor moral evil. If we then walk in the light, that is, in wisdom and holiness, then we have communion with God and with one another, and "the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." It is in vain, therefore, to pretend that we have no sin; for in so doing we deceive ourselves, and insult our Maker; for he pardons none but sinners, and such only as feel and confess their guilt. But if we confess our sins with due contrition, in forgiving us he is not only gracious and merciful, but faithful to his word, and just to his Son, who offered himself as an atonement for our sins.

CHAP. II. Ver. 1.—17. Consolation to believers under a sense

Ver. 4. That your joy may be full.—Doddrige, "fulfilled" Macknight, "complete."

Ver. 6. And walk in darkness—i. e. in ignorance and sin — We lie, and do not the truth—i. e. do not practise it.

Ver. 7. We have fellowship one with another.—Doddrige paraphrases this, We have communion (or fellowship) with him [God] and with one another through him.

CHAP. II. Ver. 1. And if.—Doddrige, "But if."—An advocate.—(Gr. Parakletos.)

Ver. 2. The propitiation.—This "word is no where found in the New Testament but in this passage, and in chap. iv. 10. But it occurs often in the LXX. translation of the Old Testament, where it signifies a sacrifice of atonement." (See Levit. vi. 8, 7. Numb. v. 8. Ezek. xlv. 27.)

Ver. 3. We do know that we know him.—Doddrige, "We know that we of their infirmities and sins.—The great objects of the Gospel are to procure pardon, and promote holiness. "These things I write unto you," says our affectionate apostle, "that ye sin not." As, however, "there is no man which liveth and sinneth not," he adds the consolatory consideration, "But if any man sin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous," who, not being himself a sinner, can be admitted to plead for us; and whose plea cannot be rejected, because he, who is every way equal to the work, has offered himself up as a propitiation (or sacrifice of atonement) for our sins; and not for ours only, who are Jews, but for men of all nations, for the whole Gentile world who repent and believe on him.

The term Advocate is the same that our Lord used in reference to the Holy Spirit promised to all believers, but is there rendered Comforter. It seems to have been the two-fold office of an Advocate among the Romans, (as, indeed, it is among ourselves,) to advise his client privately, and publicly to plead on his behalf before the Court. The former represents the office of the Spirit toward believers on earth; the latter, that of our Saviour before the presence of his Father in heaven.

Another word, propitiation, is peculiar to this epistle, and plainly refers to the atonement which our Saviour offered on the cross. Dr. Macknight here remarks, "that in considering the death of Christ as a sacrifice for sin, John, like the other apostles, followed his Master, who, in the institution of his Supper, directed his disciples to consider it as designed to bring to their remembrance his blood shed for the many, for the remission of sins." (Matt. xxvi. 28.)

Christ is here considered, not only as our advocate and our atonement, but also as our pattern or example. Jesus Christ is, indeed, the only model by which our characters must be formed. In him we find universal holiness embodied and exemplified, as adapted to the situation and circumstances of his people; especially as it respects those virtues peculiarly Christian—meekness, patience, and affection to the brethren.

To awaken attention, and more deeply to impress the mind, the apostle here employs a Christian paradox, or most im-are acquainted with him." Macknight, "We know that we have known him."

Ver. 4. I know.—Macknight, "I have known," as in verse 3.

Ver. 5. Perfected—i. e. fully ascertained.

Ver. 8. Which thing is true in him and in you.—Macknight, "concerning," or with respect to—him and you. That is, it was new, as coming from Christ, and having been newly revealed to them.—The darkness is past.—Macknight, "is passing," meaning the darkness of heathen idolatry, and Rabbinical superstition.—The true light now shineth—i. e. Christ. John i. 4, 9.

Ver. 10. None occasion of stumbling.—Macknight, "No stumbling-block."

Ver. 13. I write.—Several MSS., the Syriac version, and some copies of the Vulgate, read, "I have written."—Macknight.

Ver. 14. The wicked one—i. e. the devil. Mat. xiii. 19.

15 Love ^a not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If ^a any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him.

16 For all that is in the world, the lust of the ^a flesh, and the lust of the ^a eyes, and the pride ^a of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world.

17 And ^a the world passeth away, and the lust thereof: but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever.

18 Little children, it is the last ^a time: and as ye have heard ^a that antichrist shall come, even now are there many antichrists: whereby we know that it is the last time.

19 They went out from us, but they were not of us; for ^a if they had been of us, they would not doubt have continued with us: but they went out, that they might be made manifest ^a that they were not all of us.

20 But ye have an unction ^a from the Holy One, and ye know ^b all things.

21 I have not written unto you because ye know not the truth, but because ye know it, and that no lie is of the truth.

22 Who is a liar, but he that ^a denieth that Jesus is the Christ? He is antichrist, that denieth the Father and the Son.

23 Whosoever ^a denieth the Son, the same hath not the Father: [but] he that acknowledgeth the Son hath the Father also.

21 Let ^a that therefore abide in you, which ye have heard from the beginning. If that which ye have heard from the beginning shall remain in you, ye also shall continue in the Son, and in the Father.

25 And this is the promise that he hath promised us, even eternal ^a life.

26 These things have I written unto you concerning them that seduce you.

27 But the anointing which ye have received of him abideth in you, and ye need not that any man teach you: but as the same anointing teacheth ^a you of all things, and is truth, and is no lie, and even as it hath taught you, ye shall abide in ^b him.

28 And now, little children, abide in him; that, when he shall appear, we may have confidence, and not be ashamed before him at his coming.

important truth, veiled in the form of an apparent contradiction. The law of brotherly kindness was indeed as old as the creation, and though cancelled in the heart of man by sin, and renounced by Cain, it was renewed by every exhibition of that law—"Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself." It was also both explained and enforced in the ministry of our Lord; and especially in the close of that ministry, when it became, as it were, a new law, by being exhibited in a new form, and enforced by a new and most powerful motive—"A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another." (John xiii. 34.) This is the commandment here justly represented as, in different respects, both old and new. (Compare exposition of John xv. 12-27.)

The apostle now addresses himself to several classes of his readers, enforcing the same important truths under different modifications of expression. It is agreed that the trins children, young men, and fathers, are not to be taken literally; nor is it easy to mark the distinctions of character intended, or to appropriate the precepts distinctively addressed to each.—Little children are described as those who have known the Father, and had the assurance of their sins forgiven, which is often the case with young believers before they are harassed with temptations and with doubts; these are cautioned against being drawn into sins, from which they had but just escaped.—Young men are described as strong and vigorous, and as having, in some good degree, obtained the victory over their corruptions and spiritual enemies. These are cautioned against the temptations to which their strong and aspiring minds are most exposed; the lusts of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life; or, in more familiar terms, lust, covetousness, and ambition.—Fathers are so addressed in reference to their experience and long acquaintance with Christ, the Logos, or word of God, whom this apostle is in the habit of describing as him that was from the beginning. (See John i. 1.)

The concluding verses of this section contain admonitions of general import, one of which, in particular, merits our most serious attention: "If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." Expositors characterize the love of the world here forbidden as immoderate and inordinate; yet, alas! we are all disposed to consider our love of the world as moderate and justifiable. But we apprehend the love of the world is always criminal when it comes in competition with our religion; if we so love the world as to prefer its wealth or pleasures to our known duty towards God, or towards his people—then how dwelleth the love of God in us? (See chap. iii. 17.)

Ver. 18-29. Warnings against deception and apostasy, with exhortations to persevere.—The venerable apostle reminds believers that our Lord had foretold the appearance, about this time, of many who should offer themselves as rivals or opposers: "Many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ,

Ver. 16. The lust of the flesh, &c.—The sources of evil are three, (says a Pagan writer) lust of pleasure, in matters of corporeal enjoyment; lust of money, in matters of gain; and lust of glory, in point of pre-eminence over our equals and companions.

Ver. 18. The last time.—Greek, "hour." Some refer this to the destruction of Jerusalem; but it is doubtful if that were not already past—Antichrist shall come.—If the preposition anti, in Antichrist, denotes "in place of," Antichrist is a false Christ; if anti denotes opposition, Antichrist is one who opposeth Christ—Mocking. In both senses there were many Antichrists.

Ver. 19. Were not of us—i. e. were not true Christians.—That they might be made manifest—i. e. it was so ordered by Providence that they should leave the church, that they might bring no reproach nor disgrace upon it: not that such was their design in leaving.

Ver. 20. Ye have an unction—That is, a chrism, or anointing.—Ye know all things.—The same is rendered ver. 27, and is evidently to be understood in harmony with our Lord's promise to his disciples, John xvi. 13.—"He shall lead

A Mt. cur
1072
A. 19. var.
68
q Ro. 12:2
r Mt. 6:24
Ga 1:10
Ja 1:1
s 2 Pt. 2:10
t Ps. 119:7
u Ps. 73:6
v Ps. 39:6
1 Co. 7:31
w He. 1:2
x Mt. 21:24
1 Pt. 1:1
y 2 Pt. 1:19
z 1 Pt. 3:9
a 2 Co. 1:21
b 1 Co. 2:15
c 1:3
d Ju. 17:23
e 2 Ju. 6
f Ju. 17:3
g Ju. 11:36
h or, it.

and shall deceive many." They did come; several are mentioned in the Acts of the Apostles, and several more by Josephus. (See exposit. or Matt. xxiv. 28.) Some of these, at least, were apostates from the Christian church; but the apostle intimates that they were not truly members of it, or they would not have thus apostatized: they had not received that "unction from the Holy One" which is given to all true believers, and is necessary to guard them against deception and apostasy.

But what is this unction, or anointing? Dr. Isaac Barrow (a divine very far from fanaticism) thus explains it:—"It is he who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, that must, as St. Paul speaketh, illuminate our hearts with the knowledge of these things. An unction from the Holy One, clearing our eyes, softening our hearts, healing our distempered faculties, must, as St. John intimates us, teach and persuade us this sort of truths"—namely, the peculiar truths of divine Revelation, of which he instances, among other things, as follows:—

"Particularly he guideth and quickeneth us in devotion, showing us what we should ask, raising in us holy desires and comfortable hopes, disposing us to approach unto God with firm dispositions of mind, love, and reverence, and humble confidence.

"It is also a notable part of the Holy Spirit's office to comfort and sustain us in all our religious practice, so particularly in our doubts, difficulties, distresses, and afflictions; to beget joy, peace, and satisfaction in us, in all our performances and in all our sufferings, whence the title of Comforter belongeth to him.

"It is also another part thereof to assure us of God's gracious love and favour, and that we are his children; confirming in us the hopes of our everlasting inheritance. We, feeling ourselves to live spiritually by him, to love God and goodness, to thirst after righteousness, and to delight in pleasing God, are thereby raised to hope God loves and favours us; and that he having, by so authentic a seal, ratified his word and promise, having already bestowed so sure a pledge, so precious an earnest, so plentiful first-fruits, will not fail to make good the remainder designed and promised us, of everlasting joy and bliss."

In the latter part of this chapter, St. John evidently alludes to the rising heresies which at this time began to trouble the church, and which in succeeding ages filled the pages of our ecclesiastical historians. Some of them, it seems, (as Cerinthus,) separated Jesus from Christ, as being two persons, and denied him to be the Son of God. It appears, that in those early, as in much later times, many were fond of paradoxes, and took pleasure in starting new and strange opinions, which, among the vulgar, attracted admiration, and made them highly popular. The strain of the apostle's argument is to show, that Christ was not only one with, but also so united to the Father, as not to be separated, either in essence, or in you into all truth." i. e. all requisite and important truths; so here they were taught all things necessary to salvation.

Ver. 22. Who is a liar but he, &c.—Dr. Pye Smith renders it, "Who is a liar, if he be not who denieth that Jesus is the Christ," &c.—meaning that such a one is the worst of all liars and deceivers.

Ver. 23. He that acknowledgeth the Son, &c.—(This clause is printed by our translators in Italics, to show that it is of doubtful authority, being probably wanting in the chief of the MSS. they consulted, as well as the early printed editions, both Greek and English; but it should certainly be restored to the text, as Griesbach has done, as it is found in the Codices Alexandrines, Vaticanus, and Ephraim; and in between twenty and thirty others of the best authority; as also in both the Syriac, Erpen's Arabic, Coptic, Sahidic, Armenian, and Vulgate; and is quoted by Origen, Meletius, Athanasius, the Cyprian, Theophylact, &c.—Begister.

Ver. 27. But the anointing. . . the same anointing.—(Gr. chrisma.) The same word which in ver. 20. is rendered unction.—In him.—Margin, "but;" i. e. the truth.

29 If ye know that he is righteous, ye know that every one that doeth righteousness is born of him.

CHAPTER III.

1 He declareth the singular love of God towards us, in making us his sons; 3 who therefore ought obediently to keep his commandments, 11 as also brotherly to love one another.

BEHOOLD what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God: therefore the world knoweth us not, because it knew him not.

2 Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is.

3 And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure.

4 Whosoever committeth sin transgresseth also the law: for sin is the transgression of the law.

5 And ye know that he was manifested to take away our sins; and in him is no sin.

6 Whosoever abideth in him sinneth not: whosoever sinneth hath not seen him, neither known him.

7 Little children, let no man deceive you: he that doeth righteousness is righteous, even as he is righteous.

8 He that committeth sin is of the devil; for the devil sinneth from the beginning. For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the works of the devil.

9 Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin; for his seed remaineth in him: and he cannot sin, because he is born of God.

10 In this the children of God are manifest, and the children of the devil: whosoever doeth not righteousness is not of God, neither he that loveth not his brother.

11 For this is the message that ye heard from the beginning, that we should love one another.

12 Not as Cain, who was of that wicked one, and slew his brother. And wherefore slew he him? Because his own works were evil, and his brother's righteous.

13 Marvel not, my brethren, if the world hate you.

14 We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren. He that loveth not his brother abideth in death.

15 Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer: and ye know that no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him.

16 Hereby perceive we the love of God, because he laid down his life for us: and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren.

17 But whoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?

18 My little children, let us not love in word, neither in tongue; but in deed and in truth.

19 And hereby we know that we are of the truth, and shall assure our hearts before him.

20 For if our heart condemn us, God is greater than our heart, and knoweth all things.

21 Beloved, if our heart condemn us not, then have we confidence toward God.

22 And whatsoever we ask, we receive of him, because we keep his commandments, and do those things that are pleasing in his sight.

23 And this is his commandment, That we

A. M. cir.
4072.
A. P. cir.
698.
i or, know
ye.
j Je 13.23.
k Mat 7.16
l Is.
m Je 2.4.5.
n Ju 1.12.
o Re 21.7
p Je 17.25.
q Ru 3.14.
r Is.
s 1 Co 15.49
t Ph 3.24.
u 1 Jo 19.35.
v Is 17.15.
w Mat 5.8.
x Ec 15.12.
y He 9.23.
z 2 Jo 11.
a 1 Jo 5.5.
b Ro 2.13.
c Ju 8.41.
d He 2.14.
e 1 Co 15.13.
f 1 Pe 1.23.

n or, communication.
o Je 13.23.
p Ge 14.8.
q Ju 15.18.
r Is.
s 1 Jo 2.11.
t Mat 5.21.
u 2 Jo 15.13.
v 2 Jo 15.7.
w e 4.20.
x Ec 3.21.
y Ju 12.9.
z Ju 15.16.
a 1 Pe 1.22.
b Ju 13.35.
c Ju 15.16.
d Ju 15.16.
e Ju 15.16.
f Ju 15.16.
g Ju 15.16.
h Ju 15.16.
i Ju 15.16.
j Ju 15.16.
k Ju 15.16.
l Ju 15.16.
m Ju 15.16.

the work of man's redemption; and he seems to have borne in his recollection the substance of our Lord's discourse in the 14th chapter of his gospel.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1.—21. The grace of God in the adoption, sanctification, and salvation of his people.—“Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God!” So astonishing did this seem, when one of the Malabar converts was required by the Danish missionaries that to translate this passage, that he shrunk from it, as far too bold: “Let me rather render it (says he) They shall be permitted to kiss his feet.” But even this is not all; not only are we to be recognised as the adopted children of God, but also, conformed to the image of his only begotten Son. And such is the transforming efficacy of his glory, that when we “see him as he is,” we shall be changed into his image—we shall be pure, as he is pure; for we “know that he was manifested to take away our sins; and in him is no sin.”

This similitude will not, we confess, be complete in the present life: we must see Christ even as he is, before we can be conformed wholly to his image. There is, however, a partial resemblance, which becomes more and more complete as grace prevails in us. In this state we “know but in part,” and are sanctified but in part, as the holiest and best of men admit, and as St. John himself assures us: “If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us.” (Chap. i. 8.) The same apostle, therefore, cannot mean to be understood absolutely, when he says, “He that is born of God doth not commit sin;” but it is yet a question how the words can be best explained, in harmony with other passages in this epistle, and of the Scriptures in general. We shall mention two ways in which this has been attempted.

1. It has been commonly understood, that by committing sin is here meant the habitual practice thereof, as the heathen practised idolatry, and the Jews their now obsolete and superstitious ritual. It must, however, be admitted, that every act of sin is as much forbidden as the habit; that neither the law nor the gospel tolerate even “the thought of foolishness;” (Prov. xxiv. 9;) yet it is not every sinful thought, or even act,

CHAP. III. Ver. 1. The sons of God.—Greek, “children of God.” So ver. 2. Ver. 4. Whosoever committeth sin, transgresseth also the law.—Doddridge, “Every one that practiseth sin, practiseth also the violation of the law.” The learned commentator renders anomia, “violation of the law,” in distinction from paranomia, which is, properly, a “transgression,” or going beyond the boundaries prescribed.—Sin is the transgression.—Doddridge, “Violation” of the law.

Ver. 8. He that committeth sin.—Doddridge, “practiseth sin, is of the devil, for the devil sinneth from the beginning;” i. e. ever since his fall. Ver. 9. Doth not commit.—Doddridge, “Doth not practise sin.” Macknight, “Doth not work sin.”—For his seed remaineth in him.—i. e., says Doddridge, “There is an immortal principle planted by God in the heart.” See 1 Peter i. 23.

that proves a man hypocritical or insincere. Christians are bound to the practice of piety and good works; and yet, as St. James says, (chap. ii. 2,) “In many things we all offend;” and as St. John—“If any man sin,” upon repentance and humiliation, “we have an advocate with the Father, even Jesus Christ” himself; so that, as we must not presume on this to encourage ourselves in sin, neither must we despair of pardon when we repent. And this exposition is, we think, in perfect harmony with Scripture truth.

But, 2. The late ingenious Mr. Fuller has remarked, (and we have met with the suggestion in him only,) that the apostle had been before exhorting Christians to abide in the truth, and to “walk as Christ also walked.” In the close of this Epistle, also, the apostle speaks of apostasy—that is, of complete and final apostasy—as “a sin unto death,” or a fatal and soul-destroying sin: of this sin, therefore, Mr. Fuller conceives that the apostle here treats, and which he describes as utterly inconsistent with true godliness. He that is born of God, in this sense, “sinneth not,” and “cannot sin.” Mr. F. would, therefore, for the term sin, substitute apostasy—meaning, inveterate and complete apostasy, and reads the text as follows:—“Whoso abideth in him, apostatizeth not: whosoever apostatizeth hath not seen him, neither known him.—He that is guilty of apostasy is of the devil; for the devil hath been an apostate from the beginning.—Whosoever is born of God doth not apostatize, for his seed remaineth in him; and he cannot apostatize, because he is born of God.”

Either of these expositions may be sufficient to reconcile our apostle to himself, and to the general tenor of Scripture. Our readers will judge for themselves; we feel too much of our frailty to dogmatize, where wise and good men differ.

Mutual love among Christians is the burden of this Epistle; but that love must be connected with love to Christ, because we are commanded to love them as brethren, that is, as fellow Christians; and to the extent, (ver. 16,) that we should be ready to “lay down our lives” for them, if circumstances should require. Now this mutual love produces mutual fellowship and communion, not with them only, but also with God, our common Father, and with Christ, our common Sa-

Ver. 12. Not as Cain, &c.—See Heb. xi. 4. Ver. 15. Is a murderer.—i. e. in his heart; and circumstances may make him so in fact, as in the instance of Cain, ver. 12.

Ver. 16. Hereby perceive we the love of God.—The words “of God” being omitted in many MSS. and most printed editions, are put by our translators in italics; but Macknight supplies from ver. 8, “The Son of God.” Doddridge reads, “Hereby perceive we love!” Compare ver. 1.

Ver. 18. Not love in word, neither in tongue.—i. e. in tongue only. So Macknight. “If love consisted in word only, then love ceaseth as soon as the word is pronounced. Such was the love between Balak and Balaam. But if love consisteth not in word, it cannot be dissolved; such was the love of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and the rest of the patriarchs.”—Yalkut Rubeni.

Ver. 20. If our heart.—i. n. our conscience. So in next verse.

should believe on the name of his Son Jesus Christ, and love one another, as he gave us commandment.

21 And he that keepeth his commandments, dwelleth in him, and he in him. And hereby we know that he abideth in us, by the Spirit which he hath given us.

CHAPTER IV.

1 He warneth them not to believe all teachers, who boast of the Spirit, but to try them by the rules of the catholic faith: 2 and by many reasons exhorteth to brotherly love.

BELOVED, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world.

2 Hereby know ye the Spirit of God: Every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is of God:

3 And every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God: and this is that spirit of antichrist, whereof ye have heard that it should come: and even now already is it in the world.

4 Ye are of God, little children, and have overcome them: because greater is he that is in you, than he that is in the world.

5 They are of the world: therefore speak they of the world, and the world heareth them.

6 We are of God: he that knoweth God heareth us; he that is not of God heareth not us. Hereby know we the spirit of truth, and the spirit of error.

7 Beloved, let us love one another: for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God.

8 He that loveth not knoweth not God; for God is love.

9 In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him.

10 Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins.

11 Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another.

A. M. cur
4072
A. D. 1678

d Jo 14 23
15 10

e Ro 9 4, 11

a Jo 28 8
Mat 24 4

b 1 Th 5 21
Re 2 2

c 2 Pe 2 8

d 1 Co 12 3

e Ro 8 37

f Jo 3 31

g Is 9 21

h c 3 11, 24

i 2 Co 13 11
ver 16

j Ju 3 16

k Ju 6 54

l c 2 2

m Mat 18 35
Jo 15 12, 13

n 1 Ti 6 16

o 1 Co 13 13

p Jo 14 29
c 3 24

q Ro 10 9

r ver 5

s love with us

t Ju 15 16

u c 3 17

v Ju 13 31

a Ju 1 12, 13

b Ju 14 15, 21

c Ps 119 45
Mat 11 30

12 No man hath seen God at any time. If we love one another, God dwelleth in us, and his love is perfected in us.

13 Hereby know we that we dwell in him, and he in us, because he hath given us of his Spirit.

14 And we have seen and do testify that the Father sent the Son to be the Saviour of the world.

15 Whosoever shall confess that Jesus is the Son of God, God dwelleth in him, and he in God.

16 And we have known and believed the love that God hath to us. God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him.

17 Herein is our love made perfect, that we may have boldness in the day of judgment: because as he is, so are we in this world.

18 There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear: because fear hath torment. He that feareth is not made perfect in love.

19 We love him, because he first loved us.

20 If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar: for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?

21 And this commandment have we from him, That he who loveth God love his brother also.

CHAPTER V.

1 He that loveth that loveth his children, and keepeth his commandments; 3 which to the faithful are light, and not grievous. 4 Jesus is the Son of God, able to save us, 11 and to bear our prayers, which we make for ourselves, and for others.

WHOSOEVER believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born of God: and every one that loveth him that begat, loveth him also that is begotten of him.

2 By this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God and keep his commandments.

3 For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments: and his commandments are not grievous.

4 For whatsoever is born of God overcometh

viour, through the medium of his Holy Spirit, which he hath given to abide with us for ever.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1—21. Christians are warned not to believe every pretender to inspiration, but to try such by the word of God.—By the spirits here named, it should seem that we must understand those Christian teachers who, in that age, pretended to divine inspiration: many of whom, however, were inspired by a spirit opposite to that of God and Christ. The great criterion the apostle proposes is, their regard and respect for Jesus Christ. If they confess him as their Lord and Master, then may they be considered as actuated by his Spirit; if not, then most assuredly they must be actuated by another spirit. “To confess Jesus Christ, (says Dr. Doddridge,) seems to mean, not barely professing some kind of regard to him, but yielding a regular, consistent homage; and, as it were, harmonizing and falling in with his design.” To confess that Jesus Christ is “come in the flesh,” implies, 1. His previous existence before he came; 2. His incarnation, that “the Word was made flesh, and dwelt amongst us.” (John i. 14.) 3. That this incarnation was real, and not merely apparent; for while some of the ancient heretics considered our Lord Jesus as man, and as man only, others thought his incarnation was in appearance only, and that himself, in reality, neither suffered nor died. That spirit which denies or contradicts Christ, either in his person or mission, is undoubtedly “the spirit of antichrist,” as being opposed to him, and consequently “the spirit of error” and of falsehood.

The apostle now returns to his favourite theme of divine love, (ver. 10.) “Herein is love; not that we [first] loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins.” And what are the natural tendencies and consequences of this love? 1. We love him, because he first loved us,” (ver. 19;) and, 2. “If God so loved us, we ought also to love one another.” (Ver. 11.) Thus should all our love rise out of the infinite fullness of God’s love; for he is the ocean of beneficence, and every thing in creatures which deserves the name of love, springs up therefrom.

Another criterion of love to God is, that it hath “no fear”—no terror—no torment. Pagans, and unconverted Jews, might dread approaching into the presence of a dread Jehovah, or a terrific idol; but those who come to God through Christ will have boldness in the day of judgment, for the Judge himself is also their Friend and Saviour.

Oh! for a heart in thought renew’d,
And fill’d with love divine!
Perfect and right, and pure and good—
A copy, Lord, of thine! Anon.

CHAP. V. Ver. 1—21. The evidences of regeneration, and the witness to Christianity.—The proposition, “Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born of God,” seems to require some elucidation. Certainly it is not a man saying that he believes, without his faith being evinced by good works. It is faith that worketh by love, as St. James has abundantly proved, which alone can either justify or sanctify the believer. Faith is evidenced by love, and by good works; resisting the snares and temptations of the world; “and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith.” So that true faith, genuine love, and good works, are inseparably connected.

It may seem that St. John was guilty of great tautology (if we may so express it) in harping on this his favourite string—love to God and to the brethren. So wholly was his heart engrossed with this topic, as tradition reports, that when he CHAP. IV. Ver. 2. Every spirit that confesseth that, &c.—Every spirit who confesseth Jesus Christ who is come in the flesh, is of God. So Doddridge thinks these words not only may, but must be translated.

Ver. 3. This is that spirit of Antichrist—Roman Catholics plead, that the Pope cannot be Antichrist, because he admits and maintains that Jesus Christ is “come in the flesh.” But St. John tells us that there are many Antichrists; that is, many who oppose Christ, and his truth, though in different ways.

Ver. 4. Greater is he that is in you, &c.—That is, God, who actuates the believer, is infinitely above that fallen spirit which actuates the world.

Ver. 17. Herein is our love—Gr. “love with us”—made perfect.—Dodd-ridge. “Herein is love perfected in us.”—Because as he is, so are we.—By union and communion with Christ, we become like him; and like him, in the world are neglected and despised.

Ver. 18. There is no fear in love—Fear is here used in the sense of alarm and terror—“fear (that) hath torment.”

Ver. 20. How can he love God whom he hath not seen?—Intercourse and familiarity between friends engenders love; but it is by faith only in the revelation of his will, that we can love God.

CHAP. V. Ver. 1. He that loveth him that begat, loveth him also, &c.—Love to a friend naturally engenders love towards his offspring.

^d the world; and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith.

5 Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God?

6 This is he that came by ^e water and blood, even Jesus Christ; not by water only, but by water and blood. And it is the Spirit ^f that beareth witness, because the Spirit is truth.

7 For there are three that bear record in heaven, the ^g Father, the ^h Word, and the ⁱ Holy Ghost: and these three are one.

8 And there are three that bear witness in earth, the ^j spirit, and the ^k water, and the ^l blood: and these three agree in one.

9 If we receive the witness of men, the witness of God is greater: for this is the witness of God which he hath testified of his Son.

10 He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness ^m in himself: he that believeth not God hath made him a liar; because he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son.

11 And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and ⁿ this life is in his Son.

12 He ^o that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life.

13 These things have I written unto you that

A. M. 407.
A. D. 68.
d 1Co 15 57
e Jn 19 34.
f Jn 14 17
g Jn 8 18.
h 1Jo 4 12.
i Ro 19 13.
j Jn 10 39.
k Jn 15 26.
l Ac 2 22.
m Ro 8 16.
n Jn 1 14.
o Jn 5 24.

p Jn 20 31.
q or, concerning.
r Ps 17 29.
s Jc 22 12, 13.
t Mat 12 31, 32.
u Je 7 16.
v Ro 5 26, 27.
w Ja 1 37.
x 1Jo 2 14 35.
y 1Jo 9 6.
z 1Co 10 14.

believe on the name of the Son of God; that ye may know that ye have eternal life, and that ye may believe on the name of the Son of God.

14 And this is the confidence that we have in him, that, if we ask any thing according to his will, he heareth us:

15 And if we know ^r that he hear us, whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petitions that we desired of him.

16 If any man see his brother sin a sin which is not unto death, he shall ask, and he shall give him life for them that sin not unto death. There is a sin unto ^s death: I do ^t not say that he shall pray for it.

17 All unrighteousness ^u is sin: and there ^v is a sin not unto death.

18 We know that whosoever is born of God sinneth not; but he that is begotten of God keepeth ^w himself, and that wicked one toucheth him not.

19 And we know that we are of God, and the whole world lieth in wickedness.

20 And we know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us an ^x understanding, that we may know him that is true, and we are in him that is true, even in his Son Jesus Christ. This ^y is the true God, and eternal life.

21 Little children, keep yourselves from ^z idols. Amen.

was much in years, and unable to preach, he used to be led to the church at Ephesus, and to address them in these simple words—"Little children, love one another."

We now come to a passage relative to the Holy Trinity, the authenticity of which has been much disputed, and has been given up by some of the ablest advocates of that doctrine, as will be seen in our notes. To us it appears, that the internal evidence arising from the context is in favour of the passage; but the external, arising from the collation of nearly 150 manuscripts, the ancient versions, &c., is decidedly against it. One thing, however, is certain, that, in the words disputed, nothing is stated but what may be proved from other passages of Scripture; nor is there reason to believe, that either the insertion or omission was made with any design to corrupt the Scriptures. The former might be done by way of explanatory note, or the latter through inadvertence.

The testimony here borne is to the truth of Christianity, in whatever way it may be explained. The Father bore witness to the Son, by the works which the latter performed in his name, and by a miraculous voice from heaven; the Son (or Word) bore witness to himself, by the miracles which he wrought in his own name; and the Holy Spirit also bore witness in his miraculous gifts, and the inspiration of the sacred writings: and the second series of witnesses, however their evidences may be explained, are certainly to the same effect. "And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and that life is in his Son."

Now he that believeth in the Son of God, "hath the witness in himself"—not an imaginary conceit—not an unfounded persuasion, but an evidence in his own heart from the work of God's Holy Spirit, who has created therein a love to holiness in all its branches. "The gospel of Christ (says the amiable Dr. Watts) is like a seal or signet of such inimitable and divine engraving, that no created power can counterfeit it; and when the Spirit of God has stamped this gospel on the soul, there are so many holy and happy lines drawn or impressed thereby—so many sacred signatures and divine features stamped on the mind, that give certain evidence both of a heavenly signet, and a heavenly operat r."

But "there is a sin unto death," and this forms an awful and important subject of inquiry. The nature of it is thus stated by Dr. Doddridge—"There is . . . such an apostasy from Christianity, as is attended with blaspheming the operations of the Spirit of God, and ascribing them to Satan;"—an apostasy like that mentioned by St. Paul as irrecoverable, (Heb. vi. 1, 6,) and attended with the horrid aggravation of ascribing the operations of God's Holy Spirit to the devil. (Mat. xii. 31, 32.) "I say not," says St. John, who probably witnessed the awful denunciation of Christ—"I say not that he (or any man) shall pray for it;" and yet he does not absolutely forbid it. For we may not be able absolutely to ascertain the fact, nor must we attempt to restrain the divine mercy.

The concluding admonition of this Epistle, "Little children, keep yourselves from idols," has been supposed by some to prove it was addressed to Gentiles, the Jews having long since given up idolatry. But are there no idols but images of metal, wood, or stone? Are there no idols of flesh and blood? Or is Mammon, the god of this world, no longer worshipped? May God preserve us all from idols!

Ver. 6. This is he that came by water and blood—That is, he was baptized first by water, and then by blood, and in both cases did the Holy Spirit bear witness. See Mat. iii. 17; xvi. 5; compare note on ver. 8, below. See also John xii. 28.

Ver. 7, 8. There are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost: and these three are one.—The probability is, (says Dr. Pusey Smith) that this passage was originally a marginal comment on the Spirit, the water, and the blood; and was introduced, by the ignorance or the predilection of transcribers, into the text of the Vulgate Latin version. There is no authority for it whatsoever in any manuscripts of the Greek original, except one, which is too modern to be of much value. But it should be recollected, that critical discussion upon the authenticity of any document, should be carried on with the most rigorous impartiality, and without either favour or disfavour to particular doctrines which the document might affect; that many who have denied the doctrines of the Trinity and the divine nature of the Saviour, have admitted the common reading of these texts; and that many other persons who reject this passage . . . are fully convinced of the truth of those doctrines, because they believe the general tenor of Scripture, and the declaration of particular passages, both numerous and forcible, to be in their favour. Omitting the doubtful words, the passage reads thus: "There are three that bear record, the spirit, the water, and the blood; and these three agree in one."

In consequence of the above facts, the disputed words were omitted in several Protestant editions of the New Testament by Luther and Erasmus; and since, by Neacombe, Griesbach, and others; also in several editions of the English Bible, in the reigns of Henry VIII., Edward VI., and Queen Elizabeth, they are either placed within brackets, (as by Doddridge,) or printed in a smaller type, as of doubtful authority. In some copies, also, the 8th verse is placed before the 7th. On the other hand, it is but justice to acknowledge, that the number of MSS. which have been examined and collated, makes but a small proportion of those existing, many of which are locked up in the libraries of the Catholic and Greek churches; so that it is yet possible, as the late Bishop Middleton suggests, that some future inquiries may materially change the state of the question.

Ver. 7. These three are one.—The witnessing of the Father and the Holy Spirit to the mission of Christ, as also his own witness to the truth, are clearly and repeatedly referred to in the New Testament; and their union is no less intimated in Mat. xxviii. 19, and other scriptures.

Ver. 8. These three agree in one—i. e. in the same testimony; but what may be meant by the miraculous gifts of the Spirit, the baptismal water, and the sacramental blood; so Macknight. But the expression might, perhaps, be referred to the scene of Christ's death, when the departing spirit of our Saviour, and the blood and water flowing from his side, bore a united witness to the reality of his death. See John xix. 30, 31, 35. The Holy Spirit also bore witness to the efficacy of Christ's death and atonement, by raising him from the dead. See 1 Tim. iii. 16 1 Peter in 18.

Ver. 13. On the name—i. e. the person and character of the Son of God. Compare Mat. xxviii. 19—And that ye may believe—with more assumed confidence.

Ver. 14. This is the confidence that we have in him—Doddridge, "towards him."

Ver. 18. Toucheth him not—Macknight, "I sayeth not hold on him;" i. e. does not claim him as his own.

Ver. 19. The whole world lieth in wickedness—Macknight, "Under the wicked one." (In, in the wicked one; is embraced in his arms, where it lies fast asleep, and carnally secure, denying its heat and power from its infernal fosterer. "In this short expression," says Wesley, "the horrible state of the world is pointed in the most lively colours; a compend on which we have in the actions, conversations, contracts, quarrels, and innuendoes of worldly men.)—Baxter. Not only was the Pagan world sunk into universal idolatry, but also the Jews themselves were sunk into a spirit of infidelity, no less dreadful and offensive.

Ver. 20. This is the true God, and eternal life.—Commentators are much divided, whether this sentence refers to Christ only, as both the true God and eternal life, (so Doddridge;) or whether the former member of the sentence refers to the Father, as "the true God," and the latter to the Son, as "eternal life."

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF JOHN.

[THIS short Epistle, and that which follows, being written, neither to any church by name, nor to the churches at large, but to private persons, had probably been kept for a considerable time in the possession of the families to whom they were originally sent, and were not discovered till long after the Apostles' decease, and after the death of the persons to whom they had been addressed. When first discovered, all the immediate vouchers for their authenticity were necessarily gone; and the church of Christ, ever on its guard against imposture, particularly in relation to writings professing to be the work of Apostles, hesitated to receive them into the number of canonical Scriptures, until it was fully ascertained that they were divinely inspired. Hence they were not generally known and acknowledged as the inspired production of St. John, in the earliest ages, in the decided manner that the preceding Epistle was; but their coincidence with it in sentiment, manner, and language, satisfied all at an early period, that they were written by the same person.]—B.

1 He exhorted a certain honorable matron, with her children, to persevere in Christian love and belief, lest they lose the reward of their former profession; 10 and to have nothing to do with those seducers that bring not the true doctrine of Christ Jesus;

THE elder unto the elect lady and her children, whom I love in the truth; and not I only, but also all they that have known the truth;

2 For the truth's sake, which dwelleth in us, and shall be with us for ever.

3 Grace be with you, mercy, and peace, from God the Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of the Father, in truth and love.

4 I rejoiced greatly that I found of thy children walking in truth, as we have received a commandment from the Father.

5 And now I beseech thee, lady, not as though I wrote a new commandment unto thee, but that which we had from the beginning, that we love one another.

6 And this is love, that we walk after his commandments. This is the commandment, That, as ye have heard from the beginning, ye should walk in it.

A M. cur.
4073.
A D. cur.
69.

a 1 Jo 3 23.
b 1 Jo 14 15.
c 1

1 Jo 4 1.
d Ma 12 9.

e 1 Jo 3 16.
Re 3 11.

f or, gained.
ed. Some copies teel.
which yr hath gained,
but that ye

g 1 Jo 15 6.
h Ga 1 8, 9.

i 1 Th 5 22.
j mouth;
k or, your.

l 1 Jo 1 4.

7 For many deceivers are entered into the world, who confess not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh. This is a deceiver and an antichrist.

8 Look ye to yourselves, that we lose not those things which we have wrought, but that we receive a full reward.

9 Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son.

10 If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed:

11 For he that biddeth him God speed is partaker of his evil deeds.

12 Having many things to write unto you, I would not write with paper and ink; but I trust to come unto you, and speak face to face, that our joy may be full.

13 The children of thy elect sister greet thee. Amen.

Ver. 1—13. St. John commends a certain pious matron and her sons, and exhorts them to perseverance.—There seems no reason to question that this and the following epistle were written by St. John, though being addressed to private individuals might occasion them not to be received and recognised in the church so early as some others. They are generally supposed to have been written about the same time as the preceding, with which they correspond both in matter and style. The writer calls himself "The Elder," to which appellation he appears well entitled, as being now, probably, the only survivor of the apostles, and much advanced in years, which accounts for the use of his favourite appellation—"My little children."

The chief topics here mentioned are enlarged on in the preceding Epistle, viz., love to the brethren, and caution against deceivers and impostors. "For many deceivers are entered into the world, who confess not that Jesus Christ is (or has) come in the flesh." This corresponds with chap. ii. 1—3, of the first Epistle; and both passages refer to the rise of a heresy, even in the apostolic age, which supposed that Jesus Christ was possessed of human nature merely in appearance; and consequently that, in fact, he neither "died for our sins, nor rose again for our justification." This was the doctrine of the Gnostics, or at least of many of them; and their objection to the humanity of our Lord seems to have arisen from the notion that all matter was in itself essentially depraved, and the creation of the evil principle. They were also ashamed of the doctrine of the cross, and therefore some of them taught the strange idea, that Simon, the Cyrenian, was crucified instead of Jesus. Thus, though they admitted the divine mission of Jesus Christ, they denied that Christ (or the Messiah) was really come in the flesh, which St. John pronounces to be the mark of a deceiver and an antichrist, meaning thereby an enemy to Christ.

He cautions, therefore, the elect lady to whom he wrote, against being drawn aside from the truth by these deceivers. "Look to yourselves, that we lose not those things which we have wrought;" that is, that we do not lose our ministerial labour; from which we infer that the venerable apostle had been her Christian adviser, and probably, also, the instructor of her children. He then cautions her against showing such deceivers even the rights of hospitality; though it would certainly be a strain of the text to include in this prohibition the duties of humanity, to which all our fellow creatures are entitled. To admit such heretics, however, to our family and table conversation, might be injurious to our own peace, and destructive to the principles of our children and domestics, if not our own. At the same time, the countenance thereby given to such men might promote both the fundamental errors which they taught, and the immoralities they practised; for they are always spoken of, not as mistaken, but as wicked men.

Ver. 1 The elect lady.—[Gr. Eklete Kuria, which some, with the Peshito Syriac and Arabic versions, render, "to Kyria the elect," considering Kuria a proper name; while others, with the Vulgate, render, "to the Lady Electa," considering Eklete a proper name, which seems more correct.]—B. The learned Lord Barington conceived, that by this lady St. John meant a Christian church, which he did not think proper to name. The notion seems to have originated with Jerome, and was adopted by Hammond and Whitby; but it appears to us to be unfounded, and has not, we believe, at present, any advocates. Those here referred to, who denied that Christ was "come in the flesh," were probably the first Gnostics. See Dict. of Religions, &c. in Gnostics.

Ver. 3 Grace be.—Gr. "shall be"—with you.
Ver. 5 And now.—[The mode of address here shows, that it was a person, not a church, as some suppose, to whom the Apostle wrote.]—Bagster.

Ver. 7 For many deceivers are entered, &c.—Instead of are entered into, many excellent MSS. have, are gone out.—This is a deceiver and an antichrist.—Macknight. The deceiver and the antichrist;" which the learned (Granville Sharp) explains of "the spirit of antichrist himself, (i. e. Satan), as the first mover and instigator, either by himself or his agents, of all other deceivers."—St. Sauty on the case of Saul, &c.—Antichrist is a general name used by this apostle for all who opposed the truth and authority of Christ.

Ver. 8 Which we have wrought.—Margm. "gained." It is added, "Some copies read, Which we have gained, and that we received." &c. The copies here alluded to are, five of Stephen's MSS. the Alexandrian, and other MSS., the Vulgate, second Beza, and Ethiopic versions.

Ver. 10 Neither bid him God speed.—Doddridge, "Good success!"—i. e. in his propagation of error.
Ver. 12 Face to face.—Gr. "Mouth to mouth."

THE THIRD EPISTLE OF JOHN.

1 He commendeth Gaius for his piety, 5 and hospitality 7 to true travellers 9 commending of the unfriendly dealing of ambitious Diotrephes, on the contrary side, 11 whose evil example is not to be followed: 12 and giveth special testimony to the good report of Demetrius.

THE elder unto the well beloved Gaius, whom I love in the truth.

2 Beloved, I wish above all things that thou mayest prosper and be in health, even as thy soul prospereth.

A M. cur.
4073.
A D. cur.
69.

a or, truly
b or, pray

c 2 Jo 4.
d 2 Th 3 21.
e 1 Pe 4 10.

3 For I rejoiced greatly, when the brethren came and testified of the truth that is in thee, even as thou walkest in the truth.

4 I have no greater joy than to hear that my children walk in truth.

5 Beloved, thou doest faithfully whatsoever thou doest to the brethren, and to strangers;

Ver. 1—14. Gaius commended for his piety and hospitality to Christian teachers.—Several persons of this name are mentioned in the New Testament; this is thought to be the one named in Rom. xvi. 23, who had been remarkably hospitable,

Ver. 2 Above all things.—Doddridge, "In every respect."

Ver. 4 Walk in truth.—Doddridge, "in the truth" i. e. of the gospel
1351

6 Which have borne witness of thy charity before the church: whom if thou bring ¹ forward on their journey & after a godly sort, thou shalt do well:

7 Because that for his name's sake they went forth, taking ² nothing of the Gentiles.

8 We therefore ought to ³ receive such, that we might be fellow-helpers to the truth.

9 I wrote unto the church: but Diotrephes, who loveth to have the pre-eminence ⁴ among them, receiveth us not.

10 Wherefore, if I come, I will remember his deeds which he doeth, ⁵ prating against us with malicious words: and not content therewith, neither doth he himself receive the brethren,

A. M. cir. 4073.
A. D. cir. 69.
f Ac 15.3.
g worthy of God.
h 1 Co 9.15, 18.
i Mat. 10.40
j Mt. 23.4
k 1 Th. 6.3, 4
l 1 Pt. 10.8, 10
m Ps. 67.5.
n Ph. 37.27.
o 1 Jn. 3.6-9.
p mouth to mouth

and forbiddeth them that would, and casteth ⁶ them out ⁷ of the church.

11 Beloved, follow ⁸ me not that which is evil, but that which is good. He ⁹ that doeth good is of God: but he that doeth evil hath not seen God.

12 Demetrius hath good report of all ¹⁰ men, and of the truth itself: yea, and we ¹¹ also bear record; and ye know that our record is true.

13 I had many things to write, but I will not with ink and pen write unto thee:

14 But I trust I shall shortly see thee, and we shall speak ¹² face to face. Peace ¹³ be to thee. Our friends salute thee. Greet the friends by name.

and whom the apostle Paul therefore calls "my host," he having kindly entertained, and probably assisted him, in preaching the gospel gratis to the Gentiles; and St. John now requests him to assist certain others going on the same errand. This Gains, it should seem, though a man of a strong and liberal mind, was rather delicate in his health and constitution; and therefore the venerable elder prays that his body might prosper and be in health, even as his soul prospered.

But he severely censures the character of one Diotrephes, another person of wealth and consequence in the church, who, instead of delighting in works of beneficence, as Gains did, unhappily "loved to have the pre-eminence," and to rule

Ver. 6. After a godly sort.—Margin, "a sort worthy of God;" i. e. in a manner and with a temper suited to God's service.

Ver. 9. Who loveth to have, &c.—"Who loveth the pre-eminence;" or chief place, doubtless in the church, of which Diotrephes was most probably an when it was his duty to obey. A busy, prating, party man: a man of words, but not of deeds. A man who talked much about religion, but showed no kindness to the poor brethren; who even opposed and persecuted those who were so disposed. Him the aged apostle promises to call to account, if he should live to visit them: in the mean time he hesitates not to say, that such a man could not have seen God: that is, could not have had any believing views of him, nor have enjoyed any sweet communion with him.

But a third character is now introduced, even Demetrius, of whom nothing is known but what is here mentioned, that he had "a good report of all" who knew him, and "even of the truth itself."

officer; and being one, magnified himself in his office: he loved such pre-eminence, and behaved haughtily in it.—Bagster.

Ver. 14. Our friends.—[Instead of friends, an appellation used no where else as a mutual address among Christians, several MSS. read brethren.]—B.

THE GENERAL EPISTLE OF JUDE.

[JUDE, or JUDAS, the writer of this Epistle, is generally and justly considered to have been Jude the Apostle, called also Lebbaeus, whose surname was Thaddeus, brother of James the Less, (ver. 1.) and the brother, or near relative, of our Lord. Some hesitation, however, as to the genuineness of this Epistle, seems to have prevailed in the church, which was at length fully removed; though some learned modern writers, apparently on very slight grounds, have endeavoured to revive it. It is objected, that he calls himself, not an Apostle, but "a servant of Jesus Christ;" but so also does Paul, in his inscription to the Philippians; and the word apostle is omitted in the Epistle to Philemon; and in that to the Thessalonians: neither does John, in his Epistles, use the word apostle, nor mention his own name. Jude is also supposed to quote apocryphal books—for there is no evidence that this was really the case; but does not St. Paul quote heathen poets, and Jewish traditions, when what was true in them might be added to good purpose, without at all sanctioning the fables which they contained, or inducing a suspicion that he was not an inspired writer? (Acts xvii. 28. 1 Co. xv. 33. 2 Tim. ii. 8. Tit. i. 12.) These are the principal objections; and they amount to nothing against the internal evidence; and the general current of antiquity. Lardner shows, that it is found in all the ancient catalogues of the sacred writings of the New Testament, is considered genuine by Clement of Alexandria; and is quoted, as St. Jude's production, by Tertullian, by Origen, and by the greater part of the ancients mentioned by Eusebius. Its genuineness is fully established by the matter contained in it, which is every way worthy of an inspired Apostle of Jesus Christ; and, as MacKnight truly observes, there is no error taught, no evil practice enjoined, for the sake of which any impostor could be induced to impose a forgery of this kind on the world.]—Bagster.

He exhorts them to be constant in the profession of the faith. 4 False teachers are crept in to seduce them: for whose damnable doctrine and manners horrible punishment is prepared: 20 whereas the godly, by the assistance of the Holy Spirit, and prayers to God, may persevere, and grow in grace, and keep themselves, and recover others out of the snares of those deceivers

JUDE, ^a the servant of Jesus Christ, and brother of James, to them that are sanctified ^b by God the Father, and preserved ^c in Jesus Christ, and ^d called:

2 Mercy unto you, and peace, and love, be multiplied.

3 Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common ^e salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you that ye should earnestly contend ^f for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints.

4 For there are certain men crept in ^g un-

A. M. cir. 4069.
A. D. cir. 65.
a Lu 6.16.
b Ac. 20.32.
c 1 Pt. 1.5.
d Ro. 1.7.
e Tit. 1.4.
f Ga. 2.5.
g 2 Pt. 2.1.
h Ro. 9.22.
i Ty. 1.15.16.
j 1 Co. 10.5, 12.
k Nu. 14.29, 37.
l Ps. 116.19.
m 2n. 84.
n or, pre-eminently.
o 2 Pt. 2.4.
p Re. 30.10.
q Ec. 10.22.

awares, who ^h were before of old ordained to this condemnation, ungodly men, turning ⁱ the grace of our God into lasciviousness, and denying the only Lord God, and our Lord Jesus Christ.

5 I will therefore put you in remembrance, though ye once knew this, how that ^j the Lord, having saved the people out of the land of Egypt, afterward destroyed ^k them that believed not.

6 And the angels ^l which kept not their ^m first estate, but left their own habitation, he hath reserved in everlasting ⁿ chains under darkness unto the ^o judgment of the great day.

7 Even as ^p Sodom and Gomorrah, and the cities about them in like manner, giving them-

Ver. 1.—25. The apostle Jude exhorts the believers to whom he wrote, to adhere steadfastly to the truth, and to contend against false teachers and their erroneous doctrines.—This apostle (though his name was the same) must always be carefully distinguished from that Judas who betrayed his Master. On the contrary, this apostle was zealous on his

Ver. 1. Jude.—(Greek, Judas)—the servant of Jesus Christ, and brother of James—Who, as we find in Mat. x. 3, was also called Lebbaeus, whose surname was Thaddeus. This book, like the 2d of Peter, and some other Epistles, was at first scrupled, and by some rejected from the sacred canon, chiefly, as we believe, on account of its reference to the prophecy of Enoch, (of which in its place,) and perhaps some other apocryphal book; but, in our view of the subject, this is no reason for rejecting an inspired book, for the prophets themselves quote several books now lost, Josh. x. 13. Their quotations can only sanction what they quote, and that as to matters of fact only, unless they quote them as inspired. The authority of this book, however, is rejected only by such as reject St. Peter's second Epistle, which it very much resembles; nor can we reject either of them as inspired, without regarding them as forgeries, which is utterly improbable, as may be seen in Horne, and most writers upon the Canon.

Ver. 2. The common salvation.—i. e. the salvation of Christ, common to both Jews and Gentiles.

behalf, and in opposition to all antichristian errors. He therefore here exhorts the brethren to whom he wrote, to "contend earnestly for the faith, which was once delivered to the saints;" that is, for the great and fundamental truths of the gospel. In contending for truth, we of course oppose error; and two errors are here especially stated, as the most dangerous and

Ver. 4. Crept in.—Dodriddle, "glided in."—Of old ordained—Literally, "proscribed." (Beza, olim prescripti.) Dodriddle, "registered;" an allusion, as some think, to a custom among the Romans, of posting up in the forums the names of persons accused of certain crimes, with rewards for their apprehension, and sometimes for killing them. Such men, that wicked teachers or preachers, are proscribed in many parts of the word of God. See Psalm. l. 16. Some, however, refer this to the ancient philosophers respecting such men. See verse 14, &c.—The only Lord.—(Greek, despotes.)—Master. See note on 2 Peter ii. 1.—God.—This word (Theion) is wanting in several MSS., and in the Vulgate. Dodriddle reads it, "God the only Sovereign, and our Lord Jesus Christ;" Pye Smith, "Our only Sovereign and Lord Jesus Christ." MacKnight adheres to the common version, but admits the others to be equally mist.

Ver. 5. Destroyed them that believed not.—See Heb. iv. 1—3.

Ver. 6. Their first estate.—Margin, "principality." Dodriddle adheres to the former; but MacKnight observes they amount to the same meaning—their slaves over to fornication, and going after strange flesh, are set forth for an example, suffering the vengeance of eternal fire.

8 Likewise also these filthy dreamers defile the flesh, despise dominion, and speak evil of dignities.

9 Yet Michael the archangel, when contending with the devil he disputed about the body of Moses, durst not bring against him a railing accusation, but said, The Lord rebuke thee.

10 But these speak evil of those things which they know not; but what they know naturally, as brute beasts, in those things they corrupt themselves.

11 Wo unto them! for they have gone in the way of Cain, and ran greedily after the error of Balaam for reward, and perished in the gainsaying of Core.

12 These are spots in your feasts of charity, when they feast with you, feeding themselves without fear: clouds they are without water, carried about of winds; trees whose fruit withereth, without fruit, twice dead, plucked up by the roots;

13 Raging waves of the sea, foaming out their own shame; wandering stars, to whom is reserved the blackness of darkness for ever.

14 And Enoch also, the seventh from Adam, prophesied of these, saying, Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousand of his saints,

15 To execute judgment upon all, and to con-

A. M. 4890.

A. D. 65.

q. other.

2 Pet. 2. 10.

11.

12. 12. 1.

13. 13. 1.

14. 14. 1.

15. 15. 1.

16. 16. 1.

17. 17. 1.

18. 18. 1.

19. 19. 1.

20. 20. 1.

21. 21. 1.

22. 22. 1.

23. 23. 1.

24. 24. 1.

25. 25. 1.

26. 26. 1.

27. 27. 1.

28. 28. 1.

29. 29. 1.

30. 30. 1.

31. 31. 1.

32. 32. 1.

33. 33. 1.

34. 34. 1.

35. 35. 1.

36. 36. 1.

37. 37. 1.

38. 38. 1.

39. 39. 1.

40. 40. 1.

41. 41. 1.

42. 42. 1.

43. 43. 1.

44. 44. 1.

45. 45. 1.

46. 46. 1.

47. 47. 1.

48. 48. 1.

49. 49. 1.

50. 50. 1.

51. 51. 1.

52. 52. 1.

53. 53. 1.

54. 54. 1.

55. 55. 1.

56. 56. 1.

57. 57. 1.

58. 58. 1.

59. 59. 1.

60. 60. 1.

61. 61. 1.

62. 62. 1.

63. 63. 1.

64. 64. 1.

65. 65. 1.

66. 66. 1.

67. 67. 1.

68. 68. 1.

69. 69. 1.

70. 70. 1.

71. 71. 1.

72. 72. 1.

73. 73. 1.

74. 74. 1.

75. 75. 1.

76. 76. 1.

77. 77. 1.

78. 78. 1.

79. 79. 1.

80. 80. 1.

81. 81. 1.

82. 82. 1.

83. 83. 1.

84. 84. 1.

85. 85. 1.

vince all that are ungodly among them of all their ungodly deeds which they have ungodly committed, and of all their hard speeches which ungodly sinners have spoken against him.

16 These are murmurers, complainers, walking after their own lusts; and their mouth speaketh great swelling words, having men's persons in admiration because of advantage.

17 But, beloved, remember ye the words which were spoken before of the apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ;

18 How that they told you: there should be mockers in the last time, who should walk after their own ungodly lusts.

19 These be they who separate themselves, sensual, having not the Spirit.

20 But ye, beloved, building up yourselves on your most holy faith, praying in the Holy Ghost, 21 Keep yourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life.

22 And of some have compassion, making a difference:

23 And others save with fear, pulling them out of the fire; hating even the garment spotted by the flesh.

24 Now unto him that is able to keep you from falling, and to present you faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy,

25 To the only wise God our Saviour, be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever. Amen.

destructive—the abuse of the doctrines of grace, by “turning the grace of God into lasciviousness;” and the “denying (or renouncing) the only Lord God, and our Lord Jesus Christ;” or, as some render it, “our only Sovereign (or Master) and Lord, Jesus Christ.”

By way of caution and alarm, the aged apostle reminds the brethren of the following facts, as showing the awful nature and extreme danger of apostasy: namely, 1. The fall of the rebel angels, who, without the hope of a Redeemer, are confined in chains of darkness to the day of judgment. 2. The fate of Sodom and Gomorrah, destroyed by fire from heaven, and their inhabitants consigned to the same “everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels.” (Matt. xxv. 41.) the awful judgments whereby the unbelieving Israelites were destroyed, after their escape from Egypt. From all which we may collect that the men here referred to were unbelievers, like the last named—lustful as the Sodomites, and proud and rebellious as the apostate angels: filthy dreamers, that defile the flesh, and speak evil of dignities.

On this last point St. Jude adverts to the same circumstance alluded to by St. Peter, namely, the contest between Michael and Satan, relative to the body of Moses. Michael, the archangel, is first mentioned by the prophet Daniel, and is, by very able expositors, supposed to be the Son of God, as Captain of the Lord's host. But our translators, and most expositors of this Epistle, refer us to the prophecy of Zechariah, chap. iii. 1, &c.; the relation of which to the passage before us, we confess ourselves unable to demonstrate. But the great point argued by St. Jude is, the criminality of reviling those temporal rulers (whether the sovereign or his deputies) under whom Providence has been pleased to place us; and the hatred and persecution which has thereby been brought on peaceful Christians, is probably far more than has been supposed. But this is not all: these men are described as murderers, for they have gone in the way of Cain: covetous, for they have copied the error of Balaam; and, being rebellious against God, perish in “the gainsaying of Core,” or rather Korah. (Numb. xvi. 1, &c.)

In the black list of follies and vices, which here follows, we shall notice only the reference to the agape, or “love feasts,” which originally, according to Dr. Benson, were “frugal meals provided by the richer Christians to entertain the poor, the fatherless, the widows, and strangers.” They were generally held immediately before or after the Lord's Supper, and very early subjected to abuse, as we find, not only by St. Jude, but by St. Paul. To these feasts such men were spots, or blemishes; that is, a disgrace and reproach.

The apostle now quotes a prophecy, which he ascribes, and doubtless truly, to the holy “Enoch, the seventh from Adam.” It is well known, that a book under that title existed in the primitive church. This book has been recently discovered, and translated by Archbishop Laurence, of which the following is the passage quoted by our apostle in verse 14: “Behold, he comes with ten thousand of his saints, to execute judgment upon them, and to reprove all the carnal, for every thing which the sinful and ungodly have done and committed against him.”

Finally, St. Jude affectionately exhorts his brethren to remember the warnings which they had received from the other apostles, in their well known epistles, and, by a careful attention to the Scriptures, and other means of grace, to build up themselves in the most holy faith; and by praying under the influences of the Holy Spirit, to guard themselves against the danger of apostasy—to prepare for all the public and private trials of the present state, and the solemnities of eternal judgment. The Epistle finally concludes with a prayer and doxology to Christ: “To the only wise God our Saviour, be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever. Amen.”

original state was that of lenders, or princes, in the heavenly host.—But left their own habitation—More strictly, we conceive, the station assigned to them; which, we presume, was a voluntary act, and constituted their rebellion. This and the following verses may be compared with the 2d Epistle of Peter, chap. ii. ver. 4, 6, 10–12, &c.

Ver. 7. Going after strange flesh—Margm, “other flesh.” The fact appears to be, that they gave themselves up to all kinds of uncleanness: the more abominable, the more agreeable to their depraved minds.

Ver. 9. Michael the archangel—Peter says, “Angels, which are greater (or exalting) in power and might.” 2 Pet. ii. 11.—About the body of Moses—Tillotson thinks this may allude to Deut. xxxiv. 6; and that Satan wished to discover the body of Moses, that he might tempt the Jews to worship him. Macknight supposes, that by the body of Moses might be meant the Jewish church, as the Christian church is called “the body of Christ,” 1 Co. xii. 27.

—Durst not—Doddridge, “Did not presume to”—bring. Tillotson witily suggests, that the angel was afraid the devil would be too hard for him at railing. See Doddridge.

Ver. 10. But what—Doddridge, “And what.”—They corrupt themselves—Doddridge, “are corrupted.”

Ver. 12. These are spots in your feasts of charity—Literally, “love feasts.”

—Feeding themselves without fear—i. e. without caution, till they eat and drink to excess. To this St. Paul is also supposed to allude, 1 Co. x. 21.

Ver. 13. Wandering stars—Greek, “planets,” in which two ideas may be suggested, namely, that they are always changing their aspects and situations, and that they shine only by a borrowed light.

Ver. 15. Engulfed committed—Doddridge, “unwisely committed.”

Ver. 23. The garment spotted by the flesh—i. e. a leprous garment. Or perhaps the allusion may be to Zecl. iii. 4, 5.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE EPISTLE OF JUDE.

[ST. JUDE, says Origen, has written an Epistle in a few lines indeed, but full of vigorous expressions of his own mind. He boldly and fearlessly represents the detestable doctrines and practices of certain false teachers, generally supposed to be the mime Gnostics, Neoplatonists, and followers of Simon Magus; and reproves these profligate perverters of sound principles and patrons of lewdness, with a holy indignation and just severity; while at the same time he exhorts all sound Christians, with genuine apostolic charity, to have tender compassion on these deluded wretches, and to endeavor vigorously to reclaim them from the ways of hell, and pluck them as brands out of the fire.

The great similarity between this Epistle and the second chapter of the second Epistle of Peter, has already been noticed. Both writers are nearly alike in subject, style, vocabulary, and holy indignation against impudence and lewdness, and against those who maliciously undermine Christianity, purity, and sound principles. The expressions are remarkably strong, the language animated, and the figures and comparisons bold, apt, and striking. There are no nobler applications in any author, than in these writers, when they expose the delinquencies of these false teachers, which they severely brand, completely expose, and yet happily express in all the purity and chastity of language.—B.

book, that prefixed at the head being attributed to Eusebius, who added the term "the divine," or "Theologian," in reference to the sublime nature of his

3 Blessed ^a is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy, and keep those things which are written therein: for the time ^b is at hand.

4 JOHN to the seven ^c churches which are in Asia: Grace ^d be unto you, and peace, from him ^e which is, and which was, and which is to come; and from the seven ^f Spirits which are before his throne;

5 And from Jesus Christ, ^g who is the faithful witness, and the ^h first begotten of the dead, and the prince of the kings of the earth. Unto him that loved ⁱ us, and washed ^j us from our sins in his own blood,

6 And hath made us kings and priests unto God and his Father: to him ^k be glory and dominion for ever and ever. Amen.

7 Behold, he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him, and they ^l also which pierced him: and all kindreds of the earth shall wail ^m because of him. Even ⁿ so, Amen.

8 I ^o am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending, saith the Lord, which is, and which was, and which is to come, the ^p Almighty.

A. M. 400
cir. 400
b. J. 580
1 Pe 17.
c. 11.
1 Pe 17.
e. 11.
1 Pe 17.
f. 11.
1 Pe 17.
g. 11.
1 Pe 17.
h. 11.
1 Pe 17.
i. 11.
1 Pe 17.
j. 11.
1 Pe 17.
k. 11.
1 Pe 17.
l. 11.
1 Pe 17.
m. 11.
1 Pe 17.
n. 11.
1 Pe 17.
o. 11.
1 Pe 17.
p. 11.
1 Pe 17.

9 I John, who also am your brother, and companion in tribulation, and in the kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ, was in the isle that is called Patmos, for the word of God, and for the testimony of Jesus Christ.

10 I was in the ^r Spirit on the ^s Lord's day, and heard behind me a great voice, as of a trumpet.

11 Saying, I am Alpha and Omega, the first and the last: and, What thou seest, write in a book, and send ^t it unto the seven churches which are in Asia; unto ^u Ephesus, and unto ^v Smyrna, and unto ^w Pergamos, and unto ^x Thyatira, and unto ^y Sardis, and unto ^z Philadelphia, and unto ^{aa} Laodicea.

12 And I turned to see the voice that spake with me. And being turned, I saw seven ^{ab} golden candlesticks;

13 And in the midst of the seven candlesticks ^{ac} one ^{ad} like unto the Son of man, clothed with a garment down to the foot, and girt about the paps with a golden girdle.

14 His head and ^{ae} his hairs were white like wool, as white as snow; and his eyes ^{af} were as a flame of fire;

the order of primacy in the former, and mediatorial subordination in the latter, is expressly maintained in accordance with the whole tenor of revealed truth." So Dr. Woodhouse observes, "The scheme of the Christian revelation is mediatorial throughout. God [the Father] giveth to the Son, dispensing knowledge and favour through him." This knowledge was by the Son, and, through the Spirit, communicated to his servant John; and thus the most perfect harmony, or rather unity, is preserved between the Father, the Word, and the Holy Spirit. This John, to whom the communication was made, could be none other than the Evangelist; for he it was who bore record of the divine Logos in his gospel, (John i. 1,) and he it is who now records the testimony of Jesus Christ, and the divine visions to him exhibited.

The blessing which here follows, and is pronounced upon the reader of this book, was undoubtedly designed to encourage Christians to the study of it, and that practically; for the blessing is not pronounced on those who merely peruse it, either in a cursory or studious way; but on those who keep in mind the things that are written, by a practical attention to their design. (See Deut. vi. 6-9.) And the more to stimulate the readers to this attention, it is added, "the time is at hand" when these predictions should be fulfilled. Not all of them, assuredly; for they embrace the whole dispensation of Providence to the end of time; but the meaning is, that their fulfilment was immediately to commence, and to proceed with a rapidity which demanded their utmost vigilance and attention. "We must keep them (says Mr. Fuller) as one engaged in a voyage through dangerous seas keeps his chart, and consults it on all necessary occasions."

John now commences his address to the seven churches of preconsular Asia, all which we must suppose at this time to have been existing, and which (as may be seen in the map) lay within a narrow circle. The apostolical benediction and doxology here introduced, are in a style peculiar to this book. The periphrasis, "Who is, who was, and who is to come," is agreed to designate God the Father. The "seven Spirits before the throne," the best commentators agree, are intended to represent "the various gifts and graces of the Holy Spirit." So the venerable Bede himself says, "The one Holy Spirit is here described as sevenfold, by which is intimated, in prophetic language, fulness and perfection." Who it is that "loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood," no Christian needs to be informed. If it be asked, why it is that the son of God is here placed the last of the sacred Three, it is answered, because on his name and character the apostle intended to dilate.

The next verse has been remarked as containing the whole burden of these Epistles, and is introduced, not in the cold style of a philosopher, but in the rapturous language of a prophet. "Behold he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him; and they also which pierced him, and all the earth shall wail because of him." The expression, "they also which pierced him," though it must, in the first place, refer to those who were his immediate murderers, must not be confined to them. Every one who claims an interest in the Saviour's sacrifice, must confess a share in the guilt for which he suffered. So under the Mosiac law, he who brought a bullock for his atonement, laid his hand upon the head of the animal, as an acknowledgment of his guilt. (See Levit. i. 4.)

A voice is then heard declaring, "I am Alpha and Omega," that is, the first and the last; or, as here follows, "the beginning and the ending;" the first cause, and final end, of all created beings. It has been, however, disputed, whether these should be considered as the words of the Father, or of Christ. Mr. Fuller says—"That these were his (Christ's) words, and not those of the Father, will appear from comparing them with chap. i. 1; and xii. 6-10. It was Jesus Christ, and not the Father, who communicated through the angel with his servant John. The Father is sometimes referred to in the prophecy; but, if I mistake not, in the third person only; not as speaking, but as spoken of." The circumstance, however, of its being left doubtful by the sacred writers, to whom such passages should be referred, whether to the Father or the Son, is, with us, a powerful argument for their essential equality; for surely the Holy Spirit would never have laid us under such temptations to idolatry, as must be the case, if both were not entitled to the same divine honours.

Ver. 9-20. The first vision of the Son of God.—The apostle John informs us, that he was at this time banished to the isle of Patmos, "for the word of God, and for the testimony of Jesus Christ." This Patmos is a small island (as the maps show) in the Mediterranean Sea, not far from the coast of Asia, nor, indeed, from any of the churches which he now addressed. But the apostle, in mentioning this circumstance, gives no note of date, which also is the case with his other Epistles, as well as his Gospel. This date can only be drawn from history; and Drs. Lardner, Woodhouse, and others, have written. It may also be remarked, that this is the only apostolical writing, and John the only apostle, to whose name our translators have prefixed the term Seer;—Seer being a by age.—In the style of prophecy, Leviticus says, "every thing is called an Angel that notifies a message from God; but as one or more angels, in the proper sense of the term, seem to be employed in every vision here recorded, there seems no occasion to seek another explanation."

Ver. 2. Who have read of the word (Greek, Logos) of God.—Namely, in his Gospel, which seems to refer to his first chapter; and it so plainly intimated that his Gospel was written before this work, and probably before his Epistles also; but this cannot be ascertained.

Ver. 4. To the seven churches—The number seven, among the Hebrews, signifies completeness, whence some have supposed the phrase intends all the churches in Asia; but as seven are distinctly named, there seems no room for this supposition. The number seven, however, has a reigning influence throughout the book; we have seven spirits, seven angels, seven seals, &c. &c.; and the same number predominated through the Mosiac dispensation, and might, as some suppose, originate with the seven days of the creation.—In Asia.—See note on Acts vi. 10.

Ver. 5. The first begotten.—Doddridge and Woodhouse, "first-born."

Ver. 7. And without end.—See Doddridge and Woodhouse, "infinite."

Ver. 8. I am Alpha and Omega.—These are the first and last letters of the Greek alphabet, used symbolically: so the Rabbin used Alpha and Tau, the first and last letters of the Hebrew alphabet. The Syriac reads Omega and Tau; the Arabic, Alpha and Yea—Gill.

Ver. 9. Patmos.—This island contains an excellent harbour, and the town consists of about 200 houses, which are said to be raised nearly 500 feet above the level of the sea; and the records show a grotto, in which they pretend that St. John wrote these visions.—For the word of God, &c.—Compare chap. vi. 9.—And for the testimony—i. e. as witnesses and martyrs; for Jesus Christ.

Ver. 10. I was in the Spirit—i. e. prophetically inspired.—on the Lord's day—i. e. the Christian Sabbath—the first day of the week, so called, because on that day our Lord arose from the dead. The same expression is used by Isaiah, to distinguish the first day from the seventh.

Ver. 11. The first and the last.—This differs from the explanation of the mystic letters, alpha and omega, more in sound than in sense; that they can apply only to the great Supreme, see Isa. xlv. 6, xlvii. 12, 13.—Smyrna.—[Now Ismir], is a celebrated city of Asia Minor, situated on the shore of the Ægean sea, about 18 miles W. by S. of Constantinople, 100 miles N. of Rhodes, and between 30 and 40 miles N. W. of Ephesus, in lat. 38 25' N. and long. 27 5' E. It is at present about 1 mile in circumference, extending about a mile along the shore, and has a very kamisone appearance; its population is about 120,000 souls.—Buzze.

Ver. 12. Seven golden candlesticks.—Doddridge, "lamps." Woodhouse, "lamps."

Ver. 13. Girt about the paps.—Doddridge and Woodhouse, "breasts."

Ver. 14. His eyes were as a flame of fire.—This is a common figure in poetry: thus H. of Apollo, "His eyes shone fire;" and Homer of Mueneva, "Her eyes shone dreadful." How ridiculous, therefore, as well as profane, is it to ridicule this image, as some indeed have lately done.

15 And his feet ^a like unto fine brass, as if they burned in a furnace; and his voice ^e as the sound of many waters.

16 And he had in his right hand seven stars: and out of his mouth went a ^f sharp two-edged sword: and his countenance was as the sun ^g shineth in his strength.

17 And when I saw him, I fell at his feet as dead. And he laid his right hand upon me, saying unto me, Fear not; I am the first and the last:

18 I am he that ^h liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys ⁱ of hell and of death.

19 Write the things which thou hast seen, and the things which are, and the things which shall be hereafter;

20 The mystery of the seven ^j stars which

A. M. cir.
4100.
A. D. cir.
96
d Eze. 1.7.
e Eze. 43.2.
f 1c. 19.2.
g Ac. 28.13.
h Ro. 6.9.
i Ps. 67.3.
j ver. 16.

k Mat. 5.15, 16.
l 1c. 16.50.
m Ps. 118.
n ver. 9, 13, 15.
o 3. 1. 4. 1.
p 2 Co. 11. 13

thou sawest in my right hand, and the seven golden candlesticks. The seven stars are the angels of the seven churches: and the seven candlesticks ^k which thou sawest are the seven churches.

CHAPTER II.

What is commanded to be written to the angels, that is, the ministers of the churches of 1. Ephesus, 2. Smyrna, 3. Pergamos, 4. Thyatira: and what is commended, & found wanting in them.

UNTO the angel of the church of Ephesus write; These things saith he that ^a holdeth the seven stars in his right hand, who walketh in the midst of the seven golden candlesticks;

2 I know ^b thy works, and thy labour, and thy patience, and how thou canst not bear them which are evil: and thou hast tried ^c them which say they are apostles, and are ^d not, and hast found them liars:

clearly shown, as stated in our Introduction, that the general testimony of the ancients favours the opinion of his tamishment having taken place toward the end of Domitian's reign. Irenæus, who flourished in the beginning of the second century, says of the Revelation, (meaning, doubtless, the scenery herein described,) "it was seen no long time ago, but almost in our age, at the end of the reign of Domitian;" and Clement of Alexandria, who flourished in the beginning of the third century, speaks of John's returning from Patmos to Ephesus after the death of the tyrant, by whom he is supposed to mean the emperor just mentioned.

As the first thing toward a right interpretation of this book is, a correct conception of the imagery employed, to that object we shall pay a primary attention. Much of this scenery is borrowed from the temple, and the dress in which the Son of God here appears, seems to be that of the Jewish High Priest; but his person infinitely more glorious. His countenance as the sun; his locks white as snow when irradiated by the sun; his eyes darting ethereal flames, and his feet slinging like smelting brass in the furnace. Here the prophet saw seven candlesticks or lamp-burners, not joined together in the manner of the candelabrum or chandelier in the tabernacle (described Exod. xxv. 31, &c.) but, as it should seem, distinct; for the Christian churches are not all united in one form, as was the Jewish, nor dependent upon one tabernacle or temple: but alone on Him who "walketh in the midst" or before the front of them, as we understand it, to furnish or superintend their light.

These lamps were not illumined in the ordinary manner, with wicks and oil, but by stars, signifying the angels, ministers, and messengers of these churches, which the great High Priest holds in his hand: not separately, as we conceive, but in the form of either a cluster, or perhaps a kind of orrery, such as some have supposed was placed on the top of Solomon's celebrated pillars—Jachin and Boaz. This vision, while it was intended to animate and encourage, was for the moment overpowering. The beloved apostle fell at the Saviour's feet as dead. Instantly, however, he stretched forth his right hand to communicate a touch, like that which, during his abode on earth, could cure the sick and raise the dead. "Fear not, (said he,) I am the first and the last—he that liveth and was dead!"—"This word, Fear not, (says Dr. Woodhouse,) is the comforting assurance to the Virgin, to Zacharias, to the shepherds, and to the women at the sepulchre, under similar impressions."

We must here pause a moment and attend to the directions given to the prophet to write.—"Write the things which thou hast seen, and the things which are, and the things which shall be hereafter." Mr. Loewman and Dr. Woodhouse divide these matters of record into two classes,—1. The things which John had seen and was now seeing, he classes with things that are, dividing the whole into things present and things future; but Mr. Fuller has a thought peculiar to himself, and which we think, like most of his conceptions, merits our particular attention. He considers these predictions as having a retrospective view from the ascension of Christ, and including two great objects which most other expositors omit—namely, the progress of the gospel from that period, and the destruction of Jerusalem, with all its attendant horrors.

"Surely (says Mr. Fuller) it must appear singular, that in a prophetic description of the success of the gospel in the early ages, the most glorious part of it should be left out: and that, in a like description of the wars between the Jews and Romans, the most terrible part should be omitted." The reason given by Mr. Loewman for its being omitted, is, "The destruction of Jerusalem being past, can hardly be supposed to be denoted by a prediction of a judgment to come." Doubtless it is in general true, (continues Mr. Fuller,) that prophecies are predictions of things to come; in some instances, however, they may refer to events, the beginnings of which are already accomplished. There is a remarkable instance of this in the prophecies of Daniel, concerning the four monarchies. He speaks of his seeing them all rise up out of the sea, (Dan. vii. 1—3;) yet, at the time of the vision, the first of them, namely, Babylon, had risen and reigned, and was near its end; for it was in the first year of Belshazzar, who was its last king. And why should not the apostle, in like manner, begin the prophecy with the commencement of the Christian dispensation, though he wrote above sixty years after it? This makes the sealed book to contain a perfect system of New Testament prophecy, from the ascension of Christ to the end of all things.

Of this suggestion, which appears to us perfectly correct, we shall avail ourselves in explaining the visions of the seals; in the mean time, we must return to the Epistles to the seven churches. Many commentators conceive these also to be prophetic of the seven stages of the Christian church at large. But for this we perceive no foundation; and we are happy to find that Ep. Newton, and the most respectable expositors since his time, are of the same opinion. "But it doth not appear (says the learned prelate) that there are, or were to be, seven periods of the church, neither more nor less; and no two men can agree in assigning the same periods. There are likewise in these epistles several innate characters, which are peculiar to the church of that age, and cannot be so well applied to the church of any other age. Besides other arguments, there is also this plain reason; the last state of the church is described in this very book as most glorious of all; but in the last state in these Epistles, that of Laodicea, the church is represented as 'wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked.' But though these Epistles have rather a literal than a mystical meaning, yet they contain excellent moral precepts and exhortations, commendations and reproofs, promises and threatenings, which may be of use and instruction to the church in all ages."

CHAP. II. Ver. 1—11. Epistles to the churches of Ephesus and Smyrna.—These Epistles are all addressed to the angels of the several churches; by whom we are to understand their respective ministers, pastors, or bishops, who are to be considered as their representatives also, through whom the respective churches are themselves addressed. Of these the church of Ephesus is the first; to which is addressed both commendation and reproof. Alluding to the character in which Jesus appears as the true light, guide, and defender of his churches, he says, "I know thy works, and thy labour, and thy patience;" and particularly commends them for rejecting false prophets and impostors. Especially are they commended for hating "the deeds of the Nicolaitanes," which (says the Lord) I also hate. What these deeds were, it is not easy to ascertain. Ecclesiastical historians charge them with a criminal licentiousness, in holding a community of wives. They boasted, as their founder, one of the first seven deacons, Nicolas, the proselyte of Antioch: but "whether he countenanced such conduct, or whether they abused his name to sanction it, is not now easily to be ascertained. Nor is it quite certain that he is the person whom they claimed as their founder, since Nicolas was a common name among the Greeks."

It is probable that all these churches had been planted by Paul: this is clear, at least, as to the church at Ephesus, in which city he was severely persecuted by Demetrius and his craftsmen, as we have already seen on Acts xix. 24, &c. Persecution is generally friendly to piety in the subjects of such

Ver. 15. His feet like unto fine brass, &c.—Woodhouse, "like smelting brass;" i. e. glowing with the heat of the furnace.—As the sound of many waters.—That is, of conflicting seas meeting each other. See Acts xxvii. 41.

Ver. 16. A sharp two-edged sword.—This is in perfect harmony with the prophetic language of the writers of both Testaments. See Isa. xl. 4; xlix. 2.

Ver. 18. Have the keys of hell—(Greek, "Hades,") or the invisible world. See Ps. xvi. 10. Mat. xvi. 18. Both Doddridge and Woodhouse take the term in its most extensive import.

Ver. 20. The mystery—i. e. the mystical or spiritual sense of the enigmas.

CHAP. II. Ver. 1. Unto the angel, &c.—Jennings says, Next to the chief ruler of the synagogue was an officer who offered public prayers, and was therefore called their angel.—Jewish Antiq. book ii. chap. ii.—Candlesticks.—See chap. i. 12.

Ver. 2. Which say they are apostles.—It appears by this verse, that some of the false teachers which troubled the church in the first ages, pretended to be apostles. These the church of Ephesus could not endure.

3 And hast borne, and hast patience, and for my name's sake hast laboured, and hast not [†]fainted.

4 Nevertheless I have something against thee, because thou hast left thy first love.

5 Remember therefore from whence thou art fallen, and repent, and do the first [†]works; or else I will come unto thee quickly, and will remove [‡]thy candlestick out of his place, except thou repent.

6 But this thou hast, that thou hatest the deeds of the [‡]Nicolaitanes, which I also hate.

7 He [†]that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches; To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree [‡]of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God.

8 And unto the angel of the church in Smyrna write: These things saith the [‡]first and the last, which was dead, and is alive;

9 I know thy works, and tribulation, and poverty, (but thou art [†]rich) and I know the blasphemy of them which say they are [‡]"Jews," and are not, but are the synagogue [‡]of Satan.

10 Fear none of those things which thou shalt suffer: behold, the devil shall cast some of you into prison, that ye may be tried; and ye shall have tribulation ten days: be thou faithful

A 11 cir
4000
A 13 cir
96

† Gal 6:9

† Je 2:2, 3

g Alad 1

41, 43

h ver 43

i Mat 11:15

ver 11, 17,

39

j Ge 2:9

c 22:3, 14

k c 1:8, 17

l 1:7b, 6:14

m Ro 2:28,

29

n c 3:9

o Mat 10:22

p Ju 1:12

q c 29:14

r c 1:16

s ver 9

t 3:12

u Na 3:16

v Je 15:21

w 1:6, 13,

18

x Is 41:1

y ver 7

z c 3:11,

22

unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life.

11 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches; He that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second [‡]death.

12 And to the angel of the church in Pergamos write: These things saith [†]he which hath the sharp sword with two edges;

13 I know [†]thy works, and where thou dwellest, even where Satan's seat is; and thou holdest fast my name, and hast not denied [†]my faith, even in those days wherein Antipas was my faithful martyr, who was slain among you, where Satan dwelleth;

14 But I have a few things against thee, because thou hast there them that hold the doctrine of Balaam, who [‡]taught Balac to cast a stumbling-block before the children of Israel, to eat [†]things sacrificed unto idols, and to commit [†]fornication.

15 So hast thou also them that hold the doctrine of the Nicolaitanes, which thing I hate.

16 Repent; or else I will come unto thee quickly, and [‡]will fight against them with the sword of my mouth.

17 He [†]that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches; To him persecution; but after that subsided it seems that the Ephesians lost "their first love;" that is, abated in the fervour of their piety and zeal; and therefore are they exhorted to "repent, and do their first works."

Ephesus was the chief city of proconsular Asia, and was at that time immensely rich, and devoted to luxury and idolatry. "Great is Diana of the Ephesians!" was their cry; and the chief cause of their alarm was, lest their favourite "goddess should be despised, and her magnificence destroyed."

But, alas! how frail and uncertain are all terrestrial things! This mighty city is now reduced to about fifteen poor cottages, inhabited by Turks, (who call it Aischik;) and this flourishing church was, in 1516, reduced to three individual Christians, one only of whom could read; and who knew nothing of Paul, but by his name in the Calendar.—(See Orient. Lit. No. 1348.)

Each of these addresses finishes with a promise on perseverance; and the promise here is—"To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God." Of this tree we shall have a fuller account, chap. xxi. 2. Life and immortality are the sure reward of victory in the Christian contest.

The next address is to the church at Smyrna, of which no other mention is made in the New Testament; our Scripture knowledge of it is, therefore, solely confined to this account. The church at Smyrna was, at this time, in the midst of tribulation and poverty, arising, most probably, from the persecution they had endured. They were, however, rich in grace; and though they are taught to expect farther persecution, they are assured also of support and final victory. There were, notwithstanding, among these pious Christians, some who belonged to the synagogue of Satan; some, indeed, who boasted of being Abraham's seed, but were not the children of his faith. It is predicted, "The devil shall cast some of you into prison, that ye may be tried; and ye shall have tribulation ten," that is, many "days." Nearly seventy years after the visions of the Apocalypse, a heavy persecution broke out in this city; and their Bishop, Polycarp, signalized himself, by the courage and fortitude with which he suffered, in an extreme old age. When threatened with the most terrible deaths, and urged to pity his own gray hairs, he nobly replied, "Eighty and six years have I served Christ, and he has never done me any wrong; how, then, can I blaspheme my King and my Saviour?" And when, in particular, he was threatened with the flames, by which, indeed, he suffered, he retorted—"Thou threatenest me with fire which burns but for an hour, and is then extinguished; but knowest not the fire of future judgment, and of that eternal punishment, which is reserved for the ungodly;"—in which he plainly alludes to "the second death" here mentioned, and from which exemption is here promised; and not only exemption from this death, but also "a crown of immortal life."

Smyrna is still a very considerable place, and supposed to contain 140,000 inhabitants.—Greeks, Armenians, Catholics, Jews, and Protestants; of the latter, only 140 individuals. What a field is here for missions!

Ver. 12.—29. Epistles to the churches of Pergamos and Thyatira.—Pergamos is described by Pliny the elder, as the most famous city of Asia, having been adorned and enriched by a long succession of Attalian kings, and now become the residence of a Roman consul. Wealth and luxury of course fitted it for a "throne of Satan," as might be expected of a Pagan metropolis. The city is now called Bergamo, and is said to contain about 15,000 inhabitants; Greeks, Armenians, Jews, &c. about 2000; but all the rest Turks. Most of the churches are turned into mosques, but there remains one for the Greeks, and another for the Armenians. Here, formerly, Esculapius was worshipped under the form of a serpent, which gives the greater propriety to its being called the seat of Satan, herein afterwards distinguished as the old serpent. See chap. xii. 9.

The only charge against this church appears to be their tolerating among them the followers of Balaam and the Nicolaitanes, who appear to us to have been distinct persons, though perhaps their errors might be similar. And here we shall take the liberty to offer a remark or two.

1. Though we are friends to universal toleration or religious liberty, even to the most unenlightened consciences, yet would we by no means tolerate in any church such errors as affect the vitals of Christian doctrine, or the practice of moral duties. Such men should be assailed with Scripture and with argument; and, if neither prevail, we consider them by no means proper subjects for church communion: but this is quite a distinct thing from loading them with fines or shutting them up in prisons.

2. We observe in all the heresies reprobated in the New Testament, a strong tendency, if not to crime, at least to laxity of morals. We believe, for instance, that persons who deny the Divinity and atonement of our Saviour, may be sober, honest, and humane; but few of them, we apprehend, pretend to a devotional character, or are anxious for that decided separation from the world, which the Scriptures uniformly inculcate: and though, in the present day, there are no temptations to partake of the luxury of feasting in an idolatrous temple; yet many indulge in the same libations, and unite in the same songs, that were formerly offered to Venus, Bacchus, and other Pagan gods.

Decision in religious matters is of infinite importance, and no man whose delight is in any species of intemperance can by this death, implies also that, on the contrary, they should enjoy everlasting life.

Ver 12. Pergamos.—Pergamos, now Bergama, the ancient Metropolis of Mysia, and the residence of the Attalian kings, is situated on the river Caicus, about 60 miles north of Smyrna, in long 27° E. lat 39° 11' N. It still retains some measure of its ancient importance, containing a population of about 15,000 souls; and having nine or ten mosques, two churches, and one synagogue. Bagster.—The sharp sword with two edges. See chap. i. 16.

Ver 13. Even.—Satan's seat.—Thyatira and Woonhouse.—"Thyatira."—Antipas.—No account of this martyr is extant, but an old ecclesiastical writer mentions having read such. See Woonhouse.

Ver 14. Doctrine of Balaam.—See 2 Pet. ii. 15. Jude, ver. 11; and compare Num. xvi. throughout, and xxxi 16.

Ver 16. And will fight.—Woonhouse.—"And will war," &c.

that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden^a manna, and will give him a white stone, and in the stone a new^a name written, which no man knoweth^b saving he that receiveth it.

18 And unto the angel of the church in Thyatira write; These things saith the Son of God, who hath his eyes^c like unto a flame of fire, and his feet are like fine brass;

19 I^d know thy works, and charity, and service, and faith, and thy patience, and thy works; and the last to be more than the first.

20 Notwithstanding I have a few things against thee, because thou sufferest that woman^e Jezebel, which calleth herself a prophetess, to teach and to seduce my servants to commit fornication, and to eat things sacrificed unto idols.

21 And I gave her space^f to repent of her fornication; and she repented^h not.

22 Behold, Iⁱ will cast her into a bed, and them that commit adultery with her into great tribulation, except they repent of their deeds.

23 And I will kill^j her children with death; and all the churches^k shall know that I^l am he which searcheth the reins and hearts: and truly relish the heavenly manna; nor can any such claim that evidence and assurance of his salvation, which is implied in the white stone and the new name here referred to.

The church of Thyatira seems to have much resembled that of Pergamos. There were among them many eminent for good works, and charity, and faith, &c. but there was a Jezebel among them. Some wicked woman, possibly of rank and influence, who, under the mask of a Christian profession, countenanced occasional attendance at idol temples; and did not see any great harm in those common aberrations from purity and strict morals, which the world covers with the name of "juvenile indiscretions." We are required, however, to "avoid all appearance of evil," and to "hate (even) the garment spotted by the flesh."

The earliest, and some of the best modern commentators, indeed, consider this Jezebel not to have been a mere individual, but an heretical party which had crept into the church (similar to the Nicolaitanes at Pergamos, and perhaps with some female Nicolaitan at her head,) who pleaded for occasional conformity to their Pagan neighbours. They admired architecture and statuary, and there could be no harm in seeing an idol temple. They loved music, and where could they hear it in such perfection as there? They were men of taste too, and where could their taste be so highly gratified with the richest viands and the choicest wines? Or they wished to cultivate good fellowship with their neighbours, and to oblige their kindred and friends; and what so likely to do this, as occasionally associating with them in their devotions, though they might not worship the idols in their hearts? And, besides, (might these complaisant Christians say,) "Perhaps they may be induced to attend at our churches in return, and who knows but they may be converted?" These and a thousand other plausible excuses might be made by these Jezebel professors, to cover or to excuse their sins. But what says he, whose "eyes are like a flame of fire?"

"I will cast her into a bed, and them that commit adultery with her." But this is not a bed of ease, much less of pleasure, but a bed of "great tribulation;" and those who have lan-

A. M. cir. 4100.
A. D. cir. 96.
z Ps. 25. 14.
a 16. 4.
b 16. 15.
c 3. 12.
d 19. 12, 13.
e 14. 14, 15.
f ver. 2.
g 18. 16, 21.
h Ex. 34. 15.
i 1 Cor. 10. 20, 21.
j 16. 24.
k 2 Pe. 3. 9.
l h c. 19. 20.
m Eze. 16. 37.
n c. 6. 8.
o 1 Th. 1. 11.
p 1 Th. 2. 9.
q 1 Th. 2. 9.
r Ps. 7. 9.
s Ps. 7. 9.
t c. 22. 16.

1^m will give unto every one of you according to your works.

24 But unto you I say, and unto the rest in Thyatira, as many as have not this doctrine, and which have not known the depthsⁿ of Satan, as they speak; I will put upon you none other burden.

25 But that^o which ye have already hold fast till I come.

26 And he that^p overcometh, and keepeth my works^q unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations:

27 And^r he shall rule them with a rod of iron; as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers: even as I^s received of my Father.

28 And I will give him the^t morning star.

29 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches.

CHAPTER III.

2 The angel of the church of Sardis is reproved, 3 exhorted to repent, and threatened if he do not; 4, 5. The angel of the church of Philadelphia is approved for his integrity and patience. 15 The angel of Laodicea rebuked, for being neither hot nor cold, 19 and admonished to be more zealous. 20 Christ standeth at the door and knocketh.

AND unto the angel of the church in Sardis write; These things saith he that hath the guished, or even seen others languishing, in bed, with the gout, the stone, and other acute diseases, must know what "great tribulation" means. "And I will kill her children with death"—perhaps "pestilence;" for Paul has taught us, that sickness and death are often the consequence of spiritual degeneracy—"For this cause many are weak and sickly among you, and many sleep." (1 Cor. xi. 30.) Have any of us been visited with personal or family sickness? It may then be well to inquire, has our conduct given no provocation for it? When the afflictions of a Christian are drawn from religion to the world, the mercy of God often sends affliction to bring him back again. And if any of our family idols have been taken from us, it is not only our duty to submit, (for that we must do,) but also to return to the only object whom we can love without the danger of excess. He "whose eyes are as a flame of fire," may "kill our children," to save both their souls and ours. We shall never know all the advantages of our afflictions in the present state; and wo unto those who are spared in this life, to be punished in another!

But some of these members of the church of Thyatira were, it seems, so little sensible of their degeneracy, that they boasted of their attainments; they "understood all mysteries," as Paul saith, (1 Cor. xiii. 2,) but "had not charity;" they boasted their acquaintance with "the deep things of God," which they perverted and abused to the "depths of Satan." The sect of Gnostics (or knowing ones, as the word means) is not yet extinct; and we have seen, with much pain, the pleasure which such persons take in supposing themselves wiser than their fellow Christians—that is, generally, in being "wise above what is written." It is not, however, speculation, but faith and obedience only, that can gain the victory; but he that overcometh shall be exalted to a throne, and to a kingdom, like his Lord and Master.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1—13. Epistles to the churches of Sardis and Philadelphia.—Sardis was the ancient seat of Cressus and the Lydian kings, but is now a beggarly village, called Sart, in which seven Christians only were counted a few years ago, and they were not allowed to build a church on the site

Ver. 17. The hidden manna—See John vi. 26, &c.—A white stone—The ancients used "stones" (calculus) to calculate and vote with, by casting them into an urn. In criminal processes, a white stone implied acquittal, and a black one, condemnation; the Greek thekos was sometimes engraved upon the latter, and implied death. White stones are also said to have been given to the victors in the Olympic games, with their names (or initials) engraved on them.—A new name.—When persons were raised to new honours, it was customary to confer a new name.—See Gen. xli. 5; 2 Sam. xii. 25. Dan. i. 7.

Ver. 18. Thyatira.—Two grand mistakes have been made relative to this city.—1. Gibbon (the historian) more than insinuates that the church of Thyatira was not founded in the time of St. John; but this has been refuted at large by a learned foreigner, Dr. Storch: indeed, the foundation of a church may be plainly traced to the conversion of Lydia and her household, of that city, as recorded in Acts xvi. 14, 15. (See Erskine's Sketches of Church Hist.—2. The other mistake is by Woodhouse, who says, that at this time no Christians are to be found in the remains of this city; whereas, by the latest accounts, besides the nine mosques, there is a Greek church and an Armenian, with five or six Christian priests. But in 1816, the Christian inhabitants (Christians in name only, it is to be feared) were reckoned at 2000. The city is called by the Turks Achisar, (or the white castle,) and is situated on a branch of the Caucasus, in an extensive plain, between Pergamos and Sardis, 48 miles S. E. of the former, and 10 hours N. W. of the latter, and about long. 27° 49' E. lat. 38° 45' N. It consists of about 1000 houses, and 200 or 300 baths, but the streets are narrow and dirty, and every thing marks poverty and degradation.—Like fine brass.—See chap. i. 15.

Ver. 19. And the last to be more than the first.—The reverse of what is said of the Ephesians, ver. 4.

Ver. 20. Thy woman Jezebel.—The woman here alluded to was the wife of Ahab, and the patroness of idolatry; 1 Kings xvi. 31, &c. Andrae, Bishop of Cesarea, A. D. 500, in a work compiled, as he professes, from the more ancient writings of Irenaeus, and others, his predecessors, explains this Jezebel to mean the Nicolaitan heresy; and the venerable Bede gives a like exposition See Woodhouse.

Ver. 21. I gave her space.—Woodhouse, "time."

Ver. 22. Unto a bed.—Woodhouse, "deep affliction."

Ver. 23. I will kill.—Literally, "slay with death;"—Hobnism, like Gen. ii. 17; or perhaps "death" may here intend the pestilence, as in chap. vi. 8, and elsewhere.

Ver. 24. Unto you I say, and—Doddridge, "even"—unto the rest.—But some copies omit the copulative; and so, Woodhouse, who includes in a parenthesis the words "which have not known the depths of Satan, as they speak;" which renders the sense much clearer, and at the word burden, where we have a full stop, he places only a semicolon, which connects the sentence with the next verse. As to the burden here intended, Doddridge, and most others understand thereby, the doctrines and precepts they had already received; but Robt. Burroughs (father to the late venerable Bishop of Durham) supposed it to refer to the apostolic decree recorded in Acts xv. 28, 29; and we think there is much probability in this conjecture.

Ver. 25. But—Woodhouse, "Only"—that which ye have—the doctrines and precepts which ye have already hold fast till I come—that is, either in death or judgment.

Ver. 27. And he shall rule them.—This verse, except the last clause, is an evident quotation from Psalm ii. 9; and is, as such, enclosed in a parenthesis both by Doddridge and Woodhouse—verse 28 connecting with verse 27, as follows: "I will give him power over the nations: (.....) even as I have received of my Father."

Ver. 28. I will give him the morning star.—i. e. I will be his light; for Christ assumes this title to himself, chap. xxii. 16.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1. Sardis.—The once proud capital of Lydia, and the residence of its opulent monarchs, is now reduced to a wretched Turkish village both by Doddridge and Woodhouse—verse 29 connecting with verse 27, as follows: "I will give him power over the nations: (.....) even as I have received of my Father."

15 I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot: I would thou wert cold or hot. 16 So then because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spew thee out of my mouth.

17 Because thou sayest, I am rich, and increased with goods, and have need of nothing; and knowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked:

18 I counsel thee to buy of me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich: and white raiment, that thou mayest be clothed; and that the shame of thy nakedness do not appear; and anoint thine eyes with eye-salve, that thou mayest see.

19 As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten: be zealous therefore, and repent.

20 Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me.

21 To him that overcometh I will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also

A. M. cr.
A. D. cr.
96

y 1 Ki 18:21.
z 110:12,8.

a 16:5,11

b c 16:15

c 16:12,5,6 d Ca. 5:2

e Lu. 12:35

f 13:14,5,4,5

g Lu. 22:20

h Ju. 16:33

i c 2:7

a c 1:10

b c 11:12

c Eze. 3:12

U

c 17:2

d 17:12

Eze. 1:25

25

e Ps. 7:9

He. 1:1

f c 11:36

g c 3:4,5

overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne.

22 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches.

CHAPTER IV.

2 John seeth the throne of God in heaven. 4 The four and twenty elders. 6 The four beasts full of eyes before and behind. 10 The elders lay down their crowns, and worship him that sat on the throne.

AFTER this I looked, and, behold, a door was opened in heaven: and the first voice which I heard was as it were of a trumpet talking with me: which said, Come up hither, and I will show thee things which must be hereafter.

2 And immediately I was in the Spirit: and, behold, a throne was set in heaven, and one sat on the throne.

3 And he that sat was to look upon like a jasper and a sardine stone: and there was a rainbow round about the throne, in sight like unto an emerald.

4 And round about the throne were four and twenty seats: and upon the seats I saw four and twenty elders sitting, clothed in white rai-churches, (Col. ii. 1,) and, it has been supposed, were, in John's time, united. The city of Laodicea bordered on the river Lycus, and had been before, and was, probably, in John's time, rich and flourishing; so completely, however, have been fulfilled the awful threatenings of the Chief and Head of God's creation, in case of their not repenting, (as they evidently did not,) that, of the city, nothing remains but ruins, and of Christianity, not a vestige. "The prayers of the mosque (says Mr. Lindsay) are the only prayers heard near the ruins of Laodicea, on which the threat seems to have been fully executed, in its utter rejection as a church." (Orient. Lit. No. 1554.)

Our attention is here called to the awful state of this church, and to the offers of mercy here made to them.

1. As the Philadelphia church was commended without an abating circumstance, so is the Laodicean church censured without a circumstance of palliation. It is described as lukewarm, neither hot nor cold; and, therefore, nauseating as an enemy. This is the charge of "the faithful and true witness." Mr. Fuller remarks, "They may be said to be cold who have no religion, and pretend to none; and they to be hot, who are zealously engaged in Christ's work; but these people were neither this nor that. They were not decidedly religious, and yet would not let religion alone." Like Israel in the days of Elijah, they were halling between two opinions. "To halt between truth and error, God and the world, is worse, in many respects, than to be openly irreligious. . . . No man thinks the worse of religion for what he sees in the openly profane; but it is otherwise in respect of religious professors. If he that nameth the name of Christ depart not from iniquity, the honour of Christ is affected by his misconduct."

These men, however, it appears, were wealthy and proud, and (as often is the case with such) withal very ignorant. With such men, to be rich, is almost every thing which they can desire; but with Christ it is, on the other hand, a great impediment to happiness. "How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God!" (Mark x. 23.)

Difficult as this is, however, it is not impossible. Let but a man be convinced of his spiritual poverty and wretchedness—that he is miserable and blind and naked—and here is the offer of the true gold to enrich him, white raiment to clothe him, and mental eye-salve to open the eyes of his understanding. Nor is this all: these blessings are not only offered, but urged. "Behold, I stand at the door and knock: if any man shall hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in unto him and sup with him." When Christ comes to be a guest, he always brings his provisions with him, and therefore it is added, "And he with me:" in which it is evident enough, that he alludes to the enjoyment of the heavenly state. "To him that overcometh," it is added, "will I grant to sit with me on my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father on his throne." Here is counsel!—here is warning!—here is encouragement!—"He that hath an ear to hear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches!"

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1—11. Vision of the celestial throne, and ple above, and for ever remain a monument of his grace.—The New Jerusalem.—See Gal iv. 26. Heb. xi. 10—16.

Ver. 16. I will open.—Doddridge. "cast" Woodhouse. "nauseate."

Ver. 18. I counsel thee to buy.—See Isa. lv. 1, 4.—Gold tried in the fire.—See 1 Peter i. 7.—And white raiment—which is the righteousness of the saints." Chap. xix. 8.

Ver. 19. As many as I love.—Compare Heb. xii. 5—12.

Ver. 20. Sup.—"The kingdom of Christ is described as a feast. He is the bridegroom, and he invites all in his house to a late hour, waiting his arrival, when returning from the wedding, according to Eastern custom, he knocketh, and they open to him, and he maketh them sit down to meat."—Woodhouse. See Luke xii. 36, &c.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1. The first voice.—The Greek, (Phone), signifies any kind of sound, and is applied to the roaring of waters, chap. xix. 6.—Things which must be hereafter.—Doddridge. "shall be afterwards." Woodhouse. "must happen after these." Compare chap. i. 19

the worshippers around it.—A grand scene presents itself before us: a door is opened in heaven—a trumpet sounds the invitation, and the Divine is instantly wrapped in prophetic vision, and carried up to heaven—whether in the body or out of the body," (as St. Paul says, 2 Cor. xii. 3,) we cannot tell, and perhaps he could not. The scene was, however, ineffably sublime and magnificent, strongly resembling the visions of Isaiah, chap. vi., and the opening of the prophecy of Ezekiel. A throne of infinite magnificence is seen in heaven, and One is seated thereon. In other instances, a glorious human form appears, no doubt meaning the Son of God, the only suitable representative of the Father: but as Christ was now to appear in a very different form (that of a lamb) before the eternal throne, he, of course, could not be seated on it. The only appearance exhibited of the divine Father is that of a glory indescribable. The precious stones here named were, the one pellucid as the light, and the other brilliant as the flame; and emblematically represent that God, who is light without a shade of darkness, and a flame purer than the radiant sun. To enhance, if possible, the grandeur of the scene, from this flaming throne proceed the forked lightnings, the rolling thunders, and other sounds of terror; while the seven lambent flames, representing the Spirit of God, are burning before it. But to soften down all this glory to human bearing, a rainbow is spread around the throne, with all the sweet and temperate radiance of an emerald. If any object could add to the majesty of this scenery, it is obvious it must be a view of the mighty ocean—and here the ocean rolls beneath the Creator's feet, not turbid, nor hoisterous, but smooth as glass and clear as crystal.

These objects are doubtless all emblematical. Light and fire are the established emblems of the divine purity and justice; the emerald rainbow is the well-known symbol of covenanted mercy; and the sea of glass may represent the infinite depth of the divine counsels and decrees.

The throne is evidently supposed to be semicircular, and the worshipping hosts of saints and angels are arranged in another semicircle, in the front; forming together an immense magnificent amphitheatre, with a sea of glass or crystal in the centre, on or over which, we are disposed to consider as placed the four mysterious living creatures, whose nature and employment we must now consider, in relation to the visions of Isaiah and Ezekiel, above referred to. We interpreted the latter exhibition as representing the machinery of divine Providence in the government of the world, by means of an infinite variety of agents, spiritual and material. The cherubim of Ezekiel are attended by prodigious wheels, full of eyes, guided by these living creatures; here the wheels are omitted, but the living creatures themselves are represented full of eyes, "before and behind," that is, all over. Thus, though the wheels are here omitted, (the throne now being stationary,) the symbols of intelligence are not wanting. What these living creatures (improperly called beasts) are here intended to signify, is not easy to determine. They answer to the description of the cherubim and seraphim under the Old Testament,

Ver. 2. I was in the Spirit.—[In an ecstasy or trance: and the natural use of his faculties being suspended, his mind was supernaturally impressed with the ideas suited to illustrate the subjects they were employed to reveal. It should not therefore be supposed, that the objects afterwards mentioned have a real existence in heaven; being merely visionary emblems, suited to give instruction to the Apostle and his readers.]—Baxter.

Ver. 3. A jasper and a sardine stone.—The jasper, according to Woodhouse, is a pellucid gem, variously coloured; and the sardine, of a fiery tinge; the emerald is of a green hue.—A rainbow round about.—A rainbow is always considered as a semicircle—which here must be supposed to surround the throne as a glory.

Ver. 4. Round about the throne.—i. e. round the front of it: so, when we speak of surrounding the throne of a prince, the chair of a public teacher, or the bed of a sick friend, we never mean behind them.—Seats.—Doddridge. "thrones." These, as we understand it, formed a semicircle in front of the throne, but of course below it.

ment; and they had on their heads crowns^b of gold.

5 And out of the throne proceeded lightnings and thunderings and voices: and there were seven lamps of fire burning before the throne, which are the seven^c Spirits of God.

6 And before the throne there was a sea of glass like unto crystal: and in the midst of the throne, and round about the throne, were four^d beasts full of eyes before and behind.

7 And the first beast was like a lion, and the second beast like a calf, and the third beast had a face as a man, and the fourth beast was like a flying eagle.

8 And the four beasts had each of them six^e wings about him; and they were full of eyes within: and they^f rest not day and night, saying, Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty, which was, and is, and is to come.

9 And when those beasts give glory and honour and thanks to him that sat on the throne, who^g liveth for ever and ever.

10 The four and twenty elders fall down before him that sat on the throne, and worship him that liveth for ever and ever, and cast their crowns^h before the throne, saying,

11 Thou artⁱ worthy, O Lord, to receive glory and honour and power: ^kfor thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created.

and we have (on Ezek. chap. i.) supposed their animal forms to represent the qualities of courage, patience, penetration, and benevolence; but whether they form a distinct order of celestial intelligences, or whether they be merely emblematical beings, we presume not to decide. There is no doubt an infinite variety in celestial, as well as in terrestrial beings. These are plainly distinguished from the elders, whom we consider as representatives of the church of God, under both dispensations; and from the great body of angels, which seems to form the outer circle round the throne; and that they are not the representatives of Deity, as some have supposed, is certain, from their worshipping before the throne.

From the part, however, that these hieroglyphical beings take in celebrating redeeming love, many perhaps the majority of commentators consider them as representing men rather than angels. This question may be further considered in the next chapter; in the mean time we remark, that all the beings in heaven, as well as the saints on earth, take a most lively interest in Christ's redemption, and unite with sacred ardour in his praise.

"Worthy the Lamb that shod," they cried,

"To be exalted thus."

"Worthy the Lamb, our Lord," they reply,

"For he is worthy for us."—Watts

CHAP. V. VER. 1—14. A sealed book is exhibited, which the Lamb prevails to open, and receives the praises of the universe. —We must guard against supposing the book seen in the right hand of the Almighty in any degree resembling our modern books. The books of the ancients were generally as this was in particular, composed of skins of parchment rolled together. "Conceive (says Mr. Fuller) of seven skins of parchment, written upon one side, and rolled up, suppose on wood. At the end of every skin a seal is affixed on the back [or out] side, so that the contents of it cannot be read till the seal is opened," or broken; and every fresh seal that is opened, or broken, we may add, as it liberates a fresh sheet, or skin, will be found to contain the delineation of a new scene, till the Ver 5 Lamps of fire.—Not four beasts, as in chap. i. 12, but the lights themselves.—The seven spirits of God.—See chap. i. 4.

Ver 6 A sea of glass.—This we suppose to have been in the area, between the throne and the worshipping hosts in front. Woodhouse supposes this an allusion to the brazen sea in the court of the temple, and that it represented the purifying efficacy of the blood of Christ.—Four beasts.—Doddridge and Woodhouse, "living creatures." The former says, "It was a most unhappy mistake in our translators, to render the word (zoh) 'beasts.' The word beast not only degrades the sanctification, but the animals here mentioned have parts and appearances which beasts have not, (as wings, &c.) and are represented as in the highest sense rational."

Ver 7 The first living creature was like a lion.—Some of the Rabbins (as Aben Ezra) have represented the form of these creatures as borrowed from the standards of the camp of Israel, but of this, Lowman thinks there is very little evidence (as does also Woodhouse); and Watson thinks the notion is ridiculous.—Like a calf.—Woodhouse, "a steer, or young bullock," which last is unquestionably the true meaning. See Schleusner.

Ver 8 Each of these four beasts about him.—Woodhouse alters the punctuation thus: "And the four living creatures, having each of them six wings, are full of eyes around and within."—"And they rest not—i. e. they are perpetually moving, (as is usual with winged creatures,) and continually praising."

"Holy, holy, holy, &c."—See Isa. vi. 2, 3.

Ver 9, 10 And when those beasts (or living creatures) give glory.—The elders fall down, &c. and cast their crowns, &c.—Though these Christian conquerors are exalted upon thrones, they are to be considered

CHAPTER V.

1 The book sealed with seven seals: 9 which only the Lamb that was slain is worthy to open. 12 Therefore the elders praise him, 9. d. confess that he redeemed them with his blood.

AND I saw on the right hand of him that sat on the throne a book^a written within and on the backside, ^bsealed with seven seals.

2 And I saw a strong angel proclaiming with a loud voice, Who is worthy to open the book, and to loose the seals thereof?

3 And no man in heaven, nor in earth, neither under the earth, was able to open the book, neither to look thereon.

4 And I wept much, because no man was found worthy to open and to read the book, neither to look thereon.

5 And one of the elders saith unto me, Weep not: behold, the Lion^c of the tribe of Juda, the Root^d of David, hath prevailed to open the book, and to loose the seven seals thereof.

6 And I beheld, and, lo, in the midst of the throne and of the four beasts, and in the midst of the elders, stood a^e Lamb as it had been slain, having seven horns and seven^f eyes, which are the seven Spirits of God sent forth into all the earth.

7 And he came and took the book out of the right hand of him that sat upon the throne.

8 And when he had taken the book, the four^g beasts and four and twenty elders fell down before the Lamb, having every one of them whole are exhibited to the prophet's view. This book being understood to contain the fates both of the church and of the world, must naturally excite an intense interest; and St. John being promised an insight into futurity, of course felt regret and disappointment on finding that the book was sealed up from view; and its being in the hands of the Almighty, plainly intimated that the knowledge of future events is the prerogative of God.

A mighty angel now comes forward, to demand if there were any one able or worthy to break the seals, and to open the book to view; but, alas! no one was found in heaven or earth, who was able or worthy to perform the task, which was emblematical, and implied a worthiness to be admitted into the secret decrees of the Almighty, and ability to put them in execution. One of the elders observing our apostle weep, consoles him with the information, that there is one person coming forward, whose merits were equal to the honour, and his abilities to the work. "The Lion of the tribe of Judah, the root (as well as off-spring) of David," he is worthy—he is able. The apostle looks with eagerness to see this "Lion," and, behold, the appearance of "a Lamb—a lamb as it had been slain;" even the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sins of the world." (John i. 29.)

Of this Lamb it is distinctly noted, that he had "seven horns and seven eyes," that is, a fulness both of power and of knowledge, in consequence of the Holy Spirit being communicated to him without measure. (John iii. 34.) But it is in consequence of his sufferings and atonement, that the Son of God is exalted to the government of the church and of the world—of earth and heaven. (Phil. ii. 7—11.)

"His providence unfolds the book,

"And makes his counsels shine,
Each opening leaf and every stroke,

Public some great design

There he exalts neglected worms,

To serpents and a crown;

Aton, he turns the following leaf,
And treads the monarch down."—Watts's Lyrics.

only as tributary princes, casting all their honours at the feet of their Redeemer.

CHAP. V. Ver 1 Written within and on the back side, sealed, &c.—Gratius Lowman, Fuller, &c. remove the comma thus: "Written within, and on the back (or outside) sealed, &c." We suppose there might be seven sheets or skins of parchment; the first rolled (as was common) on a piece of wood and sealed, a second rolled and sealed on this, a third on that, and so forth, till all were sealed; the opening of each seal would then liberate one skin, containing the delineation of a distinct scene.

Ver 3 And no man.—Doddridge and Woodhouse, "no one." So in ver. 4.

Ver 4 To look thereon.—Doddridge and Woodhouse, "into it," or "thereon."

Ver 5 The Lion of the tribe of Juda.—See Gen. xix. 13.—The root of David.—See chap. xii. 16, and compare Isa. xli. 10.

Ver 6 In the midst of the throne, &c.—i. e. in the front of it, between that and the sea of glass.—A Lamb.—An emblematical representation of our Saviour's high priesthood.—Seven horns.—As a horn is the emblem of power, and seven the number of perfection, the seven horns may denote the almighty power of Jesus Christ.—Seven eyes.—His infinite knowledge and wisdom; and especially "the treasures of wisdom" laid up in him to be communicated to the church by "the seven Spirits of God," i. e. the Holy Spirit.]—Bagger.

Ver 8 And when he had taken.—Doddridge and Woodhouse, "received."—The four beasts.—As it is evident, that "the four living creatures" join in, or rather lead, the worship of the Lamb, as "having redeemed them to ^b harps, and golden vials full of odours, which are the prayers of saints.

9 And they sung a new song, saying, Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof: for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation:

10 And hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth.

11 And I beheld, and I heard the voice of many angels round about the throne and the beasts and the elders: and the number of them was ten thousand times ten thousand, and thousands of thousands;

12 Saying with a loud voice, ^a Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honour, and glory, and blessing.

13 And every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them, heard I saying, ^a Blessing, and honour, and glory, and power, be unto him that sitteth upon

A. M. cir
4100.
A. D. cir
96.
h. c. 15. 2.
i. c. 15. 2.
j. Ps. 141. 3.
k. c. 14. 3.
l. Ac. 20. 28.
m. c. 7. 3.
n. c. 1. 6.
o. c. 22. 5.
p. Da. 7. 10.
q. c. 4. 11.
r. Ps. 2. 10.
s. 1. Ch. 20. 11.
t. 1. Co. 1. 16.
u. 1. Pe. 4. 11.
v. c. 19. 4.
w. c. 3. 5.
x. Ze. 6. 3.
y. c. 1. 5. 3.

the throne, and unto the Lamb for ever and ever.

14 And the four beasts said, Amen. And the four and twenty elders fell down and worshipped him that liveth for ever and ever.

CHAPTER VI.

The opening of the seals in order, and what follows thereupon, containing a prophecy to the end of the world.

AND I saw when the Lamb opened one of the seals, and I heard, as it were the noise of thunder, one of the four beasts saying, Come and see.

2 And I saw, and behold a white horse: and he that sat on him had a bow; and a crown was given unto him: and he went forth conquering, and to conquer.

3 And when he had opened the second seal, I heard the second beast say, Come and see.

4 And there went out another horse that was red: and power was given to him that sat thereon to take peace from the earth, and that they should kill one another: and there was given unto him a great sword.

5 And when he had opened the third seal, I

The anthem which here follows, is sublime beyond expression or comparison; and no paraphrase could heighten the intense interest which the simple narrative excites. Two or three remarks, however, may be offered by way of exposition. The common notion, of these living creatures bearing harps and cups of incense, is so inconsistent with scenic propriety, that, after making every allowance for the boldness of the oriental imagery, we confess that we could not avoid suspecting some mistake in the general interpretation of this passage, even before we met with the critical remark of Dr. Woodhouse, which confines the harps and vials, and consequently the subsequent anthem, (ver. 9 and 10,) to the twenty-four elders; these mysterious beings, the living creatures, joining only in the general chorus, with their Amen in the close of all, (ver. 14.) So neither in the preceding, nor the following chapters, do they claim the peculiar character of the redeemed, though in all cases they unite in adoring the Redeemer. (See chap. iv. 6, 9; vii. 11, 12; xix. 4.)

On the admirable anthem here recited, Mr. Fuller judiciously remarks, that all the ascriptions of praise have a particular reference to the Saviour's condescension and humility, in becoming man, and suffering as such. He made himself poor, and of no reputation; he took upon him the form of a servant, and suffered every kind of ignominy, as well as pain; and therefore do they ascribe to him "power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honour, and glory, and blessing!"

We must not leave this subject without remarking, how forcibly these passages tell in favour of the proper Deity of our Saviour. So remarks the late Pros. Dwight, "Christ receives the praises of the heavenly host, both singly and in conjunction with the Father; but (he adds) never unites in them. . . . The only part ever attributed to Christ, is to be united [with the Father] in receiving the ascription." "Blessing, and honour, and glory, and power, be unto Him that sitteth on the throne, and unto the Lamb, for ever and ever. Amen."

CHAP. VI. Ver. 1-8. The first four seals opened.—We come now to the part of the book properly prophetic: we freely admit, however, the retrospective remark of Mr. Fuller, (quoted on ch. i. 9, &c.) that the events commence from, or soon after, the death of Christ. Thus we reckon the date of the first seal from the day of Pentecost. Then was the prayer of the Jewish church gloriously fulfilled: "Gird thy sword upon thy thigh, O most mighty; with thy glory and thy majesty. . . . Thy right hand shall teach thee terrible things; thine arrows shall be sharp in the heart of the King's enemies." (Ps. xlv. ver. 3-5.) And thus was the accomplishment:—"When the Lamb had opened one (i. e. the first) of the seals, I heard (says the apostle) as it were the noise of thunder, one of the four living creatures saying, Come and see." And I saw, (adds he,) and behold a white horse: and he that sat on him had a bow; (and consequently arrows;) "and a crown was given unto him: and he went forth conquering, and to conquer." Nothing could more happily describe the success of the gospel during the apostolic ages, and for some years afterwards. White horses were often employed in war, and were the pride of conquerors. The spread of the gospel during this period was truly wonderful. Paul himself preached it, as he says, "From Jerusalem round about unto Illyricum," and "God always caused them to triumph in every place."—

God," it proves that part of the redeemed church is meant by this emblem, and not angels, whose worship is next described in very different language.] —Bagger.—Having every one of them—i. e. of the elders—harps, &c.—Woodhouse remarks, "The harps, as well as the vials of incense, seem to belong to the elders only, not to the cherubim, to whose firm they cannot accommodate, and whose figures were not seen distinctly. Besides, the masculine pronoun (ekastos) 'every one,' directs this interpretation." Wislizenus has the like remark.—And golden vials.—The vial of the Old Testament appears to have been a sort of patera, or basin, in which were deposited ba-

"The Casars (says Mr. Fuller) set themselves against it; yet, in spite of all their efforts, there were saints in Casar's household." This excellent expositor adds—"The epistles of Pliny and Tiberianus, governors of Asia Minor and Syria, to Trajan the emperor, within ten or twelve years after the banishment of John to the isle of Patmos, furnish a striking and unexceptionable proof of the progress of the gospel in those times. By the amazing number of persons who avowed themselves Christians, and so exposed themselves to death, they were moved with compassion, and wrote to know what they were to do with them. 'The number is so great, (says Pliny,) as to call for the most serious deliberation. Informations are pouring in against multitudes, of every age, of all orders, and of both sexes: and more will be impeached; for the contagion of this superstition (meaning Christianity) hath spread, not only through cities, but villages, and hath even reached the farm-houses.' He also speaks of the temples as having been almost desolate: the sacred solemnities [of idolatry] as having been interrupted, and the sacrificial victims as finding but few purchasers. 'I am quite wearied (says Tiberianus) with punishing and destroying the Galileans.'"

Thus numerous were the Christians at the beginning of the second century, and Christianity continued to spread, notwithstanding the violence of Jewish and Gentile persecution and the insidious arts of Pagan philosophers and heretics throughout the far greater part of the three first centuries.

The second seal is opened, and "a red horse" appears, as the emblem of war and bloodshed; and to make this the more clear, to him that sat thereon was given "a great sword," as emblematical of his power to take peace from the earth; and if there ever was a war to which this prediction was more especially applicable, it was that between the Jews and the Romans. On Mat. xxiv., we have cited the testimony of Josephus, that full a million of Jews perished in Jerusalem, beside 250,000 in the provinces; 97,000 were sold, or carried away captive, and many others perished miserably by pestilence or famine. These, like the events of the preceding seal, are retrospective; but they were the sufferings of the Jews only, and even to them a part only of their sorrows. Of the loss sustained by the Romans in this contest, we have no estimate, but certainly the carnage was in a great measure mutual; they destroyed one another; and so extensive was the destruction, that thereby peace was banished from the earth.

But though we include these events under this seal, we do not confine it to them. About forty or fifty years after this event, the Jews in Egypt and in Cyprus made an insurrection, and slew 460,000 men; yet the Jews being every where subdued, a greater number must have been slain among themselves. Not long after this, during the first half of the second century, the Jews in Palestine were drawn into a new rebellion by Barchocai, one of their false Messiahs, and are said to have lost 580,000 men, with the destruction of a thousand of their towns and fortresses. But what, it may be asked, has this to do with the history of the church, which is the great subject of the prophetic Scriptures? We reply, "Much every way."

1. We have an express and most remarkable fulfilment of our Lord's predictions relative to the destruction of Jerusalem and the Jews, as above-mentioned. 2. We have a striking example for the altar the offerings of meal, or of incense.—These should not be confounded with the modern vials of apothecaries.—Full of odours.—Woodhouse, "incense."

CHAP. VI Ver. 1. One of the four beasts—Rather, "living creatures," as before; and so throughout the chapter, except in ver. 8. Ver. 2. A white horse.—That the nature and character of public events may be represented by different coloured horses, see Zech. i. 8-11; vi. 2, 3, 6, 7. The rider on the first horse certainly represents Christ, as in Rev. xix. 11-14.

heard the third beast say, Come and see. And I beheld, and lo a black horse; and he that sat on him had a pair of balances in his hand.

6 And I heard a voice in the midst of the four beasts say, ^a A measure of wheat for a penny, and three measures of barley for a penny; and see thou ^b hurt not the oil and the wine.

7 And when he had opened the fourth seal, I heard the voice of the fourth beast say, Come and see.

8 And I looked, and behold a pale horse; and his name that sat on him was Death, and Hell followed with him. And power was given ^c unto them over the fourth part of the earth, to kill ^d with sword, and with hunger, and with death, and with the beasts of the earth.

9 And when he had opened the fifth seal, I saw under the altar ^e the souls ^f of them that were slain for ^g the word of God, and for the testimony which they held:

10 And they cried with a loud voice, saying,

A M en 4100
A D cir
96
d The word
e chariz
f anglish
g hus
h ate con-
i taining
j our wine
k quart,
l and the m twelfth n part of a o quart
p e 94
q or, to him
r See 1421
s e 3
t e 201
u e 19
v 1217
w Zer 112
x De 32 41
y 43
z e 118
aa e 79, 11
ab e 11 13
ac e 16 18
ad e 16 18
ae Joel 210,
af 31
ag Mat 23,
ah 29

How ^k long, O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge ^l our blood on them that dwell on the earth?

11 And white ^m robes were given unto every one of them; and it was said unto them, that they should rest ⁿ yet for a little season, until ^o their fellow-servants also and their brethren, that should be killed as they ^p were, should be fulfilled.

12 And I beheld when he had opened the sixth seal, and, lo, there was a great ^q earthquake; and the sun ^r became black as sackcloth of hair, and the moon became as blood;

13 And the stars ^s of heaven fell unto the earth, even as a fig tree casteth her ^t untimely-fruits, when she is shaken of a mighty wind.

14 And the heaven ^u departed as a scroll when it is rolled together; and every ^v mountain and island were moved out of their places.

15 And the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains,

r e 5 10

s or, green

t e 102-6

h 211

n Je 42, 24

Ba 3, 6, 10

e 16 20

ple of the manner in which the God of Providence corrects and punishes one nation by means of another. Thus the Romans were punished by the Jews for their idolatry; and the Jews by the Romans, for their infidelity and rejection of the true Messiah, and the persecution of his followers. 3. We see how vain and how dangerous it is for mortals to oppose the designs of Providence, especially when they persecute the church of God. The Jews were the bitterest persecutors the church ever had, and all their enmity was levelled against the Son of God himself; they would "not have this man to reign over them." And what was the consequence? He ruled them, as had been predicted, "with a rod (or sceptre) of iron;" and with that sceptre he "dashed them in pieces as a potter's vessel," and scattered them to the four winds of heaven. The Pagan Romans opposed Christianity, and were in like manner dashed to pieces by the barbarians around them.

Our readers will perceive, that we do not think it necessary to place these seals in absolute succession to each other. Though the events prefigured did not commence nor close together, yet in some points, probably, most, or all of them, were contemporary. The success of the gospel went on during all the varied calamities of the Jews, and misfortunes of the Romans; yea, and during all the persecutions of both: nothing could stop the march of the gospel, till it attained the full extent predicted.

The opening of the third and fourth seals will require but little enlargement. The rider on the black horse carries a pair of balances in his hand, and proclaims such a state of scarcity, that a man with the labour of his hands should be able only to procure the scanty daily provision of corn allowed to a slave, without any surplus for his family. Mr. Loewman interprets this of the scarcity which prevailed in the time of the Antonines, from about A.D. 133 to 193; arising, no doubt, from unfavourable seasons and bad management; but more, perhaps, from the horrible devastations of war, which spares not even the fruits of the earth.

The imagery of the fourth seal is still more terrible—it is "Death upon the pale horse"—and followed by hell, or the terrors of the invisible world—by famine, pestilence, and wild beasts;—the "four sore judgments" of God mentioned by Ezekiel, chap. xiv. 21.

Here, then, it should seem, the first four seals (at least must have been contemporary; for the gospel continued to advance with triumph, amidst all the horrors of war, and famine, and pestilence, and death. In the third century, all these evils were combined. Mr. Loewman says, that now "The state of the empire was very much disturbed with foreign wars and intestine troubles; very few of the emperors but met with a violent death; so that, besides thirty persons who all pretended to the empire at once, there were twenty acknowledged emperors in the space of sixty years, from A.D. 211 to 270. These intestine divisions gave great heart and strength to the enemies of the Roman empire, and great advantages to the Persians and the Northern armies against it. . . . St. Cyprian, in his apology for the Christians to Diocletian, proconsul of Africa, takes notice of the more frequent wars and famines of those times, that they were falsely charged upon the Christians. . . . [and] expressly declares, that these great calamities were according to former predictions; and brought upon the world, not because the Christians rejected idolatrous Roman worship, but because the Romans rejected the worship of the true God." Mr. Loewman adds, from Zosimus, and other authorities, that in the middle of the third century, "a plague infested the provinces, which, beginning in Ethiopia, spread itself almost through the whole East and West, destroyed the inhabitants of many cities, and continued for fifteen years. . . . [which produced] so great a destruction of men, as had not hitherto ever happened."

The writer is well aware, that in referring these predictions to temporal events, he may incur the censure of some modern expositors of great name and merit, who would confine these prophecies principally (if not wholly) to the "fates and fortunes of the Christian church;" but he begs it to be considered, 1. That while the church is in the world, it must be deeply implicated in its "fates and fortunes." Christians, as such, have no exemptions from the wars, and famines, and plagues, which visit others, though it is certain they have peculiar supports, and finally, an abundant compensation.—2. It is admitted that the Old Testament prophets, and particularly Daniel, describe largely "the fates and fortunes" of the world, as well as of the church. And 3. that as it was necessary for Daniel to describe the rise and fall of the four monarchies, in order to introduce the kingdom of Messiah; so the "fates and fortunes" of the Roman empire, both Pagan and Papal, must be decided, prior to the final triumphs of Christianity in the Millennium.

Ver. 9—17. The opening of the fifth and sixth seals, bringing us to the fall of Paganism, and establishment of Christianity.—The fifth seal opens a scene of persecution, and gives us a view of it very different from the representation of worldly historians and politicians. They think that the great and the mighty have a right to think and to judge for all others; so that, if subjects be ever so virtuous, they deserve even to die if they presume to think differently from their sovereign. So the enlightened Pliny was clearly of opinion, that no punishment could be too great for those who dared to resist,

Ver. 5. A pair of balances.—Doddridge has it "scales."—B. Woodhouse renders it, "a yoke;" and so it is rendered in all other places of the New Testament, except this; but the word (Ζυγος) is often used in the LXX. in the sense of balances or scales; as for instance, in Prov. xvi 11. Isa. xl 10, 15; Jer. 6. It, however, we were to render the word in the primary sense of "a yoke," we should consider it as a symbol of slavery, which would be quite as consistent with what follow.

Ver. 6. A measure.—Gr. chariz; the value of which is not exactly ascertained, farther than that it was the usual daily allowance of provision for a slave; while a penny, or Roman Denarius, (equal to about 15 cents.) was the usual daily pay of a labouring man. So that this may intimate the world being reduced to a state of bodily and mental slavery, as well as to one of poverty and want. See Ezek. ix. 16. A Denarius is said to have been the ordinary price of a bushel of wheat, equal to eight times the chariz.—Hurt not the oil and the wine.—This seems to intimate, that the scarcity would fall heavier upon the necessaries of life, than on its luxuries, that the rich would take care of themselves, and neglect the poor.

Ver. 8. Hell.—Gr. Hades, or the invisible state. See chap. i. 18, and note.—With hunger, and even death.—Woodhouse, "By famine, and by pestilence." To the same effect, Doddridge.—With the beasts.—Gr. (θηρίων) "wild beasts" a very different word from that which we have rendered "living creatures."

Ver. 9. Them that were slain.—Doddridge, "slughtered." Woodhouse, "sacrificed."

Ver. 10. Avenge our blood.—This seal seems a prediction of the terrible persecution of the church under Diocletian and Maximian, from A.D. 270 to 304, which lasted longer, and was far more bloody, than any or all by which it was preceded, whence it was called "the era of the martyrs."—Beggier

Ver. 11. A little season.—Doddridge, "while." Woodhouse, "yet a time."

Ver. 12. A great earthquake, &c.—Käfer, says Newton, a great concussion, comprehending heaven as well as earth. See Hagai ii. 6, 21. By such earthquakes, as Sir J. Newton has observed, the prophets are accustomed to describe great revolutions among the empires of the world, and in very similar language our Lord himself predicted the destruction of Jerusalem, as well as the final renovation of the earth itself. See Isa. xlviii. 4. Joel. ii. 10. Mat. xxiv. 29. [This was an emblem of great revolutions in the civil and religious state of the world, attended by vast commotions of every kind, and presents the total subversion of the perceiving power by the victories of Constantine, and by his accession to the imperial throne, and the entire and universal change which took place at that time, from A.D. 304 to 328. The great lights of the heathen world were eclipsed and obscured,—the heathen emperors and Cæsars were slain, the heathen priests and temples extirpated, and heathen officers and magistrates removed, the heathen temples demolished, and their revenues appropriated to better uses.]—Beggier.

Ver. 12. The stars of heaven fell.—Doddridge, "The stars fell from heaven."

Ver. 14. As a scroll.—i. e. a sheet of parchment, which rolls up of itself, especially when exposed to the heat of fire.

Ver. 15. The great men.—Doddridge, "grandees."—Every bondman.—Doddridge, "slave."—In the dens.—Doddridge, "caves."

and the mighty men, and every bondman, and every freeman, hid themselves * in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains :

16 And said * to the mountains and rocks, Fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb :

17 For * the great day of his wrath is come ; and who * shall be able to stand ?

CHAPTER VII.

AND after these things I saw four angels ^a standing on the four corners of the earth, holding the four winds ^a of the earth, that the wind should not blow on the earth, nor on the sea, nor on any tree.

A M. cir. 4100.
A D. cir. 96.
v. 12:19.
v. 11:10, 8
L. 23:30
e. 9:6.
x. 1:13, 5.
A. c. 1:14.
Zep. 1:14.
A. c. 16:14
y. Ps. 76:7.
a. Da. 7:2.
b. 2 Th. 2:19.
c. 6:6, 6.
d. Ez. 9:4
e. c. 22:1.
f. c. 11:1.

2 And I saw another angel ascending from the east, having the seal ^b of the living God. and he cried with a loud voice to the four angels, to whom it was given to hurt the earth and the sea,

3 Saying, Hurt ^c not the earth, neither the sea, nor the trees, till we have ^d sealed the servants of our God in their ^e foreheads.

4 And I heard the number of them which were sealed : and there were sealed a hundred and forty and four ^f thousand of all the tribes of the children of Israel.

5 Of the tribe of Juda were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Reuben were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Gad were sealed twelve thousand.

6 Of the tribe of Aser were sealed twelve in any case, the emperor's demands. (See Pliny's Epistles, book x. lett. 97, 98.)

The scene before us, like several others in this book, is evidently borrowed from the Jewish temple. It presents us with the altar of burnt-offerings, which stood just within the entrance to the court. But instead of the appointed sacrifices, behold, it streams with human blood! and instead of the bones of those legal victims, behold the souls of the martyrs who had been sacrificed—not, indeed, to God, but for his cause—victims to Jewish and Pagan cruelty, lie under the altar, as it were, crying to Heaven for vengeance!

"The souls under the altar," (says Mr. Fuller,) are the departed spirits of those Christians who had fallen in the arduous contest, which are supposed to cry aloud for retribution. . . . The answer to their appeal, in which they are encouraged to expect a retribution, after a little season, when the number of their fellow-servants and brethren, who should be killed as they were, by the hands of Paganism, should be fulfilled, determines the period to which the vision refers." Mr. Fuller supposes, that they had now suffered under nine of the ten persecutions, (so called,) and were to wait for the completion of their number under the tenth; and that being accomplished, God would take vengeance on their persecutors for all their cruelty. The opening of this seal, therefore, may be referred to about A. D. 275, when the ninth persecution (which was but short) was ended, and the tenth, under Dioclesian and Maximian, was drawing near. This persecution, which began in or about 303, was both more sanguinary and more extensive than any of the preceding: its avowed object being nothing short of the utter extirpation of Christianity. The places of Christian worship were every where demolished, temples destroyed, and an immense number of Christians martyred. "It were endless and almost incredible, (says Mr. Richard,) to enumerate the variety of sufferings and torments: they were scourged to death, had their flesh torn off with pincers, and mangled with broken pots; were cast to lions, tigers, and other wild beasts; were burnt, beheaded, crucified, thrown into the sea, torn in pieces by the distorted boughs of trees, roasted by gentle fires, and holes made in their bodies for melted lead to be poured into their bowels. This persecution, in one part or other of the empire, is reckoned to have continued eight or ten years, under Dioclesian, and some of his successors. The number of Christians who suffered during this period led their enemies to flatter themselves that they had extirpated Christianity: and a pillar is stated to have been erected in Spain to the honour of Dioclesian, with an inscription to this effect, that he had every where abolished the superstition of Christ, and extended the worship of the gods. Another pillar in the same country is said to have borne a similar inscription: and a medal in honour of the same tyrant still exists, with this motto, 'the name of Christians being extinguished.' But, alas, how weak and vain is man! Paganism was now at the point of dissolution, and Christianity on the eve of triumph, as we shall see under the following seal.

The opening of the sixth seal appears to threaten nothing less than a dissolution of the whole system of nature. The pillars of the earth are shaken, and the globe trembles to its centre. The great luminaries of heaven expire in darkness, and the lesser ones appear to drop from the skies, like maddened figs when shaken in a tempest. The aërial heavens are rolled together like a parchment scroll, and every mountain and island are removed from their places."

Now are the hughty monarchs and "mighty spirits of the earth," and indeed all classes of mankind, thrown into the utmost consternation. The ruin is so tremendous, that the highest orders of society cannot resist it; and so universal that the meanest hope not to escape it. And those who but recently boasted of having annihilated Christianity, now call for mercy to the rocks and mountains; and gladly would they hide themselves in the fissures of the one, or the caverns of the other. "Who shall hide us from Him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb?"—"The wrath of the Lamb" is a peculiar expression. Had it been the wrath of the lion, it would have been more natural, but not so terrible. By how much the patience of God has been exercised and abused, so much the more is his righteous anger to be dreaded, now "the great day of his wrath is come." Now the number of martyrs to Paganism is complete—the prayer of the souls under the altar are heard—and, to their murderers, the day of judgment is arrived.

On the fall of Paganism, Mr. Lorrman quotes, from a former commentator, the following condensed view of the events which then occurred. "From this account, it appears (says Mr. Daubuz) that the Pagan Roman emperors were deprived of their government, and came to miserable ends:—that the Pagan Cæsars fell in battle or were put to death:—that the religion of the idolaters received a mortal wound; all the colleges of pontifices, augurs, vestals; in a word, all the Pagan priests and religious officers throughout the empire, being brought under the power and dominion of a Christian prince:—that many of the Pagan officers, civil and military, were displaced, and Christians put in their room:—that there was a thorough change in the government, and that Paganism lessened by degrees, till it entirely disappeared:—that the greatest of the persecutors acknowledged and confessed the justice and cause of God's judgments: and lastly, that upon this change, all the idolaters, upon account of their horrid cruelties and barbarities against the Christians, could not but be in daily expectation of the severest punishments."

CHAP. VII. Ver. 1—17. The prophecies of the sixth seal continued.—The reference of this seal to the time of Constantine is so clear, that we cannot but feel surprise that it should be applied to any other period. The first event is a stop to persecution. The Roman empire, it should be remembered, extended into almost all parts of the then known world; and it had often happened, that Christianity was persecuted in one quarter while it was tolerated or winked at in another; but four angels are here ordered to restrain the storms of persecution in all quarters, till the Christian religion should gain a perfect establishment, and Christians should be allowed to make an open profession of their faith. There is no doubt but that in times of persecution, there were great numbers convinced of the truth of Christianity who dared not to avow their convictions, and among these, many there might be, who secretly worshipped Jesus and avoided idols: so in the idolatrous times of Ahab, when the prophet supposed all the nation devoted to idolatry, still there were 7000 persons who had not bowed the knee to Baal. In consequence of this, no sooner did persecution cease, than Christians, professedly so at least, poured in from all quarters. Great numbers were baptized, both Jews and Pagans, and so received the seal of Christianity, which made them externally Christians; but the seal of heaven implies more than an external profession: "the seal of the Spirit" is necessary to mark them as children of God, and to secure them from his wrath. (See Ezek. ix. 4. Ephes. i. 13; iv. 30.)

It seems hardly necessary to say, that all the numbers of this book are to be explained mystically and not literally. The number before us has that square form which is constantly used to mark the Jerusalem which is above, as in chap. xxi. 10, &c. The number of the tribes being retained, may intimate that the number of God's elect is preserved unbroken. We have, indeed, no reason to believe that an equal number of every tribe shall be saved, though as respects the seed of

should be made to it, both of the Jews and Gentiles. Eusebius and Lactantius, who were contemporary writers, bear their testimony to the completion of this prophecy; and one of the medals of Constantine, bearing on the reverse hæcæ tranquillitas, "blessed tranquillity," is a confirmation of their testimony. All the historians who have written of these times, also bear witness to the vast numbers both of Jews and Gentiles who were converted to the Christian religion.—Lagster.

Ver. 4. A hundred and forty and four thousand—That is, the twelve patriarchs multiplied by the twelve apostles and both by 1000.—Lorrman

CHAP. VII. Ver. 1. The four winds of the earth.—See Jer. xlv. 26, 27. The four corners here mentioned, answer to the four cardinal points, the four winds.

Ver. 2. From the east—Ga. "From the rising of the sun"—1 e. from the divine presence.—Lagster.

Ver. 3. Hide not the earth—1 e. the inhabitants of it, in its various classes. [This chapter is a continuation of the sixth seal; and is a description of the state of the church in the time of Constantine, of the peace and protection it should enjoy under the civil powers, and of the great accession that there thousand. Of the tribe of Nephthim were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Manasses were sealed twelve thousand.

7 Of the tribe of Simeon were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Levi were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Issachar were sealed twelve thousand.

8 Of the tribe of Zabulon were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Joseph were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Benjamin were sealed twelve thousand.

9 After this I beheld, and, lo, a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues, stood before the throne, and before the Lamb, clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands;

10 And cried with a loud voice, saying, Salvation to our God which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb.

11 And all the angels stood round about the throne, and about the elders and the four beasts, and fell before the throne on their faces, and worshipped God, 12 Saying, Amen: Blessing, and glory, and wisdom, and thanksgiving, and honour, and power, and might, be unto our God for ever and ever. Amen.

13 And one of the elders answered, saying unto me, What are these which are arrayed in white robes? and whence came they?

14 And I said unto him, Sir, thou knowest. And he said to me, These are they which

A M. cir. 4100
A B. cir. 900
g. Ro. 11, 25
c. 5, 9
h. e. 511.
i. Le. 23, 40.
j. Zec. 4, 7
k. Is. 43, 11.
c. 19, 1.
l. Jude. 25
c. 5, 13, 14.
m. Jo. 16, 23
c. 6, 9
n. 1 Co. 6, 11
He. 9, 11
o. 1 Jo. 1, 7
c. 5, 13
p. e. 21, 3, 4
q. b. 49, 10
r. Ps. 121, 6.
Is. 1, 6
s. Ps. 23, 1.
2, 5
3, 3
Is. 10, 11
t. Is. 25, 8.
a. e. 5, 1
b. Lu. 1, 19
c. 2 Th. 29
25, 26
d. or. add it
to.
e. c. 5, 8
f. c. 6, 9
g. Ex. 30, 1.

came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb.

15 Therefore are they before the throne of God, and serve him day and night in his temple; and he that sitteth on the throne shall dwell among them.

16 They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more; neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat.

17 For the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them, and shall lead them unto living fountains of waters: and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 At the opening of the seventh seal, 2 seven angels had seven trumpets given them. 3 Four of them sound their trumpets, and great plagues follow. 4 Another angel putteth incense to the prayers of the saints on the golden altar.

AND when he had opened the seventh seal, there was silence in heaven about the space of half an hour.

2 And I saw the seven angels which stood before God; and to them were given seven trumpets.

3 And another angel came and stood at the altar, having a golden censer; and there was given unto him much incense, that he should offer it with the prayers of all saints upon the golden altar which was before the throne.

4 And the smoke of the incense, which came with the prayers of the saints, ascended up before God out of the angel's hand.

5 And the angel took the censer, and filled it

Abraham by faith, we know that there shall be some "out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation" under heaven. (See chap. v. 9.)

The next scene which follows (ver. 9, &c.) is, we apprehend, not laid in earth but in heaven. Under the fifth seal we find all the souls lying, as it were, waiting in their blood under the altar on which they had been slain: in the first scene of this seal their blood is avenged, and they are raised to glory, honour, and immortality. "A great multitude, which no man could number, stand before the throne and before the Lamb, clothed in white robes as symbols of their purity, and having in their hands palm branches, as implying that they had gained the victory by the blood of the Lamb and by the word of their testimony." (Chap. xii. 11.) Here they appear worshipping about the heavenly hosts. And when John witnessed this, questions are put, and an answer is given, calculated to excite feelings of joy and of devotion. "These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb: and therefore"—that is, because they are thus justified and sanctified—therefore "are they before the throne," and serve him ever more.

After writing the above, we were gratified to find that we are unwittingly following in the track of those judicious expositors, Mr. Loeiman and Mr. Fuller. "After the sealing of God's servants is accomplished, (says the latter,) the saints and martyrs of Jesus, who, during the preceding persecutions, had overcome, and had been received into glory, joining with the whole heavenly chorus, engage in a triumphant song of praise to God and to the Lamb. The reason of their being here introduced, seems to be, that the sealed servants of God, who were yet on earth, and had to pass through a series of trials, might, by a view of their happy end, be strengthened to follow their example. As great numbers would be against them in this world, they are directed to view the numbers of friends which they have in heaven; who not only look back to their own deliverance, and ascribe it to God, but seem to look down to their brethren, and to say, 'Hold fast the profession of your faith without wavering.'"

CHAP. VIII. VER. 1-6. The seventh seal opened. Seven angels prepare to sound—and one offers incense on the golden

Ver. 8. Of the tribe of Joseph.—It is remarkable, that the names of Dan and Ephraim are omitted in this list, and those of Levi and Joseph inserted in their stead, which, it is supposed, was occasioned by both those tribes being particularly addicted to idolatry.

Ver. 11. The four beasts.—Rather, "living creatures," as before, chap. iv. and v.

Ver. 14. Out of great tribulation.—Woodhouse, "out of the great tribulation."

Ver. 15. Day and night.—i. e. continually, as the Jewish worship was continued in his temple.—Compare chap. xvi. 3, 4; xvi. 1, &c.

Ver. 16. Neither shall the sun light—Woodhouse, "strike on them."—Nor any heat.—Woodhouse, "burning." These expressions evidently refer to that fatal disorder, the sun stroke, so common in hot countries. See note on 2 Kings iv. 20.

CHAP. VIII. VER. 2. Seven angels, &c.—The seven angels that appear upon the scene are the seven spirits of God sent forth into all the earth; and none of them are the same as the four living creatures who were in the midst of altar.—It is impossible, within the limits of our plan, to give at length the reasons on which our exposition is founded. We have explained the seals in relation to those awful public events, which, at the same time as they purified the church, led also to the overthrow of Paganism, and the establishment of Christianity. The four first scenes we have considered as exhibiting, 1. The glorious conquests of the gospel. 2. The horrors of war. 3. The miseries of famine. 4. The miseries of plague or pestilence; all of which, while intended to punish idolaters, were also intended to purify the church, even as gold is purified by fire. The fifth seal exhibits an awful picture of Pagan persecution. The sixth, under the figure of a general convulsion, both of heaven and earth, exhibits those mighty revolutions by which the Pagan government was overturned; and then the divine means, namely, the seal of baptism and of the Spirit, by which the church was so wonderfully protected and enlarged. We have then another celestial vision—a view within the veil, (as it were,) when we see the martyrs, who had so lately bled, received in triumph before the throne of God and the Lamb, with the happy assurance of everlasting blessedness.

The first thing which arrests our attention in this chapter, is "silence in heaven," which is not to be understood of that heaven in which the divine presence dwells, for there the worshippers "rest not day nor night," (ch. iv. 8;) but evidently refers to the state of the church below, and is thought to allude to the temple worship, when, during the time of offering incense, the whole multitude were employed in secret and private prayer. (Isa. lxi.) This is called "half an hour," which was probably about the time so usually employed, and represents that short interval of peace and liberty of conscience which followed upon the accession of Constantine, before the church itself began to practise that system of intolerance, which led to the establishment of the Roman antichrist. During this interval, seven angels who were waiting before God, came forward and receive seven trumpets, which they were to be prepared to sound when the signal of the divine pleasure should be given. In the mean time, another angel comes forward, and there is given to him "much incense," that he may "add it to the prayers of the saints," which are the throne and round about the throne.—Seven trumpets.—Commentators, with considerable variance in the details, are of one mind, that the first four trumpets denote the successive events which caused the downfall of Rome, and that the fifth and sixth trumpets, of the first and second wo, characterize the Saracen and Turkish power.—Keith.

Ver. 3. And stood.—Woodhouse, "was stationed."—A golden censer.—These censers, Loeiman remarks, are "the same with the vials full of plagues," chap. v. 8, (which are there explained to mean a sort of cups upon plates, or saucers.) The offering incense on the golden altar, seems to determine this saucers.) The offering incense in the temple, and not to the service peculiar to the high priest on the day of expiation, and fully shows the propriety of the vision, and representing the high priest, which in this vision would have been the Lamb, as personally officiating in this act of worship.

Ver. 5. And filled it with fire of the altar.—A have was no fire upon the golden altar, thus must refer to the altar of burnt offering, which, as well as the other, appears to have had a place in the heavenly temple. See chap. vi. 9.

with fire of the altar, and cast it ^b into the earth: and ^c there were voices, and thundrings, and lightnings, and an ^d earthquake.

6 And the seven angels which had the seven trumpets prepared themselves to sound.

7 The first angel sounded, and ^e there followed hail and fire mingled with blood, and they were cast upon the earth: and the third part of trees ^f was burnt up, and all green grass was burnt up.

A. M. cir. 4100.
A. D. cir. 96.
h or, upon.
i c 16 15.
j 28, 12.
k Jer. 38, 22.
l Is 21, 3.
m Is 51, 55.
n Am 7, 4.
o Ez 5, 19.
p Is 13, 14.
q Ez 9, 1.

8 And the second angel sounded, and as it were a great mountain ^a burning with fire was cast into the ^b sea: and the third part of the sea became ^c blood;

9 And the third part of the creatures which were in the sea, and had life, died; and the third part of the ships were destroyed.

10 And the third angel sounded, and there fell ^d a great star from heaven, burning as it were a lamp, and it fell upon the third part of collected in a golden censer, and offered upon the golden altar, before the throne.

What agency either saints or angels may have, as respects the offering to God the prayers of saints on earth, we presume not to say; but it appears, that not only the angels, but the elders before the throne, had all "vials full of odours," or, as the margin reads, "censers full of incense, which are the prayers of saints." (Chap. v. 8.) We consider Christ himself as our only intercessor before the throne, and we believe it is the Holy Spirit which on earth "helpeth our infirmities," and teaches us to pray: but it should seem as if these happy spirits took an interest in our devotions on earth, though in what way, it may be impossible for us to anticipate before we are united to their society: only so far we know, that they are "all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation." (Heb. i. 14.) Dr. Doddridge, indeed, solves the difficulty, by supposing Christ himself to be the angel here intended; but it appears to us, that after naming the seven angels, in verse 2, it would be, as Dr. Woodhouse observes, degrading to our Lord, to speak of him merely as "another angel;" nor are we certain, that in any part of this book the Lord Jesus is introduced under that character. He is "the Lamb that was slain, and is now exalted to the midst of the throne."

What is meant by the angel casting down upon the earth a part of the burning incense which he had placed upon the altar, is not so easy to ascertain. Mr. Croley thus explains it—"The prayers and the incense are accepted—they rise before God; and his answer is symbolized in the filling of the censer with fire from the same altar, [or rather from the altar of burnt-offering, see note on verse 5.] and the casting of the fire into the earth, the token of the divine wrath"—as in Ezek. x. 2, &c. But when God hears the prayers of his people, does he answer by fresh trials and afflictions? So we conceive, and that with propriety; since, as we have already seen, it is thus that the church is purified. But this thunder, and fire, and earthquake, are adapted rather to excite alarm for approaching judgments than to express the nature of those judgments.

Ver. 7-9. The first and second trumpets.—In the scenes which opened from the sealed book, we have traced the various judgments whereby Paganism was overthrown and Christianity established; and we have noticed the short interval of peace that the church enjoyed under the government of Constantine, which lasted, in its full extent, little more than fourteen years, i. e. from A. D. 323 to 337. At his death the empire was divided among his sons, who, unhappily, quarrelled among themselves, when by the empire was so weakened as not to be able to resist the numerous hordes of barbarians by which it was surrounded. At the same time the Christian church became infested with all the vices of the state—ambition, jealousy, duplicity, and a spirit of hostility, still more criminal among those who bear the name of Christians, than even among heathen governments. And "shall not I visit for these things?" saith the Lord! (Jer. v. 9.)

It is, as we have before observed, a part of the plan of divine providence to destroy the vain potsherds of the earth by dashing them together. Thus the haughty monarchs of the Roman empire were continually assailed and eventually destroyed by the rude barbarians who surrounded them; and notwithstanding what has been alleged by Archdeacon Woodhouse, Dr. Park, and others, we cannot but think these events are intended to be included under the visions now before us, though we see no necessity for confining them to political events alone.

It is commonly said that the visions of the trumpets are all included under the opening of the seventh seal; but we rather consider the trumpets as a new series of predictions, to which the last seal is to be considered as introductory, and not as comprehending them. The question, however, seems of little consequence to our design.

It is the general opinion of the best commentators of the Old School, (if we may so speak,) particularly of Mr. Lowman, Bishop Newton, Mr. Murell, and Mr. Fuller, that the events signified by the first four trumpets, refer to the various inva-

Upon that altar the sacred fire was constantly kept burning. Lev. vi. 13.—And cast it into—Alegin, "up, u"—the earth.—And cast what? Not the censer, but the fire, or rather some remnant of the burning incense.

Ver. 7. Hail and fire.—This refers to the irruptions of the barbarian nations into the Roman empire, from A. D. 38 to 412; and principally to the new-comers of the Goths under Alaric, who, after spreading desolation by fire and sword throughout the provinces, took and plundered Rome, A. D. 410, and slew all, without distinction of rank, sex, or age. —Bagster. —And they were cast.—Namely, the hail, and fire, and blood. Doddridge. It was cast; "menning the storm, or perhaps the incense.—Upon the earth.—Woodhouse. "Upon the land," as distinguished from the sea, rivers, &c., ver. 8-10.

Ver. 8. A great mountain.—This is an emblem of a mighty destructive war sions of Rome and of the Roman Empire, by different hordes of barbarians, whose delight appears to have consisted in plunder and in murder. By these despised enemies, that haughty empire was humbled to the dust, prior to the erection of another empire, equally hostile to truth and righteousness, though under the Christian name; for it appears to have been the plan of Providence to remove the Roman Empire, in order to make room for the Man of Sin, (2 Thess. i. 6-10,) who in his turn also must be brought to the dust, before the millennial kingdom of Messiah can be established.

It is but just, however, to remark, that another class of commentators, no less pious, learned, and acute, have taken a different view of this part of the Apocalypse: we refer particularly to Bishop Hurd, Archdeacon Woodhouse, and Dr. Park, who consider the evils here predicted to be rather of a moral nature; such as the general depravity of the church and its ministers during that period; the growth of heresy, and the increase of immorality. On many parts of the prophetic Scriptures the best expositors have admitted a double sense; while, therefore, we adhere to the former scheme of interpretation, as, in our opinion, best established, and most in harmony with the ancient prophets, we shall, at the same time, hint also at the moral interpretations just alluded to.

The sounding of the first trumpet, which we should date in the latter part of the fourth century, after the death of Constantine the Great, (who died in A. D. 337,) produces a tremendous tempest of "hail and fire, mingled with blood," and its fatal consequences may very aptly represent the numerous hordes of barbarians, who successively invaded this devoted empire; and is expressed in terms very similar to those in which the prophet Isaiah describes the invasions of the land of Israel by Shalmanezzer and Sennacherib. (Chap. xxviii. xxix.) At the same time, it must be confessed, that this imagery does not improperly depict the nature of the theological controversy as then conducted, especially when the ardent disputants resisted each other even unto blood, as was too often the case in this and many following centuries.

The terms in which the mischief occasioned by this tempest is described, are peculiar; it burnt up "a third part of the trees, and all the green grass." By trees, the higher classes are generally intended in prophetic language; and by grass, the common people; but here it appears to have been the "green grass" only that was consumed, and of that not a third part only, but the whole—"all the green grass"—by which we suppose must be intended, the most useful and valuable members in the lower classes of society. Dr. Woodhouse, who understands these terms allegorically, interprets (we think, rather strangely) the "green grass" to signify those professing Christians, "who exhibit a promising appearance, yet, like herbage in hot climates, are soon withered and gone;" while, on the other hand, Dr. Park seems to understand the most flourishing Christians of the age!

On the sounding of the second angel's trumpet, "a great mountain, burning with fire," was cast into the sea, and the third part of the sea became blood. This has been generally supposed to intend Alaric, King of the Visigoths, and his horde of barbarians, who, in the early part of the fifth century, repeatedly invaded Rome. In the first instance he was bought off by an immense price; but in the last, the capital was given up to three days' plunder by his army, and vast numbers of the Romans were slain—not only by the barbarians, but by their own slaves, who turned against their Roman masters. And, as Mr. Fuller remarks, "If Alaric or Visiguth had literally been thrown into the ocean, it could hardly have produced a greater effervescence among the waters than these things produced among the nations." It is represented as having destroyed a third (i. e. a considerable part) of every thing that had life in it, and even of the ships, which shows that it had particular reference to the maritime parts of the empire. Of those who understand this allegorically, Dr. Park applies this to religious controversy, and Dr. Woodhouse, to the anticipated fall of Babylon.

Ver. 10-13. The third and fourth trumpets sounded.—"The third angel sounded, and there fell a great star from heaven, nor; and seems to refer to Alaric and his Huns, who, after Alaric, ravaged the empire during fourteen years, massacring, plundering, and destroying all before him in the most barbarous manner. This period probably includes the calamities which befell the empire from A. D. 412 to 456. —Bagster. —The third part of the sea became blood.—This has an evident allusion to one of the miracles wrought in Egypt. See Exod. vii. 20, 21.—The third part.—This is an expression not uncommon with the prophetic writers. See Ezek. v. 12. Z. ch. Am 8, 9, &c.

Ver. 9. Which were in the sea, and had life.—Doddridge. "Which had life in the soul; i. e. which lived in the sea. Thus, as some think, refers particularly to the maritime parts of the empire; but see chap. xvii. 15.

Ver. 10. A great star.—A star, in prophetic language, signifies a prince, or the rivers, and upon the fountains of waters;

11 And the name of the star is called Wormwood; and the third part of the waters became wormwood; and many men died of the waters, because they were made bitter.

12 And the fourth angel sounded, and the third part of the sun was smitten, and the third part of the moon, and the third part of the stars; so as the third part of them was darkened, and the day shone not for a third part of it, and the night likewise.

13 And I beheld, and heard an angel flying through the midst of heaven, saying with a loud voice, Wo, wo, wo, to the inhabitants of the earth, by reason of the other voices of the trumpet of the three angels, which are yet to sound!

CHAPTER IX.

1 At the sounding of the fifth angel, a star falleth from heaven: to whom is given the key of the bottomless pit. 2 He openeth the pit, and there come forth locusts like scorpions. 12 The first two trumpets. 13 The sixth trumpet sounded. 14 Four angels are let loose, that were bound.

AND the fifth angel sounded, and I saw a star fall from heaven unto the earth: and to him was given the key of the bottomless pit.

2 And he opened the bottomless pit; and there arose a smoke out of the pit, as the smoke burning as it were a lamp."—This star is supposed to designate Attila and his Huns, (or Scythians,) a more ferocious race than the preceding; and, as to the chief himself, he affected to be considered as "the scourge of God," and pretended that the grass would never grow upon ground whereon his horse had trodden. Others, however, apply this to Genseric, King of the Vandals, and conqueror of Africa, who about the same period (the middle of the fifth century) also plundered Rome, and carried off the Empress Eudoxia (whom he pretended to avenger) and her two daughters, and a vast number of inferior captives.

This Attila had, in our opinion, a superior claim to the character of a fallen star, named Wormwood; since he was, according to Bishop Newton, "a most bigoted Arian;" thus poisoning the doctrines of the church, and, at the same time, bitterly persecuting the orthodox or Trinitarian Christians.

At the sound of the fourth trumpet, all the luminaries of heaven become dim, and lose a third, i. e. a considerable part of their light and glory. "Darkening, smiting, or setting of the sun, moon, and stars, (says Sir Is. Newton) are put for the setting of a kingdom, or the desolation thereof, proportional to the darkness." And when darkness is opposed to light, (Mr. Flaubert observes,) "as light is a symbol of joy and safety, so darkness is a symbol of misery and adversity." (See Isa. xli. 10, 11. Jer. xli. 16. Ezek. xxxix. 7, 8.) From the time that Genseric entered Rome, its strength and glory rapidly diminished. "Genseric (says Bishop Newton) left the western empire in a weak and desperate condition. It struggled hard, and gasped, as it were, for breath, through eight short and turbulent reigns, for the space of twenty years, and at length expired in the year 476, under Monimus, or Augustulus, as he was named in denision, being a diminutive Augustus. This change was effected by Odoacer, king of the Huns, who coming to Rome with an army of barbarians, stripped Monimus of the imperial robes, put an end to the very name of the western empire, and caused himself to be proclaimed king of Italy." His reign was, indeed, but short; for, sixteen years afterwards, he was slain by Theodoric; who, in A. D. 493, founded the kingdom of the Ostrogoths, which continued about 60 years longer. "Thus was the Roman sun extinguished in the western empire; (continues the Bishop;) but the other lesser luminaries, the moon and stars, still subsisted, for Rome was still allowed to have her senate and consuls, and other subordinate magistrates, as before." Thus the glory of Rome continued to decline, until, in A. D. 526, it was made a province of the eastern empire, under Justin II., and governed by a duke who was himself subject to the Exarch of Ravenna, which Rome had been used to govern.

Thus fell imperial Rome. But, says Mr. Fuller, "It may be beheld."—Woodhouse. Of Genseric, Gibbon says, "The terrible Genseric, a name which, in the destruction of the Roman Empire, has deserved an equal rank with Alaric and Attila." [This seems to refer to Genseric, who soon after Attila's retreat, unexpectedly invaded the empire with 200,000 Vandals and Moors, besieged and took Rome, and abandoned it to the ravages of his troops, from A. D. 456 to 456. As this assault was made at the source of the Roman power and prosperity, and as he was a bigoted Arian, and a cruel persecutor of the orthodox, he may justly be said to poison the fountains.]—B.

Ver. 11. Because they were made bitter.—See Exod. xv. 23.

Ver. 13. An angel—Literally, "one angel." Flaubert here reads, "one eagle;" but as the whole machinery is administered by angels, we think, with Woodhouse, that the internal evidence is strongly in favour of the common rendering.

CHAP. IX. Ver. 1. The bottomless pit.—Woodhouse. "The pit of the bottomless deep." That this refers to the pit or abyss of hell, see chap. xv. 1-3; and 2 Peter i. 4.

Ver. 3. Unto them was given power, as the scorpions.—Locusts, it is well of a great furnace; and the sun and the air were darkened by reason of the smoke of the pit.

3 And there came out of the smoke locusts upon the earth: and unto them was given power, as the scorpions of the earth have power.

4 And it was commanded them that they should not hurt the grass of the earth, neither any green thing, neither any tree; but only those men which have not the seal of God in their foreheads.

5 And to them it was given that they should not kill them, but that they should be tormented five months: and their torment was as the torment of a scorpion, when he striketh a man.

6 And in those days shall men seek death, and shall not find it; and shall desire to die, and death shall flee from them.

7 And the shapes of the locusts were like unto horses prepared unto battle; and on their heads were as it were crowns like gold, and their faces were as the faces of men.

8 And they had hair as the hair of women, and their teeth were as the teeth of lions.

9 And they had breast-plates, as it were breast-thought that these events had too slight a relation to the church of Christ, to become the subject of prophecy: two things, however, may be alleged in answer:—

1. They were necessary for the accomplishment of other prophecies, particularly Dan. vii. 7, 8. 2 Thess. ii. 7; thereby a way was made for the beast to have ten horns; as, after the overthrow of the empire, it was divided into so many independent kingdoms, which, with little variation, continue to this day. Hereby also a way was made for the little horn of Daniel's fourth beast, or the papal anti-christ, to come up amongst them; or, as the apostle expresses it, for the man of sin to be revealed.

2. In these judgments upon the empire, we perceive the divine displeasure for its having corrupted the Christian religion, and transformed it into an engine of state. The wars of the Assyrians and Babylonians, were the scourges of God on those who had corrupted the true religion; and such were those of the Goths, the Vandals, and the Huns, on the Christian governments of the fourth and fifth centuries.

In the close of this chapter, another celestial herald flies through the midst of heaven, warning the inhabitants of the earth, of the three dreadful woes which are to attend the sounding of the other three trumpets which are yet to sound: which is as much as to say, that the judgments already executed were but slight, compared with the farther judgments which might be expected; and this, indeed, we shall find to be the fact. Mr. Cunningham suggests, that this proclamation may serve also "as a chronological mark, to show that these three trumpets are all posterior to the first four, not only in order, but in time; and that they belong to a new series of events."

CHAP. IX. Ver. 1-12. The fifth, or first wo trumpet.—In consistency with our interpretation of the first four trumpets, we refer the events of this trumpet to the rise of the Mahometan imposture, and the Saracen invasions. Many Protestant writers have taken this falling star to mean the Pope himself, and the locusts to be his monks and friars: while, on the other hand, Dr. Walsley and the Rhemish annotators apply the image to Martin Luther and his heretical disciples, as they are pleased to call them.

Dr. Doddridge, Mr. Wesley, and others, conceive the reference to be to some celestial being, whose flight was with the rapidity of a falling meteor, and who was commissioned to open the infernal pit, and to allow a portion of that blackness of darkness which it contains, to visit and to plague the earth; while others think that Satan himself, who is properly a fallen star, may be hereby intended.

Mr. Fuller remarks—"Looking at this dreadful irruption of darkness and desolation, we perceive the necessity there was known, never attack man, but only the fruits of the earth on which he lives, scorpions, on the other hand, do not attack the fruits of the earth, but animals only; and their stings are seldom fatal, except in the hottest climates, particularly Africa. These circumstances all agree to those mythical locusts—the Saracens.

Ver. 4. But only those men, &c.—Cromwell and abolitionary Christians; against whom the Saracens chiefly revenged. Lorrain says, "The military laws of the Mahometans make a distinction between the Harbi, including both atheists and idolaters; and the 'people of a book,' including Jews and Christians. These were to be compelled to embrace Mahometanism, or to pay a tribute, and then to be allowed to follow their own religion; but the Harbi had no toleration.

Ver. 5. And to them it was given that they should not kill them.—Wesley and Woodhouse, "Not that they should kill them, but," &c. (Should not kill them as a political body, state, or empire; and accordingly, however they desolated the Greek and Latin churches, they could not extirpate them nor gain possession of the empire.—Five months—Five prophetic months, each consisting of 30 days, and each day denoting a year, amounting to 150 years.

plates of iron; and the sound of their wings was as the sound of ^m chariots of many horses running to battle.

10 And they had tails like unto scorpions, and there were stings in their tails: and ^a their power was to hurt men five months.

11 And they had a king ^o over them, which is the angel of the bottomless pit, whose name in the Hebrew tongue is Abaddon, but in the Greek tongue hath his name ^p Apollyon.

A. M. cir.
4100.
A. D. cir.
96.
m Na. 2.4.
u ver. 5.
o Ep. 2.2.
p That is,
a destroyer.
q c. 8. 13.
r (ie 2. 14.
Je 2. 13.
c. 16. 12
s or, at 12 One ^{wo} is past; and, behold, there come two woes more hereafter.

13 And the sixth angel sounded, and I heard a voice from the four horns of the golden altar which is before God,

14 Saying to the sixth angel which had the trumpet, Loose the four angels which are bound in the great river ^r Euphrates.

15 And the four angels were loosed, which were prepared ^a for an hour, and a day, and for sealing the servants of God in their foreheads, that they might be preserved amidst these trying times. The sealed servants of God would endure the trial; but 'those men who had not the seal of God in their foreheads,' would be carried away and perish.

"That the locusts refer to the ravaging hordes of Saracens, who, with Mahomet at their head, subdued and destroyed the eastern part of Christendom," seems to be generally admitted: and some have considered the smoke as denoting his false doctrine, and the star which fell from heaven to the earth, as meaning himself. But, on the most mature consideration, (adds Mr. F.) I concur with those expositors, who, while admitting the locusts to be Mahomet's destructive hordes of Saracens, yet understand the smoke of Papish darkness, which was preparatory to the other, and the fallen star, of the Bishop of Rome. On the other hand, there is a connexion between the subversion of the imperial government, and the revelation of the man of sin. It was the imperial authority which let, or hindered him, and which, when 'taken out of the way,' made room for his appearing. (2 Thess. ii. 4-8.) Thus the eclipse under the fourth trumpet prepared the way for the irruption of darkness under the fifth. The 'mystery of iniquity' had long been at work, and now it burst forth as the smoke of a great furnace, impeding the light of the gospel, and darkening the moral atmosphere of the Christian world.

"With this also agrees the application of the fallen star to the Pope or bishop of Rome. It comports with the symbolical style of the book, that a prophetic person should denote, not an individual, but a succession of individuals in an official character. The bishop of Rome was once a star in the Christian firmament; but abandoning the doctrine and spirit of a Christian minister, and setting up for worldly domination, he fell from heaven unto the earth, and thus became a fit agent for opening the bottomless pit. The Bishop of Meaux [Bossuet] acknowledges that 'Hell never opens of itself: it is always some false doctor that opens it.'

Hell is, however, opened!—a smoke arises as from a furnace; but instead of sparks mingling with the smoke, behold a swarm of locusts—typifying the numerous hordes of Saracens or Arabians, which about this time overran the eastern empire. This is the interpretation of Mr. Made, and is supported by Mr. Lowman and most respectable expositors. "The Arabians (says Bishop Newton) are properly compared to locusts, because numerous armies frequently are so; because swarms of locusts often arise from Arabia; and because, in the plagues of Egypt, to which constant allusion is made in these trumpets, the locusts (Exod. x. 13) are 'brought by an east wind'; that is, from Arabia, which lay eastward of Egypt; and also because, in the book of Judges, (chap. vi. 12,) the people of Arabia are compared to 'locusts, or grasshoppers, for multitude'; for, in the original, the word for both is the same. As the natural locusts are bred in pits and holes of the earth, so these mystical locusts are truly infernal, and proceed with the smoke 'from the bottomless pit.'

"It was commanded them (ver. 4) that they should 'not hurt the grass of the earth, neither any green thing, neither any green tree,' which demonstrates that these were not natural, but symbolical locusts. The like injunctions were [literally] given to the Arabian officers and soldiers. When Yezid was marching with the army to invade Syria, Abubekir charged him with this, among other orders—'Destroy no palm trees, nor burn any fields of corn; cut down no fruit trees, nor do any mischief to cattle, only such as you kill to eat.' Their commission is to hurt only those men who have not the seal of God in their foreheads; that is, those who are not the true servants of God, but are corrupt and idolatrous Christians. Now, from history, it appears evidently, that in those countries of Asia, Africa, and Europe, where the Saracens extended their conquests, the Christians were generally guilty of idolatry, in the worshipping of saints, if not of images; and it was the pretence of Mohammed (or Mahomet) and his followers to chastise them for it, and to re-establish the unity of the Godhead. The parts which remained freest from the general infection, were Savoy, Piedmont, and the southern parts of France, and it is very memorable, that when the Saracens approached these parts, they were defeated with great slaughter, by the famous Charles Martel, in several engagements."

and accordingly, from the time that Mahomet began to propagate his imposture, A. D. 612, to the building of Bagdad, when they ceased from their ravages, A. D. 763, are just 150 years. — Bagster.

Ver. 9. Chariots of many horses.—'Chariots and many horses rushing to war.'—Doddridge.

Ver. 11. And they had a king over them.—Agur says of the literal locusts, 1398

When it is said, that power was given them, not that they should kill, but that they should torment, we are not to suppose that no individuals were slain in these wars; but that extermination was not their object: and it is singular, that the same Abubekir which enjoined the army to spare the corn-fields and the fruit trees, &c. added—"Adhere inviolably to your engagements, and put none of the religious people you meet with in monasteries to the sword. Offer no violence to the places they serve God in." And though this injunction was by no means uniformly attended to, nor could be, when they appealed to the sword; yet the torment inflicted on the Christian world seems to have consisted chiefly in plundering the men, and gratifying their lust upon the women, which doubtless made many desire rather to die than live under such circumstances. But the term kill, is by most expositors understood politically. Mr. Morell thus explains it: "They had not power to overthrow totally, or politically, the eastern branch of the Roman Empire. This was not effected till the Saracens were succeeded by the Turks, who are described under the following trumpet."

The description given of these locusts answers well to the description of these Arabian invaders. They gloried in their cavalry, which was numerous and powerful; their turbans resembled the crowns worn by Eastern princes. Their character was a strange mixture of fierceness and effeminacy. They had faces like those of men, (clothed with beards,) and their hair resembled those of women, to the sensual enjoyment of whom they were remarkably devoted. Their teeth and breast-plates of iron, implies their strength both in attack and in resistance; and their impetuosity is strongly implied, in comparing their approach to that of an army of winged locusts; and the stings in their tails, signifies the poison which they left behind them. They poisoned the principles of the Christian world where they prevailed, with the doctrines of unitarianism, fatalism, and the thirst of conquest and of blood.

But they had a king—and who was he? "The angel of the bottomless pit," whose name, both in Greek and Hebrew, signifies "The Destroyer." This should seem to be the same who had the key of the bottomless pit; and Mr. Lowman explains it to mean "that evil spirit, the prince of the powers of darkness; who, from the constant evils he is designing and doing in the world, is called The Destroyer." So Dr. Woodhouse.

The evils here predicted are limited, not only in their degree, not to kill, but to torment; but also in their duration, they are to 'hurt men five months.' It is only during the five summer months that either locusts or scorpions are destructive: to this period, also, the Saracens usually limited their exertions. Taking these months mystically, for thirty days or years each, Bishop Newton remarks, that during the first 150 years of their existence, dating from A. D. 612, when Mahomet first appeared openly as a prophet, they subdued 'Syria, Persia, India, and the greatest part of Asia; Egypt, and the greatest part of Africa; Spain, and some [other] parts of Europe.' And it was in 762, the end of this period, that Almansor built Bagdad, for the seat of his empire, and called it the City of Peace, in allusion to Jerusalem. But as this term of five months is twice mentioned, some learned commentators (among whom is Sir Isaac Newton) have supposed that the period should be doubled, and have accordingly remarked, that the whole period of the Saracen dominion was little more than 300 years; for in 936, their empire was broken and divided. This seems the utmost extent of this trumpet.

In the close of this trumpet it is added, "One wo is past; and, behold, there come two woes more hereafter;" which is thought to imply, that some time would intervene before the coming of the second wo, because, after that is passed, we read, "Behold, the third wo cometh quickly." (Chap. ix. 14.)

Ver. 13-21. The sixth trumpet sounded.—This angel no sooner sounds, than a voice is directed to him from the altar of incense, or golden altar, requiring him to loose the four angels which were restrained, by or at the river Euphrates, that they may execute the judgments appointed upon mankind. "Such a voice, proceeding from the four horns of the golden altar, (says Bishop Newton), is a strong indication of the divine displeasure; and plainly intimates that the sins of men must have been very great, when the altar, which was [used to be] their sanctuary and protection, called aloud for vengeance."

that they have no king, (Prov. xxx. 27.) which marks another distinction between the literal and figurative locusts.—Abaddon and Apollyon both signify "a destroyer," as in the English margin.

Ver. 14. The four angels that are bound in—Doddridge, "by;" Woodhouse, "at;" the great river Euphrates—A famous river, which had its rise in Paradise. (Gen. ii. 14.) and runs through the frontiers of Cappadocia, Syria, Third part of men killed.

REVELATION.—CHAP. IX.

The rest remain impenitent.

a month, and a year, for to slay the third part of men.

16 And the number of the army ^a of the horsemen were two hundred thousand ^b thousand: and I heard the ^c number of them.

17 And thus I saw the horses in the vision, and them that sat on them, having breast-plates of fire, and of jacinth, and brimstone: and the heads of the horses ^d were as the heads of lions; and out of their mouths issued fire and smoke and brimstone.

18 By these three was the third part of men killed, by the fire, and by the smoke, and by the brimstone, which issued out of their mouths.

A. M. or
D. cir.
96
A. C. 87. 9.
u. E. 54. 4.
Da. 11. 40.
v. 18. 65. 17.
w. 1. 4.
x. 1. Ch. 12. 8.
Is. 3. 25. 23.
y. Is. 9. 15.
z. Is. 1. 14.
Is. 3. 5. 3.
u. Is. 17. 7.
v. Is. 10. 40.
w. Is. 1. 15. 13.
x. Is. 10. 19.
y. Is. 10. 19.
z. Is. 10. 19.

19 For their power is in their mouth, and in their tails: for their tails ^e were like unto serpents, and had heads, and with them they do hurt.

20 And the rest of the men which were not killed by these plagues yet ^f repented not of the works of their hands, that they should not worship ^g devils, and ^h idols of gold, and silver, and brass, and stone, and of wood: which neither can see, nor hear, nor walk:

21 Neither repented they of their murders, nor of their ⁱ sorceries, nor of their fornication, nor of their thefts.

They are loosed immediately, and declared to be fully prepared to execute the divine judgments upon mankind at the appointed hour. The commentators we have chiefly followed (Mede, Loewman, Norton, &c.) agree that this prediction has reference to the Turks. If we take the number four literally, we may, with Mr. Mede, apply them to the four Saltanes, or governments of the Turks, in countries bordering on the Euphrates: but if, with Daubuz and Loewman, we take the number "four" for "a number of universality," as Philo calls it, it may seem, as Mr. Loewman remarks, "a very natural interpretation of the four angels," to understand them, of the whole power of these destroyers, gathered together from the four corners, or every quarter of the land they dwell in; and spreading themselves toward the four winds, or the several parts of the earth, without restraint." But if we adhere to the more limited interpretation of these four angels, we may remark, that they were all founded in the eleventh century; and in the end of the thirteenth century Othman combined all the remains of the different sultanies, and founded what is still called the Othman or Ottoman (or, more vulgarly, the Turkish) Empire.

When it is said they were prepared "for an hour, a day," &c. we have supposed these words to mean only a certain appointed time, which is the exposition of Mr. Loewman; but Bishop Newton and others (including Mr. Fuller) understand the expression mystically, taking "a day for a year;" a prophetic year then will be equal to 360 years; a month, 30 years; a day, one year; and an hour, (preserving the same proportion,) 15 days; making in the whole 391 years and 15 days. Now, it is certainly, as the learned prelate just referred to expresses it, "wonderfully remarkable, that the first conquest mentioned in history, of the Othmans over the Christians, was in the year of Christ 1281: and in 1672, Mohammed IV. took Camernee from the Poles, with 48 towns and villages, which were delivered up to the Sultan upon the treaty of peace," being signed; and this was the last addition to the boundaries of the Ottoman empire.

The description here given of these armies answers no less admirably to the immense armies of the Turks or Othmans, which, as the Greek expresses it, were "two myriads of myriads." Breast-plates of fire, and of jacinth, (or hyacinth,) and brimstone, besides marking their three favourite colours, red, blue, and yellow, may allude also to the splendid harness of the cavalry. When it is said, "Out of their mouths issued fire, and smoke, and brimstone," Bishop Newton thinks this "a manifest allusion to great guns and gunpowder, which were invented under this trumpet, and were of signal service to the Othmans in their wars. For by these three was the third part of mankind killed;" that is, the Greek or Eastern Empire, [Amurath II. broke into Peloponnesus, and took several strong places by the means of his artillery. But his son Mohammed, at the siege of Constantinople, employed such great guns as were never made before, [and the description of which is almost incredible.] For forty days the wall was battered by these guns, and so many breaches were made, that the city was taken by assault, and an end put to the Grecian empire." This symbol, of fire issuing out of their mouths, is, according to Mr. Fuller, "expressive of what a body of horsemen, fighting with fire-arms, would appear to a distant spectator, who had never before seen or heard of any thing of the kind."

Now, as it is said of the locusts under the preceding trumpet, that they had "stings in their tails;" so it is said "their tails were like serpents, and had heads," which is generally supposed to allude to the serpents with two heads, of which the old naturalists speak; which would render them terrible, both in their advance and in their retreat. So it is said of an army of locusts—"A fire devoureth before them, and behind them a flame burneth. The land is as the garden of Eden before them, and behind them a desolate wilderness." (Joel ii. 3.) Most expositors, however, explain this, in reference to the poisonous doctrines which these Mahometans diffused around them, which were utterly subversive of Christianity, and the rights of conscience.

Some infidel writers have compared Mahometanism with Christianity, and given it the preference, both in respect of its doctrines, and their success; but there is this difference to be observed in them: The doctrines of Christ were opposed to all the prejudices and corrupt passions of mankind; on the contrary, those of Mahomet, except in the article of the unity of God, coincided with them. He made religion to consist in outward ceremonies, and allowed those to be meritorious. He tolerated polygamy, concubinage, revenge, and the most licentious pleasures. His religion swam with the stream—Christianity against it. His religion was propagated with the sword, ours by evidence and persuasion. The success of the one is therefore easily to be accounted for—the other, only on the principle of a divine influence and support.

The religion of Mahomet, separate from his imposture, may be considered as a system of natural religion, for most of the peculiar truths of divine revelation he has discarded, only he acknowledged the divine mission of Jesus, and so far may be considered as a witness for Christianity. Bishop Sherlock, who has drawn a comparison between natural and revealed religion, has the following interesting passage in reference to Mahomet:—"Go to your Natural Religion; lay before her Mahomet and his disciples, arrayed in armour and in blood, riding in triumph over the spoils of thousands and ten thousands, who fell by his victorious sword. Show her the cities which he set in flames, the countries which he ravaged and destroyed, and the miserable distress of all the inhabitants of the earth. When she has viewed him in this scene, carry her into his retreats; show her the prophet's chamber, his concubines and wives, and let her see his adulteries, and hear him allege revelation, and his divine commission, to justify his lusts and his oppressions. When she is tired with this prospect, then show her the blessed Jesus, humble and meek, doing good to all the sons of men, patiently instructing the ignorant and the perverse. Let her see him in his most retired privacies; let her follow him to the mount, and hear his devotions and supplications to God. Carry her to his table, to view his poor fare, and hear his heavenly discourse. Let her see him injured, but not provoked. Let her attend him to the tribunal, and consider the patience with which he endured the scoffs and reproaches of his enemies. Lead her to his cross, and let her view him in the agonies of death, and hear his last prayer for his persecutors. Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do! When Natural Religion has viewed them both, ask which is the Prophet of God? But her answer we have already had, when she saw part of this scene through the eyes of the Centurion who attended him at the cross; by him she said, 'Truly this was the Son of God.'"

But to return to the scenes before us; it is most melancholy, that those only who suffered were affected by them: the survivors repented not. "The rest of the men, that is, (says Mr. Fuller,) of the men who had not the seal of God in their forehead, who were not killed by these plagues, repented not. As those that were killed were the Eastern Roman Empire, with the Greek church, as connected with it; so those that were not killed were the Western Roman Empire, with the Latin church. These two churches were as Aholah and Aholibah, (Ezek. xxi.) The fall of the one, ought to have been a warning to the other; but it was not. They persisted in their image-worship, which was only the old idolatry of the Pagans under a new form; nor were they behind them in their numerous persecutions, their foul impostures, their filthy intrigues, and their fraudulent foundations. And though soon after the overthrow of the Greek Church the Reformation began, yet they reformed not. The Council of Trent, which was called on this occasion, sat eighteen years, and at last left things as it found them. Babylon was not to be healed!"

Arabia Deserta, Chaldaea, and Mesopotamia, and falls into the Persian Gulf—Chabul.

Ver. 17 Having breast plates of fire—This appears to point out the scarlet, blue, and yellow colours, for which the Turks have always been remarkable. The "four angels bound on the Euphrates," denote their four sultanies able. The "four angels bound on the Euphrates," denote their four sultanies able. The time for which they were prepared, "an hour, and a day, and a month, and a year," computing a year for each day, amounts to 391 years and 15 days; and from their first conquest over the Christians, A. D. 1281, to the taking of Camernee from the Poles, A. D. 1672, which was the last conquest by which their dominion was extended, is exactly that period 1—B.

Ver. 19 And had heads—Redd idae, "having heads;" i. e. in their tails. So Philo describes the amphisbena; but this seems to have been a mistake.

Ver. 20 Worship devils—ta "demons," i. e. according to Loewman, "angels and the souls of departed men"—sinners, we fear, as well as saints.

Ver. 21 Nor of their sorceries—We know that, in the middle ages, what is called the black art, was much studied and practised in all its branches. But Loewman understands this of poisonings.

CHAPTER X.

1 A mighty strong angel appeareth with a book open in his hand. 6 e swearth by him that liveth for ever, that there shall be no more time. 9 John is commanded to take and eat the book.

AND I saw another mighty angel come down from heaven, clothed with a cloud; and a rainbow ^a was upon his head, and his face ^b was as it were the sun, and his feet as pillars of fire:

2 And he had in his hand a little book open: and he set his right foot upon the sea, and his left foot on the earth,

3 And cried with a loud voice, as when a lion roareth: and when he had cried, seven thunders ^c uttered their voices.

4 And when the seven thunders had uttered their voices, I was about to write: and I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, Seal ^d up those things which the seven thunders uttered, and write them not.

5 And the angel which I saw stand upon the sea and upon the earth ^e lifted up his hand to heaven,

6 And swore by him ^f that liveth for ever and every, who created heaven, and the things that therein are, and the earth, and the things that therein are, and the sea, and the things which are therein, ^g that there should be time no longer:

A. M. cir. 4100.
A. D. cir. 96.

a Eze. 1. 28.

b Mat. 17. 2
c 1. 15, 16.

c e. 8. 5, 14. 2.

d Da. 9. 28.
12. 4, 9.

e Ex. 6. 8.
De. 32. 40.

f Ne. 9. 6.
c 14. 7.

g Da. 12. 7.

h e. 11. 15.

i Re. 11. 25.
Ep. 3. 5. 9.

j ver. 1.

k Eze. 3. 1.
3. 14.

l Zer. 2. 1.
c 21. 15.

m Eze. 40. 1.
45.

7 But in the days of the voice of the seventh ^a angel, when he shall begin to sound, the mystery ^b of God should be finished, as he hath declared to his servants the prophets.

8 And the voice ^c which I heard from heaven spake unto me again, and said, Go and take the little book which is open in the hand of the angel which standeth upon the sea and upon the earth.

9 And I went unto the angel, and said unto him, Give me the little book. And he said unto me, Take ^d it, and eat it up; and it shall make thy belly bitter, but it shall be in thy mouth sweet as honey.

10 And I took the little book out of the angel's hand, and ate it up; and it was in my mouth sweet as honey: and as soon as I had eaten it, my belly was bitter.

11 And he said unto me, Thou must prophesy again before many peoples, and nations, and tongues, and kings.

CHAPTER XI.

3 The two witnesses prophesy. 6 They have power to shut heaven, that it rain not. 7 The beast shall fight against them, and kill them. 8 They lie unburied, 11 and after three days and a half rise again. 14 The second war is past. 15 The seventh trumpet soundeth.

AND there was given me a reed ^a like unto a rod: and the angel stood, saying, Rise, and measure ^b the temple of God, and the altar, and them that worship therein.

CHAP. X. Ver. 1—11. A mighty angel with a little book, which, at his command, the prophet eats.—This chapter seems plainly introductory to a new series of prophecies, relative to the Western church; the chapters immediately preceding having described the judgments of God upon the Eastern church, in subjecting it to the Turks. The scene of this introductory vision is upon earth, and the principal personage in it is "a mighty angel." As in chap. v. 2, a strong or mighty angel proclaims a challenge to any one in heaven or earth, to open the book of seven seals; so here another mighty angel appears with "a little book," and takes a solemn oath. Sir Is. Newton remarks, that the form in which he appears, much resembles the description given of Christ himself in chap. i.: his countenance shone as the sun, and his feet like pillars of fire. He was also clothed with a cloud, and had a rainbow round about his head—symbols very appropriate to Deity. These particulars have induced many divines (among whom are Doddridge and Fuller) to appropriate this description to the Son of God himself; yet, on the other hand, there are several circumstances which render it at least doubtful. Though "a mighty angel," it was only "another mighty angel," putting him on a level with other angels; and, as Mr. Wesley observes, he swears not by himself, but by him that sat upon the throne: and though his face was as the sun, so chap. xii. 1, the church is represented as "a woman clothed with the sun, and crowned with stars," which is a figure still more sublime, and leaves us room to think, with Mr. Wesley and Dr. Woodhouse, that this might be, or, indeed, must be, only "a created angel."

This angel appears to have been of extraordinary magnitude, for he set one foot upon the sea, and the other upon the earth. His voice also was proportioned to his figure, for it was "as when a lion roareth." And when he had cried, "seven thunders uttered their voices;" not merely inarticulate sounds, because John was about to write them, till he was forbidden; but as he was ordered to seal up, or suppress them, it would be both vain and presumptuous for us to guess at them, as some have done. "Secret things belong unto the Lord our God, but the things that are revealed unto us and to our children." (Deut. xxxii. 29.)

But our most important inquiry here regards the purport of this mighty angel's oath, which has been variously understood, the original being equivocal. The following are, as we conceive, the most probable meanings, and all come nearly to the same issue:—1. If we adhere to the common translation, CHAP. X. Ver. 1. His feet—i. e. his legs and feet, like pillars and pedestals of burning flame.

Ver. 3. Seven thunders uttered their voices—"Seven" being the number of completion, it may seem to imply a tremendous thunder-storm, attended by voices from heaven.

Ver. 5. Lifted up his hand—See Gen. xiv. 22. Deut. xxxii. 40. Ezek. ix. 5.—Sir W. Jones, at a period of mature judgment, (says his biographer,) considered this passage as equal in sublimity to any in the inspired writings, and far superior to any that could be produced from mere human compositions.

Ver. 6. That there should be time no longer—i. e. no longer delay, as Doddridge and Gill explain it; or, as Daubuz, Lomman, and Bishop Newton explain it, "the time of those judgments" shall not be yet." The word rendered "time," (Gr. chronos), we are assured, sometimes signifies delay; which gives a variety in rendering, with no great difference in the general meaning. "The time should not be yet," that is, the time of those glorious things with which the "mystery of God should be finished."—Baxter.

Ver. 7. When he shall begin to sound.—Woodhouse, "When he is about to sound." Doddridge, "who was about quickly to sound." The seventh angel, we must remember, was to announce the Millennium, in which the mystery of God should be completed.

"there shall be time no longer," we must carefully connect it with the following verse, and then the sense will be, not that the end of all things is now fully come, but that the time of finishing "the mystery of God" shall be fulfilled under the seventh trumpet, which will usher in the Millennium. Or, 2. If we read, "the time shall not be yet," the meaning is, not till the seventh trumpet shall begin to sound, and then the mystery shall be fulfilled. Or, 3d. If we read, "delay shall be no longer," it still amounts to the same thing, meaning, not beyond the sounding of the seventh trumpet. In either case, the seventh trumpet will introduce that grand dispensation of the Millennium, in which all the mystery of God, as respects the present life, shall be fulfilled.

This angel had in his hand a little book open, which Bishop Newton considers as a kind of codicil or appendix to the book which had been unsealed. But Mr. Lomman is of opinion, that this was not another, but a remainder of the same book, or roll, which the Lamb had received and opened. To us it appears altogether a new book, and of a much smaller size, because John was ordered to eat it; that is, to conceal within himself the prophecies now revealed to him, and to arrange and digest them in such manner as might be useful in future generations. Mr. Fuller remarks—"The same desire of understanding the future state of the church, which made him (John) creep, when no one was found worthy to open the sealed book, (chap. v. 4.) must make him rejoice, when an open book was put into his hand, with a direction to eat it; but when he came to digest it, and to perceive the corruptions and persecutions that should prevail, and for so long a period retard the progress of the gospel, it would be grievous to him." It was "sweet in his mouth," but "in his belly bitter." He is warned, however, that his task was not yet accomplished; he must again prophesy before (or perhaps concerning) "many peoples, and nations, and tongues, and kings."

CHAP. XI. Ver. 1—7. The temple of God measured.—The two witnesses prophesy.—We have above seen, that Christianity obtained first a legal establishment and support in the reign of Constantine; the natural consequence of which was, that many Gentiles flocked into the outward court of Christianity, who had not the seal of God either in their hearts or in their foreheads; many who were not converts in heart, neither did their outward conversation correspond with their profession. To show, therefore, that the Almighty makes a distinction between these and his faithful and true worshippers, he orders

Ver. 8. Little book.—[This little book was a kind of appendix to the larger book, and appears to have contained the former part of the succeeding chapter, (ver. 1—14.) which is an important supplement to the ninth chapter, as it gives a general account of the state of the western church, and all connected with it, during the period of the fifth and sixth trumpets.]—Baxter.

Ver. 9. Make thy belly bitter.—Woodhouse, "embitter thy stomach;" so in next verse—"my stomach was embittered."

Ver. 10. And ate it up.—This language is not peculiar to St. John; it occurs frequently in the Old Testament, particularly in Ezek. i. 1—3, which is doubtless here alluded to. It also appears common among the Eastern nations. So the Turks say of the Tartars, "that other nations had their learning in their books; but the Tartars had eaten their books, and had their wisdom in their breasts, from whence they could easily draw it out as they had occasion." Ver. 11. Thou must prophesy again before.—(Gr. epi)—Doddridge, "to." Blackwell, "concerning." Made here inferences, that the apostle is about to go over the same period of time he had before been discoursing of, giving an account of the state of the church, as he had just done of the empire. It is certain he here goes back to the commencement of Poper.

CHAP. XI. Ver. 1. A reed (or cane) like unto a rod—i. e. a measuring rod. —Worship therein.—Gr. "in it."

2 But the court ^a which is without the temple ^b leave out, and measure it not; for ^c it is given unto the Gentiles: and the holy city shall they tread under ^d foot forty and two months.

3 And I will ^e give power unto my ^f two witnesses, and they shall prophesy a thousand two hundred and threescore days, clothed in ^g sackcloth.

4 These are the two ^h olive trees, and the two candlesticks ⁱ standing before the God of the earth.

5 And if any man will hurt them, ^j fire proceedeth out of their mouth, and devoureth their enemies: and if any man will hurt them, he must in this manner be ^k killed.

6 These ^l have power to shut heaven, that it rain not in the days of their prophesy: and have power over waters ^m to turn them to blood, and to smite the earth with all plagues, as often as they will.

7 And when they shall have finished their testimony, the beast ⁿ that ascendeth out of

A M. if a 19. 10
b 10. 30
c 18. 10
d 17. 21
e 10. 21
f 10. 21
g 10. 21
h 10. 21
i 10. 21
j 10. 21
k 10. 21
l 10. 21
m 10. 21
n 10. 21

the bottomless pit shall make ^o war against them, and shall overcome them, and kill them.

8 And their dead bodies shall lie in the street ^p of the great city, which spiritually is called ^q Sodom and ^r Egypt, where also our Lord was crucified.

9 And they of the people and kindreds and tongues and nations shall see their dead bodies three days and a half, and shall not suffer their dead bodies to be put in ^s graves.

10 And they that dwell upon the earth shall rejoice over them, and make merry, and shall send gifts one to another; because these two prophets tormented them that dwell on the earth.

11 And after three days and a half the Spirit ^t of life from God entered into them and they stood upon their feet; and great fear fell upon them which saw them.

12 And they heard a great voice from heaven, saying unto them, Come up hither. And they ascended up to heaven in a ^u cloud; and their enemies ^v beheld them.

his apostle John, as it were in the character of a surveyor, faithfully and carefully to measure, that is, to describe the inner temple of God, and its true worshippers, which is done in this and the three following chapters. These we do not consider as successive prophecies, but as contemporary or synchronical, (as some express it,) and are all comprised within the period of "forty-two months;" or, which is the same thing, (the months of the ancients comprising thirty days each,) 1260 prophetic days or years—days being often thus used for years in the prophetic Scriptures, as may be seen in our note on verse 3.

But, who are these witnesses?—when they commenced prophesying—how long they shall continue—and, finally, what is meant by their death and resurrection?—are severally questions of great importance, and must now come successively under our consideration.

1. Who are the witnesses here intended? Certainly no two individuals, if we take the 1260 days for years; nor are we aware that they are so applied by any respectable expositor. Some have supposed two churches to be intended; and the late Mr. Reader, of Taunton, referred this to the Protestant and Greek churches; but, we conceive, the latter fall very short of the character here given, being, in general, nearly as depraved as the Roman church itself. Mr. R. states the tribute which they pay the Turkish government to have their worship tolerated; but though this may be a witnessing against the Turks, it does not appear to us witnessing on the behalf of God and his truth, nor does it at all assimilate their characters to those of Moses and Elijah.

Some modern commentators (among whom are Dr. Park and Mr. Croly) have explained these witnesses to be the Old and New Testaments; but these we consider to be but one witness, as forming but one book; if, therefore, we were as such to receive it, we should be disposed, with "the word written," to associate "the word preached;" these, indeed, bear a harmonious testimony to divine truth, and are by Providence commonly associated in the great work of man's salvation; and thus they become equally obnoxious to the Papal beast and his supporters.

But the more general, and we incline to think, the more correct interpretation, is thus expressed by Mr. Fuller:—"The import of these verses is, that during the long period of Papal corruption and persecution, God would have his faithful witnesses, who should bear testimony against it, though it were in sackcloth. As in the language of prophecy, a king denotes, not an individual monarch, but a succession of kings, or a kingdom; so by two witnesses we are doubtless to understand, not two individual witnesses, but a complete succession of them. This is manifest from their continuing through the long period of 1260 years, which can only be true of a succession of men. Some have supposed them to be the Old and New Testaments; others, the Old and New Testament churches; but I see no reason why they should not be understood of the faithful servants of Christ, who, during this period, would bear witness for the truth." Bishop Neulton has taken pains to show that, even through the darkest ages of Christianity, there have constantly been some enlightened individuals, who have borne witness against the church of Rome; and had we as many records of humble piety, as of distinguished learning, there is no doubt but the faithful witnesses would be found far more numerous.

These two witnesses are compared to the "two olive trees," and the two candlesticks, or rather lamps, exhibited to the prophet Zechariah; (chap. iv. 2, &c.) the object of which is, to show from whence these witnesses are to be supplied with wisdom and grace to fulfil their respective duties. What follows, with respect to their power over fire and water, must be explained in reference to the miraculous powers of Moses and Elijah; but as applied to the witnesses generally, must refer only to their "effectual fervent prayer," which, as St. James teaches us, could open and shut the heavens, and call down rain or lightning from above. (James v. 17, 18.) We must be guarded, however, against the supposition that any of these holy men were actuated by personal animosity or revenge. They were warmed with holy fire, and bedewed with heavenly grace.

Ver. 8-19. The death and resurrection of the witnesses.—We are here told that when the witnesses shall have finished, or shall be about to finish their testimony, a certain ravenous beast from the bottomless pit (of whom we shall hear more hereafter) shall make war against them, and overcome them, and kill them. These, like all the Lord's servants, are "immortal till their work is done;" and then they enter into rest, though it is often by the vehicle of a fiery chariot.

Not only are these witnesses slain, but their dead bodies are suffered to be unburied, and are treated with the utmost contempt; their enemies carousing and making merry over them, until after three days (or years) and a half they obtain a triumphant resurrection, and ascend to glory. And now the scene is wonderfully reversed; many of their enemies are slain, and the rest, affrighted, repent and give glory to God.

But the question which now presents itself is, Have these witnesses been already slain, and when? or, if not, When may the event be expected? Many events have been pointed out by expositors and divines which have been a partial slaying of the witnesses, and have corresponded with the period of three years and a half; but they have been partial, and not followed with that state of triumph and felicity which the prediction

Ver. 2. The court which is without—That is, the outer court; see Ezek. vi. 14, 20.—Given unto the Gentiles—This intimates, that the greater part should be only Christians in name, but Gentiles in wickedness, idolatry, and persecution; which should continue 42 months, or 1260 prophetic days or years, during which a succession of witnesses should be raised up to bear testimony to the truth. This refers to the idolatry and tyranny of the church of Rome; and is probably to be dated from the time the pope became universal bishop, A. D. 606, or when he was established a temporal prince, A. D. 756.—B.

Ver. 3. A thousand two hundred and threescore days.—See Num. xiv. 34, 34. "Your children shall wander in the wilderness forty years." After the number of days in which ye searched the land, (even) forty days, (each day for a year) shall ye bear your iniquities, (even) forty years." So in Ezek. iv. 5, 6, the Lord says, "three hundred and ninety days, and forty days," each typical of so many years—"each day for a year." This also in Daniel, the prophecy of seventy weeks is almost universally understood to mean seventy years, chap. ix. 24, 27; and again in chap. xii. 12, days also are used for years; see also Isa. x. 3. So Mr. Faber assumes, that Daniel's prodigy of seventy weeks, having proved by the event to be weeks—not of days, but of years, with the other passages above referred to, are sufficient to warrant the like expectation of the days before us; and we confess that we think Mr. Meiland's late attempt to restrain those days to a literal interpretation, is very forced and unnatural, and contrary to historical facts. These mystical numbers seem also to correspond with Daniel's "time, (two) times, and the dividing of time"—i. e. half a time.—Clothed in sackcloth—This was the established costume of mourning and distress; 2 Sam. vi. 14 Kings ax. xl. xvi. 27 Job xvi. 17 Ps. xlii. 11, &c.

Ver. 5. Fire proceedeth out of their mouth—Compare Jer. v. 14. See also Isa. x. 16, 17.—He must in this manner be killed—Woodhouse, "Thus must he be slain." Ver. 6. To shut heaven—i. e. Judge Hulse seems to think, that this implies that the witnesses should have in them the spirit of Moses and Elijah. So John the Baptist is called by our Lord Elijah, Mat. xi. 14.

Ver. 7. When they shall have finished—Woodhouse, "When they shall be finishing." Mr. Loewen says, "The original may mean the time of their testimony, as well as the end of it." See Mat. x. 19.—The beast, &c.—See chap. xiii. 1, &c.

Ver. 8. The great city—i. e. Rome; "not in respect of its buildings, or its inhabitants, but as the head of the Antichristian community."—Fuller, "Spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt." This shows that these expressions are used to be taken literally, but figuratively. The inhabitants of this city shall be as vile as Sodom for uncleanness, or Egypt for idolatry, or Jerusalem, when they crucified the Lord.

Ver. 9. Shall not suffer their dead bodies to be put in graves.—In this respect they are used more cruelly than their master.

13 And the same hour was there a great earthquake and the tenth part of the city ^a fell, and in the earthquake were slain ^a of men seven thousand: and the remnant were affrighted, and gave ^b glory to the God of heaven.

14 The second ^c wo is past; and, behold, the third wo cometh quickly.

15 And the seventh ^d angel sounded; and there were great voices in heaven, saying, The kingdoms ^e of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ; and he ^f shall reign for ever and ever.

16 And the four and twenty ^g elders, which sat before God on their seats, fell upon their faces, and worshipped God.

17 Saying, We give thee thanks, O Lord God Almighty, which ^h art, and wast, and art to come: because thou hast taken to thee thy great power, and hast ⁱ reigned.

A M. cir.
4100
D. cir.
96.

z. c. 16 19
a. none. of mea
U. c. 36 15, 16
c. 14 7.
e. c. 8 12
f. c. 10 7.
g. 12 10
h. D. 2 41
i. 7 14, 15, 27
j. c. 16 5,
c. 19 6.

l. v. 9-9
He. 11 27
i. c. 22 12
me. 19 5.
U. c. 97-
of.
c. 15 5, 8.
p. c. 5 9
c. 16 18, 21
c. 16 20, 21
1-5 16.
c. 12 8, 11
Mal. 4 2.

18 And the nations were ^a angry, and thy wrath is come, and the time ^b of the dead, that they should be judged, and that thou shouldst give reward ^c unto thy servants the prophets, and to the saints, and them that fear thy name, ^d small and great; and shouldst destroy them which ^e destroy the earth.

19 And the temple ^f of God was opened in heaven, and there was seen in his temple ^g the ark of his testament: and there were ^h lightnings, and voices, and thunderings, and an ⁱ earthquake, and great hail.

CHAPTER XII.

1 A woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and on her head a crown of twelve stars: 2 And she being with child, travailed, and brought forth a man-child: 3 And she delivered her child into the wilderness: 4 And the great red dragon sought to devour her child: 5 And she fled into the wilderness, and there she was nourished for a time, and times, and half a time: 6 And when she delivered her child, she was delivered of the dragon: 7 Michael and his angels fight with the dragon, and prevail: 8 The dragon being cast down into the earth, presseth the woman: 9 And she fleeth into the wilderness, and there she is nourished for a time, and times, and half a time: 10 And the dragon is wroth, and he persecuted the woman which brought forth the man-child: 11 And he went to war with the saints, and he prevailed against them: 12 And he stood upon the sand of the sea: 13 The dragon being cast down into the earth, presseth the woman: 14 And she fleeth into the wilderness, and there she is nourished for a time, and times, and half a time: 15 And the dragon is wroth, and he persecuted the woman which brought forth the man-child: 16 And he went to war with the saints, and he prevailed against them: 17 And he stood upon the sand of the sea: 18 And the nations were angry, and thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead, that they should be judged, and that thou shouldst give reward unto thy servants the prophets, and to the saints, and them that fear thy name, small and great, and shouldst destroy them which destroy the earth: 19 And the temple of God was opened in heaven, and there was seen in his temple the ark of his testament: and there were lightnings, and voices, and thunderings, and an earthquake, and great hail.

AND there appeared a great ^a wonder in heaven; a woman ^b clothed with the ^c sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars:

leads us to expect, especially as it contains an evident allusion to the resurrection and ascension of our Lord himself. Of these events the following are the most considerable:—1. The Session of the Council of Constance, by which John Huss and Jerome of Prague were burnt; this lasted from November, 1414, to April, 1418, and greatly contributed to forward the Reformation in Germany. The sanguinary reign of Queen Mary, which lasted from February, 1553, to November, 1558, and was followed by the Reformation under Queen Elizabeth.—The Popish reign of James II. lasted from February, 1685, to November, 1688; and from the revocation of the edict of Nantz, in October, 1685, to the coronation of William III., in April, 1689, which provided an asylum for many of the persecuted French Protestants, was nearly the same period. Other similar events have been remarked, but that which excited by far the greatest interest is the French Revolution, near the close of the last century; and which was, in fact, foretold from this very passage.

The Rev. Dr. Thos. Goodwin, sometime president of Magdalen College, Oxford, and afterwards one of the ejected ministers, wrote his exposition of the Apocalypse in 1639, but it was not published till 1683, which was soon after his decease. Commenting on verse 13 of this chapter, by "the tenth part of the city" he understands the kingdom of France, and by the slaying of "7000 men," or (as the margin reads) "names of men," he understands "men of title, office, and dignity," who for having killed the witnesses, themselves are to be killed; "happily," says he, "by being bereft of their names and titles, which are to be rooted out for ever."

Rev. Peter Jurieu, a French Protestant divine, within four years after the publication of the above, viz. in 1647, explains the above quoted text as follows:—"There shall be an earthquake, i. e. a great emotion and trouble in the world, and in the antichristian kingdom. In this emotion a tenth part of the city shall fall: that is, a tenth part of the antichristian kingdom shall be taken away from it. . . . Now what is this tenth part of the city which shall fall? In my opinion, we cannot doubt that it is France. . . . This does not signify that the French monarchy shall be ruined: it may be humbled; but, in all appearance, Providence does design a great elevation for her afterwards. . . . Afterward it must build its greatness on the ruins of the Papal empire." M. Jurieu goes on to state his expectation that the death of these witnesses had a particular relation to that kingdom, (France,) as the street of the Papal city. "The witnesses (says he) must remain dead upon this street, and upon it they must be raised again." On the earthquake and the slaying of 7000 names of men he gives an exposition similar to Dr. Goodwin, only, instead of secular titles, he supposes it may be the ecclesiastical orders of monks and friars that will be destroyed.

Rev. Mr. Fleming, minister of the Scots church in London in the beginning of the 18th century, is still more particular and express, and fixes this great revolution to the year 1794: but as his chief observations are founded on the pouring out the rials, (ch. xvi.), we shall till then defer our extract from this writer; in the mean time, we beg leave to observe, that we should be extremely cautious in offering expositions upon prophecies unfulfilled; since, though several of the above conjectures seem to have been remarkably fulfilled, it is plain that none of them were completely so; for none of them have issued in that state of permanent reform and triumph which is predicted.

Had the late revolution in France produced a reform also, and had true religion since flourished in that country, we suppose there are few expositors who would not have considered that event as a complete fulfilment of the prediction. But the failure here leads us to look farther for its accomplishment, though it appears to us not at all improbable that France may still be one of the next kingdoms that shall desert the pope. The Scriptures are now freely circulating there, and "a godly seed" is being disseminated through the country, which we hope, may hereafter glorify God. Indeed, France, and especially the south of it, has always produced a full proportion of witnesses, not only to the truth, but also to the power of the gospel; and, at the same time, we know that there are still p.ish monks and priests enough to kindle a fire of persecution, if God should so permit. And as it is not clear that the 1260 days of the witnesses, or of the beast, are yet fulfilled, we may reasonably fear that a farther "fiery trial" may still await the church, though we have every reason to believe it will be a short one; and are well assured it will end in the triumph of Christianity. That the death and resurrection of the witnesses is not yet fully accomplished, was the opinion, not only of Dr. Gill, and the old commentators, but also of Archdeacon Woodhouse; who, though he applies the great earthquake to the great agitations which took place in Europe about the time of the reformation, and the fall of a tenth part of the city to the secession of the Protestant nations from Rome; yet, in the close of this chapter, hesitates, "upon a calm review" of what he has written, whether he may not be mistaken. "All the symbols of the prophecy, especially in the latter part, (he says,) will not be found to be fulfilled so completely in the history which we exhibit, as should reasonably be expected. And, therefore, (adds Dr. W.) I am inclined to agree with Bishop Newton, that the final conflict of the beast with the witnesses may be yet to come. The 1260 years, . . . are not yet elapsed; and in a prophecy, of which parts only are yet fulfilled, there must remain difficulties." Mr. Fuller, also, who agreed with the archdeacon in applying this portion of prophecy to the reformation, and some more recent events, in the conclusion of his work, hesitates whether he may not have gone too far. Speaking (in 1814) of these very recent events, he says, "These tides in human affairs may be permitted, as by a flux and reflux of the ocean, to wash away those things which it is the purpose of heaven to destroy. The antichristian power may rise and fall repeatedly, before it falls to rise no more. Popery must be what it always has been, a persecuting enemy of true religion, or nothing. The preponderating powers of Europe, by restoring its authority, and recommending it to exercise a liberal government, suited to the times, have done all, perhaps, that was in their power towards lengthening out its tranquility; but it is in vain. We would have healed Babylon, they may say, but she is not healed."

This hesitation in interpreting the Scriptures, (as it may be called,) may be condemned by the ardent spirits of modern prophets; but is, perhaps, the best proof, both of reverence to the Scriptures, and of modesty and humility in the expositors:

"But fools rush in where angels fear to tread."

We are now told, (verse 14,) "The second wo is past; and, behold, the third wo cometh quickly." The seventh trumpet then sounds, and occasions at once joy in heaven, and vengeance upon earth. These intimations of the interest which the blessed inhabitants of heaven take in the affairs of Christ's kingdom on earth, (of which there are several in this book,) appear to us to imply, that they are not kept in ignorance of its progress. And if there is joy in the presence of the angels of God "over one sinner that repenteth," as our Lord assures us, (Luke xv. 7, 10,) we need not wonder at the joy enkindled among them by the proclamation of the Millennium. On this subject, however, we shall not enlarge here, as we shall have it repeatedly before us in the next and following chapters. In the mean time, we agree with Mr. Lowman and Mr. Fuller, that the judgment here spoken of (verse 18) is not the last judgment, or "the consummation of all things;" but "manifestly refers to the avenging of the martyrs, by the judgments to be inflicted on the Papal power under the seven vials, antecedent to the Millennium."

CHAP. XII. Ver. 1-17. The woman clothed with the sun, and the great red dragon.—Rn. Doddridge "and, we think,

Ver. 13. A tenth part.—i. e. one of the ten kingdoms mentioned in chap. xii. 1.
Ver. 16. Set before God on their seats.—Greek, "Thrones," as in chap. iv. 4.

2 And she being with child cried, travailing in birth, and pained to be delivered.

3 And there appeared another wonder in heaven; and behold a great red dragon, having seven heads and ten horns, and seven crowns upon his heads.

4 And his tail drew the third part of the stars of heaven, and did cast them to the earth: and the dragon stood before the woman which was ready to be delivered, for to devour her child as soon as it was born.

5 And she brought forth a man child, who was to rule all nations with a rod of iron: and her child was caught up unto God, and to his throne.

6 And the woman fled into the wilderness, where she hath a place prepared of God, that they should feed her there a thousand two hundred and threescore days.

7 And there was war in heaven: Michael and his angels fought against the dragon: and the dragon fought and his angels.

8 And prevailed not; neither was their place found any more in heaven.

9 And the great dragon was cast out, that old serpent, called the Devil, and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world: he was cast out into the earth, and his angels were cast out with him.

10 And I heard a loud voice saying in hea-

A M. cir
A D. cir
96
c of, sig
d ver 9.
e Is 9.15.
f Is 7.14.
g Ps 2.10
h c 11.3.
i Ge 2.1,4
j n S.41
k Zec 3.1
l c 11.15
m Ro 8.33, 37
n Lu 14.35
o Ps 96.11
Is 19.13
p c 8.13
q c 10.6
r 1.40.31
s Is 30.19
t Ge 3.15

ven, Now is come salvation, and strength, and the kingdom of our God, and the power of his Christ: for the accuser of our brethren is cast down, which accused them before our God day and night.

11 And they overcame him by the blood of the Lamb, and by the word of their testimony; and they loved not their lives unto the death.

12 Therefore rejoice, ye heavens, and ye that dwell in them. Wo to the inhabitants of the earth and of the sea! for the devil is come down unto you, having great wrath, because he knoweth that he hath but a short time.

13 And when the dragon saw that he was cast unto the earth, he persecuted the woman which brought forth the man child.

14 And to the woman were given two wings of a great eagle, that she might fly into the wilderness, into her place, where she is nourished for a time, and times, and half a time, from the face of the serpent.

15 And the serpent cast out of his mouth water as a flood after the woman, that he might cause her to be carried away of the flood.

16 And the earth helped the woman, and the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed up the flood which the dragon cast out of his mouth.

17 And the dragon was wroth with the woman (properly) prefixes to this chapter the last verse of the preceding, which, therefore, we did not notice in that place. We have before repeatedly observed, that there are in many of these visions allusions to the scenery of the Jewish temple, and this is one of the most remarkable instances. The holy of holies is now laid open to the apostle's view, and the ark of the covenant appears, with the usual awful tokens of the divine presence; but in the foreground of this scene behold a pregnant woman, and that woman clothed in glory. She is clothed, according to Bishop Newton, by being invested with the rays of Jesus Christ, the Son of Righteousness; having "the moon"—the Jewish new moons and festivals, as well as all sublimary things—"under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars"—an emblem of her being under the light and guidance of the twelve apostles.

This woman, the commentators seem universally agreed, must represent the Christian church, according to the practice of the ancients, who commonly depicted empires, nations, and cities, under the feminine form, with proper and distinguishing emblems. This woman, we are farther told, was pregnant—was taken in labour, and in much agony "brought forth a man (or masculine) child." Before this woman also appeared a great red (or scarlet) dragon, representing Satan himself as the demon of Pagan tyranny and persecution. When we are told "his tail drew down a third part of the stars of heaven," it may probably allude to his seduction of that part of the heavenly host "who kept not their first estate," for he was a liar and a tempter from the beginning; or it may refer to those stars of the Christian church below, which he had seduced into error and worldly ambition; for we know from other Scriptures, he lieth in wait, "seeking whom he may devour." His object now was to devour this new-born child; but there is an eye in heaven that never sleeps; and in this critical moment, when the dragon was feasting his eyes with the hopes of prey, it was suddenly caught to heaven.

But who was this masculine child? Archbishop Woodhouse interprets this of our Saviour himself; and Bishop Newton supposes that Constantine might be intended; but, with Lorrain and Fuller, we rather refer it to the seed of the church, mentioned in the close of the chapter. "It was this seed," says the latter expositor, "that the dragon aimed, by persecution and corruption, to destroy. This child was born to rule; not, however, at present: for if so, there had been no need of his being caught up to the throne of God, nor for his mother's flying into the wilderness for 1260 years. It is at the end of that period that the man child, or the seed of the church, shall rule, and this accords with Daniel vii. 27, 'The kingdom and dominion shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High.'"

As to the woman, a place had also been prepared for her. The child (like young Joash, in the time of Athaliah, 2 Kings xi. 2, 3) was secured in the temple opened in heaven; but the woman had a refuge provided in the wilderness, or desert, as was the case with Elijah; and the wings of a great eagle (as mentioned in verse 14) were given her, to facilitate her escape. The time of her seclusion was also commensurate with that of the prophesying of the witnesses, and of their mourning. While the witnesses were persecuted, the church must needs "weep in secret places."

God will, however, take part with them: and the dragon is not only deprived of his prey, but cast down from heaven in discomfiture and disgrace. Michael and his host are sent to engage with Satan and his angels, in which there is doubtless an allusion to Dan. x. 13, &c. xii. 1; where Michael is described as fighting the battles of the Lord, and of his church.

If the great red dragon, with seven heads and ten horns, intend, as we conceive it does, the demon of Paganism under the old Roman empire, his waiting to destroy the new-born child of Christianity must represent his watchful cruelty during the ten Pagan persecutions. After this, when he was cast out of heaven, and Paganism was subdued under the establishment of Christianity, he raged the more; first, in attempting to revive the old system of idolatry under Julian, the apostate; and, afterwards, in corrupting the Christian church itself by heretical doctrines and secular ambition, until at length the same spirit animated and inspired the Papal monster; the woman (i. e. the true church) who had hidden herself as well as she could hitherto, was now upborne, as upon eagles' wings, to her refuge in the wilderness, during the reign of antichrist, and the testimony of the witnesses; all being confined to the same period of 1260 days, or years; or, as expressed in verse 14, for a time, and times, and half a time, i. e. three prophetic years and a half.

Now, when the old serpent found that he was disappointed of his prey by the flight of the church into the wilderness, he poured forth after her a flood, whether of temptation, affliction, or persecution, all of which are compared to waters; from his doing this, however, it should seem that he was not aware that she had received wings from heaven. By the earth swallowing up those floods, may, perhaps, be intended the assistance and protection that the church oftentimes receives from worldly men.

From the flight of the woman (or church) being twice mentioned, some have considered that two flights are here intended; and, true enough, the church has often been obliged to save herself by flight; but the sacred writers, and especially the prophets, do not, we know, pay that attention to method and order, which we find in modern compositions; and these flights of the church are so exactly similar, that, with Archbishop Woodhouse, we are satisfied of their being the same.

There is a like difference among expositors, as to the "war in heaven;" some supposing it to refer directly and solely to the first fall of Satan and the rebel hosts, so circumstantially described by Milton; (Paradise Lost, book i.) and others con-

Ver. 2 And pained.—Doddridge, "in agony."

Ver. 3. A great red dragon.—The redness here is properly that of fire. A dragon is properly an enormous serpent.

Ver. 5. A man child.—Doddridge, "a masculine son," which is literal.—And her child, &c.—Some place these words to the end of verse 6, in a parenthesis.

Ver. 6. Flew into the wilderness.—By a wilderness, in Scripture, is always meant a place barren, and destitute of human food. See Isa. xli. 20. Ezek. xi. 35. Hos. x. 11.

Ver. 11. Trodden under a great eagle.—To be borne on eagles' wings, implies divine miraculous deliverance. See Exod. xix. 4. Isa. xl. 31, &c.

Ver. 15. Water as a flood.—Doddridge and Woodhouse, "like a river."

man, and went to make war with the remnant of her seed, which keep the commandments of God, and have the testimony of Jesus Christ.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 A beast riseth out of the sea with seven heads, and ten horns, to whom the dragon giveth his power. 11 Another beast cometh up out of the earth: 13 causeth an image to be made of the former beast, 15 and that men should worship it, 16 and receive his mark.

AND I stood upon the sand of the sea, and saw a beast ^a rise up out of the sea, having ^b seven heads and ten horns, and upon his horns ten crowns, and upon his heads the ^c name of blasphemy.

2 And the beast which I saw was ^d like unto a leopard, and his feet were as the feet of a bear, and his mouth as the mouth of a lion: and the dragon ^e gave him his power, and his ^f seat, and great authority.

3 And I saw one of his heads as it were ^g wounded to death; and his deadly wound was healed: and all the world wondered ^h after the beast.

4 And they worshipped the dragon which gave power unto the beast: and they worshipping the beast, saying, Who is like unto the beast? who is able to make war with him?

5 And there was given unto him a mouth ⁱ speaking great things and blasphemies; and power was given unto him to ^k continue ^l forty and two months.

6 And he opened his mouth in blasphemy against God, to blaspheme his name, and his ^m tabernacle, and them that ⁿ dwell in heaven.

7 And it was given unto him to make war ^o with the saints, and to overcome them: and power ^p was given him over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations.

8 And all that dwell upon the earth shall worship him, whose names are not written in the book ^q of life of the Lamb slain from ^r the foundation of the world.

9 If any man have an ear, let him hear.

10 He ^s that leadeth into captivity shall go into captivity: he ^t that killeth with the sword must be killed with the sword. Here is the ^u patience and the faith of the saints.

considering it only as an allusion to that event, but referring more directly to the affairs of the Christian church; and that this was the real case, we think evident from the song of triumph sung on this occasion, by which it appears that the victors were not angels, strictly speaking, but the redeemed, who "overcame by the blood of the Lamb, and by the word of their testimony; who loved not their lives even to the death," which can never be said of angels.

CHAP. XIII. Ver. 1.—10. Concerning this first beast, there seems to be a better agreement among Protestant commentators than on most other parts of the Apocalypse: and Fuller (as usual) speaks with so much perspicuity and moderation, that we shall offer an abstract of his interpretation, and chiefly in his own words, in preference to quoting any preceding writer. He remarks, "The apostle in vision, standing as upon the sea shore, sees a 'beast [i. e. a monster] rise up out of the sea, having seven heads and ten horns, and upon his horns ten crowns, and upon his crowns the name (or names) of blasphemy.' A beast rising out of the sea, is an emblem opposed to God and his Christ, rising out of the perturbed state of things in the world. The description given of this beast (Mr. F. thinks) leaves no doubt of its being the same as the fourth beast in Daniel," chap. vii., to our notes and exposition of which we must beg leave therefore to refer our readers; adding, that whereas Daniel saw three previous beasts, a lion, a bear, and a leopard, all which had in St. John's time passed away, and had been absorbed in the Roman beast; John describes this beast as compounded of those three, having the body of a leopard, the paws of a bear, and the mouth (or teeth) of a lion. Daniel also says nothing of its seven heads, nor of the crowns attached to the horns, which, in the time of John, had not become separate kingdoms.

"This seven-headed and ten-horned beast (says Mr. Fuller) does not appear to be the Pope or Popedom, nor the church of Rome, but that secular power which has supported the church of Rome through the whole of her corrupt and bloody progress. The beast is not the harlot, but that on which the harlot rides. That which has been denominated The Holy Roman Empire, of which sometimes a French, and sometimes a German monarch, has been the head, seems to be the government principally intended, as being the great support of that church. It is not this government, however, exclusive of that of the other European nations, but merely as a principal amongst them. . . . The ten horns are said to 'agree, and to give their kingdom to the beast,' (chap. xvii. 17:) that is, they united with the emperor in supporting the church. Things were so managed, indeed, by the (Roman) church, that the rulers of every nation in Christendom were, in a manner, compelled to unite in her support. 'All the civil powers were obliged by the council of Lateran to take an oath, on pain of ecclesiastical censures, that they would endeavour to exterminate all who were declared heretics by the church, out of their dominions: and if any prince or ruler refused to do so, after admonition, it was to be certified to the Pope, who should declare all his subjects absolved from their allegiance, and any Catholic was free to seize his dominions.'

Whereas it is said, also, that the dragon, that is, the old

A. M. cir.
4100.
A. D. cir.
36.

a De.7 2, 2 c
b c 19 8, 17 3,8,12
c or, names
d Da.7 4 7.
e c 12 9
f c 16 10.
g slain.
h c 17 8.
i c 17 14.
j Da.7 3,11, 22
k or, make
war.
l c 11 2,3.
m c 12 9
n He 9 11, 12
o He 12 22, 23
p Da.7 21.
q c 11 7.
r c 12 17.
s Da.4 6
t Da 12 1.
u c 21 27.
v c 17 8.
w Is 33 1.
x He 9 6.
y He 6 12

serpent, who was the demon of Paganism, in all its variety of idolatrous forms, "gave his power (his throne, and great authority) to the beast," we may by that understand, that Satan himself is the spirit by which every system of idolatry is animated and supported.

Of the heads and horns of the beast, we shall have occasion to speak again on chap. xvii.: but when it is here stated, that one of his heads was wounded, we must understand it as referring to one of the kingdoms, or forms of government, under which the empires had subsisted, (as explained in chap. xvii. 8,) namely, the Imperial, which was wounded in Augustulus, and healed in Charlemagne; or, as others explain it, wounded in the fall of Paganism, and healed in the rise of Popery: for the demon of Paganism (that is, the devil) now inspired "the Holy Roman Empire" above named, with the same spirit of persecution, and to a greater degree of fury.

It is now said, (ver. 4.) "And they worshipped the dragon which gave power unto the beast." Dragon, or serpent-worship, has been carried to an awful enormity in the Pagan world. The learned Mr. Bryant thinks "it prevailed almost universally in the Eastern world, and names many countries which adopted it, particularly Egypt." There were also some mongrel Christians, who were called Ophites or Serpentarians; perhaps because they revered the brazen serpent as a type of Christ; but others, as we fear, who renounced Christ, and preferred to him the old serpent himself. (See Dict. of all Religions, in Ophites.)

But serpent worship was carried to its highest pitch of extravagance and cruelty in Old Mexico, North America, of which the most appalling proofs have been within these few years exhibited by Mr. Bullock, at the Egyptian Hall, Piccadilly; where, with the great serpentine idol, sixty feet long, was also shown the vast sacrificial stone on which they offered numerous human victims, wherein was visible the channels in which the blood that was shed flowed. And serpents are still worshipped by the Negroes in some parts of Africa, as emblems of the devil, that he may not hurt them. Such is the infatuation of mankind in worshipping the dragon!

"And there was given unto him a mouth speaking great things and blasphemies." In fact, all boasting in the sight of God, is blasphemy. It is attributing to ourselves the power, and wisdom, or goodness, which belongs to God: as when Nebuchadnezzar said—"Is not this great Babylon, that I have built . . . by the might of my power, and for the honour of my majesty?" Vain and unhappy mortal! while the words were in his mouth, the kingdom departed from him! Such was the boasting language of Rome, both ancient and modern, Pagan and Papal; and names of blasphemy were incorporated in the imperial title, as afterwards in that of the Popes of Rome, as we shall have occasion to remark on a subsequent chapter.

It is worthy our observation, that the worshipping of the dragon and the seven-headed beast is confined to those "whose names are not written in the book of life." There were some true Christians in every age who protested against idolatry, and the tyranny of Rome over the consciences of mankind.

CHAP. XIII. Ver. 1. A beast rise.—[This beast, the same as Daniel's fourth beast, (Da. vii. 7,) is the Roman or Latin empire, whose capital was seated on seven hills, was divided into ten kingdoms, and received its power from "the dragon," or the idolatrous heathen empire. Both imperial and papal Rome have arrogated to themselves the most blasphemous titles; and the number of pious Christians who have taken a sacrifice to the latter is innumerable. The term of his power also exactly coincides with that during which "the two witnesses" prophesied in sackcloth." Chap. xi. 3.]—Bagater.—Out of the sea.—See Dan. vii. 2, 3.

Ver. 2. Leopard.—Says Doddridge, the three several figures of the beasts which represented the monarchies of the Chaldeans, Persians, and Grecians. (Dan.

vii. 4, 5, 6.) are here all put together, to describe Rome, as if it were an aboriginal and a gathering together of the tyranny, cruelty, and ravenousness of all the former empires.—His seat.—Greek, "his throne," as before.

Ver. 8. Whose names are not written, &c.—Doddridge, "Whose names are not written in the book of life of the Lamb, who was slain, from the foundation of the world." In the parallel passage, ch. xvii. 8, it is said, "whose names are not written in the book of life, from the foundation of the world." So, in this place, the Unitarian version reads—"was not written, from the foundation of the world, in the book of life of the Lamb that was slain." Which P. Smith pronounces "a just translation."

Ver. 10. He that leadeth, &c.—Compare Isaiah XXXIII. 1. Mat. XXVI. 52

11 And I beheld another * beast coming up out of the earth; and he had two horns like a lamb, and he spake as a dragon.

12 And he exerciseth all the power of the first beast before him, and causeth the earth and them which dwell therein to worship the first beast, whose deadly wound was * healed.

13 And he doeth great * wonders, so that he maketh fire come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men,

14 And deceiveth them that dwell on the earth by the means of those miracles which he had power to do in the sight of the beast; saying to them that dwell on the earth, that they should make an image to the beast, which had the * wound by a sword, and did live.

A. M. cir. 1101
A. D. cir. 96
v. c. 11, 7.
w ver. 3.
v. Mat. 24. 24
2 Th. 2, 9, 10
v. ver. 3, 32
v. breath
v. c. 10, 2
v. c. 10, 2
v. c. 15, 2

15 And he had power to give * life unto the image of the beast, that the image of the beast should both speak, and cause that as many as would not * worship the image of the beast should be killed.

16 And he caused all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, to * receive a mark in their right hand, or in their foreheads:

17 And that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number * of his name.

18 Here is wisdom. Let him that hath understanding count the number of the beast: for it is the number of a man; and his number is Six hundred threescore and six.

Ver. 11-15. A second beast rises from the earth with two horns, like a lamb.—The first beast rose out of a tempest in the sea, as dolphins and other fishes are known to do—that is, it rose out of a state of general and tremendous warfare; this second beast sprung up, as Futler expresses it, "like a weed in a garden," quietly and almost unobserved. This beast had "two horns like a lamb," and answers to the little horn in Daniel, (chap. vii. 20, 21.) "which had a mouth that spake very great things;" for though it is said "he had two horns like a lamb, he spake as a dragon;" his breath was poisonous, and his tongue a sting. "He exerciseth all the authority of the first beast before him," or in his presence. "He is" (says Bishop Newton) the prime minister, adviser, and mover, of the first, or secular beast.

It is added, "He causeth men to worship the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed." That is, "As the secular authority invested the ecclesiastical with power, and riches, and honour, so, in return, the ecclesiastical authority adds the influence with which the sanction of religion seems to invest him, to the civil power, which he obtains and exercises under the Roman beast. Thus armed with twofold authority, he employs it in support of the power which he has obtained; and to secure reverence and obedience to that power, he sets it up as sacred." (Dr. Woodhouse.)

Having assumed a sacred character, he affects to work miracles—"he doeth great wonders, so that he maketh fire come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men, and deceiveth them that dwell on the earth." So it was foretold of "the Man of sin," which we take to be the same apostate power, that he should perform "signs and lying wonders," and that many who "received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved," should, in the righteous judgment of God, be given up to strong delusions, that they should "believe a lie," and perish. It is, indeed, a most striking fact, that many who have rejected the benevolent miracles of the gospel, have been deceived by the pretended miracles of false prophets and false apostles, and perished in their error. This was particularly the case with the Jews who crucified the Lord Jesus, and perished by thousands for their adherence to Herochebas, and other false Messiahs.

This second beast proposed to make an image to the first, to which, being made, he gave both life and speech. So the Pagan priests of old pretended to animate and inspire their idols, and assisted them to give oracular answers in their temples; and Mr. Ward (late missionary in India) informs us, that "the Brahmins, by repeated incantations, profess to give eyes and a soul to an image before it is worshipped." (Orient. Lat. No. 1584.) Agreeably to this, we know that many Popish monks and priests have attempted to animate their crucifixes and Virgin Marys; and still, to this day, delude thousands. But what is meant by this image?

"This making of an image to the beast, seems to allude to the heathen practice of making images to their deities. . . . The design of making an image to a God, would be to acknowledge him as their deity, and to give a visibility and an establishment to his worship; . . . to require implicit obedience to his commands, in whose reign Paganism was revived, under the name of Catholic Christianity!" . . . So Mr. Futler, who adds—"It has been observed, that while the secular beast is said to make war upon the saints, the ecclesiastical is only said to cause them to be killed," (ver. 15.)—"The Inquisitors," (says Bishop Burnet) on this occasion, with a disgusting affectation of lamb-like meekness, are wont to beseech the civil magistrates to show mercy to those whom they themselves have given up to be consigned to the flames!"

This last remark leads us to another interpretation. Some have supposed that this beast represents a third distinct power—namely, the religious orders of Popery, and especially the Jesuits. But Dr. Doddridge hints at the Inquisition as the true image of the beast. The Rev. Mr. Croly has lately advocated this opinion with much ingenuity, and the resemblance is too striking to be denied, except by those whose interest will not allow them to admit it. "The three characteristics of the Papacy were, (says Mr. C.) its assumption of superiority to all earthly power, its persecution, and the suppression of the Scriptures; and those were the more remarkable, as no other power or sovereignty had ever before asserted such prerogatives. The Inquisition asserted them all, with, however, an acknowledgment of deriving its right to the assertion from the Papacy. It claimed to judge sovereigns, and actually cited even Charles V. and Philip II. to stand before it; its office was persecution; and the universal result of its success was the suppression of the Scriptures. It was the Papacy on a subordinate scale."

Ver. 16. Another beast.—Many explain this second beast, which is also called "the false prophet," (chap. xix. 20.) to be Mahometanism; and Woodhouse connects Popery and Mahometanism, as the two horns of the Antichristian beast—east and west—and, it must be admitted, both arose about the same time, i. e. early in the 7th century. This second beast, however, is represented as fully cooperating with the first, whereas history informs us that Popery and Mahometanism never acted in conjunction, but always in opposition.—He had two horns like a lamb, and he spake as a dragon. On this passage, Woodhouse says, "It has been a favourite object with some very respectable modern writers, to represent the infidel democratic power, which appeared at one time to spring up with the French Revolution, as fulfilling the prophecy of the false prophet. I will propose a few reasons to show why it cannot be so. 1. The infidel like a lamb denote an ecclesiastical power, but the French power is wholly civil, and it imposes no religion on the conquered—2. There are in this infidel attempt no pretended miracles, or heavenly commission, no fire from heaven—3. The French have, indeed, set up an image, a lively representation of the ancient tyrannies; but it is not pronounced sacred, nor is it worship enforced. They require no more than other political conquerors, submission to their civil laws, &c. They do not persecute for religion's sake—4. There is good reason to believe, that as the two beasts are to perish together, (chap. xix. 20.) so their period being of the same length, that they arose together."

On the same subject, Futler says, "I see no solid ground for Faber's hypothesis of an Infidel King, any more than of an Infidel Antichrist. . . . What is said of the confessors of the first times, is, indeed, descriptive of what we daily witness; but it is only of individuals that these things are spoken. Infidelity does not appear to be symbolized in the Scriptures, either by a beast, a horn, or a king."

Ver. 17. Here is wisdom.—This is the same which Paul speaks of, 2 Thess. i. 4-6, &c., which see, with note.—Maketh fire come down.—An allusion, probably, to 2 Kings, i. 10-12.

Ver. 18. That they should make an image to the beast.—Some have explained this, as if this second beast was itself the image of the former, which seems to us not to agree with the text. Middleton however in his celebrated Letter from Rome, has drawn a striking parallel between them, that is, between Paganism and Popery, in a great variety of particulars. "There, he remarks, we may see the present people of Rome worshipping at this day in the same temples, at the same altars—sometimes the same images; and (almost with the same ceremonies, as the old Romans) they must have more charity, as well as skill in distinguishing, than I pretend to, (says the doctor) who can absolve them from the same crime of superstition and idolatry with their Pagan ancestors."

Ver. 19. To give life.—Greek, Prinima which is either breath or spirit

Says Diodotus, force and vigour to command.—Should be killed.—The penalty of denying the divine authority of the church of Rome was always death, and the object of the Ignis tritum was to enforce this penalty; and in countries where that was not established, the Popish clergy often supplied that "lack of service."

Ver. 16. To receive (Greek, "to give") a mark, &c.—"We must understand (says Newton) that it was customary among the ancients, for servants to receive the mark of their masters, and soldiers, of their general, and those who were devoted to any particular duty, of the particular duty to whom they were devoted. These marks were usually impressed "on their right hand, or on their foreheads," and consisted of some hieroglyphic characters, or of the name stamped in various letters, and of the name disguised in numerical letters according to the fancy of the impostor."

Ver. 17. No man might buy or sell.—This was an ancient form of persecution. Thus the Jews were persecuted by the heathen. Prudentius says, Philostratus forbade any to enter into his palace, who did not sacrifice to the gods he worshipped, thereby excluding them from all legal protection; and he afterwards ordered all the Jews who applied to be enrolled as citizens of Alexandria, to leave the form of an xy (the letter of Eusebius) to be impressed upon them with a hot iron, under pain of death. (Prod. Connect. ante c. 16.) So Newton remarks, that William the Conqueror would not allow any to buy or sell, who refused obedience to the Apostolic See; and Pope Alexander III. forbade any who refused to traffic with the Waldenses. So also the Council of Constantine forbids heretics to "enter into contracts, or commerce, &c. with Christians."

Ver. 18. Here is wisdom.—Newton remarks, "It was a method practised among the ancients, to denote names by numbers; as the name of Thouth, the Egyptian Mercury, by the number 1218; Jupiter, by 727, &c. This led some, even in the first century of Christianity, as mentioned by Irenaeus, to interpret this number 666 by the name Latreus, the Latin name of church, so called, because in all countries its services are held in the Latin language. The Greeks, it should be remarked, used all their letters as numerals, to name following—

No.
Lamda	(A)	30
Alpha	(A)	1
Tau	(T)	200
Epsilon	(E)	5
Iota	(I)	10
Nu	(N)	50
Omission	(O)	70
Sigma	(S)	200-666

The Hebrews, it may be added, also use their letters as numerals, and the

CHAPTER XIV.

1 The Lamb standing on Mount Zion with his company. 6 An angel preacheth the gospel. 8 The fall of Babylon. 15 The harvest of the world, and putting in of the sickle. 20 The vintage and wine-press of the wrath of God.

AND I looked, and lo, a Lamb ^a stood on the mount Zion, and with him a hundred forty and four ^b thousand, having his Father's name ^c written in their foreheads.

2 And I heard a voice from heaven, as the voice ^d of many waters, and as the voice of a great thunder: and I heard the voice of harpers ^e harping with their harps:

3 And they sung as it were a ^f new song before the throne, and before the four beasts, and the elders: and no man could learn that song but the ^g hundred and forty and four thousand, which were redeemed from the earth.

4 These are they which were not defiled with women; for they are ^h virgins. These are they which follow ⁱ the Lamb whithersoever he goeth. These were ^j redeemed from among men, being the first-fruits ^k unto God and to the Lamb.

5 And in their mouth was found no ^l guile: for they are without ^m fault before the throne of God.

6 And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the ⁿ everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every ^o nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people,

7 Saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him; for ^p the hour of his judgment is come: and worship him that made

When it is added, that this second beast caused all its creatures to receive a mark in their right hand, or in their forehead, we suppose it must be understood, that all their actions and professions must bear the stamp of Popery, the refusal of which would be attended with consequences as fatal as was, in Pagan Rome, the refusal to worship the emperor, or his gods.

But the most perplexing inquiry in this chapter, and perhaps in all the book, relating to the number of the beast, and of his name; and yet that number is plainly stated to be "Six hundred and threescore and six."

"Of all the various interpretations of this text, which it would be endless to enumerate, and much more to canvass," Dr. Doddridge says, "I find none that pleases me so well as that of Sir Is. Newton, [which, indeed, was first suggested by Irenaeus, in the second century,] that the [Greek and Hebrew] words Lateinos and Romiith, [meaning] the man of Latium, or of Rome, whose numeral letters, taken together, make 666, are here referred to. I suppose (adds the Doctor) this number is mentioned to signify, that the appearance of that power, whose efforts were to continue 1260 years, was to happen about 666 years after the date of the Revelation, A. D. 96. And this I take to be the grand key by which the era of the fall of Babylon is to be calculated, as it fixes the rise of the beast to the year 756, or thereabouts; when, upon the destruction of the exarchate of Ravenna, the Pope became a temporal monarch; that is, in prophetic language, a beast." Of this more hereafter.

Mr. Croly is, however, very confident (as he generally is) that no name is here alluded to; and that the number mentioned is not the number of a man, but of man; that is, a human number: a number commonly in use, which he supposes to mark the rise of the Inquisition, 666 years after the rise of Popery, which he places in A. D. 532; and these numbers, taken together, make 1198, which he gives as the exact date of the origin of that abominable institution.

That the Inquisition formed the vital principle of Popery, and that it was mainly founded by the Dominicans, on the Hebrew word, Romiith, affords both the same number and meaning. The same number may be picked out of other names, but in both cases some of the letters must be blank.

CHAP. XIV. Ver. 1. Mount Zion.—This must not be taken literally, as that formed but a part of Jerusalem, and would hold no such number of persons; but this evidently refers to the Christian church. See Hebrews xi. 22, 23.

Ver. 2. As the voice of many waters.—The sound here mentioned is compared to the roaring of the sea, and the thunder of the heavens, for its magnitude, and for its harmony to a concert of a thousand harps.

Ver. 3. A new song.—Not only the song of victory over their enemies, as Moses sang, but the song of redemption by the blood of Christ.—Four beasts.—Or, living creatures.—See chap. iv. 6.

Ver. 4. Not defiled with women.—i. e. not idolaters; for idolatry is spiritual fornication. See 2 Co. xi. 2, 3.—Whithersoever he goeth.—The Lamb being considered as their leader: so all the Roman soldiers were sworn to follow their general whithersoever he might lead them.

Ver. 8. Babylon is fallen.—See chap. xvii. 2.

Ver. 9. Receive his mark.—See on chap. xii. 16, 17.

A. M. cir. 4100.
A. D. cir. 96.

a c 5 12
b c 7 4
c c 3 12
d c 19 6
e c 58 9
f c 13 3
g ver. 1.
h c 13 3
i c 20 11 2
j 3a 10 27.
k 3a 6 20
l 3a 11 8.
m 3a 32 2.
n 3a 5 27.
o 3a 24 24.
p 2 S. 23 5.
q 3a 10 2.
r 3a 39.
s 3a 15 1.
t 3a 21 9.
u 3a 21 8.
v 3a 23 5.
w 3a 13 14.
x 3a 16.
y 3a 75 5.
z 3a 19 20.
aa 3a 31 10.
ab 3a 57 20.
ac 3a 21.
ad 3a 14 14.
ae 3a 16.
af 3a 75 5.
ag 3a 19 20.
ah 3a 31 10.
ai 3a 57 20.
aj 3a 21.
ak 3a 14 14.
al 3a 16.
am 3a 75 5.
an 3a 19 20.
ao 3a 31 10.
ap 3a 57 20.
aq 3a 21.
ar 3a 14 14.
as 3a 16.
at 3a 75 5.
au 3a 19 20.
av 3a 31 10.
aw 3a 57 20.
ax 3a 21.
ay 3a 14 14.
az 3a 16.

heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters.

8 And there followed another angel, saying, Babylon ^a is fallen, is fallen, that great city, because she made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.

9 And the third angel followed them, saying with a loud voice, If ^b any man worship the beast and his image, and receive ^c his mark in his forehead, or in his hand,

10 The same shall drink ^d of the wine of the wrath of God, which is poured out without mixture into the cup of his indignation; and he shall be tormented with ^e fire and brimstone in the presence of the holy angels, and in the presence of the Lamb:

11 And the smoke ^f of their torment ascendeth up for ever and ever: and they have no rest ^g day nor night, who worship the beast and his image, and whosoever receiveth the mark of his name.

12 Here is the patience of the saints: here ^h are they that keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus.

13 And I heard a voice from heaven, saying unto me, Write, Blessed ⁱ are the dead which die ^j in the Lord ^k from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labours; and their works do follow them.

14 And I looked, and behold a white cloud, and upon the cloud ^l one sat ^m like unto the Son of man, having on his head a golden crown, and in his hand a sharp sickle.

15 And another angel came out of the temple, pretence of working miracles, must be admitted; but we have still some doubts whether the making an image of the beast may imply any thing more than setting up a system of idolatry. And, if it did, we are inclined to think, with Bishop Newton, that the Pope himself is the true image or idol of the Roman church.

CHAP. XIV. Ver. 1—20. The Lamb and his company on Mount Zion.—An angel publishes the gospel; and another predicts the fall of Babylon.—The reaping of the earth, and gathering in the vintage.—The multitude here assembled represents, undoubtedly, the true church of God, who, in chap. vii. 3, &c. are represented as having been sealed, that they might be secured against apostasy, and preserved from the power of him who goes about "like a roaring lion" in the desert, "seeking whom he may devour." And after all the cruelties of one beast and another, they are now found safe and triumphant with the Lamb upon Mount Zion. The literal Zion, we know, formed part of Jerusalem, and the spiritual Zion, doubtless, represents the Jerusalem which is above, or, at least, a part of it. When we are told that these are virgins, we understand it as expressive not only of their purity generally, but especially of their freedom from idolatry, which is spiritual fornication—they had not worshipped the beast, nor yet his image; and when we are told that "they are without fault before the throne," we must explain it by a reference to chap. vii. 14—"They have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb."

The next vision exhibited to the apostle is that of an angel dying in the midst of heaven, having "the everlasting Gospel," represented probably by a book or scroll, to proclaim or "preach to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people." Many commentators refer this to the times of the Protestant reformation; but we apprehend that though the gospel, both vocally and by the press, was then widely circulated, very few attempts were or could be made, to carry it beyond the bounds of Christendom: it was reserved for the present century, by means of Bible, missionary, education, and other societies, on a grand scale, to carry it "to every nation, and kindred, and tongue,

Ver. 10. The wine of the wrath, &c.—"Without mixture," must here mean, without diluting.—Tormented with fire and brimstone.—See chap. xviii. 6.

Ver. 13. From henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit.—"From" is redundant and unwise, as the sense appears to be, that such afflictions are a preparation, that death will be a happy escape from them.—Their works do follow them.—Greek, "with them;" i. e. their reward is not deferred to the final judgment. Wiltis, and other Protestants, have hence ably argued against purgatory, and in proof of an intermediate state.

Ver. 14. Behold a white cloud.—[This chapter contains a vision of the true "church in the wilderness," during the period of the domination of the Beast and unwise, as the sense appears to be, that such afflictions are a preparation, that death will be a happy escape from them.—Their works do follow them.—Greek, "with them;" i. e. their reward is not deferred to the final judgment. Wiltis, and other Protestants, have hence ably argued against purgatory, and in proof of an intermediate state.

Ver. 14. Behold a white cloud.—[This chapter contains a vision of the true "church in the wilderness," during the period of the domination of the Beast and unwise, as the sense appears to be, that such afflictions are a preparation, that death will be a happy escape from them.—Their works do follow them.—Greek, "with them;" i. e. their reward is not deferred to the final judgment. Wiltis, and other Protestants, have hence ably argued against purgatory, and in proof of an intermediate state.

CHAPTER XVI.

2 The angels pour out their vials full of wrath. 6 The plagues that follow thereupon.
15 Christ cometh as a thief. Blessed are they that watch.

AND I heard a great voice out of the temple saying to the seven ^a angels, Go your ways, and pour out the vials of the wrath of God upon the earth.

2 And the first went, and poured out his vial upon the ^b earth; and there fell a noisome and grievous ^c sore upon the men which had the mark ^d of the beast, and upon them which worshipped his image.

3 And the second angel poured out his vial upon the ^e sea; and it became as the blood ^f of a dead man: and every living soul died in the sea.

4 And the third angel poured out his vial upon the rivers and fountains of ^g waters; and they became blood.

5 And I heard the angel of the waters say, Thou art ^h righteous, O Lord, which art, and wast, and shalt be, because thou hast judged thus.

6 For they have shed the blood of saints and prophets, and ⁱ thou hast given them blood to drink; for they are worthy.

ing of these grievous calamities upon the beast: none were suffered to do this, that judgment might have its free course, till all the seven punishments to be inflicted by the ministry of the seven angels were fully executed in their order."

CHAP. XVI. Ver. 1-7. The first three angels pour out their vials.—Commentators are much divided as to the period of time in which we may expect the fulfilment of these predictions. Mr. Lowman reckons them from the middle of the 9th century to nearly the close of the 19th. Mr. Morell, though he closes at the same period, goes no farther back than to the middle of the 16th century for their commencement. There is, however, a remarkable correspondence between the trumpets and the vials, so far as respects the parties concerned. Thus, the first trumpet regards the earth and so the first vial—the second trumpet turned the sea into blood, and so the second vial—the third trumpet affects the rivers and fountains, and upon these is the third vial poured—the fourth trumpet affected the sun, and so also the fourth vial—the fifth trumpet produced pain and darkness, and so the fifth vial also—the sixth trumpet loosed the four angels from the Euphrates, on which also the sixth vial is poured—the seventh angel announces the near approach of the Millennium, and the seventh plague produces the destruction of Popery to make room for it.

But what are here meant by the earth—the sea—the rivers, &c. &c.? Dr. Gill (who has written largely and learnedly on this Book) thus explains them:—"The first vial will be poured out upon the earth, and designs those Popish countries which are upon the Continent, as France and Germany; and as the first trumpet brought the Goths into Germany, so the first vial will bring great distress upon the Popish party in the empire. . . . The second vial will be poured out upon the sea, and may intend the maritime powers belonging to the church of Rome, particularly Spain and Portugal; and as the second trumpet brought the Vandals into these places, [so the Dr. explains it,] so this vial will affect the same, and bring wars and desolations into them. . . . The third vial will be poured out upon the rivers and fountains of waters, which may point to those places adjacent to Rome, as Italy and Savoy; and as the third trumpet brought the Huns into those parts, so this [third] vial will bring in large armies hither, which will cause much bloodshed, and a great revolution in church and state."

"This comment on the vials, founded on their analogy to the trumpets, bids fair (says Fuller, who quotes the same passage) to be the true one." Dr. Gill adds, "As yet, I take it, none of them are poured out, though some great and learned men have thought otherwise. As yet there have been no such devastations on the Continent, as in France and Germany, as to produce the above effects; nor in the countries of Spain, Portugal," &c.—"This [remarks Fuller] was doubtless the case in 1752, the year in which the Sermon from which the above extract is made was printed, but this is more than can be said in 1810."—We may add, far more than can be pretended in 1827!

CHAP. XVI. Ver. 2. A noisome and grievous sore.—Doddridge, "a malignant and grievous ulcer."

Ver. 3. Every living soul died in the sea.—Doddridge, "And every living soul [that was] in the sea died." Compare Exod. vii. 21.

Ver. 5. The angel of the waters.—This seems a bold and beautiful poetical figure, as if the angel who was so to guard the waters, himself acquiesced in the equity of the punishment as if he had said, "The blood of thy saints has often swelled the rivers, justly, therefore, are these rivers turned into blood."—Hest judged thus.—Doddridge, "Judged these." Woodhouse, "Executed this judgment."

Ver. 6. Thou hast given them blood to drink; for they are worthy.—"It is the angel who had power over fire," (chap. xiv. 18.) allude to the poet who kept the fire on the altar of burnt-offering, this angel may have a like allusion to him who had the care of the great laver of purification.

A M cir.
A 17 cir.
96

a c 15 17
b c 87
c Ex 9 8 11
d c 13 15
17

e c 88
f Ex 7 17
21
g c 10
h ver 7
i De 32 42
48
Is 49 25

j c 153
194
k c 8 12
l c 9 17
m cor. burr.

n ver 11, 21
o Da 5 22
23
p c 9 20
q c 13 2 4
r c 9 2
s ver 2
t c 9 14
u Is 41 3
Jer 50 38
51, 36
v c 12 3, 9
w c 13 2
x c 19 20

7 And I heard another out of the altar say, Even so, Lord God Almighty, ^a true and righteous ^b are thy judgments.

8 And the fourth angel poured out his vial upon the ^c sun; and power was given unto him to scorch men with ^d fire.

9 And men were ^e scorched with great heat, and blasphemed ^f the name of God, which hath power over these plagues: and ^g they repented not to give him glory.

10 And the fifth angel poured out his vial upon the seat ^h of the beast; and his kingdom was full of ⁱ darkness; and they gnawed their tongues for pain,

11 And blasphemed the God of heaven because of their pains and their ^j sores, and repented not of their deeds.

12 And the sixth angel poured out his vial upon the great river ^k Euphrates; and the water thereof was dried ^l up, that the way of the kings of the east might be prepared.

13 And I saw three unclean spirits like frogs come out of the mouth of the ^m dragon, and out of the mouth of the ⁿ beast, and out of the mouth of the false ^o prophet.

When we calculate the evils produced and the blood shed in the French Revolution—the wars of Napoleon—the last great contest of the Allied Powers—and the various revolutions in Spain and Portugal, we may see a full justification of all the strong images here used. The first vial produces a noisome and grievous ulcer, which rendered the whole body politic a mass of corruption and putridity. A circumstance of peculiar horror occurs under the second vial; the sea—the maritime powers are not only dyed with blood, but that blood becomes stagnant, "like the blood of a dead man." So that every soul living in those countries died. This is strong language; but seems fully justified in considering that, as different parties prevailed in the various revolutions and counter-revolutions, they successively destroyed each other.

But upon whom did those judgments fall? Upon "the men that had the mark of the beast, and which worshipped his image; upon those countries, for the most part, which were peculiarly bigoted to Popery and the Inquisition: as France and Italy, Spain and Portugal. And this circumstance is made the ground of a sacred anthem: "Thou art righteous, O Lord, because thou hast judged thus. . . . For they have shed the blood of saints and prophets, and thou hast given them blood to drink; for they are worthy."—"And I heard another"—that is, another angel, as it is generally understood; but perhaps it should be another voice out of the altar, namely, the altar of burnt-offerings, from whence (chap. vi. 9) had issued this cry,—"How long, O Lord, . . . dost thou not judge and avenge our blood?" But the blood is now avenged, and the call for vengeance is changed into a song of praise—"Even so, Lord God Almighty, true and righteous are thy judgments."

Ver. 8-21. The next three vials poured out.—Under the fourth trumpet the sun (as well as the moon and stars) lost a third part of its power and influence: here its influence is increased, and he has power given him to scorch men with fire. Fleming (some of whose successful predictions on chap. xi. have been already mentioned) considers this as an humiliating judgment on the French empire; but increasing heat must, we think, imply rather an augmentation than diminution of power in the solar flame; nor can this scorching heat "be understood of the persecution of the faithful; for (as Fuller remarks) they would not blaspheme under it. It would seem, therefore, to be the galling tyranny by which the adherents of the beast will be oppressed: "we should rather say, have been oppressed: for if we refer the judgments of the first three vials to the wars of the last century and the beginning of this, may we not refer this to that increase of power in the sovereigns of Papal Europe, and particularly of France, whereby the French themselves were aggrieved, and murmured, and blasphemed? Even the French clergy themselves, as is well known, murmured and repined at the tyranny to which they were subjected; yet they reformed not, but blasphemed: and this applies not only to the tyranny of the Bourbons, but also to the more recent tyranny of Napoleon.

Ver. 7. Another out of the altar.—"Another [angel,]" says Doddridge—Woodhouse, "I heard [a voice from] the altar;" which is, we think, more exact.

Ver. 10. The seat.—Greek, "throne."

Ver. 12. Euphrates.—See note on chap. ix. 11.—Kings of the east.—Doddridge and Woodhouse, (more literally,) "from the rising of the sun."

Ver. 13. Like frogs.—That the frog was a sacred representation in Egypt, is certain; as it is found in the Benben Table, sitting upon a lotos. It was sacred to Osiris Helms. Inspiration, of old, was supposed to arise from fountains and streams. The Muses, who were esteemed prophetic deities, were (like Moses) denominated from water. As fairs were . . . engraved upon the basis of Apollo's statue at Delphi, they might originally be characteristic of the priests and prophets of Egypt. "All inspiration (among the heathen) was supposed to be an inflation of the deity," and this animal "is remarkable for swelling itself by inflation." See Orient. Lit. No. 161.

14 For they are the spirits of ^a devils, working ^b miracles, which go forth unto the kings of the earth and of the ^c whole world, to gather them to the battle ^d of that great day of God Almighty.

15 ¶ Behold, I come as a ^b thief. Blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments, lest he walk ^c naked, and they see his shame.

16 And he gathered them together into a place called in the Hebrew tongue Armageddon.

17 And the seventh angel poured out his vial into the air; and there came a great voice out of the temple of heaven, from the throne, saying, It ^d is done.

18 And there were voices, and thunders, and lightnings; and there was a great earthquake, such ^f as was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake, and so great.

19 And the great city ^e was divided into three parts, and the cities of the nations fell: and great Babylon came in remembrance before

A M. cir.
4100
A 1 96

x 1 Ti 4 1

y 2 Th 2 9

z 1 Jo 5 19

a c 19 19

b 2 Pe 3 10

c c 3 18

d c 21 6

e c 11 13

f Da. 12

g c 14 8

h 1 5 17, 18

i c 6 14

j c 11 19

k c 18 3

l c 19 2

m c 11 13

n c 18 3

o c 18 3

p c 18 3

q c 18 3

r c 18 3

s c 18 3

t c 18 3

u c 18 3

v c 18 3

w c 18 3

x c 18 3

y c 18 3

z c 18 3

a c 18 3

b c 18 3

c c 18 3

d c 18 3

e c 18 3

f c 18 3

g c 18 3

h c 18 3

i c 18 3

j c 18 3

k c 18 3

l c 18 3

m c 18 3

n c 18 3

o c 18 3

p c 18 3

q c 18 3

r c 18 3

s c 18 3

t c 18 3

u c 18 3

v c 18 3

w c 18 3

x c 18 3

y c 18 3

z c 18 3

a c 18 3

b c 18 3

c c 18 3

d c 18 3

e c 18 3

f c 18 3

g c 18 3

h c 18 3

i c 18 3

j c 18 3

k c 18 3

l c 18 3

m c 18 3

n c 18 3

o c 18 3

p c 18 3

q c 18 3

r c 18 3

s c 18 3

t c 18 3

u c 18 3

v c 18 3

w c 18 3

x c 18 3

y c 18 3

z c 18 3

a c 18 3

b c 18 3

God, to give unto her the cup ^b of the wine of the fierceness of his wrath.

20 And every island fled away, and the mountains were not found.

21 And there fell upon men a great hail out of heaven, every stone about the weight of a talent: and men blasphemed God because of the plague of the hail; for the plague thereof was exceeding great.

CHAPTER XVII.

3, 4 A woman arrayed in purple and scarlet, with a golden cup in her hand, sitteth upon the beast, which is great Babylon, the mother of all iniquities. 5 The interpretation of the seven hills, 12 and the ten horns. 8 The punishment of the whore. 14 The victory of the Lamb.

AND there came one of the seven angels which had the seven vials, and talked with me, saying unto me, Come hither; I will show unto thee the judgment of the great whore ^a that sitteth upon many ^b waters:

2 With whom ^c the kings of the earth have committed fornication, and the inhabitants of the earth have been made drunk with the wine of her fornication.

3 So he carried me away in the spirit into the

The fifth vial is poured upon the seat of the beast, which Fulter explains of Germany, but Morell of Rome, and we think more justly; for though it be true that the "Holy Roman Empire" formed the secular beast, yet it is certain that the second or ecclesiastical beast, alias "the false prophet," had his residence, his throne, in Rome. Fleming supposed that the events of this period would commence about 1794, and expire about 1848. As to the commencement, it appears that he was not very inaccurate. "Most of my readers," says Morell, (who wrote about 1805,) "will remember that about that time, the French entered Rome, plundering the whole country and the city of Rome itself, the throne of Antichrist. The Pope was made captive, and remained in their custody till his death, and most of the neighbouring states have tasted in measure of the same bitter cup." The necessary consequence of this judgment upon Rome, was a great gloom, not only in Italy, but throughout the whole empire of Popery, many gnawing their tongues with pain and agony, expecting that empire to be now utterly destroyed; yet "repented they not of their deeds, [but] blasphemed the God of heaven." So far we conceive these prophecies have been fulfilled, but no farther. The predictions of the two last vials are, by general consent, admitted to be future: it will therefore become us to speak of them with modesty and caution.

The sixth vial being poured upon the Euphrates, naturally leads us to look to the East for its accomplishment; and, behold, the kings of the East prepared to meet us. The drying up of the Euphrates is evidently to facilitate their passage westward. But who these kings may be, and what their errand in Europe, are inquiries that can be answered only by conjecture. Some have supposed them to be the Jews returning to their own land; but then they must have mistook their way, for their land is in the East. It is probable they may be Eastern princes from Russia, or the countries that lie beyond; but whether their object may be to assist the beast, or to oppose him, is not quite so clear. The following verse may lead us to suppose the latter, because, when they are approaching, the beast and false prophet seem to take alarm, and muster all their forces.

The three spiritual emissaries, or demons, which issue from the mouths of the dragon and false prophet, may be either individuals, or orders of men, distinguished by their busy, boasting, and talkative disposition, like the croaking animals here named. These are employed by the old serpent and the false prophet, to capote the antichristian powers, to make one more desperate and combined effort against the cause of Christ, in what is here called the battle of Armageddon, or of the mountain of Megiddo—alluding, as it is thought, to that fatal battle in the valley of Megiddo, in which good king Josiah lost his life; (2 Kings xxiii. 29, 30. 2 Chron. xxxv. 22, 23;) and which occasioned a mourning ever to be remembered as "the mourning in the valley of Megiddo." (Zech. xii. 11.)

Verse 15, (Behold, I come as a thief, &c.) is generally considered as a parenthesis; but if we might be allowed to suppose, that this and the following verse have been accidentally transposed, and, therefore, to replace them, the passage would, we apprehend, appear much clearer; and the warning perhaps more appropriate, as referring to a sudden judgment, compared to an earthquake, "so mighty and so great," as was never felt before. "Blessed is he that watcheth," should be always sounding in our ears. (Compare chap. iii. 3, 4.)

Ver. 14. Spirits of devils—i. e. unclean demons. See note on Luke iv. 36.
Ver. 15. And they see his shame—See 2 Sam. x. 4, 5.
Ver. 19. The great city—In the Rabbinical writings, it is certain that Rome is termed Babylon; and it is also styled "the great city," and "great Rome."
Ver. 21. A great hail—See Exod. ix. 25—26.
CHAP. XVII. Ver. 1. The great whore—Doddridge and Woodhouse, "harlot." (Whoredom in Scripture frequently denotes idolatry; and how many kings and nations has Papal Rome intoxicated "with the wine of her

In the preceding verses, we have seen "the kings of the earth, and of the whole world," combined together, as the Psalmist expresses it, "against the Lord and against his anointed," and animated by the false prophet and his agents, to attack them with the utmost energy. But, as when Nebuchadnezzar was uttering the boastful language, "Is not this great Babylon that I have built?" a voice from heaven suddenly pronounced his doom: (Dan. iv. 30, 31;) so in the midst of anticipated triumph, the last drop of God's judgments is poured from heaven, and a voice is uttered from the throne, saying, "It is done." Thunders and lightnings the most tremendous accompany the sound. All their well-concerted plans, and combined forces, tumble suddenly into confusion, and the great city itself, Babylon, or "eternal Rome," as it has been profanely called, is "divided into three parts," and the other "cities of the nations fall."

The earthquake here predicted certainly intends a mighty revolution, and the language employed seems to imply, that it should be greater than that in the time of Constantine—from Paganism to Christianity; and far greater than that we read of at the death of the witnesses, for then only a tenth part of the city fell—here the whole establishment of Popery is broken up. The great city is fallen to pieces—divided into three parts; and other "cities of the nations"—perhaps other corrupt religions—fall at the same time; or, as Bishop Newton and others understand it, the various dependent states fall from her communion, and from subjection to her authority. But of this great Babylon we must treat at large, under the next chapter.

At the commencement of this vial, we should have observed that it was poured out upon the air, as the others had been upon the earth, the water, and the solar flame. This is poured out upon the air, because that is the peculiar element of Satan, who is elsewhere denominated "the prince of the power of the air." (Eph. ii. 2.) Here he seems to concentrate all the vapours of the atmosphere into hail—the stones whereof are said, hyperbolically, to weigh a talent, or 100lbs. weight, as Bishop Newton explains it; and falling upon men like the hammers of heaven, crush them, as it were, to atoms. We do not mean to intimate that Satan has the artillery of heaven at his disposal without divine permission; but, as in the instance of Job, he was permitted to wield the thunder-bolt and the whirlwind, under the control of the Almighty; (see Job, ch. i. 16, 19;) so here he is permitted to cast down enormous hailstones from the sky, on those whose names are not written in the book of life of the Lamb slain; but his commission is always to be understood with this limit—"Hitherto shalt thou come, but no farther." (Job xxxviii. 11.)

CHAP. XVII. Ver. 1—15. Babylon the Great described.—The scene before us is a wilderness, or desert; either the church had long before been compelled to fly for refuge from persecution, and hither now persecuting Babylon herself is obliged to retreat. We have before intimated, that it was customary to delineate cities, nations, and empires, under a female form, with certain emblems and appropriate inscriptions. Thus was the Jewish nation in captivity represented by a disconsolate female sitting under a palm tree, with this inscription—Judea capta. So Rome herself, Bishop Newton remarks, is represented in ancient medals as a woman sitting on a lion.

In the Old Testament, both Tyre and Babylon are represented as females debauched, and debauching others; and the fornications!" By the most subtle insinuations and politic management, she has obtained and preserved her ascendancy, attaching them to her usurped authority in blind submission, inducing them to conform to her idolatries, and intoxicating and maddening multitudes by their zeal for that church, to murder their unoffending neighbours (tens of thousands!)—Bagdad—Upon my waters—This is spoken in allusion to the literal Babylon situated on the Euphrates. Compare Jer. li. 12, 13. Explained in ver. 15 to mean people, &c.

wilderness: and I saw a woman sit upon a scarlet coloured beast, full of names of blasphemy, having seven heads and ten horns.

4 And the woman was arrayed in purple and scarlet colour, and decked with gold and precious stones and pearls, having a golden cup in her hand full of abominations and filthiness of her fornication:

5 And upon her forehead was a name written, MYSTERY, BABYLON THE GREAT THE MOTHER OF HARLOTS AND ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH.

6 And I saw the woman drunken with the blood of the saints, and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus: and when I saw her, I wondered with great admiration.

7 And the angel said unto me, Wherefore didst thou marvel? I will tell thee the mystery of the woman, and of the beast that carrieth her, which hath the seven heads and ten horns.

8 The beast that thou sawest was, and is not; and shall ascend out of the bottomless pit, and go into perdition: and they that dwell on the earth shall wonder, whose names were

A. M. cir. 4100.
A. D. cir. 56.
d c. 12.3.
e c. 13.1.
f guided.
g Je. 51.7.
h 2 Th. 2.7.
i or, Fornications.
j c. 16.6.
k ver. 1.
l ver. 3.
m c. 11.7.
n ver. 11.
o c. 13.3,8.
p c. 13.1.
q Da. 7.20.
r Eccl. 1.18.
s 21.
t c. 19.19.
u Je. 50.44.
v De. 10.17.
w 1 Pt. 6.15.
x c. 13.18.
y Mt. 5.8,9.
z Ro. 5.30.
aa 57.
ab Je. 15.16.
ac c. 2.10.

not written in the book of life from the foundation of the world, when they beheld the beast that was, and is not, and yet is.

9 And here is the mind which hath wisdom. The seven heads are seven mountains, on which the woman sitteth.

10 And there are seven kings: five are fallen, and one is, and the other is not yet come; and when he cometh, he must continue a short space.

11 And the beast that was, and is not, even he is the eighth, and is of the seven, and goeth into perdition.

12 And the ten horns which thou sawest are ten kings, which have received no kingdom as yet; but receive power as kings one hour with the beast.

13 These have one mind, and shall give their power and strength unto the beast.

14 These shall make war with the Lamb, and the Lamb shall overcome them: for he is Lord of lords, and King of kings: and they that are with him are called, and chosen, and faithful.

latter in particular, as having "a golden cup filled with abominations." (See Isa. xxii. 17, 18. Jer. li. 7, &c.) But the Babylon here depicted is not the literal Babylon, for that had long fallen into ruins, but mystical Babylon; for so her name is written on her forehead—"Mystery, Babylon the great, the mother of harlots," or fornications, and abominations of the earth." Catholic and Protestant writers are pretty generally agreed, that Rome is here intended. So the Catholic Bishop of Meaux (Bossuet) expressly says:—"St. John represents Rome in the name of Babylon, as she had all the characters of Babylon; an empire full of idols and divinations, and a persecutor of the saints, as she was;" that is, the literal Babylon.

But then, Catholic writers (as particularly Cardinal Bellarmino) contend, that Rome Pagan, and not Christian or Papal, must be intended: the contrary of this will, however, appear in the following account of the heads and horns of the beast; and still more clearly from the absurdity of supposing, with Catholics, that Papal Rome can be designated by this harlot; when, at the same time, they pretend that antichrist, the beast on which she rides, is not yet come: nor have they any way to surmount this difficulty, but by supposing, as does Signor Pastorelli, "the Roman idolatrous (meaning the Pagan) empire will rise up again, under the wicked man antichrist," whom they consider as yet to come—a supposition, as appears to us, advanced only to evade the charge of their apostate church being antichrist.

The beast here described is evidently the same as John, in the 13th chapter, saw rising out of the sea; but having obtained "firm footing," and being about to carry the great harlot, he now walks the solid ground. He is of the same colour with the dragon, (chap. xii. 3.) and the harlot was arrayed in purple and scarlet—the latter of which seems the proper costume of Popery, for the red hat and stockings are the peculiar badge of cardinals.

But to come to the apostle's description of this Papal wild beast. In the 8th verse, it is described as "the beast that was, and is not, and yet is." It was, or did exist, in the character of the dragon, when the mass of the people were Pagan idolaters. In that respect, it is not, and does no longer exist; yet, in fact, is still in being, under another name and form: the body of the beast, spotted like a leopard, (see chap. xiii. 2,) that is, composed partly of natives, and partly of the conquerors who had settled among them.

This beast, though nominally become Christian, was in heart still Pagan—still adhering to the old principles of idolatry and persecution. This description, "was and is not," &c. may probably allude to some theatrical trick, whereby actors descending through the stage come up again in another character. Paganism had, indeed, for the most part, been banished from earth, and sent down to the bottomless pit; but it had come up again in a new form, in which also it is to be sent back again to the bottomless pit, at the appointed time.

Verses 9 and 10 give a two-fold explication of the heads of this beast. 1. As they refer to the city of Rome itself, which is well known to be built upon seven hills; and, secondly, as to its political establishment, which has existed in seven various forms of government. Five of these had passed away; the sixth (namely, the Imperial) existed in the time of this Revelation: the seventh (namely, the exarchate of Ravenna) was not yet come, and would be of short duration; the imperial form would be again revived, as it was under Charlemagne, but not permanently. This was the eighth in some respects, but must be reckoned among the seven. In the 13th chapter this is differently expressed. One of his heads is there said (ver. 3) to be wounded "as it were to death," or mortally; but was unexpectedly healed again, as we have there explained.

We now come to the ten horns, which are said to be ten kings, who as yet, however, had received no kingdom. These horns, as we apprehend, were to sprout out of the last head of the beast, namely, the imperial, (in different respects to be considered either as the eighth or a revival of the sixth,) and to be contemporary with him. They were to "receive power as kings," or kingly power, "one" or the same "hour" with the beast; with whom they "have one mind," or are of the same religion. So Fuller explains it:—"They did not subject their

Ver. 3. Wilderness.—[The desolate state of the true church of Christ.]—Bagster.—Scarlet coloured beast—a v. a wild beast, as the word usually signifies. [Doubtless the church of Rome, as she sits upon, or rules over the beast, which is the Latin empire, or the temporal power by which she is supported.]—Bagster.

Ver. 4. Purple and scarlet colour.—[The distinguishing colours of popes and cardinals, as well as of conquerors and senators; and who can find adequate language to describe the pride, splendour, and magnificence of the church of Rome.]—Bagster.—Having a golden cup.—See Isa. li. 7. In the Table of Ceres, is represented a fair, beautiful, and false woman, having a cup in her hand. She is called Deceit, and seduceth all mankind.

Ver. 5. Mystery, Babylon.—i. e. Mystical Babylon. Woodhouse does not take this word for part of the inscription, but an intimation that this name was to be mystically understood. He renders it—"And upon her forehead was a name written, a mystery, Babylon," &c. Scaliger affirms, that this name was inscribed upon the front of the Pope's mitre, till some of the Reformers noticed it. See Newton, who remarks, that this term can with no propriety be attached to ancient Rome; and that St. John's admiration must imply the same, for he would not be surprised that a heathen city should persecute Christians.

Ver. 6. Drunken with the blood of the saints.—Charles IX. of France, a Roman Catholic prince, laid a snare for the destruction of the Protestants, by offering his sister in marriage to a Huguenot (a Protestant) prince of Navarre. All the chief men of the Huguenots were assembled in Paris at the nuptials; when on the eve of St. Bartholomew's day, August 24, 1572, at the ringing of a bell, the massacre commenced. An unparalleled scene of horror ensued. The Roman Catholics rushed upon the defenceless Protestants. Above five hundred men of distinction, and about ten thousand others, that night slept in Paris the sleep of death. A general destruction was immediately ordered throughout France, and a horrid carnage was soon witnessed at Rouen, Lyons, Orleans, and other cities. Sixty thousand perished;—and when the news of this event reached Rome, Pope Gregory XIII. instituted the most solemn rejoicing, giving thanks to Almighty God for this glorious victory over the heretics! According to the calculation of some, about two hundred thousand suffered death in seven years, under Pope Julian; no less than a hundred thousand were massacred by the French in the space of three months; the Waldenses who perished, amounted to one million; within thirty years, the Jesuits destroyed one hundred thousand; under the Duke of Alva, thirty-six thousand were executed by the common hangman; a hundred and fifty thousand perished in the inquisition; and a hundred and fifty thousand by the Irish massacre; besides the vast multitude of whom the world could never be particularly informed, who were proscribed, banished, starved, burnt, buried alive, smothered, suffocated, drowned, assassinated, chained to the galleys for life, or muzzed within the horrid walls of the Bastille, or others of their church or state prisons. According to some, the whole number of persons massacred since the rise of Popery, amounts to fifty millions.

Ver. 8. The beast that thou sawest.—Compare this beast with the first beast, described in chap. xii. Also with the fourth beast in Daniel, chap. vii. The chief difference between this beast, and that in chap. xii, seems to be in the omission of his similitude to the lion, the bear, and the leopard, which represented monarchies, described by three separate animals in Daniel, but long since ceased: this regards only the Roman government.

Ver. 9. The seven kings.—Nimely, the Palatine, Capitoline, Quirinal, Caelian, Esquiline, Viminal, and Aventine hills. See note on ch. xiii. 1.

Ver. 10. Seven kings.—(Or, seven forms of government, which subsisted among the Romans. The "five fallen" are kings, consuls, dictators, decemvirs, and military tribunes; the sixth, the one that is, is the power of the Cæsars, or emperors; and the seventh is probably the exarch of Ravenna, or the dukedom of Rome. If this be reckoned a distinct form of government, then the beast is "the eighth," but if it be deemed too inconsiderable to be reckoned a distinct head, he "is of the seven;" but whether the seventh or eighth, he is the last form of government in that idolatrous empire, and "goeth into perdition."—Bagster.

Ver. 12. Ten horns.—The number of kings, or states, which support the harlot, have, at different times, much varied. So the apostles were still the twelve, though Judas hanged himself. See note on 1 Co. xv. 5.—One hour.—i. e. the same hour.—Loftman. So, ver. 13, one mind is certainly "the same mind."

15 And he saith unto me, The waters which thou sawest, where the whore sitteth, are peoples, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues.

16 And the ten horns which thou sawest upon the beast, these shall hate the whore, and shall make her desolate and naked, and shall eat her flesh, and burn her with fire.

17 For God hath put in their hearts to fulfil his will, and to agree, and give their kingdom unto the beast, until the words of God shall be fulfilled.

18 And the woman which thou sawest is that great city, which reigneth over the kings of the earth.

CHAPTER XVIII.

2 Babylon is fallen. 4 The people of God commanded to depart out of her. 9 The kings of the earth, 11 with the merchants and mariners, lament over her. 20 The saints rejoice for the judgments of God upon her.

AND after these things I saw another angel come down from heaven, having great power; and the earth was lightened with his glory.

2 And he cried mightily with a strong voice, saying, Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen.

kingdoms to him: as a secular power; for then had they not been independent; their only connexion with him would be ecclesiastical, or in his supporting the harlot. That this was the only bond of union between them is manifest from the result of things; when their love should be turned into hatred, they are not said to hate the beast, but the whore; it was the whore, (or harlot,) therefore, and not the beast, that was the object of their attachment. While he, "compared in scarlet," would support her in all her base and sanguinary proceedings, they (the ten kings) would be with the beast, "holding up his trappings, or lending their authorities to enforce his measures."

"Such (continues Fuller) was actually the conduct of all the governments of Christendom prior to the Reformation, and such has been the conduct of many of them since. It is thus that they are said to make war with the Lamb." It may be asked, "Who is able to make war with the Lamb?" but we ask, in reply, Who is able to overcome the Lamb? He is "King of kings, and Lord of lords;" and his followers are a select band—"called, and chosen, and faithful."

We omitted to notice, in the beginning of this chapter, that the harlot is here described "as sitting upon many waters," and these waters are, in ver. 15, explained to mean "peoples, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues." The fact is, the monster on which she rode, having risen "out of the sea," he delights in paddling through troubled waters with his opprobrious load.

In the sequel of this history we find that the ten horns (or kings) themselves shall hate the harlot, and "make her desolate, and naked, and shall eat her flesh, and burn her with fire;" that is, they shall strip off all her meretricious ornaments, and devour her riches.

"This (to quote again the judicious Fuller) is the way in which the antichristian church is doomed to fall. It will not be from the increase of religious people who withdraw from her communion, as she has always apprehended; but from those who have been her companions in sin, and who, when nothing more is to be expected from her, shall turn against her and destroy her. It is not by Protestantism, but by infidelity, that false religion will be overthrown." This is not a new opinion. "Sir Isaac Newton had a very sagacious conjecture, which he told Dr. Clarke, from whom (says Whiston) I received it, that the overbearing tyranny and persecuting power of the antichristian party, which hath so long corrupted Christianity, and enslaved the Christian world, must be put a stop to and broken to pieces, by the prevalence of infidelity for some time, before primitive Christianity could be restored; which seems to be the very means that is now working in Europe, for the same good and great end of Providence." Mr. W. wrote in the former part of the last century.

CHAP. XVIII. Ver. 1—8. The fall of Babylon.—This book affords us, perhaps, the finest illustration we can any where meet with of the doctrine of the ministry of angels. The throne of the Almighty is surrounded with them; they move on the slightest

A. M. cir. 4100
A. D. cir. 56.
15 v. 7.
16 v. 1.
17 v. 1.
18 v. 1.
19 v. 1.
20 v. 1.
21 v. 1.
22 v. 1.
23 v. 1.
24 v. 1.
25 v. 1.
26 v. 1.
27 v. 1.
28 v. 1.
29 v. 1.
30 v. 1.
31 v. 1.
32 v. 1.
33 v. 1.
34 v. 1.
35 v. 1.
36 v. 1.
37 v. 1.
38 v. 1.
39 v. 1.
40 v. 1.
41 v. 1.
42 v. 1.
43 v. 1.
44 v. 1.
45 v. 1.
46 v. 1.
47 v. 1.
48 v. 1.
49 v. 1.
50 v. 1.
51 v. 1.
52 v. 1.
53 v. 1.
54 v. 1.
55 v. 1.
56 v. 1.
57 v. 1.
58 v. 1.
59 v. 1.
60 v. 1.
61 v. 1.
62 v. 1.
63 v. 1.
64 v. 1.
65 v. 1.
66 v. 1.
67 v. 1.
68 v. 1.
69 v. 1.
70 v. 1.
71 v. 1.
72 v. 1.
73 v. 1.
74 v. 1.
75 v. 1.
76 v. 1.
77 v. 1.
78 v. 1.
79 v. 1.
80 v. 1.
81 v. 1.
82 v. 1.
83 v. 1.
84 v. 1.
85 v. 1.
86 v. 1.
87 v. 1.
88 v. 1.
89 v. 1.
90 v. 1.
91 v. 1.
92 v. 1.
93 v. 1.
94 v. 1.
95 v. 1.
96 v. 1.
97 v. 1.
98 v. 1.
99 v. 1.
100 v. 1.

and is become the habitation of devils, and the hold of every foul spirit, and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird.

3 For all nations have drunk of the wine of the wrath of her fornication, and the kings of the earth have committed fornication with her, and the merchants of the earth are waxed rich through the abundance of her delicacies.

4 And I heard another voice from heaven, saying, Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues.

5 For her sins have reached unto heaven, and God hath remembered her iniquities.

6 Reward her even as she rewarded you, and double unto her double according to her works: in the cup which she hath filled fill to her double.

7 How much she hath glorified herself, and lived deliciously, so much torment and sorrow give her: for she saith in her heart, I sit a queen, and am no widow, and shall see no sorrow.

intimation of the Divine will, and they always fly. Their attendance is constant, and their obedience instant: nor does the nature of the message on which they are sent, whether of judgment or of grace, at all affect the speed with which they execute it. Their obedience is, in all cases, prompt, and without hesitation, even in the higher orders; and, from the splendour which shone around him, the angel now before us is supposed to be of considerable rank.

This chapter contains one of the most sublime and beautiful odes in all the poetic Scriptures: for to that form has Bishop Jebb reduced it. It contains, 1. A proclamation that Babylon is fallen. 2. A warning and charge to the people of God, to come out of her. 3. A lamentation over her, by all the classes of mankind, particularly interested in her fate. We shall offer a few words in reference to each.

1. The fall of Babylon is proclaimed. "It (or she) is fallen, is fallen." So in chap. xvi. ver. 17; a voice from the throne pronounces, "It is done!" The decree is gone forth, and is on the point of being fulfilled. And with the decree is given (which is not always the case) the reasons upon which it is founded. Babylon, that is, the church of Rome, is not only herself intoxicated and debauched, but she is charged with intoxicating and debauching all the kings or governments by whom she has been supported—all the merchants and captains who had been enriched by her trade, and led into the most injurious luxuries. "She who, as a church of Christ, (says Archbishop Woodhouse,) should have been the teacher and preserver of pure religion and morality, had become the seducer and corrupter of the nations and their kings; and had set the example of that insolent luxury, disposing to irreligion, which it was her duty to oppose."

In illustration of the imagery here employed, and which is evidently borrowed from the Old Testament prophecies respecting ancient Babylon and Tyre, particularly the latter, Mr. Lowman thus remarks:—"As the destruction of Rome is here compared with that of Tyre, (Exek. xxvii.) we easily see how proper it was to describe the sins of Rome by figures taken from the sins of Tyre. The profit of trade created a commerce between that city, then the chief mart of the world, and all nations; so that Tyre spread her luxury and superstition far and wide, with her trade. Rome, in like manner, corrupted distant and remote nations, by rewarding her votaries with considerable wealth, encouraging their ambition and luxury; and thus, like Tyre of old, she made her corruptions general, and almost universal."

What is said of Babylon being "the habitation of devils," does not refer so properly to her former state of crime, as to her future state of misery. The images here employed are evidently taken from Isa. xiii. 20—22; xxxiv. 10—16: on which Dr. Woodhouse observes, that "when the utter destruction of a city is denounced in Scripture, the site of that city is commonly described as becoming the haunt and habitation of wild beasts, and of such loathsome reptiles, as are found in the forsaken ruins of a city." On one of these passages, he adds, of the vision, "reigned over the kings of the earth," was undoubtedly Rome; and, from its foundation, it has, in different ways, accomplished this object to the present time.—Bagester

CHAP. XVIII. Ver. 2. The habitation of devils—Greek, "Demons." [That is, she is become a scene of utter desolation, and the habitation of hateful birds and beasts of prey. It is evident, that no desolations have yet left Rome in this condition; unless any choose to say, that it has "become the habitation of devils, and the hold of every foul spirit, and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird," ever since the popes and cardinals have made it their residence.]—Bagester. Compare with this verse Isa. xiii. 19—21. Jer. li. 37.

Ver. 3. Delicacies—Doddridge, "banquets."

Ver. 3. Delicacies—Doddridge, "unrighteous actions."

Ver. 6. Double unto her double—See Isa. li. 2.

Ver. 7. Lived deliciously—Doddridge, "in luxury." So verse 9.—[et al] a queen.—See Isa. xlvii. 5, 8, 9.

Jer. 15. The whore—Or "harlot." The Bishop of Meaux (before cited) objects to this being meant of the church of Rome, or to her being called a harlot; because, having been once a true church, her apostasy would render her an adulteress. To this Woodhouse replies, that the same term is applied to the churches of Judah and Israel, when guilty of idolatry, (see Isa. i. 21, Jer. iii. 1.) the reason of which is, such churches are considered as virtually divorced. Jer. iii. 8.

Ver. 16. These shall hate, &c.—[The ten horns, which the angel explained of "ten kings," or kingdoms, and which once exalted and supported her ecclesiastical tyranny, will hate, desolate, strip, and devour her. They will be the principal instruments in the destruction of popery, and the ruin of Rome itself.]—Bagester.

Ver. 17. To fulfil his will—i. e. his decrees. See Acts ii. 23.

Ver. 18. That great city, which reigneth, &c.—This necessarily determines Rome to be the place intended. So Lowman. [The city which, at the time

8 Therefore shall her plagues come in one day, death, and mourning, and famine; and she shall be utterly burned with fire: for strong is the Lord God who judgeth her.

9 And the kings of the earth, who have committed fornication and lived deliciously with her, shall bewail her, and lament for her, when they shall see the smoke of her burning,

10 Standing afar off for the fear of her torment, saying, Alas, alas, that great city Babylon, that mighty city! for in one hour is thy judgment come.

11 And the merchants of the earth shall weep and mourn over her; for no man buyeth their merchandise any more:

12 The merchandise of gold, and silver, and precious stones, and of pearls, and fine linen, and purple, and silk, and scarlet, and all thyine wood, and all manner vessels of ivory, and all manner vessels of most precious wood, and of brass, and iron, and marble,

13 And cinnamon, and odours, and ointments, and frankincense, and wine, and oil, and fine flour, and wheat, and beasts, and sheep, and horses, and chariots, and slaves, and souls of men.

A. M. cir.
4100.
A. D. cir.
96.
1 c. 17.6
m Ps 62 11.
Je 50 24.
n Eze 26 16, 17.
o ver. 17, 19.
p Eze 27 27
.38.
q c. 17 4
r or, sweet.
s or, bodies.
t Eze 27 13.

u Isa 18 19,
&c. v Isa 23 14
w Je 51 37.
x Jos 7 6.
Job 2 12.
Eze 27 30.
y Je 51 18.
z De 32 43.
Lu 18 7, 8.
c. 19 2.

14 And the fruits that thy soul lusted after are departed from thee, and all things which were dainty and goodly are departed from thee, and thou shalt find them no more at all.

15 The merchants of these things, which were made rich by her, shall stand afar off for the fear of her torment, weeping and wailing,

16 And saying, Alas, alas, that great city, that was clothed in fine linen, and purple, and scarlet, and decked with gold, and precious stones, and pearls!

17 For in one hour so great riches are come to nought. And every shipmaster, and all the company in ships, and sailors, and as many as trade by sea, stood afar off,

18 And cried when they saw the smoke of her burning, saying, What city is like unto this great city!

19 And they cast dust on their heads, and cried, weeping and wailing, saying, Alas, alas, that great city, wherein were made rich all that had ships in the sea by reason of her costliness! for in one hour is she made desolate.

20 Rejoice over her, thou heaven, and ye holy apostles and prophets; for God hath avenged you on her.

"It is observed by Bishop Louth, that Hebrew words expressive of such animals, are translated in the Septuagint by the word daïmonia, which is used here," and by our translators rendered "devils."

2. We must notice the warning here given, which is also evidently borrowed from Isaiah, (chap. lii. 11, 12,) in reference to the literal Babylon. So our Lord himself warned his disciples to escape from Jerusalem, when they saw "the abomination of desolation;" that is, the Roman eagle flying before it. They did so, and it is not known that there were any Christians in the city when it was taken by the Romans. And it is certainly lawful at all times to fly from public calamities which we cannot prevent, when we can do it without bringing reproach on our religion.

The chief reason why we should fly from depraved and corrupt communities is, that we "partake not of their sins," as we would wish to escape "their plagues." Upon the doctrine of retaliation, (as expressed in ver. 6,) we would only remark, that the Christian religion does in no case tolerate private revenge: but retributive justice is a different thing, and the righteous governor of the world may certainly employ what instruments he pleases in dispensing it.

But the passage before us was employed by our reformers, chiefly to justify their secession from the church of Rome. Whenever a church falls into idolatrous worship, as of saints and images, or into other fundamental errors, then should this warning voice be attended to; for if we be partakers in other men's sins, we must expect to be sharers in their punishment. And idolatry is a sin against which the Bible abounds with the most awful denunciations, as may be seen in the "Homily against the peril of Idolatry," wherein also are many passages quoted on the same subject from the Christian fathers, from which only we can copy one short sentence. Origen says—"It is not only a mad and frantic part to worship images, but also once to dissemble or wink at it."

But what is most to be lamented in the case both of apostate churches and individuals, is, that they are seldom sensible of their situation. The church of Laodicea said, "I am rich and increased in goods, and have need of nothing;" while, at the same time, her Lord pronounced her to be "wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked." So the church of Rome, like Babylon of old, said, "I sit a queen, and am no widow, and shall see no sorrow." (Compare Isa. xlvii. 7-9.) But, ah! how awfully was she mistaken!—"Therefore," says the voice from heaven, "therefore shall her plagues come in one day, death, and mourning, and famine; and she shall be utterly burnt with fire: for strong is the Lord God who judgeth her."

The precise nature of the judgments here intimated, we presume not to determine. Some have supposed, that the city of Rome itself will be burned; and others, that it will be turned into a lake of fire and brimstone: but the harlot of whom we are speaking is not a city, but a church—an apostate church,

Ver. 8. Utterly burned with fire.—She says in her heart, like ancient Babylon, "I sit a queen, and am no widow, and shall see no sorrow;" she glories, like ancient Rome, in the name of "the eternal city;" but notwithstanding, "she shall be utterly burnt with fire." Probably her destruction will be finished by some immediate judgment of God; and the nature of the soil in the vicinity, the frequent irruptions of subterraneous fires, and terrible earthquakes, which have often occurred, seem to point out the method: the combustibles are provided, and the train is already laid; there only wants "the breath of the Almighty to kindle it."—Baxter.

Ver. 10. Alas, alas.—(Or, Woe, woe) for this will form a part of the last woe. This lamentation coincides in many particulars with that over Tyre; and the enumeration of the various articles of commerce is calculated to convey some idea of the splendour, luxury, and excess which have so long (dimphed) in the powerful, magnificent, and elegant metropolis of popery. —Baxter.

Ver. 12. Thyine wood.—Margin, "sweet;" i. e. sweet-scented—probably burnt for incense.

Ver. 13. And slaves, and souls, &c.—"And bodies and souls of men." So Woodhouse. This is literal, and we see no reason for departing from it. "It is true, in fact, (says Leiman;) that her slaves (those of Papal Rome) lose all religious, as well as civil, liberty."

Ver. 15. The merchants, &c.—Many of the images in this chapter seem taken from the Lamentation for Tyre, Ezek. xxvii.

Ver. 20. Rejoice over her, &c.—Compare Jer. li. 47, &c. [It is peculiarly worthy of remark that the apostles, who are idolatrously honoured at Rome

21 And a mighty angel took up a stone like a great millstone, and cast it into the sea, saying, Thus * with violence shall that great city Babylon be thrown down, and shall be found no more at all.

22 And the voice of harpers, and musicians, and of pipers, and trumpeters, shall be heard no more at all in thee; and no craftsman, of whatsoever craft he be, shall be found any more in thee; and the sound of a millstone ^b shall be heard no more at all in thee;

23 And the light of a candle shall shine no more at all in thee; and the voice of the ^c bridegroom and of the bride shall be heard no more at all in thee: for thy merchants ^d were the great men of the earth; for by thy sorceries ^e were all nations deceived.

24 And in her was found the blood of prophets, and of saints, and of all that were slain ^f upon the earth.

CHAPTER XIX.

1 God is praised in heaven for judging the great whore, and avenging the blood of his saints. 7 The marriage of the Lamb. 19 The angel will not be worshipped. 17 The towns called to the great slaughter.

AND after these things I heard a great voice ^a of much people in heaven, saying, ^b Alleluia; ^c Salvation, and glory, and honour, and power, unto the Lord our God:

2 For ^d true and righteous ^e are his judgments; for he hath judged the great whore, which did corrupt the earth with her fornication, and hath avenged ^f the blood of his servants at her hand.

3 And again they said, Alleluia. And her smoke ^g rose up for ever and ever.

4 And the four and twenty elders and the

A M. cir. 4100
A 17. cir. 36.
a Je 31 64
b Je 25 10
c Je 7 34
16 9
33 41
d Is 22 5
e 2 Ki 9 22
Na 3 4
f Je 51 49
a 11 13
b ver 3 4 6
c 7 10 12
d e 16 7
e e 18 50
f Je 34 19
c 18 9, 45

g Ps 135 4
h Ps 97 1, 12
i Mat 25 10
j L 21
k L 6 19
l 3 4
m 1 cor, bright
n Ps 132 9
o Lu 14 13
p e 3 29
q e 22 6
r e 22 9
s Ac 10 43
t Ps 1 10
u 11
v e 2
w e 2 14
x Ps 45 4, 4
y 11 4
z v 1 4
2 15
w Ca 3 11
L 6 23
Zec 9 16
e 6 2
x e 3 12

four beasts fell down and worshipped God that sat on the throne, saying, Amen; Alleluia.

5 And a voice came out of the throne, saying, Praise ^a our God, all ye his servants, and ye that fear him, both small and great.

6 And I heard as it were the voice of a great multitude, and as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of mighty thunderings, saying, Alleluia: for ^b the Lord God omnipotent reigneth.

7 Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honour to him: for the marriage ^c of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ^d ready.

8 And to her was granted that she should be arrayed ^e in fine linen, clean and ^f white: for the fine linen is the righteousness ^g of saints.

9 And he saith unto me, Write, ^h Blessed are they which are called unto the marriage supper ⁱ of the Lamb. And he saith unto me, These ^j are the true sayings of God.

10 And ^k I fell at his feet to worship him. And he said unto me, See thou do it not: I am thy fellow-servant, and of thy brethren that have the testimony of Jesus: worship God: for the testimony of ^l Jesus is the spirit of prophecy.

11 And I saw heaven opened, and behold a white ^m horse: and he that sat upon him ⁿ was called ^o Faithful and True, and in righteousness ^p he doth judge and make war.

12 His ^q eyes ^r were as a flame of fire, and on his head ^s were many ^t crowns; and he had a name ^u written, that no man knew, but he himself.

This sublime ode is continued in the first ten verses of the following chapter, where we shall be greeted by a song from heaven.

CHAP. XIX. Ver. 1-10. Heaven rejoicing in the fall of Babylon—the Marriage Supper of the Lamb.—Alas! how estranged is earth from heaven!—that which gives joy to one, is matter of lamentation to the other. How many scenes are there of pleasure and hilarity on earth, which are enough to make an "angel weep" to view them! We need not wonder, then, if sometimes, when earth is weeping, heaven should be rejoicing. Hark to the shout of heaven! "Salvation, and glory, and honour, and power, unto the Lord our God! . . . He hath judged the great whore, which did corrupt the earth with her fornication, and hath avenged the blood of his servants at her hand." This is an act of retributive justice, and while we remain sinners we may well tremble at its exercise; but in a state of perfect holiness, it should appear, saints and angels rejoice as well in the exercise of the divine truth and equity, as in the display of the milder perfections of the Deity.

"And again they said, Alleluia!" The praises of heaven are incessant and unwearying; that which is with us duty, is with them enjoyment. It was said in the preceding chapter, "Rejoice over her, thou heaven; and ye holy apostles and prophets, for God hath avenged you on her;" namely, on the great harlot, which debauched the world, and persecuted the church. But victory is not the only source of joy; the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife has made herself ready.

The harlot who had pretended to be the spouse of Christ, being "convicted of fornication with the worldly powers," and for ever discarded, "the attention of heaven and earth (says Archbishop Woodhouse) is naturally turned to that chaste and pure virgin, who is now to be presented to her Lord. The choral song brings her to view; arrayed, not in purple and scarlet, and gold and precious stones; not in worldly splendour, like the harlot, but in pure, simple, and resplendent garments, which are the clothing of the heavenly inhabitants. She has washed her garments, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." By faith in her Redeemer she is and daily washed, should be specially mentioned as rejoicing in her fall; as if it "avenged them" on her, for the dishonour cast on her characters, while it vindicated the glory of God!—Register.

Ver. 21. Thus with violence, &c.—See Jer li 63, 64. (This was to represent the violence of her fall, and that she should never rise again; which is further illustrated by varied emphatical expressions taken from the ancient prophets. But Rome is still standing and flourishing, and honoured by many nations as the metropolis of the Christian world; she still resounds with singers and musicians; she still excels in arts, which serve for pomp and luxury; she still abounds with capitals, and lamps, and torches, burning even by day, as well as by night; and consequently this prophecy has not been, but remains to be, fulfilled!—Register.

Ver. 23. The light of a candle.—Doddridge, "lamp."

CHAP. XIX. Ver. 1. Alleluia—Heb. "Hallelujah."

Ver. 4. The four beasts—i. e. "living creatures," as before.

Ver. 8. Clean and white.—Doddridge—"pure and resplendent."—The become righteous—for this is the fine linen, the righteousness of the saints."

The marriage of the Lamb being announced, a blessing is pronounced on all those who are invited to his marriage supper. This supper is by some commentators considered as the Millennium, but is by no means to be confined thereto. Whenever the Lord Jesus vouchsafes to his people a display of his redeeming mercy, it is a marriage feast, whether in earth or in heaven; and happily we are invited to such a feast, without waiting for the Millennium.

"How rich are thy provisions, Lord;

Thy table furnished from above!"

The truths of his eternal spread the board,

The cup of eternal with heavenly love!"—Watts

But a remarkable incident is here introduced. The prophet, dazzled, perhaps, with the glory of the angel that appeared to him, or peculiarly struck with the solemnity of his words—"These are the true sayings of God!"—seems to have mistaken him for the Lamb himself, and fell at his feet to worship him. The angel, however, instantly corrects his error: "See thou do it not; I am a fellow-servant of thine, and of thy brethren, who hold the testimony of Jesus; worship God." This seems to us, as plain and as strong a prohibition of worshipping angels, as we can well conceive—"See thou do it not."

The angel thus classing himself with St. John and his brethren, intimates, that both his office and theirs was to honour the Lord Jesus, by bearing witness to him. "The testimony of Jesus (saith he) is the spirit of prophecy;" or, as Dr. Doddridge and Bishop Hard invert the sentence, without any material change of sense—"The spirit of prophecy is the testimony of Jesus;" to bear witness to his glory, is the great object of prophets on earth, and of angels in heaven.

Ver. 11 21. The grand contrast between the Word of God and the beast and false prophet.—This description is an evident amplification of a former one, chap. vi 2, though it appears to refer to a very different event. The conqueror here described is the Logos, or Word of God. His name is Faithful and True, and who in righteousness alone maketh war. His eyes are described as before, (chap. i 14, &c.) "like a flame righteousness.—Doddridge, "the righteous acts of the saints." He remarks, "So δικαιωματα the Greek word here used evidently signifies . . . though I make no doubt that it is with regard to the obedience and righteousness of the Son of God, that all our righteous acts are accredited to God."

Ver. 19. See thou do it not.—The Church translators sally explicate here, as supposing that the angel only forbade that supreme worship, (la ruz) which is peculiar to the Deity, and not the inferior worship which the church allows to saints and angels, but certainly without any authority from the Scriptures. Nor do the common people know any thing of this distinction.—See Fletcher's Lectures against the Roman Catholic Religion, Lect. vi.—Thy fellow-servant—Doddridge and Woodhouse, "A fellow-servant with thee and thy brethren, who keep or hold the testimony of Jesus."

Ver. 11. Behold a white horse—This evidently refers to the same Conqueror introduced in chap. vi 2. There he had a crown; here he has many crowns implying that he had gained many victories.

Ver. 12. Many crowns—Greek, "diadems."

13 And he was clothed with a vesture dipped in blood: and his name is called The Word of God.

14 And the armies which were in heaven followed him upon white horses, clothed in fine linen, white and clean.

15 And out of his mouth a goeth a sharp sword; that with it he should smite the nations: and he shall rule them with a rod of iron; and he treadeth the wine-press of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God.

16 And he hath on his vesture and on his thigh a name written, a KING OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS.

17 And I saw an angel standing in the sun; and he cried with a loud voice, saying to all the fowls that fly in the midst of heaven, of fire," and upon his head were "many crowns," or diadems, expressive of the honours he had already won. His vesture was "dipped in blood," as expressive both of his sufferings and achievements; and he was called the Locos, or "Word of God," which we suppose to be the name here intended, whereof it is said, "no man knew (it) but himself;" meaning, as we apprehend, that no one but himself could fully comprehend its mysterious import.

"The armies which were in heaven followed him;"—and who are they? Chapter xvii. 14, will give the answer—"They that are with him are called, and chosen, and faithful." It may be worthy of remark, that though the great leader in this battle, The Word of God, is described as having his "vesture dipped in blood," his followers had no stain upon their garments: they were all clothed in "fine linen, white and clean." This seems to have an evident allusion to Isa. lxiii. 1, &c., where an illustrious conqueror, and doubtless the same here spoken of, says—"I have trodden the wine-press alone, and of the people there was none with me: for I will tread them in mine anger, and trample them in my fury; and their blood shall be sprinkled on my garments, and I will stain all my raiment." HE it is, we see, that fights the battles of his church, and gains the victory; and he also expressly states, "of the people there was none with me"—none to help—"therefore mine own arm brought salvation unto me; and my fury, it upheld me." This accounts for the garments of his followers being "white and clean," while their Leader himself has his garments not only stained, but even dyed with blood. It is to be hoped, that Christians will bear this in mind, whenever the eventful period now under consideration shall arrive, and not attempt to forward the kingdom of Christ by those sanguinary means which himself forbids. He is King of kings, and Lord of lords; and "in righteousness he maketh war;" but let us keep our garments clean from the stain of human blood.

A new vision now presents itself, at ver. 17. "I saw," says our apostle, "an angel standing in the sun." He is going to address eagles, and vultures, and birds of prey, which soar on high, and love to fly direct toward the sun; he therefore takes his station above them, as it were to collect them about his feet, and calls them to the supper of the great God. "That great Being who openeth his hand," and supplieth every living thing. He feeds the young ravens when they cry, and the young lions when they roar, for food: the numberless tribes of the ocean wait on him; and when he collects the eagles in the sunbeams, he provides for them; nor does a sparrow fall to the ground without his notice.

"The supper of the great God," here referred to, can be none other, as we conceive, than "the battle of Armageddon," before spoken of. The beast and the false prophet, with the frog-like spirits emitted from their mouths, went (as we have seen, chap. xvi. 14) on a mission through the earth, and have collected together all its kings and armies in hostility against the Lamb and his little company; but instead of conquering, they become themselves food to the birds of prey; and even the beast and the false prophet are taken prisoners, and cast alive into the "lake of fire burning with brimstone."

"By the false prophet" is evidently meant the second beast, described in chap. xiii.; and, more immediately considered as the great antichrist of St. John; and whose character seems perfectly to correspond with the "man of sin," or grand apostasy, described by St. Paul in 2 Thess. chap. ii. The most striking points of similitude are, that both assumed the prophetic office, and worked false miracles, and lying wonders; and both presided in the church of God. Of "the man of sin," this is expressly stated; and of the other it is strongly

* Come and gather yourselves together unto the supper of the great God;

18 That ye may eat the flesh of kings, and the flesh of captains, and the flesh of mighty men, and the flesh of horses, and of them that sit on them, and the flesh of all men, both free and bond, both small and great.

19 And I saw the beast, and the kings of the earth, and their armies, gathered together to make war against him that sat on the horse, and against his army.

20 And the beast was taken, and with him the false prophet that wrought miracles before him, with which he deceived them that had received the mark of the beast, and them that worshipped his image. These both were cast alive into a lake of fire burning with brimstone.

implied, in his having "the horns of a lamb," which marks his ecclesiastical character; and in the voice with which he spake, being that of the dragon, we have a plain indication of the authority which he assumed. To both the beasts above referred to, secular and ecclesiastical, divines sometimes refer this character, though it belongs more eminently to the latter; but they, in fact, act so completely in unison, that both their bodies may be said to be animated by one spirit; and it is "the old serpent," the dragon, that inspires them both.

Roman Catholic writers, indeed, object, that St. John, in his Epistle, describes antichrist as one that denies both the Father and the Son; but he says, also, that "there are many antichrists," (chap. i. 19,) and the false prophet here spoken of is eminently, if not exclusively, entitled to that character. In short, any one who assumes the place of Christ, and denies his doctrine, is an antichrist. It would not be difficult, therefore, to demonstrate, that by admitting the worship of saints and angels, and the doctrines of human merit and priestly pardon, the adherents to Popery deny both the Father and the Son.

We conclude all our remarks on antichrist, however, with an extract from Bishop Hurd (in the conclusion of his Lectures on Prophecy) on this subject:—

"To draw, then, what hath been said on the several marks of antichrist, to a point: consider within what part of the world he was to appear; in what seat or throne he was to be established; of what kind his sovereignty was to be; with what attributes he was to be invested; in what season, or about what time, and for how long a time, he was to reign and prosper: Consider these five obvious characters of antichrist, which the prophets have distinctly set forth, and which, from them, I have successively held up to you: and then compare them with the correspondent characters which you find inscribed by the pen of authentic history, on a certain power sprung up in the West, seated in the city of Rome, calling himself the Vicar of Christ, yet full of names of blasphemy; that is, stigmatized with those crimes which Christianity, as such, holds most opprobrious—the crimes of tyrannic dominion, of persecution, and even idolatry: and, lastly, now subsisting in the world, though with evident symptoms of decay, after a long reign; whose rise and progress can be traced, and whose duration, hitherto, is uncontradicted by any prophecy: pnt, I say, all these correspondent marks together, and see if they do not furnish, if not an absolute demonstration, yet a high degree of probability, that apostate Papal Rome is the very ANTICHRIST foretold."—(Sermon xi.)

But we must here add a word on the fate of antichrist, in the conclusion of this chapter. It is remarkable, that though we have a pretty full account of the preparations for this battle, and of its issue, we have no account of the battle itself. The arm of omnipotence being displayed in this conflict, we are not to wonder that its decision was so sudden and complete. By what specific means this victory shall be obtained, is not distinctly stated, but is sufficiently indicated in the name of the victor—The Word of God. So St. Paul says, respecting the "Man of sin," that "the Lord shall consume him with the breath (or spirit) of his mouth," and "the brightness of his coming."

But how is this antichrist, which we consider not as an individual, but as a body politic, or rather ecclesiastical, to be cast into a lake of fire? "It is true," says Mr. Fuller, "that neither political nor ecclesiastical bodies, as such, can be literally cast into a place of torment, as individual unbelievers that compose them will be: they may, however, be cast into perdition, so as never to rise any more, which may be the whole of what is intended. As the Christian church in her millennial glory is described in language applicable to indivi-

Ver. 13. A vesture dipped in blood.—Compare Isa. lxiii. 1, &c.

Ver. 15. Rule them with a rod.—Another allusion to Ps. ii. 9, before repeatedly referred to.

Ver. 16. King of kings, &c.—This title was often affected by the eastern despots. So Cyrus had engraved on his tombstone—"Here am I buried, Cyrus, King of Kings." Other Asiatic monarchs followed the example; and medals also of Parthian kings, of Tigranes, of Pharnaces, &c. are found with the same title inscribed.—Woodhouse.

Ver. 17. An angel.—Greek, "one angel;" which Doddridge renders "a single angel."

Ver. 18. That ye may eat the flesh of kings, &c.—This is an evident imitation of Ezekiel xxxix. 17. Forbes (author of the "Oriental Memoirs") states, as an illustration of this passage—"that during the night after a sanguinary battle in India, hyenas, jackals, and wild beasts of various kinds, prowled over the field with a horrid noise; and the next morning a multitude of crows, kites, and birds of prey, were seen asserting their claims to a share of the dead."—Orient Mem.

Ver. 20. These both were cast alive.—This marks a most exemplary punishment, as Lozman observes: they were not slain, and their carcasses burnt; but they were burnt alive, and were so to continue tormented for ever and ever.

21 And the remnant were slain with the sword of him that sat upon the horse, which sword proceeded out of his mouth: and all the fowls were filled with their flesh.

CHAPTER XX.

2 Satan bound for a thousand years. 6 The first resurrection: they blessed that have laid down. 7 Satan let loose again. 8 Gog and Magog. 10 The devil cast into the lake of fire and brimstone. 12 The last and general resurrection.

AND I saw an angel come down from heaven, having the key of the bottomless pit, and a great chain in his hand.

2 And he laid hold on the dragon, that old serpent, which is the Devil, and Satan, and bound him a thousand years.

3 And cast him into the bottomless pit, and shut him up, and set a seal upon him, that he should deceive the nations no more, till the thousand years should be fulfilled: and after that he must be loosed a little season.

4 And I saw thrones, and they sat upon them, and judgment was given unto them: and I saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, and which had not worshipped the beast, neither his image, neither had received his mark upon their foreheads, or in their hands; and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years.

5 But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection.

6 Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death dual believers, (ver. 8,) so the antichristian church is represented as a hardened sinner, arrested in a course of wickedness, and sent to his own place."

The beast and the false prophet being thus assigned to their proper and deserved fate, still there is a remnant of their followers left; and it might naturally be asked, What shall become of them? The answer is, "They were slain by the sword of him that sat upon the horse"—whose name is called The Word of God; and the instrument by which they were subdued is "the sword which proceedeth from his mouth."

CHAP. XX. Ver. 1—3. The Millennium.—"The removal of the beast and the false prophet, is followed by the decline of impiety and wickedness, and by the rapid growth of true religion and virtue. This is symbolically displayed. The dragon, that ancient foe of man, who, under the disguise of a serpent, had beguiled Eve; who had lent his throne, his authority, and his arts to the beast and the false prophet, to mislead the nations and their kings, is taken and confined. His influence upon earth is wonderfully diminished. And this important object is accomplished by the same superior agency. For though an angel is represented as binding Satan, yet whence has he the commission and the power? Whence the key of the bottomless deep, but from Him who alone is described as having the keys of hell and of death; from Him who shutteth and no man openeth? By his permission the bottomless deep had been opened; by his power it is now closed and sealed. The author of all iniquity is confined in it for a time; after which he is permitted to come forth again 'for a season,' and 'to deceive the nations.' But the beasts rise up no more. They are no longer the successful agents of Satan. He is no longer permitted to employ this kind of civil and religious tyranny against true religion and the happiness of man. The blissful season during which Satan continues bounden is called a thousand years." (Archdeacon Woodhouse.)

These thousand years, usually denominated the Millennium, (which signifies the same thing,) must now become the object of our attention, and the more so as some opinions have been lately revived respecting it, which we consider of a dangerous tendency.

The first event which we consider as connected with this period, and indeed as introducing it, viz. a powerful restraint upon Satan, and all the powers of darkness, is here expressed by the binding of Satan in a strong chain, and casting him down into the abyss—the prison assigned to him on his fall. This restraint, we apprehend, includes a great decrease of vice and iniquity; a suppression of those diabolical arts by which the great enemy of God and man has deceived and enslaved the more ignorant part of mankind, such as necromancy, witchcraft, and devil-worship, still practised among many of the ruder nations of Africa, and we fear partly among some nearer home.

2. The suppression of war is another happy event to which the confinement of Satan, and the restraint put upon his influence, must directly lead. War is, indeed, sport to him, though it is death to us; but it shall be brought to its termination by the "Prince of Peace." It has been long since predicted by the evangelical prophet, that under his reign men shall "learn war no more." (Isa. ix. 4.) We even flatter ourselves that we see some indications of this event approaching in the improved state of knowledge, and the spread of the gospel; but when the great "war spirit" shall be chained in the abyss, then shall universal peace take place.

3. The rapid progress of the arts and sciences and general knowledge may, we hope, add something in promotion of this great event. The invention of printing, and the improvements in navigation, we know have done much to promote the circulation of the Scriptures and the gospel through the world; and we may hope that the invention of stereotype and steam printing, steam navigation, and other new discoveries, may, by the end of the present century, produce effects no less salutary

CHAP. XX. Ver. 1. The bottomless pit—See note on chap. ix. 1.

Ver. 2. Laid hold on the dragon—This appears to be an emblematical representation of the restraints that would be laid on Satan, and the consequent reign of piety, peace, and righteousness on the earth. Multitudes will then be raised up, as if animated with the souls of the martyrs, and live and reign on earth in victory, honour, holiness, and joy; but "the rest of the dead will not live till the thousand years be ended"—they will have no successors of the and important. But in no art or science, perhaps, are improvements more rapid than in the healing art; and it seems not too much to expect that the progress of medical and surgical knowledge, with the suppression of war, and the improvement in men's moral habits, may contribute to extend considerably the period of human life. (See Isa. lxx. 20, &c., with our exposition.)

4. Improvements in education and in the acquirements of foreign languages, especially the languages of the heathen; also the formation of societies to support and promote the exertions of competent individuals; are farther appearances in Providence much to be admired. But on the growth of knowledge, and especially of religious knowledge, we shall take the liberty to insert a few lines from the eloquent pen of the late Rev. Robert Hall. He remarks:—

"In the representation of that glorious period, usually styled the Millennium, when religion shall universally prevail, it is mentioned as a conspicuous feature, that 'men shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased.' That period will not be distinguished from the preceding, by men's minds being more torpid and inactive; but rather by the consecration of every power to the service of the Most High. It will be a period of remarkable illumination, during which 'the light of the moon shall be as the light of the sun, and the light of the sun, as that of seven days.' Every useful talent will be cultivated, every art subservient to the interests of man be improved and perfected; learning will amass her stores, and genius emit her splendour; but the former will be displayed without ostentation, and the latter shine with the softened effulgence of humility and love.

"We have hitherto spoken of the advantages of knowledge in general; we proceed to notice the utility of religious knowledge in particular. Religion, on account of its intimate relation to a future state, is every man's proper business, and should be his chief care. Of knowledge in general, there are branches which it would be preposterous in the bulk of mankind to attempt to acquire, because they have no immediate connexion with their duties, and demand talents which nature has denied, or opportunities which Providence has withheld. But with respect to the primary truths of religion, the case is different: they are of such daily use and necessity, that they form not the materials of mental luxury so properly, as the food of the mind. In improving the character, the influence of general knowledge is often feeble, and always indirect; of religious knowledge, the tendency to purify the heart is immediate, and forms its possessed scope and design."—(Hall's Sermon on Knowledge.)

Ver. 4—6. The first resurrection—The great question here to be considered is, whether this resurrection should be literally or figuratively understood? We shall endeavour to state the arguments on both sides with brevity and candour. In favour of a literal interpretation, we shall quote Bishop Newton, who remarks—"In the general, that there shall be such a happy period as the Millennium; that 'the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High' (Dan. vii. 27); that Christ shall have 'the heathen for his inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession' (Ps. lxx. 1); that 'the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea' (Isa. xi. 9); that 'the fulness of the Gentiles shall come in, and all Israel shall be saved' (Rom. xi. 25, 26); in a word, that the kingdom of heaven shall be established upon the earth, is the plan and express doctrine of Daniel, and all the prophets, as well as of St. John; and we daily pray for the accomplishment of it, in praying, 'Thy kingdom come.' But of all the prophets, St. John is the only one who hath declared particularly, and in express terms, that the martyrs shall rise to partake of the felicity of this kingdom, and that it shall continue upon earth a thousand years; and the Jewish church before same persecuting spirit (if Satan is loosed after the Millennium)—Bagester—A thousand years—All sober commentators take this literally; the hypothesis which makes these a thousand years, a day for a year, we think most extravagant, and unwarranted by analogy.

Ver. 4. I saw thrones, and they sat upon them—i. e. the souls of the martyrs, &c.—Which had not worshipped the beast, neither his image, &c.—Compare chap. xiii. 15.

hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years.

7 And when the thousand years are expired, Satan shall be loosed out of his prison,

8 And shall go out to deceive the nations which are in the four quarters of the earth,

9 Gog and Magog, to gather them together to

A. M. cir.
4100.
A. D. cir.
96.
c. 2, 11.
d. 5.
e. 6.
f. 33, 2.
g. 16.
h. 16, 14.
i. 8, 8.
j. 33, 9.
k. 16.

battle: the number of whom is as the sand of the sea.

9 And they went up on the breadth of the earth, and compassed the camp of the saints about, and the beloved city: and fire came down from God out of heaven, and devoured them.

10 And the devil that deceived them was cast him, and the Christian church after him, have farther believed and taught, that these thousand years will be the seventh millennium of the world."

The learned prelate here cites several passages from the Rabbies, and the early Christian Fathers, to the same general effect; and in particular from Justin Martyr, who, in the second century, certainly maintained, that this resurrection of the martyrs was to be literally understood, and that Jesus Christ would descend from heaven, and reign with his saints personally in Jerusalem; and that, at the end of this thousand years, should follow the general resurrection, and the final judgment. These opinions, it is granted, were afterwards carried to a pitch of extravagance, which sunk them into disrepute; but they were again purified and revived, and, among the moderns, have been ably and strenuously defended by Mr. Jos. Mede, Dr. Thomas Burnet, Dr. Jno. Gill, Mr. Faber, Mr. Frere, Dr. Hales, and others, on the same principles as Bishop Newton, already cited. The Bishop lays particular stress on the fifth verse, which asserts, that the rest of the dead lived not all a thousand years after the resurrection of the martyrs. Both passages (he contends) must be understood in the same manner. "If the martyrs rise only in a spiritual sense, then the rest of the dead rise only in a spiritual sense; but if the rest of the dead really rise, the martyrs rise in the same manner." So argues his lordship, and with considerable force.

On the other hand, it must be acknowledged, that this doctrine of a literal resurrection, and the personal reign of Christ on earth, met with early opposition, particularly from Origen, and Dionysius of Alexandria: it never was received as the universal opinion of the Christian church; and the most eminent expositors of modern times lean decidedly the other way, that is, to the figurative or spiritual interpretation of this mysterious passage. We recollect particularly, Dr. Whitby, Prof. Witsius, Pres. Edwards, Mr. Lovman, Dr. Guise, Dr. Hopkins, Dr. Br. Johnstone, Mr. Fuller, Mr. T. Scott, Dr. Bogue, and Dr. Boothroyd. Dr. Doddridge, and Archdeacon Woodhouse, hesitate. The grounds on which these reason, we shall now explain.

That this resurrection must not be literally explained, they argue, 1. Because the removal of saints and martyrs from heaven to earth for a thousand years, would, (they conceive,) so far from being a reward to their fidelity, prove a deterioration of their happiness; especially while the world is subjected to sin and sorrow, which must evidently be the case till after the defeat of Gog and Magog. They cannot suppose the saints in heaven will be gratified to leave their celestial thrones for earthly ones below, much less to fight with infidels.

2. It seems utterly incongruous to associate "the children of the resurrection" with the subjects of mortality and sin. It is true, that some of the saints arose, in consequence of the earthquake that attended our Lord's crucifixion; but we have good reason to believe, that like Lazarus and others miraculously raised, they died again, which is not supposed of these martyrs. See our exposition of Matthew xxvii. 45-54.) The children of the resurrection "neither marry nor are given in marriage;" how then shall they associate with flesh and blood? They have rested from their labours upon earth; are they then to renew them for their reward?

3. The idea of our Lord himself leaving his seat upon the Father's throne in glory, to occupy one on earth, seems still more unscriptural and absurd. He has told us repeatedly and emphatically, that his kingdom is not of this world, and shall he, after all the glories of his exaltation, stoop to wield an earthly sceptre? And is he again personally to recommence his warfare with the devil? Every way in which this subject can be viewed, either with respect to himself or the saints, it seems utterly inconsistent, both with Scripture and common sense.

4. The very terms in which this resurrection is spoken of, are thought inapplicable to a literal resurrection. "I saw the souls of them that were beheaded," &c., which is an expression never used of the resurrection of the body. The reanimation of their spirits, is like the reappearance of Elias in the person of John the Baptist. It is, in the figurative language of this book, a reanimation of the church, by the same spirit and temper being given, as was displayed in the saints and martyrs of former ages; for the same spirit, poured from on high, will ever form the same holy and zealous characters. This spiritual resurrection is in analogy with the resurrection and ascension of the two witnesses, in chap. xi, and, indeed, with the style of the whole book.

Lastly, the idea of the saints, or a part of them, being raised a thousand years before mankind in general, does not appear at all to agree with other descriptions of the general resurrection; that, in particular, in the close of this chapter, wherein the dead, "small and great"—righteous and wicked—those whose names were written in the book of life, and those not therein written, stand together before the throne of judgment. (Compare Matt. xxv. 31, &c. John v. 28, 29. Rom. xiv. 10-12. 2 Cor. v. 10. 1 Thess. iv. 13-17, &c.) Now though we should admit that "the dead in Christ shall rise first," that is, before the wicked; yet, that they shall rise a thousand years before the wicked—yea, even before the final contest recorded below, (ver. 8, 9) appears to many, and we confess, to us, very improbable and inconsistent.

With respect to the expression, (ver. 5,) "the rest of the dead lived not," that may be understood figuratively, as well as the resurrection in ver. 4. So Mr. Lowman explains "the rest of the dead," of that remnant which was slain with the sword of Him that sat on the white horse, (chap. xix. 21.) "Thus, (he remarks,) the dead church raised to life, and living and reigning for a thousand years, and the enemies of the church remaining dead, and not living again till the thousand years were finished, will exactly agree in the same figurative meaning. This will be a sense consistent with the resurrection of the antichristian party also for a little season, (ver. 3,) after the thousand years shall be finished." So also Mr. Fuller.

Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection! So saith our apostolic prophet: they are raised from a death in sin to holiness in heart and life, and on such "the second death" (which will be the portion of the wicked) shall have no power." The first resurrection (says Mr. Fuller) supposes a second, which seems to be that of the just and the unjust. In this the wicked shall be raised to die a second death; but over the followers of Christ the second death shall have no power. As a pledge of their victory, they are already made priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign in spiritual prosperity from generation to generation, for the space of a thousand years.

Ver. 7-10. Infidelity supported by the armies of Gog and Magog, which are destroyed by fire from heaven.—The imagery of this chapter is also doubtless borrowed from Ezekiel, chap. xxxviii. and xxxix., to which we beg leave to refer our readers, in order to avoid repetition. By Gog and Magog, we suppose, must be understood some of the northern idolatrous nations, who had continued to refuse obedience to the gospel, or, at least, had apostatized therefrom. Indeed, such is human nature, that it is always prone to decline from practical religion; and it should seem, that even in those who may experience the power of religion during the happy period of the Millennium, there will be a great decline toward the end of it, and many will be seduced to listen to the infidel suggestions of the devil, as our Lord himself hath said, "When the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith in the earth?" (Luke xviii. 8.)

Satan once more loosed from his prison, will employ all his emissaries (as under the sixth vial) to gather together (as it were) "the whole world" from all quarters, to besiege the camp of the saints and the beloved city, by which is generally understood Jerusalem, rebuilt and enlarged to accommodate the Hebrew nation on their return. The invaders are neither the followers of the beast, nor the false prophet, for they are consigned to their own place; but, probably, a host of infidel philosophers, such as are described by Peter (2 Epis. iii. 4) and by Jude, (ver. 18, 19.) This is properly the reign of infidelity, and Satan is their king. But he also is taken as the beast and false prophet had been before, and cast into the same lake of burning. Now is the triumph of Christ, and the defeat of Satan, complete and final.

But, previous to the commencement of the Millennium, Christians generally expect, not only the fall of Popery and Mahometanism, but the national conversion of the Jews, and the return of a large body of them, at least, to their own land. We have already expressed our sentiments on this subject in our exposition of Jer. ch. xxx. and xxxi. Romans xi. and other parts of Scripture which seem to us to have an evident reference to this subject. But, we confess, we feel disappointed in finding so little in this book that has any explicit reference to this important subject. The restoration of Israel is, by the prophet Ezekiel, compared to a resurrection, and pos-

Ver. 9. Four quarters—i. e. the cardinal points of the compass.—Gog and Magog.—Those who date the conversion and return of the Jews within this period, consider this as an attack upon them by the Tartars. (Gog and Magog seem to have been anciently the name of the northern nations of Europe and Asia, as the Scythians have been since, and Tartars are at present, but this seems to refer to a different nation from that mentioned by Ezekiel, which was to come exclusively from "the north quarters," while this comes from "the four quarters of the earth;" and the events in Ezekiel's prophecy relate to the times previous to the Millennium, while this refers to the transactions subsequent to that period.]—Bagster.

Ver. 9. Went up on the breadth.—This seems to us to imply a global form of the earth, and to represent persons as rising from the under hemisphere on every side.—And fire came down, &c.—This is an evident allusion to the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah, Gen. xix. 24, 25.

into the lake " of fire and brimstone, where the beast and the false prophet are, and shall be tormented day and night for ever and ever.

11 And I saw a great white throne, and him that sat on it, from whose face the " earth and the heaven fled away; and there was found no place for them.

12 And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books " were opened: and another book " was opened, which is the book of life; and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according " to their works.

13 And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and " hell delivered up the dead which were in them: and they were judged every man according to their works.

14 And " death and hell were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death.

15 And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of " fire.

CHAPTER XXI.

1 A new heaven, and a new earth. 10 The heavenly Jerusalem, with a full description thereof. 12 She who sits on him, the glory of God is her light. 24 The kings of the earth bring their riches into her.

AND I saw a new " heaven and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea.

2 And I John saw the holy " city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, sible the first resurrection in this chapter may refer to it: the same prophet describes a new Jerusalem and a new temple in terms so analogous to chap. xxi. of this Apocalypse, that many able commentators think that chapter may be retrospective—that is, that it may refer to the Millennium, and describe the call of the Jews together with the fulness of the Gentiles; but on this we shall farther remark presently.

One other inquiry, which we have hitherto passed over, now demands some attention; and, indeed, has been an object of primary importance with many commentators—namely, that of the disciples to our Lord. " Tell us, when shall these things be?" (Matt. xxiv. 3.) That this, when properly and modestly conducted, is a lawful subject of inquiry, we have no doubt, since we are in some measure furnished with the means of answering it. The continuance of the beast and false prophet, the sojourns of the woman (or church) in the wilderness, the prophesying of the witnesses in sackcloth, are all limited to 42 months, or 1260 days or years, as we are expressly told; and if we can find their beginning, it will be easy to find their close; and, consequently, nearly to ascertain the commencement of the Millennium. After examining a variety of hypotheses on this subject, with which we think it unnecessary to trouble our readers, we remark, that having, with Mr. Fuller, commenced the prophecies of this book from the time of Pentecost, A. D. 33, and using the number of the beast, 666, chronologically, (in which we are by no means confident,) it will bring us very nearly to the close of the seventh century. From this time, date the 1260 years above mentioned, and they will bring us to about A. D. 1593, leaving 40 years from the fall of Popery, to prepare for the gradual introduction of the Millennium. This great event, the best expositors, ancient and modern, commence with the seventh chilad (or 1000 years) from the creation, which ancient traditions, both Jewish and Christian, consider as the great sabbath of the world. We may now compare the respective systems of a few of the most popular commentators on this book of the present day. The earliest date usually employed for the commencement of the 1260 years, is A. D. 533, which is the system of Mr. Frere and the Rev. Mr. Irring. But if this were correct, the time must have expired in 1793, when, if it must be admitted, Popery received " a deadly wound," but is not yet dead, nor apparently in dying circumstances, though it but was 34 years ago. Mr. Faber dates from A. D. 606, when the Pope assumed the title of Universal Bishop; and, accordingly, expects the fall of Popery in 1866.

Mr. Lowman, though an earlier commentator, is (we believe) far more generally followed; and he commences the 1260 years from about 756, when, by act of Pepin, King of France, the Pope obtained considerable temporalities. This carries on the reign of Popery to 2016, or sixteen years into the commencement of the Millennium, as it is generally reckoned. Dr. Bogue, however, who is one of the most able, recent, and temperate writers on this subject, thinks this carries the period on twenty or thirty years too late: and these years deducted will carry back their commencement nearly to the time above suggested; and we cannot pretend to be exact. Certain it is, the Pope began to acquire secular power, and temporal possessions, very early in the eighth century.

Ver. 11—15. The general resurrection and final judgment.—There is something peculiarly sublime in the scene now before us—"a great white throne"—that is, a throne, not of ivory, nor of silver, but of white and pure light. Of him that fills the throne there is no description; but his presence is of such awful majesty, that heaven recedes before him, and the earth vanishes. Nothing is great enough, or pure enough, to be visible when he appears: so the glow-worm becomes invisible as the sun rises.

But the dead, "small and great,"—that is, of every rank and class, must appear before him as their judge. It is observable that we have here no description of the process of the resurrection—such as poets and painters have sometimes injudiciously attempted. The Judge appears, and the dead—just and unjust—stand instantaneously before his bar. The books are opened, and the dead are judged out of the things written in those books, according to their works. The record of their actions is written by the pen of omniscience and eternal justice; and who dare object? But here is mention of another book, of which we often read in the sacred Scriptures—it is "the book of life—the book of life of the Lamb slain,"—that is, as we humbly conceive, (in allusion to human affairs,) the Lamb's own book, in which he enters the objects of his love and grace. The records of justice would certainly condemn us all; but this is a register of mercy, in which, as good Bp. Beveridge expresses it, "the black lines of our sins are crossed out by the red lines of our Saviour's blood." All whose names are not written there are without hope, though their names may be written on earth in marble or in gold.

But what is the meaning of being judged according to our works? Applied to mankind in general, it implies a judgment proportioned to their sins, and to the circumstances under which they are placed. Applied to believers, though in no case can any degree of merit be admitted, yet does it furnish the scale of measurement, if we may so speak, by which their rewards will be adjusted, as respects their diligence and fidelity. "To them who, by patient continuance in well-doing, seek for glory, and honour, and immortality, [he will give] eternal life." (Rom. ii. 7.)

That death and the grave (or invisible world) gave up their dead we can easily understand; but what is meant by "death and hell," or the grave, or invisible world, being "cast into the lake of fire," is not so clear. We apprehend, with Mr. Lowman, that it is designed to intimate that there will be in future no intermediate state, no death, no grave—the whole human race will in future be found in heaven or hell, in eternal life or everlasting misery!—Awful thought! how important is it to secure a place for our names in the Lamb's book of life!

CHAP. XXI. Ver. 1—8. The new heaven and earth, and who shall be excluded therefrom.—Before we enter upon this chapter, it will be necessary to revert to some passages in the second epistle of Peter, and other scriptures, which we have already briefly noticed. St. Peter tells us, that "the heavens and earth which are now, are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men:—that the day of the Lord [here spoken of] will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat; the earth also, and the works that are therein, shall be burned up. . . . Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." Let us now contemplate the fulfilment of this Scripture; but previous to our surveying the new heaven and earth, let us pause a moment, and admire the astounding scene, of "A God in glory, and a world on fire!"

Dr. Tous, Barneil, whose "theory of the earth" is too philosophical, or rather too fanciful, to be adopted in our pages, has some contemplations that have been admired for their beauty and sublimity, and well deserve to be read for their practical effect. From these we shall give one short extract on the scene before us. Dr. B. supposes the conflagration now universal and complete; and seated, as it were, upon a vagrant cloud, he looks down and asks, "Where are now the great empires of the world, and their great imperial cities!—their pillars, trophies, and monuments of glory? Show me where they stood! And then turning his eye, as it were, to look for a spot of peculiar interest, he exclaims—"Rome itself, eternal Rome, the great city, the empress of the world, whose domination and superstition, ancient and modern, make a part of the history of this earth—what is become of her now? She laid her foundations deep, and her palaces were strong and sumptuous. She glorified herself, and lived deliciously, and said in her heart, I sit a queen, and shall see no sorrow! But her hour is come; she is wiped away from the face of the earth—buried in perpetual oblivion. But they are not cities only, and works of men's hands, but the everlasting hills, the mountains and rocks of the earth, are melted as wax before the sun, and their place is no where found."

Ver. 10. Where the beast and the false prophet are—See chap. xix. 20.

Ver. 11. A great white throne—Compare Dan. vi. 9.

CHAP. XXI. Ver. 1. A new heaven, &c.—[As this immediately succeeds the account of the last judgment, it must refer exclusively to the heavenly state.]

"the new heaven and the new earth" and "the new Jerusalem" being emblematic of the glory and happiness which will be the portion of the good for ever!—Eraser—No more sea.—This may metaphorically intend, that whereas the beasts, both of Daniel and St. John, rose out of that state of trou-prepared as a ^c bride ^d adorned for her husband.

3 And I heard a great voice out of heaven, saying, Behold, the ^e tabernacle of God ^f is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, ^g and God himself shall be with them, ^h and be their God.

4 And God shall wipe away all ⁱ tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more ^j death, neither ^k sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away.

5 And he that sat upon the throne said, Behold, I make all things new. And he said unto me, Write: for these words are true and faithful.

6 And he said unto me, It is ^l done. ^m I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end. I will give unto him that is ⁿ athirst of the fountain of the water of life freely.

7 He that overcometh shall inherit ^o all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son.

8 But the ^p fearful, and ^q unbelieving, and the ^r abominable, and ^s murderers, and ^t whoremongers, and ^u sorcerers, and ^v idolaters, and all ^w liars, shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone: which is the second death.

9 And there came unto me one of the seven ^x angels which had the seven vials full of the seven last plagues, and talked with me, saying, Come hither, I will show thee the bride, the Lamb's ^y wife.

A. M. cir.
4100.
A. D. cir.
36.

c Is 54.5.
d Ps 45.9.
13

e 2 Co 6.16.
f Zec 3.9.

g Is 23.8.
e 7.17.

h 1 Co 15.
26, 54

i Is 35.10.

j e 16.17.

k e 1.9.
22.13.

l Is 55.1.
Ju 4.10.
14

m 1.7.
e 2.17.

n Mt. 1.2.
e 1.12. 5.

o 1 Ju 5.4.
10.

p 1 Co 6.9.
10.

q 1 Ju 3.15.

r Is 13.4.

s Mal 3.5.

t 1 Co 10.
20, 21

u Ps 19.9.
e 2.15.

v e 13.1, 6, 7.

w e 19.7.

x Eze 40.48.

y Is 60.1, 2.

z Eze 43.1.
31

a Eze 2.20.

b Eze 49.3.
Zec 2.1.

c e 11.1.

c Is 54.11.

10 And he carried me away in the spirit to a great ^a and high mountain, and showed me that great ^b city, the holy Jerusalem, descending out of heaven from God,

11 Having the glory ^c of God: and her light ^d was like unto a stone most precious, even like a jasper stone, clear as crystal;

12 And had a wall great and high, ^e and had twelve ^f gates, and at the gates twelve angels, and names written thereon, which are ^g the names of the twelve tribes of the children of Israel:

13 On the east three gates; on the north three gates; on the south three gates; and on the west three gates.

14 And the wall of the city had twelve foundations, and ^h in them the names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb.

15 And he that talked with me had ⁱ a golden reed ^j to measure the city, and the gates thereof, and the wall thereof.

16 And the city lieth four-square, and the length is as large as the breadth: and he measured the city with the reed, twelve thousand furlongs. The length and the breadth and the height of it are equal.

17 And he measured the wall thereof, a hundred and forty and four cubits, according to the measure of a man, that is, of the angel.

18 And the building of the wall of it was of jasper: and the city ^k was pure gold, like unto clear glass.

19 And the foundations ^l of the wall of the city were garnished with all manner of pre-

"The cloud-capt towers, the gorgeous palaces,
The solemn temples, the great globe itself,
Yea, all which it beholds, shall dissolve.
And, like the baseless fabric of a vision,
Leave not a wreck behind."—Shakespeare.

But let us turn our attention to the new heavens and the new earth now before us. We have already mentioned, that many divines, those in particular who expect the personal reign of Christ in the Millennium, consider this chapter as retrospective, and designed to give a more full account of the events of that period, and particularly the restoration of the Jews. But, upon a most attentive consideration of the subject, we confess ourselves compelled to reject that idea, and chiefly for this reason, that sin, and sorrow, and death, are now for ever done away; which cannot be the case in the Millennium, because that will end with the insurrection of Gog and Magog. But no enemy now remains: not only the beast and the false prophet, but Satan himself, is cast into the bottomless pit, to be liberated no more for ever. God and redeemed sinners are completely and for ever reconciled, therefore will he dwell for ever with them, and be their God. But he that is now shut out of this celestial state, must be shut out for ever. "The fearful and unbelieving"—by whom we do not understand timid and weak believers, but cowardly apostates, and impenitent transgressors—"the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars, shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone; which is the second death." On the contrary, he that has been "faithful unto death," and overcome the world, with its temptations and its snares, "he shall inherit all things;" or, as the margin explains it, "all these things," great and blessed as they are, which God has provided and reserved for them that love him.

Ver. 9-27. The New Jerusalem described, with the privileges of its inhabitants.—The quadrangular was the favourite form of the ancients, in building both their cities and their houses. And though, as Mr. Lowman suggests, there may be no necessity for supposing the height of the walls equal to the dimensions of the city; yet as the foundations were twelve layers deep, so the walls were, doubtless, furnished with lofty turrets, which would make the whole appear very considerable; life and communion which is represented by the sea, the cause shall be now done away for ever. If taken literally, it may intend, that the whole globe will be rendered habitable.

Ver. 6. I am Alpha and Omega, &c.—See note on Rev. 1. 11.

Ver. 8. The fearful and unbelieving.—Woodhouse, "The cowardly and the faithless." Lowman, "The cowardly and destitute."

Ver. 10. That great city.—[The interchange of emblems from "the bride, the Lamb's wife," to "that great city, the holy Jerusalem," shows that we should only take in general ideas of them, and not enter minutely into particulars; and that our complex view of such subjects must be deduced from the whole of them compared together.]—Bagster.

Ver. 14. Twelve foundations.—The ancients built their walls with alternate layers of brick and stone, here improperly (perhaps) rendered foundations.—But instead of this wall being built with alternate layers of brick and common stone, it is built with layers of various precious stones, which rendered even the foundations inconceivably beautiful and splendid.—Orient. Cust. No. 1400.

Ver. 16. The city lieth four-square.—Woodhouse, "quadrangular;" i. e.

and high walls and towers were thought not only an ornament, but a protection to a city. Wherefore the Psalmist says—"Walk about Zion, and count the towers thereof. Mark ye well her bulwarks; consider her palaces." (Ps. xlviii. 12, 13.) And if the proud sons of Babel (^e Gen. xiv.) were ambitious to build their tower to the skies; and if it is said of the cities of Canaan, that they were "walled up to heaven." (Deut. i. 28.) it could not be an unwarrantable hyperbole to say of the New Jerusalem, that its height was equal to its breadth. The ideas meant to be conveyed, were certainly grandeur and security.

To view this city, St. John was conducted to an exceedingly high mountain, from whence he saw the New Jerusalem, or perhaps a model of it, gradually descending from the throne of God in heaven. She is spoken of as the bride, the Lamb's wife, and is said to be "adorned as a bride for her husband" which accounts for the gold and jewels with which she (the city) is so richly embellished. Her foundations being of precious stones, and inscribed with the names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb, plainly indicates the precious truths which they delivered in his name. (See 1 Pet. ii. 4, 7.) Her gates are pearls, on which are engraved the names of the twelve tribes of Israel; intimating, that none but Israelites indeed are admitted within these walls. When it is said, the street, or open part of the city, is "pure gold, transparent as glass," we may understand, that the materials of which the city is composed are distinguished both by splendour and intrinsic value. "There being no temple, nor sun, nor moon," (says Mr. Fuller,) denotes that there will be no need of those means of grace which we now attend upon: what we now receive mediately, we shall then receive immediately. Finally, the nations of the saved walking in the light of it, may allude to the interest which surrounding nations take in a metropolitan city; and denotes that the saved, who have been gathered from all nations, will rejoice in the honour which God will have bestowed upon his church.

The city before us is represented as of immense size, namely, 12,000 furlongs (or 1500 miles) in length and breadth; yet there is no surrounding country mentioned, though much seems to be implied, by its gates remaining always open; and by kings having four equal sides.—Twelve thousand furlongs—i. e. says Mr. Lowman, 1500 miles in compass, each side being 375 miles long.—The length, and the breadth, and the height equal.—Mr. Lowman explains this, not as forming an exact cube, but as having all the parts in a due proportion; or as being of a uniform height. [The square form of this city probably denotes its stability, while its vast dimensions, being 1500 miles on each side, is emblematical of magnificence, and of its capability of containing all the multitude of inhabitants which should ever enter it, however immense or innumerable.]—Bagster.

Ver. 19. Garnished with all manner of precious stones.—Compare Isa. lv. 11, on which Bishop Lowth pertinently observes, "These seem to be general images, to express beauty, magnificence, purity, strength, and solidity, agreeably to the ideas of Eastern nations; and to have never been intended to be strictly scrutinized, or minutely and particularly explained, as if each of them had some moral and precise meaning."—Chalcedony.—[Chalcedony is a species of quartz, semi-pellucid, of a whitish, bluish, smoky-grey, or yellow and red colour, and is 24 times heavier than water.]—Bagster.

cious stones. The first foundation was jasper: the second, sapphire; the third, a chalcodony; the fourth, an emerald;

20 The fifth, sardonyx; the sixth, sardius; the seventh, chrysolite; the eighth, beryl; the ninth, a topaz; the tenth, a chrysoprasus; the eleventh, a jacinth; the twelfth, an unethyst.

21 And the twelve gates were twelve pearls; every several gate was of one pearl: and the street of the city was pure gold, as it were transparent glass.

22 And I saw no temple therein: for the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are the temple of it.

23 And the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon, to shine in it: for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof.

24 And the nations of them which are saved shall walk in the light of it: and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honour into it.

25 And the gates of it shall not be shut at all by day: for there shall be no night there.

26 And they shall bring the glory and honour of the nations into it.

27 And there shall in no wise enter into it any thing that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie: but they which are written in the Lamb's book of life.

bringing into it their "glory and honour," as is customary in royal cities. But we understand "nations walking in the light of it," in a manner somewhat different from Mr. Fuller, as above quoted. Many divines have supposed, that this New Jerusalem will be enlightened by a divine sheeliah, a glory so brilliant and so elevated, as that all the nations of the redeemed may be illumined by it. But nothing defiling or defiled can enter into this heavenly world.

One thing, perhaps, has not been sufficiently considered, namely, that there "was no more sea." It is well known, that the ocean covers by far the larger part of our present globe, and if all the parts covered by seas, and lakes, and marshes, and barren rocks and arid sands, were clothed with vegetable food, as was paradise at the creation, it would not, perhaps, be too much to suppose that the earth could maintain many times its present number of inhabitants: not to say, from the enlarged scale on which every thing in this new world is represented, it seems highly probable that the new earth may be very considerably enlarged, and even perhaps a communication allowed with other worlds of pure and happy beings. But this is offered only as conjectural.

CHAP. XXII. Ver. 1-5. The river and tree of life, and the glory of this New Jerusalem.—Our Lord assures us, that the children of the resurrection "neither marry nor are given in marriage," it not being the design of God farther to increase the species. It has been hence also generally inferred, that they will neither eat nor drink: and it may be so; yet our Lord ate even animal food after his resurrection: (Luke xxiv. 42, 43;) and here is described a paradise of fruits, resembling that given to Adam in his state of innocence, but without "the tree of knowledge of good and evil." (Gen. ii. 9, 16, 17.) We are well aware, that evangelical expositors explain these fruits allegorically, for fruits of holy enjoyment; as well as the water of life, for the influences of divine grace and consolation. But if we are to have material bodies, (though highly purified,) and if we are to inhabit a material world, of which there seems no question; if our Lord himself ate with his disciples after his resurrection, we should be afraid to say that these promises in no degree admit of a literal interpretation; though some think that our Lord's body did not fully attain its glorified state till the hour of his ascension.

There are some trees that, by engrafting, produce different fruits, and at different seasons, from the same stock; there seems no absurdity, therefore, in admitting a literal interpreta-

Ver. 20. Sardonyx.—Sardonyx, as well as onyx, is a kind of chalcodony, generally marked with alternate stripes of white and black.—Sardius.—The Sardius, or Sardine stone, is a precious stone of a blood red colour.—Chrysolite.—The chrysolite or golds-tone, now called the Oriental topaz, is of a dusky green, with a cast of yellow, and is very beautiful.—Chrysoprasus.—The chrysoprasus, which Pliny reckons among the beryls, is generally considered a kind of chalcodony, and is an extremely hard stone, of a clear and delicate apple-green colour.—Jacinth.—The jacinth, hyacinth, or figure, is a dark orange-red variety of jacinth.—Agastor.

Ver. 21. Every creature.—This may denote, that every thing will be superlatively glorious beyond all comparison with any thing ever seen on earth.—Bagster.—The street of the city.—This seems well understood by Gratus, (says Mr. Lowman) of the Forum, or place of public assembly, which is described as paved other with squares of gold and crystals, or with crystal squares set in gold borders, than which imagination can conceive nothing more rich and magnificent.

Ver. 24. The glory of God did lighten it.—Not only Mr. Fleming, and other Millenarians, explain this of the sheeliah, or cloud of glory, which led the Israelites through the Red sea, and in their subsequent journeys, (Exod. xiv. 20, 24, &c.) but even Lowman and Doddridge give this explanation, and

CHAPTER XXII.

1 The river of the water of life. 2 The tree of life. 3 The light of the city of God is from it. 4 The angel will not be worshipped. 5 Nothing may be added to the word of God, nor taken therefrom.

AND he showed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb.

2 In the midst of the street of it, and on either side of the river, was there the tree of life, which bare twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month: and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations.

3 And there shall be no more curse: but the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it; and his servants shall serve him:

4 And they shall see his face: and his name shall be in their foreheads.

5 And there shall be no night there; and they need no candle, neither light of the sun; for the Lord God giveth them light: and they shall reign for ever and ever.

6 And he said unto me, These sayings are faithful and true: and the Lord God of the holy prophets sent his angel to show unto his servants the things which must shortly be done.

7 Behold, I come quickly: blessed is he that keepeth the sayings of the prophecy of this book.

tion of what is said, that "they yield twelve manner of fruits," and one or other of them "monthly," though we would by no means contend for it. We have mentioned in our remarks upon the paradise of Adam, Dr. Kennicott's hypothesis, that the tree of life was not an individual, but a species. Here we find it on either or both sides of the river; as also in Ezek. xlvii. 7. Mr. Fuller remarks, "There is doubtless an allusion in these verses to Ezek. xlvii. 1-12. Both Ezekiel and John make mention of a city—of a river—of trees growing upon the banks of it—and of the fruit thereof being for meat, and the leaf for medicine. Ezekiel's waters flowed from the temple, near the altar; those of John, out of "the throne of God and the Lamb." The city is doubtless the same in both; but, I conceive, at different times. Ezekiel's city had a temple; but that of John, as we have seen, had no temple, for the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are the temple of it. The first, therefore, describes the church in her latter-day glory; the last in a state of perfection; and which answers to the promise in chap. ii. 7: "To him that overcome will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the Paradise of God."

But the most important clause in this section of Scripture is the last—"And they shall reign for ever and ever." This may be literally rendered, "for ages of ages;" and some have strenuously argued from hence, against the eternity of misery inflicted on the finally impenitent. For "ages of ages," say they, means only for a long period. God forbid we should take pleasure in such a painful subject! But have those persons considered, that while they are endeavouring to comfort the wicked, they are distressing the pious and the just? If there may be an end to the punishment of sinners, why not to the happiness of good men? The duration of both is expressed in the same terms, and God forbid we should comfort the former to distress the latter!

Ver. 6-21. Conclusion of this book, and of the New Testament.—The angel confirms his message by a solemn asseveration in the name of God; and the following words, "Behold, I come quickly," are evidently spoken in the name of Christ, and as from him. These expressions, "the time is at hand," and "behold, I come quickly," imply only, that their accomplishment was shortly to commence, and would rapidly proceed; but, certainly, not that their accomplishment would shortly be completed, for they contain the fate of many centuries.

Our Lord Christ, having, from the 16th to the 16th verse, let no philosopher sneer at it, since Dr. Hershell thinks that he has discovered our sun to be an opaque body, enlightened by a phosphoric atmosphere.

Ver. 24. Rejoice of the earth do bring their glory and honour into it.—That is, says Doddridge, "If you were to conceive all the monarchs upon earth uniting all their treasures to adorn one single place, they would produce no more commendable to what I then saw." Compare Isa. lx. 3.

CHAP. XXII. Ver. 2. The tree of life.—(Rather, the delicate article not being in the original, "a tree of life," for there were three trees; one in the street, and one on each side of the river.)—Bagster.—For the healing of the nations.—This seems to imply that the inhabitants will be still subject to disease, which, we apprehend, was not intended. The original word signifies to serve, as well as to heal; and the writer here leaves to suggest, that the passage might be altered, for the service of the nations, without restraining it to healing, or, as Dr. G. explains it, "for the continuing of their health, not the restoring it, for no sickness is there."

Ver. 3. And they shall not say, Woe is us.—Doddridge, "hump."

Ver. 6. And he said.—Doubtless the angel who had been instructing St. John in the preceding visions.—These sayings.—Compare chap. xix. 9.

Ver. 7. Behold, I come.—Perhaps the words, "He said," or "saying."

8 And I John saw these things, and heard them. And when I had heard and seen, I fell down to worship before the feet of the angel which showed me these things.

9 Then saith he unto me, See thou do it not: for I am thy fellow-servant, and of thy brethren the prophets, and of them which keep the sayings of this book: worship God.

10 And he saith unto me, Seal not the sayings of the prophecy of this book: for the time is at hand.

11 He ^o that is unjust, let him be unjust still: and he which is filthy, let him be filthy still: and he that is ^r righteous, let him be righteous still: and he that is holy, let him be holy still.

12 And, behold, I come ^a quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according to his work shall be.

13 I ^a am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last.

14 Blessed ^a are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city.

15 For without ^a are ^v dogs, and sorcerers,

A. M. cir. 400.
A. D. cir. 96.
u Da. 3. 26.
e Pr. 1. 24.
Ec. 11. 3.
Mat. 23. 19.
2 Th. 3. 13.
P Pr. 1. 18.
Mat. 5. 6.
q Zep. 1. 14.
r c. 20. 12.
s c. 14. 6.
t Lc. 12. 37.
ss.
u c. 21. 8, 27.
v Phil. 3. 2.
w e. 5. 5.
x c. 21. 2, 9.
y Is. 2. 5.
z c. 21. 6.
a Pr. 30. 6.
b c. 3. 5.
c et. from the tree.
d ver. 7, 12.
e Hc. 9. 28.
f Is. 49. 9.
g 2 Th. 3. 13.

and whoremongers, and murderers, and idolaters, and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie.

16 I Jesus have sent mine angel to testify unto you these things in the churches. I am the ^w root and the offspring of David, and the bright and morning star.

17 And the Spirit and the bride ^a say, ^v Come. And let him that heareth say, Come. And ^a let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely.

18 For I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, If any man shall add ^a unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book:

19 And if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away ^b his part ^c out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book.

20 He which testifieth these things saith, Surely ^d I come quickly; Amen. ^e Even so, come, Lord Jesus.

21 The ^f grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.

addressed the apostle, now, in verse 17, and sequel, addresses himself to the churches of Asia, as in the beginning of the book; not separately, but connectedly, and through them to true Christians in every age. "Reader, (as if he should say,) you have read of the water of life: you are invited to come and drink freely of it. You have heard or read of the Spirit that spake to the churches: he speaks also to you individually, and the sum of what he saith is, Come. You have heard of the bride, and of the glories prepared for her: she does not covet to enjoy these things by herself, but joins with the Spirit of inspiration in inviting you to come. Nay, every one that heareth, and believeth these things, is should be supplied between the verses. Archbishop Newcome supplies, "saith Jesus;" Behold, (saith Jesus) Behold quickly. Ver. 8. I fell down—It is difficult to account for the apostle attempting to worship the angel a second time; but Mr. Fuller thinks it was the same incident a second time related. The reproof is the same, and does not charge him with a repetition of his fault. To this melos also Archdeacon Woodhouse.

Ver. 10. Seal not the sayings.—The contrary of what was said to him, chap. x. 4. Comp. ver. 11. Ver. 12. Behold, I come quickly.—Here again the angel speaks in the name of Christ. See also ver. 19.

warranted to invite his neighbour. And let every one who has any regard for his own soul, avoid the cup of the mother of harlots, and come to the living waters. There need be no hesitation on the score of qualification, for it is free to all who are willing to receive it.

"Know, also, that the words of this prophecy are sacred. If any man add to them, God will add to him its plagues; and if any man take away from them, God will take away from him whatever he may have expected to receive of its blessings. He who testifieth these things saith, Surely I come quickly. To this solemn testimony of Christ, the apostle adds his solemn Amen. Even so; come, Lord Jesus."—(Fuller.)

Ver. 13. I am Alpha, &c.—Compare chap. i. 8, 11; AM. 6.
Ver. 15. Without are dogs.—Dogs in the East are generally left to range the streets at large, except they are wanted to guard any particular premises, and then they are chained up outside the door they are to guard. See note on Phil. iii. 2.
Ver. 17. Water of life freely.—It is delightful to notice that the revelation of God closes with a free, full and unlimited offer of salvation, in which the Holy Spirit and the church unite, whilst all are charged to circulate the joyful news of free and full salvation. See note on Mark iii.
Ver. 19. This part out of the book of life.—Margin. "From the tree of life." So read some copies, but compare chap. ii. 5, and exposition xx. 15, &c.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF REVELATION.

[CONCERNING the Revelation, Dr. Priestley (no mean judge of Biblical subjects, whose his own peculiar creed was not concerned) has declared, "I think it impossible for any intelligent and candid person to peruse this Book without being struck, in the most forcible manner, with the peculiar dignity and sublimity of its composition, superior to that of any other writing whatever; so as to be convinced, that considering the age in which it appeared, none but a person divinely inspired could have written it." These prophecies are also written in such a manner as to satisfy us that the events announced to us were really foreseen; being described in such a manner as no person, writing without that knowledge, could have done. This requires such a mixture of clearness and obscurity, as has never yet been imitated by any forgers of prophecy whatever. Forgeries, written of course after the events, have always been too plain. It is only in the Scripture, and especially in the Book of Daniel, and this of the Revelation, that we find this happy mixture of clearness and obscurity in the accounts of future events." The obscurity of this prophecy, which has been urged against its genuineness, necessarily results from the highly figurative and symbolical language in which it is delivered, and is, in fact, a strong internal proof of its authenticity and divine original. "For it is a part of this prophecy," as Sir Isaac Newton justly remarks, "that it should not be understood before the last age of the world; and therefore it makes for the credit of the prophecy that it is not yet understood. The folly of interpreters has been, to foretell times and things by this prophecy, as if God designed to make them prophets. By this rashness, they have not only exposed themselves, but brought the prophecy also into contempt. The design of God was much otherwise. He gave this, and the prophecies of the Old Testament, not to gratify men's curiosities by enabling them to foreknow things, but that, after that they were fulfilled, they might be interpreted by the event; and his own Providence, not the interpreters, be then manifested thereby to the world. For the event of things, predicted many ages before, will then be a convincing argument that the world is governed by Providence. For as the few and obscure prophecies concerning Christ's first coming were for setting up the Christian religion, which all nations have since corrupted; so the many and clear prophecies concerning the things to be done at Christ's second coming, are not only for predicting, but also for effecting a re-conversion and re-establishment of the long-lost truth, and setting up a kingdom wherein dwells righteousness. The event will prove the Apocalypse; and this prophecy, thus proved and understood, will open the old prophecies; and all together will make known the true religion, and establish it. There is already so much of the prophecy fulfilled, that as many as will take pains in this study, may see sufficient instances of God's promise; but then the signal revolutions predicted by all the holy prophets, will at once both turn men's eyes upon considering the predictions, and plainly interpret them. Till then we must content ourselves with interpreting what hath been already fulfilled." And, as Newton observes, "if we were in possession of a complete and particular history of Asia, not only of great events, without person or place, names or dates, but of the exactest geography, geography, topography, and chronology, we might, perhaps, still be able to explain and appropriate more circumstances recorded in the Revelation, under the emblems of the East and the West, and in Arabia, Persia, Turky, and Asia; the seat of the most important revolutions with which the history of Christianity has ever been interwoven and closely connected." History is the great interpreter of prophecy. "Prophecy is, as I may say," observes Newton, "history anticipated and contracted; history is prophecy accomplished and dilated; and the prophecies of Scripture contain the fate of the most considerable nations, and the substance of the most memorable transactions in the world, from the earliest to the latest times. Daniel and St. John, with regard to those latter times, are more copious and particular than the other prophets. They exhibit a series and succession of the most important events, from the first of the four great empires to the consummation of all things. Their prophecies may really be said to be a summary of the history of the world; and the history of the world is the best comment upon their prophecies. . . and the more you know of ancient and modern times, and the farther you search into the truth of history, the more you will be satisfied of the truth of prophecy." The Revelation was designed to supply the place of that continued succession of prophets, which demonstrated the continued providence of God to the patriarchal and Jewish churches. "The majority of commentators on the Apocalypse," says Tate, "generally acted on these principles of interpretation. They discovered in this Book certain predictions of events which were fulfilled soon after they were announced; they trace in the history of later years various coincidences, which so fully agree with various parts of the Apocalypse, that they are justly entitled to consider them as the fulfilment of its prophecies; and, by thus tracing the one God of Revelation through the clouds of the dark ages, through the storms of revolutions and wars, through the mighty convulsions which, at various periods, have agitated the world, their interpretations, even when they are most contradictory, when they venture to speculate concerning the future, are founded on so much undoubted truth, that they have materially confirmed the wavering faith of thousands. Clouds and darkness must cover the brightness of the throne of God, till it shall please him to enable us to bear the brighter beams of his glory. In the mean time, we trace his footsteps in the sea of the Gentile world, his path in the murky waters of the ambitious and clashing passions of man. We rejoice to anticipate the day when the bondage of Rome, which would perpetuate the intellectual and spiritual slavery of man, shall be overthrown, and the day-spring of unted knowledge and holiness bless the world."—Bagster.

INDEX TO THE PRINCIPAL NOTES IN THE COTTAGE BIBLE.

BIR

Baptism for the dead, what, 1Co.15.29.
 Barhume, probably a mistake for Baharume, 1Ch.11.33.
 Barley, import of the word, Ex.9.31.
 Barley harvest, time of, Ru.1.22.
 Barrenness denoted a reproach, Ge.30.23.
 Baruch, some account of, Je.36.4.
 Bashan, situation and description of, De.3.24.
 —, kind of, meaning of, Am.4.1.
 Basket, import of, De.28.5.
 Basins, probably such wooden bowls as the Arabs cut out of, 2Sa.17.28.
 Bat, description of, Is.2.20.
 Bath, capacity of, Eze.45.11.
 Battement, necessity of, to Eastern houses, De.22.8.
 Bay tree, meaning of word so rendered, Ps.37.35.
 Ba'ath and Bazith, the same, Ne.7.54.
 Bielhum, description of, Ge.2.2.
 Be used for the indicative plural are, Mat.29.2.
 Be, not to, import of the phrase, Is.5.24.
 Beard, coming and dying of, in the East, 2Sa.19.21.
 —, high estimation of, in the East, 2Sa.10.4.
 —, —, Is.50.6.
 —, kissing of, in the East, 2Sa.20.9.
 —, cutting off, a mark of mourning, degradation, or slavery, 2Sa.10.4.
 Beard, not to be rounded, reason why, Le.21.4.
 —, inconvenience of, in battle, 2Sa.2.16.
 Beast, an emblem of an idolatrous and tyrannical kingdom, Da.7.3.
 Beast, number of, what, Re.13.11.
 Beasts, of the earth, meaning of, Ge.1.24.
 —, wild, ancient mode of hunting, Is.24.17.
 —, swift, import of word so rendered, Is.66.20.
 Beautiful, gate of the temple so called, account of, Ac.3.2.
 Bedan, probably a mistake for Barak, 1Sa.12.11.
 Bed, decorations of an Eastern one, Pr.7.16.
 Beds, construction of Eastern, 1Sa.19.15.
 —, raised situation of, in Eastern houses, 2Ki.1.16.
 Beds of skins, mats, and carpets, — of ivory, what, 2Ki.17.28.
 — of ivory, what, Am.6.4.
 Bed chamber, properly a repository for bed, Is.1.6.
 Beelzebub, why called Beelzebub, 2Ki.11.2.
 Beer, situation and description of, Mat.10.25.
 Beorath of Benjamin, situation of, Ju.9.21.
 Beersheba, meaning of the name, Ju.18.25.
 —, situation of, Ge.26.33.
 Bess, form dible enemies, 1Ch.4.28.
 Beeth-terah, probably the same as Ash-terah, De.1.41.
 Before, used to denote the east, Jos.21.27.
 Bedomoti, or luppopotamus, description of, 1Ki.17.7.
 Behud, used for the west, Jos.45.15.
 Behai, import of the word, Nu.13.13.
 Believed, most surely, import of the word so rendered, Lu.1.1.
 Bellorion, story of, supposed to be founded on the history of Joseph, Ge.39.14.
 Ben-zar, account of, 1Ch.18.3.
 Ben anan, meaning of, Ex.19.37.
 Benjamin, meaning of the word, Ge.35.13.
 —, borders of the tribe of, Jos.18.19.
 Ben-oni, meaning of the word, Ge.35.18.
 Berea, situation of, Ac.17.10.
 Berne, prediction respecting her marriage with Antichrist Theos, Da.11.6.
 Berne, account of, Ac.23.13.
 Berodach-baladan, the same as Mero-dach-baladan, 1Sa.3.1.
 Berotha, situation of, 2Sa.8.8.
 —, probably the same as Chon, Ex.39.13.
 Bery, description of, Ex.39.13.
 Betah, situation of, 2Sa.8.8.
 —, probably the same as Tibhath, 1Ch.18.8.
 Beton, situation of, Jos.19.25.
 Beth-anath, situation of, Jos.19.25.
 Bethany, description of, Mat.21.7.
 —, whence our Lord ascended, where situated, Ac.1.12.
 Beth-aram, or Livias, situation of, Jos.19.27.
 Beth-arbel, situation of, Ho.10.14.
 Beth-barah, situation of, Ju.7.24.
 Beth-bar, situation of, Isa.7.11.
 Bethel, import of the name, Ge.28.13.
 —, situation of, Jos.13.3.
 —, probably the same as Bethul in Simeon, situation of, 1Sa.30.27.
 Bethel, situation of, 2Sa.2.29.
 Bethesda, pool of, described, Jo.5.2.
 Beth-haccerem, situation of, Nu.3.14.
 Beth-hogla, situation of, Jos.15.6.
 Beth-horon, situation of, Jos.16.5.
 Beth-jesmoth, situation of, Nu.34.49.
 Bethlehem, description of, 2Ch.11.6.
 Beth-nimrah, probably now Nemrah, where situated, Nu.32.36.
 Beth-petot and Beth-phietel, the same in the original, Ne.11.26.
 Beth-peer, situation of, De.4.46.
 Bethphaze, situation of, Mat.21.1.
 Bethsaida, situation of, Ma.6.45.
 Bethshan, or Bisan, situation and description of, Jos.17.11.
 Beth sheem-shi, situation of, Jos.15.10.
 —, in Egypt, or Heliopolis, description of, Is.44.13.
 Beth-zur, situation of, 1Ch.2.45.
 Betreffing, mode of, De.20.7.
 Betuk, situation of, Ju.1.4.
 Bezor, the same as Ezra, De.4.43.
 Bezor, brook, description of, 1Sa.30.10.
 Binnu and Bani, the same, Eze.2.10.
 Bird, word so rendered also denotes a sparrow, Le.14.4.
 Bird, the mother, why not to be taken with her young, De.22.7.
 Bird, a ravenous, or eagle, the ensign of Cyrus, Is.61.11.

CAN

Canaan, migration of, Jos.35.26.
 Bishop, meaning of the word, Phi.1.1.
 Bithron, or Betarus, situation of, 2Sa.2.29.
 Blither, import of word so rendered, Is.34.11.
 Blasphemy, import of, Mat.12.31.
 Blind, cure of by Jesus, perfectly miraculous, Jn.9.32.
 Blindness, meaning of word thus rendered, Ge.19.11.
 Blood, possessed of life, Le.17.11.
 —, prohibited, Le.3.17.
 —, to be poured out at the bottom of the altar, Le.4.18.
 Blood, necessary for the expiation of sin, He.10.2.
 —, defile nature of, Nu.31.19.
 —, houses built and fortunes made by, visited with the Divine judgments, Hab.2.12.
 Blind, a sweat of, sometimes happens, Lu.22.44.
 Blotting out, import of, Ex.32.32.
 Blue colour, properly azure, Ex.25.4.
 Boar, wild, description of, Ps.29.13.
 Boaz, import of, 1Ki.7.21.
 —, supposed to be the same with Ib-zan, Ru.2.1.
 Body, human, wonderful texture and formation of, Ps.139.11.
 Body, —, Christians one, 1Co.10.17.
 —, and its members, a fine allegory of, 1Co.12.12.
 —, used for carcass, Lu.17.37.
 Bodens, dead, thrown to the dogs, Isa.17.44.
 —, 1Ki.21.19.
 Boil, import of word so rendered, 2Ki.20.7.
 Bores, cause, probably the black leprosy, Job.2.7.
 Bones used for the body, Ps.32.3.
 — of kings, &c. not unfrequently burnt at the sacking of cities, Je.8.1.
 Bonnets of the priests, description of, Je.8.13.
 Book of the generations, meaning of, Ge.3.1.
 Bosom, the lap, or fold, in the bosom of, Lu.6.38.
 Boring, lying in, what, Ju.13.23.
 Bottle in the smoke, illustration of, Ps.119.83.
 —, putting tears into, illustration of, Ps.56.8.
 Bottles, anciently of skin, and capable of holding, Jos.9.4.
 Bithron, why unfit to hold new wine, Mat.9.17.
 Bozith, an emblem of apostles, exangelists, and ministers, Eze.17.23.
 Bow, import of word rendered, Ge.47.31.
 —, probably the name of a song, 2Sa.1.18.
 Bow, defense of, probably a violent discussion, 2Ch.24.15.
 Bow, what, Nu.7.31.
 Bozra, situation of, Ge.36.23.
 Bracelet, meaning of, Ge.24.22.
 —, one of the insignia of royalty, 2Sa.1.10.
 —, description of, Ge.38.18.
 Branch, putting one to the nose, an idolatrous rite, Eze.5.17.
 Branch of the cedar, the highest, an emblem of Jerusalem, Eze.17.3.
 Branch, the Messiah so called, Zec.3.8.
 Brass, word rendered, properly copper, Ex.25.3.
 Brazen gates and bars, illustration of, 1Ki.13.17.
 Bread, why to be cast on the waters, Eze.47.1.
 — of men, what, Eze.21.17.
 Bread-plate, description of, Ex.25.4.
 Breaches of the priests, Ex.29.23.
 Bricks, mode of making, Ex.5.7.
 Brethren, what, Ge.46.4.
 Brother, the term, applied to a person of the same tribe, or a companion, 1Ch.6.29.
 Brunt, meaning of the word, Je.10.22.
 Buffalo, flesh of, eaten in the East, 1Ki.4.23.
 Bull, import of word so rendered, Mat.26.67.
 Bull, import of word so rendered, 1Ki.13.17.
 Bull, wild, import of word so rendered, Is.1.20.
 Bulrushes, vessels of, used by the Egyptians, Ex.23.13.
 Bundle of life, being found in, import of, Isa.25.29.
 Burning woods, a practice in unenlightened countries, Ps.82.14.
 Burial, account of, Le.1.10.
 Busket, capacity of, Mat.5.15.*Ge.40.1.
 Butler, properly a cupbearer, Je.5.25.
 Butler, probably buttermilk, —, words said to be smoother than illustrated, Ps.55.21.
 Buyers, dishonest conduct of, Pr.20.14.

CHR

Canaanites, probably infected with idolattry in the time of Abraham, Ge.24.37.
 Canaanites justly exterminated by the Israelites, Jos.6.21.
 Candle, or lamp, to light, meaning of, Ps.18.28.
 Candlestick, description of, Ex.35.11.
 Cane, sweet, account of, Je.6.20.
 Canker-worm, meaning of word so rendered, Joel.1.4.
 Canopy, origin of, 1Sa.19.13.
 Capernaum, situation of, Ma.1.21.
 Captain of the temple, who, Lu.22.4.
 Captains, import of the word so translated, Da.3.3.
 Captives, effect produced upon, when their liberty was proclaimed, illustrated, Ps.126.1.
 Carbanee, description of, Ex.28.17.
 Carcasses of detestable things, what, Je.16.18.
 Carcases, import of the word, Jos.9.4.
 Carmel, mount, in Asher, description of, 1Ki.18.19.
 —, altar, erected by Elijah upon,
 accounts of from heathen authors, 1Ki.18.30.
 Carmel in Judah, situation of, Isa.25.2.
 Carpenters, four, emblematical signification of, Zec.1.20.
 Carriage, word so rendered properly baggage, Jn.18.21.
 Casement, properly a lattice, Pr.7.6.
 Caspian, probably the Caspian mountains, Eze.8.17.
 Castle of Antonia, description of, Ac.21.34.
 Castles, import of the word so rendered, Ge.28.16.
 Caterpillars, probable meaning of word
 so rendered, 2Ch.6.28.
 Cattle, import of the word, 1Ki.18.30.
 Cauls, meaning of the word thus rendered, Is.3.18.
 Caves, used as places of retreat, Ju.6.2.
 Cedar, description of, 1Ki.4.33.
 —, used as an emblem of the royal family of David, Eze.17.3.
 Cedron, see Kidron.
 Ceilings of wood in the East, Je.22.13.
 Cenchrea, situation of, Ac.18.18.
 Chain, a prisoner bound with one to a soldier among the Romans, Ac.28.20.
 Chains, two, Roman mode of securing a prisoner with, Ac.12.7.
 Chains of gold worn round the necks of Eastern ladies, Ca.1.10.
 Chains, word so rendered denotes earrings or drops, Is.3.19.
 Chalcedony, description of, Rev.21.19.
 Chalcedon monarchy represented by a head of gold, Da.2.38.
 Chalcedon monarchy represented as a lion with eagle's wings, Da.7.4.
 Chalcedon cavalry, swiftness, courage, and ferocity of, Hab.1.8.
 Chaldee, though a dialect of the Hebrew,
 in many respects very dissimilar, Je.5.15.
 Chamber, little, or aleah, description of, 2Ki.4.10.
 Chambers, import, description of, 2Ki.19.24.
 — of God represented as built upon the waters, Ps.104.3.
 Chamberlain, meaning of word so rendered, Ro.16.23.
 Chameleon, word so rendered, the warning, 1Ki.13.9.
 Chamois, word so rendered, probably a species of goat or deer, De.14.5.
 Chapters, improper divisions of, Jos.5.15.
 Chariot, word so rendered, probably denotes a palanquin, 2Ki.19.24.
 Chariot of love, what, 2Ki.4.11.
 Chariots of iron, description of, Jud.4.13.
 —, four, emblematical meaning of, Zec.6.15.
 Charity, proper signification of, Ro.14.10.
 Chatter, import of the term, Ps.58.5.
 Cheating of sciences, possibility of, Eze.1.1.
 Chebar, river, account of, Ca.1.10.
 Checks of ladies decorated with coins in the East, 1Ch.2.18.
 Chelubai the same as Caleb, 1Sa.30.14.
 Cherubim, who they were, Ex.36.8.
 Cherubim, description of, Eze.10.14.
 —, symbolic figures, Eze.10.14.
 Chesnut tree, word so rendered, properly
 the plane tree, Ge.30.37.
 Chesuth, probably the same as Chis-luth-tabor, Je.19.18.
 Chetab, situation of, Ge.38.5.
 Child, word so rendered, properly meaning a lad, or youth, Ge.21.14.
 Child, disgraceful to fall by the hands of, Ju.8.21.
 Children, little, words so rendered to denote young men, 2Ki.2.23.
 Children, numerous, instances of, 2Ki.10.1.
 —, considered as the property of parents, and disposable, 2Ki.4.1.
 Children mean not only descendants, but inhabitants, Eze.2.3.
 Children, brags up of, what, 2Ki.10.6.
 Chislev, probably the same as Danieson of David, 1Ch.3.1.
 Chislev, habitation of, what, Je.41.17.
 Chinneroth, probably Tiberias, Jos.11.2.
 —, sea of, description of, Jos.12.3.
 Chins, now Scio, account of, Zec.7.1.
 Chislev, month of, account of, Jos.19.12.
 Chislev, probably Saturn, Am.5.26.
 Chor-ashan, probably the same as Ashan, Isa.30.30.
 Chorazin, situation and total destruction, Lu.10.13.
 Christ, genealogy of, by Matthew and Luke reconciled, Lu.3.23.36.
 Christ, how said not to be come to send peace but a sword, Mat.10.34.

INDEX TO THE PRINCIPAL NOTES IN THE COTTAGE BIBLE.

CUP	DIV	ELE
Christ fully aware of the sufferings that awaited him, Jn. 18.4.	Cup of consolation, what, Je 16.7.	Dizhab, a place near Moab, De 1.1.
Christ, false, predictions of, Mat 21.26.	— of salvation, what, Je 116.13.	Doh and Doto the same, De 11.12.
Christians, persecutions of, foretold, Mat 24.9.	— of intoxicating liquors an emblem of the judgments of God, Oh 15.	Dogs, the heathen so called by the Jews, Mat 15.26.
Caracoles, interesting nature of, among the Persians, Ez 6.1.	Cupbearer, honourable office of, Ac 13.19.	—, bodies thrown to, in the East, Ps 79.3.
Caryotides, description of, Eze 10.9.	Crucifix, design, people to destruction, supposed power of men to, Nu 23.17.	Doe's head, a proverbial expression illustrated, 2Sa 3.8.
Church, king's her nursing fathers, and queens her nursing mothers, Is 49.23.	Cush the Eremite, who, Mat 9.9.	Dominion, to exercise, meaning of word so rendered, Mat 20.25.
Cilicia, description of, Ac 15.23.	Custom, receipt of, what, Mat 23.3.	Door, import of word so rendered, Je 19.6.
Cinnamon, description of, Ex 30.23.	Cuth, situation of, 1Ch 15.15.	—, used metaphorically for entrance, occasion, or opportunity, Col 4.3.
Circumcision, first performed by Abraham, Ge 17.10.	Cyprus, description of, Ac 13.13.	Down, now Fortina, situation of, Jos 17.11.
— well as Jews, and at what age, Ge 17.25.	Cyrene, situation of, Ac 13.1.	Dorus, meaning of, 2K 6.13.
Circumcision of the heart, what, Ro 2.29.	Cyrenes, an account of his taxing, Lu 2.1.	Dove, account of, Lu 11.22.
Cistern, the right ventricle of the heart, so called, Ez 12.6.	Cyrenes, the various nations he conquered, Is 45.1.	—, rapidity of, Ps 55.6.
Cities, ancient fortifications of, 2K 19.35.	—, foretold as drying up the rivers of, Ez 1.2.	Doves, the eye compared to, Ca 5.12.
—, walked up to heaven, import of the phrase, De 1.28.	Babylon, a century before his birth, Is 41.27.	Dram, value of, 2K 6.25.
Claudia, description of, Ac 27.16.	Ceras, prediction of his victories over the Chaldeans and their allies, Is 41.25.	Dragons, why represented as snuffing in the wind, Je 14.8.
Claudius Cesar, account of, Ac 11.28.	Cerys, the nations which composed his army, Je 50.9.	Dragons used for the Egyptian people, Ps 74.13.
Cleanliness, necessity of, in camps, De 23.12.	Cyris, the amount of gold and silver taken by him, when he conquered Asia, Je 50.37.	Dram, or daric, value of, Ne 7.70.
Clear, proper meaning of word so rendered, Mat 19.5.	DABERATH, now Daboura, situation of, Jos 19.12.	Draught house, making a place one, and, 2K 10.27.
Cleopatra, prediction respecting, Lu 11.17.	Dagon, an account of, Is 17.34.	Drip, strong, account of, Le 10.9.
Cloak, a kind of gown, Lu 6.29.	Damaitha, situation of, 1K 11.24.	Drinking, various modes of, in the East, Ju 7.5.
Close, keeping one's-self, import of, 1Th 12.1.	Damasus, description of, Zec 9.1.	Dromedaries, young, meaning of word so rendered, Es 8.10.
Cloth, new, why said to put in an old garment, Mat 9.16.	—, taken by Alexander, 1K 19.15.	Drunk, but not with wine, illustration of the expression, Is 51.21.
Clothes, presentation of, a mode of honouring in the East, Ge 15.22.	—, wilderness of, where situated, 1K 19.15.	Duller, import of word so rendered, Da 13.15.
Clothes, accumulation of, by great men, Joh 12.15.	Demon, properly means to condemn, Ro 14.15.	Dumb, probable situation of, Is 21.11.
Clouds, the strength of God said to be in, Ps 68.24.	Demonstration, properly judgment or punishment, 1Co 11.29.	Dumb, word so rendered properly means silent, Lu 1.20.
Clovel, meaning of the word, Jos 4.3.	Dm, meaning of the name, Ge 30.6.	Dumb person really possessed with a demon, Mat 9.33.
Cnidus, situation of, Ac 27.7.	—, Lash, or Leshem, situation of, Ju 18.7.	Dust, laying of, customary in the East, before persons of distinction, 2Sa 16.13.
Coal, metaphorically used for a man and his descendants, 2Sa 14.7.	Dura and Dara, the same, 1Th 2.6.	Dust, casting of, in the air, import of the action, 1Sa 16.23.
Coals of fire, why doing acts of kindness to an enemy is compared to heaping them on his head, Pr 25.22.	Darius Hystaspes, account of, Da 5.21, 6.1.	Dwelling deep, meaning of, Je 49.8.
Coat, properly a tunic, or under garment, Pr 31.29.	Darius, a metaphor for affection, or calamity, Ps 18.25.	EAGLE, description of, Le 11.13.
— of many colours, description of, Ge 37.3.	Darkness and night worshipped by the Egyptians, Ex 10.21.	—, longevity and vigour of, Ps 103.5.
Coats of the priests, description of, Le 13.13.	Darkness at the crucifixion, supernatural, Mat 27.35.	—, its quick sight, Joh 9.29.
Cockle, import of word so rendered, Joh 31.40.	Darnak, the same as Damascus, Ps 76.3.	—, rapidity of, Is 49.19.
Cod, the ceremony of an acknowledgment of subjection to a king, Mat 22.21.	Daughters frequently given in marriage to slaves by persons in the East, when they have no sons, 1Ch 2.35.	—, an emblem of Nebuchadnezzar, Eze 17.2.
College, probable meaning of the word so rendered, 2Ch 34.22.	Daughters, inheritance of, Nu 27.2.	Eagles, emblems of the Roman armies, Lu 17.37.
Coney, or shaphan, account of, Le 11.5.	—, though termed the seventh, 1Ch 15.13.	Ear, why said to be planted, Ps 94.9.
—, wisdom of, Ps 30.26.	David, probable time of the year when he was crowned, 1Ch 12.40.	—, bored with an awl, import of, Ex 21.6.
Conscience, used for consciousness, He 10.2.	David, disinterested and gallant conduct of, 1Sa 23.2.	Ear-ring, import of, 2Co 1.22.
Constantine, prediction concerning, Da 11.2.	David, noble conduct of, in choosing the pestilence, 1Ch 21.13.	Ear-ring, word so rendered, properly a nose ring, and still worn in the East, Je 42.22.
Constantine, prediction of his accession to the throne, and of the changes it introduced, Re 12.7.	David, review of his life and character, 1Ch 29.8.	Ear-rings, meaning of word rendered, 1.3.20.
Consider of familiar spirits, meaning of, De 18.9.	— the Messiah so called, Je 40.9.	—, immense stools of, Ju 8.28.
Contention, meaning of the word so rendered, 1Th 2.2.	David, city of, stars of, what, Je 12.37.	Earth, originally in a fluid state, 2Pe 3.5.
Conversion, import of the word, Jos 8.35.	— tower of, the book compared to, Ca 14.	—, foundations of, what, Ps 42.7.
Conversation, meaning of, Ac 21.1.	Day, division into hours by the Jews, Mat 20.9.	—, how said to be visited by God, Ps 64.2.
Cows, account of, Ex 21.1.	—, extreme heat of, in the East, Joh 3.30.	—, used for the land of Judea, Ps 37.9.
Copper, fine, as precious as gold, what, 2Ch 27.5.	Days, fortunate and unfortunate ones marked in the calendar, Joh 3.3.	Earthen vessels given as presents in the East, 2Sa 17.29.
Cor, capacity of, Lu 16.5.	Day, fall of, illustration of the expression, 2Ch 21.15.	East country, what, Ge 25.6.
Coral, description of, Joh 24.18.	Dayman, meaning of the word, Joh 9.34.	—, wind, or Simoom, account of, Je 41.23.
Corban, meaning of, Ma 7.11.	Deacon, import of the word, Ph 1.1.	Easter, properly the Passover, Ac 12.4.
Corinth, description of, Ac 18.1.	Dead men, the gods of the heathen such, 1Pe 1.18.	Easter dress, description of, Ju 14.12.
Corinthian brass, what, Ez 8.27.	Deal, meaning of the word, Ex 29.40.	Eat, to a book, import of, Eze 3.1.
Corinthians, second Epistle to, genuine, 2Co 8.7.	Death, the partition so called, Je 15.2.	Eating bread always at a royal table, meaning of, 2Sa 9.13.
Corruption, probably the cataract, He 14.17.	—, taken between one and, illustration of the phrase, 1Sa 20.3.	Ebal, mount, description of, De 10.29.
—, word so rendered, properly the pelican, 1.34.11.	Death, shadow of, illustration of, Joh 10.22.	Ebal, import, excellent character of, Je 38.12.
Corn prepared by God, Ps 65.9.	—, to see, meaning of, 1.2.28.	Ebasaph and Asaph the same, 1Ch 26.1.
— with seven ears on one stalk, Ge 41.5.	Debar, situation of, Jos 11.38.	Ebathani, situation of, Nu 33.34.
Corn, a certain quantity of, allowed to soldiers in the East, 2Sa 4.42.	Debar, account of, 1.2.25.	Ebatani, description of, Eze 6.2.
Corn, plucking ears of, on the sabbath, why found fault with by the Pharisees, Mat 12.1.	Debar, situation of, Eze 27.17.	Eden, import of the word, Ge 2.10.
Craet, the proper name of, in Hebrew, 1Ch 15.20.	Debar, situation of, 1.2.25.	—, garden of, where situated, Ge 2.10.
Cornet, description of, Da 3.5.	Debar, situation of, 1.2.25.	—, country of, where situated, Am 1.5.
—, meaning of word so rendered, Da 3.5.	Debar, situation of, 1.2.25.	Edom, import of the name, Ge 25.39.
Corruption, mount of, the same as the mount of Olives, 2K 13.13.	Debar, situation of, 1.2.25.	—, land of, where situated, Ge 32.3.
Council, the Sanhedrim, or Senate of the Jewish nation, Mat 5.22.	Debar, situation of, 1.2.25.	—, ancient fertility of, Ge 27.39.
Councillors, or Sanhedrims, what, Mat 13.9.	Debar, situation of, 1.2.25.	—, magnificent and rocky, Oh 5.
Councillors, word so rendered, illustrated, Da 3.3.	Debar, situation of, 1.2.25.	—, salvation of, by the Israelites, Eze 35.9.
Councillors, seven, why employed by the kings of Persia, Eze 7.11.	Debar, situation of, 1.2.25.	—, a name applied to the enemies of the church, Is 63.3.
Coup de soleil, occurrence of, in Palestine, 2K 4.19.	Debar, situation of, 1.2.25.	Eden, now Dara, situation of, De 3.1.
Covenant, ancient ceremony of entering into, De 29.12.	Debar, situation of, 1.2.25.	Eglah, probably the same as Michal, 1Ch 3.3.
—, to be in, with death, or any thing, illustrated, Is 28.15.	Debar, situation of, 1.2.25.	Eglam, situation of, Is 15.9.
Covering of bear's skin for the tabernacle, account of, Nu 4.6.	Debar, situation of, 1.2.25.	Egypt, description of, Ge 41.31.
Coverings of the tabernacle, description of, Ex 36.19.	Debar, situation of, 1.2.25.	—, fertility of, Ge 41.31.
Cretans, but, his insatiableness, Joh 3.15.	Debar, situation of, 1.2.25.	—, the anarchy which prevailed in it after the death of Tiriakali, foretold, Is 19.3.
Cracknels, import of word so rendered, 1K 11.13.	Debar, situation of, 1.2.25.	Egypt, its conquest by Nebuchadnezzar, the Persian kings, and Alexander the Great, foretold, Is 19.4.
Creeper, the proper name of, in Hebrew, Ge 1.21.	Debar, situation of, 1.2.25.	—, the propagation of the knowledge of the true God in, foretold, Is 19.19.
Crete, description of, Ac 27.7.	Debar, situation of, 1.2.25.	—, Egypt, the propagation of the knowledge of the true God in, foretold, Is 19.19.
Crowns, extraordinary size and weight of some ancient ones, 2Sa 12.30.	Debar, situation of, 1.2.25.	—, Egypt, the propagation of the knowledge of the true God in, foretold, Is 19.19.
Crucifix, description of, Jn 19.6.	Debar, situation of, 1.2.25.	—, Egypt, the propagation of the knowledge of the true God in, foretold, Is 19.19.
Crystal, description of, Ex 28.17.	Debar, situation of, 1.2.25.	—, Egypt, the propagation of the knowledge of the true God in, foretold, Is 19.19.
Cube, word so rendered, probably glass, Joh 28.17.	Debar, situation of, 1.2.25.	—, Egypt, the propagation of the knowledge of the true God in, foretold, Is 19.19.
Cubit, length of, Eze 40.10.	Debar, situation of, 1.2.25.	—, Egypt, the propagation of the knowledge of the true God in, foretold, Is 19.19.
—, used to signify any short duration, Mat 6.27.	Debar, situation of, 1.2.25.	—, Egypt, the propagation of the knowledge of the true God in, foretold, Is 19.19.
Cuckoo, probably the sea-gull, De 14.15.	Debar, situation of, 1.2.25.	—, Egypt, the propagation of the knowledge of the true God in, foretold, Is 19.19.
Cucumber, description of, Mat 23.23.	Debar, situation of, 1.2.25.	—, Egypt, the propagation of the knowledge of the true God in, foretold, Is 19.19.
Cum, description of, Ge 44.5.	Debar, situation of, 1.2.25.	—, Egypt, the propagation of the knowledge of the true God in, foretold, Is 19.19.
Cup used for divination, Ps 116.13.	Debar, situation of, 1.2.25.	—, Egypt, the propagation of the knowledge of the true God in, foretold, Is 19.19.
— of blessing, what, Ps 116.13.	Debar, situation of, 1.2.25.	—, Egypt, the propagation of the knowledge of the true God in, foretold, Is 19.19.

INDEX TO THE PRINCIPAL NOTES IN THE COTTAGE BIBLE.

FEE		GAT		GRA
Elbeth-el, meaning of the word,	Ge. 35.7.	Felix, Claudius, account of,	Ac 23.24; 24.2.	Gath, situation of,	Isa. 21.10.
Elect Lady, name of,	Ro. 11.5.	Femles employed in drawing water and collecting fuel, in the East,	Jos 9.25.	Gath, situation of,	Jos. 21.24.
Electron put for the elect,	Ge. 33.20.	Perrot, word rendered, a spotted lizard,	Le 11.30.	Gaulonites, now Tholan, account of,	De 1.42.
El-eloh-Israel, meaning of,	Job 27.7.	Festas, Porcius, account of,	Ac 21.27.	Gaza, situation and account of,	Ju 16.1.
Elephantiasis, account of,	1Ch 14.7.	Field, treasures of corn in, what,	Ma 11.13.	— which is desert, meaning of,	Ac 2.25.
Elhad, probably written Deelada by mistake,	Ex 15.4.	Fig tree, description of,	Le 3.24.	Geba, situation of,	Is. 10.28.
Eliver, import of the name,	1Ch 27.18.	Figs, various crops of,	Je 24.2.	Gebai, a part of Sair, account of,	Ps 83.7.
Elthio and Elthab, the same,	1Ki 17.5.	— the early and winter, account of,	Je 24.2.	— of Byblos, situation and description of,	Jos 13.5.
Elthah really fed by ravens,	Ex 15.27.	— pointer of, beneficial effects of,	2Ki 20.9.	Gedor, situation of,	1Ch 4.18.
Elum, situation of,	1Ch 14.7.	Filled with a person, meaning of,	Ro 15.24.	Gedoth, meaning and situation of,	Jos 18.17.
Elmehet and Elmehet, the same,	1Ch 14.7.	Fining pool, Jerusalem represented as,	Eze 22.19.	Genealogies, defence in, probably occasioned by the same person having different names,	1Ch 4.24.
Elsham, probably Elsh,	1Ch 14.5.	Fingers, instances of persons having six on each hand, and six toes on each foot,	1Ch 20.6.	Generations, import of the word,	Ge 22.2.
Elsham, probably a mistake for Elsham,	Is 37.2.	Fire, sacred, imitations of,	Le 6.13; 9.24.	— a usual mode of reckoning,	Ge 15.16.
Elissar, probably the same as Telassar,	Is 37.2.	— the heathen priests boasted that it had no power over them,	Da 3.27.	Genesaret, land of, description of,	Mat 14.34.
Embalming, description of,	Ge 50.13.	Fire, tongue of, a fine metaphor for a flame,	Is 5.24.	Genesaret, lake of, description of,	Jos 12.3.
Emerald, description of,	Ex 24.15.	Fire, the word of God compared to,	Je 23.29.	Geography of the Scriptures, difficulties attending,	Jos 15.1; 17.7.
Emnass, situation of,	Le 24.13.	Fire, and water worshipped by the Egyptians,	Ex 9.18.	Gergesenes, who,	Ge 20.1.
Emnass, import of the term,	De 18.10.	Permanet, import of,	Ps 150.1.	Gergesenes, import of,	De 11.29.
Emnass, meaning of word rendered,	Ps 7.11.	— displays the power of God,	Ps 150.1.	Gershon, meaning of the name,	Ex 2.22; 18.3.
Endor, description of,	1Sa 28.7.	First-born, slaying of the, perfectly equitable,	Ex 12.29.	— and Gershon the same,	1Ch 23.6.
Enegadi, situation of,	Is 36.2.	First-born, redemption of,	Is 28.25.	Geshler of Syria, situation of,	2Sa 13.38.
Ennemes to shoot arrows and stones, what,	2Ch 26.15.	First-fruits, illustration of the law of,	Le 23.10.	Gethsemane, description of,	Mat 26.36.
En-hakkore, meaning of,	Ec 2.23; 6.2.	Fish very prolific,	Ex 48.16.	Gezer, where situated,	Jos 10.33; 12.12.
En-mishpat, or Kedesh, situation of,	Ge 14.7.	— an emblem of converts,	Eze 47.10.	Gezrites, or Gerzites, habitation of,	Isa 27.8.
En-Rimmon of Judah, situation of,	Ne 11.29.	Fishers, Apostles and preachers so termed,	Eze 47.10.	Ghanis, account of some,	Isa 17.4.
En-rose, situation of,	Jos 15.7.	Fitches, import of word so rendered,	Is 28.25.	— Argob, the land of, tradition respecting,	De 3.35.
En-shemesh, import of,	Jos 15.7.	Flax, description of,	Is 28.25.	Gibbar and Gibon the same,	De 7.23.
— situation of,	Eze 45.11.	Flea, metaphor taken from one,	Isa 26.30.	Gibbethon, situation of,	Jos 21.23.
Ephai, captivity of,	1Ch 11.13.	Flesh of peace-offerings not to be left,	Le 7.15.	Gibea in the tribe of Judah,	1Ch 2.49.
Ephes-dammam and Pas-dammim, the same,	1Ch 11.13.	Flies, swarms of, import of word rendered,	Ex 8.21.	Gibeai, situation of,	Ju 19.12.
Ephesus, description of,	Ac 19.1.	Flies have often proved plagues,	Ex 8.21.	— of Saul, situation of,	Is 10.28.
Epbod, description of,	Ex 29.4.	Flies have often proved plagues,	Ex 8.21.	Gibeah, the inhabitants of Gebai or Byblos,	Jos 10.2.
Ephraim, import of the name,	Ge 41.52.	Flies have often proved plagues,	Ex 8.21.	Gideon, known by the name of Jerubbaal, or Jeromabai, among heathen writers,	Jos 13.5.
— luminosity and excellent conduct of the head of,	2Ch 25.9.	Flocks, great care requisite in driving,	Ex 10.1.	Gier-eagle, a species of vulture,	De 14.17.
Ephraim, situation of,	Ju 11.54.	Flute, meaning of word so rendered,	Da 3.5.	Gifts or offerings, include sacrifices,	He 8.4.
— word of, where situated,	2Sa 18.6.	Fly, dog, description of,	Ps 105.31.	Gihon, the Arxas, now Arxas,	Ge 2.13.
— situation of,	2Ch 13.19.	Folly, a little furnishes the reputation,	Ec 10.1.	— fountain of, situation and description of,	1Ki 1.45.
Eponeusas, some account of,	Ac 17.18.	Food, the providing of, for various animals, a proof of the wisdom, providence, and goodness of God,	Ps 135.25.	Gibbon, mount, situation of,	Isa 31.1.
Eschadai, account of,	Is 37.38.	Food of heathen first offered to their idols,	Da 1.8.	Gilead, the same as Galed,	Ge 31.43.
Esau, import of the word,	Ge 25.25.	Food, how said to eat his own flesh,	He 4.15.	Gilgal, why so called,	Ge 31.46.
— in temporal condition, equal to his brother,	Ge 27.39.	Fool, irritation of land by,	Ec 1.3.	— situation of,	Jos 14.19.
Esol, meaning of,	Ge 26.20.	Food, how said to eat his own flesh,	He 4.15.	— house of, situation of,	Ne 12.29.
Eschol, meaning of the name,	Ne 13.21.	Forebids, writings worn on,	Ex 13.9.	Ginneth, a mistake for Ginnethon,	Ne 12.4.
Eschol, situation of,	Jos 15.33.	Foretoldness, land of, what,	Ps 88.12.	Girdle, description of,	Ex 29.29.
Eshtemo, situation of,	Jos 20.11.	Forbearing, the execrable morality of the Jews on this point,	Mat 5.33.	— curious, description of,	Ex 29.25.
Etham, situation of,	1Ch 4.32.	Fountain, the left ventricle of the heart so called,	Ex 19.6.	Girdle, how said to be beyond Jordan,	Ps 18.32.
Etham, situation of,	Ne 33.8.	Fountains of the great deep, what,	Ec 12.6.	Gittith, meaning of,	Ps 8.7.
Ethna, probably the same as Jeduthan,	1Ch 25.1.	— stopping up of, when an enemy makes a land, a practice in the East,	2Ch 32.4.	Gittith, meaning of,	Ps 8.7.
Ether or Etham, situation of,	1Ch 4.32.	Fowl, meaning of the word,	Ge 1.20.	Glass, invention of,	De 33.19.
Ethna, or Cush, three countries so called,	Is 37.9.	— of every wing, a metaphor for all the and winged of the earth,	Ex 17.23.	Glean, import of the term,	Ru 2.15.
Ethiopia, or Cush, the country of the Cush,	Ge 12.8.	Foxes, or rather polecats, account of,	Ju 15.4.	Gleaning, right of, not recognised by law,	Ru 2.15.
Ethiopia, proper, description of,	Ge 12.8.	Foxes, how said to be compared to,	Ex 13.4.	Glede, import of the word so rendered,	De 14.13.
Eumach, signification of,	Ge 37.36.	Fray, signification of,	Zec 1.21.	Glor, the word used for wealth,	Ge 31.1.
Eumach, black, bad character of, in the East,	Je 33.12.	Friend, how the countenance of one is sharpened by another,	Pr 27.17.	Goad, description of,	Ju 3.31.
Euryclia, wind, what,	Ac 27.14.	Friend, why one who blest with a loud voice is to be suspected,	Pr 27.14.	Goad, wild, account of,	De 14.5.
Evenings, two, among the Hebrews,	Ex 12.6.	Friend, properly a companion,	Mat 26.50.	— wild, description of the female,	Ps 5.9.
Evil-merodach, account of,	1Ki 25.27.	Fringes, form and use of,	Mat 15.38.	Goats, hair, of very fine in the East,	Ge 27.16.
Exercitation upon the rehalders of cities,	Jos 6.26.	Frog, import of the word,	Ex 8.2.	— description of,	Ex 26.7.
Exercitation, import of word so rendered,	Ma 6.27.	Frogs have sometimes proved great plagues,	Ex 8.6.	God, import of the word Elohim so rendered,	De 5.9.
Exodent, import of word so rendered,	1Co 6.12.	Fruit, the term used for children, in the numbers of the captives who returned,	Eze 17.23.	God, none like him,	Ps 71.1.
Ezer and Ezer, the same in the original,	2Ch 1.38.	Fruit, an emblem of converts,	Le 2.7.	— Jesus Christ so called,	2Pe 1.1.
Ezion-gaber, situation of,	Ne 23.25.	Frying pan, description of,	Le 2.7.	— frequently said to do what he only permits,	Ez 14.9.
Ezra, amiable spirit of,	Eze 7.27.	Fruit trees, to be spared in a siege,	Le 20.19.	God, supposed danger from the appearance of,	Ex 33.20.
— and Nehemiah, difference between, in the numbers of the captives who returned,	Eze 7.27.	Furish, origin and import of,	Je 16.7.	God, appearance of, gave rise to the mythological representations of the Greeks and Romans,	Ge 18.21.
FACE, covering of, a token of reverence,	Ki 19.13.	Furniture, camel's, description of,	Ge 31.34.	God, spoken of in the language of men, Ge 18.22.	Ge 18.22.
— sign of condemnation,	Ex 7.8.	GARA, or Geba, where situated,	Jos 18.24.	— how said to minister seed to the sower,	2Co 9.15.
Faces, differences of, wonderful,	Ex 27.22.	Gad, import of the name,	Ge 30.11.	God, as an antecedent, frequently understood,	Ge 9.13.
Fair havens, situation of,	Ac 27.8.	— inheritance of the tribe of,	Ne 30.11.	Gad, the term, frequently used to denote the superlative,	2Sa 9.3.
Faith, as a grain of mustard seed, what,	Mat 17.20.	— the name of an idol, probably means good fortune,	Le 65.11.	God, we ought to obey him, rather than men, illustrated,	Ac 5.29.
— growing of, illustrated,	2Th 1.3.	Gadara, situation and description of,	Ma 8.28.	God forbid, this phrase not justified by the original,	Ro 3.31.
Fallow deer, word so rendered probably denotes the buffalo,	1Ki 1.22.	Gadibam, description of,	Ex 30.34.	God, daughter of a strange, what,	Mat 2.21.
Familial spirit, one who has, import of,	1Sa 28.7.	Galed, import of the name,	Ge 31.47.	Gods, monuments of deliverance offered to,	Isa 6.5.
Families carried to war in the East,	2Sa 15.22.	Galebans, the peculiar dialect of,	Ma 14.70.	Gods, heathen, degrading notions respecting,	1Ki 18.27.
Family, a large, considered a blessing,	Ex 23.10.	Gallies, description of,	Ma 13.1.	— traditions respecting,	Isa 17.50.
Famous, used for notorious,	Eze 23.10.	Gallies, Jewish traditions that the Messiah should be first manifested there,	Lu 4.44.	Gog and Magog, probable meaning of the prophecy respecting,	Ez 38.16, &c. XXXIX.
Farthing, meaning of the word,	Ma 12.42.	Gall, meaning of word so rendered,	Ps 69.21.	Gog and Magog mentioned by St. John different from those mentioned by Ezekiel,	Re 20.8.
— value of word so rendered,	Mat 10.29.	Gall, situation of,	1Sa 25.43.	Golan, where situated,	De 4.43.
Fat prohibited,	Le 3.17.	Gall, account of,	Ac 18.12.	Golden dust put in the hair by the Jews,	2Sa 14.27.
— heart to be, illustration of the expression,	Ps 119.70.	Gallies, allusions to the Isthmian and Olympic,	2Co 10.13.	Golden bowl, the brain so called,	Ec 12.6.
Father, the term frequently used to denote an ancestor,	Da 5.12.	Gardens, mode of irrigating,	Ge 23.10.	Golden candlestick, imitations of,	Ex 37.17.
Father, applied to the founder or prince of a city or people,	2Ch 2.42.	Gargens, spreading of, before or under persons, illustration of,	2Ki 9.18.	Golnath, extraordinary size of,	Isa 17.50.
Father sometimes reckoned with his sons,	1Ch 3.22; 7.3.	Gates, sitting in, an ancient Eastern custom,	2Sa 19.13.	— traditions respecting,	Isa 17.50.
Father and mother, to be without, meaning of,	He 7.3.	Gate, sitting in, illustration of,	Ex 3.2.	Goldsmiths, import of word so rendered,	Ne 3.32.
Fathers, their authority over their children,	Ja 1.12.	— exalting of, in the East, danger of,	Pr 17.19.	Goodly person, import of,	Ge 39.6.
Fear, or terror, a line strung with feathers used to frighten beasts into the pit,	Is 21.17.	— east, or sun, where situated,	Je 19.6.	Gushan, country of, where situated,	Ge 45.10.
Feast of Trumpets, design of,	Le 23.24.	— of the fountain, where situated,	Ne 2.14.	— city of, situation of,	Ge 46.25.
— tabernacles, account of,	Le 23.24.	— of the valley, situation of,	2Ch 25.15.	Go to, import of the phrase,	Ge 11.7.
Feathers used to denote subjects,	Eze 17.3.	Gates, the place for the transaction of public business,	Ge 23.10.	Gourd, probable meaning of the word so rendered,	Jos 4.6.
Feet, dressing of, customary in the East,	2Sa 19.24.	Gates, courts of judicature held in, — used as markets in the East,	2Ki 17.1.	Gourds, wild, or colocynth, description of,	2Ki 4.39.
Feet, having washed, an excuse for not rising from bed, in the East,	Ca. 5.3.	Gates, not open in the East after sunrise, — nor before sunset,	Ne 7.3.	Govan, import of the word,	Ge 42.6.
		Gates of the tents of the Lord, meaning of,	2Ch 31.2.	Gozan, river, where situated,	2Ki 18.11.

INDEX TO THE PRINCIPAL NOTES IN THE COTTAGE BIBLE.

MOS		OAK		PER
Mos, a, situation of,	No 11.18.	Mosaic laws, uncertainty of,	Le 19.9	Oath, mode of taking, by placing the	Ge 21.2
Mos, a, probably, Shem,	Ge 14.18.	Moses, meaning of the name,	Ex 2.10.	hand under the thigh, origin of,	Ge 21.2
Mos, a, or Malta, description of,	Ac 25.1.	—, extraordinary beauty of,	Ex 11.23.	Oath, how understood by the ancients,	Ge 21.25.
Mos, a, or Malta, account of,	Je 46.19.	—, life of, distinguished into three remarkable periods,	De 31.2.	Obed, meaning of the name,	Ru 4.7.
Mos, a, situated by the Egyptians,	Ex 9.8.	Mosquito nets used in the East,	1Sa 19.13.	Obed, situation of,	De 21.11.
—, strong, is so called,	Ec 12.3.	Mos, meaning of word so rendered,	Mat 7.3.	Obelisk, or obelisk, of the, import of,	De 15.10.
—, and women, figures of, cities so represented,	Da 2.31.	Mother, reproach of one, galling nature of,	1Sa 20.30.	Obelisk, proper meaning of word rendered,	Ph 2.17.
Mos, a, probably a name for the moon,	1.63.11.	Mountains, shadow of, like men,	Je 9.36.	Offering, import of the term,	Ex 25.6.
Mos, a, necessity of in Egypt,	1.18.2.	—, used for idolatrous worship,	De 12.13.	Others of the Israelites in Egypt,	Je 1.10.
Mos, a, a city of, Babylon so called,	Jos 17.18.	—, removing, meaning of,	Ma 11.23.	—, among the Israelites,	Je 1.10.
Mos, a, some account of,	Ac 14.12.	—, and bulls breaking forth into singing, illustrated,	Is 55.12.	Oil, said to be pernicious to a naked	Ps 109.18.
Mos, a, the god of highways,	1.26.4.	Mounds used to plant engines on in sieges,	2Sa 20.15.	Oil olive, pure beaten, description of,	Ex 27.20.
Mos, a, meaning of the name,	Ex 17.7.	—, description of,	Je 32.24.	Old tree, what,	Is 41.19.
Mos, a, baladan, account of,	1.39.1.	Mourning, signs of,	Je 41.5.	Old age, infirmities of, exemplified in the	2Sa 19.37.
Mos, a, waters of, description of,	Je 11.5.	—, various modes of weeping,	Jos 7.6.	—, rise of the good old Euzarai,	2Sa 19.37.
Mos, a, probably the Moschi, Is 66.19.	Ec 32.26.	—, rending clothes, &c. signs of,	1Sa 4.11.	Oliver, description of,	Je 3.8.
—, situation of,	Je 3.2.	—, instances of, lamentation,	De 14.1.	Oliver, mount, description of,	2Sa 15.30.
Messenger of the covenant, a name of the Moschi,	Mal 3.1.	—, women employed in the East,	Je 9.17.	One, capacity of,	De 27.16.
Messes proportioned to the rank of the guests,	Ge 43.34.	Mourning among the Egyptians, &c.,	Ex 12.30.	Omission, instance of, in the Hebrew	Ge 2.24.
Mes, a, pre-existence of, believed by the Jews,	Je 8.58.	Mourning, extensive meaning of the word,	Le 11.29.	—, of, or Helopolis, description of,	Je 41.13.
Mes, a, the miraculous conception of, foretold,	Je 31.23.	Movings, king's, &c.,	Am 7.1.	—, meaning of the name,	Ph 1.1.
Mes, a, to be pierced by the Jews,	Zec 12.10.	Mu, a, nothing of, &c.,	2Ki 3.15.	—, situation of,	1.18.12.
—, the consequences of the advent of,	Mal 3.5.	Mu, a, daughters of, the voice and ear so called,	Ec 12.4.	—, description of,	Ge 2.12.
Mes, a, took our infirmities, &c., at the right hand of God,	Mat 18.17.	Musical instrument, three strings, what the word so rendered,	1Sa 15.6.	—, stones, word so rendered, probably denotes a kind of marble, called Onyx-stones,	1Ch 29.2.
Mes, a, kingdom of, represented by a stone cut out without hands,	Da 2.34.	Mus, import of word so rendered,	2Sa 5.23.	—, Open a book, properly to unroll,	Le 4.17.
Mes, a, expected by the Jews to give them bread from heaven,	Je 6.1.	Mus, description of,	Ma 4.31.	—, Ophel, a tower or fort in the city wall,	2Ch 27.3.
Mes, a, import of,	2Sa 8.1.	Mus, situation of,	Ps 9.7.	—, Ophir, where situated,	2Ch 8.18.
Mes, a, Miam, and Miam, the same,	Ne 10.7.	Mus, the highest number known in Greek arithmetic notation,	Ex 13.24.	—, Ophir, or Gophna, situation of,	Je 18.24.
Mes, a, and Michah, the same in the original,	1Ch 24.21.	Mus, description of,	Ex 30.23.	—, Ophir, situation of,	Jos 18.23.
Mes, a, accounts of devastations by,	1Sa 6.5.	Mus, meaning of word so rendered,	Ge 37.25.	—, Oracle in the temple, what,	1Ki 16.16.
Mes, a, called by abbreviation, Michah,	2Ch 34.20.	Mus, description of,	Ac 16.7.	—, Oracles, heathen, ambiguous answers of,	1Ki 22.6, 15.
Mes, a, and Michah, the same,	1Sa 13.2.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 11.29.	—, Oreb, rock, situation of,	Je 7.25.
Mes, a, distance from,	1Sa 14.31.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Ge 30.8.	—, Organ, a kind of pipe,	Ge 41.21.
Mes, a, situation of,	Je 17.7.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Oryx, word so rendered, the black	Le 11.13.
Mes, a, situated on the coast of the Red sea,	Ex 4.19.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Ossuary, account of,	Le 11.13.
Mes, a, east of the Dead sea,	Ex 14.18.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Ostroch, early instance of,	Ge 16.16.
Mes, a, signification and situation of,	Je 8.14.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Ostroch, description of,	Le 16.3.
Mes, a, or Magedon, situation of,	Je 8.14.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Ovens, properly sockets,	Ex 39.6.
Mes, a, situation of,	Je 8.14.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Owen, eastern, description of,	Le 2.4.
Mes, a, instances of fine ones,	2Sa 10.12.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Owl, meaning of word so rendered,	1Sa 34.11.
Mes, a, what,	Le 4.9.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Owl, word so rendered properly	Jos 30.19.
Mes, a, import of word so rendered,	1Ki 9.15.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Ox, wild, probably the oryx,	De 14.5.
Mes, a, description of,	Mat 21.41.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Oxen, round the mountain sea, probably a mistake for knops,	2Ch 4.3.
Mes, a, description and necessity of,	De 24.6.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, PALACES, eastern, description of,	Je 15.27.
Mes, a, the absence of the sound of, a sign of desolation,	Je 25.10.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Palm tree, import of word so rendered,	Jos 14.3.
Mes, a, punishment of criminals by drowning with one round the neck,	Mat 18.13.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pain tree, description of,	1Ki 6.29.
Mes, a, weight and value of,	Je 25.24.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Palmyra, description of,	Ps 92.12.
Mes, a, the Bedouin Arabs,	1.14.21.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pamphylia, description of,	Ac 15.8.
Mes, a, the same as Miam,	1.14.21.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
Mes, a, properly a servant at table,	Je 31.27.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
Mes, a, the lesser Armenia,	Je 31.27.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
Mes, a, situation of,	Je 31.27.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
Mes, a, why commended,	Ec 8.15.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
Mes, a, places, emblematic meaning of,	Ec 47.12.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
Mes, a, account of,	Mat 15.2.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
Mes, a, or evil, devisers of, themselves punished,	Je 7.9.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
Mes, a, situation of,	Je 19.26.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
Mes, a, Mizpah, the same,	Ec 2.22.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
Mes, a, meaning and value of,	Ma 12.4.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
Mes, a, description of,	Je 29.6.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
Mes, a, situation of,	Le 19.19.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
Mes, a, of word so rendered, Ma,	Ge 31.40.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
Mes, a, several places of this name,	2Ki 25.23.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
Mes, a, of Benjamin, situation of,	Jos 18.26.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
—, of Gilead, situation of,	Je 11.11.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
Mes, a, some account of,	Ac 21.16.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
Mes, a, import of the name,	Ge 29.37.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
—, judgment upon,	Ec 38.44.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
—, destruction of,	Je 48.47.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
—, restoration of, foretold,	Ne 4.5.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
Mes, a, and Miam, the same,	Re 9.4.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
Mes, a, prediction of his rise, Mohammedanism, prediction concerning	Da 12.11.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
Mes, a, situation of,	Jos 15.26.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
Mes, a, word rendered, the Chamelon, —, description of,	Le 11.30.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
Mes, a, the sun,	Le 12.31.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
—, an account of,	Le 12.32.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
—, passing through the fire to,	Le 12.31.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
Mes, a, despotic powers of eastern,	1Sa 8.13.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
Mes, a, weighed in the East,	Ge 23.15.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
—, how said to answer all things,	Ec 5.10.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
—, unsatisfying nature of,	Ec 5.10.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
—, meaning of word so rendered, Ma,	Ge 31.40.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
Month, fourth, when it commenced,	Je 39.2.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
—, fifth, when it commenced,	Je 39.1.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
—, seventh, when it commenced,	Je 39.1.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
—, tenth, when it commenced,	Je 39.1.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
Month, time measured by,	Ps 89.37.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
—, light of, how caused, and how it may be said to rule the night,	Ps 136.9.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
Month, an emblem of a queen, or some state less than a kingdom,	Eze 32.7.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
Mus, a, see Naph and Memphis.	Ps 65.9.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
Mus, a, and evening made to rejoice by God,	Na 33.30.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.
Mus, a, situation of,	Na 33.30.	Mus, meaning of the name,	Lu 2.13.	—, Pame, origin of the word, and instances of persons seized with,	1Ki 20.20.

INDEX TO THE PRINCIPAL NOTES IN THE COTTAGE BIBLE.

PRO

Peter's churches gave their wives cities and provinces for supplying articles of dress,		Es 2:18.
Penda and Penda, the same,		Ne 7:37.
Peter's denial, reconciliation of the apparent discrepancies of the Evangelists in their accounts of,		Lu 22:58. Ma 22:5.
Petra, description of,		2Ki 14:7.
Pharaoh, signification and application of the name,		Ge 12:15.
Pharaoh-hoobra, account of,		Je 37:5.
——, pride and wickedness of,		Eze 29:2.
Pharaoh-hoobra, his arms broken by Nebuchadnezzar,		Eze 30:21.
Pharaoh-hoobra given into the hands of his enemies, as predicted,		Je 44:30.
Pharaoh-nechoh, account of,		2Ki 23:29
Pharez, meaning of,		Eze 38:25
——, and Perez, the same in the original,		Ne 11:4.
Pharisees, character of them according to Josephus,		Mat.23:11.
Pharpar, probably a branch of the Euphrates,		2Ki 5:12.
Phoenice, or Phenicia, description of,		Ac 13:3.
——, a sap-ot of iron of Crete,		Ac 27:12.
Philadelpia, description of,		Re 3:7.
Philemon, meaning of the name,		Philem 1.
——, excellence of the Epistle to,		Philem 15.
Philip Herod, who,		Mat 14:3.
Philon, situation of,		Ac 20:6.
Pisistratus, fulfillment of the prophecies against,		Eze 25:16.
Phlistines, Divine judgments on, and given to Judah,		Zep 2:7.
Phrygia, account of,		Ac 16:6.
Phy actems, what,		Mat 23:5.
Phycians, oculifera,		Eze 50:1.
——, ignorance of, among the Jews,		Ma 5:26.
Piebeshi, or Babushan, situation of,		Eze 40:17.
Piece of money, a stater,		Mat 17:27.
Pieces of silver, probably shillings or staters,		Mat 26:13.
Pieces of silver, word so rendered denotes drachms,		Lu 15:8.
Pi-bahuroth, signification and situation of,		Ex 14:2.
Pidite, Pontius, account of,		Mat 27:2.
Pilgrimage, days of the years of, interrupted,		Ge 17:9.
Pillar, sent by, honorable,		2Ki 11:14.
Pillows, or cushions, used to prop up the arms in the East,		Eze 12:18.
Pins of the tabernacle, description of,		Ex 35:18.
Pipe, the sound of the heart compared to,		Je 48:36.
Pisidia, description of,		Ac 14:24.
Pisori, the Pharis, a river of Cochim,		Ge 2:11.
Pit, mode of taking wild beasts in,		Po 119:5.
——, Is 24:17.
P, he who heged one shall fall there-		Ps 26:27.
Pit, bars of, what,		Job 17:16.
Pitcher, the vena cava so called,		Ez 12:6.
Pitching tents, time of, in the East,		Job 19:9.
Plain, word so rendered in only,		Ge 12:6.
Planets, word so rendered, probably denotes the signs of the zodiac,		2Ki 23:5.
Plate of gold on the mitre of the high priest, description of,		Ex 38:36.
Ploughing with an ox and ass, why prohibited,		Ez 40:10.
Platoon, the Acrostes exempt from the deadly efforts of,		Ma 16:18.
Pollution, of ritual bodies,		Ne 31:19.
Polymer, ill effects of,		Ps 69:8.
Pomeranthe, description of,		Isa 44:2.
Pool, upper, probable situation of,		2Ki 18:17.
Poplar, green, properly white poplar,		Ge 30:37.
Porters, to the temple, properly guards,		1Ch 26:6.
——, division of,		1Ch 26:1.
Portion of a camp, sent in the East to those who cannot attend,		Ez 9:19.
Posts, rather runners or corners,		2Ch 20:6.
——, swiftness of,		Job 9:25.
Pot, meaning of word so rendered in,		Mat 7:6.
Pottery, red, description of,		Je 18:3.
Pottery, wheel, description of,		Eze 23:30.
Pound, maceh, or mina, weight and value of,		Ne 7:71
Power, used for sign or token of being under it,		1Ch 11:19.
Pezaz, description of,		De 14:5.
Pezrannu, what,		Ma 15:16.
Prayer, laws of, among the Jews,		Ac 3:1.
Prayer, extraordinary length of some, among the Jews,		Mat 23:13.
Precious things, meaning of,		Ex 24:5.
Presents to a superior indispensable in the East,		Isa 9:7
Pride, acceptance of, a pledge of friendship,		Mat 2:11.
Prevent, meaning of the word,		Ge 33:10.
Prevented, meaning of,		Ps 20:3.
Pride, crown of, a periphrasis for Samaria,		Ps 119:147.
Pried, second, what,		2Ki 25:18.
Priests, why to be without blemish and minority,		Le 21:21; 22:2.
Priests, portion of,		Ne 18:20.
——, courses of, continued till the time of Christ,		1Ch 24:10.
Prince of Israel, probably a temporal ruler,		Eze 44:3.
Princes of the tribes, what,		Ez 17:16.
——, offering of, at the dedication of the altar,		Ne 7:3,5,7,8,9,10,17,81.
Princes, import of word so rendered,		De 3:3.
Prison, import of word so rendered,		Ge 39:20.
Profane, account of eastern,		Je 37:15; 38:6.
Profane, import of,		Mat 12:5.
Proleptis, instances of,		Ge 12:9; 13:13,15,18,21.

FELT

Prophets, the antecedents of, frequently understood, Eze 7:24
 Proper, used for fine or beautiful, 1He 11:23.
 Properly unjustly acquired, evanescent nature of, Pr 13:22.
 Prophecy, word so rendered, an oracle, Pr 30:1.
 Prophecy, import of, 1Ch 25:1.
 Prophecy, import of, 1Ch 25:1.
 Prophet, import of the word so rendered, Ge 20:7.
 Prophets, false, prediction of, verified, Mat 24:26.
 Prove, to, a metaphor taken from the melting or refining of metals, Ps 66:10.
 Provoked, 1Ch 25:1.
 Provision furnished by the Persian monarchs to their courtiers from their own table, Da 1:5.
 Psalm, meaning of the Hebrew word so rendered, Ps 3:1.
 Psalm, meaning of the Greek word so rendered, Eph 5:19.
 Psalter, description of, Da 13:18.
 ———, or Nabla, account of, 1Ch 13:8.
 Ptolemais, Acheo, or Acre, situation of, Ju 1:31.
 Ptolemy Euphemes, prediction respecting, Da 11:15, 17.
 Ptolemy Evergetes, prediction respecting, Da 11:7.
 Ptolemy Lagos, prediction of, ——— Philadelphus, predictions respecting, Da 11:5.
 Ptolemy Philometor, prediction respecting, Da 11:5.
 Ptolemy Philopater, predictions respecting, Da 11:11, 15.
 Publican, meaning of the word, and explanation of the office of, Mat 5:46.
 Publican, chief, what, Lu 19:12.
 Pul, king of Assyria, account of, 2Kt 15:19.
 ——— and Lud, used for the sails, 1Sa 17:19.
 Pulling down a city or tower by ropes, &c., instances of, 2Sa 17:13.
 Pulse, import of word so rendered, Da 1:12.
 Punishment by precipitation, instances of, 2Kt 1:9.
 Puntan, situation of, No 35:42.
 Purim, and Purim, meaning of the word, Es 9:4.
 Purifications among the Africans, Es 15:15.
 Purple, description of, Es 25:1.
 Purple and scarlet, frequently used metaphorically, Mat 27:28.
 Purpos, value of eastern, 2Kt 12:10.
 Put on a person, meaning of, Ro 13:14.
 Rapt, situation of, Ac 28:13.
 Queens, description of, Ex 16:13 Nu 11:31.
 Rays of heaven, the moon so diminished and worshipped, Je 7:18, 14:17.
 RAAMATH, probably a mistake for Rabbath, Est 2:2.
 Rabbath, or Rabbath-Ammon, now Amman, description of, 2Sa 12:26.
 Rabbah, meaning of, Mat 23:8.
 Rab-mah, meaning of, Je 39:3.
 Rabsarais, meaning of, 2Kt 19:17.
 Rab-shakeh, import of, 2Kt 19:17.
 ———, account of, 2Kt 19:18.
 Raca, signification of, Mat 5:22.
 Raehel, perhaps the same as Rachelah, 1Sa 30:29.
 Rachel, the same as Rachel, No 10:29.
 Raehel, the Delta, or lower Egypt, Ps 84:10.
 Raehel, mostly of Esau, what, Ge 27:25.
 Rain, absence of, in Egypt, Es 9:18.
 ——— caused by lightning, Job 38:26.
 ——— brought by a north wind in Palestine, Ps 25:23.
 Rain, former and latter, account of, Je 3:3.
 Rain, now, and former appointment of, 1Sa 12:17.
 Rain, season in Palestine, Ec 10:9.
 Ray of consolation, description of, Ex 29:27.
 Ramah of Benjamin, situation of, Is 18:25.
 ———, situation of, Is 10:28.
 ——— of Asher, situation of, Jo 19:29.
 Ramothaim-Zophim, now Ramla, description of, 1Sa 11:1.
 Ramoth-lehi, meaning of, Ju 15:17.
 Ramoth in Gilead, situation of, De 4:43.
 ———, south, in Simeon, 1Sa 30:27.
 Ramesses, situation of, No 33:5.
 Rams' skins, rod, account of, Ex 25:14.
 Raniah and Reishith the same, 1Ch 9:24.
 Rara, description of, 1Ch 12:24.
 Ravens, nearly fed Elijah, 1Kt 17:5.
 Ravens, report of the word, Ec 22:25.
 Rea-ah, the same as Harosh, 1Ch 2:25.
 Reapers, servant set over, who, Ro 2:6.
 Reckless, some account of, Is 32:6, 19.
 Re-ec-a, why so called, and description of, Ex 14:16.
 Reed, Ezekiel's, length of, Ec 10:10.
 Reformation, emblematical representations of, Ro 13:14.
 Refuge, cities of, No 35:11, 14:36, 37.
 Rehearsal, other, of imitations of, Je 19:2.
 Rehob, city of, where situated, No 12:27.
 Rehob and Rehob, the same, Ro 7:7.
 Remphan, probably Saturn, Am 5:6.
 Removed from the congregation, meaning of the phrase, No 1:16.
 Rephan, or giant's valley of, 1Ch 11:18.
 Reser, import of the Hebrew word so rendered, Ge 2:2.
 Restitution, necessary to forgiveness, Nu 5:7.
 ———, Ec 33:15.
 Resurrection, the opinions of the Jews respecting, Ma 12:24.
 Resurrection of Jesus, reconciliation of the apparent discrepancies in the accounts of the Evangelists respecting, Lu 21:14, 16:25, 20:1.
 Resurrection of Christ, evidence of, Ju 20:28.
 Reuben, import of the word, 1Ch 29:32.
 Reuben, import of the tribe of, Nu 16:1.
 Reuel and Rachel, the same, No 10:29.
 ——— and Duvel, the same person, Nu 14:14.

241.

Reverence of the dead prevalent among the Egyptians, Romans, &c. Ge. 43 12.

Reverence, adulations, required by the Person monarchs. Es. 8 2.

Revenues in the East paid in kind, 1Ki. 4 7.

Revereh, situation of, 2Ki. 19 12.

Rheumat, situation of, Ac. 24 13.

Rhodes, island, description of, Ac. 21 1.

Riblah, place, account of, 2Ki. 23 33.

Rich, not to labour to be, Pr. 23 4.

—, he that maketh haste to be so not innocent, Pr. 8 20.

Riches, vast, of some persons, Ec. 3 9.

Richness, instability of, Pr. 23 5.

Richnesses, extensive meaning of the word so rendered, Is. 51 5.

Rimmon, signification of, Is. 41 12.

—, idol, account of, 2Ki. 15 19.

—, rock, where situated, Ju. 40 27.

Rimmon-gate, situation of, Ne. 11 25.

Rimmon-gatez, situation of, Nu. 35 10.

Rings worn on the ankles by eastern ladies, Is. 3 16.

Rising early, import of, Je. 25 4.

Rissah, situation of, Nu. 33 21.

Ruthmah, situation of, Nu. 33 16.

River and fountains, places of resort in the East, 1Ki. 19.

Rivers, banks of, used for religious meetings, Ps. 137 1.

Rivers, drying up, with the sole of the foot, illustrated, Is. 37 25.

Rivers running like oil, meaning of, Ec. 24 14.

Rivers, used for the pangs which occasion it, Ps. 32 3.

Roke, description of, Ec. 24 4.

Rock, inhabitants of, who, Is. 42 11.

—, shadow of, desirable in a hot country, Is. 32 2.

Rocks, dwellings in, Ge. 28 11.

—, used for places of retreat, Ju. 20 47.

Rod, passing under, meaning of, 1c. 57 32.

—, of Aaron, budding of, Nu. 17 8.

—, of Moses gave rise to the Thyrus of Bacchus, Ec. 4 2.

Rod, or staff, sign of office, Nu. 17 2.

Rod, strong, emblems of powerful sovereigns, Ec. 5 19.

Roe, word so rendered, the rock goat, Pr. 19 11.

Roe back, word so rendered properly the gazelle or antelope, De. 15 22.

Rolls, ancient, account of, Lu. 4 17.

Ronah, meaning, represented by legs of iron and feet of iron and clay, Da. 2 40 34.

Roman empire represented as a king of three countenance, Da. 8 23 25.

Roman empire represented by a great and terrible beast, with ten horns, Da. 7 7.

Roman empire represented by a beast with seven heads and ten horns, Re. 13 1.

Roman empire, division of into ten kingdoms represented by ten horns, Da. 7 20 2.

Roman empire, invasion of, by the Goths predicted, Re. 8 7.

Roman empire, invasion of, by the Huns, Re. 8 8.

Roman empire, invasion of, by the Vandals and Moors, Re. 8 10.

Roman empire, gradual extinction of, Re. 8 12.

Roman citizens, privileges of, Ac. 22 25.

—, literally, represented by a beast with seven heads like a lamb, Re. 13 11.

Romans, prediction respecting, Re. 17 36.

—, seven forms of government among, denoted by seven heads, Re. 17 10.

Romans, Epistle to, authenticity and excellence of, Ro. 15 24; 16 3.

Rome, situation of, Ac. 28 16.

Rome, Bishop and Church of, predictions concerning, In. 11 36 38; 12 13.

Rome, duration of the idolatry and tyranny of the church of, Re. 11 2.

Rorari, or light armed troops of the Romans, why so called, 2Sa. 17 12.

Rosh, probably the Russians, Ec. 5 8.

Rorad, leaping up, the abominable custom of, Ec. 36 2.

Royal family, instances of the destruction of, 2Ki. 11 1.

Ruby, description of, Pr. 8 11.

Ruler, probably the king, Ac. 27 40.

Ruthmah, meaning of, Hu. 2 1.

Rule, meaning of word so rendered, 2Co. 10 13.

Ruler of the Ismahites, office of, Le. 4 22.

Rumah, situation of, 2Ki. 23 36.

Rump, or tail, of eastern sheep very large, Ex. 29 24.

—, Re. 3 9.

SABATH, perpetuity of, Ro. 14 5.

—, second after the first, what, Lu. 6 1.

—, what the Jews deemed lawful on, Mat. 12 11.

Sabbath, covenant for, what, Mat. 23 1.

—, day's journey, what, Ac. 1 12.

Sabians, who they were, Job. 1 15.

—, majestic appearance of, Is. 45 14.

Sacrilef, meaning of, Da. 3 15.

Sacrifices, to be perfect, illustration of, 1c. 23 21.

—, to be a certain age, Le. 22 7.

—, to be used in, Nu. 15 3.

—, seven kinds of, Nu. 28 2.

—, monthly account of, Nu. 28 14.

—, annual amount of, Nu. 29 39.

—, human, prevalence of, De. 12 31.

—, 2Ki. 13 27 Ps. 106 37.

Sadele, import of word so rendered, Ec. 10 2.

Saint, meaning of the word, Ac. 15 2.

Salmos, situation of, Ac. 15 5.

Salathiel and Shealtiel, the same in the original, Hag. 1 1.

Salem, probably Jerusalem, Ge. 14 18.

Sallar and Sallu, the same, Nu. 12 7.

Salmos, situation of, Ac. 27 7.

Salome, account of, Mat. 14 1.

Salt, description of, Lu. 14 34.

INDEX TO THE PRINCIPAL NOTES IN THE COTTAGE BIBLE.

[illegible]

INDEX TO THE PRINCIPAL NOTES IN THE COTTAGE BIBLE.

THI	VEI	WIS
Bukium, probably the Trusdoides, Summer and winter made by God, Saumer fruit, what, —, import of the emblem of a basket of, San and Moon, how they rule the day and night, Saun, worship of by the Persians, —, an emblem of a king, Saph, or Zaph, improperly rendered Red sea, situation of, Swallow, meaning of word so rendered, —, the proper name of, in the original, Swan, perhaps the goose, Swiftness of foot reckoned a great accomplishment in heroes, Swore, on the devils being permitted to enter the herd of, Sword, to turn the edge of, illustrated, Swords, beating of, into ploughshares, illustration of, Swords, words compared to the piercing of, illustrated, Swords in one's lips, illustrated, Syenneme tree, probably the same as the sycamore, Sycamore tree, description of, —, mode of ripening the fruit of, by scraping it with iron combs, Sycamore, value of, to the Egyptians, Sychem, or Shechem, the patriarchs probably first buried here, Syene, now Assuan, situation of, Synagoga, import of word so rendered, Syracuse, description of, Syria, description of, Syriac, import of the term, TAA-NATH-SHILON, situation of, Tababab, situation of, Tabernacle, plan of, —, description of, —, hanging for the door of, —, veil of, description of, —, boards of, description of, —, weight and value of the gold, &c. employed in, Tabernacle, removal of, Nu 4 5,6,7,13,16,18,20,&c. —, imitations of, —, of the congregation, description of, Tabernacle, the term, applied to the body, Tabernacles, feast of, Taberah, meaning of, Table, eastern posture at, reclining, —, precisely one of eastern nobles, —, of show-bread, imitations of, Tables of stone anciently used for writing on, Tablets, description of, —, import of word so rendered, Tabot, mount, situation and account of, Tachas, situation of, Tachas, meaning of, Tadin or, or Palmyra, description of, Tahapimbes, or Tahapimbes, situation of, Tale, import of the word, Talent, value of, Talitha cumi, meaning of, Taluthas, account of, Tamuz, or Adonis, account of, Tanoah, probably the same as Aner, situation of, Tares properly dandel, Tarsush, situation of, —, used for the East, Tarsus, description of, Tartan, signification of, Task-masters, Egyptian, Talmu, account of, Taverns, time, situation of, Tel tree, description of, Tel-tree, situation and description of, Telabab, situation of, Telassar, probably situation of, Tel-harsa, and Tel-harsa, the same, Temau, or Temani, situation of, —, used for Idumea, Temple, Solomon's, size of, —, a fast kept by the Jews for the destruction of by Nebuchadnezzar, Temple, second, magnitude and beauty of the stones with which it was built, Temple, adorned and enriched with gifts, Temple, now the glory of the second, surpassed that of the first, Temple, total demolition of by Titus, according to the prediction of Christ, Temple of Ezekiel, vast dimensions of, probably shows that it is to be understood mystically, Temple, described by Ezekiel, probable reference of, Tempt, meaning of the word, Ten times, the phrase used as an indefinite number, Tent, women's, distinct from that of the men in the East, Tentacles, by persons of royal dignity, Terapim, description of, Terabim, or terapim, tree, description of, Testament, properly covenant, Tetrarch, signification of, Tumah, and Tumah, the same in the original, Thebes, situation of, Thebstonica, description of, Theudas, account of, Tugh, smiling on, an expression of deep affection, Tugh, inscriptions on customary, Think, use of for what is certain,	Thirty, word so rendered, probably means captains, Thistle, word so rendered, probably the black thorn, Thorns, crown of, what, Thought, to take no, meaning of word so rendered, Three and four, singular use of, illustrated, Threshold, those who leap on, who, Threshing, account of the eastern modes of, Threshing, with oven, description of, Threshing floors, description of ancient ones, Throne, used for a palace, Thumbs and great toes, cutting off of, not unusual in ancient times, Thunder, cause of, Thyatira, description of, Tiberius, description of, Tighath-pileser, account of, Tiles and bricks, anciently used as tablets, Timber, description of, Time, a year in prophetic language, Tinnah, the concubine of Eliphaz, Tinnath, account of, Tinnakab, account of, Tirshatha, signification of, Tirzah, account of, Tithe, on the cross, the apparent discrepancies between the accounts of, reconciled, Titus called the prince, Tob, land of, where situated, Tot, probably a mistake for Tom, Tokens of God, at which men are afraid, Tongue, a soft one, how said to break a bone, Tongue, a lying one, hates those whom it alights, Tovar, description of, Tophel, a place near Moab, Tophet, account of, Tortoise, word so rendered, a kind of lizard, Towers built in the desert, for what purpose, Trachonitis, description of, Tradition, import of, Treffer, a land of, Cheldea so called, Transposition, instance of, Travellers, food used by, in the East, Treasures, word so rendered illustrated, Tree, high, an emblem of Jeconiah, —, low, and also green, emblem of Zechariah, Tree, dry, an emblem of the low state of the family of David, Trees, longevity of, —, a l, of the field, a metaphor for all the inhabitants of the earth, Trees, for meat, probably emblematical of believers, Trench, import of word so rendered, —, or rampart, Jerusalem surrounded with one by Titus, Trespass-offences and sin offerings, distinction between, Tribes of Israel, number of, Tribes, order of their inheritance, Trifling money, what, Triumph, cause to, an allusion to triumphal processions, Troas, situation of, Troglodyte, situation of, Troglodyte, meaning of word so rendered, Trumpet, description of, Trumpets, form and uses of, —, of ram's horn, what, —, feast of, Tubal, the Tubarenians, —, and Javan used for the north, Tubas, prediction of recovery, Twig, a tender, an emblem of the Messiah, Twigs, young, of the cedar, an emblem of the princes of Judah, Tyre, description and history of, —, a colony of the Sidonians, —, why called the daughter of Tyre, Tyre, Nebuchadnezzar employed 13 years in the siege of, and found nothing worth his labour, Tyre and Sidon taken by Alexander, —, fulfilment of predictions concerning, Tyre, prince of, who, UNCOVERED, frequent meaning of the phrase in Scripture, Understand, import of the term, Unicorn, or rhinoceros, description of, Unius, heathen magistrates so called, Ur, probably Ours in Mesopotamia, Urin and Urim, description of, Uter, import of the word, Uter, land of, where situated, Uzzel, probably a mistake for Azazel, Vail, word so rendered, probably a finer kind of hyke, Valey, word so rendered also means a torrent, Vanity of the ancients, description of, Vanity, original sense of the word so rendered, Vapours, ascension of, caused by God, Vashit, noble conduct of, Veil, indecency of appearing without one in the East,	Vessel, extensive use of the word, Vine, uselessness of, when cut down, Vinegar used with bread in the East, —, effects on the teeth, illustrated, —, meaning of, Virgin, applied to unmarried persons of all sexes, Virgins, a custom in the East for young men that were never married always to marry them, Vision, valley of, a periphrasis for Jerusalem, Volume, import of the word, Vows, laws of, —, estimation and redemption of, —, exorable ones practised by the Jews, Vulture, meaning of word so rendered, WAIT, meaning of word so rendered, Walls very high in the East, —, building of extensive ones, in short periods, War, time of year to which it was limited in the East, Warriors, ancient mode of sunning, Warriors, anciently buried in their armour, with their swords under their hands, Washing the hands a symbolical action, Washings, high importance of, among the Jews, Watcher, who, Watches, night, division of, among the Jews, Watches, division of the night into, Watchmen, account of the singular practices of Eastern, Water, of what it is composed, —, exact proportion of, for evaporation, &c., Water, creation of the world from, —, of Egypt very delicious, —, appearance of, as blood, probable cause of, Water, drawing and pouring out of, meaning of the ceremony, Water, pouring of, on the hands of a person, a mark of servitude, Water gate, where situated, —, Jews, anciently used, description of, Waters issuing from the temple, probable meaning of, Waters of the Dead sea, healing of, its probable meaning, Waters of separation, what, Water-salt, description of, Wave offering, description of, Way, preparing and making straight, a practice among Eastern monarchs, Way, used for the right way, Wan, import of the word, Weapons of war, length of time required to burn, illustrated, Weasel, word so rendered, the mole, Week, in prophetic language, seven years, Weeks, seventy, Daniel's prophecy of, Weights, divers, prohibited, Well-favoured, meaning of, Wells, importance of, in the East, —, great depth of in the East, —, stones placed on the mouth of, —, stopping up of, —, frequented by banditti in the East, Well spring of life, import of, While, word so rendered denotes any time, Wharf, Pharoah compared to, Wheat-harvest, thunder and rain unusual in, in Judea, Wheel in the middle of a wheel, probable meaning of, Wheel, the great porta so called, Whelps, emblems of young princes, Whirlwinds, terrible effects of, in the East, What import of the word, Whore, great, Pagan Rome represented by, Whoredom, idolatry so called, Whoring, import of, Wicked, prosperity of, thought by the heathen a reproach to God, Widows in the East sometimes return to their father's house, Wilderness, inhabitants of, who, Widows, abundance of, at Babylon, Wind, the weight of, the gravity of the atmosphere, Windows of heaven, meaning of, —, those that look out at, the eyes so denominated, Wine, description of ancient, —, mixed, what, —, mingled with myth, probably the same as vinegar mingled with gall, Wings, great, used for extensive empire, —, shadowing with, probably a periphrasis for Egypt, Wings of the cherubim, what, Wimpowin, eastern mode of, Winter in Palestine, account of, —, house, what, Wisdom, import of the term, —, is strength, —, better than strength, —, of God, probably a name assumed by our Lord, Wisdom of God, peculiar meaning of the phrase, Wise man, strength of, Wist, signification of,

INDEX TO THE PRINCIPAL NOTES IN THE COTTAGE BIBLE.

WOR	ZEC	ZOR
W ^o l, meaning of, Ge 21:26; 24:21, De 14:10.	W ^o l, meaning of, Ge 21:26, Job 19:23.	Zedekiah, the captivity of, foreshown, Eze 12:5, 6, 13.
W ^o l, sometimes pardoned, Ge 29:18, 33:12.	Writing, various modes of, Da 11:2.	Zedekiah, meaning of, Eze 12:5, 6, 13.
W ^o l, of a kind the property of an owner, 28:16, 23.	XERXES, his riches and wars foretold, Da 11:2.	Zedekiah, situation of, Eze 12:5, 6, 13.
W ^o l, of a conqueror, in the East, De 18:10.	YEAR, how crowned by the goodness of God, Ps 65:11.	Zedekiah, the second priest, Eze 12:5, 6, 13.
W ^o l, meaning of the term, De 18:10.	Year, in a certain one, frequently means after that period, 1Ki 1:1.	Zedekiah, valley of, where situated, 2Ch 14:16.
W ^o l, dwelling of, with the lamb, illus. 18:11, 16.	Year, solar, in use among the antediluvians, Ge 8:14.	Zedekiah, variation of, caused by the mutation of two letters, 1Ch 1:36.
W ^o l, sir, disgraceful to be killed by, Je 39:54.	Year, put on the necks of a new married couple by the ancients, Mat 19:6.	Zedekiah, probably Zedekiah, 1Ch 1:36.
W ^o l, used as an honourable appellation, Jo 2:4.	ZAAVAN and ZAVAN, the same in the original, 1Ch 1:42.	Zedekiah, probably Zedekiah, 1Ch 1:36.
Woman, in an epiphany, emblem of the Jewish nation, Eze 5:6.	Zadon and Zidon, the same, 1Ch 2:6.	Zedekiah, probably Zedekiah, 1Ch 1:36.
Women employed as door keepers, Eze 39:54.	Zadon and Zidon, the same, 1Ch 2:6.	Zedekiah, probably Zedekiah, 1Ch 1:36.
Women employed to dance and sing before captive prisoners in the East, Je 38:22.	Zadon and Zidon, the same, 1Ch 2:6.	Zedekiah, probably Zedekiah, 1Ch 1:36.
Women, apartments of, separated from those of the men, Ge 24:28.	Zadon and Zidon, the same, 1Ch 2:6.	Zedekiah, probably Zedekiah, 1Ch 1:36.
Women, apartments of, inviolable in the East, Eze 2:11.	Zadon and Zidon, the same, 1Ch 2:6.	Zedekiah, probably Zedekiah, 1Ch 1:36.
Women of the emperor of China shut up in a palace on his death, 28:10, 21.	Zadon and Zidon, the same, 1Ch 2:6.	Zedekiah, probably Zedekiah, 1Ch 1:36.
Women, two, with whose like a stork, an emblem of the Roman armies, Zec 5:6.	Zadon and Zidon, the same, 1Ch 2:6.	Zedekiah, probably Zedekiah, 1Ch 1:36.
Wood offering, East of, 10:31.	Zadon and Zidon, the same, 1Ch 2:6.	Zedekiah, probably Zedekiah, 1Ch 1:36.
Word, frequently means a thing, Mat 4:4.	Zadon and Zidon, the same, 1Ch 2:6.	Zedekiah, probably Zedekiah, 1Ch 1:36.
World, the term, applied to the Roman, Chinese, and Persian empires, &c., Ge 41:45.	Zadon and Zidon, the same, 1Ch 2:6.	Zedekiah, probably Zedekiah, 1Ch 1:36.
War, how said not to be able to contain all the books that might be written of Jesus, Jo 21:25.	Zadon and Zidon, the same, 1Ch 2:6.	Zedekiah, probably Zedekiah, 1Ch 1:36.

A CHRONOLOGICAL INDEX TO THE HOLY BIBLE,

ACCORDING TO THE COMPUTATION OF ARCHBISHOP USHER;

SHOWING IN WHAT YEAR OF THE WORLD, AND WHAT YEAR BEFORE CHRIST, OR AFTER CHRIST, EACH EVENT HAPPENED, AND THE PLACES OF SCRIPTURE WHERE THEY ARE RECORDED; INTERSPERSED WITH THE PRINCIPAL EVENTS IN PROFANE HISTORY.

It may be necessary here to premise a few observations in explanation of the various etas introduced into this work. By which any year of these etas, which corresponds to a given year of the Christian era, or the year of the world, may be easily discovered by the application of the rules of addition or subtraction. The Chronological Index is that chronological computation which was used by the people of Alexandria, who reckoned 532 years before A. D. The Chronological Index is a correction of the preceding, made in the fourth century, by Eusebius, an Egyptian monk, and used by the people of Antioch, and a further by the Alexandrian only by subtracting ten years. The Chronological Index is that used by the Byzantine historians, and by the Greek church, which reckons 532 years before Christ. The Latin Index is a facillious one, conceived by Joseph Scaliger, to facilitate the reduction of the year of any given epoch to that of another, and is the result of the lunar and solar cycles, and the aetion, introduced by another. Thus D, the lunar cycle multiplied by 28, the solar cycle produces 52, which multiplied by 19, the cycle of aetion amounts to 752 years, which constitute the Latin Index; in the first year of which all these three cycles begin together, and in the fifth year of which falls the first year of the Christian era. The Solar Cycle is a period consisting of 28 years, the Lunar Cycle, or Golden Number, is 19 years, the Cycle of Aetion, of 19 years, and the Christian Index, of 532, being the product of the Solar and Lunar years multiplied by each other, called also the Paschal Cycle, because in the first year of the Christian Passover, or Easter, a movable feast, has gone through all possible variations, and the Solar and Lunar Cycles, Dominical, or Sunday Letters, Paschal Terms, Epacts, New Moons, &c., all recommence exactly as they had done 532 years before. The Nabonassar era takes its name from Nabonassar king of Babylon, and commences 747 years before A. D. The Callippic era of the Lyones, took its rise 84 years before Christ, in consequence of his restoration of the Olympic games. The Olympic era derive their origin from the institution of the Olympic games, which were celebrated every four years, at the time of the first in which after the summer's solstice, and the first Olympiad is commonly reckoned from the conquest of Olympia by Cypselus. B. C. 776. It need scarcely be added that each Olympiad consists of four years. The year of the building of Rome (A. D. 1) is an important era among the Roman historians, and commenced, according to tradition, which is generally received, B. C. 753; but according to others, it is 754, or 755, according to Polybius, B. C. 751, and according to Fabius, Pictor, B. C. 754.

The Assyrian era commences places the primordial epoch B. C. 5509, the Septuagint 552, the Hebrews, 5541. Scaliger 5570. Eusebius, 5584. And in Hales, 5511. who enumerates above 250 various opinions on this subject, and the difference between the latest and remotest dates of which is no less than 268. The generally received epoch 5570 B. C., however, seems to be as well established as any other, and is a worthy remark that the celebrated astronomer La Place has observed, that that year was distinguished as a remarkable astronomical epoch; the earth's orbit then coinciding with the line of the equinoxes, and consequently the true and mean equinoxes being united.

PERIOD I.

From the Creation to the Deluge, 1656 years.

A.M.B.C.	From the Creation to the Deluge, 1656 years.	Ge 1:1.
1 4001	The creation of all things in six days.	11
2 4003	The fall of Adam, and the promise of a Saviour.	4 1 7
123 3874	The birth of Cain, an Abel, and their subsequent occupation and character.	4 8 15
139 3874	The birth of Seth, Adam his father being 130 years old.	4 25, 5 4
225 3789	Noah born, Seth his father being 185 years old.	4 26, 5 6
295 3699	Cain born, when Enos his father is 50.	5 9
305 3640	Methuselah born, when Enos his father is 70.	12
461 3384	Jared born, when Mahalaleel is 65.	15
692 3382	Methuselah born, Enos his father being 162.	18 19
697 3331	Methuselah born, Enos his father being 167.	21 22
854 3161	Lamech, father of Noah, born, Methuselah being 187.	25
970 3074	Adam dies, aged 930 years.	4 5
987 3015	Noah is translated, aged 950 years.	23 24
1012 2992	Seth dies, aged 912 years.	7 9
1046 2948	Noah is born, his father Lamech being 182.	28 29
1140 2 61	Enos dies, aged 905 years.	11
1225 2614	Cain dies, aged 910 years.	13 14
1 26 214	Mahalaleel dies, aged 90 years.	16 17
1432 2482	Jared dies, aged 962 years.	19 20
1526 2386	God denounces the Deluge, and commands Noah to build the ark, and to preach repentance to a guilty world, 120 years before the flood came.	6 2 2
1596 2316	Enos dies, his father Noah being 500 years old.	20 21
1758 2154	Birth of Ham, third son of Noah.	9 11 14
1833 2079	Seth dies, the father of Noah, dies, aged 777.	30 31
1933 1979	Methuselah, the oldest man, dies, aged 969 years.	28 29
1936 1976	In the same year, and in the 600th year of Noah's age, the Flood comes upon the earth, and destroys all its inhabitants, except Noah and those with him in the ark.	10 11 12

PERIOD II.

From the Deluge to the call of Abraham, 430 years, 6 months.

A.M.B.C.	From the Deluge to the call of Abraham, 430 years, 6 months.	Ge 1:1.
1657 2347	Noah and his family, &c., leave the ark of the deluge.	11 10 11
1658 2346	Arphaxad son of Shem born.	12
1833 2211	Seth son of Arphaxad, born.	14
1933 2111	Enos son of Seth, born.	16
1936 2108	Peleg, son of Enos, born.	18

A.M.B.C.	From the Deluge to the call of Abraham, 430 years, 6 months.	Ge 1:1.
1657 2347	Noah and his family, &c., leave the ark of the deluge.	11 10 11
1658 2346	Arphaxad son of Shem born.	12
1833 2211	Seth son of Arphaxad, born.	14
1933 2111	Enos son of Seth, born.	16
1936 2108	Peleg, son of Enos, born.	18

PERIOD III.

From the second call of Abraham to the Exodus of the Israelites, 430 years.

A.M.B.C.	From the second call of Abraham to the Exodus of the Israelites, 430 years.	Ge 1:1.
2023 2282	Abraham at God's command, leaves Haran, and comes to sojourne in Egypt, in his 75th year.	12 1 3
2084 2221	Abraham goes into Egypt because of a famine, and saves Sarah to pass for his sister. The Pharaoh (Nophah) takes her to his house, but soon returns her.	12 10 &c.

A CHRONOLOGICAL INDEX TO THE HOLY BIBLE.

[illegible]

A CHRONOLOGICAL INDEX TO THE HOLY BIBLE.

[illegible]

A CHRONOLOGICAL INDEX TO THE HOLY BIBLE.

A.M.B.C.	1848 1056	1849 1058	1850 1059	1851 1060	1852 1061	1853 1062	1854 1063	1855 1064	1856 1065	1857 1066	1858 1067	1859 1068	1860 1069	1861 1070	1862 1071	1863 1072	1864 1073	1865 1074	1866 1075	1867 1076	1868 1077	1869 1078	1870 1079	1871 1080	1872 1081	1873 1082	1874 1083	1875 1084	1876 1085	1877 1086	1878 1087	1879 1088	1880 1089	1881 1090	1882 1091	1883 1092	1884 1093	1885 1094	1886 1095	1887 1096	1888 1097	1889 1098	1890 1099	1891 1100	1892 1101	1893 1102	1894 1103	1895 1104	1896 1105	1897 1106	1898 1107	1899 1108	1900 1109	1901 1110	1902 1111	1903 1112	1904 1113	1905 1114	1906 1115	1907 1116	1908 1117	1909 1118	1910 1119	1911 1120	1912 1121	1913 1122	1914 1123	1915 1124	1916 1125	1917 1126	1918 1127	1919 1128	1920 1129	1921 1130	1922 1131	1923 1132	1924 1133	1925 1134	1926 1135	1927 1136	1928 1137	1929 1138	1930 1139	1931 1140	1932 1141	1933 1142	1934 1143	1935 1144	1936 1145	1937 1146	1938 1147	1939 1148	1940 1149	1941 1150	1942 1151	1943 1152	1944 1153	1945 1154	1946 1155	1947 1156	1948 1157	1949 1158	1950 1159	1951 1160	1952 1161	1953 1162	1954 1163	1955 1164	1956 1165	1957 1166	1958 1167	1959 1168	1960 1169	1961 1170	1962 1171	1963 1172	1964 1173	1965 1174	1966 1175	1967 1176	1968 1177	1969 1178	1970 1179	1971 1180	1972 1181	1973 1182	1974 1183	1975 1184	1976 1185	1977 1186	1978 1187	1979 1188	1980 1189	1981 1190	1982 1191	1983 1192	1984 1193	1985 1194	1986 1195	1987 1196	1988 1197	1989 1198	1990 1199	1991 1200	1992 1201	1993 1202	1994 1203	1995 1204	1996 1205	1997 1206	1998 1207	1999 1208	2000 1209	2001 1210	2002 1211	2003 1212	2004 1213	2005 1214	2006 1215	2007 1216	2008 1217	2009 1218	2010 1219	2011 1220	2012 1221	2013 1222	2014 1223	2015 1224	2016 1225	2017 1226	2018 1227	2019 1228	2020 1229	2021 1230	2022 1231	2023 1232	2024 1233	2025 1234	2026 1235	2027 1236	2028 1237	2029 1238	2030 1239	2031 1240	2032 1241	2033 1242	2034 1243	2035 1244	2036 1245	2037 1246	2038 1247	2039 1248	2040 1249	2041 1250	2042 1251	2043 1252	2044 1253	2045 1254	2046 1255	2047 1256	2048 1257	2049 1258	2050 1259	2051 1260	2052 1261	2053 1262	2054 1263	2055 1264	2056 1265	2057 1266	2058 1267	2059 1268	2060 1269	2061 1270	2062 1271	2063 1272	2064 1273	2065 1274	2066 1275	2067 1276	2068 1277	2069 1278	2070 1279	2071 1280	2072 1281	2073 1282	2074 1283	2075 1284	2076 1285	2077 1286	2078 1287	2079 1288	2080 1289	2081 1290	2082 1291	2083 1292	2084 1293	2085 1294	2086 1295	2087 1296	2088 1297	2089 1298	2090 1299	2091 1300	2092 1301	2093 1302	2094 1303	2095 1304	2096 1305	2097 1306	2098 1307	2099 1308	2100 1309	2101 1310	2102 1311	2103 1312	2104 1313	2105 1314	2106 1315	2107 1316	2108 1317	2109 1318	2110 1319	2111 1320	2112 1321	2113 1322	2114 1323	2115 1324	2116 1325	2117 1326	2118 1327	2119 132
----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	----------

PERIOD VI.

From the building of the Temple to the Babylonish captivity, 400 years.

[illegible]

A CHRONOLOGICAL INDEX TO THE HOLY BIBLE.

[illegible]

A CHRONOLOGICAL INDEX TO THE HOLY BIBLE.

A.M.B.C. 3230 774	Thamirus succeeds to the throne of Macedon, and reigns 45 years.		A.M.B.C. 3292 712	Who having offended God in his conduct towards them, the Babylonish captivity is predicted.	2 Kt 20.12.20. Is. xxxix.
3231 773	Zachariah, son of Jeroboam, is made king in the 38th year of Uzziah, king of Judah, and reigns six months.	2 Kt 14.29. 18.8,9	3294 710	Sennacherib, king of Assyria, is destroyed about the time of his return from Egypt, again invades Judah; but in answer to the prayers of Hezekiah and Isaiah, his whole army, consisting of 185,000 men, is destroyed in one night by the angel of the Lord.	Nah. 3.10. 2 Ch 32.1.23. 2 Kt 19.17.37. xix. Is. xxxvii. xxxviii. Herodot. lib. ii.
3232 772	Shallum murders Zachariah, and succeeds him; but, having reigned one month, he is killed by Menahem, who succeeds him, and reigns ten years.	10.15.		Artabanus succeeds Merochach-babdan, or Mardoch, king of the kingdom of Babylon, and reigns five years.	Canon. Ptolemaei.
3233 771	Pai, king of Assyria, who is supposed to have now reformed that empire, invades Israel, and renders Menahem tributary.	19.20. Paus. l. vi. c. 9.	3295 708	Sennacherib being slain by his two eldest sons, is succeeded by his third son Esarhaddon, who reigns forty-three years.	2 Kt 19.37.2 Ch. 32.2. Is. 37.35.
3234 770	Theopompus succeeds Nicander in the kingdom of Lacedaemon, and reigns 47 years.	2 Ch 26.16.21.	3299 704	Sevechus, king of Egypt, is succeeded by Tirhakah, or Tarchon, the last of that race that reigned in Egypt.	Africans apud Syn- cellum, p. 4.
3239 765	Czziah, attempting to burn incense upon the altar of incense in the temple, is smitten with leprosy.	2 Kt 13.17.23.	3300 703	Belshus, king of Egypt, is succeeded by Tirhakah, or Tarchon, the last of that race that reigned in Egypt.	Canon. Ptolemaei.
3243 761	Pekahiah succeeds Sadyattes on the throne of Lydia, and reigns 14 years.	C. Nepht. Paus. Arist. Poi. l. ii.	3301 702	Belshus is advanced to the throne of Egypt, and reigns three years.	Canon. Ptolemaei.
3244 760	The Ephori introduced into the government of Lacedaemon by Phopompus.	2 Kt 15.23. Isa. l. i.	3304 700	Delices, governor of the Medes, assumes the title of king, and reigns fifty-three years. Ecabata builds a city.	Canon. Ptolemaei.
3245 759	Pekahiah succeeds Sadyattes on the throne of Lydia, and reigns 14 years.	Ho 1.1. Am. 1.1. Mil. 1.1. IKL 15.22.34. 2 Ch 26.22.23; 27.1.	3305 699	Apronadus succeeds Belshus on the throne of Babylon, and reigns six years.	Herodotus, l. i.
3246 758	Azariah, or Uzziah, king of Judah, is succeeded by his son Jotham, who reigns 16 years.	2 Kt 15.23. Isa. l. i.	3306 698	Hezekiah dies, and is succeeded by his son Manasseh, then only twelve years of age, who reigns fifty-five years.	Canon. Ptolemaei.
3250 754	Alcemon, the last perpetual archon of Athens, begins his administration, and rules two years; after whom decennial archons are appointed, the changes being the first.	2 Kt 15.23. Isa. l. i.	3311 693	Recladius succeeds Apronadus, king of Babylon, and the next year is succeeded by Mesesinoradchus, who reigns four years.	2 Kt 20.20.21; 21.1. 2 Ch. 32.33; 33.1.
3251 753	Rome built on the 23th of April, according to Varro.	De Ling. Lat. lib. v.	3312 692	Eryxus, the last decennial archon of the Athenians, begins his administration.	Canon. Ptolemaei.
3254 750	Hezekiah, son of Abaz, born the rape of the Salamis.	Isa. 39.1. Nicholas Damsen in Eclog. Val. p. 436, &c.	3314 690	Anadichus succeeds his father Zenodichus on the throne of Lacedaemon, and reigns thirty-four years.	Pausan. l. i. c. 7. l. iv. c. 15.
3257 747	Nabonassar, or Baladan, supposed by some to be the same as Belshus, ascends the throne of Babylon, from which the Nabonassaræan æra commences.	2 Kt 15.23; 16.7.10. Eu- sebi. Chr. p. 46.	3316 688	In this year, being the 11th year of Manasseh, Tirhakah, king of Egypt, dies, and an interregnum of two years succeeds.	African. ap. Syncell. p. 74. Diod. Sic. l. i.
	Tiglath pileser, king of Assyria, supposed by some to be the same as Arbaces, and Ninus Junior, begins to reign at Nineveh, where he reigns 13 years.	Isa. 39.1. Nicholas Damsen in Eclog. Val. p. 436, &c.	3319 684	Twelve princes seize on the kingdom of Egypt, and govern it by a joint co-sederacy-fifteen years.	Canon. Ptolemaei.
3261 743	Meris succeeds Alyattes on the Lydian throne. The first Messenian war begins, and continues 19 years, till the taking of Ithome.	Isa. 39.1. Nicholas Damsen in Eclog. Val. p. 436, &c.	3321 683	The second Messenian war begins, and continues four years, till the taking of Ithome, after a space of eleven years.	Herodotus, l. ii. Diod. Sic. l. i.
3262 742	Abaz succeeds his father Jotham, in the 11th year of Pekah, king of Israel, and reigns 16 years.	2 Kt 15.23; 16.7.10. Eu- sebi. Chr. p. 46.	3324 680	The government of Athens is intrusted to annual archons, continuing the first.	Paterculus, l. i. c. 8.
	Rezin, king of Damascus, and Pekah, king of Israel, make war on Abaz, and besiege Jerusalem, but without success.	Isa. 39.1. Nicholas Damsen in Eclog. Val. p. 436, &c.	3326 678	Artaxerxes succeeds Argus on the Lydian throne, and reigns 49 years.	Canon. Ptolemaei.
	Emenes succeeds Charops in the decennial archonship of the Athenians; he is succeeded by Cleides, who ten years after is succeeded by Hippomenes.	Isa. 39.1. Nicholas Damsen in Eclog. Val. p. 436, &c.	3327 677	Manasseh, king of Judah, on account of his wickedness and idolatry, is carried captive by him to Babylon, but on his repentance, God restores him to his kingdom.	Herod. l. i. c. 15. Justin. l. vi. c. 1. 2 Kt 21.17.24. Ezra. 3.9.10.
3263 741	Abaz is vanquished, and Judah greatly oppressed by Rezin and Pekah.	Isa. 39.1. Nicholas Damsen in Eclog. Val. p. 436, &c.	3328 676	The end of the second Messenian war, which confirms the Messenians under the power of the Lacedaemonians.	Joseph Ant. x. c. 4. 2 Ch. 33.2.20.
3264 740	Abaz invites Tiglath pileser, king of Assyria, to his assistance, who slays Rezin, king of Damascus, and carries part of Israel into captivity.	Isa. 39.1. Nicholas Damsen in Eclog. Val. p. 436, &c.	3332 672	Among Hostilins succeeds Numa Pompilius in the kingdom of Rome, and reigns 54 years.	Dion. H. l. i. c. 1. Liv. l. i. c. 22.
3265 739	Pekah, king of Israel, is slain by Hoshea, and an anarchy of some years ensues.	Isa. 39.1. Nicholas Damsen in Eclog. Val. p. 436, &c.	3334 670	Scythians, one of the twelve confederated tribes of Egypt, having overcome the rest, seize upon the whole kingdom, and reigns 64 years.	Herodotus, l. ii. Diod. Sic. l. i.
3269 735	Candanes succeeds Meles on the Lydian throne, and reigns 17 years.	Isa. 39.1. Nicholas Damsen in Eclog. Val. p. 436, &c.	3337 667	Sardanapalus, supposed to be the same as Nabuchodonosor, succeeds his father Esarhaddon in the kingdom of Assyria and Babylon.	Canon. Ptolemaei. Judith l. i.
3271 733	Nabuz, or Nadius, succeeds Nabonassar on the throne of Babylon, and reigns two years.	Isa. 39.1. Nicholas Damsen in Eclog. Val. p. 436, &c.		The battle of the Marston and Clontarf, to decide the differences between the Romans and Albanus death of Julius Sabinus, the Alban dictator.	Plin. H. l. i. c. 3. Liv. l. i. c. 24, &c. Flor. l. i. c. 3.
3272 732	Syracuse built by a Corinthian colony.	Strab. l. i. c. 1.	3339 665	Birth of Amun, son of Manasseh, king of Judah. Alas destroyed, and the inhabitants established at Rome.	Canon. Ptolemaei.
3273 731	Chingaris and Pors succeed Sabin on the throne of Babylon, and reign five years.	Canon. Ptolemaei.	3345 659	Cyprian abolishes the Corinthian aristocracy, and reigns 20 years.	Canon. Ptolemaei.
3274 730	Hoshea begins to reign over Israel, and reigns nine years.	Isa. 39.1. Nicholas Damsen in Eclog. Val. p. 436, &c.	3346 658	Exandria afterwards Constantine, built by a colony of Athenians according to Ammianus, of the time according to Paterculus, or of Lacedaemonians according to Justin.	Herod. l. i. c. 102. Judith l. i. c. 5.
3275 729	Sadyattes succeeds Tiglath pileser, king of Assyria, and reigns 11 years.	Isa. 39.1. Nicholas Damsen in Eclog. Val. p. 436, &c.	3349 654	Argemone succeeds the family of Procles, succeeds to the throne of Lacedaemon, and reigns 16 years.	Canon. Ptolemaei.
3276 728	Shallum invades Israel, and makes Hoshea tributary.	Isa. 39.1. Nicholas Damsen in Eclog. Val. p. 436, &c.	3353 649	Pharaces, supposed to be the Apollodorus mentioned in the book of Judith, succeeds Delices in the kingdom of Media.	Canon. Ptolemaei.
3277 727	Abaz dies, and is succeeded in Judah by Hezekiah, who restores the worship of God, and reigns 21 years.	Isa. 39.1. Nicholas Damsen in Eclog. Val. p. 436, &c.	3355 647	Pharaces, supposed to be the Apollodorus mentioned in the book of Judith, succeeds Delices in the kingdom of Media.	Canon. Ptolemaei.
3279 726	Jugues succeeds to the throne of Babylon, and reigns five years.	Isa. 39.1. Nicholas Damsen in Eclog. Val. p. 436, &c.	3357 644	Pharaces, supposed to be the Apollodorus mentioned in the book of Judith, succeeds Delices in the kingdom of Media.	Canon. Ptolemaei.
3280 725	Hoshea, king of Israel, relying on So, king of Egypt, refuses to pay tribute to Sadyattes, who takes him captive, and lays siege to Samaria.	Isa. 39.1. Nicholas Damsen in Eclog. Val. p. 436, &c.	3358 643	Pharaces, supposed to be the Apollodorus mentioned in the book of Judith, succeeds Delices in the kingdom of Media.	Canon. Ptolemaei.
3283 721	Zerobabab succeeds Theopompus on the throne of Lacedaemon, and reigns 55 years.	Isa. 39.1. Nicholas Damsen in Eclog. Val. p. 436, &c.	3363 641	Amun succeeds his father Manasseh in the kingdom of Judah, and reigns two years.	Canon. Ptolemaei.
3284 720	Sadyattes makes war upon Tyre and besieges it five years.	Isa. 39.1. Nicholas Damsen in Eclog. Val. p. 436, &c.	3365 639	Amun is murdered by his servants, and succeeded by Josiah his son, only eight years old, who reigns 31 years.	Canon. Ptolemaei.
3285 719	Sevechus, or Sathon, succeeds his father So, or Sathon, in the kingdom of Egypt, and reigns 11 years.	Isa. 39.1. Nicholas Damsen in Eclog. Val. p. 436, &c.	3366 638	Birth of Thales about this time.	Canon. Ptolemaei.
3286 718	Gyges, the first of the Mermaidie, succeeds Candanes on the Lydian throne, and reigns 38 years.	Isa. 39.1. Nicholas Damsen in Eclog. Val. p. 436, &c.	3367 637	Philo succeeds Argus on the throne of Macedon, and reigns 33 years.	Canon. Ptolemaei.
3289 715	Numa Pompilius succeeds Romulus in the kingdom of Rome, after an interregnum of one year, and reigns 54 years.	Isa. 39.1. Nicholas Damsen in Eclog. Val. p. 436, &c.	3374 630	Amun succeeds his father Manasseh in the kingdom of Judah, and reigns two years.	Canon. Ptolemaei.
3290 714	Shamassar, king of Assyria, dies, and is succeeded by his son Sennacherib, or Sagon, who reigns about eight years.	Isa. 39.1. Nicholas Damsen in Eclog. Val. p. 436, &c.	3375 629	Amun is murdered by his servants, and succeeded by Josiah his son, only eight years old, who reigns 31 years.	Canon. Ptolemaei.
3291 713	Amun succeeds his father Manasseh in the kingdom of Judah, and reigns two years.	Isa. 39.1. Nicholas Damsen in Eclog. Val. p. 436, &c.	3376 628	Amun is murdered by his servants, and succeeded by Josiah his son, only eight years old, who reigns 31 years.	Canon. Ptolemaei.
3292 712	Merochach-babdan, king of Babylon, sends ambassadors to congratulate Hezekiah on his recovery,	Isa. 39.1. Nicholas Damsen in Eclog. Val. p. 436, &c.	3377 627	Amun is murdered by his servants, and succeeded by Josiah his son, only eight years old, who reigns 31 years.	Canon. Ptolemaei.

A CHRONOLOGICAL INDEX TO THE HOLY BIBLE.

A. M. B. C.		A. M. B. C.		A. M. B. C.
3350 641	completes his reformation, and keeps a solemn passover	2 K 12:25-30, 2 Ch 35:2-4	3351 650	Nebuchadnezzar, rendered, disabled by prosperity, is visited by a remarkable dream, when Darius, interpreting, is ordered to build a temple which was coming to ruin	Dan. 4:1-27.
3355 649	Avastates II. of the family of the Mermanide, and father of the celebrated Iusung, succeeds to the Egyptian throne, and reigns 57 years	Herod. I. l. c. 61, &c. Strabo, l. vi.	3355 649	The dream is fulfilled in his extraordinary insanity	28, 29.
3397 617	Psephites, king of Egypt, dies, and is succeeded by Necho or Pharaoh Necho	Herodotus I. Dion. H. l. c. 79. Livy l. c. 46.	3356 505	The Assyrian king is restored
3388 616	Parmanus Phibius succeeds Anusis Marins in the kingdom of Rome, and reigns 57 years	Nah. I. l. c. 1. Euseb. Ch. p. 124 Alexand. Poly.	3400 504	Artaban, king of a nation, of the family of the Persians, begins to reign, and reigns 35 years	Herodot. I. l. c. 61, &c.
3392 612	About this time Nineveh is destroyed by the Medes, and Babylonians under Nabopolassar and Cylax		3411 503	The end of seventy years, Nebuchadnezzar reverts his senses, and is restored to his authority	Dan. 4:33-37.
3391 610	Josiah is slain in battle by Pharaoh Necho, and is succeeded by Jehoahaz, who reigns three months	2 K 23:29, 30. 2 Ch 35:20-25, 36:1-4	3412 502	Nebuchadnezzar dies, and is succeeded by his son Evil-merodach, who reigns two years	Herod. I. l. c. 67, Pan. I. l. c. 5, 6, Phil. in Apoc.
3395 603	Pharaoh Necho carries Jehoahaz captive into Egypt, and makes Jehoiakim king, who reigns 11 years	2 K 23:31-35. 2 Ch 36:2-4	3413 501	Evil-merodach releases Jehoiakim from prison, and advances him, and treats him kindly	Bero. in ap. Jos. Cont. Ap. I. 2 K 23:32-34. Jer. 52:31-34.
3397 605	Nebuchadnezzar is associated with his father Nabopolassar in the kingdom of Babylon for a year, he tells the Assyrians captivity	Bero. in ap. Jos. Cont. Ap. I. 2 K 23:31-35. 2 Ch 36:2-4	3414 500	Cyrenus succeeds his father Avastates in the kingdom of Lydia, and reigns 14 years	Herodot. I. l. c. 67, Pan. I. l. c. 5, 6, Phil. in Apoc.
3398 606	Nebuchadnezzar makes war upon Jehoiakim, makes him tributary, and carries him and his friends, with many of the sacred vessels captive to Babylon, and from this year, the principal computation of the 70 years captivity begins	Jer. xxx. 2 K 24:1-2. 2 Ch 36:6-7. Dan. I. l. c. 1-3	3415 500	Evil-merodach is slain by a conspiracy, and is succeeded by Neriglissar, who reigns fourteen years	Herodot. I. l. c. 67, Pan. I. l. c. 5, 6, Phil. in Apoc.
3399 603	Nabopolassar, king of Babylon, dies, and is succeeded by his son Nebuchadnezzar, who reigns 43 years	Canon Phil. Joseph. Ant. I. l. c. 11. Ch. Ap. I. l. c. 11.	3416 500	Artaban, king of Media dies, and is succeeded by his son Artabanus II. called Darius the Mede, who reigns 20 years	Xenoph. Cyrop. l. i. l. c. 31.
3400 601	Aziates, of the family of Procles, succeeds to the throne of Lacedemon, and reigns 44 years	Canon Phil. Joseph. Ant. I. l. c. 11. Ch. Ap. I. l. c. 11.	3417 500	He associates Cyrus with him in the government, and sends him against the Babylonians	Xenoph. Cyrop. l. i. l. c. 31.
3401 601	The Phenicians sail round Africa by order of Pharaoh Necho king of Egypt	Canon Phil. Joseph. Ant. I. l. c. 11. Ch. Ap. I. l. c. 11.	3418 500	Cyrus slays Neriglissar in battle, who is succeeded by his son Belshazzar	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3401 601	Jehoiakim revolts from Nebuchadnezzar, and reveals and interprets Nebuchadnezzar's dream, in consequence of which he and his friends are greatly advanced	Herodotus I. l. c. 2. 2 K 24:1-2.	3419 500	Belshazzar is slain by a conspiracy on account of his cruelty, after he had reigned only nine months	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3403 602	Cyrenus succeeds to the throne of Macedonia, and reigns 40 years	Herodotus I. l. c. 2. 2 K 24:1-2.	3420 500	Nabopolassar, or Belshazzar, succeeds him, and reigns 12 years	Joseph. Cont. Ap. I. l. c. 11. Euseb. Prae. Ev. l. i. c. 11. Herod. I. l. c. 67.
3404 600	Pharaoh Necho, king of Egypt, dies, and is succeeded by his son Psammetichus, who reigns six years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 2. 2 K 24:1-2.	3421 500	Onias, a son of four animals, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 12 years	Dan. vi. 1. l. c. 11.
	Darius, the Mede, or Cambyses is born, supposed the celebrated Darius, is also born about this time	Herodotus I. l. c. 2. 2 K 24:1-2.	3422 500	Onias, a son of four animals, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 12 years	Dan. vi. 1. l. c. 11.
3405 598	Jehoiakim, king of Judah, is slain, and succeeded by his son Jehoiachin, who reigns 11 years, or 10 years, who reigns three months and ten days	Herodotus I. l. c. 2. 2 K 24:1-2.	3423 500	Cyrus succeeds to the throne of Persia, and reigns 30 years	Xenoph. Cyrop. l. i. l. c. 31.
3406 598	Cyrus, the Persian, is born	Idem. l. i. l. c. 2. 2 K 24:1-2.	3424 500	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3406 598	Jehoiachin, with a great number of Jews, is carried captive to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar, who makes his uncle Zedekiah king in his stead	Idem. l. i. l. c. 2. 2 K 24:1-2.	3425 500	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
	For an account of the 70 years captivity, and from this Ezekiel, who was now carried captive, is born	Idem. l. i. l. c. 2. 2 K 24:1-2.	3426 500	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3410 594	Ezekiel is called to the prophetic office	Idem. l. i. l. c. 2. 2 K 24:1-2.	3427 500	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3412 592	Psammetichus, king of Egypt, is succeeded by his son Apries, or Pharaoh Hophra, who reigns 25 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 2. 2 K 24:1-2.	3428 500	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3412 592	Zedekiah rebels against Nebuchadnezzar, and confederates with Pharaoh Hophra	Idem. l. i. l. c. 2. 2 K 24:1-2.	3429 500	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3413 591	The Hyttian games first established at Delphi	Idem. l. i. l. c. 2. 2 K 24:1-2.	3430 500	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3414 590	Nebuchadnezzar besieges Jerusalem	Idem. l. i. l. c. 2. 2 K 24:1-2.	3431 500	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3415 589	He forces Pharaoh Hophra, who came to relieve it, to retreat	Idem. l. i. l. c. 2. 2 K 24:1-2.	3432 500	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3416 588	He takes and destroys Jerusalem, burns the temple, and carries the people, with Zedekiah, whose sons he had slain, captive to Babylon	Idem. l. i. l. c. 2. 2 K 24:1-2.	3433 500	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
	Thus terminated the kingdom of Judah, 48 years from the revolt of the ten tribes, and 134 years from the ruin of the kingdom of Israel	Idem. l. i. l. c. 2. 2 K 24:1-2.	3434 500	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
	About this time Babylon prophesied against the insulting Edomites	Idem. l. i. l. c. 2. 2 K 24:1-2.	3435 500	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
	About this time flourished Chilo, Anacharsis, Thales, Epimenides, Solon, Esop, Socrates, &c.	Idem. l. i. l. c. 2. 2 K 24:1-2.	3436 500	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.

PERIOD VII.

From the beginning of the Babylonish Captivity to the birth of Christ, 588 years.

A. M. B. C.		A. M. B. C.		A. M. B. C.
3416 588	Gedaliah, whom Nebuchadnezzar had made governor of the remnant of the people, is treacherously slain, and the Jews carry Jeremialah along with them into Egypt	Jer. xl. xlv.	3417 587	Ezekiel, in Chaldea, prophesies against the remnant of the people who had been left in Judah against the land of Egypt, where they had taken shelter, and against the Idumites for their insulting conduct, foretelling the restoration of the captive of Judah, and the destruction of their enemies	Jer. xl. xlv.
3418 586	Nebuchadnezzar besieges Tyre for 13 years, then he ceases to besiege it, during which time he executes the Divine judgments on the Philistines, Idumians, Ammonites, and Moabites	Jer. xl. xlv.	3419 585	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3420 584	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3421 583	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3422 582	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3423 581	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3424 580	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3425 579	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3426 578	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3427 577	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3428 576	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3429 575	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3430 574	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3431 573	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3432 572	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3433 571	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3434 570	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3435 569	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3436 568	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3437 567	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3438 566	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3439 565	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3440 564	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3441 563	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3442 562	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3443 561	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3444 560	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3445 559	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3446 558	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3447 557	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3448 556	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3449 555	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3450 554	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3451 553	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3452 552	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3453 551	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3454 550	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3455 549	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3456 548	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3457 547	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3458 546	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3459 545	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3460 544	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3461 543	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3462 542	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3463 541	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3464 540	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3465 539	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3466 538	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3467 537	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3468 536	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3469 535	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3470 534	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3471 533	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3472 532	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3473 531	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3474 530	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3475 529	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3476 528	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3477 527	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3478 526	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3479 525	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3480 524	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3481 523	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3482 522	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3483 521	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3484 520	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3485 519	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3486 518	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3487 517	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3488 516	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3489 515	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3490 514	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3491 513	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3492 512	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3493 511	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3494 510	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3495 509	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3496 508	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3497 507	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3498 506	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3499 505	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.
3500 504	Artaban succeeds his father Aleatas in the kingdom of Media, and reigns 50 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.	3501 503	Cyrus, king of Persia, is appointed king of the Medes, and reigns 30 years	Idem. l. i. l. c. 31.

A CHRONOLOGICAL INDEX TO THE HOLY BIBLE.

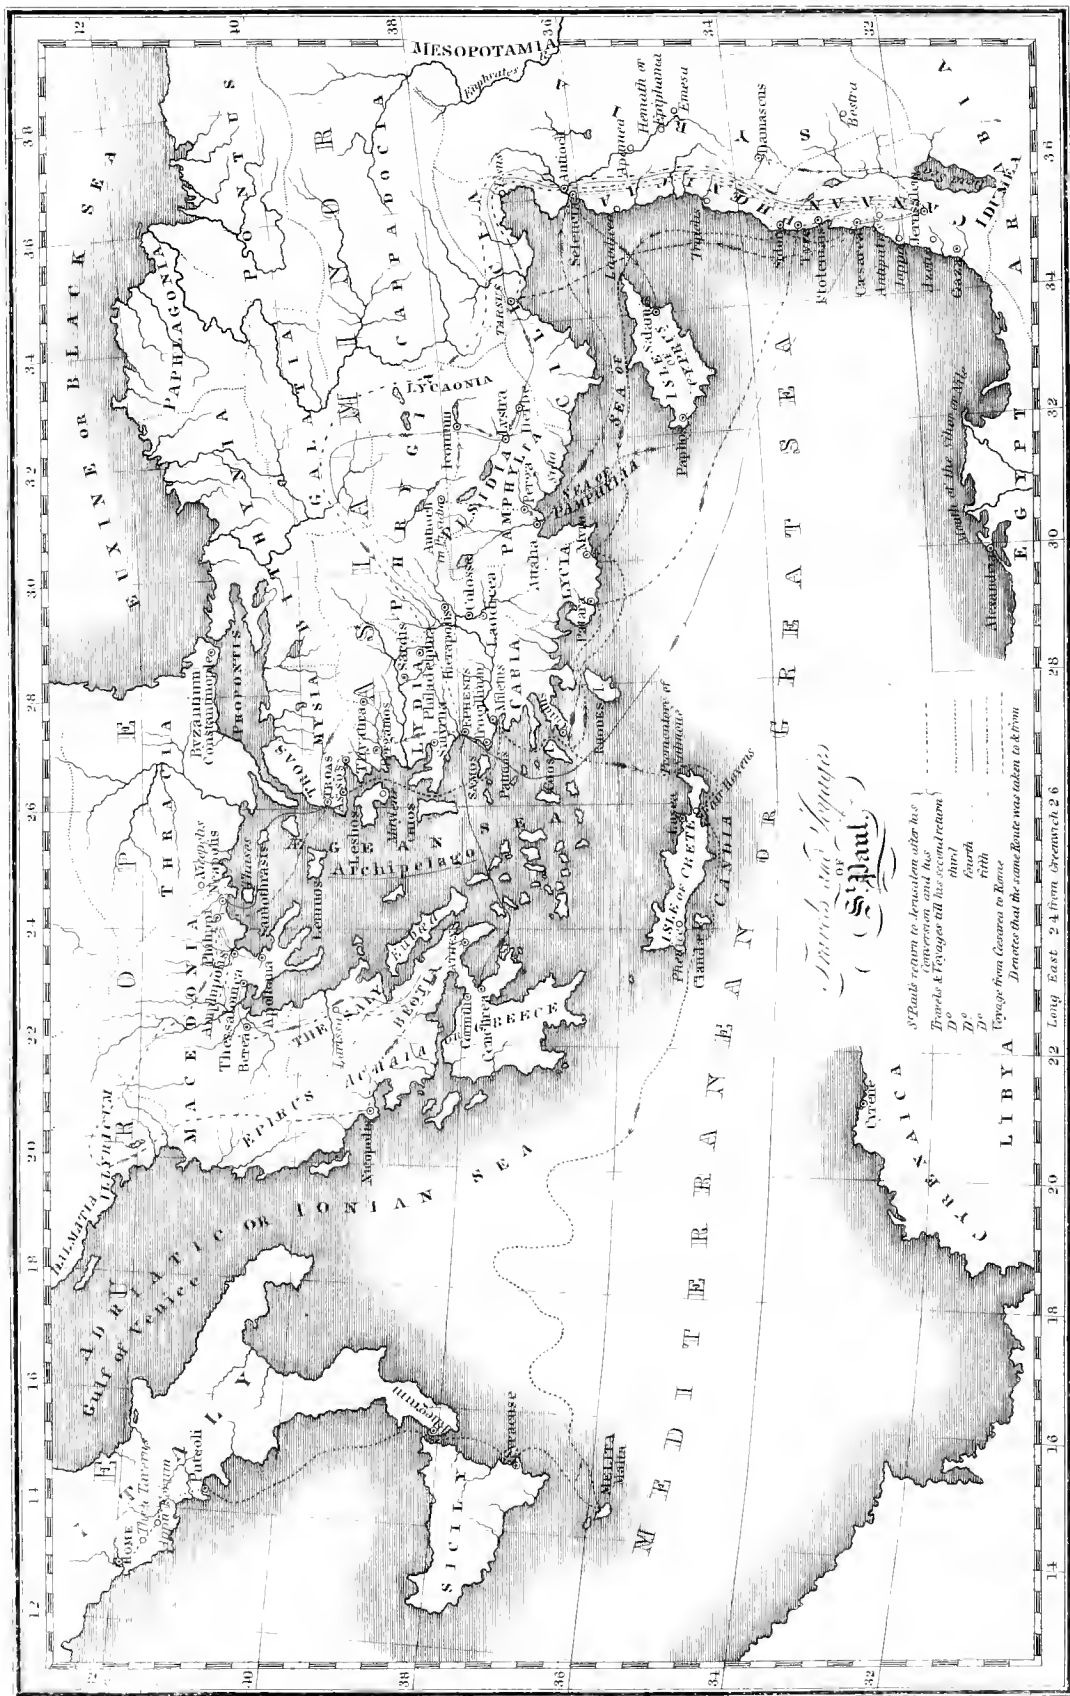

A.M. B.C.		A.M. B.C.
3504 500	The Athenians, having entered into a confederacy with the Ionians against Persus, burn Sardis, which gives rise to the Persian war against the Greeks.	3600 404	Athena is taken by Lysander, which puts an end to the Peloponnesian war, and is governed by 30 tyrants.	Diod. Lxiii. Xen. Hel. I. i. Plut. in Ly.
3507 497	Alexander, son of Amyntas, succeeds his father on the throne of Macedonia, and reigns 34 years.	3603 401	Panamtichus succeeds Pansiris on the throne of Egypt, and reigns six years.	Diod. Sic. l. xiv. Diod. Justin. l. v. c. 11 Plut. in Ar.
3513 491	The Persians invade Attica, and are defeated at Marathon with great loss, and obliged to retreat to their ships, and peace into Asia.	3604 400	Xenophon accomplishes his glorious retreat with the 10,000 Greeks who had followed Cyrus. Socrates is put to death by the Athenians for condemning their gods.	Xen. Exped. Cyr. Diod. Lxiv. Justin. l. v. c. 11 Plut. in Socr.
3517 487	Leontides, of the family of Eurysthenes, begins to reign at Lacedæmon, and reigns 21 years.	3605 399	The thirty tyrants expelled from Athens by Thrasybulus.	Diod. Lxiv. Justin. l. v. c. 11 Plut. in Thr.
3518 476	Darius, after making great preparations for the invasion of Greece and Egypt, dies, and is succeeded on the Persian throne by his son Xerxes, who reigns 21 years.	3606 398	Amyntas succeeds to the throne of Macedonia.	Diod. Sic. l. xiv. Justin. l. v. c. 11 Plut. in Ar.
3519 475	Xerxes confirms to the Jews all the privileges granted to them by his father.	3607 397	Amyntas II. succeeds Amyntas, and reigns 24 years.	Justin. l. v. c. 11 Plut. in Ar.
3520 474	He invades and reduces the Egyptians. Herodotus, the celebrated historian, is born at Halicarnassus, in Caria.	3608 396	Agessalus, son of Archidamus, of the family of Procles, succeeds to the throne of Lacedæmon, and reigns 36 years.	Justin. l. v. c. 11 Plut. in Ar.
3521 473	Joshua, high priest of the Jews, dies in the 53d year of his pontificate, and is succeeded by his son Jotham.	3609 395	Agessalus, of the family of Eurysthenes, ascends the throne of Lacedæmon, and reigns 17 years.	Justin. l. v. c. 11 Plut. in Ar.
3522 470	Pistarchus, son of Leonidas, of the family of the Eurysthenides, succeeds to the Spartan throne, under the guardianship of Pausanias.	3610 394	Nepherus succeeds Panmtichus on the throne of Egypt, and reigns six years.	C. Nep. in Con. Justin. l. v. c. 11 Plut. in Ar.
3523 469	Xerxes having invaded Greece with an immense army, loses the battle of Salamis, and is obliged to fly to Sardis.	3611 393	Comon rebuilds the walls of Athens, and restores it to its pristine state.	C. Nep. in Con. Justin. l. v. c. 11 Plut. in Ar.
3525 479	The Persians are vanquished at Platea and Mycale on the same day.	3612 392	Amyntas, king of Macedonia, is deposed by the Thracians, and Arceas succeeds to the throne; but in the same year the former is restored by the Thracians and Spartans.	Justin. l. v. c. 2, 4, 5. Diod. Lxiv. Justin. l. v. c. 11 Plut. in Ar.
3526 478	Xerxes, on his return toward Susa, destroys the temple of Bel, and other temples, at Babylon, breaks down their images, and carries off their treasures.	3613 391	Achoris succeeds Nepherus in the kingdom of Egypt, and reigns 14 years.	Diod. Lxiv. Justin. l. v. c. 11 Plut. in Ar.
3528 479	The Persians are vanquished at Platea and Mycale on the same day.	3614 390	The peace of Antalcidas is made between the Lacedæmonians and Persians, by which the Greek cities in Asia are restored tributary to Persia.	Diod. Lxiv. Justin. l. v. c. 11 Plut. in Ar.
3536 478	Xerxes, on his return toward Susa, destroys the temple of Bel, and other temples, at Babylon, breaks down their images, and carries off their treasures.	3615 389	Aristotle the philosopher is born.	Diod. Lxiv. Justin. l. v. c. 11 Plut. in Ar.
3535 469	Archidamus, grandson of Leontides, of the family of Procles, succeeds him on the throne of Lacedæmon, and reigns 33 years.	3616 388	Cleombrotus, son of Pausanias, of the family of Eurysthenes, succeeds to the throne of Sparta, and reigns nine years.	Diod. Lxiv. Justin. l. v. c. 11 Plut. in Ar.
3538 466	Pistarchus, son of Leonidas, of the family of the Eurysthenides, succeeds to the Spartan throne, under the guardianship of Pausanias.	3617 387	Pennantius succeeds Achoris in the kingdom of Egypt, and reigns only one year.	Euseb. in Chr. p. 127.
3539 465	Xerxes, after having given up his unsuccessful war against the Greeks, is treacherously slain by Artabanus.	3618 386	Nepherus succeeds Pennantius; and after a reign of four months, he is succeeded by Nectanebus, who reigns 12 years.	Ibid. Diod. Sic. l. xv. C. Nep. in Con. Justin. l. v. c. 11 Plut. in Ar.
3540 464	Artaxerxes Longimanus, the Abasarius of Esdras, having been led by Artabanus to slay his eldest brother, ascends the Persian throne, and to secure himself, slays Artabanus.	3619 385	The Persians under Darius invade Egypt, and are obliged to retreat with ill success.	Ibid. Diod. Sic. l. xv. C. Nep. in Con. Justin. l. v. c. 11 Plut. in Ar.
3541 463	Artaxerxes conquers his brother Histaspes.	3620 384	Johanan, called also Jozabab, succeeds his father Juchan in the priesthood of the Jews, which he holds for 32 years.	No. 12. II. 22; 13. 28 Chron. Alex.
3542 462	Being thus fully established on the throne, he makes a great feast for his nobles; and divorces Vashti, his queen, for disobedience.	3621 383	The Lacedæmonians are overthrown by the Thebans at Leuctra, where Cleombrotus is slain, who is succeeded by his son Agessalus II. who reigns one year.	Diod. Lxiv. Justin. l. v. c. 11 Plut. in Ar.
3544 460	The Egyptians revolt, and make Inarus their king.	3622 382	Alexander II. son of Amyntas, succeeds to the throne of Macedonia; but is murdered the following year by his younger brother Ptolemy, who reigns four years.	Justin. l. v. c. 5.
3545 459	Achæmides, brother of Artaxerxes, is slain by the Egyptians, and the remainder of his army besieged in Memphis.	3623 381	Cleomenes I. brother of Agessalus, of the family of Eurysthenes, succeeds him on the throne of Sparta, and reigns 40 years.	Pausa. I. III. c. 6.
3546 458	Esdras, the Jew, pleases the king, and is made queen instead of Vashti.	3624 380	Johanan, high priest of the Jews, kills his brother Jeshua in the temple, for which the nation is fined by the Persians for seven years.	Justin. l. v. c. 5.
3547 457	Esdras is sent by Artaxerxes as governor of Judea. Monipal discovers the treason of Bethan and Teresh.	3625 379	Perdiccas III. succeeds to the throne of Macedonia, and reigns six years.	Justin. l. v. c. 5.
3548 456	Esdras arriving at Jerusalem, with priests and Levites, and a large company, and considerably treasure, separates the Jews from their heathen wives.	3626 378	Nectanebus succeeds Perdiccas in the kingdom of Egypt.	Diod. Lxiv.
3550 454	Artabazus and Megabazus having raised the siege of Memphis and defeated Inarus, take him prisoner, and again reduce all Egypt under the Persian king.	3627 377	Agessalus, who had come to assist him against the Persians, revolts from him, and makes Nectanebus king.	Ibid. Plut. in Agesila.
3551 453	Perdiccas II. succeeds his father Alexander on the throne of Macedonia, and reigns 41 years.	3628 376	Archidamus, of the family of Procles, succeeds his father on the throne of Lacedæmon, and reigns 23 years.	Justin. l. v. c. 5.
3552 452	Human plots the destruction of the Jews. Hannibal is defeated in his own destruction. In remembrance of which the feast of Purim is instituted.	3629 375	Philip, son of Amyntas, succeeds to the throne of Macedonia, and reigns 24 years.	Justin. l. v. c. 5.
3553 451	Nehemiah is sent governor to Judea, with extensive powers, and rebuilds the walls of Jerusalem.	3630 374	Artaxerxes Mneonon dies, and is succeeded on the Persian throne by Artaban, who reigns 21 years.	Diod. Lxiv. Justin. l. v. c. 5.
3554 450	He re-occupies Jerusalem, and proceeds to reform both the civil and ecclesiastical state of the nation.	3631 373	Alexander the Great, son of Philip, is born at Pella in Macedonia.	Justin. l. v. c. 5.
3555 449	About this time it is supposed that Esdras prepared and set forth a correct edition of the Scriptures.	3632 372	Ochus gubalus Cyrus and Pharnaces, takes and destroys Sidon, takes many of the Jews captive, and sends them to Hyrcania, on the shore of the Caspian Sea.	Diod. Lxiv. Justin. l. v. c. 5.
3556 448	Nehemiah goes to the Persian court.	3633 371	He invades Egypt, expels Nectanebus, and reduces the whole country; which has ever since been enslaved to his successors.	Diod. Lxiv. Justin. l. v. c. 5.
3557 447	He begins his famous lunar cycle, also called the golden number, from the numbers being anciently written in golden letters.	3634 370	Plato, the celebrated Athenian philosopher, dies, aged 80.	Diod. Lxiv. Justin. l. v. c. 5.
3558 446	The war between the Athenians and Lacedæmonians, called the Peloponnesian war, begins, and continues 27 years.	3635 369	Ochus king of Persia, is poisoned by Bagoas, who makes Argeus or Arsaces king.	Diod. Lxiv. Justin. l. v. c. 5.
3559 445	About this time Nehemiah is supposed to have returned to Judea, and reformed the abuses which had crept in during his absence.	3636 368	Agessalus, of the family of the Proclides, succeeds to the throne of Sparta, and reigns 8 years.	Diod. Lxiv. Justin. l. v. c. 5.
3560 444	Plato, the celebrated philosopher, is born.	3637 367	Philip, king of Macedonia, is made general of all Greece against the Persians.	Justin. l. v. c. 5.
3561 443	Agis, son of Archidamus, of the family of Procles, ascends the throne of Lacedæmon, and reigns 36 years.	3638 366	Bagoas poisons Argeus, and is put to death by Darius Codomanus, who ascends the throne of Persia.	Diod. Lxiv. Justin. l. v. c. 5.
3562 442	Artaxerxes dies, and is succeeded by Xerxes his son, who is slain by Sogdianus, and he by Ochus, or Darius Nothus, who reigns 19 years.	3639 365	Philip, king of Macedonia, is slain, and is succeeded by his son Alexander the Great.	Justin. l. v. c. 5.
3563 441	About this time Malachi prophesies.	3640 364	Alexander the Great is appointed general of Greece against the Persians.	Justin. l. v. c. 5.
3564 440	The Egyptians revolt from Darius, and make Amyntas their king, who reigns six years.	3641 363	He passes over into Asia, and gains a victory over Darius at the Granicus.	Justin. l. v. c. 5.
3565 439	Archidamus succeeds Perdiccas on the throne of Macedonia, and reigns 23 years.	3642 362	He reduces Asia Minor, and gains another great victory over Darius at Issus.	Justin. l. v. c. 5.
3566 438	Jofada succeeds his father Elashib as high priest of the Jews, and holds the pontificate 40 years.	3643 361	He destroys Tyre and Gaza, visits Jerusalem peacefully, and conquers Egypt.	Justin. l. v. c. 5.
3567 437	About this time Nehemiah effects his last act of reformation, and banishes Manasseh, the son of Jofada, who builds the temple on mount Gerizim.	3644 360	He passes the Euphrates and Tigris, and obtains a decisive victory over Darius at Arbela; and thus terminates the Macedonian empire, which is succeeded by the Grecian or Macedonian.	Justin. l. v. c. 5.
3568 436	Pausanias of the family of the Eurysthenides, succeeds to the throne of Sparta, and reigns 11 years.	3645 359	Darius is slain by the traitor Bessus.	Justin. l. v. c. 5.
3569 435	Pansiris succeeds Amyntas on the throne of Egypt, and reigns six years.	3646 358	Endimidas, of the family of Procles, succeeds to the Spartan throne, and reigns 36 years.	Justin. l. v. c. 5.
3570 434	Darius Nothus dies, and is succeeded by Artaxerxes Mneonon, who reigns 16 years.	3647 357	Alexander, after the most extensive and splendid conquests, dies at Babylon; and Philip Arrhan, his brother, succeeds nominally as king, while the commanders of his army divide the empire among them.	Justin. l. v. c. 5.
		3648 356	Onias succeeds Jaddua in the high priesthood, and holds the pontificate 21 years.	Justin. l. v. c. 5.
		3649 355	Ptolemy Soter seizes upon Phoenicia, Syria, and Judæa, takes Jerusalem, and carries a great number of Jews into Egypt; where they form a colony at Alexandria.	Justin. l. v. c. 5.

A CHRONOLOGICAL INDEX TO THE HOLY BIBLE.

3698 30 Philip being slain by Olympias, is succeeded on the throne by Alexander Ægus 3699 214 Antiochus succeeds Ptolemy of Judæa &c Cassand' rionderz Alexander Ægus, with Roxana his mother 3700 301 Arsas, of Arctos, of the family of Eurythenes, succeeds to the throne of Macedonia, and reigns 44 years 3703 301 Antigonus being conquered, the dominions of Alexander are formed into four kingdoms Egypt, with Judæa, Phoenicia, and Coele Syria, under Ptolemy Soter, Macedonia and Greece, under Cassander, Thracia, Bithynia, & under Lyfymachus, and Syria, with all the east, under Seleucus. 3704 306 Onitis dies, and is succeeded in the high priesthood by Simon the first 3706 288 Cassand' rion, and Philip who succeeds him, dying soon after, leaves the crown to be contended for between his two brothers Antipater and Alexander 3708 286 Demetrius, son of Antigonus, wastes Samaria 3710 296 Archelaus, son of Endimius, of the family of Ptolemies, succeeds to the throne 3710 291 Antipater having been forced to fly into Thrace, in consequence of having murdered his mother Demetria, kills Alexander, and seizes upon the throne of Macedonia 3712 292 Simon the just d's, and is succeeded in the high priesthood by his brother Eleazar, who holds it 15 years 3712 287 The soldiers of Demetrius having revolted from him make Pyrrhus king of Macedonia 3715 286 Lysimachus having expelled Pyrrhus, seizes up on the throne of Macedonia 3720 284 Philadelphus, having placed his son Ptolemy Philopator on the throne, dies, and Perseus the elder son flies out of Egypt, first to Lysimachus, and then to Seleucus 3723 281 Lysimachus is slain in battle by Seleucus, who seizes on all his domins 3724 281 Seleucus is slain by Ptolemy Ceraunus, who thereupon becomes k'nt of Macedonia 3725 279 Antiochus Soter succeeds his father Seleucus on the throne of Syria, and reigns 19 years Ptolemy Ceraunus is slain by the Gauls, who had invaded Macedon, and is succeeded by Melicertes, who reigns only two months Seleneus countermands the Gauls; but he is slain by them the following year, under the command of Brennus 3727 277 Antipater ascends the throne of Macedonia, and reigns only 45 days; when he is succeeded by Antigonius Gonatus, who reigns 34 years After this time the Hebrew Scriptures are translated into Greek by order of Philadelphus 3728 276 Menelaus succeeds Onitis in the high priesthood Endimidas, son of Archidamus, of the family of Procles, succeeds to the Spartan throne, and reigns 20 years 3729 365 Areus, son of Arsas, of the family of Eurythenes, succeeds his father on the throne of Sparta, and reigns only one year 3730 264 He is succeeded by his son Arsas II, who reigns seven years 3731 261 Antiochus Soter, king of Syria, dies, and is succeeded by his son Antiochus Thus 3737 257 Leonidas, of the family of the Eurysphenides, succeeds areus II, on the throne of Sparta 3754 2 0 The Parthians rebel from Antiochus, headed by Arsaces, who founds the Parthian empire Mannaes, the highest priest, dies, and is succeeded by Darius III, the son of Smerdis the just 3755 249 Peace is made between the Romans and Antiochus, on the terms that the latter shall divorce his wife Laodice, and marry Berenice, daughter of Ptolemy 3757 247 Ptolemy Philadelphus d's, and is succeeded by his son Ptolemy Evergetes 3758 246 Antiochus drives away Berenice and recalls Laodice, who poisons him, cuts off Berenice and her son, and places Seleucus Callinicus, her son on the throne Ptolemy to revenge the death of his sister, slays Laodice and subdues all Syria & Cilicia, and, returning to Egypt laden with spoil, he orders many Jews killed at Jerusalem 3760 244 Ages, son of Endimidis, of the family of Procles, succeeds to the throne of Sparta, and reigns 14 years 3761 243 Ptolemy makes peace with Seleucus Cleomachus d's, his father in law, Leonidas from the throne of Sparta, when he usurps two years Demetrius succeeds his father Antigonus on the throne of Macedonia, and reigns 11 years 3763 241 Leonidas is restored to the throne of Sparta 3769 235 Helmenes succeeds his father Leonidas 3772 232 Antiochus being long persecuted by his nephew Philip, son of Demetrius, usurps the throne of Macedonia, and reigns 11 years Seleucus is vanquished, and taken prisoner by the Parthians Arch Amans, of the family of Procles, succeeds to the throne of Sparta, and reigns six years 3779 225 Cleomenes kills his royal colleague, and makes his brother Cleus das king, who reigns six years Seleucus Callinicus dies in Parthia, and is succeeded by his son Seleucus Ceraunus, who reigns three years 3781 223 Ceraunus is persecuted by his attendants, and succeeded by his brother Antiochus the Great 3782 222 Cleomenes, king of Sparta, is defeated at Solothia by the Achæans, and is forced to fly into Egypt 3783 221 Ptolemy Philopator succeeds his father on the throne of Egypt, and reigns 45 years Philip, son of Demetrius, drives out Antigonus on the throne of Macedonia, and reigns 4 years 3785 219 Cleomenes kills himself, and Lycurgus and Aepolis succeed to the throne of Macedonia, under whom the monarchial power is almost abolished Antiochus having seized upon Phenicia and Coele-Syria, overthrows the forces of Ptolemy, and makes himself master of Galilee &c.	Diod Sic lxxix Justin lxxv Diod ant sup Diod lxxix Pausanias Boeot. Pausanias lili c 6 Diod 7 688 Diod Sic lxxx Plut in Democritum Appian in Syr Polybius lgh v Jos Ant xii c 2 Chr Alex Euseb. Dexippus and Pappus in Euseb. Chr p 70 59 63 Euseb. in Chr. Pausanias. Helen in Boet Plut. in Demet. Epiph. Just lxi c 1. Jos Ant lxi c 2 Philochorus in Chr Al Plut in Demet. and Tyrrho Justin lxx c 3 Pausanias lxx c 3 Just lxxvi c 2 Plut in Demet Phil Appian in Syr Just lxxvi c 2 Appian in Syr Just lxxvi c 2 Pausanias in Att. Euseb in Chr Just lxxv c 5 Pausanias c 15 Memn. x c 15 Just ant sup Just lxxv c 4 Polybius l c 6 Joseph Ant lxx c 2 Arrian lxx Philarchus in Pnycho Trogus in Probato lxxv Justin lxi c 4 Strabo lxi p 15. Jos Ant lxi c 3 Just iij 56 Polybius Strat lxxv c 50 Athen lxx c 10 Ath lxx c 10 Clem Phil. Deo iij 56 Plut lvi c 12 Val Max lxi c 4 Ap in Syr. Deo iij 56 Putsch. lxi Monima Attil Jos c Ap lxi Paus lxxv c 10 Justin xxviii c 2 Helen lvi c 6 Plut in Cleom Just lxxv c 2 Polybius d. Polybius l vi Justin lxi c 1 Plut in Cleom Just lxxv c 2 Athen lxi c 13 Just lxx c 4 5. Justin lxxviii Plut in Cleom. Justin lxxviii c 3 Helen lxxv c 5 Polybius lvi. Plut in Vit Deo iij 56 Polybius lvi Plut in Cleom Just lxxv c 2 Plut in Cleom. Polybius lvi Just lxxv ii c 5 Da illo Polybius v.	3785 217 Onitis succeeds his father Simon in the high priesthood, when he reigned 22 years Ptolemy gains a great victory over Antiochus at Raphia, and coming to Jerusalem, he attempts to enter the Holy of Holies, but is hindered by angels 3788 216 Having made peace with Antiochus, he attempts to destroy all the Jews at Alexandria, but fails 3790 204 Ptolemy Philopator dies, and is succeeded by Ptolemy Lathyrus, then only five years of age 3801 203 Antiochus combines with Philip of Macedonia to divide the dominions of Ptolemy between them, and attacks Jerusalem and Coele Syria 3803 201 The Egyptians impose the assistance of the Romans for their anti king, who send M. Embulus Lepidus into Egypt 3805 199 Antiochus being engaged in war with Antillas, King of Pergamens, neglects all Judæa, and makes a grant of Judea and Coele Syria 3806 195 Having made peace with Antiochus, Antiochus vanquishes Scopus at Panais, and recovers all he had lost 3809 195 Handled, the celebrated Carthaginian general places himself under the protection of Antiochus, and confides in him in his resolution of making war on the Romans Simon the high priest d's, and is succeeded by his son Onias III, who holds the pontificate 24 years 3811 193 Antiochus marries his daughter Cleopatra to Ptolemy Epiphanes, King of Egypt 3813 191 Having made peace with Antiochus against the Romans, he is driven back into Asia 3814 190 Lucius Scipio, the Roman consul, follows him, and by a complete victory compels him to make an unconditioned peace 3816 187 Philopompus takes Macedonia, and abolishes the laws of Lycurgus for a short period 3817 187 Antiochus is slain, while attempting to rob the temple of Eleusis, and is succeeded by his son Seleucus Philopator 3824 180 Ptolemy Epiphanes may have been poisoned, is succeeded by his son Lathyrus, then only six years of age 3825 179 Perses, succeeds his father Philip on the throne of Macedonia, and reigns 11 years 3828 176 Heliodorus, by order of Seleucus, attempts to rob the temple, but is prevented by an angel Seleucus is personified by Heliodorus, who attempts to rob the temple 3829 175 Antiochus, the brother of Seleucus, obtains the kingdom by flatteries, and reigns 11 years Jazon buys the high priesthood of Iliu, and supplants his brother Antias 3832 172 Menelaus supplants Jazon his brother, by buying the high priesthood of Iliu 3833 171 Onias is put to death at Antiochus, and Lysimachus, the deputy of Menelaus, is slain in a tumult at Jerusalem Antiochus gains a great victory over the forces of Ptolemy near Belus 3834 169 He sends a colony of Jews into Asia, and makes himself master of all Egypt, except Alexandria A report having spread of his death, Jazon prizes Jerusalem, and puts many to death Antiochus hears that the Jews rejected all the news of his death, takes Jerusalem, slays 40,000 persons, sells as many Jews into slaves, and burns and profanes the temple The Alexa strikes hydro Phrycon, brother of Ptolemy Philometor king of Egypt 3835 163 Antiochus again invades Egypt, and attempts the siege of Alexandria, without success 3836 162 Hearing that the two brothers had agreed to return in peace, he returns into Judæa, Egypt, but is compelled by the Romans to return Stung with rage, he despatches Apollonius to complete the ruin of Jerusalem, who builds the fortress on mount Acra, and begins his persecution of the Jews in high religion Antiochus and his sons take up arms The Romans having conquered Ptolema at Pydna, terminate the kingdom of Macedonia 3837 167 The seven Macedonian brethren and their mother martyred, and the persecution of the Jews carried on with great violence 3838 165 Matthias, Seer, and is succeeded by his son Jonathan, who obtains most splendid victories over the generals of Antiochus Epiphanes 3839 163 He vanquishes Lysimach, recovers Jerusalem, and restores the daily sacrifice and the worship of the temple 3840 164 Antiochus Epiphanes dies miserably in the East, and is succeeded by his son Antiochus Eupator 3841 163 Judas, after various successes against the surrounding enemies of the Jews again vanquishes Lysias, and composes him to peace Mercators are slain, and Alcimus made high priest 3842 162 Demetrius Soter, son of Seleucus Nicator, enters Jerusalem, kills Antiochus Eupator, and succeeds to the throne of Syria 3843 161 Nicomed, sent by Demetrius against the Jews, is slain by Judas, with all his army, but the children, sent to savage the blow, saves Judas who is succeeded by Jonathan Alcimus, the high priest, dies, and Bacchides leaving Jerusalem, the Jews enjoy peace
--	---	--

A CHRONOLOGICAL INDEX TO THE HOLY BIBLE.

8360	14	Jonathan, after various successes, in support of the son of Alexander Balas, against Demetrius, is treacherously murdered by Tryphon, and succeeded by Simon	1 Mac. 11.54. &c. xii. Ant. 11.11. L. xii. c. 9, 10.	3740	30	Cleopatra having vanquished Antony and Cleopatra, compels them to kill themselves, and reduces Egypt into a Roman province	Plut. in Anton. Dion. Cass. l. li.
361	143	Tryphon murders the young Antiochus, and declares himself king; but Simon declaring for Demetrius, and defeating his designs upon Judea, is made sovereign ruler	1 Mac. 13.71. & Jos. Ant. 11.13. c. 12. L. Ep. 55.	3957	17	He acquires the monarchy of the Roman empire, with the title of Caesar Augustus	Idem, l. iii. l. iii.
362	142	Simon demolishes the fortress of Acra, and levels the hill on which it stood	1 Mac. 13.49. 55. Jos. Ant. Ant. 11.	3998	18	The angel Gabriel announces the birth of John the Baptist	Jos. Ant. l. xv. c. 14.
363	141	The sovereignty of Judea is confirmed to Simon, and to his posterity, by a general assembly of the Jews at Jerusalem; and the Jews then from all tribute to any foreign prince	Id. l. xiii. c. 13. 1 Mac. 14.26. 29.	3999	5	He announces to Mary the birth of the Messiah	Lu. l. i. 26.
364	140	Demetrius being taken prisoner by the Parthians, his brother, Antiochus Sidetes, invited by his queen, ascends the throne	Jos. Ant. l. xiii. c. 12. Appian in Syr.	840	4	John the Baptist is born	26. 57. 26
365	135	Simon, with two of his sons, is basely murdered by Ptolemy his son-in-law, and is succeeded by his son John Hyrcanus	1 Mac. xvi. Jos. Ant. L. xii. c. 14. 15. Jos. L. xxxv. c. 4.			Christ is born at Bethlehem of Judah
367	133	Antiochus, king of Pergamus, bequeaths his kingdom to the Romans	Flor. l. i. c. 20.
368	129	Antiochus is slain in the East; and Demetrius, Nicator returns, and recovers his kingdom	Jos. L. xxxviii. c. 10.
369	135	Hyrcanus shakes off the Syrian yoke, makes him self independent, and destroys the temple on mount vertum	Jos. Ant. l. xiii. c. 16, 17.
375	129	He conquers the Edumites, compels them to be circumcised, and incorporates them among the Jews	Id. l. xiv. c. 11. Strabo, l. vi.
373	126	Demetrius being slain, the impostor Zebina as assumes the throne of Syria, and reigns two years	Jos. Ant. xii. 11. Just. l. xxxix.
381	123	Antiochus Sidetes is made king of Syria, and conquers Zebina, who is afterwards slain	Jos. L. xxi. c. 1. 2. Appian in Syr.
387	117	Ptolemy Ptolemy, king of Egypt, dies, and is succeeded by Ptolemy Lathyrus. In conjunction with his mother Cleopatra	Just. l. xxxix. c. 2. Flor. l. xiii.
390	114	Antiochus Cyzicenus seizes part of Syria, and reigns at Damascus, while Gryllus reigns at Antioch	Just. l. xxxix. c. 2.3. Porphyry in Gr.
395	109	Aristobolus and Antigonus, sons of Hyrcanus, take and utterly destroy Samaria	Jos. Ant. l. xvi. c. 19.
397	107	Hyrcanus dies, and is succeeded by his son Aristobolus, who first assumes the insignia and title of king	Id. l. xvi. c. 19. Id. l. xvi. c. 19.
398	106	Aristobolus dies, and is succeeded by his brother Alexander Jannæus, who reigns, with great success, during 27 years	Jos. Ant. l. xvi. c. 19. & c. Bel. l. i. c. 3.
397	97	Antiochus is succeeded by his son Seleucus	Id. Ant. xii. 21.
398	94	Seleucus slays Cyzicenus, king of Damascus, who is succeeded by Antiochus Eusebius	Id. l. xvi. c. 19.
391	93	Seleucus is vanquished by Eusebius, and succeeded by Demetrius	Id. l. xvi. c. 19.
392	92	Eusebius is vanquished by Philip, and succeeded by Demetrius	Id. l. xvi. c. 19.
397	87	Demetrius dies in Parthia, and is succeeded by Dionysius	Jos. Ant. l. xvi. c. 19.
392	83	Tigranes, king of Armenia, is chosen king by the Syrians	Id. l. xvi. c. 19.
394	80	Ptolemy Lathyrus, king of Egypt, dies, and is succeeded by Alexander, who reigns 15 years	Jos. Ant. l. xvi. c. 19.
395	79	Jannæus dies, and is succeeded by his wife Alexandra, who makes her eldest son Hyrcanus high priest	Id. l. xvi. c. 19.
394	70	Alexandra dies, and is succeeded by Hyrcanus, who is succeeded by his brother Aristobolus	Jos. Ant. l. xvi. c. 19.
393	65	Pompey reduces Syria into a province; and thus terminates the Macedonian empire	Id. l. xvi. c. 19.
391	63	The Alexandrians expel Alexander, and make Ptolemy Auletes king, who reigns 12 years	Id. l. xvi. c. 19.
394	63	Pompey, appealed to by Aristobolus and Hyrcanus, decides for the latter, takes Jerusalem, and makes Judæa a tributary	Jos. Ant. l. xvi. c. 19.
397	57	Aristobolus, and Alexander his son, raise disturbances in Judæa; but are vanquished by Gabinius, governor of Syria	Jos. Ant. l. xvi. c. 19.
390	54	Cicero, the Roman general, plunders the temple; and the next year is slain in Parthia	Id. Ant. xii. 12.
393	51	Ptolemy Auletes, king of Egypt, dies, and is succeeded by his daughter Cleopatra and his eldest son Ptolemy	Id. Ant. xii. 12.
395	48	Julius Cæsar prevails against Pompey at Pharsalia, who flies into Egypt, and is treacherously murdered	Id. Ant. xii. 12.
397	47	Antipater appointed governor of Judæa by Cæsar	Id. Ant. xii. 12.
390	43	Julius Cæsar is murdered in the senate	Jos. Ant. xii. 12.
391	43	Antipater is followed by his son Herod, and succeeded by Herod and Phasael, who revenge his death on the murderer	Jos. Ant. xii. 12.
394	40	The Parthians take Jerusalem, slay Phasael, make Hyrcanus prisoner, and place Antigonus, son of Aristobolus, on the throne; but Herod, a client of Rome, is constituted king of Judæa	Jos. Ant. xii. 12.
397	37	Herod, after various miseries, takes Jerusalem after a year's siege, and is fully established in royal authority, which he holds with great ability, though with great cruelty, for 34 years	Jos. Ant. xii. 12.

Travels in Egypt
(S. Paul)

S. Paul's return to Jerusalem after his conversion, and his travels & voyages till his second return
 1st 2nd 3rd 4th 5th
 Voyage from Caesarea to Rome
 Directed that the same route was taken to return

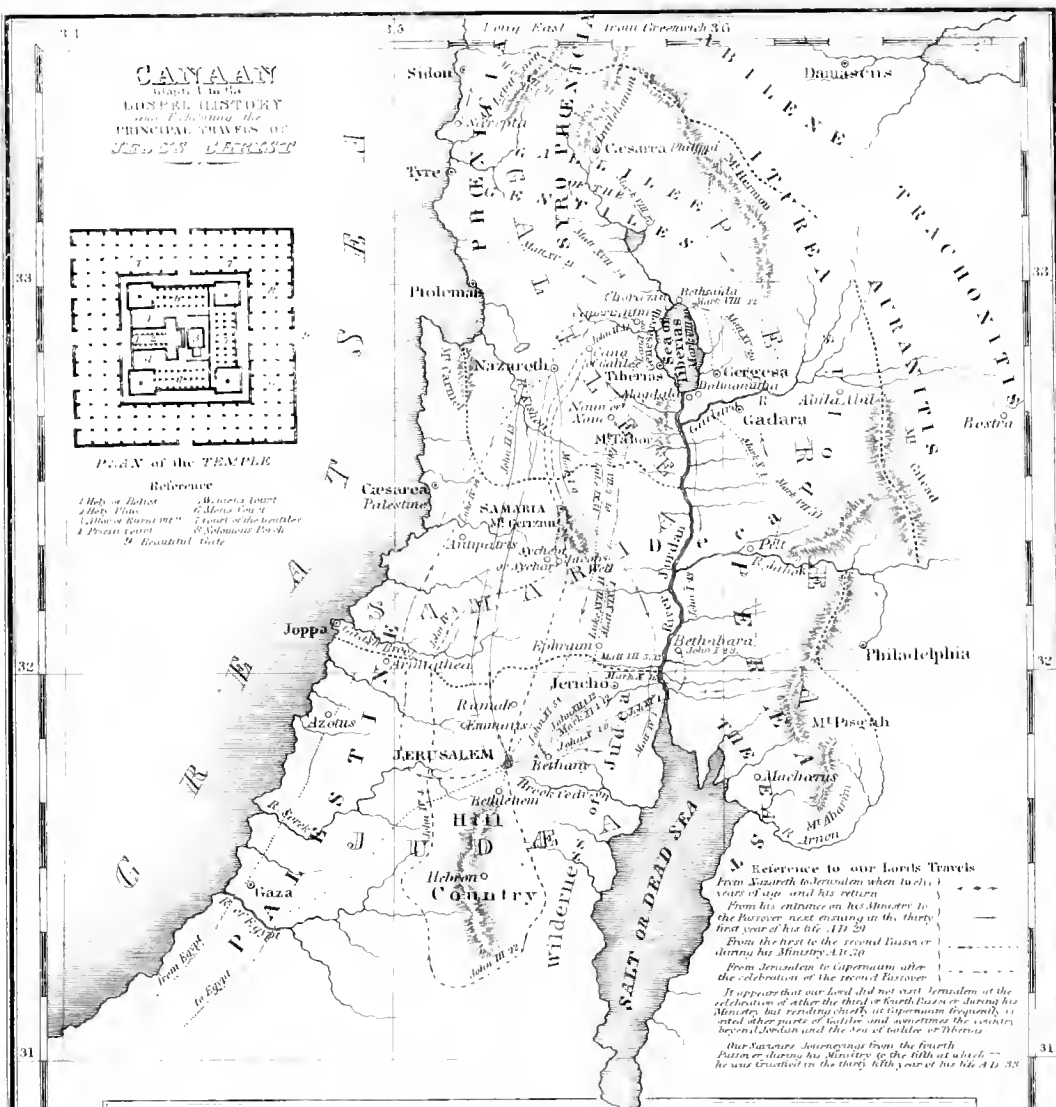

22 Long East 24 from Greenwich 26

PLAN of the TEMPLE

Reference

2 Holy or Holiest	2. H. most Holy
2 Holy Place	6. Most Holy
1. Most or Highest Mt	7. Mt of the Saviour
2. Procession	8. Synagogue Place

9. Beautiful Gate

↓ Reference to our Lords Travels

From Nazareth to Jerusalem when twelve } years of age and his return }
From his entrance on his Ministry to } the Passover next ensuing in the thirty } first year of his life. AD 29 }
From the first to the second Passover } during his Ministry. AD 30 }

From Jerusalem to Capernaum after the celebration of the second Passover

It appears that our Lord did not visit Jerusalem at the celebration of either the third or fourth Passover or during his Ministry, but residing chiefly at Capernaum frequently visited other parts of Galilee and sometimes the country beyond Jordan and the Sea of Galilee or Tiberias.

Our Supreme Journeyman from the fourth Passion during his Ministry to the fifth at which -- he was crucified in the thirty fifth year of his life A.D. 33

PLAN OF THE
CITY OF JERUSALEM

REFERENCES

4. Jeppia House
5. Thangalok Palace
6. Annamalai House
7. Thendral Palace
8. The Serangoon Palace
9. Lawson Park Road
10. Fort Market
11. Jeppia Palace Prison
12. Fort Market
13. Shree Market
14. Pal of Rathapalay
15. Palace Museum
16. Fort Market
17. Submarine House
18. Thangalok House
19. Annamalai House
20. Fort Prison
21. The Queen's House
22. The Palace
23. Thangalok Palace
24. House in Robinson Road
25. The Annapurna
26. Fort of Rathapalay
27. Fort Market
28. House in Market
29. Jeppia Palace
30. Thangalok House
31. Fort Market
32. Fort Market
33. Fort Market
34. Fort Market
35. Fort Market
36. Fort Market
37. Fort Market
38. Fort Market
39. Fort Market
40. Fort Market
41. Fort Market
42. Fort Market
43. Fort Market
44. Fort Market
45. Fort Market
46. Fort Market
47. Fort Market
48. Fort Market
49. Fort Market
50. Fort Market
51. Fort Market
52. Fort Market
53. Fort Market
54. Fort Market
55. Fort Market
56. Fort Market
57. Fort Market
58. Fort Market
59. Fort Market
60. Fort Market
61. Fort Market
62. Fort Market
63. Fort Market
64. Fort Market
65. Fort Market
66. Fort Market
67. Fort Market
68. Fort Market
69. Fort Market
70. Fort Market
71. Fort Market
72. Fort Market
73. Fort Market
74. Fort Market
75. Fort Market
76. Fort Market
77. Fort Market
78. Fort Market
79. Fort Market
80. Fort Market
81. Fort Market
82. Fort Market
83. Fort Market
84. Fort Market
85. Fort Market
86. Fort Market
87. Fort Market
88. Fort Market
89. Fort Market
90. Fort Market
91. Fort Market
92. Fort Market
93. Fort Market
94. Fort Market
95. Fort Market
96. Fort Market
97. Fort Market
98. Fort Market
99. Fort Market
100. Fort Market

MAP
of CANAAN or the PROMYLAND
for GENERAL PURPOSES

MEDITERRANEAN

OR

GREAT SEA

Note: The line of the Jordan Sea is now extending both east and west by Josephus the line now represents the Jewish in modern Travellers

Scale of 100 to 500 Miles

